From what parts.	REMARKS.
Delhi, Gurgáon, Farid- ábád, Ballabgarh, Badar- pur.	This fair is not of ancient date. Akbar II used to reside at Mah- rauli in the rainy season and started the fair. On the Wednesday the Hindús take 'Pankhás' to the temple of their deity Jogmayáji and on Thursday the Muhammadans do the same to the Tomb of Kutb-ud-din.
Delhi, Ballabgarh, Su- nīpat, Gurgáon and Pal- wal, &c.	This is a religious fair, held twice a year. It is said that here in old times a Raja once had a vision of the goddess Kálí and built a shrine on the spot. Raja Kidarnath subsequently erected a pakka building. The place is one of considerable local repute.
Ballabgarh, Gurgáon, Palwal, Faridabád & Nuh.	People come to bathe at a spring which issues from the hill side in this village, and a fair is held once a year on the spot. There is no temple.
Ballabgarh, Gurgáon, Palwal, Faridabád, Nuh, Firozpur and Alwar.	There is a pipal here sacred to Kálí Deví, and people stung by snakes are said to find a cure from her help, if they vow to sacrifice at her shrine. Hence its popularity.
Ballabgarh, Faridábád, Badarpur and other neigh- bouring villages.	There is a shrine here, attendance at which with bathing in a spring near the shrine is said to cure 'itch' and such like diseases.
Ballabgarh and Faridá- bád.	A fair started to catch the people on their way back from Barkhál. Not a large one.
S U N I P A T.
Sunípat and Rohtak, ...	A small fair held in honour of Kálí Deví. Notan Dás was a fakír who being very devout burnt himself alive, and Raja Arjandeo built a house over it, and the fair was started to celebrate the history.
Sunípat,	A small fair held for the worship of Kálí Deví, at a pakka shrine. History not known.
Sunípat and Pánípat, ...	This is a fair held in honour of Baba Zinda who buried himself alive like him of Lahrára.
Sunípat,	This is a small fair, kept chiefly by women, to celebrate the worship of Mátá the goddess of small-pox.
Sunípat and Delhi, ...	A small fair held for the worship of Mahadéo.
Sunípat,	A gathering held to celebrate the memory of a zamindár whose only name now known is 'Baba.' When he died several neighbours had dreams which came true, so they concluded he had something of the nature of divinity and started the fair for his worship.

SUNIPAT.— Conld. •
Sunípat and Kutáná ...	This fair is for bathing in the Jamna. Brahmins get food on such occasions. On Sundays all the year round people come and bathe here.
Sunípat	This is a well known shrine in honour of Násir-ud-dín whose story has already been told in the Report Chapter VIII.
Sunípat	A smaller fair held in memory of a companion of Násir-ud-dín of less fame, but a martyr also.
Sunípat	A new fair, as yet small, started by the Hindús (perhaps in envy of the Muhammadans). It is held at Shimbudiál's tank.
Sunípat	The Saráogís here worship at Párs Nath's shrine, and stranger come to look on.
DELHI.
Delhi	A religious fair held to celebrate the finding of an image of Bhairon attendant of kálí. Some one dreamt that a shrine should be built on the spot, in order that wishes and vows might be fulfilled. Hence the shrine, and vows are (sometimes) met by fulfilment of wishes. •
Neighbouring villages ...	A Hindú gathering in obedience to an order received from some Saiyid who died possessed (sic), only a small affair.
Delhi	A small affair celebrating the discovery of an image of kálí. Somebody dreamt (as usual) that a fair ought to be held here.
Neighbourhood of Delhi and Rohtak Districts.	A considerable gathering to honour the memory of a fakír Harídás.
Dhandásá, Malakpur, Ojwáh, Shampur, Ishákpur Pána Gharib and Ishákpur Pána Suján.	A religious gathering at a tank called 'Búré Bábú' after a fakír.
Delhi and its neighbourhood, Gurgáon, Meerut, Ballabgarh and Sunípat.	Hindús worship, and Muhammadans amuse themselves at this fair held in honour of Rámlílá, a very important fair.
Delhi and its neighbourhood.	A religious fair at which weather prognostications for the current year are made. Brahmins take a stick with a bit of rag on it to the top of a hill, and anxiously consult as to whether the wind which blows it denotes a good wind for the year, for crops, rain, &c.
Delhi, Meerut and Bulandshahr.	Poor cast people worship on this occasion, komhárs, fakírs, barbers, &c.

DELHI.— Concluded.
Delhi, Sunipat and Rohtak	Worship is celebrated of an image of Deví Mátá, and offerings are made which the Narelá Zamíndárs take.
Delhi and its neighbour- hood.	A small affair every Tuesday at the shrine of Hanúmán
Delhi and neighbourhood	A religious fair for the worship of Deví.
Delhi and neighbouring country.	This is a Muhammadan fair—the attendants of the shrine of Urs Saiyed Hasan cook food, and distribute it to the visitors, who make offerings. Fire works are let off by the men who trade in them.
Delhi and surrounding country.	Another Delhi fair held in honour of Muhammad.
Delhi and neighbouring villages as well as fakírs from all quarters.	Same as No. 12, but the man honoured is Sultan Nizám-ud-dín (the constructive fakír of chap. 1).
Delhi 	A pleasure fair, but an occasion of religious worship to people of low cast, such as sweepers, who carry pennons made of sticks and rags in honour of their Pír.
Delhi 	This is a fair for wrestling—the city people turn out every Friday in good numbers to see it.
