SIR, Holyhead, 10th March 1814.

BY the directions of the Commissioners for the Improvement of Holyhead Harbour, I send you a Copy of an Order, this day made by them, recommending that Mr. Rennie's Plan, of which I send you a Copy, should be adopted under the directions of the Lords of the Treasury, and that the same should be laid by you before their Lordships.

I beg you will be pleased to favour me with their Lordships' directions, for the information of the Commissioners; addressed to me at Beaumaris, Anglesey.

I am, SIR,

Your most obedient Servant,

AT

AT a MEETING of the Commissioners named in and by the said Act of Parliament, held at the Eagle and Child Inn in the Town of Holyhead, in the said County of Anglesey, on Thursday the 10th day of March 1814;

THE Commissioners took into consideration Mr. Rennie's Report of 28 February last, and the same having met with their approbation, they recommend to the Lords of the Treasury the adoption of Mr. Rennie's Plan, being of opinion that the advantages accruing from it, will be of great importance to the security and accommodation of all Vessels lying in the Harbour of Holyhead: And the Commissioners ordered their Secretary to send a Copy of such Report to Stephen R. Lushington, Esq. to be laid before their Lordships, for their directions.

GENTLEMEN, London, February 28th, 1814.

IN my Report on the Harbour of Holyhead, dated the 13th June 1802, addressed to the Right honourable William Wickham, then Secretary of State in Ireland, I recommended that a Harbour should be formed for the Packets, on the East side of the Salt Island, upon a limited scale, and which I estimated at £. 38,635.; with a Pier on the North side of the Sound, to shelter the same, and to keep it open, which I estimated at £. 13,718.; making together a Total of £. 52,353. I also estimated the Expense of a similar Plan, but on a larger scale, amounting to £. 66,000. After the delivery of the Report and Estimates, the whole lay dormant until the year 1808, when Captain George Taylor was employed to examine the place, and to make a Plan for improving the Harbour; which he did: And in his Report of the 23d March 1808, he proposes to have only one Pier, but that it should be carried much farther out than I proposed; he likewise advised the Sound to be shut up, and a new Road to be made, as I had done, from Holyhead to the Salt Island; these respective Works he estimated at £. 36,000. The whole being referred to the Elder Brethren of the Trinity House Deptford Strond, they advised, that one large Pier only should be executed, by way of a Breakwater; and if more room for Shipping was required than the Breakwater would shelter, the space within the Harbour should be excavated, to give such additional room, for the reception of Vessels, as on experience might be found necessary; and they also seemed to acquiesce in the shutting up of the Sound. To the Plan of a single Pier, and excavating inwards, I had no objection, it being in fact a part of my own Plan; but the shutting up of the Sound appeared to me highly objectionable; and in this opinion I am now fully borne out by the observations which Mr. Brown has made for the three years he has had the superintendence of the Works at Holyhead: And therefore I beg leave to recommend, that the Sound be kept open, from which I have no doubt many advantages will be found to result, not only in preventing a settlement of sand about the Black Rock and interior part of the Harbour, but also for the purpose of enabling Vessels to pass through it to sea in Easterly winds, when the tide and weather suit. Instead, therefore, of making a solid Mound across the Sound, between the town of Holyhead and the Salt Island, as a Road for Passengers, Carriages, and Horses, to and from the Pier, I advise that an Opening of forty feet wide be left in the Sound; and that, instead of a Stone Arch, a Cast Iron Swing Bridge should be placed on this Opening, which will be little more expensive, and which, in my opinion, will be much overbalanced by the benefit of Vessels being enabled to pass through the Sound to sea, when the wind and tide suit; seeing that, by keeping the Sound open, and by removing the Black Rock, which lies in the middle of it, not only much additional Quay room would be obtained within the Harbour for the accommodation of Shipping, the resort of which has lately become very considerable, in consequence of the shelter the Works of the Pier has already afforded to the Harbour. You have therefore, on the recommendation of Mr. Brown, the resident Engineer on the Works, very wisely changed the direction of the Road across the Salt Island, and instead of carrying it close by the Light House, as was originally intended, it is now executing on the South end of the Island, along the side of the Sound; and this is proposed to be faced with cut Stone, as well as the Communication across the Sound to the intended Cast Iron Swing Bridge; by which means 700 running feet of additional Quay room will be obtained to the Harbour.

The extra Expense of these respective Works will amount, as per annexed Estimate, to £. 6,502. a Sum which, in my opinion, will be beneficially expended on this department of the Work. And I would fain hope the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, on viewing the whole, will be induced to accede to this increase of Expense; and the more especially so, as it appears from Mr. Brown's statements of Expense already incurred, in proportion to the Works performed, that it is not likely much, if any, extra Expense will arise on the Works originally estimated, or those that were estimated in October 1811, notwithstanding they are placed in an exposed and hazardous situation.

I am, Gentlemen,

Your most humble Servant,

(Signed) John Rennie.

Copy of a LETTER dated 25 January 1805, from Messrs. B. & E. Adams, to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Navy, offering to build a 74 Gun Ship.

HON. SIRS,

Since we wrote you yesterday, we understand the River Builders have engaged with your honourable Board to build 74 Gun Ships; and as we have the promise of some large and capital timber now standing, and can build as good a ship as any person in the kingdom, and from our yard being so near Portsmouth, the expense of conveying the ship there, is but small; we hope you will be pleased to grant us a 74 Gun Ship, on the same terms as have been granted to others. We should also be ready to engage, and should be much obliged to your honourable Board, to grant us a frigate, and a brigantine of 382 tons, at the same time, as it would give us an opportunity of converting the different classes of timber.

Navy Office,
25 January 1805.

We are, Hon. Sirs, your most obedient servants,

HON. SIRS, Harwich, 27 January 1805.

In consequence of the letter I was favoured with on the 20th ultimo, and by advice of some most respectable friends connected with this borough;

I now beg leave to tender for building a 74 Gun Ship, in the Navy Yard at this place, at £. 36 per ton, and to be completed in 48 months.

And Have the honour to be, hon. Sirs,

Your most humble Servant,

J. Graham.

Copy of a LETTER dated 29 January 1805, from Messrs. B. & E. Adams, to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Navy, on the subject of building Ships for His Majesty.

HON. SIRS,

My brother, Mr. Edward Adams, has informed me, that an account has been taken and sent to your honourable Board, of the timbers cut for the ships building by us, which amount to nearly six hundred, and which account I hope will prove satisfactory to you. Your honourable Board may rely on our using every exertion to expedite the works; and we hope you will be pleased to grant us a 74 Gun Ship, upon the same terms as others. We should also be much obliged, if your honourable Board would grant us a Brigantine, or one of the last Gun Brigs, having purchased some timber calculated for that purpose, or we should by no means be desirous of building the latter on the terms granted.

Navy Office,
29 January 1805.

I am, Hon. Sirs,

For B. & E. Adams,

Your most obedient Servant,

B. Adams.

MR. GRAHAM, Navy Office, 30th January 1805.

We have received your tender of the 27th instant, for building a Seventy-four Gun Ship for Government, in four years, at £. 36. per ton; and acquaint you we cannot allow you so long a time to build one.

We are, your affectionate Friends,

Copy of a LETTER, dated 31 January 1805, from Mr. Mestaer to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Navy, on the subject of his offer to build a 74 Gun Ship.

HON. SIRS, Rotherhithe, January 31, 1805.

I had the honour of addressing your honourable Board on the 25th instant, requesting permission to build a 74 Gun Ship; and understanding that there is a doubt existing relative to the extent of the slip, I beg leave to assure your honourable Board, that the slip requires to be extended 28 feet in length, and it will then be completely equal to the undertaking, and in point of water the ship will dip into 32 feet in common spring tides.

Should your honours require a further explanation, I am in attendance, and have the honour to be,

Hon. Sirs, your most obedient and humble Servant,

Peter Everitt Mestaer.

Attested,

R. A. Nelson.

Copy of a LETTER dated 1 February 1805, from the Commissioners of the Navy to Mr. Mestaer, declining his offer to build a 74 Gun Ship.

Mr. MESTAER, Navy Office, 1 February 1805.

We have received your letter of the 31st ultimo, and acquaint you we cannot agree with you for a 74 Gun Ship, as your slip, which has been inspected by Sir John Henslow, appears to be not only too short in the greatest extreme, but in its present state, is otherwise insufficient to receive a ship of such magnitude.

We are, your affectionate Friends,

Copy of a LETTER from Messrs. Perry, Wells & Green, dated 2d February 1805, to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Navy, offering to build another 74 Gun Ship for his Majesty.

HON. SIRS, Blackwall, February 2d, 1805.

Understanding that the honourable Board have not yet engaged for the remaining 74 Gun Ship that they proposed to build; and being willing to make at the present moment every exertion that the Blackwall premises are capable of making, we offer to build this ship on the same terms and at the same time as the others have been engaged.

We are, Hon. Sirs, your humble Servants,

Perrys, Wells & Green.

Attested,
R. A. Nelson.

Copy of a LETTER dated 2d February 1805, from Mr. Mestaer to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Navy, on the subject of his offer to build a 74 Gun Ship.

HON. SIRS, Rotherhithe, 2d February 1805.

I had the honour of receiving your letter of yesterday, stating your objections to my building of a seventy-four Gun Ship, in consequence of the slip being too short and otherwise insufficient; I beg leave to assure your honourable Board, that if you will condescend to allow me to build the ship, I will put the slip into a proper state, by lengthening and every way securing it to make it sufficiently adequate to building the ship. Your honourable Board may rely I would on no account urge the proposal, unless I was fully confident of its being carried most completely into effect, and without the least risk on the part of Government; as the responsibility and my own credit together, would induce me to take every necessary precaution for fulfilling my engagement with your honourable Board.

I have the honour to be, Hon. Sirs,
Your most obedient humble Servant,

Peter Everitt Mestaer.

Attested,
R. A. Nelson.

To the honourable Commissioners of His Majesty's Navy.

Copy of a LETTER dated 3 February 1805, from Mr. Graham to the Commissioners of His Majesty's Navy, on the subject of his offer to build a 74 Gun Ship.

HON. SIRS, Harwich, 3d February 1805.

I am honoured with your favour of the 30th ultimo, in answer to my tender for building a 74 Gun Ship, mentioning you cannot allow me so long time as 48 months.

Permit me, honourable Sirs, to offer a few words in explanation, and as reasons for my requesting being indulged with the small addition of six months more time than is allowed to the builders in the River Thames; they have a large proportion of their timbers, and all other materials delivered to them by land carriage and barges, which do not depend on such contingencies as I am exposed to; all materials whatever, must be brought to this yard by sea, of course dependent on winds and weather, which often occasion several weeks weeks delay, the effect of which, in the course of 24 years, I have fully experieneed and severely paid for.

Although ships cannot be completed at this place so quick as in the Thames, from local difficulties, which I have found it impossible to surmount, yet I have the satisfaction to know the ships of war I have had the honour to build, are among the best and most durable in the Navy; the comparatively small repairs of the Castor and the Excellent, and the character Sir Edward Pellew and other respectable officers, have given of the Conqueror, bear ample testimony.

I therefore hope, on further consideration, the honourable Board will not only admit my request to be allowed, 48 months to build a 74 Gun Ship, at this yard, reasonable, but also that the heavy losses I have sustained by serving the State, is entitled to some consideration; and most respectfully awaiting your pleasure.

I have the honour to remain,

Attested, Your most obedient and very humble Servant,

R. A. Nelson. J. Graham.

CAPTAIN MANBY'S

Survey of the Coasts of the United Kingdom.

No. 1.

REPORT (A.)

Captain MANBY to the Right Honourable Lord SIDMOUTH.

MY LORD, Boston, Lincolnshire, 8th September 1812.

FOR the honour of addressing your Lordship, I consider it a duty to state, that in commencing on the service, and prefacing the General Report herewith annexed, on the Survey of the coasts of the United Kingdom, for the purpose of carrying into effect and establishing my system for saving shipwrecked persons, that I have lost no time in obeying your Lordship's commands, and that of the Legislature, in making the Survey with minute and diligent circumspection; instructing the inhabitants on the most dangerous part of the coast, in the necessary measures to be adopted in the event of shipwreck, as the season is fast approaching when their exertions in the cause of humanity may be hourly called forth; which urges me to hope that the stores, so essential, will speedily be sent to Yarmouth, for the purpose of being conveyed to the respective Officers along the coast, commanding Signal Stations, all of whom have received every necessary instruction from me.

I have however a painful task to perform, in stating to your Lordship, that I find my health greatly destroyed by fatigues endured during the three last winters, by passing many nights on the shore, aiding vessels in distress; which, added to intense application, deep research, and repeated experiments, so indefatigably bestowed in my various productions to perfect a subject of so much importance to my country and humanity, that I fear I may not make that rapid progress along the coast your Lordship may expect, and that I do so ardently wish. My anxiety to promulgate the service with every promptness, induced me to set off from Yarmouth, contrary to the advice of my physicians and friends; and I regret to say, the zeal with which it has been pursued has brought on a train of complaints and debility, that I despair, without some speedy alteration, a close of my existence will be the result.

The Survey, as your Lordship will observe, commences at the South extremity of Norfolk; and in the pursuit it is a matter of infinite gratification to me, to find the great approbation that has attended my labours, and the marked conviction of success, confidence and utility, that has followed, from those features of simplicity that characterize the service.

Independent of my instructing every Officer of Signal Stations by practical proofs (having a mortar and stores with me) I leave with him, as an appendage to his station, my Essay on the Preservation of Shipwrecked Persons, embellished with explanatory plates of every part of the service; impressing on his mind, that, by due attention to them and to the directions given, it never can fail. In every parish on the confines of the ocean through which I pass, I leave descriptive sheets of the service, with a set addressed to the Clergyman, with the subjoined Circular Letter. To every Lord Lieutenant of a maritime county several are forwarded, requesting they may be disposed of in such ways as will tend best to promote this work of charity. I cannot however conclude, without stating to your Lordship, and humbly calling to your attention, the general opinion and assurance that appears from every person with whom I have conversed on the subject, of the infinite benefits that would result from a Head-Money granted to the active people of the shore, for each life saved in such cases of difficulty and hazard, when in the effort their own lives are exposed to great danger; it would likewise be the means of reimbursing them for damage done to their boats, and defraying the expenses attending getting the mortar, stores, &c. down. In making this appeal, I cannot avoid submitting an extract from the Sixth Number of the British Review on the subject. "And if in addition to this precaution, the activity of the fishermen and villagers on the coast was stimulated by a bounty, in the way of Head-Money, for the life of each mariner saved out of a wreck by this process, at least in every case of difficulty and hazard, when the people concerned risk their own lives in the attempt, the provision would be a wise one, and worthy of the justice and humanity of a British Board of Admiralty." I beg further to have the honour of observing, that it has been the subject of a Memorial from me to the late First Lord of the Admiralty, and been repeatedly urged from a conviction of the great good that would result from it.

It will, I hope, be pardonable in me, stating to your Lordship every suggestion that appears calculated to benefit the cause of humanity, and to carry the country's views into the fullest extent. This has induced and will ever stimulate me to seek with unwearied attention, as far as my health will permit, to deserve my country's praise, and your Lordship's approbation.

With the most profound respect,
I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed) GEO. W. MANBY.

(CIRCULAR LETTER.)

"SIR,

"IN obedience to the commands of His Majesty's Government, for establishing along the Coasts of the United Kingdom, my Plan for rescuing the Lives of Shipwrecked Persons, I conceive the best means of promoting this humane object to be, in submitting a Copy of my "Directions for using the Apparatus" to the Clergyman of every parish resident on the coast.

Under this impression, Sir, I beg to offer the accompanying descriptive sheet for your attention; being convinced there is not a Clergyman resident on the confines of the ocean, whose philanthropy will not adopt so charitable an institution; nor any set of men, who would not, in so virtuous a cause, distinguish themselves by their zeal and energy in promoting an event so deeply interesting to those feelings of humanity which have ever been the pride of Englishmen.

I trust, Sir, these instructions will be carried into effect; and those of your parish who cannot contribute in a pecuniary manner to this charitable work, will yet immortalize themselves by their personal exertions.

I have the honour to be, &c.

To the Reverend ——— (Signed) GEORGE WM. MANBY."

YARMOUTH.—To the uncommon flatness of this shore, producing such high and lengthened surfs, must be attributed the number of lives that annually perished here, previous to the method now brought into use for saving shipwrecked persons; and although the application of projecting a rope, has successively saved the crews of eight merchant vessels, at this spot it will be necessary to guard against and provide for any casualties that may occur from those of large draught of water, sharp-built or vessels of war, being driven on shore. I consider it proper, in addition to a 5½ piece of ordnance, to have a 42 pounder howitzer and a 6-pound mortar as a portable piece for prompt and incidental purposes, and for using from a boat, where a vessel has grounded on the bar, when running for the harbour, with such stores and ammunition as will be pointed out to the Officer commanding the depôt at Yarmouth.

CAISTER.—From the nature of this shore, many circumstances of distress have occurred here; and as vessels are generally driven within 60 or 70 yards of the shore, a 6-pound mortar with stores, and a coil of 1½ inch rope to haul a boat off by, will effectually remedy future calamities.

WINTERTON.—The outer bank which runs parallel with the town, has always been found to present great dangers to vessels when stranded here, particularly when of large draught of water, and generally fatal to the unfortunate crews. On minute investigation, I find there are two banks, recently formed more to the northward of the town, produced from the remains of wrecks, having diverted the course of the current, they are from 250 to 300 yards from the shore at high water, and extend from N.E. to E. by N. of the light-house. In the event of vessels not being able to weather the Ness, new and increased dangers will from this cause be created; but I am persuaded the mortar already planted here, is ample security to rescue the lives of such unfortunate persons as may be on board them. At the distance of two miles, parallel with the Winterton shore, lays the Cockle Sand, recorded for its manifold fatal circumstances of shipwreck, and total destruction to the generality of their crews. In hard easterly gales the violence of the surf prevents boats being launched from the shore, to render them assistance, which can only be effected by having two pair of anchors laid out by the rule prescribed by me, one pair half a mile to the northward of the town, and one pair at the same distance to the southward; this will insure the certainty of boats hauling through the surf to their relief.

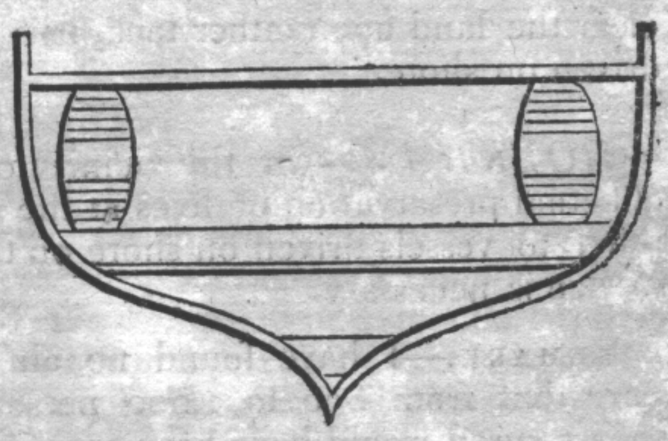
HASBOROUGH.—The outer bank at this place shifts, and appears to be regulated by the tides as the currents are increased by winds or other causes; at which time the bank is removed at so great a distance from the land, as to render it doubtful whether the 5½ inch mortar already placed there, would project a rope to a vessel driven on it. I therefore suggest the propriety of a 42 pounder howitzer likewise to be placed here, as no place offers more fatal testimonies, from fleets having been caught in the Would by a gale of wind flying to the N.E. As the most prompt and certain method of saving a crew, is by hauling a boat, by the rope projected over the vessel; and, in order to obviate a danger that occurred last winter, and was nearly fatal to a boat's crew at this place (who went to save the hands of a vessel) from their boat being stove, I submitted to the active people this question, Which would be the most desirable, to have a regular Life Boat, or whether simply fitting up your own boats with empty casks, in the manner here described? The opinion, I rejoice to say, was instantaneous and unanimous, that boats thus fitted up, would be superior to all the Life Boats ever invented, and the benefit for saving lives, and going off to save property, would be infinite. It may here be necessary to remark, that I have made several experiments on fitting up boats; but the manner here represented by section, from its simplicity, readiness of fitting up, less obstruction to the rowers, and calculated for boats of every description, and consequently those in which they have confidence, and many other important considerations, has a very decided preference to all others, and has received the highest approbation of every person to whom it has been exhibited; thus I hope to establish a system of universal Life Boats.



TRIMINGHAM.—The shooting down of immense masses of cliff has greatly assisted in creating outer sands, an evil which I find increasing, which makes it necessary to have a 5½ inch brass mortar with a 6-pounder mortar, to be promptly forwarded to Mundsley, to prevent a recurrence of the fatal accidents that have occurred from the mortar at Harborough not arriving in time, and may be used from the Life Boat, when it cannot pull up to a vessel grounded on a sand, from the broken and white water that surrounds it.

CROMER.—In observing with uncommon regret, the ravages made along the coast, but particularly at this place, by the shooting down of the cliffs, occasioned by the springs not being diverted, which certainly is practicable, and may be remedied by persons who have made a professional study of it, as the late Mr. Elkington; it is, I must beg to submit a subject worthy of attention, the loss of so much national territory, independent of the face of a high land being so much changed, and the light-house standing in such awful jeopardy. An acre and a half directly in its front, shot down last winter, and I have no doubt but will speedily increase to the light-house:—For facilitating the means of giving assistance, and for using from the Life Boat at this place, a 6-pounder mortar will be necessary.

BESTON

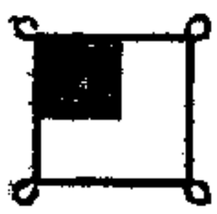
BESTON and KELLING.—These stations being at so great a distance from the shore, the Signal Officers will therefore place the ordnance and stores sent to them, the former at Sherringham, the latter at Waybourne, to prevent the recurrence of those dreadful circumstances of shipwreck, that have so repeatedly happened; the shores are steep, and the vessels consequently coming close, a 6-pounder mortar will be sufficient.

BLAKENEY.—The dangers of this place, and the innumerable circumstances stated to me of distress, proceed in a great measure from vessels being caught by a hard gale at N. or N.E. Their only hope of safety is, running for the harbour, which would be perfectly safe at the top of high water, had they lights to steer for it: at the springs there is plenty of water, but it is at those periods of the day which in winter is generally dark, that is six o'clock. In order to remedy this evil, and recurrence of future fatal accidents, I suggest that Two large Ship Lanthorns should be placed in the charge of the Harbour-master, to be regulated by his observation of the shiftings of the bar, for the guidance of ships in distress; two 6-pounder mortars should likewise be placed, one to give assistance on the eastern point of land, where the crews of so many vessels have perished, and the other for boats that may go to the assistance of vessels that may be driven on the bar. It may be necessary to add the following information given; viz. "the bar of Blakeney, although buoyed out tolerably regular, is a very dangerous one for strangers to attempt, as it often shifts. Sometimes there are six or seven feet over it at low water, and at other times not more than one or two; however, it may be said, that in a heavy gale of wind from the Eastward, and you cannot clear the land upon either tack, it is much better to take it than to run the risk of being driven on shore."

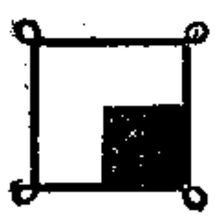
HOLKHAM.—In the vicinity of this station is the river running to Wells. For the effectual preservation of lives at the entrance of that harbour, and for giving the promptest relief to vessels driven on shore on the coast near this place, a 6-pounder mortar for each service is necessary.

REMARK.—I have found no alteration of currents in the survey of this county; but learn that from 800 to 1,000 persons have been seen to perish on the coast, that I have been assured would have been saved by the means now brought into use.

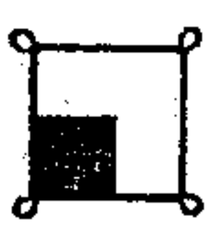
There is one method of announcing to the people of the coast from each Signal Station, in the event of cases of distress, which I beg leave to recommend:—I therefore suggest, that each Station should be furnished with the following FLAG, which, by changing, its position will indicate Four distinct and necessary pieces of Information:



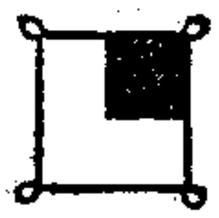
There is a Ship in Distress in the Offing.



The Ship in Distress is coming to the Shore, to the right of this Station.



The Ship in Distress is coming to the Shore, to the left of this Station.



Prepare to give immediate Assistance.

N. B. The advantages of such a FLAG would be, that in thick and tempestuous weather it is more distinctly seen than any other.

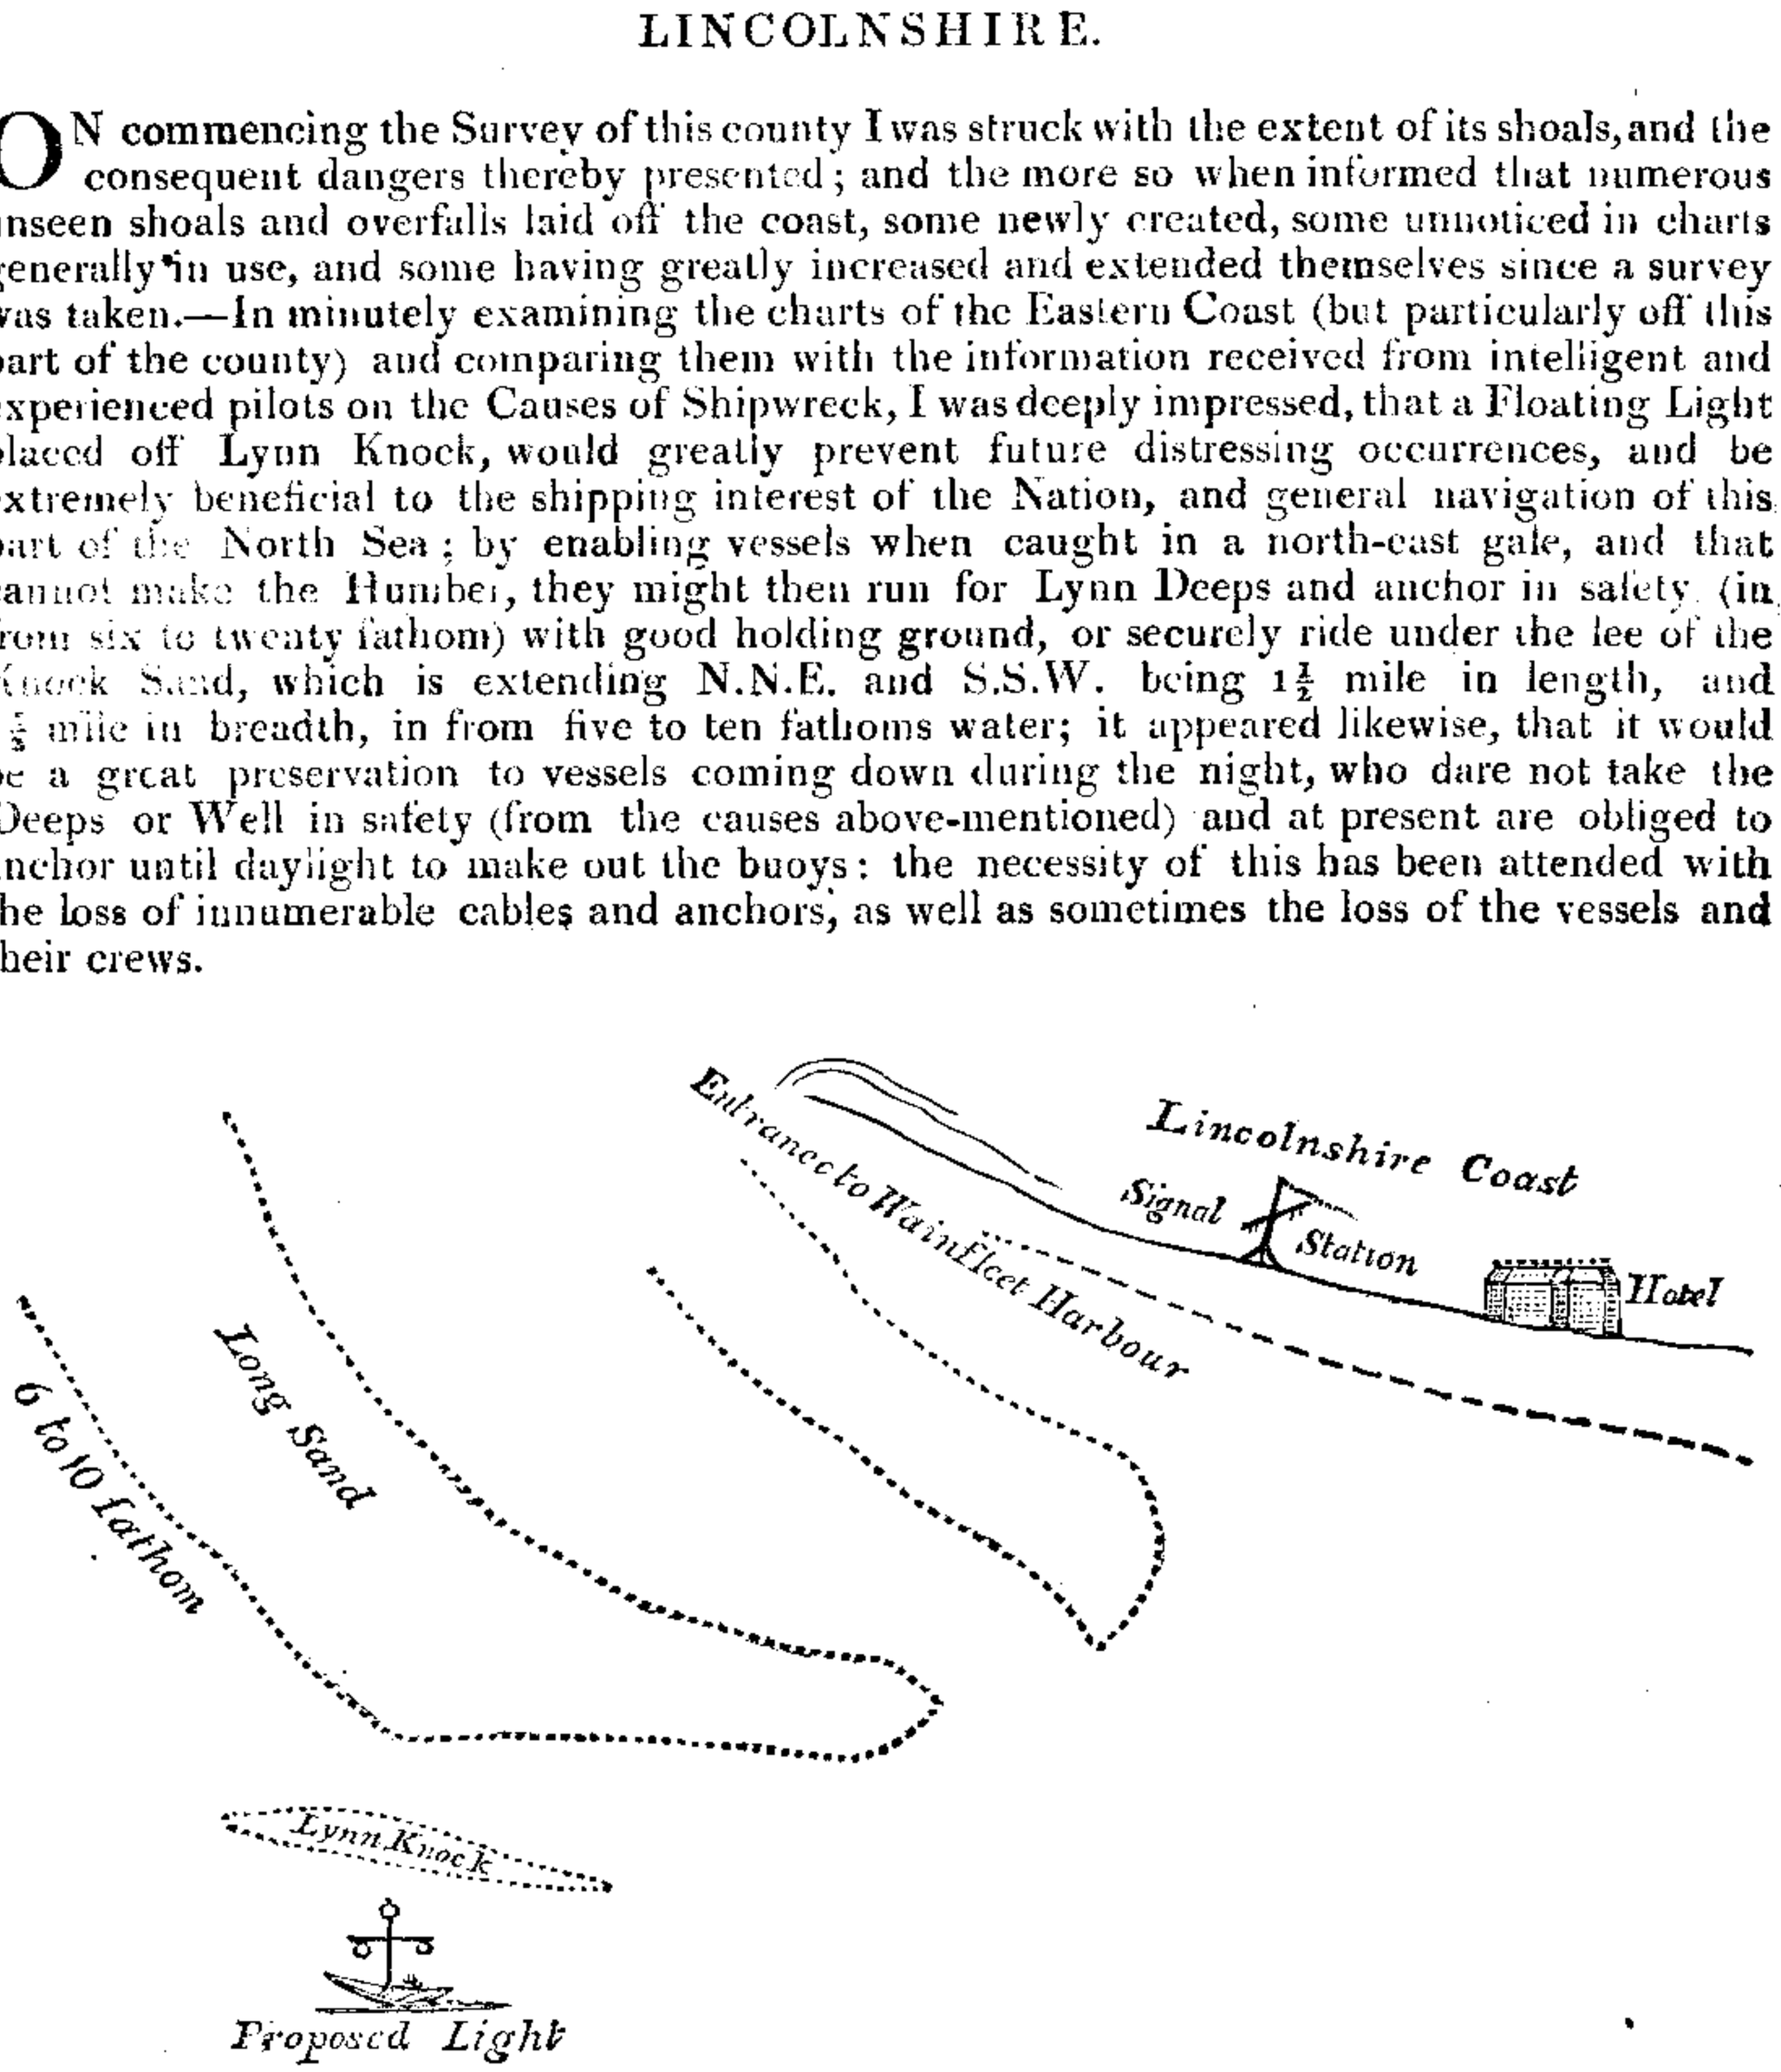
REPORT (B.)

Report continued, from 5th September to 5th October, 1812.

LINCOLNSHIRE.

ON commencing the Survey of this county I was struck with the extent of its shoals, and the consequent dangers thereby presented; and the more so when informed that numerous unseen shoals and overfalls laid off the coast, some newly created, some unnoticed in charts generally in use, and some having greatly increased and extended themselves since a survey was taken.—In minutely examining the charts of the Eastern Coast (but particularly off this part of the county) and comparing them with the information received from intelligent and experienced pilots on the Causes of Shipwreck, I was deeply impressed, that a Floating Light placed off Lynn Knock, would greatly prevent future distressing occurrences, and be extremely beneficial to the shipping interest of the Nation, and general navigation of this part of the North Sea; by enabling vessels when caught in a north-east gale, and that cannot make the Humber, they might then run for Lynn Deeps and anchor in safety (in from six to twenty fathom) with good holding ground, or securely ride under the lee of the Knock Sand, which is extending N.N.E. and S.S.W. being 1½ mile in length, and 1⅓ mile in breadth, in from five to ten fathoms water; it appeared likewise, that it would be a great preservation to vessels coming down during the night, who dare not take the Deeps or Well in safety (from the causes above-mentioned) and at present are obliged to anchor until daylight to make out the buoys: the necessity of this has been attended with the loss of innumerable cables and anchors, as well as sometimes the loss of the vessels and their crews.



In order to prevent this Light being mistaken for the Dungeon, Hasbro', or any other light, when vessels are crossing the sea, I should recommend it being displayed in the form of a Triangle, with Three large Lanthorns, the glass of each to be, one of clear glass, another of stained blue, and another of red.

Finding my observations justified by the opinion of the pilots, and other persons conversant with the navigation of this part of the coast, I addressed the following letter to the Mayor

(Copy.)

" Sir, Boston, Peacock Inn, 8th Sept. 1812.

In obeying the commands of Government to establish my system for saving shipwrecked persons on the coast of the United Kingdom, I feel it a duty to submit to their consideration every suggestion that promises benefit to the maritime interest of the Nation, by preventing the recurrence of future calamities, as well as the preservation of property. In this humble endeavour it has appeared to me, that great benefit would result to the general navigation coming northward, if a Floating Light was placed off Lynn Knock. As I am anxious to submit such a suggestion to superior judgment, you will therefore, Sir, confer a favour by taking the opinion of the Commissioners of your port, and others conversant with the general navigation, on the subject, whether my suggestion is correct for me to report on, and to recommend the same.

I have the honour to be, &c. &c.

To the Right Worshipful
The Mayor of Boston, Lincolnshire.

Geo. W. Manby."

" Cross Chamber, Boston, 10th Sept. 1812.

" At a Meeting of Merchants and Ship-owners of the Port of Boston, to consider a Proposition made by Geo. W. Manby, Esq. as to the utility of placing a Floating Light near to the bottom of Boston Deeps;

The Mayor in the Chair;

Resolved, That the entrance to the Great Bay between the Coast of Lincolnshire and Norfolk, is rendered extremely perilous by many Shoals and Sand Banks.

That in North Easterly gales of wind, it has frequently happened that vessels bound to the ports of Lynn, Boston, and Wisbeach, or such as have been seeking shelter in the good roadsteads of Boston or Lynn Deeps, have been stranded upon the said shoals and sand banks, and their crews sometimes lost.

That it is the opinion of this Meeting, were a Floating Light to be placed near the Lynn Knock, it would very much diminish the dangers of this navigation, by rendering the roadsteads of Lynn Deeps a secure retreat from North Easterly gales in dark nights, for all vessels navigating the North Sea, and especially for all vessels embayed between the Spurn and Cromer, and that thereby many ships, cargoes, and lives would be saved.

Signed, on behalf of the Meeting,

W. Bousfield, Mayor."

SKEGNESS.—In my examination of this part of the coast, and it having been stated to me, that it had been fatal to some foreign vessels, and was still dangerous to ships, by their having mistaken the lights at the windows of the bathing houses and hotel, for the lights placed as a guide to navigation; in consequence, the following letter to the officiating Minister of the parish, on the subject, was addressed by me:

" Sir, Skegness, 12 Sept. 1812.

In availing myself of Lieut. Burne, commanding the Signal Station at this place, delivering to you a descriptive sheet and other papers, soliciting your benevolent attention to the subject therein contained, I consider it not only right but a bounden duty to state to you, as officiating Clergyman of the parish of Skegness, a circumstance that has been pointed out to me, and offered to be attested upon oath by respectable persons at Boston. It is, that vessels have actually been led into the fate of shipwreck by the light from the numerous windows at the bathing houses and hotel at this place, they being mistaken for lights regularly placed for the purposes of navigation and preservation of seamen's lives. To prevent future calamities, and provide a remedy for similar fatal effects, I should consider myself extremely reprehensible, did I not suggest that blinds, or shutters to the windows, and closed at night, would obviate such future occurrences; and permit me to observe, that I feel fully persuaded, your friendly interposition, by representing this statement to the owners or occupiers of the houses spoke of, will induce them to carry into effect a circumstance of so much importance to the lives of our fellow-creatures.

I have the honour to be, &c.

Rev. Mr. Green, Officiating Clergyman of the Parish of Skegness, Lincolnshire.

Geo. W. Manby."

Judging the Harbour and River of Wainfleet, to be too trifling to afford protection to vessels, and learning it was never attempted in a gale of wind, I have considered it needless to advise sending a mortar here, or to Skegness; as the adoption of a Floating Light on Lynn Knock, is ample security for the preservation of lives and property to this part of the coast.

SUTTON.—In the vicinity of this place, I was informed, from the extreme flatness of the shore, that it rarely occurred, when vessels were driven on it, that it was attended with the loss of lives; for if the vessel had strength to bear the first shock of striking, the tide retiring so very fast would soon leave her dry, and the people enabled to walk from on board; but the property or cargoes were often greatly injured. This however they assured, according to suggestion, that if a Floating Light was placed off Lynn Knock, ships, when meeting with contrary winds, might in the night put into the Deeps, which now cannot be approached with safety, and are consequently obliged to keep the sea. Near this place, off Thelthorpe, is a new shoal or knowl, on which several vessels had grounded, having only six feet water on it at low spring tides. It is stretching to the S. E. and is about a quarter of a mile broad; a sail's breadth open to the eastward of Half Course or Trusthorpe Church will clear it. Having received farther particulars respecting the shoals of this place, I shall extract observations communicated to me by the very intelligent Collector of the Customs at Grimsby. "There are two shoals, called Theddlethorpe Knowls: they run parallel with "each other; the outward one lying at the distance from the shore about seven miles, and "not laid down in any chart that I have seen; the inward one lying about four miles "from the shore, and about a quarter of a mile in length: the inward knowl has little "more than one fathom water at low water." As the people at this place are active and ready with their boats to give assistance, a 6-pounder mortar should be sent for such services. The system of filling up boats by casks was here most highly approved.

SALTFLEET.—Here is a very dangerous sand, on which vessels often get, called The Rose; it lies about a mile to the northward of this place; a deep channel or swatchway runs between it and the main, that enables boats to go off, but the difficulties of approaching them requires other aid; it will therefore be necessary to send a 6-pounder mortar and a 42-pounder, for the relief of vessels when run upon the South end of the Hale: this latter sand has most considerably extended itself to the Southward, beyond the representation of any chart I have seen, and consequently increasing its dangers.

CLEYNESS.—As there are not any boats near this place, and if one had been here during a gale of wind last winter, three persons would have been saved. I recommend a man-of-war's jolly-boat to be fitted up with casks, according to the methods I have suggested, and to be sent here with a 6-pounder mortar to apply from the same. I do not deem it necessary to recommend any stores being sent to the remaining part of the Lincolnshire coast, from its more insular situation.

YORKSHIRE.—Along the borders of that admirable bay of the Humber, I found nothing to notice until I reached the Spurn, where a Life Boat is placed by the gentlemen of the county, for the purpose of going out by Hawke Roads to the assistance of vessels that may be driven on the Binx or New Sand, which is outward of Spurn Point. I propose that a 6-pounder mortar should be sent for the use of that boat, to aid and secure the purposes of her intention. On finding, as I proceeded along, that the coast was totally uninhabited by fishermen and seafaring people, and no boats whatever kept, and that vessels generally wrecked here were upon the above-named sands, which are at a distance from the land; and in some instances the crews had been saved by pilot vessels sent out of the port of Hull by the Trinity House at that place, to meet vessels, and navigate them into the Humber, &c. I was induced to address a letter to the Elder Brethren of that Institution, accompanied with a book of instructions and sheets of description, for the various methods of saving shipwrecked persons. In that appeal I pointed out the infinite advantage that would be derived, by the pilot vessels under their controul carrying a small mortar and apparatus, to effect communication with vessels when driven on shoals at a distance from the land, or when in distress at sea, when it is both difficult and dangerous to approach them. I likewise suggested the advantages of the boat of each vessel, when on such duty, to be fitted up in the manner proposed by me in the directions, to render them efficient Life Boats; stating, that if this was carried into effect, the greatest possible benefit and security would be derived to a considerable range of this part of the coast, superior to any other system of protection that could be recommended. The Trinity House has signified their approbation and thanks to me for my suggestions, and "expressing their readiness to promote it as far as they can recommend and assist."

BRIDLINGTON.—Nothing could possibly be so conveniently situated for vessels coasting from the Northward, or when embayed between Flamborough Head and the Spurn point, as the harbour of Bridlington for them to take refuge in, and lie sheltered from North Easterly and South Easterly gales. In its present state, I regret to observe, it will not afford such protection; this I feel a duty to point out and declare, that on this very perilous coast nothing would so much conduce to the preservation of lives and property, as by that improvement, to render this harbour an asylum for distressed vessels; a work which most assuredly is practicable, to make it both perfectly secure and commodious.

To the Northern and Eastern trade the most incalculable benefits would be derived, as vessels are now frequently compelled to anchor in this bay (for the shelter of the Head and Smithwick Sand) in the hope of the weather moderating; but on the gale continuing, they are obliged to relinquish their situation by cutting, (which is generally attended with the loss of anchors) and not daring to attempt the harbour from the difficulty of its entrance, &c. consequently endeavour to proceed to sea, where being on a lee shore, they are often wrecked, with the total loss of their crews.

FLAMBOROUGH.—To enumerate the account of vessels lost here, with the perishing of all the crews, previous to the erection of the light-house on the Head, exceeds all possible conception; since that period the number are greatly decreased. I was however furnished with still more melancholy details, proceeding from vessels being driven in by storm, or drawn imperceptibly by the influence of suction, which is extreme in this bay, rendering it almost impossible to work out; and from the lights being obscured by fogs and snow storms. On which occasions it was stated to me, as not to be discernible at 100 yards; they are consequently, by the indraft of the bay, set upon the rocks, which has proved so fatal. To prevent similar distresses, it will be necessary to apprize the unwary navigator of his danger, by a Bell or Gun. In consequence of making known this suggestion, it was pointed out to me, that a plan or working model for a bell to act by water had been made for such purpose. I have been to examine it, which was done with minute observation. It is the invention of Mr. Milne, the Collector of the Customs at Bridlington; and I can only observe, that a more ingenious contrivance, or one better calculated to answer this very important purpose, cannot be produced, and does the highest credit to his mechanical genius.

REPORT (C.)

Report continued, from 5 October to 5 November 1812.

FLAMBOROUGH HEAD TO SUNDERLAND.

TO give security to the bay of Flamborough Head, it will be necessary to send a six-pounder mortar for the use of the Bridlington Life Boat, and a brass royal mortar for the preservation of the crews of vessels when stranded on the beach; similar pieces of ordnance should be sent to the Signal Station at Flamborough; likewise a rope-ladder. I was much gratified to find there were near the Head several fishermen, who were pointed out to me, for their activity in cases of distress; they being instructed, and printed directions left with them, will greatly tend to save the lives of future shipwrecked persons, at a spot where such numbers are recorded to have perished. From the point of this awful, but truly grand bay, the cliffs rise in every diversity of form, and are composed of rugged mouldering white stone; from their looseness much care is required in giving assistance to the shipwrecked, otherwise, in the attempt to save, the loose stones might fall and destroy the object of our intended preservation; but on minute observation, I was happy to discover several favourable spots presented themselves, as projecting ledges of firm rock, and little sandy bays.

The high Promontory at the Southern point of Filey Bay, is Speaton Cliff, stupendous and terrific beyond all possible conception, exciting every excessive horror that can affect the mind; it rises perpendicular upwards of 400 feet, and has deep water at its foot; at this fatal place an infinite number have perished, and when here driven, their fate has hitherto been considered inevitable, as the efforts of the inhabitants of the surrounding country have been in vain to rescue. When vessels are close under the cliff, ropes have been repeatedly lowered to their assistance, but from the severity of the weather at such times, and the extreme height of the rock, it has been found impossible for them to ascend by a common rope. I here exhibited and submitted my rope-ladder that is capable of being projected from a piece of ordnance, requiring of the people their opinion, if such would be useful for that place, and similar situations? It gives me the most infinite gratification to say, it was not only approved, but I was assured it would have saved hundreds at that spot, for the means it affords of supporting both hands and feet, by the loops in which they could occasionally rest when much exhausted or benumbed. From the Promontory just mentioned, a bay of sand (on the beach of which several vessels have been driven) sweeps round to an extraordinary ridge of flat rocks, called Filey Bridge, protruding themselves upwards of a quarter of a mile into the sea, and is covered at high water; this has been the cause of such numerous losses of lives and vessels: To prevent a recurrence, it will be necessary to send a royal mortar and a 6-pounder, for the advantage of speedy assistance in certain cases. The same number of, and description of ordnance, should be sent to Scarborough; the former for the preservation of the crews of vessels that strike on the back of the pier, in attempting to run for the harbour; for when this occurs, they are consequently driven on the beach, where lives have been lost; and for the use of the Life Boat the latter is recommended. During my experiments at this place, and instructing the beach men in the various methods of saving shipwrecked persons, in the presence of many distinguished, experienced, and scientific persons, I tried a method of conveying directions to persons on board of stranded vessels, in the following way; by a TRIANGULAR FLAG of three distinguishable colours, which, by changing its position on the staff, would produce Six distinct signals. Such a flag I proposed should accompany each mortar intended for the shore: This exhibited, would at once indicate to the people on board a distressed vessel, that assistance was at hand; this would animate the crew, and encourage them to exert themselves for their own preservation and that of the ship and cargo. On the person (in whose charge the flag is left) seeing that a vessel is in great distress and must inevitably come for the shore, he will wave the flag (to the right or left) to direct the people on board which way to steer the vessel for some favourable part of the shore, and by fixing the flag in the ground, will point out the best and safest spot for the preservation of the crew, and least injury to the ship and cargo: This experiment was accompanied by a monograph, and I was much gratified by the approbation it received. The man from whom this method of telegraphing was to be communicated, placed himself directly in front of the flag, in the following attitudes (to indicate)

ON leaving Scarborough, not a mile did I travel on this very destructive coast, but some melancholy tale of distress was related to me. At Robin Hood's Bay, one that excited uncommon interest was here detailed, that occurred a few years since: It was a vessel stranded in this bay, and all hands perishing, amounting to sixteen; the vessel was navigated by a person resident near this spot, and the crew consisted of inhabitants of the village close in its vicinity; they perished within 100 yards of the shore, in the presence of parents, friends and relatives: and I was assured, every soul would have been saved, if the method had been known of projecting a rope. To prevent future calamities, a $5\frac{1}{2}$ inch mortar will be necessary

WHITBY presents every feature of horror to a navigator's mind, from the broken water indicating sunken rocks, rugged cliffs, and extreme flat shores. To prevent a recurrence of distresses, arising from vessels striking on the rocks in front of its harbour, a 6-pounder mortar will be required to be applied from a boat, and from which its portability can be used with great success. When a vessel is driven under Sortick Nab and Cliff, a rope-ladder will likewise be of infinite use here, for lowering to persons driven under the Nab Cliff.

To give protection to Sandend Bay and Shore, a $5\frac{1}{2}$ inch mortar will be requisite; and similar pieces for Runswick and Staith's Bays. For the sake of humanity, I had to regret, at Whitby, that the Life Boat was in total disuse, from a general prejudice against it, although certainly this place offers advantages peculiar to a boat of this description, by having a harbour to go from: but they assured me its size and weight prevented a possibility of her being forced against a violent wind, and over a high raging sea: To impel such a boat by the power of oars from a flat shore, in such weather as described, when the surfs are broken, or white water, I admitted to be impossible; but urged the advantage here of going out with the ebb-tide. Finding the prejudice so rooted, and that nothing would induce them to use it again, I submitted the plan of a Boat, as here represented, which was much approved, constructed by me in the year 1808, for the use of the Public, and sent to the Island of Anholt, for their benefit.

Conceiving that good may arise from a knowledge of its construction and properties, I consider it a duty, for general information, to state it thus in my Report. It was fitted up with boxes of air; but the method by casks is infinitely to be preferred, and particularly when secured to the lower part of the boat; for should the bottom of the boat be stove in, her buoyancy is still preserved, and safety for her crew provided. This Boat above represented, I had the honour of exhibiting before a Committee of Naval Officers (Admiral Lord Gardiner, President) appointed by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, whose Report justified the sanguine hope I had formed of producing a small portable boat, combining in its construction every principle for security and service, and particularly adapted for the employ, to bring in safety to the shore, the crew of a stranded vessel, after communication has been effected by a rope; and I flatter myself this plan will, at some future period, have a distinguished rank in the various constructions produced for the preservation of shipwrecked seamen.

REDCAR and CORTHAM are so notorious for the numerous cases of destruction, that it was truly distressing to hear their recital. At the former place four parallel, most dangerous shelves of rocks, called Salt Scars, (seen only at low-water) protrude themselves a great distance into the sea; for giving assistance to vessels driven on them, it will be requisite to send a $5\frac{1}{2}$ inch mortar, and a 6-pounder. To the latter place, for relief to vessels when stranded on the Bran Sand or South Gare, a $5\frac{1}{2}$ inch mortar will be necessary.

There being no Signal Station from Flamborough Head to Hartlepool, a distance upwards of eighty miles, I found it necessary to provide for, and point out, in whose care the mortars, &c. recommended should be placed. For Filey Bay, the Reverend Mr. Wrangham, of Hunmanby; Scarborough, the Committee of the Life Boat; Robin Hood's Bay, Mr. Cook; Whitby, the Collector of the Customs; Sandend Bay, Runswick Bay and Saith's Bay, the Earl of Mulgrave, for his Lordship to appoint such persons he might think proper to direct the same; Redcar, for the similar disposal of Lord Dundas; and at Cortham, H. Vansittart, Esquire. These arrangements I have made, being fully persuaded that nothing can contribute so much to promote the views of the Establishment, as rank, opulence, and respectability, interesting themselves in the cause of humanity.

DURHAM.

HARTLEPOOL is surrounded by rocks close to its frightful shore, which extend some distance to the northward; there is likewise a Reef that stretches itself far into the sea, called Long Scar. To the South, there are very favourable bays of sand on each side of this place, to insure the safety of Lives by the aid of a $5\frac{1}{2}$ inch mortar, when vessels are driven on them. As I make a point, at every place where a Life Boat is kept, of inspecting it, to suggest whatever I conceive may conduce to its utility, I was much gratified at the admirable appointment and arrangement made for it here. A Committee of experienced persons judge the the merits of any extraordinary case, and exertion of the people appointed to it, and reward accordingly. A Fund for this purpose is principally supported by a SERMON, annually preached at the parish church; on this occasion every one attends, and contributes as far as they have ability, to carry into effect this benevolent design. How glorious would it be for the cause of humanity, if every Clergyman in a parish on the coast would imitate such a plan of charity and patriotism:—For, thus sanctioned and patronized, it would excite the opulent to extend their bounty, and induce every inhabitant to contribute; whereby a blessing would be diffused, by a parochial Institution for providing the means of snatching the shipwrecked mariner from a premature death.—A whole set of apparatus will not exceed twenty pounds.

The salutary effects of such an exercise of benevolence would soon be experienced, and the universal system of preservation promptly established; which would erect a monument of unparalleled national beneficence. There is not a Clergyman, I am convinced, will disregard this appeal, or be offended at the suggestion, when it arises from the zealous feelings of an individual who loves his country, and is so deeply interested in the welfare of mankind.

EASINGTON has both rocks and sandy bays, and will require a 5 ½ inch mortar for the preservation of the crews stranded on each side of the Signal Station.

SUNDERLAND has many dangerous rocks in front, and extending on each side of its pier, running far out, where innumerable vessels have been lost: It will be proper to send to this place, from the various natures and requisite methods of giving assistance, a 42, 24, and 6-pounder. The Life Boats here are particularly worthy of notice, having a superior advantage over every boat I have seen or heard of; four apertures going through the bottom, that when the sea breaks over and fills them, these apertures discharge the water to the regular buoyancy of the boat, in a very short space of time. It is the contrivance of ——— Davison, Esq. of this place, and does very high credit to his ingenuity. A few slight suggestions, by having the air boxes detached from the bottom of the boat, in case of the bottom being stove in by rocks, and a projecting rope round the gunwale for men firmly to hold by, until they can be taken into the boat (should they be obliged to swim from the wreck) it would render these boats perfectly adequate to any service, and give security with precluding all danger.

FOURTH REPORT.

ON leaving Sunderland, the extensive lime-kilns situated on eminences, attracted my notice; and I have since been informed that they have been the occasion of the loss of many vessels, by mistaking them for lights intended for navigation. Surely when the remedy to prevent such future evils can be accomplished, by having a screen placed before them, no owner nor occupier of such works will refuse to have it carried into execution. The same may be said of the fires at coal-pits, which may be prevented by a similar application.

WHITBURN.—At the front of this point of land, a most dangerous reef of low rocks runs far into the sea, called The Steel; a 5 ½ inch mortar must be placed at this Station, which will also be a protection to the dangers of Marzon Rock Bay, &c. A similar piece at South Shields will likewise be necessary to afford assistance from Suter Point, Frenchman's, Graham's, Manhaven Bays, and the Upright Rock, under which vessels have so often been driven and instantly gone to pieces; and it will also serve for the Bay called Hard Sand, (on which such tremendous surfs break) for the aid of vessels stranded on the bar, when running for the harbour, of which there have been such innumerable instances. A 6-pounder mortar for the Life Boat will be required. In examining this boat, I was attended by several of the Committee (under whose directions this boat is vested) together with many persons who have repeatedly been employed, and have been the means of rescuing upwards of 100 lives from wrecks. In the presence of these persons I submitted such suggestions as appeared calculated to benefit the properties, and provide asssistance, or a remedy for the inconveniencies complained of: That is, first, the boat's weight; secondly, having on some occasions been obliged to relinquish the object of their endeavours, from the necessity of returning to bale out the water which had broken over and filled the boat; and in consequence I have had the satisfaction of receiving the following testimonial, signed by thirty-one persons.

South Shields, Nov. 10th, 1812.

"We the undersigned, pilots and seamen, who are used to the Life Boat at this place, and have been off in her and at the saving of crews from wrecks, do consider Captain Manby's method of applying casks or kegs, filled with air, at the bottom of the boat, to be a very great improvement for this and other boats of the like description; as it will greatly take from the weight and consequently make her more lively in the sea, by being much more buoyant. The water discharging itself by pipes, is likewise of great consequence."

To the Committee of the Boat at North Shields, I made the same observations, and signified my intention of sending a 6-pounder mortar for its use.

NORTHUMBERLAND.

TINMOUTH CASTLE.—For the purpose of giving assistance to Shorts and Bay, Sharpness, the intervening dangerous rocks and bays up to Hartley Point Reef, a 5 ½ inch mortar will be required. At this place the encroachments of the sea demanded particular attention, as I found a considerable part of the wall in front of Clifford's Fort, was washed down; much of the contiguous property totally swept away, and others greatly injured. Conceiving it a public duty, I was induced to trace the whole, in the endeavour not only of pointing out the evil consequences, but to discover the cause; and of humbly submitting my opinion what would best tend to check its future progress. Leaving the light-house, I proceeded by the Bay (called The Low Light Bay) to the eastern extremity. A considerable part of the fort wall (as before stated) had been washed down, and of the contiguous property swept away; the extent is great; and the range of buildings called Low Lights, were in a most perilous situation, by the sea nearly making a breach to them. Had that been the case, a clear passage would have been made to the river, sweeping away the range of buildings before-mentioned, the Fort, Light-house, Custom-house, and in short every species of property from the west end of the barrack wall.

On examining the effects of the high tide which occurred on the 22d of October, I found it had washed considerably higher than the wall and pavement at the south front of the barracks, and that the wall had been saved by breakwaters. The hill on which the barracks stand is much saturated by springs, and a considerable portion is loose, and will eventually slip; and consequently will be attended with much public expense, if not prevented by the springs being cut off, or the wall heightened, and the inclined plane of pavement on its top greatly extended for its support.

The East corner of the barrack wall requires particular attention; for if any material accident were to happen to the barrack wall, from a similar gale and tide, I conceive the whole hill and barracks to be in great jeopardy; these observations I made in the presence of Captain Mann, the Barrack Master. The cause of these ravages appears to have been, from rocks and large stones in the bay (being considered impediments) having been incautiously removed, without previously considering the effects that would thereby be produced, by permitting the sea to have an uncontrolled sweep round the bay; which, in a S.E. gale, is greatly accelerated; and dashing very high up the cliff, threatens the destruction of the places enumerated. In the front of the fort is a protruding ridge of shingle, or small stones, (called Muscle Scarp) which is dry at low water; on this were formerly large rock stones, and others, interspersed about the bay, to a higher range, called Black Mittens, stretching to the Easternmost point, and which was formerly much higher: These barriers, provided by nature, have been blasted, and carried away; to this must be ascribed the evil that has been produced, and which is still further threatened.

To submit a remedy, I beg to offer two methods. First, the most simple and prompt way, to prevent further injury or encroachment, would be, by continuing a wall from that of Clifford's Fort to the Westernmost extremity of the barrack wall, with occasional firm and lofty breakwaters. (It would be advisable in making these breakwaters, for them to be angular, falling off to an inclined plane towards the sea.) But, secondly, to render this work efficient (and which would recover the space called Low Light Bay), it can only be by a substantial barrier carried from the point of the harbour under Tinmouth Fort, to Black Mittens Rock, and sweeping to the exterior angle of Clifford's Fort. This would divert the course of the water, and keep the set of the tide to the centre of the channel. This latter observation is particularly worthy the attention of the Shipping interest of South and North Shields, from the advantages that would be derived to the Port of these places, by removing the sand banks, now in the channel (which I witnessed to be a considerable hinderance to navigation). It would likewise render the circumstances of distress much less frequent on the Bar, by accelerating the velocity of the current, and consequently deepening the water thereon.

NEWBIGGIN.— It will be necessary for the Officer at this Station to place in the hands of some responsible person at Blyth a 5 ½ inch mortar, to provide for the great dangers that are in its vicinity; as difficulties might occur in getting one promptly across the two rivers, to the relief of any casualty that might occur to the Southward of that place. A similar mortar will also be required at the Signal Station; for a vessel came upon the rocks, within less than 50 yards of the Station, in March last, and immediately went to pieces, and every soul perished. It will likewise be able to afford assistance to the intermediate places as far as Cresswell.

HASKERLEY POINT.—By having a mortar here, it will not only tend to prevent a recurrence of the distresses from the many dangers of reefs of rocks, about Bondicar, but the long beach of sand to the Southward. It would likewise be of considerable importance for the giving assistance to vessels driven on the rocks about and on Coquet Island, which might be taken over in a boat (the island being to windward) by fishermen, who are at hand, and are stated to be active and zealous. Considering there is not a place of security to shelter vessels from Easterly gales (which are the most dangerous on this coast) between Shields and Holy Island, I was induced to enquire of the most intelligent persons, whether vessels could anchor and ride in security in a storm, under the lee of the island? The reply was, most certainly; but it is scarcely known to any but the navigators of vessels who are constantly coasting it from Leith, Berwick, &c. On this I collected the following

DIRECTIONS FOR SAILING INTO COQUET ISLAND ROAD.

"In coming from the Southward, keep Dunstanborough Castle just open with the East side of the island; this will carry you clear off Bondicar and Haskerley Reefs, which extend about one mile from the shore. Then, to run for the Roads, look for an old ruin, called the Salt Pans (bearing N.W. from the island about three quarters of a mile), which keep open about a ship's length to the Eastward of Warkworth Castle; and in doing which you will have to steer about N.W. Run on with these marks until you perceive an arched opening through the old building on the island, and Bondicar Point just shutting in. You will then be in the Southernmost birth of the anchorage, with three fathoms at low water, and good holding ground, and about midway between the island and the main. The anchorage extends nearly a quarter of a mile more to the north, and the depth of the water increases to four fathoms.

To run in from the North, by keeping Bondicar Point a little open with Haskerley Point, will lead you clear off a reef of rocks, called Pann's Bush, lying E.N.E. from the mouth of Coquet River, half a mile. Run within the island S. W. until Bondicar Point shuts in; you will then lie in the northernmost birth of the anchorage, in four fathoms at low water, spring tides. Any vessel of not more than twelve or thirteen feet draught may here ride out a gale in great safety, with any winds except N.E. or South, with which winds they can go to sea."

The advantages of this information being generally known, for vessels of a certain description to shelter in, promises considerable benefit; for supposing they part their cables, they will drive on an excellent clear beach, in smooth water; consequently the lives of their crews will be insured.

It would be extremely advisable to have a mortar placed at Aylmouth. For the extraordinary dangers of a point of land at Boomer, called The Steel, and for a preventive of the many accidents on the dreadful iron-bound coast, (in its vicinity) where vessels have been lost, a mortar placed at Howick would be extremely desirable; and for this very purpose I shall solicit Earl Grey for his permission; so that it may be lodged at the Sea Houses, and be ready for any future occurrence of distress.

DUNSTANBOROUGH CASTLE.—The coast about this Station, being so much interspersed wish sunken rocks and projecting reefs, requires a mortar to be placed here; and one also at North Sunderland, under the care of Mr. Blackett, agent to the Trinity House, for similar reasons.

BUDLE HILL.—For the convenience of giving prompt assistance to vessels, when attempting to run for the shelter of Holy Island, but cannot succeed, and are stranded in consequence, a 5 ½-inch mortar will be necessary. Also a six-pounder to be lodged with such a person on the island as the Officer may judge desirable.

BAMBURGH CASTLE.—This place exhibits, at one view, more dangers to navigation, and records more distresses, than any place on the coast; particularly before the Corporation of the Trinity House placed a revolving light on the great Fern Island; and a similar one on the Brownsman's Rock, one of the Staple Islands. These situations, so noted for destruction, no doubt pointed out to the philanthropic and patriotic Trustees of Lord Crew's estate (left for "unconfined charitable uses,") the infinite benefit that would result to mankind by the application of part of their funds (among numerous other acts of beneficence) to cases of shipwreck; stimulating exertions in giving assistance; encouraging every effort to save the lives of the crews, and providing comforts for them when rescued. An institution more wise, human policy never formed; and their judicious and humane distribution does infinite honour to their heads and hearts. The service in which I am engaged constituting so material a feature, and so congenial to the views of the Trust, produced me an invitation to the Castle, with a declared readiness to carry into effect whatever would conduce to this work of national charity. By the uncommon assistance they took care to provide for me, I have been enabled to explore the dangers with the deepest attention, and produce those suggestions for the benefit of my country, which could not have been derived from any other source.

The uncommon flatness of the shore, with the contiguous and extended reef of rocks, should be placed on wheel carriages, to allow the wash of the sea to run under them. A 6-pounder will also be necessary for furnishing a boat. Sets of the night apparatus should likewise be lodged here, with an ample supply of light balls for signals; a buoyant boat basket for bringing helpless women and children from wrecks; and a cot, fitted up with enclosed air, to prevent the cot from sinking, when the distance will not permit the rope to be kept at a proper tension.

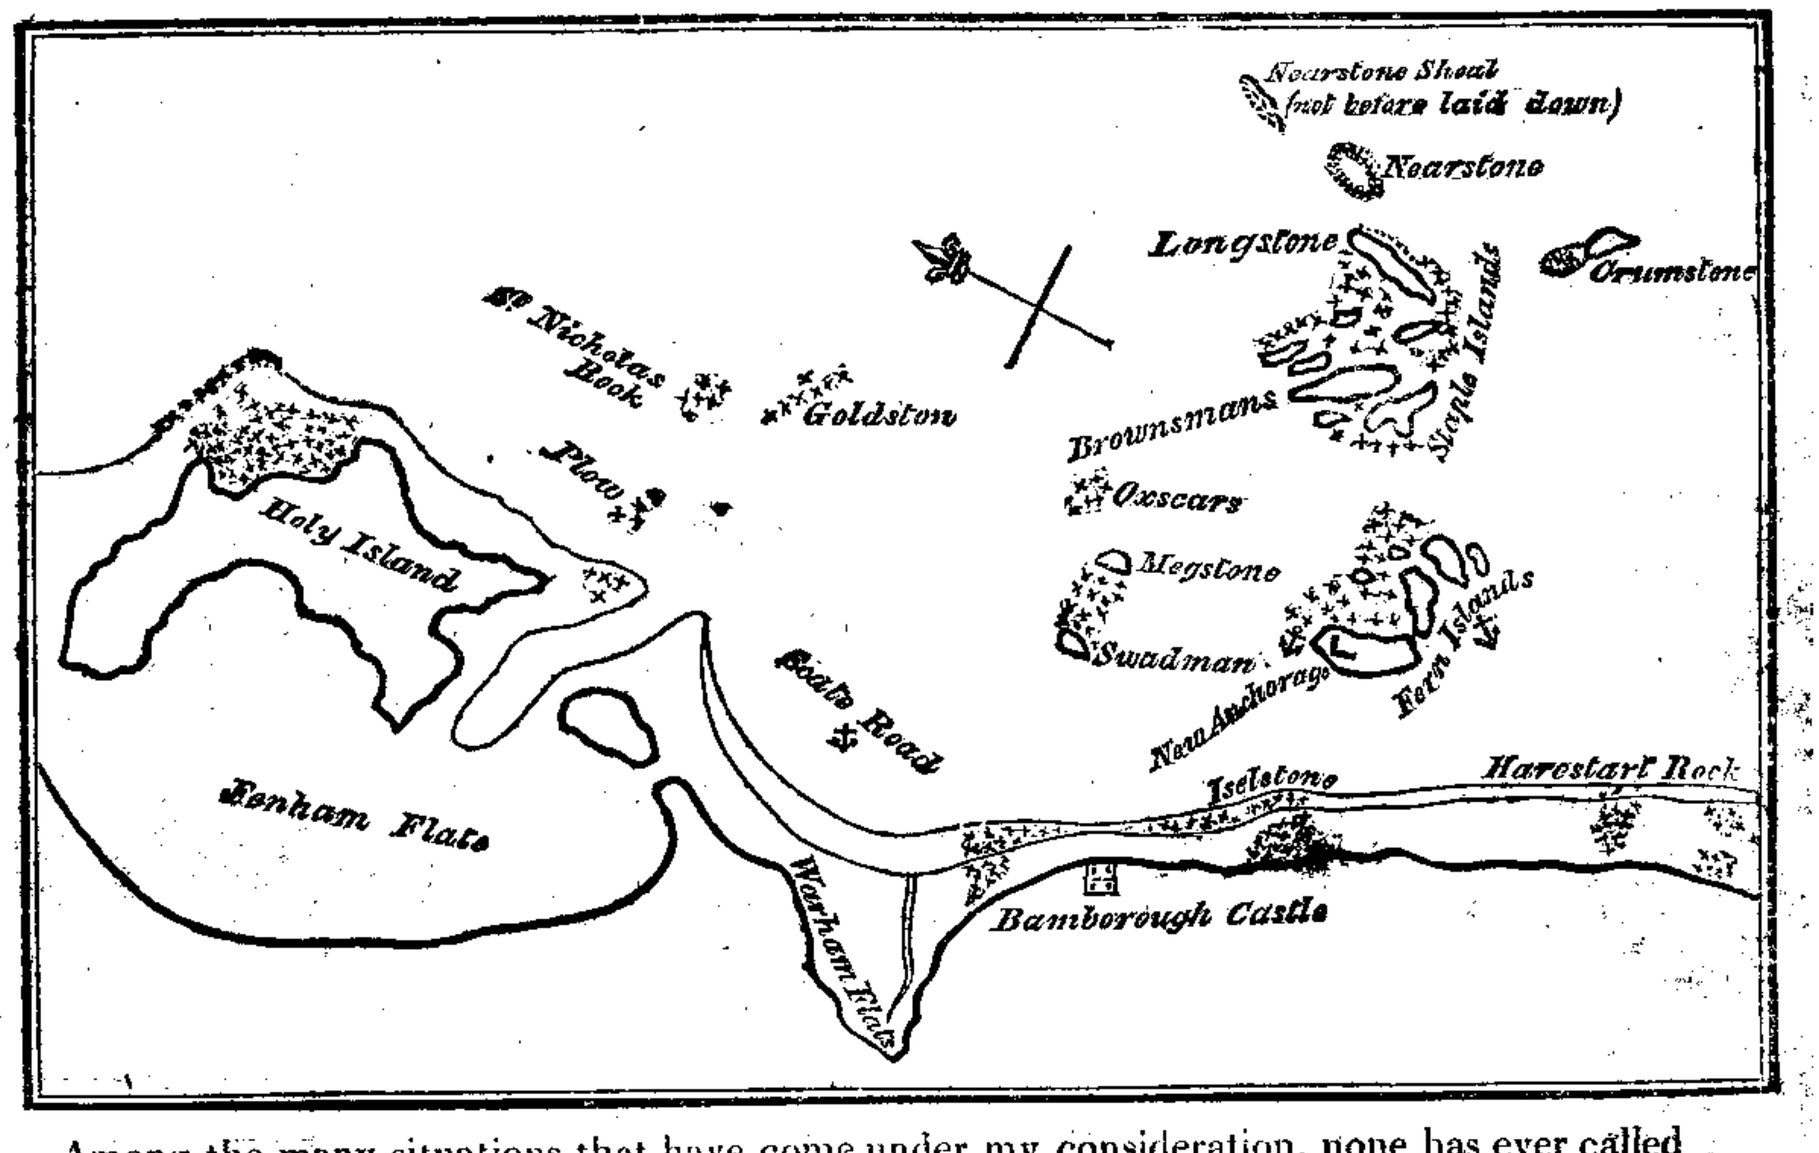
In short, this benevolent institution should be furnished with every production intended for the preservation of a class of men, who are so intimately connected with the security and prosperity of our country.

In minutely examining this space of dangers, I have judged it proper to make a faithful representation of them, in order to point out some subjects of importance to Navigation, and submit to your consideration what (it is reasonable to hope) will prove superlatively beneficial to present and future ages.



Among the many situations that have come under my consideration, none has ever called my attention equal to the space here represented, on account of the contention of currents, running in every direction, settings of rapid tides, sunken rocks, dangerous shoals, straggling islands, and hazardous beaches; where souls beyond number have perished; where property exceeding all estimate has been lost.

In taking a retrospect of this view, I shall first go to the exterior. Not in any chart that I have seen, or been informed of, has that shoal been laid down, which is N.E. of the Nearstone about half a mile, nor have the directions for vessels sailing by the Fern and Staple Islands ever noted it. The race and rippling of the current over the shoal, occasions in heavy gales of wind a most tremendous swell; and it is strongly presumed, and most firmly believed, by those whose judgment may be relied on, that the loss of the Britannia, of Newcastle, and the Mermaid Cutter, are to be attributed to it, by their having been upset in passing over this shoal, as they had been seen a little way to the southward of the shoal, steering north, with a severe easterly gale.

In all the attentions given to preservation in the vicinity of these multiplied dangers, one very material has been overlooked; viz. the necessity of pointing out perils and warnings at a time when thick fogs prevail and obscurity pervades, so that neither the islands nor light-houses are discernible.

To provide a safeguard for this period of difficulty and hazard, I strongly urge the necessity of SOUND to apprize the stranger, or negligent navigator, and rouse the unsuspecting seaman to have recourse to his LEAD, as his surest and best regulator. For this purpose I recommend a BELL, of sufficient size and weight, so as to be distinctly heard to the neighbouring island. Steam will be the most certain and best principle by which it should act; and it will require an extreme simple combination of machinery, to produce a moving power for raising a weight to strike the Bell. It is needless to submit a design or plan for its construction; as there are so many ingenious artificers, better skilled in the application of steam, to answer the purpose required. The situation best adapted is on the island where the outer light-house stands, called Brownsman's Rock* (one of the Staple Islands) from

* I am fully persuaded, that if this mentioned Light-House had been placed upon an island three quarters of a mile to the Eastward, called Longstone, it would have been a situation of much greater safety and advantage to navigation.

from its central situation to the Crumstone, Nearstone, Megstone, Fern Islands, and within hearing of Holy Island*. A square substantial building (originally the Coal light-house, 36 feet high, and 20 feet diameter, on the E. S. E. of the light-house) is capable of being converted at a very little expense, to answer the purpose intended. Its situation (the light-house being round) can be no objection, as the sound would fly from the tangent of the are, and collect again to fill the space. To distinguish this Bell from those of churches on the coast, it might strike twice as quick, as the lever could be raised, and pause with the intermediate silence of five minutes. No additional aid would be required to attend it, as the people superintending the light-house, being four in number, could discharge the occasional duty.

This suggestion, carried into effect, would give infinite security to the Fern Islands; and the benefit to navigation would be incalculably great, besides the advantages which poor industrious fishermen would derive from it. It is therefore humbly hoped that the honourable Elder Brethren of the Trinity House, will speedily adopt a subject of so much importance to the maritime interest of the country, and to humanity.

In my attention to the Roadsteads about the Islands, to discover where vessels might shelter and anchor in safety, one only is laid down in any chart, or scarcely known of, which is under the Great Fern Island, the light on it bearing N. N. W. But this affords no safety; nor could vessels anchor in gales when most fatal on this coast, when they require to be sheltered from their distress. There is, however, one which I have been able to ascertain, where they can anchor and ride in safety, particularly when the wind is at that most fatal quarter the East, when night is coming on, and ships have not day-light to reach Holy Island. It is on the North of the Great Fern Island about one cable's length, the light on that island bearing South: I have laid it down in the representative Sketch. Here vessels can ride in perfect safety (having the whole chain of Islands to windward) in five fathoms water, and in clear shingly ground, that will not injure a cable.

I have submitted my various suggestions to Mr. Blackett (of North Sunderland, agent to the Trinity House) and it is a duty due, to express how greatly I am indebted to him for his invaluable information, and indefatigable exertions on this important service.

* The Bell on the top of Bamborough Castle is rung during fogs, by order of the Trustees; but its size is not adequate, nor is its situation at all calculated to do the good intended by their benevolent Institution; as fogs generally rise from the Eastward, consequently the sound is to leeward, independent of the extreme roarings of the surf breaking on a flat and extended beach, thereby preventing a possibility of being heard at any distance from the land.

Continuation of Report from Holy Island to the Mouth of the Firth of Forth.

HOLY ISLAND.—Having witnessed a most violent storm just before my leaving Bamburg Castle, enabled me to discover the innumerable dangers between this place and the Staple Islands, and to observe the cause of the extraordinary difficulties, nay the almost impossibility of a vessel beating out of that Bay, and the consequent fate when there embayed. This opinion is the more strengthened, from a man named William Shuckford, belonging to the brig Susan of Lynn, which vessel encountered a most violent easterly gale about a month since, and still lays on Ross Sand, near Holy Island; he waiting on me to express his gratitude and thankfulness, for having, with eight others, by me been saved by a rope projected from a mortar, when wrecked at Yarmouth about two years since. This unfortunate man was interrogated in the presence of several persons residing on and conversant with the coast, in order to learn the particulars of the loss of his vessel.

To the powerful indraft or suction, drawing him in during thick weather, he ascribed the whole cause; and that he made every effort to weather the Island. The Officer at the Bewdell Hill Signal Station has not only confirmed, and assured me he never saw such seamanship and exertion used by carrying a press of sail to clear the land, made by any merchant vessel. It was at a period of tide when there was not sufficient water upon the Bar of Holy Island, which is composed of rocks, as were both points of the entrance into the harbour; consequently he dare not attempt it at that period, as destruction to his vessel and crew was inevitable had he touched on the bar. Finding every effort unavailing, the safety of his crew and self became the next consideration; and relying on the strength of his vessel, he run her on the Ross Sand, near an Island called The Laws. On my pointing out the anchorage on the North of the Great Fern Island, which has been laid down by me in my preceding Report, he assured me that had it been known to him, he could there have anchored in safety, and saved his vessel. I have enquired of Lieutenant Wallace, commanding the Signal Station, if during his command he had ever seen a vessel anchor in the situation alluded to. He says, for nine years, the period of his residence, that he never saw but the one vessel employed in the discovery, and considers it hitherto unknown, and promising great benefit to navigation.

The small Island called The Laws is uninhabited, and has beacons or marks on it for sailing into Holy Island; it is a spot peculiarly adapted for preservation, as vessels, when unable to get into Holy Island, have this alternative, inevitable destruction to their crews if driven on the rocks, with a certain security when driven on this sand beach, when a mortar and ropes are at hand. For this purpose I recommend such being placed on this Island, and the men from Holy Island can cross in a boat, and repair to give immediate assistance. It is the property of Earl Tankerville; and I shall submit to his Lordship, the just advantage which will be derived by permitting a small building to be erected thereon, to contain the mortar, &c.

BERWICK.—The gale continuing on my arrival at this place, and its being high water, the uncommon dangers attending vessels running for safety into this harbour was evidently observable. On visiting it at low ebb my opinion was confirmed; and it was obvious the cause of the difficulties, and what was best calculated to insure a preventive. The injuries done to the navigation of this place, has greatly proceeded from similar causes as those pointed out at Tynemouth, the destruction of rocks near the harbour's mouth, that formerly directed the course of the current, and kept a clear passage for its tidal movements; the rock spoken of is limestone, the property of the Lord of the Manor, Lord Lisburne, with whose permission it is said to have been taken away. To this and this only is to be ascribed the sand bank formed in the channel, the encroachment of the sea on property in the bay, and the dangers that threaten a considerable part of the garrisoned town walls. To remedy these, must be by a continuance of the Pier, which is in contemplation; and I deeply lamented to learn, apprehensions were entertained that obstacles were likely to arise to retard its completion, for the want of pecuniary aid; a circumstance infinitely to be regretted, as the advantages would be incalculably great; as vessels could then run with certainty and safety into the harbour at high water, when at present it is extremely hazardous, and almost impossible, if of burthen. A more judicious arrangement was never displayed to check evils, combining the improvements to a harbour, reflecting the highest credit on that celebrated engineer Mr. Rennie. There is one suggestion I thought proper to point out to the conservators, the necessity of entering into terms with the Proprietors of the limestone rock; for admitting the pier is completed, it will not be secure if more of the rock is taken away. The work of the pier, and every subject relating to it, is directed by Commissioners acting under the power of a recent Act of Parliament, and they are enjoined to render an annual statement of the receipts and disbursements of the sum collected, which is intended for the improvement of the harbour, raised on all goods landed or shipped, termed Shore Dues. Nothing can be of so much importance to an iron-bound coast, as safe harbours to shelter in, for the preservation of life and property; consequently my enquiries were diligently made respecting the application of the Funds to the purposes of the intention, and found them here most satisfactory.

On making further enquiries if the same system was adopted on this part of the coast, I was led to understand not, being in some instances received by Societies or persons, without any account being exhibited to merchants or others. Surely a tax raised (not under the controul of Government, or general incorporated Societies) from the Public, should be accounted for to the Public, when collected for any particular service, to see if the revenues are applied to the purposes for which they are granted, and their balances carried forward.

On being attended by some intelligent Commissioners to the works going on at the pier, it was impressed on their minds the injuries to which their harbour was liable, and what must be done for its security and improvement. Learning there was not at this port a boat calculated for giving relief to vessels when grounded on the bar, or driven on the dangers on either side of the harbour's entrance; I deeply regretted it, and the more so when informed the cause, that the money collected for a Life Boat, was lodged in a provincial Bank, where it was lost by its failure: In consequence much pains was taken in pointing out the good that would accrue by having one, and instructions given in how simple a method, and at what an easy rate the properties of preservation could be given to any boat by casks of air, with the readiest manner of application.

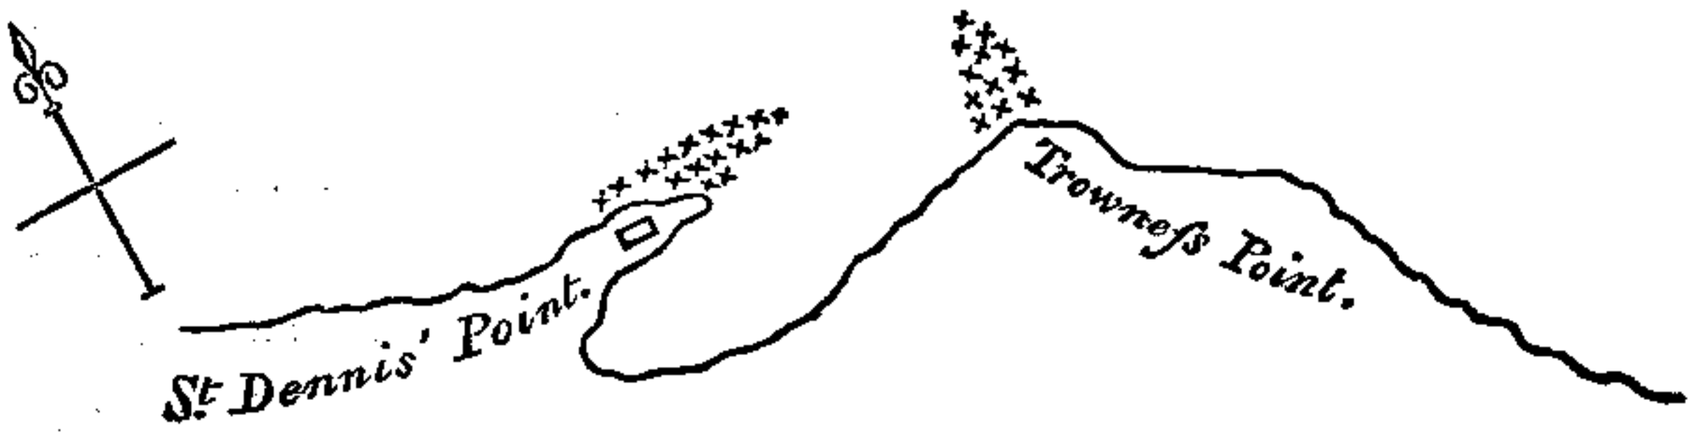
The Pilots here are active, and under excellent regulations, the controul of the Commissioners; and I have no doubt by sending them a $5\frac{4}{5}$ inch and 6-pounder mortar, considerable good will be derived by them.

The little harbour of Ayrmouth has a most dangerous approach from reefs of rocks; and to lessen a recurrence of future fatal events, it will be proper to have a mortar lodged at the barracks.

ST. ABB'S HEAD.—This protruding headland has to record an infinite number of distressing cases, from vessels being driven under it, and where the fate of their crews have been inevitable. The rope-ladder may here be applied with considerable success, and I was assured would have saved numbers, as vessels come close at the rock, having from eight to eleven fathoms close at its foot. A mortar will be extremely beneficial for the shore of Coldinghame, where there are many fishermen.

DUNBAR.—The situation of this place, and so nearly resembling the difficulties and dangers of St. Abb's Head, it will require similar apparatus.

The extraordinary features of horror this iron-bound coast presented, with the various histories of melancholy events that had transpired, with the loss of the Pallas and Nymph Frigates, so fresh in remembrance, dictated the infinite benefit that would result, if a harbour could be obtained; with this hope I minutely explored Skateraw Bay, in the vicinity of Black Castle signal station, a situation that appeared advantageously placed, and formed by nature by protruding points of land for such a design, and promising incalculable good, could it be effected, by a shelter to vessels when embayed between St. Abb's Head and North Berwick, and for the want of which so many vessels have been lost.



The Bay was formed by a point of land called St. Dennis Point, on which the ruins of an old chapel still remains, and Trowness Point. There was sufficient water within the bay for any vessel, and a projecting ridge of rocks extremely favourable to inclosure, sheltering from St. Dennis Point to the Eastward, and from that of Trowness to the N. N. East. On the closest inspection a shelter is certainly practicable, but the expense in accomplishing it, to completely lock it in, would be very considerable. The bay is perfectly free from uneven ground, and composed of slate, gradually sloping to an inclined plane into deep water; but as its surface was too hard to yield to the bill of an anchor, I lamented that my labour was in vain, as the want of secure anchorage militates so greatly against the benefit of a harbour.

DUNBAR.—The shore, in the vicinity of this place, is studded with dangerous rock, and the present harbour is extremely dangerous for vessels attempting it in a gale of wind. I here exhibited the manner of giving relief in cases of shipwreck, in the presence of the Earl of Lauderdale, and many persons purposely collected by his Lordship, from their having particularly distinguished themselves by their activity in cases of such distress; when it was infinitely gratifying to be informed, that it would have saved every life that perished when the frigates were wrecked, and the numerous lives that have been lost for the want of such aid; it is therefore desirable that a 5½ and a 6-pounder mortar should be sent there.

NORTH BERWICK.—From sunken rocks, others visible, and islands influencing currents, readily account for the dangers and the cases of distress stated to me in this neighbourhood. A 5½-inch mortar must be placed here, with a similar one about four miles to the North West, which I earnestly hope and trust will prove a safeguard to the mouth of the Firth, and prevent future calamities proceeding from those winds, E. and N. E. that have been so fatal to the maritime interests of the country, and so distressing to humanity.

Conclusion of a Report of the Coast, from the Southern Extremity of Norfolk, to the Firth of Forth; with the Means proposed for saving Persons from Shipwreck.

By GEO. WM. MANBY.

ISLAND of MAY.—AMONG the various improvements produced with a view to guard against Shipwreck, and constituted to add security and advantages to Navigation, the system of LIGHTS deservedly stands first; because it warns and points out objects of danger in the hours of darkness; and by giving certain information of a vessel's situation in a trackless and stormy ocean, and aiding her to reach the destined port in safety.

If, however, this admirable and well designed Plan be not duly attended to; and from neglect (for to nothing else can it be atributed) the Lights are at times not visible, or present repeated obscurations, the dangers that attend the maritime interests of the country, and to which the lives of a most valuable class of men are constantly exposed, increase to a truly alarming degree.

These remarks occurred to me from the observations I had made on the Light upon the above-named island, which is situated at the mouth of the Firth of Forth. My attention was particularly directed to it, by the repeated representations I received from persons along the coast, that the loss of many vessels had been atributed to it; and it was farther said, partly to involve the destruction of the two Frigates lately wrecked at Dunbar.

In order to make correct observations for forming an opinion, I took the aid of a good glass, and employed myself in looking at the Light on several clear winter nights: Sometimes (when I presume the fire was stirred) a bright flame was exhibited, but it was of short duration, and sunk again into darkness.

I am confirmed in this remark by the Officer commanding the Signal Station at Black Castle, which is on an eminence immediately opposite to the island; and by the reports of many of the Officers commanding ships of war on the Leith station; but I may in particular mention Captain Pierce, of His Majesty's sloop Rifleman, who declared, in the presence of Vice Admiral Otway, commanding on this station, that during the eighteen months he had been under his command, he had repeatedly run within half a mile of the island before the Light was decernible.

This Light is maintained by Coals, which is at all times, and in any situation, improper; but it is more so on this coast, because there are many lime-kilns burning so near it, that unless the utmost attention be used to keep a regular blaze, and render the streams of light perceptible, it can be of no service to Navigation, and may easily be mistaken, from its similitude to those lights on shore.

The Island of May, with its Light, are private property; and to that circumstance I cannot avoid attributing in a great degree its imperfection, from the want of that controul which is essential to so important a subject; and cannot be properly maintained, except by Government authority, or a well regulated society.

Under a strong impression of the truth of this, I would earnestly recommend, that this Light be purchased, and placed under the immediate controul of Government, or of a Society such as the Brethren of the Trinity House, or the Commissioners for Northern Lights: I need scarcely add, that the Light should be illuminated with Reflectors, so as to form a distinction from any other.

I cannot conclude without remarking, that no study would be more beneficial to Navigation than that of producing a method of determining the situation of, and knowing every Light, when seen. It is a subject worthy of serious consideration from those to whose department so important a branch of maritime science belongs; and I shall most readily give my humble aid, to perfect a system, the result of which would be of incalculable good to this nation, and to universal maritime commerce.

Captain Manby to Lord Sidmouth, 25 March 1813;—Appendix to concluding Report.

MY LORD, Newcastle, March 25 1813.

SINCE I had the honour of transmitting to your Lordship the concluding part of my Report from the Southern Extremity of Norfolk to the Firth of Forth, I have forwarded Copies of the same for the information of my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and for the Master General and Honourable Board of Ordnance. They have likewise been submitted to persons particularly conversant in this service; who suggested, that in order to render every information that possibly could be required, a Survey and Chart of that very dangerous part of the Coast in the vicinity of Coquet Island would be advisable: anxious to make the work perfect, I have been and made a Chart of the same, and laid down directions therewith.

These I transmit to your Lordship, requesting it may be added as an Appendix to the Report already before your Lordship, and which, I trust, will receive your Lordship's approbation, with that of my Country.

I have the honour to be, &c.
GEO. WM. MANBY.

Right Honourable Lord Sidmouth,
Secretary for the Home Department,

DIRECTIONS for sailing into safe Anchorage at COQUET ISLAND, As laid down by the accompanying Chart.

SHOULD circumstances admit, it will always be desirable to go round the North end of the island to this anchorage, the passage being much less intricate than on the South side. Being to the North and Eastward of the island, bring Bondicar Point to bear S.W. by South, then run directly for it, taking care, however, to keep it open with Hauxley Point, in order to clear the Pann Bush; run in this direction until the old Tower on the island bear S.E. by E. and Bondicar Point shutting in with Hauxley; you will then be in a good anchoring birth, with not less than four fathoms at low water.

Being to the Southward and Eastward of the island, and not able to weather it, bring the old Tower on the island to bear N.$\frac{1}{2}$W. then run directly for it, until you bring the centre of Warkworth Castle on with the chimney of the old ruin at Amble Pans, coming not nearer the island than a good cable's length; run with these marks on till the old Tower on the island bears S.E. by E. then anchor as before.

In thick or hazy weather, when the marks may not be visible to run in on the South side, bring the Tower to bear N. by W. and run directly for it to within a little more than a cable's length of the island; then keeping about that distance, bring the Tower to bear N.E. from which steer N.W. till it bear S.E. by E. and you will be at the anchorage.

It may be worthy of observation, that on the first half of the flood the tide sets directly into Druridge Bay, and vessels coming from the Southward have oftentimes, in consequence of this, with a fair wind and thick weather, got upon Bondicar Rock, by not keeping a sufficient offing; this may be prevented BY MAKING USE OF THE LEAD, and not to come nearer the land than 15 fathoms.

The influence of tides is here excessive, and I enjoin every navigator traversing this very dangerous part of the ocean to be PERPETUALLY SOUNDING; the neglect of it has, I have been assured, been the destruction of innumerable vessels and lives. To guard against this fatal coast in thick and hazy weather, it would be very desirable that a Gun or Bell was placed on the island.

GENTLEMEN, Whitehall, 22 January 1813.

I AM directed by Lord Sidmouth to acquaint you, that in consequence of a representation made some time ago to His Majesty's Government by Captain Manby, stating the beneficial effects which were likely to result from the adoption of a Plan, which he at that time presented, for saving the Lives of Shipwrecked Mariners, it was determined, that Captain Manby should be allowed to make some experiments, in order to prove how far the Plan recommended by him appeared worthy of attention.

Several experiments were accordingly made by Captain Manby; and in pursuance of directions which were signified to him for the purpose, he occasionally made a Report of his proceedings.

A Report which was last received from him, appearing to Lord Sidmouth to relate to local situations, very much within your knowledge and observation; and his Lordship being very anxious to ascertain, as far as possible, the real merits of Captain Manby's Plan and Experiments, from persons most competent to form a correct opinion upon such a subject; I have received his lordship's directions, to transmit a copy of the Report in question for your consideration; and I am at the same time to acquaint you, that his Lordship has thought it advisable to transmit a duplicate copy of this Report, to be laid before the Corporation of the Trinity House, in London. D. N° 4.

It is Lord Sidmouth's request, that you would take the trouble of perusing with attention this Report; and that having done so, you would be pleased to hold a communication with the Trinity House, in London, upon any parts of the Report which you may deem worthy or proper to be observed upon: His Lordship having already prepared the Trinity House here for the receipt of a communication from you on this subject, and having requested the Deputy Master to furnish him eventually with the result of your correspondence and joint opinions, from which he has no doubt the real merits of Captain Manby's Plan will be satisfactorily ascertained.

I am, &c. &c.

Mr. BECKET to JOS. COTTON, Esq. Deputy Master of the Trinity House, London.

SIR, Whitehall, 25 January 1813.

I AM directed by Lord Sidmouth to acquaint you, that in consequence of a representation made some time since to His Majesty's Government by Captain Manby, stating the beneficial effects which were likely to result from the adoption of a Plan, which he at that time presented, for saving the Lives of Shipwrecked Mariners, it was determined that Captain Manby should be allowed to make some experiments, in order to prove how far the Plan recommended by him appeared worthy of attention.

Several experiments were accordingly made by Captain Manby; and in pursuance of directions which were signified to him for the purpose, Captain Manby occasionally made a Report of his proceedings.

I have received his Lordship's directions to transmit a copy of the last Report (marked D, No. 4,) for your consideration; and I am at the same time to acquaint you, that his Lordship has thought it advisable to transmit duplicate copies of this Report to the Corporation of the Trinity House at Hull and at Newcastle, with a request that they would peruse it with attention, and that having done so, they would communicate with the Trinity House in London, on such parts thereof as, from the local knowledge they must possess of the coast particularly referred to by Captain Manby in his Report, they may deem worthy and proper to be observed upon.

Lord Sidmouth has therefore desired me to request, that you will furnish him with the result of the communications which may be made from Hull and Newcastle, on this subject; and that you will also be pleased to favour him with your opinion on the advantages likely to be derived from adopting the propositions recommended in this Report, as his Lordship is very desirous of satisfactorily ascertaining the real merits of Captain Manby's Plan and Experiments, from persons most competent to form a correct opinion upon such a subject.

SIR, Trinity House, London, 9th April, 1813.

I HAVE it in command to transmit you the enclosed Papers of the Elder Brethren of this Corporation, on Capt. Manby's Fourth Report, in relation to his Plan for saving the Lives of Shipwrecked Mariners; referred for their Consideration and Opinion, by the Right Honourable Lord Viscount Sidmouth; with their request, that you will please to lay the same before his Lordship.

I have the honour to be, &c.

John Becket, Esq. (Signed) JAMES COURT, Secretary.

REPORT of the Elder Brethren of the Corporation of Trinity House, London, on the Fourth Report of Captain Manby, in relation to his Plan for saving the Lives of Shipwrecked Mariners;—referred for their consideration and opinion, by the Right Honourable Lord Viscount Sidmouth, his Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Lord Sidmouth having requested the Elder Brethren would furnish him with the result of the communications which might be made from the Corporation of Trinity House at Hull and at Newcastle, to whom his Lordship had caused duplicate copies of Captain Manby's said Report to be transmitted, with a request that they would peruse it with attention, and having done so, would communicate with the Elder Brethren of this House, on such parts thereof as, from the local knowledge they must possess of the coast particularly referred to by Captain Manby, they might deem worthy and proper to be observed upon;—

And his Lordship having also requested the Elder Brethren would favour him with their opinion on the advantages likely to be derived from adopting the propositions recommended in the said Report; his Lordship being very desirous of satisfactorily ascertaining the real merits of Captain Manby's Plan and Experiments, from persons most competent to form a correct opinion on such a subject;—

THE Elder Brethren have to report to his Lordship, That they have received from the Trinity House at Hull and at Newcastle, a communication of their observations and opinion upon the said Report, as contained in the letters, copies of which (No. 1 and 2,) are annexed hereto for his Lordship's further information. And the Brethren having themselves attentively perused and considered the said Report, they now proceed to offer some Remarks on Captain Manby's Plan and Experiments generally, together with their Opinion on the advantages likely to be derived from adopting the several propositions recommended in his Fourth Report.

And first, with respect to Captain Manby's primary and principal object, of relieving Shipwrecked Mariners by means of mortars, the Brethren have to observe, that the Plan proposed by him for this purpose, was laid before the Brethren so long ago as the year 1808, shortly after the idea of it had first occurred to him. The Plan appeared to the Brethren to be ingenious, and likely to be useful in cases where all circumstances were favourable to its application; but the Brethren being doubtful of its practicability in such cases of Shipwreck as commonly occur, withheld any marked approval of it, as there appeared, in their judgment, many considerable obstacles to its success. They therefore declined giving any final opinion upon his Plan, until its practicability had been ascertained by sufficient trials, and experience had demonstrated in what degree it was likely to be efficient to the purposes intended.

For the Brethren were at that time, and still are doubtful, whether it would be practicable to project a rope over a stranded vessel in a storm of wind blowing upon the shore, even when the vessel lies within the actual range of the mortar. The experiments made in general, having not been during a gale of wind or hurricane upon the coast, except in a few instances.

But admitting the possibility, in tempests upon the coasts, of throwing a line from a mortar over a stranded vessel, it is still to be considered, that it could be done only in cases where the vessel lies within a quarter of a mile of the shore. In all those places, therefore, where the shore, from its flatness, does not admit of a vessel being cast within that distance, the plan must be ineffectual for effecting a communication between the stranded vessel and the shore, unless by means of a grapnel to be thrown out, so as to assist in hauling off a Life Boat or other boat through the surf, as first proposed by Captain Manby. But this part of his original plan was afterwards abandoned by Captain Manby.

It is therefore only in some particular parts of the sea coast that the project of throwing a line could be accomplished, and those being limited in extent, the situations in which the apparatus would be applicable to afford relief, are likely to be but few.

Here it may be proper to observe, that the concurrence of many circumstances is requisite to the success of the means proposed, in every particular case, viz. That the ship be stranded within range of the mortar;—that the apparatus be near at hand, or if not on the spot, there be ready means of transport and assistance for bringing it up to the scite of the disaster, in time to be of use;—that it be in proper order and condition;—and that there be persons sufficiently skilled ready at hand to direct its application. All these circumstances must concur to insure its success, and the absence of any one would render the rest unavailing.

For these reasons the Brethren concur in opinion with the Trinity House at Newcastle, "That no National or Public Establishment can be formed, with any prospect of advantage, "relative to Captain Manby's Plan of stationing Mortars at particular places along a "great extent of coast, for the purposes proposed in his Report." (See Report from Newcastle.)

Nevertheless, the Brethren think that in any particular points of the coast, peculiarly liable to be the scite of Shipwreck, and where such disasters are known to be frequent, where also there are persons stationed on public duties (such as at Signal Houses, &c.) who could take charge of the apparatus to preserve it in good order; and where all other circumstances are favourable for its quick transport and ready application on any occasion of such disaster, it is likely to be useful; and there could be no objection to station a Mortar, &c. as proposed, in places so circumstanced, with a view of ascertaining the real merits of the Plan.

Newbiggin (one of the situations mentioned in the Report,) where it is stated that a vessel came on shore within 50 yards of the station, appears unquestionably a proper place. And it is probably to places of this description, the observations of the Trinity House, Hull, are intended to apply, who are of opinion, "that the apparatus might be useful under certain circumstances."

With respect to the other places pointed out in the Report as proper stations for the apparatus, viz. Whitburn, South Shields, and the Life Boat there; North Shields, Tinmouth Castle, Blythe, Haskerley Point, Allmouth, Howicke, Dunstanbro' Castle, North Sunderland, Bundle Hill, Holy Island, Bambro' Castle, ditto for a Boat; the utility of depositing it in those places must depend on the possibility of the vessel's coming within the range of the Mortar; and the presence or absence of the other circumstances above alluded to at each particular place.

But with regard to those and all other situations on the coasts of the kingdom, the Brethren concur in the idea suggested by the Trinity House, Newcastle, that it would be expedient "to encourage local associations, or communities, of the inhabitants in the "neighbourhood, for the purpose of providing, preserving in good order, and managing "such apparatus as they may think adapted to their respective districts and circumstances; "by which the Plan, if experience declare its use efficient, will naturally be brought into "request, and gradually extended in proportion to the real merits it may be found to "possess." (See Report from Newcastle.)

It has been the object of the Brethren to gain information of what success attended the trials hitherto; but they do not find any authenticated cases in which the project has proved successful, except the few recorded by Captain Manby, in his Publication, see pages being about six in number; two of which appear to have been effected through the means of a boat being hauled off by the line.

But the Brethren would beg to suggest the expediency of having a bonâ fide Return made, as to the result of the trials in the several cases of Shipwreck, in which the apparatus has been applied.

And should Government establish Mortars at the several places before named, they think an Annual Return should be made from each station of the cases in which the apparatus had been used, distinguishing those in which it had been successful, and to what extent; from which the degree of its practical utility might in course of time be ascertained. But the Brethren, from the few instances of its success at present before them, are not satisfied that they are sufficient to justify the Expense of any General Establishment, until by further trial at particular situations the real merit and utility of the invention has been fully ascertained.

With regard to Captain Manby's suggestion, of affixing air-kegs to Life Boats, the Brethren do not approve of it; as they think, that the Boat, by this method, though rendered more buoyant, would be very likely to upset. Life Boats so constructed have often been submitted to the Brethren, but disapproved of by them, on this and other accounts. But where Life Boats are established, an anchor and a hawser laid in from the offing would be more effectual in getting the Boat off, than that of the chance of a shot being thrown at the end of a line over a hawser, between two anchors parallel to the coast.

The information collected on shore by Captain Manby, respecting the navigation in and about the Fern Islands, and Cocquet Island anchorage, the Brethren apprehend will add little to the knowledge of the mariner. The improved Lights lately erected there by this Corporation, have contributed to render that navigation more easy as well as safe, than formerly it was; and there would be no hesitation in adopting any further means that could tend to the greater security of the navigation. But the Bell proposed by Captain Manby to be fixed on the Brownsman, cannot, in the opinion of the Brethren, be of any utility.

As to the Lime Kilns near Sunderland, noticed by Captain Manby, the Brethren concur with the Trinity House, Hull, that all fires upon the coast likely to be mistaken for lights, ought to be hid by some skreen or blind. The Brethren have not heard of any losses occasioned by the Lime Kilns near Sunderland. But they think it proper to state, that authority should be vested in some public body, to oblige the proprietors to suppress the fires issuing from kilns, coal pits, or other works, situated on the coast, especially in the neighbourhood of established Lights, when likely to prove dangerous to navigation, by being mistaken for the lights; or to compel them to put proper skreens or blinds before such fires, to hide them from vessels passing along the coasts, where it is possible, without material inconvenience, to be effected.

By order of The BOARD,
(Signed) Jas. Court,
Secretary.

OBSERVATIONS upon Captain Manby's Fourth Report for saving the Lives of Shipwrecked Mariners; by the Warden, Mr. Hall, and Mr. Horncastle, Elder Brethren; Mr. Martin, and Mr. Dring, Assistants; a Committee of this House, appointed for that purpose.

THIS Committee agree with Captain Manby, that all Fires upon the coast, and more especially those in the neighbourhood of established Lights, ought to be skreened as much as possible, to prevent them from being taken for the Lights, and by that means leading ships into error.

The Committee think the placing Guns or Mortars on the coast (where shipwrecks are frequent) for the purpose of throwing a shot with a line across a ship stranded, might be of use; but how many, or at what particular places, cannot say; but recommend that they should be so placed as to be readily conveyed from one part of the coast to the other, where they may be wanted, and to be under the care of a person who has horses to transport them where the wreck may happen to be, otherwise, in the opinion of this Committee, they will be of little use. If they are put under the care of persons who will make it their business to keep them, and the apparatus and the ammunition belonging to them, in order, and be ready to attend them, it would contribute much towards their usefulness.

The Committee conceive the idea of the people at Shields, of placing a piece of ordnance in the Life Boat, on many occasions might be very useful.

This Committee recommend that that part of Captain Manby's Report, which applies to Clifford's Fort and neighbourhood, should be referred to the consideration and opinion of civil engineers, being entirely within their province.

As to what respects Cocquet Island, this Committee observe nothing is said in Captain Manby's Report, but what is known to all Masters of coasting vessels navigating that coast; and few strangers would attempt it without having a chart or directions for that part, or a pilot.

This Committee approve of Captain Manby's recommendation of a Bell on one of the outermost of the Staple Islands, to be used in foggy weather, to warn the vessels which may be near the Islands, and do not see any objection to such a precaution being adopted; for certainly it must be allowed, that in foggy weather, which is in general still, the sound of a Bell may be heard a great distance, and especially such a one as would be fixed there, provided the plan should be adopted; and the Committee think it might be the means of saving ships from driving on the Islands, or at least it would certainly give the alarm.

As to the Roadsted mentioned in Captain Manby's Report, under the Fern Island, the Committee cannot see any thing more than what is laid down in the Charts; and should any ships be under the necessity of anchoring, they would certainly take the best place that offered. But the Committee apprehend, the seamen and fishermen of the Islands are the best able to give a satisfactory account of the Roadsted alluded to by Captain Manby.

GENTLEMEN, Trinity House, Newcastle, March 5th 1813.

LORD Sidmouth having done us the honour to direct a Copy of a long Report made to His Majesty's Government by Captain Manby, respecting a Plan for saving the Lives of Shipwrecked Mariners, to be transmitted to this Corporation, and at the same time requesting that we would peruse it with attention; and that having done so, we should hold a communication with the Trinity House, in London, upon any parts of the Report which we might deem worthy or proper to be observed upon; his Lordship expressing a hope, that from the result of the correspondence and joint opinions of both Trinity Houses, the real merits of Captain Manby's Plan may be satisfactorily ascertained;—

In pursuance of his Lordship's request, we now beg leave to offer you a few general remarks only, on the Report and Plan in question; not that we consider any of the several matters, or the attendant observations constituting the subject of this Report, unworthy of notice or of little importance; on the contrary, we think they are the result of careful enquiry and industrious investigation, and in general, deserving serious attention; but the Report being voluminous, and embracing various particulars, we reserve appropriate observations on the separate parts, to a future opportunity, or until you may be pleased to signify to us your ideas of the Plan in general.

We are inclined to commence our correspondence with you in this manner, because we conceive, if you should coincide with us in opinion regarding Captain Manby's primary and principal object of rescuing shipwrecked seamen by means of mortars, there will perhaps be little necessity to enter at great length into the minutiæ of his Plan, or his local remarks applied to the coast in this vicinity.

We should be sorry to advance any thing tending to discourage or undervalue the exertions and endeavours of a meritorious individual, in his designs to benefit the Public, in a matter of such vast consequence; but though we justly acknowledge and applaud the ingenuity and merit of applying an engine of destruction to the most important and humane purpose proposed, and really confess, that its application will be almost infallible in some cases; yet conceiving it our business to examine the premises in an extended and general view, that is, as a practical system, which may be rendered generally or widely efficient for the end professed, we cannot at present perceive much benefit is to be expected from it.

Were shipwrecks always, or frequently to occur, on or near certain known situations where mortars with their complete apparatus, as described by Captain Manby, might be stationed, and kept in good order, and a few persons skilled and practised in their use, ready at, or near the scene of distress, and the distance of the wreck within reach of the shell to be discharged, the certainty of the benefit would be evident; for it is obvious, that by means of a rope attached to the shell, and so conveyed to the vessel on shore, the lives of the crew may be saved, when other means were impracticable.

But when we contemplate an extent of many leagues of coast, not one spot or peculiar part of which is exempt from becoming the scite of shipwreck, and their concomitant disasters; and considering, that in such melancholy events, the utmost expedition and readiness are generally essential or indispensable, the difficulty, inconvenience and delay of removing and transporting a mortar, &c. along a coast where probably no road exists; and that when it is brought to the point intended, the operation of using it to advantage will be very uncertain, if not wholly ineffective, from the unskilfulness and ignorance of the only inhabitants in the neighbourhood, viz. fishermen and peasants, totally unacquainted with the management of such instruments; and further, that the mortars and their necessary accompanying materials, will, in many instances, lie for years deposited in a state of neglect and decay; and consequently, when required upon any sudden and pressing emergency, will be found in a condition unfit for service.

Duly weighing all these unfavourable circumstances, without noticing the considerable expense which the execution of Captain Manby's Plan, to render it really efficient would demand; we apprehend no national or public establishment can be formed with any prospect of advantage, relative to his Plan of stationing mortars at particular places along a great extent of coast, for the purposes proposed in his Report.

It is to be supposed Captain Manby's Plans, with the explanatory remarks and directions, will be promulgated over all the maritime parts of the kingdom; all persons therefore, interested in the commerce and navigation thereof, will be apprized of the scheme, and enabled to judge how far, and in what parts of the coasts in their vicinity the adoption of it may be necessary, or likely to be available; and there can arise no objections or impediments to prevent such of the above-mentioned persons, who may approve the measure, and think think it advisable, or can be persuaded to do so, from forming themselves into local Associations or Communities, for the purpose of providing, preserving in good order, and managing such mortars and necessary apparatus, as they may think adapted to their respective districts and circumstances.

Deeply impressed with the momentous importance of preserving the lives, or rescuing from a horrible death, a most valuable class of men, we should regret the hasty suppression of any project for that end, bearing the promise even of very limited or incidental success. Wherefore the above mode is suggested as one by which Captain Manby's Plan, we imagine, may probably be introduced into practice; and if experience declares its use efficient, in any degree worthy of public notice, it will naturally be brought into request, and gradually extended in proportion to the real merits it may be found to possess.

Though we are doubtful of much good to be derived from the sound of a Bell on the Fearn Islands, during gales of wind from the sea (at which times its warning would certainly be moſt desirable and useful,) because of the roaring of the elements and the leeward position of the bell; yet provided the expense is not considered an obstacle, we think a large Bell placed in the situation recommended by Captain Manby, and worked in the manner he describes, or by some other mechanical device, which will not require fuel, would be of service in foggy weather.

If there appear to you any other particular heads or parts of the Report before us, upon which you may think any comments from us would be useful, we shall with pleasure attend to such intimations thereon as you may be pleased to favour us with.

Captain MANBY to Lord SIDMOUTH.

Dulverton, Devonshire, 12th September 1813.

MY LORD,

WITH the humblest deference, and in the well-grounded hope of receiving your Lordship's approbation, I beg to be allowed the honour of submitting to your consideration, that from repeated representations of the fatal effects of Shipwreck, on part of the Southern and Western coast of this Island, both in respect to the loss of lives, as well as property, I have been particularly urged by applications to avert such calamities, from the Rev. Mr. Barwis, transmitted to me by the Right Honourable George Rose, stating fatal cases of Shipwreck near his residence, and how serviceable the system brought into use by me would be, if placed at certain dangerous places on the Isle of Wight, and the people were instructed in their uses; likewise from Lord Ilchester, pointing out the benefits that would result by its being established on dangerous parts of the coast of Dorsetshire; and by repeated representations from Cornwall, that the most infinite service would be derived in the saving of human life, if it was there placed. I have been therefore induced, in the conscious anxiety to be useful to my country and to humanity, diligently to devote my attention to these objects, and obey such wishes (with every other nature of public good) as far as come within the limits of my humble abilities; on which service, I beg to have the honour of reporting to your Lordship; viz.—That, on the 8th of July I set off for the coast of Hampshire. my arrival at Portsmouth, it was there submitted to my observation and consideration, the circumstances that had attended some actions our frigates had fought with American ships, and that when the termination had been unfavourable to this nation, it had proceeded from the enemy producing a quicker fire, and employing much heavier metal in the conflict. To obviate such success in future, and to confirm my ideas how they were to be prevented by practical proof, became the immediate object of my attention, as it appeared to me a quicker fire could certainly be produced, likewise a much greater weight of shot projected with accuracy, by a method never before attempted, to do the greatest possible damage in the least space of time, as the issue of contest so much depended on the destruction in the onset of an action; and when that destruction could be continued, there was every reasonable expectation that success would be its attendant. These opinions were submitted to the Honourable Board of Ordnance, with a request, that I might be allowed their permission to make experiments thereon, before the Naval Officers at that port. In reply, the Board stated that experiments on improvements in Guernsey, are made at the projector's expense. It is scarcely necessary for me to say, that in the confident persuasion of the benefits that would accrue from the method proposed, I spared no expense to provide every requisite, and made the experiments before the Commander in Chief, and innumerable Naval Officers, in the following order:—To produce an easy method of serving guns on board of ships with more celerity than the mode now in use;—a simple way of fitting up two shot, and producing greater accuracy than the present method of service;—a mode of increasing the power of guns, by enabling them to project additional weight of shot, in three regular gradations, for close action; and discharging guns without the application of fire, by which more facility, safety and certainty is thereby produced, than with either the lock or match. These, I am happy to say, received much approbation; and I have, in consequence, forwarded to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty models of them, stating, at the same time, that not only those, but every production I had made, was designed for the service of my country, and was therefore for their Lordships' pleasure to adopt and use as they thought proper. Before the Naval Officers who attended these experiments, and numerous other persons conversant with and connected in naval affairs, I exhibited those various methods of giving relief in cases of shipwreck (which are already made known to your Lordship,) and it was no slight gratification to receive such unequivocal approbation. Some new productions I submitted for their opinions, having for their object the following considerations:—An easy method of communication with a vessel stranded on a lee-shore, by making it capable of being carried into effect by one person, for a coast thinly inhabited, or where there might be only one residing on a dangerous island, the expense of which would be only a few pounds;—the making any boat unimmergible, by giving to it the properties of a Life Boat, at the expense of one pound, calculated for shore boats, or boats at sea;—and a Life Rope, for saving persons who may fall, or be washed overboard, which can be fitted up at one shilling and sixpence.

The Commander in Chief has, in consequence of witnessing them, honoured me with his opinion, which I herewith transmit a Copy of.

"SIR, "Medway, Spithead, 24th July 1813.

"I beg to inform you, that I highly approve of your method for enabling a person on a coast thinly inhabited, to communicate by portable means with a vessel stranded on a lee-shore; and I am of opinion, your method of using a life rope for the assistance of persons who may have fallen overboard is ingenious, and likely to be extremely useful in such cases; I also think your proposal for giving immergibility to any boat at a small expense, may be adopted with much good.

"The several Naval Officers with whom I have conversed on the subject, fully concur with me in these ideas.

"I am, &c.

"R. BICKERTON."

This testimonial was confirmed by numerous other persons, who further assured me they had seen many seamen to perish, who could certainly have been saved by these methods, particularly by the Life Rope, which from its extreme simplicity, and easy rate it could be provided for, acquired the highest applause.

The dangers of the Isle of Wight next engaged my attention; and immediately on my arrival there, intimated to Earl Spencer, then at Ryde with several other Noblemen, my intention to make experiments, and instruct the fishermen of that part of the coast; this step I beg to inform your Lordship, I invariably now take; for, from experience I find, when rank and fortune take an interest in any benevolent act, the lower orders of people at once become actuated by the most lively feelings of humanity. Having procured the most intelligent persons (conversant with the coast) I proceeded to the dangers of the Island, exploring in a boat the Bambridge Reef, which is a flat range running far into the sea, and on which the Henry Addington East Indiaman, was lost; an accident I am at a loss to account for, as there are not any tides setting on them, nor could I learn there was bad at the time; had the LEAD been going, a service invariably to be attended to when navigating the Channel, the accident could not have happened; neither at this place nor at Boncar (where the Pembroke man of war went on shore last winter, as I learnt it was in still weather) would it be necessary to place apparatus. At St. Lawrence the tales of melancholy shipwreck began to be recorded; and the numerous histories of woe attending many, makes it proper a Mortar should be there placed. A most favourable place for it would be, by gaining the permission of the Honourable Charles Pelham, for it to be lodged at a little fort belonging to him, called St. Lawrence Battery, it being conveniently situated to be moved to the East or Westward, to any vessel that may be stranded in the vicinity of that parish.

ST. CATHARINE'S POINT.—Many distressing cases of Shipwreck were related to have happened close to that place, and where innumerable persons had perished, particularly the crews of foreign vessels previous to the present war; it is therefore to be hoped, that when the blessings of peace again take place, they will have to hail with gratitude, in common with our own countrymen, the benevolence instituted by a generous nation; with this view, I humbly submit that a heavy and a light Mortar be there placed for the different casualty of accident that may occur; arrangements for this recommendation having been made with Patrick Kirkpatrick, Esq. who will place them with his tenant Mr. Hayne. With these Mortars, every species of apparatus necessary for the bringing people on shore should be left. The dangers of this place being reputed to have been greatly increased by a most rapid tide running past its point, called Rocken Race, induced me to pay much attention to it; it would alarm a stranger, but to persons conversant with it, there is no apprehension; but for the information of others unacquainted with its effects, I find no peculiar circumstances as to settings, or influence in drawing vessels in.

Chale Bay being so notorious for distress and destruction, a mortar of large calibre should be placed at Athenfield; a smaller would likewise be advisable, to meet any case of distress that might occur of less difficulty, and where promptness might be of so much importance. The means of getting a boat for a beach by two anchors laid out, should be here provided. Thomas Grimes, Esq. has kindly undertaken the care of the apparatus; and I cannot deny myself this opportunity of stating the uncommon readiness every gentleman and person I conferred with on the subject, expressed to promote by their personal exertions, producing horses when required, and every requisite in the moment of distress, to assist the cause of humanity. The dangers of this place having exhibited so many scenes of destruction, induced me to pay particular attention, in order to ascertain their causes, and found them to proceed from a strong current setting in at half ebb, by which, when the wind is inevitable destruction must ensue, as they cannot weather the points of Chale Bay upon either tack; it would therefore be extremely advisable and importantly beneficial to navigation, if a heavy gun was placed here, to be fired during fogs or thick weather, at certain periods, say EXACTLY every ten minutes; there are near this spot, small unoccupied barracks, and guns not far distant, which might easily be moved and placed for that purpose.

The dangers of Brook requires being provided with a mortar, and Thomas Howe, Esq. not only offered the care of it, but every assistance, when required; but as there are small occupied barracks near Freshwater, it is unnecessary to trespass on that gentleman's liberality, but that the mortar and ammunition be left in charge of the troops there stationed. Rope-ladders should likewise be there for giving assistance, in cases where vessels are driven under the lofty chalky cliffs of Freshwater Bay. A mortar, &c. with rope ladders, should be left at the light-house at the Needles Point; indeed, was it an appendage to every light-house it would be advisable, as the forlorn navigator would know at night, certain places where the implements of preservation were deposited, which would animate his mind, support his hope, and prevent his yielding to a premature fate, which I have often beheld to be the case of many sufferers, who have instantly given themselves up from despair.

The light-houses on and near the Island, appear fully to answer the purposes of their design, nor did I hear one circumstance of complaint, either from want of regularity in lighting, or clearness of light while burning. On my leaving the Isle of Wight, it was particularly suggested to me, that much national good would result, if the Royal George could be removed, she being sunk in the best anchorage of Spithead, and my opinion was requested on the practicability; having procured the ablest assistance, a most accurate survey was made, and the Report of it transmitted to the Commander in Chief, in the following letter:

Portsmouth, August 3d 1813.

SIR,

I beg you will do me the honour to inform my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that on my return from selecting places at the back of the Isle of Wight, for establishing the System to save Shipwrecked Persons, I was particularly urged to visit the spot where the Royal George was sunk, at Spithead, to ascertain the practicability of her removal, from the dangers and injuries represented it gave to the roadsted. This I have been enabled to do, from the extreme stillness of the weather, with the greatest accuracy; and to discover the difficulties that would attend such an undertaking. A considerable bank of soil I found sloping from her sides, and nearly one-third of her original height embedded in the soil surrounding her, which is of a peculiar adhesive quality, the suction of which, and the accumulated weight she is loaded with, may fairly be estimated at 15 or 16 times greater than her original weight. The length of time this ship has lain in the water, all the floating properties of the wood must be totally destroyed, and consequently be much decayed; a confirmation of which I have seen, by a piece broken from her.

These considerations have induced me to be of opinion, that her being bodily raised or removed is utterly impossible, as no part can be sufficiently strong to bear the purchases that necessarily would be required; her upper works might be separated by a powerful mechanical application, but it appears to me, that would only tend to encrease the evils of her present situation.

The only method to effect a dislodgement, would be by a powerful concussion of gunpowder, which would be desirable, if extreme fine weather succeeded the explosion, to fish up the separated parts with tongs, &c. but if rough weather occurred, those separated parts might be liable to be driven about the anchorage, and thereby multiply the injuries to the Roadsted of Spithead.

I have considered it right to make this statement for their Lordships information, and to say I shall most readily obey any wish their Lordships may have on the subject, or in any way within the scope of my scanty knowledge.

I am, &c.

To Admiral Sir Rich. Bickerton,
Commander-in-Chief, Portsmouth.

(Signed) GEO. W. MANBY.

Anxious to leave no circumstance unattended to that promised to be useful, and desirous to promulgate the methods of saving human life, which had met with the Country's countenance, I addressed a letter to the Admiralty, on the 3d of August, stating to their Lordships my readiness to instruct the young gentlemen of the Naval College at Portsmouth, in the different methods of saving shipwrecked persons, and practically to explain, both mechanically and mathematically, the various useful purposes to which the service might be extended, and so intimately connected with a profession for which they are designed. On their Lordships declining the offer, I left Portsmouth, and had the honour of submitting to the Right Honourable George Rose, the arrangements I had made, and nature of service, with my proceedings on the coast of his county; whose approbation I consider peculiarly flattering to me, and particularly by his sanctioning the following Address:—

"To the Nobility, Clergy, and Gentlemen of Hampshire.

"THE coast of your county has been lately surveyed by me, for the purpose of establishing a System for saving the Lives of Shipwrecked Seamen on the dangerous parts of it.

I cannot, however, feel satisfied that my duty is fully discharged without submitting to your attention the distresses Shipwrecked Persons are often subject to after their being brought on shore; worn out with bodily fatigue and mental agitation; frequently with limbs benumbed and swollen with wet and cold; and destitute of cloaths, except those on their back, drenched and dripping; and without money to procure those necessaries and comforts which cold, hunger, and nakedness claim, distant too from their family and friends.

I am therefore induced to recommend to your consideration, to provide an alleviation of the hardships that this valuable order of men are exposed to, which might be obtained at an easy rate; with this view I earnestly exhort you to encourage and to promote the success of a Plan for the attainment of this important object, of contributing to the necessary comfort of Seamen, after their lives have been preserved, by providing a moderate Fund for the purchase of such CLOATHING and Articles as may in different cases be required for that purpose, and for assisting the Seamen to get to their HOMES.

The patronage of so charitable an institution would, I am persuaded, be attended with the happiest effects, and would hold forth an example worthy the imitation of other maritime counties, already so nobly adopted by the Magistrates of NORFOLK; and further, it would induce those who could not contribute in a pecuniary manner, to be foremost in distinguishing themselves by their personal exertions.

If this suggestion should be adopted, the Plan would most effectually be carried into execution by Subscriptions being received at Chichester for the Eastern District of your County; in the Isle of Wight (most exposed of any part to Shipwreck) for the Central District; and Christchurch for the Western District: At each of which depôts might be provided with a small assortment of Cloaths and Necessaries, to be replenished from time to time, as may become necessary.

GEORGE WM. MANBY."

Cuffnells, Aug. 12th 1813.

A mortar and set of apparatus should be at Christchurch, for the protection of the dangerous Head near that place.

HAVING now the honour of submitting to your Lordship's notice, a regular detail of my proceedings, in which I beg to assure you, I have laboured with the extremest diligence, to prove myself a zealous servant to the Public, by omitting nothing that could have their furtherance in view; nor in the task spared any expense in productions for their general benefit; or shrunk from any exertions of body or mind to accomplish what I was led to conceive would be so much their wishes. Permit me, however, to inform your Lordship, I should not have here stopped, had not my health been so seriously impaired by fatigue, and which from the heavy expense of medical advice in the attainment of its re-establishment, so deeply touching my resources, I will not to conceal from your Lordship my incompetency to proceed for the present, without your assistance, by such Allowance as you may think proper my labours deserve. I am aware, that I can make no claim for the service now transmitted to you, from not being so fortunate to acquire your Lordship's sanction to those pressing applications I made for it; but I trust, and anxiously hope, those feelings which are known to actuate your Lordship's mind, will, on an attentive perusal of the Report now before you, induce you to consider the earnest solicitude (respecting the dangers of the Isle of Wight) were not without serious cause; and that the calamities which have been so heavy on that coast, will be lessened by my attention to it.

I cannot omit offering to your Lordship's notice, that it has been the pride as well as the labour of my life, for several years, in devoting the most assiduous attention to a study, I am persuaded, ages to come will derive infinite advantage; and allow me to assure your Lordship, had I the means to complete this work of humanity, most cheerfully would I apply them gratuitously to that object, from the conviction of the beneficial tendency it will have to my Country, and to Mankind in general.

In the earnest hope your Lordship will enable me to proceed, without loss of time, to the coasts of Dorsetshire and Cornwall, to fulfil the applications which have been so urgently made for my attendance,

I have the honour to be, &c.

SIR, Whitehall, 21st September 1813.

I AM directed by Lord Sidmouth to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant, containing an account of certain proceedings which you have been carrying on upon the coast of the Isle of Wight; and also the Copy of a Correspondence which has passed between Sir Richard Bickerton and yourself; and of an Address to the Nobility, Clergy, and Gentlemen of Hampshire, which you state to have been sanctioned by the Right Honourable George Rose.

Having stated your incompetency to proceed without his Lordship's assistance, by such allowance as he may think your labours deserve; you conclude your letter by expressing an earnest hope, that his Lordship will enable you to proceed without loss of time, to the coasts of Dorsetshire and Cornwall. This point is under his Lordship's consideration, with the result of which you shall not fail to be made acquainted.

I am, however, desired to observe, that the labours in which you have been lately engaged, as mentioned in your letter of the 12th instant, having been undertaken by you without Lord Sidmouth's previous sanction (which you have been frequently informed it would be necessary for you to receive), and without having given his Lordship any notice of your intentions, he cannot enter into any examination of the merits of such labours, with a view to making any special pecuniary allowance for them.

I am, &c. &c. &c.

SIR, Whitehall, 24th September 1813.

I AM directed by Lord Sidmouth to acquaint you, that on considering your proposal to proceed to the coasts of Dorsetshire and Cornwall, with a view to the objects stated in your Letter of the 12th instant, he is of opinion, that it is not expedient to accede to it.

The Agreement entered into with you on the 5th October 1811, will expire the 5th of October next; before which time it is not to be supposed that the Survey of those Coasts could be completed, even if it should be deemed advisable to undertake it, after the communications which must necessarily precede it, had taken place between this office and yourself.
