John, about whom there was a controversy relative to the inheritance of the Beaumont property. As he was born in the lifetime of his mother's husband William Beaumont, and it coming before Parliament, it was determined, "that they would not make a bastard of one born in wedlock;" but it was afterwards proclaimed that he should be considered the son of Joan Bodrugan. An agreement was at last made, and the affair settled amicably. The posterity of this John however assumed the name of Beaumont.

* From Dugdale's Abstract, vol. i. p. 722, and MS. notes.

[2] Henry last Lord Grey of Codnor; Dugdale says, that he "much affecting the study of chymistry, in the 3d Edward IV. obtained a licence from the King to practise the transmutation of metals by his philosophical skill: how he sped therein I cannot say;" and that for his services to the King he obtained several extensive grants. That eminent writer does not state who he married; but although from his Will it would appear that Katherine, whom he describes as the Duchess of Norfolk's daughter, was not living when that instrument was made, yet, from a note in Glover's autograph, it is evident that she must have been so, for that correct genealogist says she married to her second husband ..... Ailmer. The Katherine in question was the daughter of Thomas Strangeways, by Katherine, daughter of Ralph Nevill, Earl of Westmoreland, and widow of John Moubray, Duke of Norfolk. The only farther information we possess of this Lord Grey is, that he died 8th April 1496, s. p. l. aged about sixty-one years.

Chancel of our Lady in the Fryers of Aylesford. I give to my wife Katherine half of my moveables, she to have for her jointure Aylesford and Hoo Hundred in Kent, Thurrock Grey in Essex, Bitham Park, Stoking, and Southwitham, in Lincolnshire, Sapcote, and . . . . . and III pounds in Staunton, in Leicestershire, Langwinter Bassetts, in Derbyshire, and that she have the rule of my three sons[1] till they be 18 years old. I owe to my cousin, Sir Thomas Barrow, xx*l.* I give to the White Friars of Nottingham the rent of Barton Mills, with the new Fish Garte, to find a friar or priest to pray for my soul after my decease, and for the soul of Margaret, that was my wife, my father's soul, and my mother's soul, and for the soul of Katherine, that was my wife, which was the Duchess of Norfolk's daughter, and for all my kin's souls. Also I will that Richard Grey, my bastard son, have my manor of Ratcliffe-upon-Trent, in Nottinghamshire, and the heirs of his body lawfully begotten. If he die without heirs of his body, I will that it go to the two Henries, my bastards, to have to them, and the heirs of their bodies lawfully begotten, for ever. Also I will that the same two Henries, my bastards, have the manors of Tonton and Barton, in Nottinghamshire, to them and to the heirs of their bodies lawfully begotten for ever. If it happen the one die without heirs of his body, then the other to have all the whole Lordships for evermore. Also I will that little Harry[2], my bastard, which is Katherine Flindern's son, have Cicely Charlton to his wife; and I will that my cousin, Sir Thomas Barrow, pay a hundred pounds to the marriage of Richard Grey, and the greater Harry, my bastards, or else that the land of his part stand still in feoffees' hands, till two hundred marks be raised and paid to the marriage of the said two children. I will that my wife have the rule of my three sons till they be 18 years of age. Also I will that my cousin Zouch[3] deliver his son and heir according to his

of his father Henry Lord Grey), and wife of Sir John Zouch, was his heir.

[1] Sic in the MS. It is difficult to explain the meaning of this passage, excepting that persons named Lentall and Newport were to have part of his lands, and which is in some degree confirmed by the following extract from Leland, cited by Banks: "The last Lord Grey of Codnor left three daughters, whereof one was married to Sir Rowland Lentalle, of Notynghamshire; another to Newport in Shropshire; and the third to one Souche, a younger brother of the house of the Lord Souches. Thes three had the Lord Grayes landes in copartition, whereof the Lordship of Ailresford, in Kent, and How Hundred, was parte. There were some of the Lord Grayes of Codnor buried at Ailresford Friars. Lentall dyenge without issue male, left two daughters; whereof one called Catarine was married to one of the Lord Zouches, the other to Cornwale Baron of Barford, and so cam they to be copartners in the Lord Grey of Codnor's lands." It is evident from this Will, and from the Inquisition cited by Dugdale, that the last Lord Grey of Codnor left no legitimate issue, and hence if he really had the daughters mentioned by Leland, they must have been his natural daughters. In Blore's Rutland, Richard Lord Grey of Codnor, K. G. the grandfather of the testator, is said to have left a daughter, Lucy, who married Rowland Lentall, who was living 13th Henry VI. and who left by the said Lucy two daughters and coheirs, Elizabeth, wife of Cornwall, and Katherine, who married William Lord Zouche, of Haryngworth, which corroborates Leland's statement. In this imperfect state of the printed accounts of the coheirs of the last Baron Grey of Codnor, the Editor is happy to be able to add the following

Katherine my wife. Thomas the Archbishop of York[1], my cousin Sir Thomas Barrow, Sir John Babington, Knight, John Abbot of Darley, Prior Richard of Lenton, Thomas Prior of Newstead, Thomas Leak, whom I make and ordain mine executors. Maud Lady Willoughby[1], July 18, 1497. My body to be buried in the Church of the College of Tattershall, in Lincolnshire, before the high altar, on the right hand of my uncle, Ralph Lord Cromwell, under a stone provided by me; and I desire that if I die in the parish of Tattershall, my solemn exequies, excepting burial, shall be done in that Church*. Proved 31st November, 1497.

SIR ROBERT RADCLYFFE, KNT.

Robert Radclyffe, Knight. On the eve of St. Kathe-

[1] She was the daughter of Sir Richard Stanhope, Knight, by his second wife Maud, sister and heir of Ralph Lord Cromwell, and eventually coheir to her mother, and married, first, Robert Lord Willoughby of Eresby; secondly, Sir Thomas Nevill, Knight, son of Richard Earl of Salisbury; and thirdly, Sir Gervase Clifton; and died 30th August 1497.

rine the Virgin[1], 1496. My body to be buried on the South side of the Chapel of Hunstanton. To the Parish Churches of Hedersel and Wymondham, each a black vestment of velvet, with my arms, and the arms of the Lady Cromwell, late my wife; to the Church of Tattershall a vestment. I will that a tomb be made of free stone, with the images of myself and two wives on the top. To Ann Radclyffe, my daughter, a bed of gold; and I make the said Ann and Elizabeth, my daughters, my executors, and will that they have DCCC marks betwixt them to their marriage, when they come to sixteen years old; to be levied out of my lands in Dokkinge, Stanhow, Trynge, Snetesham, Sherneborne, Secheforth, Brycham, Darsingham, Inglethorpe, Hecham, Hunstanton, Ryngested, and Holme. And I constitute Robert Drury, Esq. Robert Lestrange, Esq. and John Lestrange, Esq. my executors. Proved 19th May, 1498.

JOHN LORD SCROPE OF BOLTON.

John Lord Scroop[2], at Esh Harlyng, in the county of Norfolk, July 3, 1494. My body to be buried in the Abbey of St. Agatha, in the county of York, in case I depart this life in that county; but if I die in Norfolk, then I will that I be buried in the Black Friars at Thetford. To Ann[3], my wife, all my goods South of Trent; to Sir Henry Scroop, my son and heir, all my goods at Bolton Castle; to Ralph, my brother, my little Bible at Bolton; to Robert, my brother, my chamlet gown; to Ann, my wife, and my brother, Henry Spelman[4]. Proved 8th November, 1498*.

[1] Nov. 24th.

[2] Eighth Lord Scrope of Bolton. He died 12th July 1494 according to Dugdale.

[3] Vide her Will in the next page.

[4] A note in the margin of the MS. abstract of this will, says, "query, Thomas Metcalfe?" but this Henry Spelman was probably related to Ann his wife; of whom Dugdale gives no account.

ANN LADY SCROPE.

Ann Lady Scroop, of Harlyng[1], 28th August, 1498. My body to be buried in the Chapel of St. Anne, joined to the Chancel of St. Peter and Paul at Est-Harlyng, in the tomb of my late husband, Sir William Chamberlyne. To the Austin Friars of Thetford, where my great grand-dame, Margery Tudenham, daughter of Sir Thomas Jenny, lieth; to my daughter, Dame Isabel Hengrave, a vestment; to my nephew, Robert Wingfield, a round bed of crimson; to my niece, Elizabeth Wingfield, my god-daughter, a dymysent of gold, and a pair of beads of gold, which were my sister's, Dame Elizabeth Wingfield; to my niece Eleanor my gown; to my brother Brokenham my russet gown furred; to my Lady my Lord's mother my embroidered psalter; and to my Lady, wife to my son, now Lord Scrope, one of my dymysens, or little girdles; to my young Lady of Upsall a glass garnished with silver; to each of my Lord my son's daughters a convenient remembrance; to my brother Mr. Ralph, and to my brother Robert Scroop, a crewse of silver; to my sister Bygot a pair of tables of ivory; to my sister Radclyff a little coffer of ivory; to my sister Katherine a pair of brades of coral; to my niece, Dame Ann Wingfield a pair of towels of works; to my niece Anne Echingham a ring of gold; to my niece Katherine Brewse; to my niece Margaret Bardwell a fine feather-bed; to old William Bardwell a standing gilt cup, which I will he leave to his daughter, my niece Margaret; to William Bardwell the younger a noble of gold; to Robert Bardwell, my godson, eleven ewes and lambs; to my god-daughter, Anne Fitz-walter, a primer; to Sir Thomas Lovell[1] a garter of gold; to my sister Wyndham a little girdle; to my niece Margaret Bardwell; my nephew, Robert Wingfield, Esquire, whom I have brought up of a child of three years. Proved 8th November, 1498.

[1] Widow of the above John Lord Scrope. Dugdale states, that his first wife was Joan, daughter of William Lord Fitz-Hugh, and Blore makes Elizabeth, daughter of Oliver St. John, Knight, and widow of Lord Zouche, his second wife. In this case this Ann must have been his third wife. Her-will is peculiarly valuable from the number of persons mentioned in it, and affords important information relative to the families of Scrope, and of those houses with whom it was at that period allied.

ANNE LADY AUDLEY.

Anne Lady Audley[2], 11th November, 1497. My body to be buried in the Monastery of Bermondsey. I will that a priest be found to pray for the souls of John late Lord Audley, my husband, and James late Lord Audley, my son, and of John Rogers, late my husband. And I appoint my son, Henry Rogers, my executor. Proved 24th June, 1498.

LADY ELIZABETH BOURCHIER.

Dame Elizabeth Bourgchier, widow, February 18th, 1498. My body to be buried within Our Lady's Chapel, in the Monastery of Bylegh beside Maldon. I will that the bones of Sir John Bourgchier, Knight, late my husband, that now rest in the Church of Stellinge, in Essex, be taken up and carried to the said Abbey of Bylegh. To my sister, Florence Zouche; to my nephew, Henry Chicheley, two rings of gold. Proved May 14th, 1498.

[1] Evidently Sir Thomas Lovell, the 254th Knight of the Garter, who died 25th May 1524, and whose testament will be found in a subsequent page. This bequest probably meant a garter worn as part of the insignia of that illustrious order.

[2] Dugdale does not state of whom she was the daughter, but Collins, vol. vi. p. 306, says, that she was the daughter and heir of Sir Thomas Itchingham, Knight; John Tuchet, Lord Audley, her husband, was Treasurer of England 2 Richard III. and died September 26th, 1491; James Lord Audley, her son, was beheaded for joining the Cornish insurrection June 28th, 1497.

EDWARD EARL OF WILTSHIRE.

Edward Stafford, Earl of Wiltshire [1], March 21st, 1498 [2]. My body to be buried in the Church of St. Peter of Lufwyke, in the County of Northampton, in Our Lady's aisle, by my grandfather Greene; and I will that my executors make a convenient tomb there for me. My manors of Buckworth, Comberton, Raundes, Ringsted, Irtlingburgh, Haryngworth, Hardwyck, and Drayton, in the counties of Hunts, Northampton, and Cambridge. To my cousin, the Earl of Shrewsbury, my collar of the King's Livery; to my ....Margaret Viscountess Lisle [3]; to my wife, all the plate I had with her in marriage; to my uncle Wytilbury, and my aunt his wife, a plain cup. Proved April 24, 1498.

JOHN VISCOUNT WELLES.

[2] Query, 1498-99?

[3] The MS. note of this will has the following hiatus: "To my —— Margaret Viscountess Lisle;" but as Dugdale's Abstract states, "to Margaret, my wife, all the plate, &c." there can be little doubt that he described his wife, who is generally considered to have been called Muriel, as Viscountess L'isle, notwithstanding that she had no claim whatever to that title.

[1] Knight Banneret and Knight of the Garter; he was Steward of the Household to Margaret Countess of Richmond, and, according to Stow, was instrumental in placing the crown on the head of Henry VII. in whose reign he was elected a Knight of the Garter. Buswell's, in his account of this Sir Reginald, states that he was one of the executors to Margaret Countess of Richmond, but it is unquestionable that he died five years before she made her will. Sir Reginald Bray died s. p. and there is muchcontradiction in the statements relative to his heir; Dugdale, in one place, saying that Margery, the daughter and heir of his brother John, and wife of Sir William Sandes, was his heir; yet, immediately after asserting that John his brother was the father of Sir Edmund Bray, who was summoned to Parliament the 21st Henry VIII. and whose six daughters became coheirs to their brother John, the second Lord. The will in the text renders it certain that John Bray, the brother of Sir Reginald, had issue a son Edmund and other sons, and from the will of Sir Edmund Bray, in a subsequent page, there can be little doubt but that he was the nephew of Sir Reginald, for he speaks of his father John; hence, unless the testator had two brothers called John, it is evident that Margery Bray, who married Sir William Sandes never was either an heiress or coheiress.

[1] He was by Papal provision Bishop of St. David's, by bull dated 6 cal. Maii (April 26) 1482, he had the temporalities of that see restored to him on the 1st of July, and made his profession of obedience on the 8th of the same month in that year; Le Neve adds, "I cannot fix the certain time of his death, but believe it was in 1483. He was buried in St. Paul's Cathedral, London," and both this writer and Bishop Godwin state, that in 1483 Thomas Langton succeeded him in the Bishoprick of St. David's. There is, however, evidently an error in these statements, for it is manifest, from his will, that he was living in November 1498, and probably until March 1502-3. It is possible that in 1483 he was deprived of his spiritual dignities, but no account is recorded of the fact, and in his testament he expressly styles himself "Bishop in the Universal Church."

of Montagu, and widow of Sir Thomas Fitzwilliam, of Aldwarke, co. York; by her Sir Anthony Browne had Anthony his son and heir, who was afterwards a Knight of the Garter, and father of Anthony, who was created Viscount Montagu 21st September 1554, which dignity is now extinct.

[1] Richard Beauchamp, Lord St. Amand, son and heir of Sir William Beauchamp, who having married Elizabeth, eldest daughter and coheir of Gerard Braybroke, son and heir of Sir Gerard Braybroke, by Alianore, daughter, and eventually sole heir of Almaric fourth Lord St. Amand, was summoned to Parliament as Lord St. Amand from 27th to 33d Henry VI. and died in 1457, leaving Richard (the testator) his son and heir. Richard Lord St. Amand was attainted 1 Richard III. but was fully restored in blood and honours 1 Henry VII. and was summoned to Parliament 12 Henry VII.; it does not appear who he married, but it is certain that he died in 1508 without lawful issue.

[2] It is a point of some importance to ascertain whether his niece Leversaye was the daughter of his own sister, for if he had a sister who left issue, the Barony of St. Amand must be vested in her descendants. The editor is not aware of any pedigree which states that William Beauchamp, Lord St. Amand, had any other issue by Elizabeth Braybroke than his son Richard, the testator; and it is

And I appoint Sir Reginald Bray, Knight, and Sir Robert Lytton, my executors.

Proved 4th May 1509.

SIR THOMAS BRANDON, KNT.

Thomas Brandon, Knight[2], 11th January 150[illegible]. My

[1] Knight of the Garter. He stood high in the favour of King Edward the Fourth, and preserved his political importance on the accession of Henry VII.; for in the first year of that monarch's reign he was constituted one of his Privy Council and Treasurer of his Exchequer; he died s. p. l. leaving his four sisters his heirs; his wife was Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of Lord Fitz-Walter, who married, secondly, Sir John Ratcliffe, Knight.

[2] Apparently the uncle of Charles, afterwards the celebrated Duke of Suffolk. Dugdale, in his account of the House of Brandon, states that Sir Thomas Brandon, the father of the said Duke, obtained the wardship of Lord Say, was elected a Knight of Garter, and married Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of Sir Henry Bruyn; but pedigrees of this family in Harl. MSS. 1079, 1233, and 1411, make Sir William Brandon to have been the father of Charles Duke of Suffolk, and which is confirmed by the above will, for it is evident the testator had no issue. His wife, whom he describes as the Lady Marquess Berkeley, was Ann, daughter of John Fienes Lord Dacres, and the widow, having been the third wife, of William Marquess Berkeley. It appears that this Sir Thomas Brandon was the person described by Dugdale as having been elected a Knight of the Garter, although that writer erroneously calls him the father of the Duke of Suffolk, who was the son of Sir William Brandon, body to be buried in the Church of the Friars Preachers of London, as nigh the sepulture of Sir John Wingfield, Knight, as may be. I bequeath LX l. to the Friars Augustines, London, for a perpetual memory to be had of the Marquess Berkley and the Lady Marquess, late my wife, my Lady my wife, my brother Sir Robert Brandon; to Charles Brandon all my gowns not bequeathed; my sis- Redinge; my niece Yaxley; my niece Dorothy; my niece Katherine; my sister Catherine Gorney[1]; Charles Brandon my nephew; to Lady Jane Gylford, widow, my place in Southwark, with my lease, which I have of my Lord of Winchester; I will that the marriage of the Lord Say, whose wardship I have, shall remain to Charles Brandon, my nephew, during the Lord Say's non-age; I bequeath all my purchased lands in Norfolk and Suffolk to Lady Jane Gylford, for life, she to pay to my nephew William Sidney xx marks a year; remainder thereof to Charles Brandon and his heirs; and I constitute Sir Thomas Lovell, Knight[2], and John Roydon, Esquire, my executors.

slain at Bosworth Field. Vide the will of Elizabeth Lady Brandon, mother of the testator in p. 432, for proof that Dugdale's statement is erroneous. These observations were made on the narrative in Dugdale's Baronage, p. 299; the pedigree in p. 300 of that work agrees with the account here given.

[1] Query, Ginney? Vide Dugdale, vol. ii. p. 300.

trade, and at an early age he became a member of the Draper's Company, and was afterwards elected an Alderman of the Ward of Farringdon Without; in 1493 he served the office of Sheriff, and in 1502, to avoid accepting the situation of Lord Mayor, resigned his Alderman's gown on the pretence of poverty, when his public life terminated. It is not, however, by any other means than by his literary reputation that his name has been preserved from oblivion, as Fabyan possessed the singular and unprecedented merit of uniting the character of a merchant with that of a faithful chronicler. Nor were his literary exertions confined to the duties of an historian, for some efforts of his Muse are still preserved, and although they cannot be considered as very successful aspirations, they are entitled to attention from their curiosity, when it is remembered that their author was a merchant in the fifteenth or very early in the sixteenth century. But perhaps the most singular production of Fabyan's pen is his testament, and which the Editor hopes he is justified in reprinting at length in this work, from the curious bequests and details which it contains, and especially as it perhaps affords the most perfect illustration, which is extant, of the manners and customs of the times in which the testator lived; whilst highly important for that reason, is also deserving of notice from its displaying those traits of character which we are justified in attributing to Fabyan; for the minute directions given by him on every circumstance connected with his funeral and affairs, are no less characteristic of the merchant than of the patient circumstantial chronicler; and it also presents us with a specimen of his poetic genius. After his retirement little or nothing is known of him, nor were his able biographer, Mr. Ellis's, endeavours to find some memorial of his habitation attended with success. He is supposed by his learned Editor, to have died on the 28th February 1512. It will be seen from his will that he left four sons, but though several pedigrees of Fabyan are recorded in the College of Arms, none are connected with the testator, and as it may be useful to

JOHN EARL OF OXFORD.

John Vere, Earl of Oxford [1], 10th April 1509. My body

* From Collins' Abstract, vol. v. p. 38.

[1] Thirteenth Earl of Oxford. He filled a very prominent part in the transactions of his times, and experienced to the full extent, all the vicissitudes of fortune which attended personages of distinction in the wars between the roses. At the battle of Barnet Field he commanded a wing of Henry the Sixth's army, and after its defeat retired to St. Michael's Mount, in Cornwall, where, after sustaining a siege, he was taken prisoner, and was soon afterwards attainted; he continued in confinement until the usurpation of Richard, when, having effected his escape, he rendered such eminent services to the Earl of Richmond at the battle of Bosworth, that after the accession of Henry to the throne, he obtained important grants to be buried at the high altar of our Lady's Chapel, in the Priory of Colne, in Essex, in a tomb which I have made for me and Margaret my late wife, where she is now buried. To the apparelling of the said Chapel (where my tomb and the tomb of my ancestors and friends before rehearsed be now and hereafter shall be made) of the ornaments and apparel now used belonging to the Chapel in my closet, viz. a chalice, &c.; to every house of religion hereafter ensuing, being of the foundation of mine ancestors, as well men as women, viz. the houses of Woborne, Stratford, Hatfield Broadoake, the Black Friars of Oxford and Cambridge, the house of St. Osilthe, the nuns of Swaffham, Hedingham, Skelton, the houses of Threnmall, Blackborough, and Bromhill; the White Friars of Lynne, and the houses of Blackmore, Royston Mendham, and Hempton; my nephew John Vere[1], son of my brother Sir George Vere, Knight; my uncle Sir Robert Vere[2]; to my nieces Dorothy[3] and Ursula[4] DC marks, when they become twenty-five years of age; I will that my household of Colne be kept for one year after my decease; to making the Church of Lavenham. And I constitute Elizabeth, my wife, Sir Thomas Lovell, Knight, Sir James Hobart, Knight, Sir Robert Drury, John Vere the elder, Esquire[5], Humphrey Wingfield, Esquire, John Danyell, Esquire, and Joseph Josselyn, Esquire, my executors. Proved 10th May 1513.

of lands, as well as of honours, and was elected a Knight of the Garter. He married, first, Margaret, daughter of Richard Earl of Salisbury; and secondly, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Richard Scroope, and widow of William Viscount Beaumont, but died S. P. S. in 1512.

[1] Who succeeded him in the Earldom of Oxford.

[2] Grandfather of John fifteenth Earl of Oxford.

[3] Daughter of his brother Sir George Vere; she married John Nevill Lord Latimer.

[4] Also a daughter of his said brother; she was twice married, first, to George Windsore, Esquire; and secondly, to Sir Edmund Knightley.

[5] Apparently his first cousin, son of his uncle Sir Robert Vere, and father of John fifteenth Earl of Oxford.

GEORGE LORD ROOS.

George Maners, Knight [1], 26th October 1513. My body to be buried next unto the place where I shall happen to die, or elsewhere, at the discretion of my executors. To the Abbey of Rievaulx L marks; to the Abbey of Kirkham L marks; to the Abbey of Wartre L marks, to the intent that they shall each find an honest priest to say mass daily for my soul for the space of seven years next after my decease, and once in every year to keep an obit for my soul and my friends souls; to each of my daughters unmarried CCC marks in ready money, if they will be ruled by my wife, to be paid at the time of their marriage, or within four years after, if the husband be not twenty-one years of age, or at such time as the husband come of age; I will that my feoffees suffer my executors to receive the profits of my lordships, manors, &c. called Helmesley, Storthwaite, Haugh, Cowhouse in Grane, Harom, Ravinshorp, Botteby, and Twineham Halle, in the county of York; except in Storthwaite, which is appointed part of my wife's jointure; also I will that my feoffees in my lands which Sir Robert Maners, my father, held and took the profits, except the manor of Barington, in the county of Northumberland, make a grant of XX l. issuing thereout yearly, to each of my younger sons for life, with a clause of distress, according to the indentures between me and my uncle Sir Thomas Lovell, Knt. dated 21st February, 4 Henry VIII.; also I will that my son

[1] Lord Roos, in right of his mother Eleanor, sister and heir of Edmund Lord Roos; he is said, by Collins, to have died at the siege of Therouene and Tournay 2d November 1513, but there is apparently some mistake about the date of his death; his Will is stated, both in a MS. note of it, and by Dugdale, to have been made on 26th October, whilst Collins asserts that it was dated on the 30th of that month, three days before his demise, but that writer gives the inscription on his tomb, from which it appears he died the "XXIII daye of Octobre, in the yere of our Lorde God MVᶜXIII." that is, three days before the date assigned to his will by Dugdale, and in the MS. abstract, and seven days antecedent to the date given by Collins.

Thomas Maners [1] and Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir Robert Lovel, Knt. and the heirs of their bodies, take the profits of the manors, lands, and tenements, called Poxley, Bindlowe, Howsom, Oswoldkyrk, and Ampleford, in the county of York; and that they stand seised of the same to the use of the said Thomas Maners and Elizabeth his wife, and the heirs of their bodies. And I constitute Anne [2] my wife, my uncle Sir Thomas Lovel [3], and my brethren William Fayrfax [4], and Thomas Fayrfax [5], Gilbert Stoughton, and Ralph Elwick, my executors *. No probate.

[1] His eldest son, who was created Earl of Rutland 18th June 17 Henry VIII. 1595, and was also elected a Knight of the Garter. Elizabeth Lovel mentioned in his father's will was his first wife; she died s. p.

[2] Daughter and heir of Sir Thomas St. Leger, Knt. by Anne Plantagenet his wife, widow of Henry Duke of Exeter, and sister of King Edward IV. in consequence of which splendid descent her son received the following honourable augmentation to his Arms, "Or, two bars Azure, and a chief Gules; viz. the chief quarterly, Azure and Gules; on the first quarter, two fleurs de lis Or; the second quarter, a lion passant gardant of the third; the third quarter as the second; the fourth as the first."

[3] Vide the will of this Sir Thomas Lovel in a subsequent page; it does not appear in what manner he was related to the testator, nor is he described as his uncle in Collins's Abstract, though he is twice expressly so called in the MS. note before alluded to. It seems that the Sir Thomas Lovel in question was the brother of Sir Robert, whose daughter married the testator's son, but this connection does not account for his calling him his uncle.

[4] Sir William Fairfax, of Steeton Castle, co. York, Knight, a Justice of the Common Pleas, who had married his sister Elizabeth.

[5] Son of Sir William Fairfax and husband of his sister Dorothy.

* From Collins' Abstract, vol. ii. p. 428; Dugdale's Abstract, vol. ii. p. 296; and a MS. note of this will.

SIR ROGER NEWBURGH, KNT.

[3] First Marquess of Winchester.

[5] Second son of Thomas second Duke of Norfolk. This eminent personage ranked amongst the most distinguished soldiers of his times; his first essay in the career of arms was in Flanders, under the Emperor Maximilian, against the French 7 Henry VII.; in 1497 he was knighted, when with his father in the expedition into Scotland, and for his eminent valour was appointed Standard Bearer to the King on the 20th May 1509. On the 7th April 1512 he was advanced to the important post of Admiral, Captain Commander in Chief and Leader of all the King's Ships, Captains, and others, to be employed in the service of the Pope for the defence of the Christian Religion; and in the following year he was constituted Admiral of England, Wales, Ireland, Normandy, Gascoigne, and Acquitaine. These honours he was not destined long to enjoy, as he shortly afterwards fell a victim to his ardent intrepidity in an attack upon some French ships in the harbour of Conquet, when he was unfortunately separated from his companions in the enterprize, and forced overboard by the pikes of the enemy, having first, with the romantic feeling of the age, thrown his badge of office into the sea. He thus perished, on the 25th April 1513, leaving a name which will ever be associated with all that is chivalrous and brave. He was elected a Knight of the Garter, but died before he received notifi-

Nottingham, to the said John Fitzwilliam and his heirs male, it shall never be justly said of me, that I am a hinderer of him, and his being of my blood and name, which God hath so long blessed with worship and ancienty, that I think all such as go about to prejudice the same, cannot avoid his plague and indignation; and therefore I have given nothing away at all from the said John and his heirs; but only to Margaret, my wife, for term of life, and to the above-written Thomas, Margaret, and Elizabeth, for term of their lives, to pay my debts and legacies; in consideration whereof I do give unto the said John Fitzwilliam, and his heirs for ever, my manor of Cromwell, with the appurtenances in com. It is evident, from the inscription which he orders to be placed on his tomb, that he was Chief Prothonotary of the King's Bench, and the extreme care which he takes to prevent his legal and other books being dispersed or alienated from his descendants, is well deserving of attention, as it presents an instance of literary zeal, of which at so

[2] Grandfather of Edmund first Lord Sheffield, and ancestor of the Dukes of Buckingham. The following notice of this personage is extracted from Mr. Sheffield Grace's beautiful volume, entitled, "Memoirs of the family of Grace," in which, as his brother Sir William Grace, Baronet, represents the ducal house of Sheffield, an elaborate account of that family is appropriately introduced, and which is rendered valuable by several portraits of that family, among which is a very good one of the testator. "Sir Robert "Sheffield, of Butterwick, in the county of Lincoln, son and heir "of Sir Robert Sheffield, of the same, commanded in 1487 the victo- "rious army of Henry VII. against John de la Pole, Earl of Lincoln, "at the battle of Stoke, near Newark-upon-Trent; and was "knighted under the royal standard on the field of battle. In "1512 he was chosen Speaker of the House of Commons; and died "10th of August 1516, leaving issue by Hellen, daughter and heir to be buried in the Church of the Augustine Friars, London, near the tomb of Eleanor my wife. To my four daughters, Anne, Elizabeth, Margaret, and Bridget, each cccc marks and the inheritance of such lands and tenements that were the said Elene's, some time my wife; Dorothy my sister; Anne now my wife; my brother Edward Sheffield, Doctor in both Laws. And I constitute my son and heir Robert Sheffield, and my brother Sir Thomas Sheffield, Knight, at Rhodes, my executors, and Sir Thomas

"of Sir John Delves, of Doddington, in the county of Chester, "two sons and four daughters, viz. first, Sir Robert, his successor; "second, Edward, who died s. p. Of the four daughters: first, "Jane, married, first, Sir Ralph Shirley, of Stanton Harold, in the "county of Lincoln, ancestor of Sir Robert, created Earl Ferrers "in 1711; and secondly, Sir William Hastings; second, Anne; "third, Elizabeth; fourth, Margaret." To this statement the Editor has only to submit the following corrections: His friend Mr. Grace's natural zeal to invest his ancestor with as elevated a rank as possible, has, in this instance, unfortunately affected his usual accuracy, for he has attributed to the said Sir Robert Sheffield much too exalted a station in stating that he commanded the army which defeated the Earl of Lincoln at Stoke. That army we are expressly informed was conducted by the Duke of Bedford and the Earl of Oxford; and moreover, it appears that King Henry was present in person; Dugdale correctly asserts that Sir Robert Sheffield "was one of the commanders in King Henry the Seventh's army against the Earl of Lincoln." It is manifest, from the date and probate of his will, that Sir Robert Sheffield did not die on the 6th August 1516, for as that instrument was made on the 8th August 1518, and proved 28th February 1519, his death must have occurred within that period. Mr. Grace has also omitted to notice his second marriage, nor does it appear from his will that either of his four daughters was called Jane, though in Collins' account of Sir Ralph Shirley, of Staunton Harold in Leicestershire, he not only states, that the said Sir Ralph married to his third wife Jane, daughter of Sir Robert Sheffield, but in the abstract of his will dated in January 1517, Sir Ralph Shirley mentions his wife Jane. The probability, from a comparison of dates, is, that the Jane in question was the sister instead of the daughter of Sir Robert Sheffield the testator.

SIR EDMUND DENNY, KNT.

Edmund Denny, one of the Barons of the Exchequer[1], 20th July 1519. My body to be buried in the Church of St. Benett beside Paul's Wharf, in London. I will that twenty-eight trentalls of masses be said for my soul and the souls of Margaret, Mary, and Jane, late my wives, deceased and of William and Agnes, my father and mother; to my two daughters Joice and Mary IV marks; Thomas Denny, my eldest son, Anthony Denny, my second son, Martha my daughter; to Wymond Carew and Martha his wife CC marks, to be paid when he hath made her a jointure, according to indentures of marriage made between Sir Thomas Denny, Knight, on the one part, and John Danyell on the other part, dated 1st July 11th Henry VIII.[2] And I constitute Thomas Denny, my eldest son, and John Smith, the Treasurer's Remembrancer, and John Danyell, of Messing, my son-in-law, my executors.

Proved 3d June 1520.

[1] He was appointed one of the Barons of the Exchequer 6th May 1514, and it is not improbable that he was the same person as the Edward Denny who is mentioned by Dugdale as being "a Clerk of the Exchequer 20 Henry VII. and at that time constituted the King's Remembrancer, to whom succeeded Anthony his son," and from whom Edward Denny, who was created Earl of Norwich by Charles I. was descended. It appears from his will that Anthony Denny was his second son; as Dugdale's account of the family of Denny is very unsatisfactory, this testament is important from the information which it affords concerning it.

[2] 1519. The Martha in question appears from the pedigrees of Carew, in the Visitation of Cornwall, to have been the daughter of Sir Anthony Denny, and the wife of Sir Wymond Carew, of Anthony, co. Cornwall, the grandfather of the well-known Cornish historian and poet; she was probably the testator's granddaughter.

SIR ROBERT RODES.

Robert Rodes. Margaret my wife; William Rodes my father, and Joan my mother; I will that my lands be divided into four parts, between Bridget, wife of Thomas Willoughby, Esquire; Dorothy, wife of Edward Wotton; Joan, wife of John Carrill; and Mary [1], late wife of Sir William Barentyn; Robert Willoughby, of Bore Place, in Kent, son of my daughter Bridget; my daughter Elizabeth, a nun at Malling; my brother Richard Rodes; my niece Agnes Lewknor. Proved 29th December 1518*.

THOMAS PIGOTT, ESQ.

Thomas Pigott, Serjeant at Law. My body to be buried at Whaddon, in the county of Buckingham. To my son William Pigott my manor of Doddershull, in the said county, with remainder to my sons Francis, Thomas, Robert, Roger, and Richard Pigott; my daughters Margery and Elizabeth; whereas the said Margery is betrothed to Sir Robert Cotton. Proved 1520*.

SIR ROBERT THROCKMORTON, KNT.

Robert Throckmorton, of Coughton, in the county of Warwick [2]. My body to be there buried. My wife Elizabeth [3];

* Ex inform. George Baker, Esquire.

[2] The testator was a personage of some eminence; he was Privy Councillor to King Henry VII. and a Knight of the Bath, and died on his pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

[3] Query, if he does not speak of her as his deceased wife, for the pedigrees of this family assert that by his first wife Elizabeth, he to my son and heir John Throckmorton [1], married to the daughter of Sir Nicholas Vaux, my manor of Coughton, &c.; to my younger son Michael Throckmorton, my manor of Towsland, in the county of Huntingdon, mortgaged to George Monux, Alderman of London [2], for D l.; my son Anthony Throckmorton; my daughters Mary Burdet [3], Margaret, Joyce, Alice, Ursula, and Anne Throckmorton.

[3] Wife of Thomas Burdet, of Bramcote, co. Warwick, and afterwards of Richard Middlemore, of Edgbaston, in that county.

* Ex inform. George Baker, Esquire.

[4] Apparently the ancestor of the Baronets and Earls of Norwich of that name.

Goringe my grandfather. And I constitute John Dautrey the elder, and the Prior of Heryngham, my executors, and my brother Robert Shirley, Cofferer to the King, surveyor.

Proved 7th February 1520-21.

ROBERT KNOLLYS, ESQ.

Robert Knollys, Esquire, Gentleman Usher of the Privy Chamber of the King, 13th November 1520. My body to be buried in the place where Elizabeth Knollys, my late mother, now lieth buried. [1] Query, 1518-19?

[2] The celebrated founder of St. Paul's school, and Dean of that Church, he was the eldest of twenty-two children of Sir Henry Colet (vide his will in p. 481), Knight, Lord Mayor of London, younger son of Robert Colet, of Wendover. As the Life of the Dean, by Dr. Knight, has for above a century been before the public, and was re-printed about a year since at the Clarendon Press, Oxford, it is not requisite to say more in this place of so distinguished an individual. In that work the following abstract of the will of John Colett is given, who is presumed to have been of the same family as the Dean:

John Colett, Citizen and Mercer of London, 5th May 1461. To each of the Churches of Wendover, Aston, and Clinton XX s.; to Thomas Colet his brother, Alice his wife, Robert, John, and Geoffrey, his sons C l. each.

Proved 27th October 1461.

From this abstract being given in the third person it is not certain whether Alice, Robert, John, and Geoffrey, were the sons and wife of the testator or of his brother Thomas, though the former is most probable.

me; I will that my master Doctor Morgan have my best gown with the hood, my best coat of chamlet, furred with black bogys, and a vestment; to master John Bambrughe a silver pot having on the ere written John Colett my bed at Charter House that I lay upon myself, with mattress and blankets to the same bed belonging, and certain of my printed books called St. Jerom's Works, and other that may be conveniently given unto him; I will that Maister Dancaster have in money to support him in his virtue VI l. XIII s. IV d.; to Sir Robert Hopwood a little goblet, with a cover, having a white rose in the top of the cover, a little square salt with a cover gilt, the which I bought of Maister Lychfeld, and above XL shillings by year for term of his life, to be paid out of the mercery of London, according to their promise thereupon to me made; I will that Thomas Lupeshed, my scholar, be remembered after the discretion of my executors, and to have all such books printed that may be most necessary for his learning; to Master William Garrard a cup with a cover of silver and gilt chased standing on a rose; to Master Nicholas Curlewas a standing cup with a cover gilt, with the moris dance upon it; to John Danet, my godson, a little silver pot, having on the top ℍ and ℝ, which his father gave me; to Bartholomew Barham, sometime my servant, a silver pot, having on the ere written John Colett; Item, the New Testament and other of mine own making, wryten on parchment, as comments of Paul's Epistles and abbreviations, with many such other, I will shall be disposed at the disposition of mine executors, which disposition I leave to their discretion, and all my books imprinted in paper I will also by them be disposed to poor students, and specially to such as have been scholars with me; Item, as touching my lodging at the Charter House, I will that all my board-work made of wainscot, as tables, tresshills, great coffers, cupboards, and all painted images upon the walls, remain to that lodging in perpetuum, all other stuffs there beside afore rehearsed, I will be disposed by the discretion of mine executors; I will that L*l.* sterling be disposed of amongst my household servants, ac-hand, over and above their wages due at the quarter day after my decease; to William Bowerman v marks by year, to be paid by the mercers aforesaid, for his life; to Benjamin Digby an ewer of silver and gilt; to Henry Digby my little primer covered with green velvet; to the Church of Chiswick a vestment of white damask; to the Church of Standon a vestment of green damask; to the Church of Lamborne a vestment of bawdekin with flowers; to the Church of Borne a vestment. Furthermore, whereas I, the said John Colet, all things above named have given and bequeathed, nevertheless, if any thing happen, or to mine executors, to whom I put my trust, if any just cause be seen, that the said bequests and legacies cannot be duly performed, that then of the said legacies and bequests be made defalcation after the discretion of my said executors, in which thing I charge their conscience. The residue of my goods, &c. I bequeath to mine executors, whom I name, ordain, and make, my mother Dame Christian Colett, Maister William Garrard, and Master Nicholas Cuyleurs they to order and dispose them as they shall think best to the most comfort of them that hath need. In testimony, &c. These being witnesses, Sir Robert Asheleyn, Subdean of the Church of Paul's; Sir John Rogers, Almoner of the same; and Sir William Taylor, Priest.

In Dei, &c. This is the testament and last will of me John Colet, Dean of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, London, and son and heir of Sir Henry Colet, Knight, made the 22d day of August 1519, and in the 11th year of the reign of King Henry VIII. as to the disposition of all and singular my manors, messuages, lands, &c. I will that if it happen me to decesse out of this transitory world lyving Dame Christian Colet, shall have, during her life natural, all my messuages, lands, &c. in the town fields and parish of Wendover, in the county of Bucks, also my manors of Weldon, Denthorp, Kirkby-Dene, Bulwyk, and Thyrning, in the counties of Northampton and Hants, which the said Sir Henry Colet, my father, purchased of Sir William Knyvett, Knight, my messuages, tenements, &c. lying in the towns and fields of Great Weldon and Little Weldon, in the county of Northampton, which the said Sir Henry Colet, my father, purchased of Eusby Catesby and other, also my six messuages, eleven hundred acres of land, forty acres of meadow, twenty acres of pasture, and twenty acres of wood, and x s. rent in Great Weldon and Little Weldon, in the said county of Northampton, which the said Sir Henry Colet, my father, purchased of Edward Cumberford; also all my lands, tenements, &c. in Kirkby-Dean and Bulwyk, in the said county, which my father purchased of Thomas Stok, Gentleman; also the manor of Thyrning, called Mullesworth Manor, and the advowson of the Church of Thyrning, &c. in the said county of Huntingdon, which my father purchased of Thomas Mullesworth; also my two messuages and twenty-five acres of land which my father purchased of Thomas Henson; also my messuage, with a courtlarge and half a yard, and three acres of land, which my father purchased of Thomas Newman; also all those my lands and tenements, rents, services, wards, marriages, reliefs, escheats, pightill, and meadows, leases, pastures, mores, and marosses, &c. in the towns, fields, and marosses, of Chippesby, Rollesby, Brough, Billokby, Ontly, Repps, Batewick, Martham, Askby, and Cherne, or elsewhere, within the hundred of East Flegge, and West Flegge, in the county of Norfolk, I will remain to the use of the said Dame Christian during her life natural; also I will that such persons as stand feoffed to my use in all my said manors of Weldon, Denehorp, Kirkby-Dene, Bulwyke, and Thyrning, in the counties of Northampton and Huntingdon, which was purchased of Sir William Knevet, Knight, immediately after the decease of me and of the said Dame Christian Colet my mother, shall make estate unto Edmund Knyvet, Esquire, Serjeant Porter to our Sovereign Lord the King, of and in all the said manors to hold to him and his heirs lawfully begotten; remainder to Christopher Knyvet, brother to the said Edmund, and to his heirs;

remainder to Antony Knyvett, brother to the said Edmund and Christopher, and his heirs, provided alway that the said Edmund Knyvet, his heirs, or whosoever shall fortune to have the said manors of Weldon, and other the premises, shall truly pay unto William Newbold, my servant, during his life natural, the annual rent of XL s. according to the tenor of a deed by me to him thereof made, bearing date 12th May 11th Henry VIII.; also I will that my feoffees of the lands and manors aforesaid, in Great Weldon and Little Weldon, in Kirkby-Dene, and Bulwyk, of Thyrning, called Mullesworth Manor, the advowson of the Church of Thyrning aforesaid, shall immediately after the decease of me and of the same Dame Christian Colet, my mother, make estate to the said Christopher Knyvett, of all the said manors, lands, &c. to him and to the heirs of his body; remainder to the said Edmund Knyvet, and to the heirs of his body; remainder to the said Anthony Knyvet, and to the heirs of his body; also I will that my feoffees of all my said messuages, shoppes, lands, &c. in the said town, fields, and parishes of Weldon, in the said county of Bucks, immediately after the decease of me and of the said Dame Christian Colet, my mother, shall make estate to John Colet, the son of William Colet, of Wendover, of and in all the said messuages, shops, lands, &c. to him and his heirs and assigns for ever; also I will that my feoffees in those my said lands, tenements, rents, services, wards, marriages, reliefs, escheats, pighyts, meadows, &c. in the towns, fields, and mares, of Ceippesby, Rollesby, Burgh, Billokesby, Cateby, Reppis, Batwyk, Martham, Asceby, and Therne, or elsewhere, in the hundred of Eastflegge and Westflegge, in the said county of Norfolk, immediately after the decease of me and of the said Dame Christian Colet, my mother, shall make estate to John Neele, my servant, of and in all my said lands and tenements, to him and to his heirs for ever; also I will that my feoffees of all those my seven acres of pasture and four acres of land in the parish of Stebunhith, in the county of Middlesex, which my father purchased of Edmond Ratcliffe, immediately after the decease of me and of the said Dame Christian Colet, my mother, shall make estate to William Bourman, my servant, of the said land to him and to his heirs and assigns for ever. In witness whereof, &c. cay in the same year he accompanied Lord Edward Howard, the Lord Admiral, and was by him knighted in the Bay of Croyton. Sir Thomas Wyndham was also with that distinguished hero at his fatal attempt on Brest. Being one of the Esquires of the King's Body he attended his majesty at the sieges of Therouenne and Tournay, and was appointed a member of that monarch's Privy Council. The last notice which is recorded of him is, that in the 12th Henry VIII. he attended the King at his conference with the King of France between Guisnes and Ardres, having in his retinue a chaplain, eleven servants, and eight horses. He was twice married, first, to Eleanor, daughter and coheir of Sir Richard Scrope, Knight, second son of Henry Lord Scrope of Bolton, by whom he had Sir Edmund Wyndham, of Felbrigge, and Sir John Wyndham, of Somersetshire, ancestor of the Earls of Egremont; also three daughters, Margaret, who married Sir Andrew Lutterel; Mary, wife of Sir Erasmus Paston; and Elizabeth, who probably died young, and unmarried; his second wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Henry Wentworth, Knight of the Bath, and widow of Sir Roger D'Arcy, Knight, by whom he had Sir Thomas Wyndham, Knight, an eminent naval officer, and the progenitors of the Wyndhams of the Counties of York and Durham. Sir Thomas the testator died early in 1522. His will is a very interesting document, and proves that even so late as the year 1521 the superstitious feelings which are so manifested in the early testaments in this work, were as prominent as in the darkest ages of our history.

Proved 4th March 1522, by Elizabeth his relict and Thomas Earl of Surrey [1].

As to his manors, lands, &c. he made the following disposition:

I, Sir Thomas Wyndham, Knyght, sonne and heire of Sir John Wyndham, Knyght, this 12th October, 13 Henry VIII. As to the disposition of all my manors, lands, tenements, rents, services, and reversions, hereditaments, with their appurtenances. And also of all my wards and marriages now bowght by me, with all advowsons by any means belonging to me, or to any other to my use, in the counties of Norfolk and Yorkshire, or ells where within the realme of Englond.

First, I will that my co-feoffees suffre Dame Elizabeth my wife to occupie my manors of Bentley and Hamelthwayte in Yorkshire, and all purchased lands within the same manors; and my manor of Melton Constable, in the county of Norfolk, for term of hir lyfe, according to the purport of indentures the same shall descend; remainder to my sonne Edmond and to the heires of his body; and in defaulte to the right heires of me the said Sir Thomas Wyndham. And yf it fortune my next heir to be not of full age at the death of my said wyfe, that then my executors shall receive and take the profitts of the manors of Bentley and Hamelthwayte, in Yorkshire, during the nonage of my said next heire, toward the performaunce of my last will and testament. I will that my son Edmonde, my heir apparent, shall have all my manors of Crownthorpp, Wy-

And after the decesse of my wyfe, to him and to the heires of his body; and for defaulte of the heires of my sonne Edmonde, to remayne to the right heires of me the said Sir Thomas, according to an intaile thereof made by my grauntfader John Wyndham, Esquier. I will that my sonne Edmonde, or any other that shall fortune to be my next heire, shall have out of the said manors of Felbrigge, Aylmerton, and Runton, yerely after the vii yeres exspyred, the which I have appoynted for the perfourmance of my wylle, xl l. to be paid by my wyfe, Dame Elizabeth Wyndham, yf she will dwell in it. Also I woll that my sonne Edmond, or any other that shall fortune to be my next heire, shall have the manors of Todyngton, Barnyngham, Yngworth, and Colby, imediatly after the seven yeres exspyred next after my deth, and to his heirs of his body lawfully begotton. And for defawte of issue of him, the said manors to remayn to the right heirs of me the said Sir Thomas, according to an intayle thereof, made by my grauntfader John Wyndham, Esquier. Also I woll that immediatly after the seven yeres exspyred, for the performaunce of my will, the said Edmonde, my sonne, or any other that shall be myn next heire, shall have the manor of Bryston to him and to his heires, in fee simple. Also I woll that my executors shall take and receyve the profits of the manor of Susted, called Danys, and of all other londes thereto belonging, the which I lately purchased of Robert Danne, for terme of seven yeres after my decesse; and after the seven yeres exspyred, and the deth of my wyfe, to my next heire, upon suche condicion as before expressed. I will that my sonne, John Wyndham, shall have my parte of the manor of Wulterton after seven yeres exspyred for the performance of my wille, and also the manor of Melton Constable, after the decesse of my wyfe, to hold the said manors to him and his heires, and for defaute of yssue of him, to the right heires of me the said Sir Thomas. I will that my sonne Thomas Wyndham, shall have my manor of Whighton, in Yorkshire, when he comyth to the age of twenty-one yeres; to hold to him and to the heires of his body; and for defaute of suche issue, to the right heires of me the said Sir Thomas. I will that my said son, Thomas, shall have the moytie of the manors of Bowking, called Dorwarde; and also of the moytie of the manor of Alseford, of the which manors I lately bought the reverc̃ion. I woll that Erasmus Paston, sonne and heire of William Paston, Knyght, shall marry, and take to wife, Mary Wyndham, my daughter: but yf the said marriage happen not to take effect [1] for lack of agreement, casualtie of deth or otherwise, then I will that myn executor shall receive all suche sumes of money comprysed in certain indentures.

I will that my sonne Edmonde, or any other of my sonnes and their heires, that shall happen to be myn heire, whensoever it shall happen them to have my purchased londs, with the profits of my manors of Felbryge, Aylmerton, and Metton, Runton, and Susted, with their appurtenances, and all my purchased lands within the same; and my manors of Todyngton, Barnyngham, Yngworth, and Colby; that he or they shall fynde an honest preest to synge in the Churche of Felbrige, for my soule, for my wyfs soule, my fader, and moder soules, and all my frends soules. And that he shall have x marks by yere, without mete and drynk. And yf he will have mete and drynk with them at the place, then he to have v marks for his stypende; and this to be contynued as long as it shall please God, that any of my blood shall contynue, and to kepe myne obeite. In recompense whereof, I have purchased certeyn lands in Aylmerton, Suffeld, Colby, Albye, Melton, Briston, Crownthorpp, Wykylwood, Sustede, and Bentley, in Yorksbire, and in other places, to the yerely value of XLVI l. by the yere and above.

I will that myn executors shall take the proffits of all such londs, as I now have in my hands, by the reason of the nonage of Edmond Knevet, or of his next heire; or by reason of any bargain made with Edmond Knevet, by the will of Sir William Knevet; and of suche lands as shall

[2] Margaret Countess of Richmond.

[3] This Lucy it appears married Sir John Clifford, third son of Henry Earl of Cumberland. From the passage relating to her in the above will, it may be inferred that she was very young when betrothed to Sir John Cutt's son, and that her aunt, by the words "in case she do disagree," meant, that if, on coming to years of discretion, she refused to confirm the engagement with Cutt she was to forfeit any benefit she would have derived under this will. As she married Sir John Clifford, it is evident either that her betrothed husband died young, or that she afterwards rejected him.

SIR WILLIAM COMPTON, KNT.

William Compton, Knight[1], 8th March 1522-23, 14 Henry VIII. I will that wheresoever I shall die my body be buried at Compton, where my ancestors lie, and if it fortune my Lady to decease before the time I return from my journey, if it be the pleasure of God I should return, I will that she shall likewise be there interred. ---

[1] The ancestor of the Right honourable the Marquess of Northampton; it was this celebrated personage who laid the foundation upon which the family of Compton have since been raised to eminence and power. Having been attached to the person of Henry the Eighth, when Duke of York, that monarch no sooner ascended the throne than Mr. Compton was advanced in honours, probably in consequence of his chivalrous abilities, having on several occasions been selected to tilt with the sovereign against all challengers. In the 4th Henry VIII. as a special mark of the king's favour he received out of the royal arms the following honourable augmentation to his arms: viz. a lion passant gardant Or, and likewise an additional crest. He was shortly afterwards appointed Usher of the Black Rod; and for his gallantry at the battle of Spurs he received the honour of knighthood, and the office of Chancellor of Ireland. In the year 1522 being ordered on a mission to the Emperor Charles V. he made his will, and to which journey he alludes in that instrument; as a last mark of Henry's favour, he was, in the 17th year of his reign, constituted "Burcifer Regis," or Keeper of the King's Jewels and money, now styled Keeper of the Privy Purse. It is likewise recorded of Sir William Compton that in the chapter of the Order of the Garter, held at Richmond 23d April 14th Henry VIII. as well as in other chapters, he was in nomination for admission into that illustrious order, and had several suffrages. He died 31st May 20 Henry VIII. 1528, of the sweating sickness.

[1] Collins, ed. 1735, states, that he married Jane, daughter of Henry Foliambe, and by her had Francis, his successor, and John, also two daughters, Anne, and Katherine, who married Francis Mering; it is evident however, from his Will, that he was twice married, and had several children by his wife Anne. If Francis was his eldest son, it is singular that he is not mentioned therein.

[2] For his services at the battle of Stoke he received the honour of knighthood, and appears to have stood high in the favour of Henry VII. in the seventeenth year of whose reign he was present at the marriage of Arthur Prince of Wales, on which occasion, Stow informs us, "he wore a gown of purple velvet adorned with pieces of gold so thick and massy, that besides the silk and furs it was valued at a thousand pounds, as also a collar of SS. weighing eight hundred pounds in nobles;" hence it is not a subject of surprize, that in the bequest of his "wearing gere" to his sons, he should have excepted apparel of cloth of gold and cloth of silver and tissue, for it is not improbable that the chief part of his wealth, besides his lands, consisted in articles of dress of that description. He was appointed Lieutenant of the Castle of Guisnes in Picardy in the 1st Henry VIII. and after filling other important offices was advanced to the peerage on the 27th April 1523, an honour which he enjoyed but a few months, as he died before July in the same year.

[2] In the will of his nephew Thomas second Earl of Derby, inserted in a former page, some curious particulars relative to Lord Monteagle's tenure of the castle of Hornby, &c. will be found, as the Earl asserts, that his uncle merely possessed it in virtue of his grant, but which, for his subsequent unkindness, he thereby recalled.

[3] Second Duke of Norfolk. He was created Earl of Surrey by Richard III. but being attainted 1 Henry VII. his honours were forfeited. In the 4th Henry VII. he was restored to the Earldom of Surrey, and in the 16th of the same reign was constituted Lord Treasurer of England. This distinguished personage is chiefly known by his important services in the command of the royal army at Flodden Field; in commemoration of which the King granted, as an honourable augmentation to his arms, on the bend thereof, on an escutcheon Or, a demi lion rampant, pierced through the mouth with an arrow, within a tressure flory and counter flory Gules. He was created Duke of Norfolk 1st February 1514, and died 21st May in the same year. His Will is remarkable as being perhaps the latest instrument extant in which a subject speaks of himself in the plural number.

He married, first, Christian, daughter and heir of Sir Roger Newburgh, Knight, by whom he had two daughters, Katherine, who married George Ratcliffe and Elizabeth, who became the wife of Lord Thomas Howard, afterwards created Viscount Bindon, second son of Thomas third Duke of Norfolk. His second wife was Bridget, daughter of Sir .... Waldegrave, and widow of Finderne, but it does not appear that he had any issue by her, who survived him above twenty years (Vide her will in a subsequent page). It might be inferred from a passage in the above will that Lord Marney had a former wife Amy, but probably the inference arises from the confused manner in which the abstract of his will is given by Dugdale. [1] The 254th Knight of the Garter. In 1485 he was appointed Chancellor of the Exchequer for life, and had an annuity of XL marks per annum settled on him as Esquire of the King's body; he was knighted at the battle of Stoke in 1487, and in 1502 was appointed Treasurer of the Household, and nominated a member of the Privy Council. In consequence of the great trust reposed in him by Henry VII. he was constituted one of that monarch's executors, and was likewise one of the executors of the Countess of Richmond, Henry's mother. He was elected a Knight of the Garter and appointed Constable of the Tower, Surveyor of the Court of Wards, and became Steward and Marshall of the Wards to Henry VIII. Amongst his works of piety he rebuilt the nunnery of Haliwell, Shoreditch, and distinguished himself by other acts of munificence. In the will of George Manners Lord Roos, p. 528, that nobleman calls Sir Thomas his uncle, but it is there remarked, that there does not appear to have been any relationship between them which could account for the appellation; it is manifest, however, that the testator was in some way connected with the house of Manners, and which strengthens the conjecture stated in a note to p. 529, that he was uncle to Elizabeth Lovel, daughter of Sir Robert Lovel, Knight, the first wife of Thomas Manners Lord Roos, mentioned in this will. Sir Thomas Lovell died at his house of Elsyngs at Enfield 25th May 1524, according to Buswell's Knights of the Garter, but according to the note to Nichols's Royal Wills, p. 366, in 1528, and which is supported by the date of the probate, and was buried in the nunnery of Haliwell, conformable to the directions in his will: it would appear that he had no issue.

I will that after the death of my cousin Francis Lovell my manors of Lorne and Sibells in Wilburgham, and Welles in Westwickham, in the County of Cambridge, shall go to the next heir of Sir Thomas Lovell, Knight, of his body begotten; to Edward Lovell, brother to my cousin Francis Lovell, the moiety of the Castle of Bassingbourne, in the County of Cambridge, for life; remainder to my cousin Francis Lovell; remainder to the right heirs of my cousin Sir Thomas Lovell for ever; to James Oriell, son of Sir Lewis Oriell, my manors and lands in Aishwell, Tyrwell, and Hendworth, in Hertfordshire, to him and his heirs; to my cousin Francis Lovell my mansion place at Haliwell, which I dwell in, for two years.

* From Collins' Abstract, vol. vii. pp. 342, 343, 344.

[1] She was the daughter and coheir of Sir Thomas Green, and widow of Sir Thomas Parr, Knight, whose will is inserted in p. 548; by him she had issue two daughters, a son William, who having married Ann, daughter and sole heir of Henry Bourchier, Earl of Essex, was created Earl of Essex in 1543, notwithstanding that his issue by the said Ann had been bastardized by statute 34 Henry VIII., and Marquess of Northampton in 1546, was attainted in 1553, but again created Marquess of Northampton in 1559, and died s. p. in 1571. The two daughters of the Testatrix, were Ann, who became the wife of William Herbert Earl of Pembroke; and Katherine, who was four times married, first, to Edward Borough; secondly, to John Nevill Lord Latimer; thirdly, to King Henry the Eighth; and lastly, to Thomas Lord Seymour, of Sudley.

Whereas I have indebted myself, for the preferment of my son and heir, William Parr, as well to the King for the marriage of my said son, as to my Lord of Essex for the marriage of my Lady Bourchier, daughter and heir-apparent of the said Earl; Ann, my daughter; Sir William Parr[1], Knt. my brother; Katherine Borough, my daughter; Thomas Pickeringe, Esquire, my cousin, and steward of my house. Henry VIII. My body to be buried in the Chapel of Astley, in Warwickshire, near to my father. I will that my executors shall cause three honest priests to sing and pray there for my soul, and also for the souls of my father and mother, and for all Christian souls. Also, I will that my executors, with all speed and diligence, after my funeral be performed and debts paid, make and build a Chapel at Astley, according to the will of my father, with a goodly tomb over my father and mother; which being done, I will that they make another tomb, in the midst of the chancel, where I have resolved to be buried; and after that be finished, then I will that they build an almshouse for thirteen poor men there to inhabit, and to be for ever nominated by my executors during their lives, and afterwards by my heirs, each of them to receive xii d. a week for their maintenance, with a livery of black cotton yearly, price iv d. which payment I will be made out of the rents and profits of my manors of Bedworth and Pakington, and all such lands and tenements as were in the occupation of the Lord Lisle, reputed or taken as parcel of the said Lordships; the surplusage to be bestowed in repairing the said almshouse, and keeping my obit yearly. I will that Henry Brooke, schoolmaster to my son Henry, have xx l. per annum. To my son Edward, when he comes of age, my manors of Bedworth and Pakyngton, in Warwickshire, for life; to my son John, the manor of Bardon, in Leicestershire, for life; to my son Thomas, after the death of my sister, Ann Gray [1] (late wife to my brother, John Gray, and

* From the abstract in Collins's Peerage, vol. iii. p. 222.

[a] John Bourchier, second Baron Berners; he married Katherine, daughter of John Howard, Duke of Norfolk, and sister of Lord Edmund Howard, whom he appoints overseer of his will; by her he had two daughters and coheirs, viz. Mary, who married Alexander Linton, Esquire, but died s. p.; and Jane, who married Edmund Knyvet, Esquire, Serjeant Porter to King Henry VIII. The testator, by Elizabeth Bakyn his concubine, had also four natural children, viz. James, who was a man at arms in Calais, and from whom the Bourchiers of Benningborough in Yorkshire are descended, Humphrey, George, and Ursula who married Sir William Sherington, Knight, but died s. p. In the 5th Henry VIII. Lord Berners was Captain of the Pioneers at the siege of Therouenne, and the next year was made Chancellor of the King's Exchequer for life, and attended Lady Mary, the King's sister, to France, on her marriage with Louis XII.; though distinguished as a soldier and a courtier he is best known to posterity by his literary acquirements; besides his translation of Froissart, he translated from the French, Spanish, and Italian, several other pieces, amongst which were the Life of Sir Arthur, an Armorican Knight; the famous Exploits of Hugh de Bordeaux; Marcus Aurelius; and the Castle of Lore. He also wrote a Book of the Duties of the Inhaand last will, in manner and form following. First, I bequeath my soul to Almighty God, and my body to be buried in the Parish Church of our Lady St. Mary the Virgin of the said town of Caleys, within the Chauncell of the same Church. Also, in most humblest manner, I beseech the King's Highness to be so good and gracious a Lord unto me as, for the D l. sterling that I owe unto his grace, payable in five years, to accept, after the decease of my lady my wief, the manners of Houghton, Offley, and Doxey, in the county of Stafford, to have and to hold the same maners, with the appurtenances, to his highness, his heirs and assigns, his grace paying for the same unto mine executors, over and above the said D l. sterling, such some of money as it shall please his highness, for and towards the performance of this my last will and testament. Also, I will that mine executors, of such goods as I shall leave unto them, do pay soche of my debts as shall appear good and true, which I have not set over in the King's books, or otherwise provided for the payment of the same. Item, I give unto Humphrey Bourchier, my son, my gown of tawny damask furred with jennets, and my coat of black velvet furred with marterns, with six pair of alman rivets complete, with splints, sallets, and all things thereunto belonging. Also, I will that all such gifts and grants of plate, goods, and stuff, as I have made and delivered unto James Bourchier, my son, and also unto Francis Hastings, Esquire, and Jane his wife, that they hold and enjoy the same. Item, I give and bequeath to the said Francis Hastings, and Jane his wife, my great tenement I dwell in in Caleys. Item, I will that my executors doe sell all such my reversion, and use of reversion, of the maner of Sende, in Wilts, of the which maner, after my decease, William Sherrington, Gentleman, and Ursula his wife, my daughter, have the use, to them and to the heirs of their two

Proved at Canterbury.

SIR WILLIAM FITZWILLIAM, KNT.

William Fitz William the elder, of Milton, in the county of Northampton, Knight[1], 28th May 26 Henry VIII. 1534.

[1] Ancestor of the Right Hon. the Earl Fitz-William. He was an eminent merchant of London, of which City he was Sheriff in 1506. He was likewise Alderman of Bread-street Ward, and rebuilt the greatest part of the Church of St. Andrew Undershaft at his own expence. In 1514 he served the office of Sheriff of Essex, and was Sheriff of Northamptonshire in 1521. This eminent person had been one of the retainers of Cardinal Wolsey, and is distinguished by his gratitude to his old master when in disgrace; for after the Cardinal's fall from power Sir William hospitably received at his house at Milton, to which he retired, and where it appears he was treated with that kindness which the recollection of past benefits naturally produced in a generous breast, but which formed a striking contrast to the conduct of Wolsey's former parasites. Henry the Eighth, on being informed of the manner in which his disgraced Minister had been received, interrogated Sir William Fitz-William on his daring to entertain so great an enemy to the state, and his noble reply, that he had not done so from contempt or disobedience to his Majesty, but solely from

My body to be buried in the new Chancel at Masham, in the said county of Northampton, which I have of late caused to be made and newly edificed there; and I will that my executors cause a tomb of marble to be made there with a scripture, making mention of my name, as shall be devised by my executors; and I will that wherever I happen to decease within the realm of England, my corpse be conveyed to the said Chancel of Masham. I will that my executors, without fraud and delay, cause all just debts at the time of my decease to be immediately paid, and also the expenses of my funeral, and also make such restitution to every person or persons as they can duly prove I have injured them. If I happen to decease in London I bequeath v l. to the five orders of friars within that city, viz. the Grey Friars, the Black Friars, Augustine Friars, White Friars, and the Crossed Friars, to the intent that they shall bring forth my corpse (if I decease there) out of the liberties of the said city, and to have in each of the said places a trental of masses; to the four orders of friars at Stamford, if they be at my burial at Masham iv l. they saying a trental of masses, in every of their places, for my soul and all Christian souls; to each of the parishes of St. Peter the Poor's Church, and St. Thomas the Apostle within London, and the like sum to the parish of Theydon, in the County of Essex, they saying a trental of masses as is aforesaid; to the marriages of poor maidens c l. sterling, to be distributed by the discretion of my executors, as well amongst my tenants within the Counties of Northampton and Essex, as within the City of London. I remit and forgive all such poor as be in my debt and not able to content the same, whose names appeareth in the seventh book of debts, under whose names I have written. "Amore Dei Remitto:".

gratitude, the Cardinal having been his former master, and partly the cause of his present fortunes, so deeply impressed the Monarch with esteem for his character, that he magnanimously observed, that he had few such servants, and instantly knighted him, and made him one of his Privy Council. He died 9th August 1534, having been thrice married, and by his first and second wives left numerous issue.

and I will that they be in no wise troubled for the same by my executors. And whereas I have given, and executed by indentures, to my right dear and well-beloved wife, Dame Jane Fitz-William, for term of her life, the manors of Hennials, Maydells, Marshalls, and Arneways, with other lands and tenements in the County of Essex, for and in the name of her jointure; I will that she shall peaceably enjoy the same, and after to descend to Sir William Fitz-William, my eldest son. Also I bequeath to her my bason, with the ewer thereunto, of silver gilt, and D marks sterling, on condition that she suffer Robert Dormer, Esq. to enjoy the manor of Eythorpe, with the appurtenances, according to a lease made by me, the said Sir William Fitz-William, I paying her yearly C l. sterling, during her life, for the same manor, &c. Also I will that the said Dame Jane, my wife, shall have the possession of my mansion-house, &c. within the parish of St. Thomas the Apostle, in the City of London, during her life, while she remains a widow, on condition of paying IV*l.* per annum to my executors, which I order them to bestow yearly for the delivery of poor prisoners within the City of London, that shall be acquitted and remain for their fees. I bequeath to the poor scholars within the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge XL l. to be distributed by the advice of two Doctors of Divinity, and XXX*l.* amongst poor people; also, L l. on the making the highway between Gaynes-Park-Hall and Chigwell, in Essex; also, the like sum of L l. to mending the highways between Thornhaugh and Sawtrey-Chapel, in the County of Huntingdon. Elizabeth, Countess of Oxford, was the daughter and coheir of Sir Richard Scrope, Knight, younger son of Henry Lord Scrope, of Bolton, and married, first, William Viscount Beaumont, who died in 1507; and secondly, John Vere Earl of Oxford; but died without issue by either husband. Her connection with the numerous persons named in her will is best shewn by the following Table, in which their names are inserted in italics.

This pedigree explains the relationship of each of the testatrix's legatee, excepting "her niece Audley, her nephew Edmund Audley, and her brother Sir John St. Clere and Dame Frances his wife and their children John, Giles, and Elizabeth St. Clere." The testatrix, it will be seen from the pedigree, had a sister and a half sister (daughter of Sir John Wyndham) named Frances; hence it is difficult to determine which of them married Sir John St. Clere. Who her nephew and niece Audley were has not been ascertained.

[1] He was Sheriff of Berkshire and Oxfordshire in the 11th Henry VIII. and having been brought up to the Bar he was called to the dignity of Serjeant at Law by the King's letters patent, dated 3d December 15 Henry VIII. at Hampton Court, when he had one hundred pounds a year granted him for life. In 1527 he was appointed one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, and received the honour of knighthood. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Robert Throgmorton, by whom he had the issue named in his will. Elizabeth, his relict, died in 1543, as her will was proved on the 16th of February in that year. Sir Thomas deceased in 1537, and from Francis, his eldest son, the Baronets of this family are descended.

[1] It appears that both the sons of George Fane were called Thomas.

* From Collins' Abstract. vol. iii. p. 223.

[2] Ancestor of the Baronets of this family; he was son and heir of William Beaumont, by Mary, daughter of Sir William Bassett, of Blore, co. Stafford. Kimber, vol. ii. p. 161, states, that he married Collett, daughter and heir of Richard Clerke, of Buckingham, (who married, secondly, William Villiers, Esquire,) and by her had Nicholas, his son and heir, and three daughters, viz. Anne, who became the wife of..... Keldon; Mary, who married ..... Sharp who died s. P.; and Ethelred, the wife of Thomas Finderne, and who likewise died without issue. From the above will it would however appear that his daughters' names were Albre, Dorothy, and Anne. The testator died early in 1539.

VIII[1], I Henry Fane, of Hadloe, in the County of Kent, Esq.[2] declare and make my testament, in manner and form following. First, I bequeath my soul unto Almighty God; and my body to be buried as the body of a true Christian may, where it shall please God, by the discretion of my executors. Also, I bequeath to the high altar of the parish church of Hadloe, for my tythes forgotten, XIII s. IV d. and to the same Church two chalices of four pounds price; to Sir James Baynes, my chaplain, till he be provided of a benefice in perpetuity, IV marks yearly; to my brother, Richard Fane[3], my best gown; to my brother, John Fane, my second best gown. The residue of my goods and chattels I bequeath to my brethren Richard Fane and John Fane, whom I appoint my executors. And as to the disposition of my manors, lands, and tenements, first, I will that Alice my wife have the lands appointed for her jointure for term of her life; I will that my brother, John Fane, and the heirs male of his body, have all my lands, &c. lying in Great Peckham, in Kent, with remainder, in default of issue male, to Ralph Fane[4], and to the heirs male of his body; in default, to Richard Fane, my brother, remainder in default to the eldest son of John Fisher, of Hadloe, my brother-in-law; in default, to remain from one brother to another of the said Fisher's sons; in default, to Thomas Wombewell, my sister's son; in default, to remain to the next heirs of me, the said Henry, and for default, to remain to Ralph Fane and to his heirs for ever. Also, my will is, that immediately after my decease, the manor place that I dwell in, with all the lands thereto adjoining, shall remain to Ralph Fane, and the heirs male of his body, so that he do not suffer a recovery to be had against him thereof, or sell any of the lands whereof he hath a possibility to retain by this my last will. And also I will, that the profits shall be employed to the finding of my brother John Fane's children, that is to say, to Henry Fane and Richard, his sons; and after their decease, without heirs male of their bodies, the said lands to be entailed as is above recited. Also, I will that after the decease of Alice my wife, my brother, John Fane, shall have all the lands of her jointure, and to the heirs male of his body; in default, to the said Ralph Fane and his heirs male; in default from heir to heir as before entailed; in default, to the said Ralph and his heirs for ever. So that my intent and meaning is, that Ralph Fane shall have all my lands in Hadloe and Capel; my brother, John Fane, all my lands and tenements in Great Peckham and Tunbridge; and to be entailed to every of them, as is before recited. Proved 7th June 1538 *.

ELIZABETH LADY FINEUX.

[1] First Lord Bray. It would appear that he had two wives, but Dugdale merely notices Jane, daughter and heir of Richard Haliwell, by .... daughter and heir of John Norbury, by whom he had John his successor in the Barony, and seven daughters.

[2] Dugdale says, that his will was proved 12 June following the date of his will.

HENRY ARUNDELL, CLERK.

Syr Henry Arundell, one of the Prestes of the Almery in Christ Church. My body to be buried in the church-yard of Christ Church. Syr Humphry Garth, parson of St. Mildred in Canterbury.

Proved at Canterbury 29th Oct. 1540.

ROBERT[1] BELLASIS.

Robert Bellasis[1]. My body to be buried in "terr' sanctu'." To my wife Margery cc marks; to my son and heir William Bellasis my plate at Henknowle as an heir loom, and my lands at Rickenhall; I bequeath the parsonage of Letham to the use of my son Richard; my son Anthony Bellasis; my daughters Margaret and Jane Bellasis; my brother Doctor Bellasis[2]; my sisters[3] Smith and Hutton; and my sister Kirkham's son John. Proved 31st July 1540*.

[1] In Collins' Peerage, vol. v. p. 353, his baptismal name is said to have been Richard. He was the son and heir of Thomas Belasyse, by his second wife, Margaret, daughter of Sir Lancelot Thirkeld, and on the 4th March 1527-8 the testator was constituted Constable of the Castle of Durham for life, and he was also a member of the Council of the North on its first establishment. He died 26th March 1540, leaving by Margery his wife, daughter and heir of Richard Errington, of Cokel and Horton, Esquire, several children. William, his eldest son, was the ancestor of the Earls and Viscounts Fauconberg, which title became extinct in 1815.

[2] Anthony Bellasis, LL.D. and Master in Chancery, and, although a layman, likewise Archdeacon of Colchester and Prebendary of Westminster and Lincoln; he died in 1552.

[3] The only sisters attributed to the testator by Collins are Elizabeth, wife of William Clervaux, of Croft, co. York, Esquire; and Margaret, of Anthony Smith, of Kelton, Esquire; his sisters Sutton and Kerham were possibly his wife's sisters, or one of his own sisters might have married twice.

[1] Query, 1540-1?

[2] Grandfather of William Cecil, the first and celebrated Lord Burleigh; he was the younger son of Philip Sicelt, and having purchased a good estate in Lincolnshire in 22 Henry VII. founded a chauntry in St. George's Church in Stamford, and in 3 Henry VIII. was constituted Water Bailiff of Wittlesey Mere, in Huntingdonshire, and Keeper of the Swans there, and throughout all the waters and fens in the counties of Hunts, Cambridge, Lincoln, and Northampton, for thirty years; two years afterwards he was appointed one of the King's Serjeants at Arms, and having progressively risen in the royal favour, obtained grants of some importance; in 1529 he was escheator of Lincolnshire, and in the 23d Henry VIII. became Sheriff of the County of Northampton: by Jane his wife, daughter and heir of John Dichons, of Stamford, he had two sons Richard and David, and a daughter Jane, and died in 1541. Collins' Peerage, vol. iii. p. 154.

[1] David my father, in the MS. abstract, but as above in Collins, which is evidently correct, as his father was named Philip.

[2] Query, 1541-2?

[3] Dugdale, in his narrative of the family of Grey Earls of Kent, gives a very imperfect account of Richard Earl of Kent, K. G. the testatrix's husband, as he merely informs us that he succeeded his father George in the 20th Henry VII. was at the siege of Therouenne 4 Henry VIII. and that having married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Husee, Knight, and much wasted his estate by gaming, died at the sign of the George in Lombard-street, in London, in 15 Henry VIII. s. p. and was buried in the White Friars, leaving Margaret his wife alive, who died in the 32d Henry VIII. and was likewise buried in the White Friars, under her husband's tombstone. If this statement be correct Margaret must have been his second wife.

[4] The order of White Friars, London, was suppressed 17th November 1539, and she appears to have doubted whether she might be allowed to be buried in the Church which belonged to it.

Dugdale states that his wife was Cecily, sister and heir of Henry Earl of Bridgewater, by whom he had John his son and heir, two other sons, and five daughters. * From Dugdale's Abstract, vol. ii. p. 131, and a MS. note.

[2] He was Comptroller of the Household of Henry VIII., Constable of the Tower of London, and one of that monarch's Privy Council, by whom he was employed in several embassies and other important services. Buswell, who describes him of Kingston Hall in Gloucestershire, asserts that he was Captain of the Guards to Edward VI. and that after the Duke of Somerset's fall he retired from all his employments and died in 1552, This statement is however manifestly erroneous, for as his will was proved in 1541, it is obvious that he died five years before Edward ascended the throne! The person whom Buswell mistakes for the testator was Provost Martial to the forces sent in 1547 to quell the rebellion in Cornwall, and of whom Baker relates what he terms "the bloody jest," and "merry cruelty," concerning the execution of the Mayor of Bodmin, and of a miller of that place. Baker and Buswell call the Provost Martial in question Sir William Kingston, but Carew, Lysons, and other historians of Cornwall, state that it was Sir Anthony Kingston. Carew quaintly describes the circumstance in the following words: "Sir Anthony Kingston, then Prevost Martial of the King's Army, hath left his name more memorable than commendable amongst the townsmen [of Bodmin] for causing their Mayor to erect a gallows before his own door, upon which (after having feasted Sir Anthony) himself was hanged. In like sort (say they) he trussed up a miller's man, thereby for that he presented himself in the others stead, saying he could never do his master better service. But men's tongues, readily inclined to the worst reports, have left out a part of the truth in this tale, that the rest might carry the better grace: for Sir Anthony did nothing herein as a judge, by discretion, but as an officer, by direction; and besides he gave the mayor sufficient watchwords of timely warning, and large space of respite (more than which, in regard of his own peril, he could not afford) to shift for safety, if an uneschewable destiny had not haltered him to that advancement. As for the miller's man he equalled his master in their common offence of rebellion, and therefore it deserved the praise of mercy, to spare one of the two, and not the blame of cruelty to hang one for another." It is probable that Sir Anthony Kingston, mentioned by Carew, was the son of the testator Sir William Kingston, K. G. whose will is given in the text, married Mary, daughter and coheir of Sir Richard Scrope, of Upsal, Knight, and widow of Sir Edward Jerningham, by whom it appears he had a son Anthony last mentioned.

SIR DAVID OWEN, KNIGHT.

David Owen, Knight, 20th February, 1529. My body to be buried in the Priory of Esseborne, after the degree of a Baronet [1], that is, with helmet and sword, my coat armour, my banner, my standard, my pendant, and set over a banner of the Holy Trinity, one of Our Lady, and

[1] Sic in the MS. but more properly Banneret. This person is by some writers considered to have been a natural son of Owen Tudor, grandfather of King Henry the Seventh, but from his ordering an obit to be kept for his father and mother, and from the dates, it would rather appear that he was the son of the natural son of that personage. It is certain that his second wife was Ann, sister of Walter Devereux Lord Ferrers of Chartley, afterwards created Viscount Hereford, and that by her he had issue; but in most pedigrees of that family the said Anne is said to have married Henry Lord Clifford. The first wife of Sir David Owen appears to have been Mary, daughter and coheir of John de Bohun, of Midhurst, and by her he probably had Jasper Owen and Sir Henry Owen, Knight, the father of David Owen mentioned in his will. It was in all probability this Sir David Owen whose disposition in the cause of the divorce between Henry the Eighth and Katherine of Arragon is preserved in the British Museum, in the Cottonian MS. Vitellius, B. xii. f. 98. In Harl. MSS. 1597, cited in Banks' Dormant and Extinct Peerage, the pedigree stands thus:

another of St. George, borne after the order of a man of my degree, and the same to be set over my tomb in the said Priory. I will that an obit be kept yearly, the morrow for the souls of King Henry the Seventh, Edmund sometime Earl of Richmond, Jasper Duke of Bedford, my father, my mother, &c. I will that a vault of brick be made under the ground, where my body shall lye, and that a tomb be set upon the same vault, and mine image, and the image of my first wife; and I will that my tomb be new gilt and painted. Anne, my wife, sister to Walter Devereux, Lord Ferrers of Chartley; to my two daughters by my wife Anne each D marks; to Barbara, my bastard daughter, CCC marks; to my daughter Anne Hopton a standing cup of silver. I constitute Robert Norwiche, the King's Serjeant-at-Law, Sir William Fitz-William, Treasurer of the King's Household, my executors, who shall stand seised of my manor of Southwick, in Wilts, and the Chauntry there, and of my manor of Wooton, in Surrey, with the Advowson of the Church there, and the free Chapel of the same, and all my lands and tenements in Rousper and Horsham, in Sussex, with my land in Farthingston, Hallowell, and Erneley, in Northamptonshire, for my use for term of my life, remainder to Owen, my son, begotten on the body of Anne, my now wife; remainder to my second son, John Owen and the heirs male of his body; remainder to the use of my son Jasper Owen; remainder to David Owen, son of my son Sir Henry Owen,

David Owen.

The will in the text proves that this statement is not strictly correct, unless he had three wives; in all probability by his wife Mary Bohun he had the children assigned him in the Harl. MSS. just referred to, and that the daughter Ann there mentioned is described in his will as his daughter Anne Hopton. But it is certain from his will that by his second wife Ann Devereux he had two sons, Owen Owen and John Owen, and likewise two daughters.

[1] He was son of Sir Thomas Fitz-William, of Aldwarke, co. York, by Lucy, daughter and coheir of John Neville, Marquess Montacute, and brother of Thomas Fitz-William, who was slain at Flodden Field; in the 2d Henry VIII. he was appointed an Esquire of the King's body, and became distinguished as a naval officer, and in the 5th Henry VIII. "being one of the chief commanders in the fleet then sent out against the French, he was sore hurt with a broad arrow in fight near Brest in Brittany," towards the end of which year he received the honour of knighthood for his services at the siege of Tournay. In the 12th Henry VIII. he was Vice Admiral of England, and three years afterwards was constituted Admiral of the English fleet. His eminent services and the favour of his sovereign combined to render his advancement to the highest honours of the state speedy and certain, and in a few years he was successively created to the dignities of which he styles himself possessed in his will. He died at Newcastle towards the end of the year 1542, being then one of the leaders of the army destined for the invasion of Scotland, and in which, Dugdale observes, notwithstanding his death, "so high an estimation continued to his memory, that to the honour thereof his standard was borne in the foreward throughout that whole expedition." He married Mabel, daughter of Henry Lord Clifford, and sister of Henry first Earl of Cumberland, but had no legitimate issue; he left, however, a natural son called Thomas Fitz-William, alias Fisher. The following pedigree shews the relationship of most of the persons mentioned in his will.

The circumstance of the testator describing John Cutts as his nephew merits some attention. In the will of Elizabeth Lady Scrope, p. 587-8) who was the sister of the testator's mother, dated in 1518, she speaks of her niece Lucy, daughter of her sister Lady Browne, and states that she was then married to John Cutt, but is in the pedigrees of the Browne family the said Lucy is said to have only married Sir Thomas Clifford, it was conjectured in the note to that will that the marriage with Cutt was never consummated. It would appear, however, from the Earl of Southampton speaking of a John Cutt as his nephew, that the marriage in ques-

To every one of my brother Peter's children x l.; to Elizabeth, my brother Edward's daughter, x l.; to my sister, Elizabeth Towley, vi l. xiii s. vi d. and every of her children, vi l. xiii s. viii d. To Thomas Dormer, my eldest son, all my lands in Heydon, Maston, and Water Eton, with remainder to his heirs. To William Dormer, my son, and his heirs, all my lands in the parishes of Tame, Aston, Stoke Church, Rowson, Downford, Sowthorne, Hepall Aston, Wendlebury, Ilberry, Wykham, Kirtillon, Dorton, and Coynton, in Oxfordshire, except my part of my manor of Coyndon, which I bought of my Lord Marquess of Dorset; remainder to my son Walter Dormer; remainder to my daughter, Jane Stapulton. I constitute Katherine, my wife, and John Dormer, my son, my executors; and my cousin, Sir Robert Dormer, Knt. and Anthony Stapulton, overseers. Proved 2d October 1545.

WILLIAM YELVERTON, ESQ.

William Yelverton, of Rougham, the elder, Esq.[2] 30th January 1540-1. My body to be buried in the Church of Our Lady of Rougham; and I will that my executors give to poor people at my funeral as much money as they think fit; and that they make restitution to all persons whom they think in conscience I have wronged. To Margaret Yelverton, my wife, and Sir Roger Townshend, Knt. whom I constitute my sole executors, all my goods, moveable and immoveable, debts, plate, household stuff, and all other utensils, they to part them among my children as they shall think best. Proved 17th August 1541*.

JOHN MAYNARD.

John Maynard [1], 4th October 1546. My body to be buried in the Chapel of the Holy Trinity, within the Church of St. Mary Arches in the City of Exeter. I will that a yearly obit be kept in the said Church on the 3d of November (if not on Sunday) to pray for the souls of John Bradmore, my father-in-law, my father's and mother's souls, and all the souls I am bound to pray for. To my brother, John Maynard. I will that all my evidences concerning my lands be by my overseers sorted, and put in boxes, and then put in a coffer with three locks, and three several keys belonging to each of them; one to remain with the Mayor of Exeter for the time being, another with the overseers of my will, and the third to be kept by the head-warden for the time being of the parish of St. Mary Arches; and the said coffer to remain in the Council Chamber till such time as my son and heir come to the full age of twenty-eight years. My lands in the parishes of Kenne, Rew, Wymple, Morchard Crucis, Axminster, in Devonshire. My sons, John and Richard *.

GEORGE SANDYS.

George Sandys, of Estwaite Furnese, in the county of Lancaster [2], April 23, 1548. Considering the uncertainty of my life, I commit my soul into the custody and hand of our Saviour

---

[1] Younger brother of John Maynard, Esquire, the ancestor of the present Viscount Maynard. He is said to have married ...., daughter of William St. Leger, alias Snelling, of Chedlewood, Esq.

* From the Abstract in Collins' Peerage, ed. 1779, vol. vi. pp. 268, 269.

[2] Ancestor of the Lords Sandys of Ombersleigh, and of the present Marchioness of Downshire, Baroness Sandys of Ombersleigh.

Jesus Christ, trusting surely, that through the sprinkling of his blood I shall be partaker of the inheritage prepared for the faithful. To my grandson, Roger Sandys, son of George Sandys, I bequeath half of Watside Park, &c.; to my son Christopher, my estate at Garthwaite, in Lancashire, with other lands, after the death of his mother; to William my son, jointly with his brother Christopher, I bequeath my lease of Hawkshead Church, and three bloom smiddyes, with all the ore which I have in Mithland and Low Furness, paying to Miles and Anthony, my sons, and their brothers, a hundred pounds. I further will, to my said sons, Miles and Anthony, equally and jointly, all my rights in Louson Park, Parkamore, and the one half of Watside Park; to my daughter Anne, and to my grand-daughters, Agnes, Margaret, and Elizabeth, daughters of George Sandys. I will also, that my son, Edwin Sandes, vicar of Haversham, shall have of my goods, &c. xx l. desiring him heartily, upon my blessing, to see this my last will and testament fulfilled, and good rule and loving order to be had among his mother's brethren, and sisters and children of my said son George. Moreover, it is my will and mind, that in case any of my sons, or others, be not contented, lovingly and jointly, to fulfil this my last will, that then they which offend and break this my said will and testament, shall forfeit all such possessions, &c. bequeathed to them; and the same to be at the sight of John Preston, Esq. and other supervisors of this my said last will and testament. I constitute my sons, William, Christopher, Miles, and Anthony, my executors; and John Preston, Esq. my son, Edward Sandys, vicar of Haversham, William Dixon, Miles Dixon, Thomas Benson, Richard Mackereith, William Sawrey, Miles Sawrey, and Richard Sandys, of Lancaster, supervisors; and do appoint, that if my estate be not sufficient to discharge the legacies, that they shall then be lessened, at the discretion of Mr. Preston, and Edwin Sandys, my son, vicar of Haversham*.

CHARLES DUKE OF SUFFOLK.

Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk[1], 20th June 1544. My body to be buried in the Collegiate Church of Tatshall, in the County of Lincoln, if it might conveniently be, but without any pomp, or outward pride of the world. I will, that Masses and Diriges be done for me there by all the priests of that College, and other my chaplains, according to the ancient custom of the Church of England. I will, that no black gowns or coats be given at my funeral, except to my own servants and torch bearers. I will that c l. be distributed to the poorest householders of my tenants, and others dwelling next to my houses of Tatshall, Gresham, Ellow, and Gaynesthorpe, in the County of Lincoln, to pray for my soul. I will, that a cup of gold be made out of my Collar of the Garter, and given to the King *.

THOMAS EARL OF RUTLAND.

Thomas Earl of Rutland[2], 16th August 34 Hen. VIII. 1542. Whereas I am seized of the manors of Belvoir and Wollesthorpe, and of other lands there; also, of the Castle of Hemsley, the scite of the late Monastery of Rivault, and the scite of the Priory of Warter, in the County of York,

[2] Thomas Manners, first Earl of Rutland of that name, and a Knight of the Garter. He was twice married, first, to Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Robert Lovel, Knight, by whom he had no issue; and secondly, to Eleanor, daughter of Sir William Paston, Knight, by whom he had the children named in his will. The Earl died 20th September 1543.

and the scite of the late Monastery of Garodon, and the scite of the late Commandery of the Eagle in Lincoln, the scite of the Priory of Belvoir in Lincoln, with lands in divers towns belonging to the said Monasteries, all of which lands Margaret[1] Countess of Rutland, my wife, hath in dower. Whereas I am also seised of the scite of the Monasteries of Newsted next Stamford, and of Croxton in Leicestershire, all which manors extend to the clear yearly value of M.DCCCLXXII l. To Oliver Manners, one of my younger sons, the manor of Howson in Yorkshire, with all the appurtenances for his life. After my son, Henry Lord Roos, and the Lady Margaret Roos[2] have had carnal knowledge in lawful matrimony, I will that the said Margaret hold the manors of Melton Ross, in the County of Lincoln, and all my lands in Melton Ross, Beckby, Kernyngron, Barnaby, Ulceby, Wrawby, Glamford-Bruggs, Elsham, and Wotton, the manor of Orston, and the Soke, and all lands, &c. in Orston, Streton, Kneton, Scavington, Carcolston, Thurverton, Staunton, and Dalington, in the County of Nottingham, as her jointure. To John Manners, one of my younger sons, my manor of Thornton in Craven, with the appurtenances in Thornton in Craven, Earesby, and Kelbroke, in the County of York. To Roger Manners, another of my younger sons, the manor of Linton upon Ouse, with the appurtenances in Linton and Yolton, in the County of York. To Thomas Manners, another of my younger sons, my manor of Turnham Hall and Cliff, in the parish of Hemmyngburgh, with the appurtenances. To my three daughters Elizabeth, Frances, and Katherine, LX l. per annum each, till they be married, and M l. each towards their marriages. And I constitute Eleanor Countess of Richmond my wife, Sir Richard Manners, Knt. my brother,

CHARLES LORD MONTJOY.

Charles Blount, Lord Montjoy, 36 Henry VIII. 1544. Being in the wars of France, I will that a stone be laid over my grave, in case I shall happen to be slain, with the following epitaph thereon, for a monument to my children, to continue and keep themselves worthy of so much honour as to be called hereafter to die for their Master and Country.

Epitaphium.

Willingly have I sought,
And willing have I found
The fatal end that wrought
Me hither, as duty bound.

Discharg'd I am of that I ought
To my country by honest wonde [2]
My soul departed, Christ hath bought:
The end of Man is ground.

I will that, if I die out of the wars, that then my body, without any curiosity or costly ceremonies, be brought to the Church most of resort thereabouts; and that a tomb be there erected for me according to my degree. Also, I will that, for the space of two years after my decease, a godly and discreet man may be chosen to edify the youth of the parish of Westbury under the Plain, in the County of Wilts, with two lectures, whereof the first lecture to be every day in the morning ordained for the catechising of children, that thereby they may be perfectly instructed to know what they profess in their Baptism, in their Pater Noster how to pray; in their Ave Maria to know how our Lord ought to be honoured, and in the Ten Commandments; and that he who may be Reader, shall not only read unto them, but also appose them, as they do in matters of grammar. The second lecture to be within the same parish, at afternoon four times in the week; that is to say, on Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Sunday, to them that come; wherein chiefly to be declared the duty of subjects to their king and magistrates, for maintenance of good order and obeysance, not only for fear but for conscience, with Scriptures Divine and profane policies consonant thereunto; as also increpation of vice with their texts of Scripture; and for the performance thereof the Reader to have xx marks by the year. To my wife, my manors of Barton, in Derbyshire, and Sprytlesbury and Pulham, in Dorsetshire, for her life; Francis and William, my sons; Richard Blount, my cousin. Proved 19th December 1545*.

JOHN SCROPE, ESQ.

John Scrope, of Hamylden, in the County of Bucks[1],

* From Dugdale's Abstract, vol. i. p. 521, and a MS. note.

John Lord Scrope of Bolton, my nephew; my wife, Felys; my eldest son, Henry; my daughter, Margaret Wyvell; my sons John and Ralph; my manor of Hamylden; my sons Adrian and Robert. I constitute John Lord Scrope, Lord Scrope of Bolton, my wife Felys, and Thomas Rokeby, her brother, my executors.

Proved 27th November 1547.

EDWARD LORD GREY OF POWIS.

Edward Grey, Lord Powis[1], 11th June, 36 Henry VIII. 1544. My barony and lordship of Powys, with my castle and manor of Poole, and my other lordships in the county of Montgomery; and also, my castles and manors of Cherleton and Pontysbury, in the county of Salop, to the heirs of my body lawfully begotten; failing which, my castle and manor of Charlton, and manor of Pontysbury, to Jane Orwell, daughter of Sir Lewis Orwell, Knt. and her assigns, during her natural life. And, in default of issue of my body lawfully begotten, I will that Edward Grey, my illegitimate son by the said Jane Orwell, shall have and enjoy my said barony and manor of Powis, my castle and manor of Poole, and all other my lordships in the county of Montgomery, and the reversion of the castle and manors of Cherleton and Pontysbury, to him and the heirs of his body lawfully begotten; in default of which, the same to remain to that child, in case it be a son, wherewith the said Jane Orwell is now great by me, and to the heirs of his body lawfully begotten; but if it should not be a son, or if a son and he die without issue, then I will that the whole Barony of Powys, and the premises aforesaid,

And I will that the longest liver of my executors shall receive the same, and find the said priest during the said years.

Proved at Canterbury 27th March, 1548.

WILLIAM BOYS, ESQ.

William Boys, of Nonninton, Esq. If I die where I now dwell, I will that my body be buried in the Chapel where I sit. Ellen, Mary, and Elizabeth, my daughters. My daughter's uncle, Sir Edward Ringley, Knt. To the poor of every parish, within the Hundred of Eastry, VI*l.* XIII*s.* IV*d.* My five sons, Edward, Thomas, William, John, and Vincent. Mary my wife. I will that Edward, my eldest son, have all my manors, lands, and tenements, as were entailed to him, and his eldest heir male, according to the indentures made between me, his father, and Sir Edwârd Ringley, Knt.[1] at the time of his marriage. My sister Margaret. My manor of Fredfeld; my lands of Frogham. To Edward my son, my leases of Accolte, and three barrows, which I have obtained of my Lord of Canterbury, and my lease of six score acres of land, which I have obtained of the late Prior of Dover, called Westcorland. I bequeath a moiety of Ketterton, which was lately Brymers, and also eight score acres of land, called Ketterton, which I took of my Lord of Canterbury, to the said Edward, my son, to apply the profits to the use of my two sons, John and Vincent, until they come of age,

WILLIAM LORD STOURTON.

William Stourton, Knt. Lord Stourton [1], Deputy-General of Newhaven and the Marches of the same, 8th September

* From Collins' Peerage, ed. 1779, vol. iii. p. 155.

[1] Sixth Lord Stourton. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Edmund Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, and by her had Charles his son and heir, Andrew, Arthur, John, Giles, and George, and two daughters, Ursula, who married Edward Lord Clinton, and Dorothy, who married Sir Richard Brent. Collins states, that he married, secondly, Anne or Agnes Ryse, daughter of the Countess of Bridgewater, whilst other authorities assert, that his second wife was the said Countess of Bridgewater. The Countess of Bridgewater in question was Katherine, daughter of Thomas Howard second Duke of Norfolk, who married, first, Sir Griffith Rhese, or as he is more generally called Sir Rhese Ap Thomas, K. G.; and secondly, Henry Daubeney, Earl of Bridgewater. It is almost certain, from the manner in which Lord Stourton speaks of "Mrs. Anne Rhese," that she was not his wife at the date of his will, and unless he had married the Countess of Bridgewater, and the said Mrs. Anne Rhese was her daughter by her first husband Sir Griffith Rhese, K. G. the inference to be drawn from the testator's bequest to, and description of her, tend to raise a suspicion by no means favourable to her memory. Collins goes on to state that the probate of this will was dated 15th July 1557, and that Agnes Stourton, widow of the deceased, administered, whilst Dugdale informs us that it was proved 15th November 1548. Neither of these statements appear, on examination, to be correct, for what Collins calls the probate of William Lord Stourton's will, was the commission issued on the 15th July 1557, to Anne Stourton, widow, of the goods, &c. of Charles late Lord Stourton; hence it seems that the will in the text was never proved until after the death of the testator's son and successor, Charles Lord Stourton, who was executed for murder 16th

1548, being now sick, &c. I will that my body be buried where it shall please God. To my daughter Clinton two silver pots, of the value of xx l.; to my daughter Brent two others, of the same value, with my arms and names thereon; to Mrs. Anne Ryse, daughter to the Countess of Bridgewater, all my plate of silver gilt or parcel gilt now remaining at Newhaven, and in her keeping, with all my beds and other stuff of household, moveable or immoveable, in all places within my manor and lordship of Stourton, as well corn and hay as other necessaries; the residue I bequeath to Charles Stourton, my eldest son, whom I constitute my sole executor, and to bestow for my soul's health, as conscience and reason shall require. And I appoint the Lord William Howard, and Sir John Bridges, Knt. now Deputy of Bologne, overseers, to each of whom I bequeath x l. for their trouble.

IN A CODICIL, dated 10th September 1548.

May 22, 1551. I, Sir John Wallop, Knight of the right honourable Order, Lievtenaunte of the Castill and Countye of Guysnes[1], being of whole mynde and in perfitt memory, and sicke in bodye; considering the vanitie of this worlde, and the soden chaunge of man out of this transitorie

[1] Sir John Walpole was distinguished, equally by his military as by his civil merits, in the reign of Henry VIII. In the 6th Henry VIII. he was Admiral and Commander in Chief of the King's Fleet; and in the 18th he was sent as Ambassador to the Princes of Germany. On his return from Guisnes, in 1543, of which he had been appointed Governor and Captain General, he was elected a Knight of the Garter. He closed a life spent with zeal and fidelity in his Sovereign's service, at Guisnes, in July, 5th Edward VI. 1551, where he was buried. Sir John was twice married, first, to Elizabeth, widow of Gerard, son of Thomas Earl of Kildare, and daughter of Sir Oliver St. John, of Lydiard Tregoz; and, secondly, to Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Clement Harleston, of Okingdon, co. Essex, Knt.; but, having no issue, his brother, Sir Oliver Wallop, became his heir, from whom the present Earl worlde; and nothing to be more certayne then death, and the tyme thereof to be uncertayne: do therefore deliberately and advisedly ordeyne and make this my testament and last will, in manor and form following. First, I revoke and annull all former testaments, &c. And then, afore all other worldly things, I give and bequeathe my soul to Almightie God my Maker, Redeemer, and Saviour, humbly desiring our Ladye Sayut Marie, the virgin mother of our Lord Jesus Christ, and all the holy company to be mediators and intercessors for me, that my soul may be saved by the merits of Christe's passion, and have place of glory that he redeemyed me to with his precious blood, thorrowe the abundance and multitude of the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christe. And my body to be buried in Christian burial, whare myne executrice undernamyed shall think most expedient at the tyme of my deathe. Item, I give and bequeathe to my singular good Lord the Duke of Somersett's Grace, one of the two great guylt cuppis that King Ferdinando, King of Romayns, did give to me, being the King's ambassador with hyme. Item, I give and bequeathe to my very good Lord Therle of Warwick, thother greate gilt cupp the fellow of the same. Item, to my Lord Therle of Wilteshire my great gilt boll with a cover, that I brought out of France with me. Item, to my loving brother Sir Thomas Chayne, Lord Gwarden of the Five Ports, my great gilt cupp that the Kinge of Pole dyde give me, and my mules. Item, to my loving frende Sir William Herbert, Knight, Master of the Horse, one of my three new bollys, with a cover gilt, bought at Bruges. Item, to Sir Edward Wotton, Knight, my gilt cupp with a cover, whiche I and my wife did use to drynke caudels in. And yf it happen the said Syr Edward Wotton to dye afore me, then I bequeathe the said gilt cupp to Mr. Nicholas Wotton, Dean of Canterbury, his brother. Item, to my brother Oliver Wallop my gown furred with sables, and all my stuf of household which I now have at my house of my manor of Farley. Item, to my cosyne Cooke, Sergeant of the King's Herthounds, my gown furred with lucerns, and my velvet cloke. Item, to John Smale, my steward, my gowne

SIR EDWARD MONTACUTE.

Sir Edward Montacute[1], 17th July 1556. I bequeath my soul to the blessed Trinity, and my body to be buried in Christian burial, without great pomp or great solemnity, or common dole distributed; but I will that alms be sent to the poor people, to their own homes, in the towns next adjoining, if so be I decease in the country, but if in London, then such dole to be distributed as my executors think convenient. For the reparations of the Churches of Hemyngton, Wekeley, Brigstock, Scaldwell, and Werkton; to fifty poor maidens XL s. each, towards their advancement in marriage, and to the intent that they shall pray for my soul, and the souls of Roger Radcliff, Jeffery Radcliff, and John Asheton, with all Christian souls. I will to my eldest son and heir, Edward Montagu, my great ring with a signwynarye in it, which my father gave me, that remaineth in my study at Brigstock; and my ring of gold, with my seal of arms it it; as also my ring with the best pointed diamond, and my broche with a blue saphire set in it, fashioned like a flower-de-luce; which ring, with the diamond and broche, I bought of my father Kirkham. Also, I will to him my manors, lands, and tenements in Werketon, Brigstock, Houghton, Langeport, Mallesley Holwell, Gillesborough, Brington-Magna, Brington-Parva, Grafton, and the Parsonage of Wekeley, in the county of Northampton,

[1] Ancestor of the Dukes of Manchester, &c. At an early age he entered on the study of the Law, and in the 23d Henry VIII. was called to the degree of a Serjeant; six years afterwards he was appointed Chief Justice of the King's Bench, which office he resigned in 1545, when he was removed to the Court of Common Pleas. In the question relative to the Succession to the Crown on the death of Edward VI., his official situation, and, still more, his having been nominated one of Henry's executors, necessarily involved him, in consequence of which he was imprisoned; he was, however, shortly afterwards released, though with the loss of his judicial appointment. Sir Edward Montagu died on the 10th February 1557, having been thrice married, and by his first and third wife he left a large family.

SIR THOMAS HASTINGS, KNT.

In the name, &c. I, Sir Thomas Hastings, Knt. &c.[1]

[1] He was the second son of George, first Earl of Huntingdon, and brother of Edward Lord Hastings, whose Will is inserted in p. 740. In 1555 and 1556 he was Sheriff of Warwick and Leicester, which Shire Dugdale says he represented in Parliament 1 and 2 Philip and Mary; and married Winifred, (afterwards the wife of Sir Thomas Barrington,) daughter and coheir of Henry Pole, Lord Montagu, son of Sir Richard Pole, K. G. by Margaret Plantagenet, Countess of Salisbury, daughter and heiress of George Duke of Clarence. Sir Thomas Hastings, the testator, died without issue in 1558.

ordeyn this my testament, &c. 28th March 1558. My body to be buried in the parish church of Stoke Pogeis, or within the chapell there, being lately founded and erected at the only chardges of my most entirely beloved brother Edward Lord Hastings of Loughborough, Lord Chamberlayn of the Queen's Majestie's Houshold. Item, I give to the said parish church of Stoke, towards the mayntenance of the same in reparation, XL s. Item, to the same church, my best chalice of silver and gilt, and a vestment of russet-velvet, with the awbe, and all things pertaining to the furniture of the same. Item, &c. to the vicar of Stoke aforesaid, to pray to God for my soule and the soules of my ancestors, XX s. Item, &c. to the four almesmen and two almeswomen, within the almeshouse of Stoke, being of the foundation of my said entirely beloved brother, to every of them XX s. apiece. To the fryers of St. Bartholomew in London, XL s.; to the fryers of Grenewich, XL s.; to the nuns of Langley, XL s.; to the prisoners within the four prisons in London, viz. Ludgate, Newgate, the King's Bench, and the Marshalsea, to every of the said houses, XL s. Provided always, that if it shall please God to call me out of this transitory life, I being removed out of the citty of London and suburbs of the same, then I will, that the sumes of money above bequeathed to the prisoners, or prisons, shall be distributed to and among the poore of the parish where it shall fortune me to dye, &c. according to the discretion of myne executrix, &c.; that she, with such of my goods as shall come to her hands, shall forthwith after my decease provide and hyer one honest virtuous priest, to say and celebrate the divine sacrifice of the masse, within the church or chapell wherein I shall fortune to be buryed, during the space of three years then next following, &c.; in daily celebrating of which said divine service and sacrifice, I will that special commemoration and prayer be made for my soule and the soules of my late father George Earl of Huntingdon and Anne his wife, and for all Cristen soules. Item, I will that my wife shall keep in housliold all my houshold servants, &c. which I shall fortune to have in my check-roll, for and during the space of one year after my decease, &c. The residue of all my goods, &c. not above bequeathed, I do hereby give, &c. to my entirely beloved wife, Winifrede Hastings, &c. And of the execution, &c. of the same my present testament, I make and ordeyn my said wife chief and sole executrix, &c. Item, I give, &c. to my right ho'ble and wel-beloved brethren, my Lord Huntingdon, and Lord Hastings of Loughborough, Lord Chamberlaine of the Queene's Majestie's Houshold, to either of them one standing-cup of sylver and gylt, every one of them being of the value of xx nobles, &c. And I most humbly and most heartily desier and pray my most reverend father in God, and my most singular beloved uncle, my Lord Cardinall's grace[1], to be overseer of this my present testament, &c.; and I give and bequeath to his grace, for his paynestaking therein, a cup of silver and gylt, of the value of ten pounds, &c. In witnesse, &c.

[2] Second Lord Windsor, and ancestor of the present Earl of Plymouth. This nobleman was a personage of considerable importance, and appears to have stood high in the favour of Queen Mary, by whom he was honoured with several confidential appointments. He was thrice married, and had issue seven sons and nine daughters; and dying on the 20th of August 1558, was succeeded in the Barony by his eldest surviving son Sir Edward Windsuch place as shall be thought most decent and convenient by my executors, if it shall so come to pass, that the Church of Hounslowe, at the time of my decease, be a parish church. Also, I will that my burial entertainment and anniversary be conveniently kept in such Church as my body is buried in, according to my degree and estate, with such cloathing for the Lady my wife, my children, and menial and household servants, with such moneys as shall be appointed by my executors, at the several days of my burial and anniversary; and that VI*l.* XIIIIs. IIII*d.* be given among poor householders, on the day of my interment: also, I will that, from and after my decease, there be yearly kept on the Monday next before the feast of St. Michael the Archangel, where my body shall be buried, one anniversary service, according to the godly order of the holy Catholic Church, with certain priests and clerks, to pray for my soule, and the soules of Andrews Lord Wyndesore, my father, Thomas Wyndesore, Esq. my grandfather, and all their wives, ancestors, friends, and childrens souls, and all Christian soules. And I will that my son, Philip, for ever yearly, the said Monday, or before, cause to be paid to the Minister, or other governour or governess of the house of Hounslowe, for the time being, a yearly rent of XXXIIIs. IIII*d.* out of my manor of Cranford le Mote, at Cranford St. John's, in the county of Middlesex, and, in default of payment thereof, the said Minister or Governor, &c. may distrain for it; and be divided among the priests and clerks that shall sing and say mass and dirige, and amongst the poor householders of Hounslowe. I bequeath to the Vicar of Heriard, for his tythes forgotten, XIIIs. IIII*d.* I will to Sir Edward Windsore, Knt. my eldest son and heir apparent, my arras, tapestry, beds and bedding, pillowes, sheets, blankets, &c. there and now being at Bradenham; also, all my chapel stuff, apparell, and ornaments at Bradenham; and all the great kitchen stuff at Bradenham, as potts, pans, spittes, plates, dishes, &c. and all other necessaries. I bequeath to Walter Windsor, my son, and William Windsor, my son, beds, &c.; also, to Philip, my son, household stuff remaining at Heriard, in the county of Southampton. I will that my son William, when he is twenty-one years of age, have my indenture of the Prebend and Parsonage of Thame, towards his finding, either at school, at Oxford, or in one of the inns of court, or of chancery; and I further bequeath, to him and his heirs, the manor of Monks-Risborough, with my copyhold lands in Ascote, in the county of Buckingham, and other lands, called Lichingams, Brandes, and Champions. I bequeath to my son, Sir Edward Windsore, my lease of Towresay, and all profits thereof, which I had of the late Edward Ferrers, of Badsley, my son-in-law; also, all my estate, after the life of Lady Knightly, in the manors of Barleyham, Wilsham, Adam, Taston, Darnesdon, and Barkings, in the county of Suffolk, and during all the term of the life of the said Lady Knightly, paying to her yearly two hundred marks, as by indenture appeareth. And for the disposition of my plate, I will that my said son Edward shall have that which was bequeathed to him by the Lord Andrew Windsor, my late father, which I entail on him and his heirs male, and in default, according to the will of my father, Andrews Lord Windsor. To my sons Walter and William plate, &c. I will that my daughter Ann take to her husband John Danvers, if they be so contented. Whereas there is owing to me, by the Earl of Oxford, a thousand marks, I will my executors to get it into their hands at such times as it shall be due, and out of it pay my son, Walter Windsor, one hundred pounds, and the residue towards the performance of my will. I bequeath to every gentleman, or gentlewoman, at the day of my death, xxvi s. viii d. every yeoman xx s. and every other servant xxx s. iiii d. I bequeath to my son Philip my farm of Allesborne, in the county of Suffolk; and I will that all my stocks of cattle at Heriard, in the county of Southampton, remain to the Lady Elizabeth, now my wife, for her life, and after her decease, to Philip and Elizabeth, the children of the said Elizabeth, and me the said Lord Windsor, and Mary Powlet, daughter to my said wife. Also, I will to my said son, Philip, such plate as is severed and sorted at Bradenham, and a cup which King Philip gave him to his christening, and a standing cup gilt and cover, given at his christening by the Bishop of Winchester, and a drinking cup of silver and cover, given him by the Lady Marquis of Winchester his godmother. And my mind is, that the Lady Elizabeth, my wife, being his natural mother, shall have only the custody thereof during her life, putting in sufficient sureties to my executors for the deliverance thereof to my son Philip after her decease, and to my daughter Elizabeth, if the said Philip die before his said mother. Also, I will that my wife have, during her life, my house in Mogwell-street, in London, called Windsor-Place, with the garden, and all hangings of tapestry and arras, during her life, and being unmarried; also, my new lodging there, adjoining to London Wall, with the appurtenances in the Ward of Cripplegate, London; and, after her decease, to my next heir male, to whom I give the said new building and garden, and not to be severed from Windsor-Place; likewise the manor of Snaylesham, in Icklesham, and Gestling parishes, that she holds in jointure. I further will, that all such debts as I owe, as also my father's that are unpaid, be well and truly contented by my executors, with all convenient speed. I will that the Lady Elizabeth, my wife, Sir Thomas White, of Southwarnborow, and my executors, have the governance and finding of my said son Philip, and daughter Elizabeth, until my son comes to the age of twenty-one years, and my daughter to eighteen years. I ordain executors of my will, Dr. White, Bishop of Winchester, with a legacy of x l.; Lord Chidioke Poulet, vi l. xiii s. iiii d.; Sir John Baker, Knt. xiii l. xvi s. viii d.; Sir Thomas White, of Southwarnborow, x l.; and William Roper, Gent.; and overseers, the Marquis of Winchester, Lord Treasurer of England, to whom I bequeath xx l.; and Sir George Paulet, the other overseer, vi l. xiii s. iiii d. praying them to accept it in good part. The residue of my goods, chattels, &c. (except my harness, armory, weapons, guns, shot and powder, and my tent, which I give to my son Sir Edward Windsor,) I bequeath to my son Philip, and Elizabeth his sister; and, if they decease before the age of twenty-one, then to remain to my son Sir Edward Windsor, and his heirs male. To my grandsons and grand-daughters, plate, &c. Provided always, and my full mind and will is, that if my said executors, and every of them, do refuse and deny to take on them the probation and execution of this my last will, contrary to such trust and confidence as I have in them put, as I do verily trust they will not, then I will that my said son, Sir Edward Windsore, shall in no wise attempt or make any enterprize in or concerning this my will, or the order or administration of any of my goods and chattells, debts or credits. But I will that the said Elizabeth, my wife, and Sir Thomas White, Knt. or the survivor of them, shall, on such refusal, take on them the execution of my said will, according to the purport and tenor of the same. My manors of Bradenham and Penne, called Bealing's; also, my lands, &c. in Cheping-Wycombe and West-Wycombe, and Weston-Turvile, called Molen's manor, and Butler's manor, in the towns of Weston-Turvile and Puttenham, and Ascot, in the counties of Buckingham and Hertford; the manor of Millcourt, in the county of Southampton; the manors of Elmanston, Amstanton, Hatton, Bentley, Thurwaston, Alkemanton and Alkemanton-Bentley, in the county of Derby; the manor of Maidley-Home, in the county of Stafford; also, the manors of Medeley, Houghton, and Belyngley, in the counties of York and Nottingham, immediately after the decease of Dorothy Lady Windsor, wife of Sir Thomas Windsor, Knt. and the manor of Mynchinhampton and Penberve, in the county of Gloucester, together with the manor of Cranford St. John's, Cranford le Mote, with the appurtenances, in the county of Middlesex, which I will to remain to my son Philip, and his heirs for ever, yielding and paying out of the premises, to the Monastery of Hounslow, forty pounds yearly, at the feasts of Our Lady and St. Michael; and, for lack of issue male of the said Philip, to remain to William Windsor, and his heirs male; and in default, to Sir Edward Windsor, and his heirs male. I also will, that my executors pay for the making up of the Friers' House in Hounslow, and for the obtaining of the lease and reversion of the domains of the will the manor of Soúthcote, with the lands in Birfield and Shinfield, in Berkshire, to the Lady Elizabeth, my wife, if she lives sole and unmarried, and to her heirs male; in default, to Sir Edward Wyndsor, Knt. my eldest son, and his heirs male, with remainder to my sons Walter Windsor and William Windsor, and their heirs male, in default, to my own right heirs. I further bequeath to Walter Windsor, my son, my manors of Lushill, the third part of Hendonweeke, and the manor of Sopworth, in Wiltshire, to him and his heirs male, in default, to the right heirs of him, the said William Lord Windsor. And to my son, William Windsor, and the heirs male of his body (with like limitation), the third part of the manor of Langage, with the advowson, the manor of Chipenham, and all the lands purchased of Giles Wilson, in Hydon-Wyke, Kerson, Mylford, Hepton, and Crowbridge, in Wiltshire and Somersetshire. I bequeath to Sir Edward Windsor, my son and heir, the Advowson and Parsonage of Monks-Risborough, with the glebe-land; and law-day, at Ascote, once in the year to be kept; and to him, or who shall be his next heir, my manor of Okebrook within Chadesden, in the county of Derby, the manor of Tredberk, with Brodsley, in the counties of Worcester and Warwick; the manors of Hedeley and Hursmere, in Surrey; the manor of Eton, near Windsor, in Buckinghamshire; the manors of Bailham, Willesham, Goodeford, Rowes, Aldenham, Taston-hall, and Brandeford, in the county of Suffolk; the manor of Farnham and White-Waltham, in Berkshire; the manor of Stoke-Doile in the county of Northampton; the manor of Bunkhurst, in Wiltshire; a tenement in Mogil-street, and a tenement in Lothbury, called the Abby, and the house called Windsor-Place, sometime Westmoreland-Place, in Silver-street, in London; the reversion of the manor of Boneforden, in Stoke-Pogey, &c. with lands in reversion in Stanwell, in Middlesex, some time of the Monastery of Ankerwike. All which I entail on my heirs male; and, in default, on the heirs male of my father, Andrews Lord Windsor. Proved December 10th, 1558 *.

THOMAS ONSLOW.

Thomas Onslow, Gent.[1] 10th August 1556. To all the children of Thomas Onslow, my son and heir, cc marks, to be equally divided amongst them; and, if he have no children at the time of my decease, then to the said Thomas. To all the children of Isabel Onslow, my daughter, cc marks, with remainder to the said Isabel. To William Onslow, my brother, xxx l.; to Arthur, son of the said William, VI l. XIII s. IV*d.*; to Edward Onslow, son of Humphrey Onslow, my brother, VI l. XIII s. IV d.; to Fulke, son of Roger Onslow, my brother, x l. I appoint Thomas Onslow, my son, my executor, and Humphrey Onslow, my brother, and Richard Onslow, son to Roger Onslow, my brother, supervisors. To the said Richard Onslow, for his pains taken in my affairs at divers times, c marks; and in case my son Thomas Onslow, and my daughter Isabel, shall die before me, then I appoint the aforesaid Edward Onslow, and Richard Onslow, my executors.

Proved 15th May, 1560 *.

John Sackville, Esq. by whom he had issue six sons and four daughters; of the latter, Mary married John Thatcher, of Priesthaws, co. Sussex; and Anne was the wife of Thomas Shirley, of Isfield, in the same county, Esq. This Will, though dated a few years after the period with which this Collection professes to close, is introduced as an example of the religious sentiments expressed in Testaments after the Protestant became the authorized religion in this Country. The singular contrast which it forms to the superstition and bigotry exhibited in the preceding Wills printed in this Volume, cannot fail to be particularly noticed.

I wil it be buried by the discretion of my executors and overseers. I will to Dame Anne, my wife, my manor called Colbornes, with the appurtenances, and my lands called Poundfelde and Frotsham, Scottes, and Murlands, in the rape of Laughton, during her life, as also a yearly rent of xxx l. out of the three manors of Burwish, Bevelham, and Crowhurst, in the rape of Hastings; likewise the manor of Cowden, on condition she find and bring up Thomas Pelham, my second son, in virtue and learning, till he comes to the age of eighteen years, and then to pay him out of the said manors xx l. per annum during his life. I bequeath also to the said Dame Ann my wife, all my lands, called Melwoods, Cresselands, Yonge, Wikeland, and Hired, otherwise called Highred and Farthingland, lying in Laughton, on condition she bring up, in virtue and learning, Robert Pelham, my youngest son, till he comes to the age of eighteen years, and then to pay my said son xx l. yearly. And if so be my said wife dyes before my said sons accomplish the age of eighteen yeres, I then will the issues of the said lands to my heir, paying unto them the said yerely rent. An imperfect abstract of this Will is given in p. 47 of this Work; but the above is inserted from Dallaway's Western Sussex, vol. i. p. 47, because it is a much longer and more satisfactory account of its contents. No date is affixed to his will, but as his anniversary was kept on the 3d April 1254, it is certain that he died in the previous year. Some curious particulars of the Testator will be found in the History of Sussex just cited; and in several Wills in this collection, different relics of him are bequeathed as valuable gifts.

WILLIAM BISHOP OF WINCHESTER.

In the name and honour of the most high and undivided Trinity of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, Amen. Since every thing which is created in time will be destroyed in time, and since every mortal living gradually passes away and fails, until it arrives at its last termination, which is death; and I know not how long I may exist, and when my Maker may take me away, since I am daily, during my warfare, expecting the arrival of my change, I, William of Wykeham, by permission of the Most High, the humble though unworthy Minister of the Cathedral Church of Winton [2], being continually anxious and im-

[1] This very severe prohibition of a second marriage, or concealed concubinage, occurs in several other wills of the inhabitants of Bristol, dated about this period, and was probably therefore considered by the prudent burgesses as a proper precaution. The practice of holding auctions after three proclamations made by sound of trumpet, at the high cross, is a curious evidence of a local custom. The abstract in the text is given in the original words from its singularity, but the remaining part of the will has not sufficient interest to render a longer abstract desirable.

[2] The name and character of this distinguished personage are so well known that it is unnecessary in this place to state much beyond the dates of the most eventful circumstances of his life. He was born at Wykeham in Hampshire between the 7th of July and 27th of September in the 18th year of Edward II. 1324, and is generally supposed to have taken his name from the place of his birth, though many circumstances noticed by Bishop pressed with these serious reflections, not resting my hope on this present short life, which is a vapour appearing for a brief space and suddenly passing away, knowing that I must necessarily depart from this vale of misery, but being ignorant of the day and hour of my departure, and desiring to anticipate my death before I go to Him that sent me, to the honour of my Creator, and of the Lord Jesus Christ, the son of God, and for the salvation of my soul, and for the remission of all my faults and sins, I ordain

Lowth tend to prove that it was the name of his parents. In a pedigree, however, preserved in an ancient register of Winchester College, given in Dr. Lowth's Life of the Prelate, and printed in a following page, his father is described as John Longe, "bnt whether it was the proper surname, or a personal bye-name [or soubriquet] given him on account of his stature, in which case his true surname might be Aas, the same that was borne by his brother Henry, it is neither material nor possible to determine." At an early period of his life he was secretary to Nicholas Uvedale, Lord of the Manor of Wykeham, and Governor of Winchester Castle, by whom he was recommended to Edyngton Bishop of Winchester, and by them introduced to the notice of King Edward the Third, who, it is well known, patronized him in a munificent manner. After receiving various ecclesiastical benefices and dignities, he was in 1367 consecrated Bishop of Winchester, the Congé d'Elire for his election to which See was dated on the 13th October 1366, William de Edyngton, the preceding Bishop, having died on the 8th of that month. The various attempts of the Bishop's enemies, in the latter part of his life, to ruin his fortunes, his own conduct on the occasions, and still more those splendid endowments which still render Wykeham's name an object of admiration to the world, and of gratitude to his kindred, have been justly expatiated upon by his able biographer, and by historians. Bishop Wykeham died on the 27th September 1404, having completed his 80th year. His Will is translated at length, because it affords a perfect specimen of the testaments of persons of his wealth and importance, early in the fifteenth century; and because, independently of many curious bequests, the mention made of his kindred may be a useful guide to those who believe themselves entitled to the benefits arising from his institutions.

and make my testament or last will, with a sound mind and pure heart, after this manner. Imprimis, I bequeath and recommend my soul to Almighty God, my Creator and Saviour, who made it out of nothing, imploring his mercy with a humble heart, and beseeching that he would deign to place it, of his great mercy, among his elect. Item, I bequeath my body, when I shall have departed from this light, to be delivered to ecclesiastical burial in the middle of a certain Chapel lately built by me in the nave of the said Church, on the South side of the same. But concerning my goods, which the mercy of my Saviour hath conferred on me, I thus dispose, will, ordain, and bequeath; viz. That, over and above the expenses to be laid out upon my funeral, to the honour and praise of God, whose servant I am, which I entrust to the disposal of my executors and friends, that all my debts, whatsoever may be due to any persons, from whatever cause arising, shall be fully and entirely paid, without any hesitation, contradiction, impediment, or delay; and then that the underwritten legacies shall be fully and entirely paid, concerning which, however, I charge the consciences of my executors, that they shall perform and execute in all respects whatever hereafter is specified and bequeathed, fully, well, faithfully, and entirely, &c. as they shall themselves be willing to answer before the Supreme Judge, my Lord Jesus Christ. Also, I bequeath that in the castle, manor, or whatsoever other place in which I may happen to die, my executors shall give and distribute to the more infirm and indigent persons of my tenants of my Bishoprick, and in every place through which my body may happen to pass to my Church of Winchester, to pray for the salvation of my soul, to each IV d.; and to every other asking alms for the love of God, II d. or I d. at least, according to the discretion of my executors. Item, I ordain that my executors shall distribute, on the day of my burial, to every poor person who comes to Winchester and asks alms for the love of God, and prays for the salvation of my soul IV d. Item, I bequeath CC l. to be divided among the poor prisoners in the prisons of Newgate in London, the King's Bench,

Marshalsea, Wolveseye, Winchester, Oxford, Berks, Guildford, Old and New Sarum, for the love of God and the health of my soul. Item, because God loves the honour of his house, and the place of his habitation, to the honour and praise of God himself, and of our Lord Jesus Christ, and of St. Mary his Mother, and of his Apostles Peter and Paul, aud the Patrons of my said Church, also of St. Berinus, St. Swithin, and St. Edda, and St. Ethelwolf, whose bodies and relics are deposited in the said Church, I will that my executors shall honestly and honourably cause to be rebuilt the body or middle of the said Church, between the North and South aisles, from the West gate, or entrance of the choir of the said Church, backwards, to the West end of the said Church, in the walls, windows, and vaults, conformably and decently, according as the form and manner of the new work of the said aisles shall require, &c. and duly rebuild the same, to the amount of MMD marks, if so much be necessary to be expended on the same, upon condition that the Prior and Convent of the said Church shall find the whole scaffold necessary, or even convenient, for the said work, and that they shall freely and gratuitously permit and allow the lime and sand from the lands and quarries of themselves and their tenants, wherever my executors shall consider that it can be best dug and carried away by the workmen, for the greater expedition of the said work, until the whole be completed, in the same manner that the stones, ironwork, glass, and other old materials, shall remain and be converted to the use of the new work. Also, I ordain that the disposal and direction of the new work shall be in the hands of Master William Wynford, and other sufficient and discreet artizans. And that Dominus Symon Membury, the present supervisor and paymaster, shall in future be the paymaster and supervisor of the said work, under the supervisal and testimony and "contra-rotulatione" of Brother John Wayte, monk of the said Church, and now, on the part of the aforesaid Prior and Convent, the comptroller, as long as he shall be in health, and able to undertake the same, but, if he should be unable, then by the supervisal,

&c. of another monk of the said Church, to be named by the aforesaid Prior and Convent. And that the payments for the said work shall be made from time to time, at the discretion of my executors, or at least of five of them. To the repairs of the windows of the South side of the said Church D marks; and I also ordain that they shall be made of stained glass. Item, I bequeath to my Lord the King one pair of silver gilt covered pitchers, with double roses[1] engraved on the bottom of the same; and I remit to my said Lord the King the sum of D l. in money borrowed of me[2]. Item, I bequeath to my Lord the Archbishop of Canterbury[3], one gold ring with a stone of ruby; likewise a pair of beads of gold, appended from a bracelet of gold[4], having these words engraved on them, A. Y. C. est amor meus.; also, one elemosynary dish, newly made, in the form of a ship. Item, I bequeath to my successor in the Bishoprick of Winchester my best book, "De Officio Pontificali," which begins in the second leaf, "Dicant Excepto;" also, my best missal, which begins in the second leaf after the Calendar, "Tum Angelum;" also, I bequeath to my said successor my larger gold pontifical ring with a sapphire stone, surrounded and ornamented with four balas-rubies[5] and two small diamonds, and eleven pearls; also, my better gold chalice, enamelled on the foot with figures of the Passion; "Item, Ponsere[6] meum meliorem," worked and ornamented with four rubies and CXLI pearls. Item, I bequeath to the

CODICILS.

In the name of God Amen. I, William of Wykeham, by Divine permission Bishop of Winchester, &c. considering that the will of testators is variable until the end of their life, and recalling to my mind and recollecting that, after having made my Will, some things bequeathed and ordained in the same have been fulfilled and really executed by myself, with the assistance of the Divine favour, according to the disposition of the said last Will; therefore, in making my Codicil, with regard to all legacies of this kind, which I intended to be specially expressed in the present Codicils, I will that my executors, named in the aforesaid testament, shall be entirely exonerated and undisturbed; and by these presents I do expressly annul the same legacies. In the first place, the legacy to, &c. [Here are enumerated most of the legacies given in the preceding Will.] I also will and ordain, that if any other of the legacies in my Will bequeathed shall have been made, paid, or even executed, in the present Codicil by me, either formerly or hereafter, while I live, I will that they shall cease after my death, and I annul them both now and at that time, and I will that my executors shall by no means be charged to make, pay, or perform the same, but that they shall in all of them be free, undisturbed, and dissolved. Dated at South Waltham, 10th January 1403, &c.

Proved before Thomas, &c. on the 9th day of October 1404, in our Palace in the City of Coventry, by our beloved sons in Christ, John May Denheth, our Vicar General, and Warden of the Spiritualities of the City and Diocese of Winchester during "sede Episcopali ibidem vacante," and our brother Thomas Nevyle, Prior of the Church of Winchester*.

JOHN GOWER.

In the name of God, Amen. I, John Gower [1], being of sound mind, wholly commending myself, in the Catholic faith, to the divine mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, make my Will in this manner. First, I bequeath my soul to God my Creator, and my body to be buried in the Church of the Canons of St. Mary of Overes, in a place specially destined for this purpose. And I bequeath to the Prior of the said Church for the time being XL*s.* Item, I bequeath to the Sub-Prior XX*s.* Item, I bequeath to each of the Canons, being priests serving God there, XIII*s.* IV*d.*; and to the Canons of the same being noviciates I bequeath VI*s.* VIII*d.* each, that all and each of them may deeputly perform my funeral obsequies, praying for me. Item, I bequeath to each valet within the doors of the said Priory, serving the Prior and Convent, II*s.*; and each boy XII*d.* Item, I bequeath to the Church of St. Magdalene XL*s.* for the lights and ornaments thereof. Item, I bequeath to the Parish Priest of the same X*s.* that he may pray for me, and cause me to be prayed for. Item, I bequeath to the Master Clerk there III*s.* Item, I bequeath to the Sub-

[1] The well known poet: it is stated that he was born about 1320, and that he was descended from an ancient family, which is now represented by the Marquess of Stafford, K. G. but the connexion between the poet and that house has never been clearly established. Gower is said to have studied in the Middle Temple, but little appears to be known of his biography. To posterity he has left an acceptable legacy in his works; and illustrious as the family of Gower unquestionably is, it is acknowledged that they would feel proud to establish their descent from a man who has conferred immortality on their name. From the poet's will it is certain that he was possessed of considerable property, but the inference to be drawn from his not naming any other relation than his wife Agnes, decidedly is, that he died without issue. His death, it is evident, from the date of his testament, and of the probate thereof, occurred in 1408.

Clerk II s. Item, I bequeath to the four Parish Churches in Southwark, viz. St. Margaret, St. George, St. Olave, and St. Mary Magdalene juxta Bermondsey, to each of them severally XIII s. IV d. for the ornaments and lights, as above, and to each Parish Priest or Rector, residing for the time in the same, and serving the Church, VI s. VIII d. that they may pray for me, and cause and procure me to be prayed for in their parishes. Item, I bequeath to the Master of the Hospital of St. Thomas the Martyr, in Southwark, XL s.; and to each priest who is in the bosom of the same hospital, and serving the same, VI s. VIII d. that they may pray for me there.
