RAMAYANA

TRANSLATES INTO ENGLISH PROSE FROM THE ORIGINAL SANSKRIT OF VALMIKI.

YUDDHA KĀNDAM.

edited and purised by Manmatha nath dutt, m. a.

Rector, Keshub Academy.

printæð by Girish Chandra Chackravarti, Deva Press, 65/2. Bradon Street, CALCUTTA.

1893.

YUDDHAKANDAM.

SECTION I.

HEARING the words of Hanuman rehearsed properly, Rāma, exceedingly delighted, said,—"By Hanuman hath been performed a very great deed, rare on earth, and one incapable of being even conceived by any other in the world. Save Garuda and the Wind-god, and save also Hanuman. him find I not who crosseth the wide ocean. Entering by main force the city of Lanka, incapable of being subjugated by the gods and Danavas and Yakshas, the andharbas, serpents or Rakhas, and well protected by Ravana,-who, living, cometh out (of it)? And who that is not the compeer of Hanuman in strength and prowess, even entereth into (Lanka), hard to subdue, and carefully guarded by the Rakehasas? And having so put forth his strength commensurate with his prowess, Hanuman hath also performed a great act befitting a servant on behalf of Sugriva.* That servant who, being en'rusted with a hard task,-after liaving accomplished it, doeth another work in pursuance of (the prescribed business), is the best of men. That servant is middling, who, deputed to any task,† doth not, albeit capable, perform any other work which may be dear to the king. And that servant who, entrusted with any work of the king, doth not, although competent, heedfully accomplish the same, hath been called the worst. Anent the order (which he had received), Hanuman hath done the work (and more). He hath not been humbled, -- and, further, he hath pleased Sugriva. And by seeing Vaidehi, (Hanuman) hath, while reaping righteousness, saved me, the Raghu race, and the highly powerful Lakshmana. And this paineth my mind sore, that I cannot do a like benefit, returning this dear office of his. Embrace expresseth the all (of the Deity),† and, finding this occasion, I extend my embrace unto the high-souled Hanuman." Having said this, Rama, with his down standing on end in joy, embraced the self-controlled Hanuman, who was present after having finished his speech. Then reflecting for a while, the best of the Raghus again spoke in the presence of Sugriva, lord of monkeys,-"Complete success hath been attained anent the search of Sita. But when I think of the ocean, my mind is again sunk in dejection. How can the assembled mankeys go over to the southern shore of the vasty deep, difficult to cross? This tidings thou hast related unto me touching Vadehi: but what are the monkeys to do next about crossing the sea?" Having said this unto Hanuman, that slaver of foes, the mighty-armed Rama, agitated by anxiety, was then plunged in thought.

^{*} Having seen Sitá-which was all that he had been commissioned to do by Sugriva, Hanuman has destroyed Rakshasas and burnt Lanka; and this he did of himself like a good servent.—T.

[†] i. a. performing the entrusted work.—T.

^{*} By the Rdkshasas .- T.

[†] The commentator explains this obscure passage after his own orthodox fashion. The gist is this. Delight is the essence of the Deity, and all His incernations body forth this. Embrace is typical of this emotion.—T.

SECTION II.

THEN the graceful Sugriva spake words capable of soothing sorrow, unto Daçaratha's son, Rama, who was wrought up with grief,-"Why, O hero, dost thou grieve, like one that is base? Let not this be so. Chase away thy grief, even as an ingrate resigneth amity. Nor, O Raghava, when the who eabouts of Sita hath been discovered, and when too the abode itself of the foe halls been known, do I perceive the reason of thy sorrow. Thou, O Raghava, art intelligent, conversant with learning, wise, and judicious. Do thou cast tway this sorry way of thinking, even as a self-controlled (ascetic) casteth away any course of thought interfering with the attainment of his purpose. Crossing over the ocean warming'with gigantic alligators, we shall enter Lanka andlay thy enemy. Of a person that is dispirited and poor in pluck and that hath his soul overwhelmed with grief, every interest droopeth, and he cometh by misfortunes (one after . nother). All these heroes, these leaders of monkey-hordes, who are ardent for thy welfare, are competent to enter into fire itself. From their cheerful attitude I know this, and firm is my faith. It behoveth thee so to arrange things that, slaving the foe, Ravana of impious acts, we may bring hither Sita be pur own prowess. Do thou, O Raghava, so order matters that a bridge may be constructed (over the main), and that we may behold the palace of the Rakshasa monarch. We having seen the city of Lanka, established on the summit of Trikuta do thou for certain conclude Ravana as slain in battle immediately after (we see her). Without throwing a bridge over the ocean—the dread abode of Varuna—even the Asuras and celestials with Indra (at their head) are unequal to subduing Lanks. When the bridge over the ocean hath been constructed up to near Lanka, and when my forces have crossed (over the sea), consider victory as secured. As these monkeys are heroic in fight, and able to wear forms at will, O king, do not let thy intellect get stupified and thus mar all interests. In this world, sorrow berefts people of their prowess. Do thou do even what should be done by a man-summon thy manliness; for what an actor doeth promptly, conduceth to his success. At this time, O eminently wise one, do thou realise goodness through thy energy.* Of heroic, high-souled, men like thyself, on their sustaining an entire or a partial loss, grief undoeth every interest. Therefore, the foremost of intelligent persons, and conversant with every lore, thou shouldst along with councilors like me, strive to beat thy foe. Find I none in the three worlds. O Rāghava, who can stay in fight before thee equipped with thy bow. Thy business entrusted to these monkeys shall not (anyway) suffer. And soon, crossing over the boundless main, thou shalt behold Sita. Therefore, O king, renounce thy sorrow, and call up wrath. Those Kshatriyas that conceive no anger in respect of their enemies, have their activity annulled; and all fear furious persons. Drawing nigh unto us, do thou, gifted with acute intelligence, cast about for crossing over the dreadful deep-lord of streams-along with us. On these forces getting beyond the ocean, do thou take it for certain that we have won; and when my whole. host hath reached the further shore, do thou indubitably conclude that we have obtained victory. These monkeys, heroic and capable of assuming in fight forms at will, shall slaughter those foes by showering rocks and trees. If I see any means of crossing the ocean, Varuna's abode, I shall, O destroyer of foes, deem him as slain in battle. And what is the use of dilating? Every way thou shalt prove victorious. And I see omens, and my mind is filled with delight."

^{*} i.e. all understand this rather obscure passage, prove thou good through; thy vigor-secure victory to the cause of goodness through thy might,-T

SECTION III.

HEARING Sugriva's speech, reasonable and fraught with igh sense, Kākutstha accorded his assent to it and spoke unto Hanuman, saying,-"By asceticism, or constructing a a bridge, or drying up the ocean,-competent every way am I for crossing over this ocean. Of impracticable places, tell how many there are in (Lanka), which are incapable of ing come at. O monkey, as thou hast seen personally, ish to get acquainted with all this. And thou hast at thy ore duly noticed in Lanka the number of the army, inaccessibility (or otherwise) of the gates, the defence Lanka, and the dwellings of the Rakshasas. Do thou 'ifully relate this unto me, for thou art observant." aring Rama's speech, Hanuman, offspring of the Windi, foremost of those conversant with speech, again spake o Rāma,—"Hearken! I will describe unto thee by what thod is the city of Lanka guarded and protected by the ishasas, how loyal the Rakshasas are, the surpassing sperity of Lanka, the dreadfulness of the deep, the sions of the forces, and the number of the elephants, horses, s, etc.," Having said this, that best of monkeys, knowing nature of things, went on,-"Lanka, filled with mad phants, ever rejoiceth. She is great, thronging with cars inhabited by Räkshasas. Her doors are firmly established furnished with massy bolts. And she hath four wide i giant gates. (At those gates) are powerful and large s, stones, and engines, whereby a hostile host approaching, opposed. At the entrances are arrayed and set in order bands of heroic Rākshasas, hundreds of dreadful sharp iron 'aghnis.* She hath a mighty impassable golden wall,

^{*} A kind of fire-arms, or ancient Hindu rocket, or a stone set round with p iron spikes.—According to Ramanuya, a sort of mace about two yards in ith, with spikes.—T.

having its side emblazoned in the centre with costly stones, coral, lapises and pearls. Round about is a most, exceedingly dreadful, with cool water, eminently grand, fathomiess, containing ferocious aquatic animals, and inhabited by fishes. At the gates are four broad bridges, furnished with machines and many rows of grand structures. On the approach of hostile forces, their attack is repulsed by these machines, and they are thrown into the ditch. One among these bridges is immovable, strong and fast established; adorned with golden pillars and daises. O Rāma, albeit Rāvana hungereth for fight, v is he calm; and he is vigilant and ever engaged in super tending his army. And dreadful and resembling a celest citadel, Lanka cannot be ascended by means of any suppo-She hath fortresses composed of streams, those of hills, a artificial ones of four kinds. And, O Raghava, she situated on the other shore of the ocean having its limits away. And way there is none even for barks,-and all sid are destitute of division. And that citadel is built on t mountain's brow; and, resembling the metropolis of the i mortals, the exceedingly invincible Lanka is filled w horses and elephants. And a most and sataghnis and variengines adorn the city of Lanka, belonging to the wich Ravana. And an ayuta of Rakshasas, dart-handed, hard subdue,-and all fighting at the front with their swords protect the Eastern gate. And a nivuta of Rakshasas with fourfold force, and with the flower of the soldiery-prot the Southern gate. And a prayuta of Rakshasas, beari swords and shields, and skilled in all arms, protect Western gate. And an arvuda of Rakhas protect Northern gate. And car-warriors and horsemen-personal honored and sprung from noble lines-by hundreds a thousands,-and irrepressible goblins and kotis of Rakshas protect the garrison. I have broken down the bridges a filled up the entrenchment. I have burnt the city of Lan and laid the wall low. Let us by any way whatever cre over Varuna's abode. Do thou take it for certain that the city of Lanka is subdued by the monkeys. What is the use of thy reckoning the rest? Angada, Dwivida, Mainda, Jāmbavān, Panasa, Nala, and the general, Nila, bounding and reaching Rāvana's abode, and riving the same consisting of woods and hills, moat and gateway, walls and dwellings, shall, O Rāghava, bring (hither) Sitā. If this be so,* do thou order the entire body of the army to be brought; and do thou set out at the proper hour."

SECTION IV.

HEARING Hanuman's speech duly from the beging, the exceedingly energetic Rama having truth for his wess, said,—"What thou sayest—'I shall speedily destroy city of this dreadful Raksha,'—is true, I tell thee refore, at this very moment arrange for Sugriva's march. Sun hath attained his meridian at this proper moment, able of conferring victory.† Let Ravana carry away Sita his own country),—whither shall Ravana, living, repair? e a dying person who hath taken a death-dispelling g and drunk ambrosia, Sita, hearing of my preparations war, shall inspire hope of life. To-day the Northern Iguni (is in the ascendant), and to-morrow the moon the in conjunction with Hasta. O Sugriva, shall we set

Ebam djadpaya: R4manuja reads sense into this passage. If thou wishest rincipal monkeys to go, bring them; if thou wish the whole kost to march, it hither, and march, at the auspicious moment.—T.

The moment is named abhijit .- T.

Hasta sprung from Punarvasu is the star of doom, portending death to ma. The Northern Phalguni is Sita's natal star. The expedition beguring the influence of this star, augura deliverance to Vaidehi.—T.

out, surrounded by the entire host? The omens I witness, augur, that, baving slain Ravana, I shall bring back Janaki. The upper lid of my eye throbbeth; and it betokeneth that my desire hath indeed been had." Then, honored by the monkey-king as well as Lakshmana, the righteous Rama, understanding the import of things, again said,-- "Surrounded by hundreds and thousands of fast-speeding monkeys, let Nila go ahead of this force, for surveying the route. Nila, do thou, O general, expeditiously take the army by a path furnished with fruits and roots, having cool waters of the woods, and replenished with honey. The wicked Rakshasas vitiate* fruits, roots and water along the w Thou, ever on the alert, shouldst preserve these from Rakshas. And, bounding down into hollow places, mounta fastnesses, and woods, let the rangers of the wilds, spy posted detachments of the enemy. Let those that are competent, stay here. This business is dreadful, and should apply our best strength in conducting the sa Therefore let the foremost monkeys gifted with prodigi prowess lead forth the choice portion of the army, number hundreds and thousands. And let Gaja resembling a and the exceedingly powerful Gavaya, and that monl Gavaksha, master of the leaping ones,† like a haughty ! among kine, go in the van of the monkey-host. And that foremost of morkeys, Rishava, go, protecting the ri wing (of the army); and let Gandha, irrisistible an elephant with the fragrant temporal juice trickling do and the vehement Gandhamadana, go,1 protecting the wing (of the monkey-army). And, cheering the arm myself, mounted on Hanuman, like the Lord (mounted) Airāvata, shall march in the midst of the forces. And i

^{*} By means of poison, etc .- T.

[†] i.e. monkeys,-T.

[†] The verb is singular, instead of dual, as also the qualifying ep. Parça madishthita. But the sense is clear.—T.

the lord of wealth and master of riches, mounted on Sarvabhauma, let Lakshmana resembling the Destroyer, march forth, mounted on Angada. And let that king of bears, the long-armed Jambavan, Sushena, and the monkey, Vegadarci, protect the rear (of the forces)," Hearing Raghava's words, that foremost of monkeys and lord of the army, the exceedingly energetic Sugriva, issued his orders. And anon those highly powerful monkeys issuing up from caves and mountain-summits, began to bound (on all sides). Thereafter, honored by the king of monkeys and also Lakshmana, the righteous Rama, accompanied by his forces. set out in a southerly direction. And he marched, surrounded bar hundreds and thousands, Kotis and Ayutas of monkeys ressembling elephants. And he marching was followed by, the mighty host of monkeys; and all those maintained by Sugriva were filled with joy and betrayed demonstrations of delight. And bounding by way of guarding the flanks of the forces, and leaping in front of the army for pioneering. blustering, emitting leonine roars, and uttering cries, the monkeys made towards the south. And some partook of perfumed honey and fruits, and some bore mighty trees, holding the sprouts. And some in pride (of strength) suddenly raised others and threw them down. And some fell and were anon up, and some brought others down. 'We shall slay Ravana, as also all the rangers of the night': thus did the monkeys roar out in the presence of Raghava. Before (the army), Rhrishabha, the heroic Nila, and Kumuda. along with many monkeys, went on clearing the route. In the middle were king Sugriva, Rama and Lakshamana, environed by innumerable powerful and terrible monkeys. And the heroic monkey, Satavali, surrounded by ten Kotis (of troops), alege on all sides protected that monkey host. And accompanied by an hundred Kotis, Kesari, Panasa, Gaja" and Arka, by means of many protected that host on every side. And taking Sugriva before them, Sushena, and Jambavan, surrounded by innumerable bears, protected the rear (of the army.) And that foremost of rangers possessed of excellence, and of restrained senses, the heroic Nila, general (of the army), kept going round the ranks. And Valimukha, and Prajangha, Jambha and the monkey Rabhasa, went everywhere, urging on the monkeys. While thus marching, breathing pride of strength, those tiger-like monkeys saw that foremost of mountains Sahya crowned hundreds of trees, and watery expanses laughing with flowers, and beautiful tanks. And knowing the order of Rama of dreadful wrate, that terrible and mighty host, exceedingly terrific and resembling the bosom of the dee p. cowed down through fear, leaving behind cities and villag es and provinces, went like the deep-sounding sea. And _at the side of Daçaratha's son those heroic monkeys resembling. elephants, proceeded by bounds, like noble horses, spurged on. And those foremost of men, mounted on the montaine looked beautiful like the Sun and the Moon half eclipted by the two mighty planets, vis., Kāhu and Ketu. And (thus) did the righteous Rama proceed towards the South, accompanied by his army. Then Lakshmana, furnished with consummate sense and promptitude, who was mounted on Augada, spoke unto Rāma, inviting words, fraught with import. "Speedily recovering Vaidehi, who hath been carried away. and slaying Ravana, thou wilt, thy end attained, return to Ayodhyā, who shall also have her desire. O Rāghava, I see all the great auspicious omens on carth and in the sky, signifying success unto thee. Mildly and grateful doth the blessed breeze blow behind the army, inspiring measure, And the birds and beasts are crying in sonorous voices. And all the points (of the compass) appears pleasant; and the lord of day is cloudless. Bhrigu's son, Ucanas, also weareth for thee an auspicious aspect, and Dhruva is without blemish. And all the rishis, pure and furnished with histig.

^{*} Some other than the first-mentioned Gaja .- T.

go round Dhruba. And before us shineth the grandfather of the high-souled Ikshwakus; the spotless Rajarshi Triçanku, with his priest.-And stainless and free from disturbances appeareth Visākhā. This is the racial star of us. the high-souled Ikshwakus. And Nairita, the radical star of the Nairitas, is sore afflicted and, touched by the rod-heating Dhumketu is in trouble. All this is for the destruction of the Rakshasas. At the fated time, those that are in the clutches of Doath, have their stars afflicted by the planets. And the water is dear and tastes sweet; and the woods are stocked with fruit. And the odorous gale doth not blow strongly; and the trees are furnished with all blossoms of of the soason. And, O lord, this host of monkeys appeareth splendid to the height, as did the celestial host on the occasion of the destruction of Taraka. Seeing all this, thou shouldst, O noble one, feel delighted." Having thus consoled his brother, Sumitra's son, feeling enlivened. said this. The monkey-host went on, covering the earth. And the mighty dust raised by bears, monkeys, and tigers, having for their weapons nails and teeth,-with the foreparts of their feet and hands, enveloped the world. and the splendour of the sun was obscured. And as clouds envelope the sky, the mighty monkey-host went on, covering up the Southern quarter with its mountains, woods, and sky. And as they marched covering many a vovana, the streams seemed as if they flowed in an opposite direction.* And they, while proceeding, took rest by pools of clear water, on mountains covered" with trees, on plains and in forests teeming with fruits. Some moving straight, some moving askance, and some moving on the earth, that enormous ^{*} Kataka remarks:—"As when clouds drift past, the Moon it is that seems to soud accross the sky, as the monkey-army marched on, the rivers seemed to flow in an opposite direction". Ramanuya says that the waters of the seems dashed by the monkeys, held an opposite course. The former inter-testation is hardly satisfactory, and Ramanuya seems to be right.—T.

monkey-host went on covering the entire earth. And they were all of delighted countenances and gifted with the velocity of the wind. And these monkeys devoted all their energy to the accomplishment of Raghava's work. And they were displaying unto each other their joy, prowess and energy. And influenced with the vanity of youth they set up diverse cries. Some proceeded with speed, some leaped, some set up cries expressing joy, some were uplifting their tails, and some were striking the ground with their feet. Some, stretching forth their arms, were breaking the hills, and others the trees. And others were ascending the tops of the hills. Some began to make terrible sounds, and others made a tingling noise. And many others blasted the creepers with the velocity of their thighs. And some were engaged in sporting with trees and rocks. And thus was the earth enveloped with millions and kotis of fearful monkeys. And thus the enormous monkey host went on day and night. And all those monkeys, delighted, guided by Sugriva, and taking delight in battle, went on speedily. And they did not take test even for a moment, desirous of rescuing Sita. Thereupon, getting at the mount Sahya covered with various trees and forests, those monkeys ascended it. And Rama went on beholding the variegated forest, rivers and fountains of the mount Sahya and Malaya. And those monkeys broke down various trees-Champakas, Tilakas, mangos, Prasekas, Sindubarakas, Tiniças and Karaviras, Asokas, Karanjas, Plakshas, Nyagrodhas, Jambukas and Amalakas. And seated on picturesque rocks, various forest trees, shaken by the wind, showered flowers on them. And there blew in those forests filled with the smell of honey, a wind of pleasant touch, cool as the Moon, accompanied by the hummings of the bees. And that mount was richly embellished with diverse metals. And dust issuing from these metals and thickened by the air, enveloped on all sides the huge monkey-host. There blossomed in that picturesque mountain vale Ketakas, Sindubaras, beautiful Vasantees. Madhabis, Gandhapurnas, Kandas, Chiravilyas, Mahikas, Vanjulas, Vakulas, Ranjakas, Tilakas. Nagas, Chutas, Patalikas, Kobidaras, Muchlindas, Arjunas, Singsapas, Kutajas, Pintalas, Tiniças, Churnkas, Neepakas, Neela-Sokas, Saralas, Ankolas and lotuses. And all these trees were greatly disturbed by those monkeys, delighted with their view. There were in that mountain many a picturesque lake and pond filled with Chakravakas and Karandavas, ducks. Chraunchas and the mount abounded on all sides with boars. deer, and terrible bears, lions and tigers and various other fearful animals, and it was beautified with full blown lotuses. lilies, Utpalas and various other fragrant trees growing in the water. And various birds set up their musical choir on the summit of that mount. And bathing and drinking, these monkeys sported in the water. And ascending the mount these monkeys continually bounded. And excited with drink, they crumbled into pieces the ambrosia-smelling fruits, roots and flowers of the trees. And those monkeys yellow as honey, delighted, feasted on mangoes, long and measuring a drona. Breaking down the trees, blasting the creepers, bounding from one tree to another and making the mount Sahva echo, those leading monkeys went on delighted and excited with drink. Some ascending the trees, and others drinking, the whole earth was enveloped with those monkeys, and seemed as if beautified with ripe paddy crops. And reaching the mount Mahendra, the large-armed Rama, having eyes like lotuses, ascended the summit adorned with diverse trees. And getting at the top, Daçaratha's son espied the vast deep filled with tortoises and fishes. Thereupon, passing by the mounts Sahya and Malaya and arranging their enormous host, they* by and by reached the roaring deep. And descending therefrom, Rama, the foremost of those who minister happiness unto all, accompanied by Lakshmana and

Sugriva, entered the forest situate on the banks of the ocean. And reaching the expansive banks having rocks thereon and continually washed by the rising billows, Rama spoke saying,-"O Sugriva we have arrived at the abode of Varuna. Now hath arisen in my mind what I had not thought of before. And this ocean, the lord of the streams, whose other side is not seen cannot be crossed over without some excellent measure. Let the monkey-host be encamped here therefore, and then concert a plan by means of which they might get at the other side. And reaching the shores of the ocean, the large-armed Rama, stricken with grief for Sita, ordered their encampment, saying,- 'O foremost of monkeys, do thou encamp thy host on the brink of the ocean. Now hath arrived the hour for counsel, when we should devise some plan for crossing over the main. I fear the Räkshasas at every step, for they are greatly illusion creating-let the leaders therefore go to their own hosts and let them not proceed anywhere else, renouncing them." Hearing the words of Rama, Sugriva along with Lakshmana, encamped the army on the brink of the ocean covered with trees. And stationed near the main the monkey-host in consequence of their resemblance in colour with the blue contents of the deep,looked like a second ocean. Thereupon, reaching the shore, those leading monkeys engaged in concerting a plan to cross over the vasty deep. And the tumult, of that monkey-host encamped there, was heard above the roaring of the deep. And that huge army of the monkeys commanded by Sugriva, and set up in three divisions, were deeply concerned with the accomplishment of Rāma's work. And reaching the shore of the vasty deep, that monkey bost, delighted, beheld the ocean moved by the Wind. And they waited there beholding the deep of unimpeded expanse, having its distant shore inhabited by the demons, and thronged with various aquatic animals. While upheaving its foam on the approach of eve, it appeared laughing and setting up its surges, it appeared to dance. It increased with the rising of the Moon and he reflected himself on its breast. That abode of Varuna was infested with gigantic sharks, whales and Timingalas*, disturbed with the fury of the Wind, filled with serpents having flaming frames, and various aquatic animals and rocks, and was fathomless deep. It had picturesque fortresses on its marge and its other shore was hard to get at. And the Makarast and serpents living therein were moved by the Wind. waters, as if delighted, were rising and falling. And having serpents of flaming frames underneath, it appeared as if sprinkled with scintillations of fire. And that terrible abode of the demons extended down to the regions inhabited by the Nagas or serpents. The deep resembled the welkin and the welkin the deep, and there appeared no difference between them. The sky crested with stars and the deep filled with gems resembled each other. The sky enveloped with clouds and the ocean overflowing with surges presented no contrast whatsoever. The waves of the mighty deep beating at each other continually, set up a sound resembling that of a trumpet in the sky. It was filled with diverse gems and its water was poisoned by means of the air. It was filled with various aquatic animals, and upheaving its billows, it appeared as if excited with ire. And there beheld those high-souled monkeys the mighty main agitated by the Wind. and muttering as if with the upheaval of the waves. Thereupon, overwheimed wth surprise, those monkeys, stationed there, espied the main brimming with rolling waters and moving as if (off its place).

^{*} A large fabulous fish.-T.

[†] A marine monster confounded usually with the crocodile and shark,-T.

SECTION V.

 ${f T}$ HERE on the northern shore of the ocean the army was encamped and arranged in order by Nila. And the two leading monkeys Mainda and Divida patrolled about on all sides to protect the monkey host. And the army being encamped on the shore of the lord of streams and rivers. Rāma, beholding Lakshmana by his side, spoke, saving-"I know that grief abates as time passes by, but my sorrow arising from the separation of my spouse, is increasing day by day. I am not sorry that she hath been stealthily taken away by the demon-but my sorrow is that her end is drawing nigh. O Wind, do thou go there where my dear spouse is, and touching her person, do thou touch me, for I shall then he happy stationing my looks in the Moon and being touched by thee. Alas! my dear one cried 'O lord, O lord' when she was taken away. Those words, revolving burn me like poison. I am now being burnt down day and night by the fire of desire, having separation from her for its fuel and her thoughts for its flame. Leaving thee, O Son of Sumitra, I shall jump into the deep and then shall not this fire burn me any more. This is my only consolation, for which I draw my vital breath-that myself and she breathe on the same earth. Like unto a dry land drawing water from a watered ground. I do live, hearing that Janaki still survives. When shall I, discomfitting my enemies, behold Sita, having a beautiful waist and eyes resembling lotuspetals, as a victorious hero beholdeth the royal Grace. Like unto the sick drinking the elixir of life, when shall I, raising a little her lotus-like countenance having graceful teeth and lips, imprint kisses thereon? And when shall she, laughing, embrace me with her rising breast resembling the palm fruit? Alas that chaste dame having scarlet corners of the eye, being encircled by the demons, is wishing for a protector like unto one having no husband, albeit having a husband in me. How fareth in the midst of the she-demons, that daughter of the king Janaka, my beloved spouse, and the daughter-inlaw of king Daçaratha? And having those Rakshasas, hard to repress, slain by me, truly shall she appear like unto the rays of the Moon extricated from sable autumnal clouds. Sita is constitutionally slender, and forsooth, she has been greatly reduced by sorrow, fasting and calamities touching time and place. When shall I piercing with my shafts the breast of the lord of Rakshasas, renounce my mind's grief? And when shall my devoted Sita resembling the daughter of a celestial, fling herself anxiously around my neck and shed tears of joy? And when shall I renounce this my sorrow arising out of Maithili's separation, like unto one casting off his soiled clothes?" The highly intelligent Rama bewailing thus, the day passed away and the Sun, decreasing gradually, disappeared at last. And consoled by Lakshmana, Rāma, stricken with thought touching Sitā having eyes like lotus petals, engaged in rites relating to the worship of Eye.

BECTION VI:

BEHOLDING in Lankā that dreadful and awe-inspiring work performed by Hanuman like unto the high-souled Sakra, the lord of Rakshasas, looking down with shame, addressed them all, saying—"That monkey alone hath invaded and entered the city of Lankā hard to reach and hath espied Sitā, the daughter of king Janaka. He hath shattered the palace, and the alter of sacrifice, slain the leading Rakshasas, and, in short, agitated the whole city of Lanka. What shall I do now? And what should you all do on this occasion? It behoveth you all to give me such counsel as becometh me and will conduce to my glory." 'Victory is the ontcome of consultation'-this do the sages* say. Let us, therefore, O mighty ones, engage in counsel, relating to the measures we should adopt towards Rama. There are three orders of men on this earth-the superior the middling and the inferior. This distinction cannot be perceived without a knowledge of the signs, and so I shall relate unto you their merits and demerits. He is said to belong to the superior order, whose counsel contains the three signs (mentioned below), or who engages in works after consulting duly with friends capable or with persons having the same end in view, and some times with others, and who serveth Providence. He belongs to the middle order who consults his own self only, depends on the Providence, and engages alone in works. And he belongs to the inferior order who engageth in works without ascertaining their merits or demerits, disregarding the will of the Providence and saying, 'I will do this', and is inactive (at last). And counsels are also divided into three divisions like unto the three orders of men (mentioned). That counsel belongs to the superior order in which the counsellors with their judgment reinforced by a knowledge of political ethics, are unanimous. That one belongs to the middle order in which the counsellors after varied discussion, arrive at unanimity in the long run. And that one is the worst in which the counsellors differ from each other and agree a little in the long run, with no good result. You are all gifted with good intellects: do you all unanimously settle as to what becometh me and conduceth to my well-being. Environed by a thousand of patient monkeys, Rama, with a view to capture our city, is approaching towards Lanka. Forsooth, shall he cross over the main along with his younger brother and a mighty host. He can by his prowess dry up the ocean and do the other.* Rama approaching thus with a hostile intention along with the monkeys, it behoveth you to devise such means as might protect my city and army.

^{*} Manaswina, according to Ramanuya, means, hero.-T-

SECTION VII

Being thus accosted by their lord, the highly powerful Rakshasas, devoid of good sense and ignorant of sound counsel, replied with folded palms, saying,--"Thou hast, O king, enough of soldiers and weapons. Why art thou smitten with sorrow then ? Repairing to Bhagavati, thou didst discomfit the serpents in battle. The God of Death, living on mount Kailaça, encircled by Yakshas, was subjugated by thee in a great battle. And that mighty lord of men, proud of his friendship with Siva, was defeated by thee wrathfully in battle. Discomfitting and slaying the band of Yakshas, thou didst bring this flowery car from the mount Kailaca. O lord of Rakshasas, desiring thy friendship out of fear, Maya, the king of Danavas, offered thee his daughtert for thy spouse. O thou of mighty arms, thou didst bring under thy subjection the powerful and irrepressible Danaval for the pleasure of Kumbhinasi. And entering the region under the earth, thou didst defeat the serpents-and thus bring under thy subjection Vasuki, Takshaka, Sankha, and Jati. Those heroic Danavas, the Kalakeyas, were greatly powerful.

^{*} i. e. bridge over the ocean.-T.

[†] This refers to Mandodari, Rayana's favourite queen.-T.

¹ This refers to Madhu.-T.

[§] Ravana's sister, who was married 41 Madhu.-T.

irrepressible, and proud of the boons conferred on them. And fighting with them perpetually for a year, thou didst bring them under thy control, O lord, O slayer of foes, and learn from them the science of varied llusions, O king of the Rakshasas. O great hero, by thee were defeated in battle, the heroic and powerful sons of Varuna, followed by a fourfold division of their army. The dominion of Death is like the mighty main, having his rod for aquatic animals, agonies for the trees that cover its islands, the noose for the billows, his attendants for the serpents and his terrible fever for the dreadful attitude of the deep. And diving into this terrible deep, thou didst, O king, discomfit Death himself and win glorious victory. And every one was pleased there with thy successful fight. The Earth was filled with various heroic Kshetriyas, resembling Sakra in prowess as she is adorned now with various trees. Raghava is not their equal either in strength or prowess. And all those heroes, hard to repress in battle, were slain by thee, O king. Do thou wait here, O great king; thou needst not take any trouble. Indrajit alone shall slay all these monkeys. And this one, O mighty monarch, having celebrated the Mabeçwara* sacrifice, hath obtained a noble boon, rarely (attained by persons). Having agitated the ocean of celestial hosts, having darts and lances for its fishes, showering arms for its moss, elephants for its tortoises, steeds for its frogs, Rudra and Aditya for its ferocious animals, the Maruts and Vasus for its mighty serpents, cars, horses, and elephants for its volume of waters, and infantry for its spacious shore, this one (Indrajit), taking captive the lord of the celestials himself, had brought him into Lanka. Then, O king, liberated agreeably to the injunction of the Great-father, the slaver of Samvara and Vritra, worshipped of all the celestials, went (back) to heaven. Do thou, O great king, entrust Indrajit with this business,-until he bringeth to destruction the monkey-host along with Rama. O king, thou must not think that this calamity, coming from an ignoble person is not insignificant. Thou shalt slay Raghava."

^{*} Relating to Mahagwara-the great Lord, a designation of Siva .- T.

SECTION VIII.

THEN that heroic general, the Rakshasa named Prahasta, possessing the splendour of sable clouds, submitted with joined hands,-"I am competent to baffle in battle gods and Danavas and Gandharbas, ghosts, birds and serpents,-what then is a couple of human beings? Having been negligent and confident (in our power), we have all been deceived by Hanuman. But, I living, that ranger of woods shall not (again) go hence with his life. All the earth down to the ocean, containing hills, forcets and woods, shall be rendered free from monkeys. Do thou command me. And, O ranger of the night, I shall deliver (the Rakshasas) from the monkey; and thou shalt not have to suffer in the least in consequence of thy transgression."* Then the Rakshasa named Durmukha, growing enraged, said,-"This overpowering of all of us must not be forgiven-this flagrant discomfiture of the metropolis of the auspicious lord of the Rakshasas as well as of his inner appartment by the foremost of monkeys. This moment marching alone (from hence) will I exterminate the monkeys, even if they shall have entered the dreadful deep, or the sky, or the subterranean regions." Then the exceedingly powerful Vajradanshtra, weilding up a terrific bludgeon, stained with flesh and gore, wrathfully observed,--"Rama the irrepressible existing, and also Sugaiva with Lakshmana, what have we to do with the weak and wretched Hanuman? This very day, slaying single-handed Rama with Sugriva and with Lakshmana, with this bludgeon, shall I return, after having sorely troubled the monkey-host. And, O monarch, if thou art minded, hear this other word of mine! Verily he that is fertile in resources and ever ready, compasseth success. Let thousands of Rakshasas, heroic, terrible, fearful to behold, and wearing forms at will, appointed by the lord of Rakshasas, presenting themselves before Kakutstha in palpably human shapes, calmly say unto that foremost of the Raghus,-Despatched have we been by thy younger brother.' Hearing this, he (Rama), summoning his forces without delay, shall come hither. Then, equipped with darts, javelins and maces, and bearing bows, arrows and scimitars in our hands, we shall swiftly and summoning speed* set out (from hence); and stationing ourselves in the sky in bands, and slaughtering the monkey-army with mighty showers of rocks and weapons, we shall lead it to Death's door. Let us in this wise decoy Rama and Lakshmana; and if they fall into our design, they shall, without doubt, lose their lives." Then that Kumbhakarna's son, named Nikumbha, endowed exceeding prowess, in high wrath remarked unto Ravana, destroyer of worlds,-"Do ye, all of you, stay here along with the great king. I alone shall slay Raghava together with Lakshmana, and Sugriva with Hanuman, and all the monkeys." Then a Rakshasa, named Vajrahanu, resembling a hill, in wrath lapping the corners of his mouth with his tongue, said,-"Do ye, casting off anxiety, engage yourself as we list. I alone shall swallow up that entire monkey-host. Do ve, remaining at ease and without anxiety, drink Varunat wine. I single-handed shall slay Sugriva with Lakshmana, as well as Hanuman with Angada,-and all the monkeys.

^{*} i.e. the tavishment of Sita.-T.

Trearita-summoning speed-redundant.-T.

[†] Varana wine, otherwise named Varani is prepared from hog-weed, ground with the juice of the date or paken, and then distilled.—T.

SECTION IX.

THEN, in herce wrath seizing bludgeons, and patticas, lances and bearded darts and javelins, and axes, bows and excellent shafts and swords, resembling crystelline water, sprung up the Rakshasas, Rabhasa, and the Survyaçatru, and Saptaghna, and Yajnakopa, and Mahaparçwa and Mahodara, Agniketu the irrepressible, and the Rākshasa Raçmiketu, and the lusty Indraçatru, son unto Ravanaand Prahasta, Virupaksha, and the exceedingly strong Vajradanshtra,-and Dhumraksha, and Nikumbha, and the Raksha Durmukha. And, flaming in energy, they all addressed Rāvana, saying,--" l'o-day shall we slay Rāma, and Sugriva along with Lakshmana, and the helpless Hanuman, who hath damaged Lanka. Then, preventing them, who had (thus) equipped themselves with all kinds of weapons, and making them sit down, Vibhishana, with joined hands, again spoke unto them, saying,-"The wise have asserted that an appeal to prowess should be resorted to anent a business then only when the end sought cannot be attained through the three (other) means.* Prowess produceth fruit only in respect of well-advised action directed while carefully watching(enemies) that are negligent, or captive,† or under Divine affliction. But why do ye intend to discomfit (Rāma), who is vigilant, who desireth victory, who is strong in the Divine strength, who hath subdued passion, and who is hard to subdue? Who had in this world ever thought of or reasoned about Hanuman's career over the dreadful deep, the lord of streams and rivers? O rangers of the night, the strength and prowess (of the foe) being immeasurable, ye should by no means recklessly disregard him. And what was the wrong that formesly had been done by Rāma unto the king of the Rākshasas, that he hath carried off from Janasthana the spouse of that illustrious one? If Khara, who had trespassed into regions not his own, hath been slain in battle by Rama, surely a creature should to the best of his might preserve his life. It is for this great fear that exerciseth us on the score of Vaidehi owing its existence to this,* that she, having been ravished, should (now) be given up. What is the use of acting so that quarrel may be the consequence? And (Räma), possessed of prowess. yet ever abiding by morality, is incapable of initiating hostilities for no purpose. Therefore, do ye give him his Maithili. And before, he by means of his shafts riveth this city together with her elephants and steeds, overflowing with countless gems, do ye give him his Maithili. And before the dreadful, irrepressible and mighty monkey-host blocketh up this Lanka of ours, do ye give (back) Sita. This city of Lanka shall perish as also all the heroic Rakshasas, if thou dost not thyself make over Rāma's spouse unto him. I exert myself to pleasure thee, because of the fraternity (that subsisteth between us). Do what I say, I say what is truth and what also is for thy good. Do thou render (back) Rama's Maithili. Ere yet the king's son, for compassing thy destruction, showereth sure shafts resembling the rays of the autumnal Sun, having shining heads and feathered parts, and exceedingly hard, do thou render Maithili unto Dacarathi. Forsake thy wrath at once, which destroyeth happiness and virtue; and follow righteousness, which enhanceth enjoyment and fame. Be thou propitious, -so that we may live (at ease) along with our sons and relatives. Render (back) Maithili unto Daçaratha's son." heard Vibbishana's speech, Ravana-lord of Rakshasasleaving all of them, entered his own chamber.

[·] Vis., conciliation, gift, and creating division.-T.

[†] In the hands of other enemies .- T.

c* The feeling of revenge for the slaughter of Khara and the rest .- T.

SECTION X.

THEN early in the morning, like the fiery and refulgent sun entering a mighty mass of clouds, Vibhishana, fast to virtue and interest, heroic and possessed of exceeding splendour, playing a perilous part,* entered the apartment of his elder brother, resembling an assemblage of mountainsummits and elevated like the peak of a mountain, orderly, divided into spacious rooms,-the resort of the greatinhabited by august and intelligent persons attached (to Rāvana); guarded around by lusty Rākshasas in limited numbers; having the air agitated by the breath of mad elephants; with loud blares of conchs, and resounding with trumpets; embosoming numbers of beautiful damsels, with its high-ways (overflowing with talk); furnished with doors of polished gold; embellished with excellent ornaments; resembling the abode of the Gandharbas, or the mension of the Maruts; containing heaps of gems; like unto the dwelling of serpents. And that one of exceeding energy heard sacred and holy sounds uttered by Veda-versed Brahmanas celebrating the victory of his brother; and that highly powerful (hero) acquainted with Mautras and the Vedas saw Vipras worshipped with vessels of curds, clarified butter, flowers and fried paddy. And the mighty-armed (Vibhishana) saluted the younger brother of the bestower of riches,† seated there. And that one acquainted manners, after proper courtesy, sat him down on a seat decked in gold, which was pointed out (by a royal glance). And in retirement as also in presence only of his counsellors,

^{*} The project he had conceived, vis., converting Ravana to his own policy of pacification, was fraught with peril to himself, considering his brother's fierce temperament.—T.

[†] Kuvara.—Rávana was Kuvera's younger brother.—T

Vibhishana spoke unto the high souled Ravana words backed by reason, and greatly fraught with his welfare. having, with soothing speech, pacified his elder brother and extended towards him the due civilities, that one, who through height of sentiment had noted excellence and the want of it, addressed (Vibhishana) in words befitting the occasion and the place,-"Ever since, O subduer of enemies, Vaidehi hath come hither, are seen inauspicious omens. Fire, enveloped in smoke at the time of its being ignited, and thereafter throwing out scintillations, with its brightness obscured by vapour, doth not increase adequately even on oblations being poured into it with Mantras. Reptiles are discovered in kitchens, sacrificial fire-chambers, and the places of Vaidika recitations; and ants (are found) in clarified butter. The milk of the kine hath been dried up; and the nobler elephants are without the temporal juice. And horses, albiet they have feasted on fresh grass, neigh distressfully.* And asses, camels and mules, O king, with their hair standing erect, shed tears; and although they are ministered unto medically, they do not return to nature. And crows in numbers emit harsh cries on all sides, and are seen in swarms at the tops of edifices. Vultures sit sadly and distressed upon the roofs of houses. During the two twilights, the jackals, coming in sight, utter ominous howls. And wolves and other (ferocious) animals, as well as deer. approaching the gate of the palace in swarms, are heard to set up loud roars resembling the thunder. Things having come to this pass, even this expiding, I fancy, is capable of removing the evil omens. Do thou render back Vaidehi unto Răghava. If I have said this through ignorance or covetuousness, thou ought not, 'O mighty monarch, criminate me. All Rākshasas and Rākshasis, as well as those belonging to palace and the inner apartment-shall have to experience the evil consequence (of this act of thine). All the counsellors have refrained from tendering this counsel unto thee; but surely I must tell thee what I have seen or heard; and adopting proper measures, it behoveth thee to act so."* (Ravana's) brother, Bibhishana, thus spoke, unto his brother, the chief of Rakshas, in the midst of counsellors, these words fraught with his good. Hearing this beneficial, mild and prognant speech, fortified by reasons and capable of compassing (his welfare) for the present, past and the future, (Ravana) who had conceived a passion (for Sitā), getting into a rage, replied,-"Fear find I none whatever. Räghava never shall have Mithila's daughter. Even if Lakshmana's elder brother should be supported in battle by the celestials with Indra (at their head), how can he stay before me (in the field)?" Having said this, that destroyer of celestial hosts, the Ten-necked one, possessed of mighty strongth and of terrific prowess in battle, then dismissed his brother Vibhishana, who had spoken truth.

^{*} The commentator remarks, evidently with justice—"That is, the horses, having caten their fill, still hunger."—T.

SECTION XI.

THE unrighteous king, overmastered by his passion (for Sitā), in consequence of his sinful act as well as the loss of honor he sustained at the hands of his friends, became reduced. And the occasion for war was wanting. Rāvana, possessed by lust, and continually thinking of Vaidehi, conceived along with his counsellors that the time for entering into hostilities had arrived. And sallying forth, he ascended a mighty car furnished with golden network, adorned with pearls and coral, and yoked with trained steeds. And having ascended that excellent vechicle, having sounds resembling those of mighty clouds, that foremost of Rakshas, the Tennecked one, drove towards the court. And as he coursed on, Rakshasas, bearing swords and shields, and carrying all kinds of weapons, went before the lord of the Rakshasas. And (some of) these, wearing various frightful suits, and decked with diverse ornaments, went, surrounding his rear and flanks. And atirathas went with cars, and superb mad elephants, and sportive steeds; and bearing in their hands maces and bludgeons; and darts and clubs. And as Ravana marched towards the court, there arose the loud blares of a thousand trumpet, and the uproarious sounds of conchs. And that redoubtable and mighty car-warrior held his course, suddenly making sides resound, and beautifying the high ways. And the spotless white umbrella of the lord of Rakshasas, being raised up, looked beautiful like the Moon at her full. On his right and left graced two crystal white chowris furnished with threads of gold. And all those Rakshasas standing on the ground with joined hands, bowed down their heads to the foremost of Rakshasas who was scated Hymned by the Rakshasas with blessings of victory, that exceedingly energetic chastiser of enemies arrived at the court constructed (by Vicwakarma). that highly energetic one in person entered that court payed with silver and gold, having its heart decorated with crystal, and gracefully covered with silk, embreidered with gold: excellently constructed by Vicwakarma, and guarded by six hundred ghosts. And Ravana sat down on a superb and august seat consisting of lapises, furnished with a pillow; and covered with a soft dear-skin. And lord-like he commanded the envoys possessed of fleet vigor, saving,-"Do ye speedily summon hither the Rakshasas. I fancy some mighty effort hath to be put forth against our foes." Hearing his words, the envoys began to range Lanka; and going to every house, they fearlessly collected the Rakshasas from places of sport, bed-rooms, and gardens. Then some set out, mounting cars, and some mounting proud coursers, and some on foot. And like the welkin filled with fowls, the city thronged with approaching cars, elephants and steeds. And leaving their various vehicles and cars behind, they entered the court on foot, like lions entering mountain caverns. And taking the feet of the sovereign, and honored by him (in turn), they sat them down, some on raised seats, some on cushions of Kuça, and some on the floor. And presenting themselves agreeably to the command of the monarch, they sat them down each according to his position, before the lord of Rakshasas, Ravana. And there came also the learned and competent to arrive at infallible decisions, and they sat them down in order of morit. And there also came courtiers endowed with virtues, versed in every thing, and having intelligence for their eye-sight,-and innumerable heroes by hundreds also (arrived) at that court for ascertaining the course that would prove beneficial. And then mounting a large, noble and splendid car, having its parts decked with gold, and yoked with horses, the magnanimous and renowned Vibhishana went to the court of his elder brother. And that younger brother (of Ravana), announcing his name, bowed down at the feet of his elder brother. And Suka and Prahasta were employed in giving to each a separate seat belitting his rank. And from all sides in the court there began to spread the odour of excellent agura and sandal and wreaths belonging to the Rakshasas, decked in gold and various gems, and clad in costly attires. And no one among these present at court uttered any thing, or spoke any falsehood, or conversed in loud accents. completely attained their desire, all of fierce prowess, gazed at the face of their lord. And in the assembly of those intelligent, and exceedingly powerful persons, equipped with arms, the intelligent Ravana appeared splendid like the Vajra-handed Indra among the Vasus.

^{*} In accordance with my suggestion .- T.

SECTION XII.

THEN surveying that entire assembly, that conqueror in battle delivered himself unto Prabasta,-general of the forces, saying,-"O general, it behoveth thee so to order the disciplined fourfold forces that they may successfully protect the city." Thereat, Prabasta, carefully carrying out the royal behest, stationed all the forces within and without the city. And having posted the army for the defence of the city, Prahasta sitting down before the king, said,-"I have stationed the forces belonging to thee who art possessed of strength, inside as well as outside. (Now), without suffering thy mind to be agitated with anxiety, speedily do what is in thy heart. Hearing the speech of Prahasta seeking the welfare of the kingdom, Ravana craving for enjoyment, spoke in the midst of his aderents,-"When virtue, or happiness, or interest is in straits, it behoveth you to (know your course) in relation to pleasant and unpleasant, happiness and misery, profitable and unprofitable, and good and evil. No business of mine which ye have set about after taking counsel, hath ever miscarried. And like Vasava environed by the moon, stars and plannets, and the Maruts, I surrounded by you, have attained to plenitude of prosperity. I am, for certain, going to employ you all. In consequence of his sleep, I could not inform him of this matter. After having slept for six months that one of prodigious strength-foremost of those bearing arms-hath just risen. Janaka's daughter and Rama's beloved wife hath been brought hither from the forest of Dandaka, the region ranged by Rakshas. That indolent damsel wisheth not to ascend my bed; nor is there any in the three spheres, that to me is like unto Sits. She is slenderwaisted, and high-hipped, and her face is as the autumnal Moon resembling a golden image. She is meek and looketh like the hand work of Maya himself gifted with an infinite variety of fascinations. And beholding her dainty and tender feet with rosoate soles, and having coppery nails, my mind burneth (with desire). And seeing her resembling the flame of a sacrificial fire and the splendour of the Sun himself; and her fair face furnished with a prominent nose and elegant eyes, I, having lost control over self, have come under the away of desire. And my passion, uninfluenced by anger and joy, capable of producing pallor, and constantly causing anguish and sorrow, hath rendered me pale. Expecting her lord, Rāma, the beautiful one having expansive eyes, hath solicited for a year's space; and I have pledged my fair woods to her of graceful eyes. But tired am I on account of my passion,-like a horse spent on the way. How can the rangers of the woods, or the sons of Daçaratha cross over the sea ungovernable and swarming with countless creatures and fishes? On the other hand, a single month bath troubled us grievously. Hard it is therefore to understand the course of events. Do ye act, each as he thinks proper. And although no fear can come from mortals, yet ye should deliberate (as to what ye should do). Formerly I had gained victory with the help given by you; do ye in the same way stand by me now. The king's son, having learnt that Sita is on the other shore of the ocean, taking before them monkey headed by Sugriva, reached Varuna's abode. Do ye so counsel that Sita may be with-holden by me and the sons of Daçaratha may be slain; but ye must prefer certain counsel. No other† person in this world hath the power to cross the sea along with the monkeys,-victory, therefore, is undubitably mine." Hearing the sorrowful

^{*} This reminds one irrisistibly of Cleopatra's. The Bengali translators evidently failing to understand Mayaya Mayanirmita, have conveniently—trasferred the phrase in tact to their versions.—T.

[†] I fail to understand anyasya, "no other person";—nor does the commentator helps me anyway.—T.

speech of (Rāvana) afflicted with lust, Kumbhakarna grew enraged, and said,-"When just on seeing (Sim) of Rama along with Lakshmana, thou didst by main force carry her away, it plainly appeareth that thy mind, like the Yamuna filling her bed, bath been possessed (by her).* O great king all this (that thou hast done) is not worthy of thee. If thou hadst at the outset consulted us in this matter, we would have done what was proper. † O ten-faced one, the king, that arriving at certain conclusions, carrieth on his regal affairs agreeably to justice, hath not to repent afterwards. But those actions that are done without deliberation, like unto clarified butter poured in an impure sacrifice, conduceth only to harm. He doth not know what is proper and what not, that performs prior actions afterwards, and posterior actions first. Others spy holes in the actions of the volatile, the latter may be possessed of great power,-hke swans passing Krauncha through the hole. By luck it is that Rama hath not yet slain thee, who hath done this tremendous thing, without reflection, resembling food mixed with poison. But as thou hast entered upon a course of action which is improper even in repect of foes, I will, O sinless one, perform thy work by slaying thy enemies. And, O ranger of the night, I will exterminate thy foc. Even if Sakra and the sun, even if fire and the War-god, even if Kuvera and Varuna, should range themselves against me, I will fight them. Purandara himself shall be afflicted with fright when I having my body measuring a mountain, and furnished with sharp teeth, shall, setting up roars, fight with my huge-bludgeon. Before Rama shooteth a second shaft, to slay me, I shall drink his life-blood. Be thou comforted by slaying Daçaratha's son, I will exert to secure blessed victory for thee. Having t i. e. we would have prevented thee .- T.

^{*} This passage is very obscure, and the commentator's gloss does not at all servo,—T.

[‡] The hole made by the dart of Kumara.-T.

killed Rāma along with Lakshmana, I shall devour all the principal monkeys. Do thou make merry at thy will, drink the Varuni, and, with thy mind set at rest, conduct affairs fraught with thy welfare. On Rāma being despatched to the mansion of Yama, Sitā shall come under thy subjection for ever and a day."

SECTION XIII.

SEEING Ravana wrought up with wrath, the exceedingly strong Mahaparcwa, reflecting for a moment, observed with ioined hands, "The man that, entering the forest, abounding with deer and ferocious animals, doth not drink honey, maketh a fool of himself. O destroyer of foes, who is the lord of thee, that art lord thyself? Enjoy with Vaidchi. taking thy enemy by the hand. And, O thou endowed with prodigious power, do thou exerting thy might lead thy life, after the manner of hens, and invading Sita again and again, do thou enjoy her and derive pleasure (therefrom). And when thou hast attained thy purpose; what fear can succeed? Alike when on thy guard, and off it, thou shalt provide against all exigencies. Kumbhakarna along with us, as well the exceedingly powerful Indrajit, are competent to chastise the thunder-bearing (Deity) equipped with his thunder. Passing by gift, conciliation, and dissension, which have been assigned by the wise as the means of success, I relish the success in business which is attained through chastisement. O highly powerful one, we shall, without doubt, by the prowess of our arms, subduc all these enemies of thine that have come hither." Thus addressed by Mahāpārcwa, king Rāvana, honoring his speech, said,-"O Mahāpārcwa, I will relate unto thee, who hast spoken (thus), a secret matter relating to myself, which hefell me long since I saw Panjikasthala, like a flame in the sky, coursing to the Great-father's mansion. Her pace slackened, as soon as she saw me, (turn) I feasted on her and deprived her of her attire. Then she went to the Great-father's place. like a crumpled lotus. That high-souled one received information of all that I had done; and thereat, waxing enraged, the Deity spoke unto me,-"If from this day, thou ravish a female by force, thy head certainly shall be riven in an hundred pieces. It is for this, that with my mind afflicted with fear, I do not violently force, Videha's daughter Sita, anent lying with her fair self. My rush is like that of the sea, and my motion that of the wind. Dacaratha's son doth not know this, and therefore doth he approach sea. Who wisheth to address a lion that is lying asleep in a cave, resembling Death wrought up by wrath? Rama hath not seen shafts shot by me, resembling two-tongued serpents,--and therefore, it is that he approacheth me. Like a meteor burning an elephant, I shall, with shafts shot from bow in hundreds, resembling the thunder-bolt, consume Rama. And as at the proper hour the risen Sun defeateth the splendour of the stars, will I, surrounded by a mighty army, overpower his strength. Neither the thousand eyed Vasava, nor yet Varuna, is capable of fighting me. By the might of this arm did I formerly conquer this city, governed by Vaiçravana."

SECTION XIV.

HEARING the words of the lord of Rakshasas, as well as the thundering of Kumbhakarna, Vibhishana addressed the Rakshasa chief, in a pregnant speech, fraught with his welfare, -"Thou hast been bound about thy neck by the mighty and huge serpent, Sita, having her breast for its body anxiety for its venom, smile for its sharp fangs, and her five fingers for its hood. Therefore before the monkeys, resembling mountainpeaks, having teeth for their arms and nails for their weapons, -subjugate Lanka, do thou render Maithili unto Daçaratha's son. And before the shafts shot by Rama, resembling the thunder-bolt and having impetuosity of the wind, cut off the heads of the foremost of the Rākshasas, do thou render Mithila's daughter unto the son of Daçaratha. Kumbhakarna hor Indrajit, neither Mahaparçwa nor Mahodara, neither Nikumbha nor Kumbha nor yet Atikaya, O king, can stay in the field against Raghava. Living, thou, whether thou art protected by the Sun or the winds, or throwest thyself into the lap itself of Vasava, or enterest the sky or the nether spheres, shall not escape death." Hearing Vibhishana's words, Prahasta said,-"Fear know we none whatever from the celestials, or Danavas, or Yakshas, or Gandharbas, or huge snakes; fear know we none in battle with birds and serpents. How can fear at all afflict us proceeding from the king's son, Rama? Hearing Prahasta's speech, Vibhishana, seeking the welfare of the king, and having his intellect grounded in virtue, interest and profit, said words enfolding high sense,-"O Prahasta, like a sinful person being unable to ascend heaven, what the king, Mahodara, thou, and Kumbhakarna, are saying with reference to Rama, shall not prove true. As one without a raft cannot cross over the mighty main, how can I, or thou, or all the Rakshas combined, cause death unto Rama, who, O Prahasta, is vorsed in the sense of things. Even the gods become stolid before the sovereign of the Ikshwaku race, having righteousness for his principle quality, and being a mighty car-warrior and of such a character, and who is competent in action. As yet the Kanka-feathered, terrible and sharp shafts shot by Raghava, have not pierced into thy body; and therefore thou dost speak so. And, O Prahasta, as yet the sharpened shafts, capable of destroying life and having the impetuosity of the thunder-bolt, have not entered into thy body, and therefore thou dost speak thus, neither Ravana, nor the exceedingly powerful Tricirsha. Neither Kumbhakarna's son Nikumbha nor Indrajit, is capable of bearing in battle the son of Dacaratha, resembling Sakra himself. And neither Devantaka* nor Narantaka, neiti er Atikava, t nor the magnanimous Atiratha, nor the equally strong Akampana, is competent to stay Raghava in fight. And the king, naturally of fierce temper and thoughtless, through the instrumentality of ye who appearing to be his friends are in reality his foes, seeketh to destroy the Rakshasas. Do ye take out and deliver the monarch, who hath through force become subject to a dreadful and mighty, and thousand-headed serpent bursting with immeasurable prowess. As a person possessed by fearfully strong ghosts, is saved by his friends pulling him by his hair, attaining your desire we should. assembling together, rescue the king. This one is sunk in the Raghava sea having excellent waters. Do ye speedily coming together deliver him. He (the king) hath fallen into the Kakutstha nether regions, I tell thee my full mind,fraught with the welfare of this city together with the Rākshasas, as well of the king with his adherents. Do thou make over Maithili unto the son of the king. He is a true counsellor who adviseth his master, after duly ascertaining the strength, position, increase or destruction of the enemies as well as of their own party.

^{*} Lit .- destroyer of the Deity .- T.

[†] Lit .-- destroyer of men.-T.

[!] Lit -huge-bodied.-T.

BECTION XV.

HEARING carefully the words of Bibbisana, gifted with the intelligence of the lord of speech, the high-souled Indrajit, the leader of demons, spake, saying,-"Why art thou. O uncle, speaking these useless words like one terrified? He even, who is not born in this race, cannot speak or act in this wise. Only one man in this family, my uncle Bibhisana, is weak in energy, strength, prowess, patience, heroism and vigor. Why art thou O timid one, afraid of them since any one of these Rakshasas is capable of slaying those two princes, human beings as they are? The master of the three worlds, the lord of the celestials, has been brought down by me as captive on this earth. And all the celestials smitten with lear fled to different quarters. I brought down on earth the loud-roaring celestial elephant Airavata and uprooted by force its tusks. And all the celestials were terrified at this. Am I not, who have shattered the pride of the celestials, afflicted the leading Daityas. and am gifted with excellent prowess, capable of discomfitting these two princess-very ordinary mortals as they are?" Hearing the words of (Indrajit) gifted with high energy, irrepressible and resembling the lord of celestials, Bibhisana, the foremost of those using weapons, addressed him with words, fraught with high import,-"O my son, thou art a mere child and of unripe intellect and hence thou art not capable of ascertaining the propriety and impropriety of counsels. Thou art therefore speaking thus like a maniac for thy own destruction. Thou art known as a son unto Ravana, O Indrajit, but in sooth, thou art his foe in disguise, since knowing of his destruction from Raghava, thou dost not prevent him. Thou art brave, childish and hast been impelled by thy silly understanding. Thou shalt be slain along with him who hath brought thee in this counsel chamber. Thou art, O Indrajit, foolish, imprudent, devoid of humility of an irritable temper, of feeble sense, vicious-minded and of a silly understanding. And thou dost speak so, being impelled by childishness shall withstand in battle, the shafts, shot by Raghava, resembling the rod of Death, the stick of Brahman, flaming like the Fire of Dissolution. Do thou render back Sita. O king, unto Rama, with riches, jewels, excellent ornaments, clothes and jems and we shall then be able to live here void of grief."

SECTION XVI.

BIBHISHANA addressing him with these excellent and auspicious words, fraught with high sense, Ravana, impelled by Death, again spake in harsh accents.—"It is better to live with open enemies or enraged serpents than with those who pass for friends but are in reality foes. I know well the nature of kinsmen, in all the worlds, O Rakhasa,—one takes delight in another's misfortune. The kinsmen, O Rakshasa, generally disregard him who is their king,* protectet the kingdom, educated and pious—and they always try to discomfit him, if he be a heroe. These terrible enemies—the kinsmen, hypocrite as they are, always take delight in one another's calamity. Hear, I shall relate what the elephants, in yore, spoke beholding some persons with noose in hand-"We do not fear, fire, weapons, or even the terrible noose-we fear only the dreadful kinsmen, blinded with selfishness. They alone unfold the means of our detection-there is not the least doubt about it. Fear from kinsmen is therefore known as the worst of all fears. In kine there is milk, in kinsmen, there is fear, in women there is fickleness, and in Brahmanas, there is asceticism. It doth not please thee, I fancy, O gentle one, that I am honored of the three worlds, the lord of riches, and the subduer of my foes. As the drops of water do not last long on the leaves of lotuses, so is the friendship with unworthy persons. As the autumnal clouds, albeit muttering, do not pour forth water, so is the friendship with unworthy persons. As a bee flies away after sucking up the honey so is the friendship with unworthy persons. As a bee, after feeding upon the Kaça flowers, doth not get honey so is (fruitless) the friendship with unworthy persons. As an elephant, after being bathed, covers its body again with dust, taking it with its trunk, so is the friendship with unworthy persons.* Fie thee, O monkey, O thou that bringest disgrace on the family. Had any one else spoken thus he would have ceased to live by this time." Being thus accosted harshly, Bibhisana, speaking truth, rose up along with four Rakshasas having maces in their hands. "Thereupon, rising up in the welkin, the graceful brother Bibhisana, worked up with ire, addressed the lord of Rakshasas-Thou art mistaken, O king. Do thou speak what thou wishest-thou art my elder brother. adorable like unto father—thou dost not follow the track of virtue. I cannot tolerate the harsh accents of thine, my elder brother.-For thy welfare I spoke those well-meaning words, O Ten-necked one, but thou didst not pay heed to them being brought under the control of Death. O king, many are the persons who speak sweet words, but rare are they who can speak and hear unpalatable but well-meaning words. How can I disregard thy death like unto a burning house bound as thou art by the noose of Death, the destroyer of all creatures. I do not wish to behold thee slain by the well-sharpened shafts of Rāma, feathered in gold and resembling the flaming fire. Even the heroic and powerful persons, well versed in the use of weapons, wear away like sands in battle, being attracted by Death. Thou art worshipful unto me, do thou forgive me for what I have said for thy welfare. Do thou protect thyself and this city, abounding in Rākshasas. May good betide thee! I am going away and do thou be happy without me. What, I spoke unto thee, O ranger of the night, to prevent thee, for thy welfare, did not please thee. Persons, whose lease of life is well-nigh expired, do not pay heed to the well-meaning words of their friends."

^{*} On account of the priority of his birth-T.

^{*} They afterwards forsake their former friends,-T.

SECTION XVII.

Having addressed Rāvana with these harsh words, his younger brother, reached in no time, where Rāma along with Lakshmana was. The leading monkeys, stationed on earth, espied him on the welkin, resembling in size the summit of the mount Meru, and burning like lightning in the effulgence of his own person. And his four attendants of terrible prowess were adorned with excellent ornaments and armed with armours and maces. He was like unto a collection of clouds, powerful as the thunder-bolt, holding an excellent mace, heroic and embellished with excellent ornaments. And beholding him along with four counsellors, the highly intelligent Sugriva, the lord of monkeys, engaged in meditation along with them. And meditating for a while, he spoke unto the monkeys headed by Hanuman the following excellent words-"Behold, there comes a Rakshasa, armed with various weapons and followed by four demons to slav us and there is not the least doubt about it." And hearing the words of Sugriva, the excellent monkeys, taking up huge trees and crags, bespoke him,-"Do thou order us. O king, to destroy these vicious souled demons. shall crush them to death, limited as is the tenure of their life." They addressing each other in this wise, Bibhisana descended from the sky on the northern shore. beholding Sugriva and all others stationed near him, the highly intelligent Biblisana accosted them, at the highest pitch of his voice, saying, - "Liveth there the Rakshasa, Ravana, the lord of demons, and perpetrator of many iniquitous deeds. I am his younger brother known as Bibhisana. By him, slaying the vulture Yatayu, was carried away Sita from Janasthana. She is imprisoned, brought under his sway, poorly, and being well guarded by the Rakshasees. With various well meaning words and reasonings I pointed out unto him, the necessity of rendering back Sita unto Rama. And Ravana, possessed by Death, paid no heed to my wellmeaning words, like unto one, lying on the brink of death, neglecting the administration of medicine. Being reviled by him and treated harshly like a menial, I have come to seek Rāghava's shelter, renouncing my children and wives. Do ye soon mention unto the high-souled Raghava, the refuge of all creatures, that Bibhisana hath arrived." Hearing those words the quick-paced Sugriva, excited with ire, spake unto Rāma, before Lakshmana, saying,-"Forsooth bath an enemy entered secretly in our midst and he shall slay us getting an opportunity like unto an owl killing the crows. O slayer of foes, it now behoveth thee to be particularly careful about the counsels, arrangement of soldiers, polity-civil and military and spies of our own party as well as those of the entemies. These Rakshasas are heroic; they assume shapes at will, always lie in ambush and secretly bring about others' ruinwe should not therefore place confidence in them. This must be the emissary of Ravana-the lord of Rakshasas. Entering in our midst, he shall, in sooth, sow dissensions in our camp, or he shall slay us when we are careless, confiding in them. Avoiding the enemies, we should now collect the forest-rangers our friends and servants. O lord, this man is a Rakshasa by birth and the brother of our foe and so is he our enemy, how can we trust him? Ravana's younger brother, known as Bibhishana, hath come here with four Rakshasas, to seek thy shelter. O thou the foremost of forgiving persons, I consider this Bibbishana, who hath been despatched by Ravana, worthy of being slain. Being impelled by his wicked intention and commissioned by Ravana, this Rakshasa hath come here and secretly by virtue of his illustive powers he shall slay thee, O innocent one, when thou shalt place confidence in him." Having thus accosted Rama, skilled in the art of speech, that lord of the army, Sugriva, well versed in speech, became silent. And hearing the words of Sugriva, the mighty Rama spake unto the monkeys, near him, headed by Hanuman, saying,-"Ye have all heard, the words well grounded in reason, the lord of monkeys hath said, regarding Ravana's younger brother. It behoveth him, who desireth for perpetual wealth, and is intelligent and capable of giving sound counsels, to advise His friends in difficult matters." Being thus addressed by Rāma (to minister unto him best counsels) all those monkeys, intent upon encompassing his well-being, gave out their respective opinions. "O Rāghava, there is nothing beyond thy knowledge in the three worlds. It is only to show thy respect towards us, O Rama, that thou dost accost us in this wise. Thou art of truthful vows, heroic, pious, of firm prowess, discriminating, recollecting and having implicit confidence in thy friends. Let the intelligent and capable counsellors deliver their reasonable opinions unto thee," They speaking thus unto Raghava, the intelligent monkey Angada, spoke as follows for sounding the intention of Bibhishana, -"We should always suspect him since he has come from the side of our enemies, and should not, all on a sudden, place confidence in him. The wicked-minded always move about hiding their real self, and bring about peoples' calamity, taking advantage of their weak points. And great is the disaster thereof. It is always proper to engage in actions, considering what is right and what is wrong. Virtues should always be gathered and vices abondoned. Do thou renounce him unhesitatingly, if dost thou find in himra source of a great calamity and do thou embrace him if dost thou find him crowned with many virtues." Thereupon followed Sarava with words fraught with high import,-"O best of men, do thou speedily despatch emissaries to sound Bibhishana. If dost thou, sounding him well through the instrumentality of sharp spics, find him friendly, do thou win him over to thy side." Thereupon the wise Jambhaban. arriving at conclusions by virtue of his knowledge of Sastras. began with words, void of defects,-"Surely doth Bibhishana come from the vicious lord of Rākshasas, dead set against us and hath arrived at such a bad place and in such a bad hour. We should always fear him." And thereupon followed Mainda, conversant with what is right and wrong, after due deliberation, with words pregnant with reason,-"He is Ravana's younger brother, by name Bibhishana. Let the lord of men ask him every thing at first in sweet words. Do thou first ascertain, O foremost of men, with what intention he hath come-evil or good-and then settle what course to adopt." Thereupon spake Hanuman, the foremost of the counsellors and well versed in Sastras, in accents sweet, glorious and fraught with a high value,-"Even Vrihaspati, (the lord of speech) cannot excell thee, capable, gifted with the best of intellect and foremost of those skilled in the art of speech, as thou art. And what I know I speak, O king. I do so, in the interest of Rama's work and not impelled by my skill in the art of speech, by the pride of being a counsellor, by the vanity of being gifted with a high intellect or by the desire of speaking for its own sake. What thy counsellors have said for ascertaining the good or evil intention of Bibhishana appeareth to me as most defective and productive of no consequence whatever. It is impossible to sound him without any command.* And even to command him now for the same appears to me as improper. And as regards the despatch of spies, anent what thou hast been advised by thy ministers, I do not observe any utility. And what little I have thought of, I have something to say (regarding Jambaban's proposal) that Bibhishana hath arrived at such a bad place and in such an evil hour. He has really come to a very good place. and in a very good hour. And truly has he performed a becoming and sensible action by coming here after duly ascertaining that Ravana is a vicious wight and thou art a pious person-he is full of vices-thou art gifted with many virtueshe is tyrranical and thou art powerful. And what they have said, O king, as regards sounding him through secret spies, appears to me as one requiring great wisdom. An intelligent man, when questioned by any suddenly, suspects many things. And if the new-comer be a friend and has come here for his own happiness, how greatly shall his mind be changed by such a course? Besides by a sudden questioning it is impossible to ascertain the intention of a foreigner. Do thou therefore thyself accost him and determine, by his voice, his secret motive. I did not however mark anything of his wickedness while he spoke; rather I did observe signs of gladness on his countenance. So I do not suspect him. The wily can never come fearless and undisturbed. Nor were his words cunning. So I do not suspect him. It is not very easy to hide one's real nature. It manifests itself by force.

^{*} Capable to ascertain the truth of all Sastras,-T.

To command to relate for what he has come.-T.

So this action of Bibhishana is not out of place or season. When accomplished it shall redound to his own interest. Considering well thy preparations for war and Rāvana's vain conduct, hearing of Vali's destruction and Sugriva's installation on the throne, he hath, impelled by his good sense, come here, desirous of gaining the kingdom. Taking these into account, it seems prudent to take him to our side. O thou the foremost of the intelligent, I have spoken thus considering him sincere. It now behoveth thee to perform what thou thinkest proper."

SECTION XVIII.

HEARING those words of the Wind-god's son, the irrepressible Rāma, conversant with all the Sāstras, replied, with words expressing his own opinion-"I have also thought of some thing regarding Bibhishana. I wish you interested in my well-being, to hear that. (Bibhishana) hath come here as a friend so I cannot forsake him by any means. And even if he has come with any evil intent it is not culpable for the pious to afford him shelter." Thereupon hearing his words and considering them well, Sugriva, the lord of the monkeys, replied in more auspicious* words,-"Whether this ranger of the night is sincere or wicked, he should never be offered any shelter, since he hath forsaken his brother in the midst of these calamities. What reason is there to believe that he shall not renounce us in our difficulty?" Hearing the words of the lord of monkeys and casting his looks towards them, Kakutstha, having truth for his prowess, smiling a little, spake, unto Lakshmana, crowned with all the marks of piety, saying-"Without being conversant with Sastras, and living in the company of old men, none can speak such words as have been uttered by the king of the monkeys. There appear unto me, however two subtler reasons anent the difference between brothers. amongst the kings-one is evident and another mundane. There are two classes of foes-one consisting of the members of the same line the other of the neighbours. And these generally bring about our misfortune whenever any opportunity presents itself. And it is for this that he hath come here. Those kinsmen, who do not think of one another's mischief, generally long for their respective well-being. But even such well-meaning relatives are feared by the kings. And hear, I shall relate, what the Sastras say regarding the weak points thou hast mentioned as to the advisability of taking the enemies to our side. We are not his kinsmen and this Rakshasa hath come here with a view to gain the kingdom. Even the Rākshasas are wise enough to ascertain the proper course-so we must take Bibhishana. If the brothers are confident and satisfied with each other they generally live together, or else they fear each other and ultimately engage in a tumultuous war. And there hath sprung up some difference with Ravana and therefore Bibhishana hath come here. Nor are, O friend, all brothers tike Bharata, all sons like me unto their father, all friends like thee." Being thus addressed by Rama, the highly wise Sugriva, along with Lakshmana, rose up and bending low his head, said-"O thou the best of all forgiving persons, this night-ranger hath been despatched by Ravana. I therefore think it better to kill him. Being impelled by his vicious sense that Rakshasa hath come here to slay us, O innocent one, when myself, thou and Lakshmana shall consider ourselves secure. Therefore the large-armed Bibhisana, the younger brother, of the ruthless 'Ravana, deserves to be slain along' with his counsellors." Having thus addressed (Rama) the foremost of Raghu's race, skilled in art of speech, Sugriva, the lord of monkey host, equally versed in the art of speech, became silent. And hearing the words of Sugriva, and weighing them, Rama again addressed the foremost of monkeys with more reasonable accents-"Wicked or otherwise, whatever this night-ranger may be, he shall not be able to do me the least mischief. Pisāchas, Dānavas, Yakshas or all the Rakshasas on earth,-I can slay them all, if I like, with the tips of my fingers, O thou the lord of monkeys. I have heard of a pigeon adoring and entertaining with its own flesh, an enemy who took its shelter. While a pigeon received so friendly its enemy, the slaver of its mate, how can I then act otherwise, O foremost of the monkeys? Do thou hear, I shall relate, a sacred story, narrated by the great ascetic, the truthful Kandu, son of the ascetic Kanya. O slayer of foes, even a wicked-minded enemy, if he, with folded palms and a poor heart, craveth for thy shelter, should not be slain. If an enemy, proud or terrified, seeketh shelter in affright, he should be saved by a great man even at the risk of his own life. One, who from fear, ignorance or wilfully doth not protect him who seeketh his shelter, perpetrateth a mighty iniquity, blamed of all. When a person is slain before him whose shelter he hath taken he taketh away all the virtues of his protector. So great is the sin in not affording shelter unto those who seek for it; it standeth in the way of going to heaven, bringeth in calumny and destroyeth the strength and prowess. I shall therefore follow the excellent words of Kandu-leading to piety, fame and the attainment of the abode of the celestials. I always declare 'no fear' unto all creatures, whenever any, approaching me, says, 'I am thine' and seeketh my shelter. Even this is my pious observance. O Sugriva, O foremost of monkeys, do thou soon bring him here, whether he be Ravana or Bibhishana and I shall declare unto him 'no foar.' Hearing the words of Rama, Sugriva, the lords of those who go bounding, over-flowing with friendliness, bespake Kākutstha.—"What wonder is there that thou wouldst speak these auspicious words, O thou the foremost of kings, conversant with morality, gifted with prowess and ever treading the pious track as thou art. Truly doth my inner self regard Bibhisana as devoid of any wicked intention. He has been well sounded by signs and gestures. And let the greatly wise Bibhisana, O Rāghava, be placed on an equal footing with us and gain our friendship." Hearing the words of Sugriva, the lord of monkeys, the king of men (Rāma) made instantly friends with Bibhisana, like unto the conqueror of enemies' cities making friends with the king of birds.

SECTION XIX.

RAGHAVA thus declaring unto him 'no fear', Ravana's younger brother, the greatly wise Bibhisana, bending low his head, cast his looks on the earth. And descending from the welkin with his devoted attendants the virtuous-souled Bibhisana, delighted, bowed unto Rama. And thereupon touching his feet along with four Rakshasas, Bibhisana addressed Rāma,-with words, fraught with piety, befitting the occasion and conducing to pleasure. "I am Ravana's younger brother and have been greatly insulted by him. I have therefore come to seek thy shelter, the refuge of all creatures, abandoning Lanka and renouncing my friends and riches. My kingdom, life and happiness are all at thy disposal." Hearing his words Rama replied,-comforting bim with words and favouring him as if with looks. "Do thou relate unto me truly the strength and weakness of the enemics." Being thus accosted by Rama of unwearied actions, the Raksha, began to describe the strength of Ravana. "O prince, by virtue of the boon acquired from the Self-Create, the Ten-necked one is incapable of being slain by all creatures-Gandharbas, serpents, or birds. My elder brother-the one next to Ravana-is the heroic and highly effulgent Kumbhakarna-Sakra's equal in battle. Thou mayst have heard, O Rama, his commander is Prahasta, by whom was defeated Manibhadra on the mount Kailaca. (His son) Indrajit, equipped with invincible armour, bow and fingerprotector made of the skin of iguana, becomes invisible in fight. And, worshipping Fire and becoming invisible, that graceful hero, O Raghava, slayeth the enemies in conflict. having the contending parties vast and well arranged. Mahodara, Mahāpārçwa and the Rākshasa, Akampana, are his lieutenants, who equal the Lokapālas* in battle. His army consists of ten thousand kotis of Rākshasas, wearing shapes at will, inhabiting the city of Lanka, and living on flesh and gore. And with the Lokpalas and the celestials, they were all defeated by the vicious-souled Ravana." Hearing the words of Bibhisana and weighing them in his mind, that foremost of Raghu's race said-"I understand well the strength and prowess of Ravana, which thou hast depicted truly. O Bibhisana. Do thou hear truly that I shall slay the Ten-necked one together with Prahasta and his sons, and I shall make thee king. Whether he entereth the Rasatalat or the regions under the earth, or seeketh shelter of the Grand-lather of the celestials, he shall not be able to save his life from me. I do swear by my three brethern that I shall enter the city of Ayodhya, after slaying in battle Ravana with his sons, kinsmen and friends." Hearing these words of Rama of unwearied action, the virtuous-souled

^{*} Divinities who protect the regions, or the Sun, Moon, Fire, Wind, Indra, Yama, Varuoz and Kuvera.—T.

(Bibhisana), bowing his head unto him, began-"I shall lend thee my might in slaving the Rakshasas and devastating the city of Lanks, and shall be in the midst of Ravana's army." Thereupon, embracing Bibhisana, who spoke thus, Rāma, delighted, said unto Lakshmana,-"O my brother, do thou bring water from the ocean. Sprinkling the greatly wise Bibhisana, I shall make him at once the king of the Rakshasas. O conferer of honor: for I am greatly pleased with him." Being thus addressed, Saumitri, at the command of the king, annointed Biblisana and made him the king of the Rakshasas ir the presence of the monkeybost. Beholding Rāma's kindness (towards Bibbisana), the monkeys eulogized the high-souled one, exclaiming "Excel-Excellent!" Thereupon, Hanuman and Sugriva addressed Bibbisana, saying, "Do thou tell us how we shall cross over the main-the abode of Varuna, along with the host of the highly powerful monkeys. Do thou inform us of the means by which we may cross over, along with our army, the lord of rivers and streams-the abode of Varuna." Being thus addressed, the virtuous-souled Bibbisana replied, -"It behoveth the king, Raghava, to seek refuge from the Ocean. This measureless deep was dug out by (the king) Sagara.* And the great Ocean shall surely help Rama belonging to Sagara's race." Being thus accosted by the wise Rākshasa, Bibbishana Sugriva reached where Rāma with Lakshmana was. Thereupon, the broad-necked Sugriva began to explain the well-meaning words of Biblishana. requesting Rama to seek the shelter of the Ocean. And those words pleased Rama, plous by nature. And the highly effulgent (hero) requested, smiling, the active Lakshmana and the monkey-chief Sugriva to collect necessaries for his adoration. "O Lakshmana, this counsel of Bibhisana approaceth to me as most sound. Sugriva is always greatly wise, and thou art greatly proficient in counsel. Do ye, holding a conference, intimate to me what you think becoming." Thus addressed, those two heroes—Lakshmana and Sugriva, spoke respectfully the following words fraught with propriety,—"Why shall not the well-meaning words of Bibhisana expressed now, please us, O Rāghava, O thou best of men? Without constructing a bridge over the deep, the terrible abode of Varuna, even the celestials and their lord (Indra) cannot get at the city of Lankā. Do thou act on the genuine counsel of the heroic Bibhisana, and without losing time, do thou engage the Ocean for this work, so that we may with our army proceed to the city of Rāvana." Being thus addressed Rāma reached the shore of the lord of tivers and streams, covered with Kuça, like unto fire getting into the sacrificial dais THEREUPON the greatly powerful Rākshasa, by name Sārdula, beheld the army of Sugriva arranged on the shore of the ocean. And, beholding the army all busy, the emissary of the vicious-souled Rākshasa—Rāvana, entered the city of Lankā and, approaching his lord, said,—"The army of monkeys and bears hath approached Lankā. It is immeasurably deep as the ocean. And those two sons of the king Daçaratha—the brothers Rāma and Lakshmana, gifted with great beauty, coming to rescue Sitā, have stationed themselves on the shore of the ocean, O thou of great effulgence. The army of Rāma extends over the sky and ten yayanat. I have come, O great king, to acquaint thee with the static truth. And, knowing everything, it behoveth thy emissaries, O king, to settle whether to render back Sita, to adopt measures of conciliation, or to sow dissensions in the enemy's camp." Hearing the words of Sardula, Ravana, the lord of Rakshasas, being anxious to ascertain his duty, addressed a Rākshasa by name Suka, the most sensible of his counsellors, with the following pregnant words, - Do thou go and communicate unto king Sugriva my behest, in becoming and excellent accents. 'Thou art born of a great family and art the mighty son of the king of bears. I have no dissension with thee. In fact I consider thee as my brother, O king of monkeys. Though I have stolen the spouse of the high-souled prince (Rāma), yet what is that to thee, O Sugriva? Do thou return to Kishkindha. The monkeys shall not by any means be able to attack the city of Lanka. Even the celestrals and Gandharbas could notwhat of these men and monkeys?" And being thus commissioned by the lord of Rakshasas, that night-ranger assumed the shape of a bird and, bounding, speedily reached the sky. And, proceeding far over the deep and stationing himself at the welkin, he spoke unto Sugriva all the words with which be was addressed by the vicious-souled Ravana. Hearing him speak thus, the monkeys leaped up quickly and reached there with a view to chop off his wings or to slay him with their clenched fists. On being seized vehemently by all, these monkeys, that night-ranger was brought down speedily from the sky to the earth. And being assailed by the monkeys, Suka said,--"O Kākutstha, it doth not behove (people) to slay an emissary. Do thou therefore prevent the monkeys. He who passing by his master's behest, giveth out his own intention. is not faithful; and he therefore deserveth to be slain." Hearing the piteous accents of Suka, Rama spake unto the monkeys, who were about to kill him, saying, "Do not kill him." And again stationing himself on the welkin, that night-ranger said,-"O Sugriva, O thou gifted with/great energy, O thou of great prowess, what shall I speak unto Ravana, dreaded by all people?" Being thus addressed, that mighty king of monkeys, the bull among them, of unwearied energy, spake unto that emissary—the night-ranger. Suka, saving-"O Ravana, thou art not my friend or an object of pity. Thou art not my benefactor, nor art liked by me. Thou art Rama's enemy, and thou dost therefore deserve to be slain by him like Vali along with thy friends and relatives. I shall therefore slay thee, O king of night-rangers, together with they sons, friends and relatives. And I shall have the whole city of Lanka reduced to ashes by my mighty force. Thou shalt not he able to escape Rāghava, O Rāvana, O thou who hast lost thy sense, even if thou art protected by the celestials. And thou shalt with thy brother be slain by Rama, even if thou dost fly into the sky, enter into the regions under the earth, or seek shelter of Mahadeva. I do not behold any in these three worlds-Pisācha, Rākshasa, Gandharba, or Asura. who can protect thee. Thou hast slain the monarch of vultures, who had grown decrepit through age. * Thou hast carried off the large-eyed Sita from the vicinity of Rama and the neighbourhood of Lakshmana; but, having captured her, thou understandest not (thy native strength). Nor dost thou understand that foremost of Raghus, high-souled, possessed of great strength, and incapable of being repressed even by the celestials,-who shall take thy life." Then spake that best of monkeys, Angada, son of Vali,-"O highly wise one. this is no emissary. This one clearly appeareth to me as a spy. He bath come to form an estimate of thy entire army. Take him. Let him not go (back) to Lanka. This is indeed what I would." Thereat, commanded by the king, the monkeys, springing up, seized (Suka) and bound him, as he burst out bewaiting like one forlorn. On being sorely handled by the

^{*} Sagara was a sovereign of Ayodhya belonging to the same lamily with Rame.—T.

SECTION XX

The commentator has a queer and characteristic note on farteriddhyderright through age. One that is old, may stone off decreptude through some drug, while a youthful person may come by the same in consequence of some entire.—T.

relentless monkeys, Suka cried unto the high-souled Rāma, son of Daçaratha,—"They by main force sever my wings, and they pierce my eyes. If I lose my life, may all the evil deeds that I have committed between the night when I was born and the night when I shall die, be thine!" Hearing this pitiful cry, Rāma prevented (the monkeys); and he said, unto them,—"Let go this envoy, who bath come here."

SECTION XXI.

THEN on the shore of the sea, Raghava, spreading darbha, with his hands joined towards the great deep, laid him down, with his face to the East. And that slaver of foes (lay down), making his pillow his arm resembling the shining form of a serpent; always dight with golden ornaments; full many a time pressed with the palms of beauteous damsels,* decked with jewelled golden Keyuras and superb ornaments studded with pearls; smeared from above with sandal and aguru, (his arm) which formerly had been graced in bed with the head of Sita; like unto the body of Takshaka under the waters of the Ginga; resembling a yoke; in battle increasing the sorrow of foes and enhancing for long the delight of friends;-his left arm having its skin destroyed by the strokes of the bow-string; which was the refuge of the entire earth; -his right arm resembling a mighty bludgeon,-the donor of thousands of kine,-making this great arm his pillow (he laid him down). "To-day either I shall die, or shall the Ocean."-Having thus formed his

The commentator appropriately remarks: As Rama was wedded to a single wife, these damsels must mean nurses attending on him.—T resolution in respect of the great deep, Rama, restraining his speech, with a concentrated mind lay down there agreeably to rule. And as Rāma slept on the earth on Kuça spread over, without ever swerving from the rule, three nights passed away. And while spending three nights, Rāma, learned in polity and attached to virtue, prayed unto that lord of streams-the Ocean. Yet the wicked Ocean, albeit adored according to his descris by Rama with his mind concentrated, did not show himself. Thereat Rāma grew enraged and had the corners of his eyes crimsoned; and he spake unto Lakshmana of auspicious marks, saying,-"Behold the bauteur of the Ocean in not presenting himself before me. Calmness, for bearance, candour, and soft speechthese virtues of the good are by the insolent taken for the effects of incompetency. The person* that is self-landatory, wicked, and badly-bold, publisheth his own praise, and meteth out chastisement everywhere, t is honored in the world. By moderation one cannot attain relebrity, by moderation one cannot attain fame, -and, O Lakshmana, in this world by moderation one cannot attain victory on 'the edge of battle.'$ See, O Sumitra's son, the abode of Makaras, with his waters obstructed all around with Makaras destroyed by my shafts. And, O Lakshmana, see the bodies here of serpents, and the huge bodies of mighty fishes, and the trunks of elephants,torn by my arrows. And to-day in terrible battle will I dry up the Ocean with conchs and oysters, and fishes and Makaras. This abode of Makaras taketh me, who is forbearing, to be incompetent. Fie on forbearance towards such as he! lq consequence of my moderation, Ocean showeth not his own form. 'O Saumitri, bring thou my bow, my arrows resembling venomous snakes. I will dry up the Ocean, and the monkeys shall go over on foot. And, being angered, to-day, albeit incapable of being agitated, will I agitate the deep. And by means of my shafts will I make Varuna's abode, surging with a thousand billows and having his dignity maintained by his shores,-overleap his continents. And I will agitate the deep harbouring numbers of mighty Dānavas." Having spoken thus, Rāma, equipped with his bow, with his eyes dilated in wrath, became exceedingly irrepressible, like unto the flaming fire at the final dissolution. And straining his dreadful bow, making the earth shake, tremulously, he let fly fierce shafts like him of an hundred sacrifices hurling his thunder-bolt. Thereat, flaming up, those vehement choice shafts surcharged with energy, enter into the waters of the sea, with its serpents afflicted with fear. And then great and exceedingly dreadful was the motion of the sea, with fishes and Makaras, and with the roar of the winds (blowing there). And on a sudden the mighty deep was heaving with mighty surges, with conchs scattered about, and a smoke (enveloped) the ocean; and the billows became visible on all sides. And the serpents were distressed, with their faces flaming and their eyes aglow; as well as the Danavas of terrific energy, and the dwellers of the nether spheres. And billows of the sovran Ocean, resembling Vindbya or Mandara, containing crocodiles and Makaras, sprang up by thousands. And Varuna's abode had its surges whirling, its serpents and Rākshasas seized with affright, and its ferocious aquatic animals borne all around; and it sent forth sounds. Then Sumitra's son, springing up, said unto Raghava of fiery vehemence, as he sighed and kept stretching his matchless bow .- "This must not be." And he took away his (Rama's) how. "Without doing this unto the Ocean, thou, supreme of beroes, mayst bave thy work accomplished. Personages like thee do not come under the influence of passion. Do thou deliberately look about for some worthy means (for compassing thy end.)" Then remaining invisible in the sky, Brahmarshis and Surarshis,* exclaiming,—"Well-a-day!" and "Do'nt," in loud accents ejaculated,—(Oh I and alas!)

^{*} The word, however, is naram (ac.), man.-T.

[†] i. e. indiscriminately .- T.

Rain' muridhani, ... The perilous edge of battle when it raged."

SECTION XXII

THEN the foremost of Raghus addressed Ocean in stern words, saying, - "To-day will I dry up the Ocean along with the nether regions. And, O Ocean, thy waters being burnt up by my shafts, and thou being dired up, with thy (aquatic) animals slaughtered, a mighty volume of dust shall arise (from thy bed). And, O Ocean, in consequence of the arrowy shower discharged from my how, the monkeys shall go over to the further shore on foot. Having attained dimensions in consequence of access of waters, thou knowest not my mahliness or my prowess But, O abode of Danavas, grief shalt thou reap at my hands." Then fixing an arrow resembling'the rod of Brahma with a Brahma Mantra, on the best of bows, that exceedingly strong on drew it. And as Raghava suddenly stretched his bow, heaven and earth seemed to be riven, and the mountains trembled. And darkness covered the world, and the cardinal points became invisible. And at once the watery expanses and rivers were agitated. And the stars appeared simultaneously with the Sun and Moon.† And the sky was illumined with the rays of the Sun, and yet it was overspread with darkness; and it burned with an bundred meteors. And thunder-bolts sending forth sounds surpassing all others, dropped from the firmament. And the winds began to blow violently; breaking down trees and momentarily scattering clouds; damaging mountain-tops and shattering summits. And then the dread and mighty thunders possessing impetuous speed and emitting tremendous roars,coming together, produced lightning flashes. And those creatures that could be seen, uttered sounds resembling the thunder; and those that were invisible gave forth frightful cries. And overwhelmed with fright, and quaking (for fear), the creatures began to measure their lengths,-and they were sore afficted, and bereft of motion through terror. And then the mighty deep with its animals, and with its waters and waves, and with its serpents and Rakshasas, was suddenly wrought up with a violent motion. And albeit it was not the occasion of the universal dissolution, the Ocean passed beyond his shores for a full hundred yoyanas. And seeing the elated Ocean-lord of streams and rivers-thus overpass his bounds, that destroyer of enemies, Raghu's son, Rama, was not moved.* Then from forth the mid-sea arose Ocean himself, even as the maker of day riseth from the mighty ascending-hill, Meru. And accompanied by Pannagast of flaming faces, the Ocean showed hinself, appearing like cool lapises, adorned with golden ornaments,-wearing a wreath of gems and a jewelled vesture, with his eyes resembling lotus-leaves, bearing on his head a noble garland containing all flowers; decked with ornaments of polished gold; as well with excellent ornaments of gems originating in himself, like the mountain Himavan embellished with metals (sprung in himself), -(the Ocean arose) with wave on wave whirling around, and rife with winds blowing among clouds,-surrounded by streams, Ganga, Sindhu (and others). And approaching the arrow-showering Rama, and greeting him fair, Ocean spoke unto him with joined hands,-"O Raghava, earth, air, ^{*} Natichakrama may also mean, (Rama) did not discharge any more arrows.-T.

^{*} Celestial saints.

[†] The phenomenon, remarks the commentator, was owing to the 'heavenly hodies chatruoting each other's orbit.—T.

[†] Semi-divine serpents,-T.

sky, water and light,-these, O mild one, retaining their eternal course, maintain their (respective) natures. Mine also is that nature whereby I am fathomless and incapable of being crossed. The reverse of this is the having a bottom. And for this reason I speak to thee (concerning the means). O king's son, not from desire, or covetuousness, or fear, or anger, can I anywise deprive my waters abounding in alligators of their (perpetual) motion. I will tell thee how thou wilt pass (over me); and I will bear it. And no ferocious aquatic animals shall do wrong so long as thy forces have not crossed. And, O Rāma, I will make as it were firm land for the crossing over of the monkeys." Then Rama said .- "O Varuna's abode, listen to me! This arrow (of mine) must accomplish the end (intended). Where shall I let it light?" Hearing Rama's speech, and looking at the mighty arrow, that exceedingly energetic one, the great Deep. addressed Raghava, saying,-"There is a certain spot of mine in the North, which is more sacred (than the rest). It is famed as Drumakulya, even as thou art famed in the world. There are there many robbers of ferocious forms and actions. -wicked wights, headed by cow-herds, -who drink of my water. These persons of unrighteous acts touch me, and I cannot bear this sin. O Rama, do thou at that place render this best of arrows successful." Hearing the words of the high-souled Ocean, (Rāma) immediately after,* let fly that flaming shaft. And the place where the arrow resembling the thunder-bolt and vajra in splendour, alighted, bath been celebrated on earth as Marukantara. And burt with the dart, the Earth emitted roars; and in consequence of this, water began to gush out at the mouth of the wound from the subterranean regions. And this then became well-known as Vrana; and there are seen the waters of the Ocean spring up. And there arose a terrific report of riving. And owing to this," as well as the incident of the arrow, the water that existed in the tanks, was dried up. Having dried up Marukantara famous throughout the three regions, as well as the reservoirs of water, Rama the son of Daçaratha, learned and of god-like prowess, conferred a boon on the desert, saying,-"This place shall be filled with food nourishing beasts; and ailments shall be rare here. And the fruits and roots shall be replete with relish; and it shall abound in oil and overflow with milk; and it shall contain various odorous drugs." Thus did the desert come to possess these attributes; and from Rama's bestowal of a boon, it attained a pleasant aspect. On that place being burnt up, that lord of streams, the Ocean, thus spake unto Raghava, versed in every branch of learning,-"O mild one, this one is named Nala, son unto Vicwakarma. He hath received a boon from his sire. Vicwakarma's son is well pleased with thee. monkey, surcharged with exhuberant spirits, build a bridge over me. I will hold that up. This one is as his sire." Having delivered himself thus, Ocean disappeared. Then that foremost of monkeys, Nala, arising, spoke unto the mighty Rama,-"Resorting to my sire's skill, I will build a bridge over the spacious abode of Makaras. The mighty Ocean hath spoken justly. In respect of the ingrate even chastisement is supreme in this world,—this is my conviction. Down with forbearance, or moderation, or gift! This dreadful Ocean, this mighty deep, expecting to see a bridge (thrown ever him), hath granted depth unto Raghava .- (Formerly) in Mandara. Vicwakarma had conferred a boon on my mother: O exalted one, thy son shall be like me.' I am a son of bis, sprung from his loins, and I am like unto Vicwakarma. Not having been asked by thee, I had not unfolded my qualifications. I also am capable of constructing a bridge over Varuna's abode. Therefore this very day let the foremost monkeys construct the bridge." Then directed by Rama, the.

^{*} Sagaradarçandi-may also mean, agreeably to the Ocean's instruction,-T.

^{*} i. e. the sound.

principal monkeys with alacrity entered the mighty forest in hundreds and thousands. And themselves resembling mountains, the foremost of the monkeys began to break down trees and draw them towards the Ocean. And the monkeys filled the Ocean with salas, and acwakarnas, dhavas, bamboos and kutajas, arjunas, palms, tilakas, tinicas, billakas, saptaparnas, and blossoming karnikaras, mangoes, and açoka trees. And those monkeys-the foremost of their species-began to gather the trees, some with their roots, and some without them, -carrying them like Indra's ensign. And those huge-bodied monkeys possessed of prodigious strength, procured palms and pomegranates, cocoanuts and Vibhitakas, Kariras, Vakulas, and Nimbas, -as well as rocks. measuring elephants' dimensions; and uprooting crags, they carried them by means of machines. And on rocks being plunged into the waters, the latter, suddenly swelling up. mounted to the welkin, and again subsided .-- And (the trees). dropping (into the deep), vexed it all around. And some took lines (for insuring straightness unto the bridge). And at the middle of the lord of rivers and streams, Nala made a grand bridge measuring an hundred yoyanas. And then he set about constructing the bridge with the assistance of monkeys of dreadful deeds. And some took the measuring rod, and others bore (timber to the sea). And by help of hundreds of monkeys following Rama's mandate, hued like clouds or mountains, (they) constructed a bridge with grass. and wood. And the monkeys made the bridge of trees with blossoming tops. And (monkeys) resembling Danavas were seen rushing all around with rocks resembling hills, and . mountain-ausomits. And tremendous was the tumult that arose of crags thrown and rocks toppled down into the mighty deep. And on the first day the elephant-like monkeys full of spirits and exerting themselves vigorously, finished fourteen yoyanas. And the exceedingly strong and Rugebooled monkeys on the second day speedily disposed of twenty yoyanas. And on the third day the huge-bodied active monkeys did one and twenty yoyanas on the sea. And on the fourth day the exceedingly impetuous monkeys, bestirring themselves vigorously, did two and twenty youanas. And on the fifth day the fast-speeding monkeys accomplished three and twenty yoyanas reaching unto the fair shore. resembling his sire, that best of monkeys, the lusty and graceful offspring of Vicwakarma, (thus) constructed the bridge over the sea. And that bridge built by force over the abode of makaras, looked graceful and splendid like the Milky way in the firmament. And then the deities and Gandharbas, the Siddhas and the prime saints, appearing in the heavens, stood there, eager to behold this wonder.. And the gods and Gandharbas saw that bridge of Nala, difficult of being made, having an area of ten yoyanas and measuring an hundred in length. And the monkeys, leaping and bounding and roaring, as well as all creatures, beheld that building of the bridge on the ocean, inconceivable, and marvellous, displaying skill past thought and capable of making one's hair stand on end. And those thousands of Kotis of exceeding vigor, having constructed the bridge over the ocean, went over to the other shore of the mighty main. And spacious, skillfully constructed, graceful, well-paved and nicely finished, the great bridge appeared like the line where the hair hath been parted on the Ocean's head. Then on the other shore of the ocean, Bibhishana, with the view of opposing foes (that might advance), stationed himself mace in hand. along with some councilors. Then Sugriva spoke unto Rama beving truth for his prowess,-"Do thou get upon Hanuman. and let Laskhmana get upon Angada. O hero, vast is this Ocean-abode of Makaras. These monkeys, rangers of the sky, shall hold you up both." Thereat the graceful and righteous Rama along with Lakshmana, equipped with his bow, set out in the van of the army in company with Sugriva. And some monkeys proceeded along the middle, and some plunged into the deep, and some went by the road. And some coursed through the air, bounding up bird-like. And that dreadful array of monkeys crossing over, with its mighty uproar drowned the dreadful roar of the deep, which had been arising. On the monkey-host having crossed by the bridge of Nala, the king stationed it on the shore abounding in fruits, roots and water. Beholding that work of kaghava incapable of being performed, the deities together with the Siddhas and Charanas, and the Maharshis, suddenly presenting themselves before Raina, sprinkled him one by one with sacred water, and said,—"Mayst thou be victorious, O human-divine one! Rule thou the Earth eternally!" Thus in various auspicious words, did they pay homage unto that one honored by the Brahmanas, Rama.

SECTION XXIII.

Having seen omens, that one, Lakshmana's elder brother, conversant with them, embracing the son of Sumitra, said these words,—"O Lakshmana, occupying (this tract) of cool waters and woods affluent with fruits, will we, dividing and arranging our forces, stay here. Mighty is the fear that I see at hand,—boding destruction to people and the slaughter of the foremost heroes of bears, monkeys and Rakshasas. The wind bloweth darkly, and the Earth shaketh. The tops of the mountains tremble, and trees topple down. And the clouds are ashen and roistering, and roar roughly. And lowering, they shower portentuus drops of blood. And the twilight is terrible and looketh like the red sandal. And a fiery tircle droppeth from the flaming sun. And on all sides birds and beasts, distressed, attering woe-begone notes, and grim-visaged, set up cries against the sun, arousing great fear. And the Moon, although not appearing* in the night, burneth, and with dark and red rays riseth, as if it intended to exterminate people. And the aspect (of the sun) is slight, rough, and good;† and. O Lakshmana, a blue mark is visible on the unclouded Sun. And the stars seem erased by a mighty volume of dust. O Lakshmana, behold this sight disastrous to people like unto the universal dissolution. Crows, and hawks, and the inferior vultures, wheel all round. And jackals are sending inauspicious yells, exciting great fear. The earth shall be covered with darts and javelins, and swords discharged by monkeys and Rakshasas, and be turned into mire with flesh and gore. Surrounded by all the monkeys, will we, using speed, this very day rapidly enter into the city ruled by Ravana, incapable of being subdued." Having said this, that subduer in conflict, that lord, that enchanter of men, Rāma, t equipped with his bow, proceeded in the direction of Lanka. And all the principal monkeys-Sugriva with Bibhishana-went on, setting up roars, for the destruction of foes, who were determined to battle with them. And consequently Raghu's son was well pleased with the fortitude and exertions of the powerful monkeys, for bringing about what was dear unto Raghava.

The moon, it seems, doth appear, but does not look out clearly .- T.

[†] Pragasta—I do not see the propriety of this epithet in this connection. This may be a mistake.—T.

[‡] The word Rama occurs twice, one being the cognomen of the solar hero. The other means, the enchanter of men.—T.

SECTION XXIV

A ND with the presence of the king* that assembly of heroes looked beautiful, as doth the autumnal night, garnished with beauteous stars, with the Moon. And oppressed with the bursting energy of the host resembling the ocean, the Earth trembled. And then the rangers of the forest heard a hubbub in Lanka, as well as the sounds of trumpets and Mridangas, mighty and capable of making people's down stand on end. And at those sounds, the leaders of monkeybands were delighted beyond measure, and, resenting the same, set up cries louder than those sounds, Rakshasas also heard the roars of the monkeys, resembling the rumbling of haughty clouds in the sky. Beholding Lanka with variegated standards, and streamers, Daçaratha's son went' to Sita with an aggrieved heart. "Here that one having eyes resembling those of a young deer, is confined by Ravana, like unto Rohini overpowered by the red-bodied planet."1 And, sighing hot and long, and looking at Lakshmana, that here spoke words fraught with his good at that time,-"Behold, O Lakshmana, Lanka towering up as if piercing the heavens; and, built by Vicwakarma on the brow of the mountain, she seems to have been made by the Mind. Constructed in time past with edifices thronging her. Lanka looks like the all-encasing air, covered with pale Lanka is embellished with groves resembling Chitraratha, fair, and eloquent with the notes of various binds, and fraught with fruits and flowers. Behold the intoxicated birds, and the black bees blending (with the blossoms). And the blessed breeze swayeth the trees vocal with the coels." Having divided his forces there agreeably to the directions of the scriptures, Daçaratha's son, Rama, thus spoke unto Lakshmana. And he ordered that monkeyarmy, saying,-"Taking his own forces, let the puissant and invincible Angada along with Nila, station himself in the centre of the forces. And let the monkey, named Rishabha, surrounded by numbers of monkeys, post himself at the right of the monkey-army. And let the active and irrepressible Gandhamādana, resembling an elephant fragrant with the temporal exudation, stay, occupying the left of the forces. I myself along with Lakshmana, shall heedfully stay in the fore-front. And the monkeys, Jamvaban, Sushena and Vagadarci, the three high-souled, foremost bears.*shall protect the interior (of the forces). And as the Sun. surcharged with energy, protects the hind half of the globe. let the monkey-monarch protect the rear of the monkeyarmy." And that army being skilfully divided into parts and protected by great monkeys, resembled the welkin covered with clouds. Then, taking up mountain-peaks and mighty trees, the monkeys began to proceed towards Lanka, burning to crush Lanka in battle. "We shall demolish Lanka by hurling mountain-peaks, or with our clenched fists." Thus did the foremost of monkeys think in their minds. Then the exceedingly energetic Rāma addressed Sugriva, saving,-"Our forces have been rightly marshalled, -let go (now) Suka," Hearing Rāma's words, the lord of monkeys possessed of great strength, liberated the envoy, Suka, at the command of Rama. Liberated at the word of Rama, Suka, who had been sore tormented by the monkeys, oppressed with exceeding great fear, went to the lord of Rakshasas. at, Ravana, laughing, said noto Suka,-"Are thy wings fettered? And thou seemst as if thy wings had been severed. Why? Didst thou come under the control of the volatile (monkeys)?" Thereat, exercised with fear, Suka, commanded by the monarch, answered the lord of Rakshasas in this excellent speech, saying,-"Repairing to the northern shore of the sea, I, pacifying (the monkeys) with mild speech. communicated thy tidings clearly (unto Sugriva). Thereat, as soon as they saw me, the monkeys flying into a wrath. captured me, and attempted to clip my wings and slav me with their clenched fists. They are insuseptible of being spoken to. No doubt whatever can exist that, O lord of Rakshasas, the monkeys are by nature wrathful and fierce. The same Rama that bath slain Viradha and Kayandha and Khara, hath arrived (here) along with Sogriva, searching for the whereabouts of Sita. Having thrown a bridge across the brine and crossed the salt sea, Rāghava, equipped with his bow, stayeth here, setting the Rakshas at naught. And the hosts consisting of thousands of hears and monkeys. resembling hills and clouds, envelope the Earth. And peace there can be none between the forces of the Rakshasas and the hosts of the sovereign of monkeys, like unto the deities and the Danavas. And they advance before the wall. Speedily do one of these things-make over Sita without delay, or give (him) battle." Hearing Suka's speech, Ravana with his eyes reddened in wrath, spoke, as if burning (Suka) with them,-"Even if gods, and Gaudharbas, and Danavas should array themselves against me, I will not from fear of all creatures, render (back) Sita. When shall my shafts pursue Raphava, like maddened Bhramaras making towards blossomy trees in spring? When by means of flaming shafts shot from my bow shall I burn (Rāghava) with his body bathed in blood, even as a meteor (burneth) an elephant ? And when, surrounded by a mighty host, shall I confound his ranks, even as the Sun arising, (vanquisheth) the light of the. stellar spheres? My impetuosity like the Ocean's, my etrength like the Wind's, Dacarathi doth not know,-and therefore it is that he desireth to fight with me. Rāma hath not seen my shafts resting in the quiver, resembling venomous serpests,—and therefore it is that he seeketh to fight with me. Rāghava hath not in conflict formerly known my bow representing my Vinā sounded with my shafts; having tremendous sounds proceeding from the strings; dreadful; with the cries of distressed people for its mighty strains of music; and resonant with the reports of Nārāchas and palms. And, having bathed in the great field of battle representing the river of hostile forces, I will in the encounter strike (this Vinā). Neither the thousand-eyed Vāsava, nor Varuna himself, can (cope) with me in battle; nor can Yama, or Vaicravana's self vanquish me in mighty conflict with the fire of arrows."

^{*} Rāma.-T.

[†] i.e. mentally.-T.

[†] Angaraka.-T.

The epithet 'bears' coming after 'monkeys' may look incongruous, but, I, fancy, 'monkeys' is used in the general sense of being connected with the monkey-host.—I.

SECTION XXV.

stay there; Rāma's, as well as Lakshmana's purpose, prowess and the arms (they fight with). And who is the commander of those magnanimous monkeys? Having learnt all this truly, ye ought to return speedily." Being thus commissioned, these heroes, the Rakshasas, Suka and Sarana, assuming monkeyshapes, entered into the hosts of monkeys. But Suka and Sarana could not number that army of monkeys, incomprehensible and capable of making people's hair stand on end. The forces were on mountain-tops, by fountains and in caves. And those rangers of the night beheld those forces, some having already crossed, and some crossing, and some intent on doing so; and some having sat down and some sittingthat mighty army sending terrific roars,-that ocean of hosts incapable of being disturbed. As they remained thus disguised, they were discovered by Vibhishana. Thereat, taking them captive, he unfolded (the fact) unto Rama, saving,-"These are the counsellors of the lord of Rakshasas -Suka and Sarana. O captor of hostile capitals, they have come as spies from Lanka." Seeing Rama, they were greatly afflicted, and, despairing of their lives and exercised with fear, with joined hands, said,-"O placid one, cammanded by Ravana, we have come here, O son of Raghu, for the purpose of gathering information concerning this army." Hearing their speech, Rama-son unto Daçaratha-ever engaged in the welfare of all beings, laughing, remarked,-"If you have heedfully noted this entire array, or if you have done what ye had been commanded to do, return in peace. If aught remaineth unseen, do ye see it anew. Or Vibhishana will again fully show it unto you. Having been taken, ye need not fear on the score of your lives. Even if envoys happen to be taken who are equipped with weapons, they should not be slain. And albeit these night-rangers have come as spies in disguise, with the view of creating division among their fues, yet, O Vibhishana, let them off. Entering the extensive Lanks, ye should say unto the king-younger brother anto the Dispenser of riches—the words which I utter,—'That force relying on which thou hast carried away my Sita, do thou as thou wishest, along with thy forces and friends, display the same. On the morning of the morrow behold the city of Lanka with her wall and gates, as well as the hosts of Rakshasas, destroyed by me with my shafts. And as Vasava equipped with the thunder-bolt hurleth the same amidst the Danavas, will I, O Ravana, on the morning of the morrow pour down my dieadful fire upon thee along with thy forces." Thus directed (by Rāma), those Rākshasas, Suka and Sarana, having saluted the righteous Raghava with 'Victory!,' came (back) to Lanka and spoke unto the lord of Rākshasas, saying,—"O lord of Rākshasas, having been taken by Vibhishana for the purpose of being slain, we came to be seen by the righteous-souled Rama of immeasurable energy, and (finally) were liberated (by him). As these four persons have combined-like unto the Lokapalas, heroic, accomplished in arms, and of steady prowess-viz., Dacaratha's son, Rama, the graceful Lakshmana, Vibhishana, and the highly powerful Sugriva, resembling the great Indra, these are capable of uprooting the city of Lauka-walls and gateways-and replacing her (on her former site),-leave thou the monkeys aside. Such is Rama's figure and arms that he shall alone demolish Lanka,-leave the other three alone. And that host protected by Rama, Lakshmana and Sugriva, shall become exceedingly hard to combat even by the Asuras and gods,-And the army of the high-souled rangers of the woods, eager for encounter, contains warriors bursting with high spirits. No use of dispute. Be thou intent Do thou render back Maithili unto on pacification. Dacaratha's son."

SECTION XXVI.

HEARING Sarana's words, pregnant and truthful, king Ravana addressed him, saying,-"Even if the gods, Gandharvas and Danavas should attack me, Sita will I not part with from fear of all creatures. O amiable one, thou, having been hard handled by the monkeys and distressed in consequence, deemst it fit that Sita should be rendered back this very day. What foe of mine is there who is competent to conquer me in battle ?" Having uttered this rough speech, the graceful Ravana-lord of the Rakhasas-desirous of surveying (the monkey-hosts), ascended an edifice white like snow, and elevated like many palms (placed one upon another). And transported with passion, Ravana in company with those spies, saw the sea, mountains and forests. And they beheld the Earth enveloped with monkeys, and the mighty host of monkeys, boundless and irresistible. And having seen this, king Rāvana asked Sārana,-"Who among these monkeys are the foremost, who are the heroes, and who possessed of great strength? Who, bursting with spirits, stay all about the fore? Whom doth Sugriva listen to? And who are the leaders of the monkey-leaders? O Sarana, relate thou all this unto me. And what is the prowess of the monkeys?" Thereat, Sarana, knowing the chiefs (of the monkey-army), spoke unto the sovereign of Rakshasas, who had asked (him), as to who were the heads of the rangers of the woods. "This monkey, that, setting up roars, stayeth in front of Lanka, surrounded by hundreds and thousands of monkey-leaders, by whose tremendous shouts Lanka trembleth with her wall, gateways, hills, woods and forests, and who is posted in front of the forces of the high-souled Sugriva-master of all the monkeys-is the heroic leader of monkey-bands named Nila. And that one, passessed of prowess, who, folding up his arms, paceth the gound on foot, who, facing Lanka, from wrath is frequently yawning, who resembles a mountain-peak and is like the filaments of a lotus, who, enraged again and again, soundeth his tail, and the ten cardinal points resound with the sounds of whose tail,-is he who hath been sprinkled by Sugriva-king of monkeys-the heir apparent, named Angada. He challengeth thee to the fight. The worthy son of Vali and ever dear unto Sugriva, he putteth forth his prowess, as Varuna doth for Sakra. That that well-wisher of Raghava, the vehement Hanuman, hath seen Janaka's daughter, was owing to the advice of this one. That powerful (hero) is proceeding, taking innumerable bands belonging to the lord of monkeys, for the purpose of beating thee by means of his soldiery. Following Vali's son, and surrounded by a mighty force, stayeth in the field the heroic Nala, the builder of the bridge. Those that with their limbs lying inactive, and setting up roars and ululations, are following this one,* are heroes dwelling in Chandana. * With his own army alone, the silver-hued Sweta of dreadful prowess hopes Marshalling his monkey-forces and to subdue Lanka. cheering up his soldiers, that intelligent monkey, famed over the three regions, having speedily met with Sugriva, is retracing his steps. From days of yore on the banks of the Gomati there is a mountain, (named) Ramya, (otherwise) called Sanrochana. The mount abounds with various trees. There that leader of bands, named Kumuda, governs his And he that cheerfully draweth after him kingdom. hundreds and thousands of monkeys, and the long grim hairs of whose tail, coppery, yellow, sable and white, are cast about, is the energetic monkey, Chanda, eager for encounter. And he hopes to conquer Lanka by help of his own forces.

^{*} The reference is prospective. 'It means the monkey, Sweta, in the next slota —T.

[†] This may mean some wood of sandals; but the commentator is although over it.—T.

And this one, resembling a lion, tawny and furnished with a long mane, who, remaining apart, vieweth all Lanka as if consunting her with his eyes, dwelleth for ever and a day in Vindhya, the mountain Krisha, Sahya, and the mount Sudarcana, and, a leader of bands, is named Rambha. Three hundred Kotis of the foremost of monkeys, dreadful and fierce and possessed of terrific prowess, surrounding (him) go in his wake for the purpose of demolishing Lanka by their (native) might. And he that expandeth his ears and vawneth again and again, who defieth the fear of death and doth not move his forces, who trembleth for wrath and eyeth frequently askance,-and behold the lashing of his tail !-and who setteth up leonine shouts, O king, with great energy and with fear cast off,-resideth in the romantic mount. Stlweya, and, a leader of companies, is named Sarabha. To him, O king, belong forty hundred thousands of powerful leaders. And he that stayeth, like unto a mighty mass of clouds covering up the sky, in the midst of the monkeyheroes, as doth Vasava in the centre of the celestials, whose lofty shout is heard (mingled with) the uproar set up by the foremost monkeys, burning for battle, dwelleth in the excellent hill Parijatra; and, ever irropressible in fight, is named Panaca, a leader of (monkey)-bands. Fifty lacs of leaders with their forces arranged, environ this commander of monkeys. He that stayeth gracing the dreadful array overflowing with talk, stationed on the shore of the ocean,resembling a second sea and like unto Durdara*-is the leader named Vitata. And he rangeth, drinking of (the waters of) the Vena,-best among streams-and his forces are sixty lacs of monkeys. And the monkey, named Krathana, challengeth thee to conflict. He hath (under him) powerful and vigorous generals, and forces well divided. And the monkey owning that person of the hue of red chalk, and, who, elated with strength, disregardeth all the monkeys,-is named Gavaya, who approacheth thee wrathfully. Seventy lacs (of troops) girt him round; and by their means be hopes to bring down Lanka. These are the heroes, incapable of being borne, whose numbers cannot be enumerated. These are the leaders and the heads thereof, as well as the forces set in order of battle."

Name of a celebrated monkey-leader.—T.

SECTION XXVII.

As thou lookest on, I shall describe unto thee those leaders who shall put forth their prowess for Raghava, and lay down their lives (in his behalf.) That one of dreadful deeds the long hairs on whose long tail, coppery, and yellow, and black, and white, thrown up, look like the rays of the Sun, and are trailing over the ground, is the monkey, named Hara; whom follow hundreds and thousands (of monkeys) desperately upraising trees, intent upon (scaling) Lanka-the leaders of the monkey-king and his servants present (in this conflict.) And these whom thou beholdest present, resembling mighty masses of sable clouds, like unto black collyrium, of genuine prowess, countless and incapable of enumeration,dwelling in mountains, provinces, and rivers,-terrible bears -approach thee, O king. In their amidst is their king, grimeyed and of fierce appearance, like unto Parjanya* encompassed by clouds,-who dwelleth in that best of mountains, Rikkhavan, drinking of the Narmada .- Behold this one resembling a hill-younger brother of Dhumra, lord of all the bears. He is equal to his brother in beauty, and of superior prowess. This leader of redoubtable leaders is named Jambavan. He is mild, obedient to his superiors and fierce in fight. The intelligent Jambavan assisted Sakra signally in the war of the gods and Asuras, and he hath won many boons (in consequence). Ascending the tops of mountains, these hurl down gigantic crags huge as colossal clouds, nor doth (the fear of) death (ever) disquiet them, And their bodies covered with hair, they resemble Rakshasas and ghosts (in their conduct). This one of immeasurable energy hath innumerable troops going about, who behold this leader of leaders under unusual excitement leaping and resting (by turns). This lord of monkeys dwelleth near the thousand-eyed Deity; and this leader of bands, gifted with strength, is named Rambha. And he that going, toucheth with his side a mountain situated at the distance of a Yoyana, and, rising up, measureth the same length,-and whose beauty is surpassed by none among quadrupeds,--is known under the name of Sannadana, the grand-father of the monkeys -this intelligent one battled with Sakra, nor did he meet with discomfiture. This is that general of the forces. And he whose prowess is like that of Sakra, is this one begot by Fire on a Gandharva's daughter, for assisting the celestials on the occasion of the war of the gods and the Asuras. And this graceful and powerful one-best of monkeys-disporteth in that sovereign of mountains inhabited by numbers of Kinnaras, where king Vaicravana eateth rose apples, and which, O lord of Rakshas, ever conduceth to the pleasure of thy brother. And this one who never extolleth himself in battle, is named Krathana-leader of hosts. Surrounded by a thousand Koti (of troops), and stationed in the midst of the monkeys, he hopeth to subjugate Lanka with his own troops alone. And he that roameth about the Ganga, terrifying leaders of elephant-herds, remembering the former hostility of the monkeys and the elephants, is this leader of bands, who, roaring, opposeth wild elephants in mountain-caverns and crusheth trees, -and foremost of monkeys, and chief of the monkey-forces-like Sakra himself in heaven, sporteth, resorting to Uciravija pertaining to Mandara, best of mountains, on the golden river.* A thousand lacs of monkeys, elated with vigor and prowess, setting up roars and furnished with (long) arms follow him; and this one is the leader of those high souled monkeys. And, O king, he whom thou seest resembling clouds uplifted by the winds, is a leader named Pramathi. And his fleetcoursing soldiery are fiery, and volumes of red-hued dust are scattered about him profusely on all sides. And these wondrous strong and dreadful Golangulast numbering hundreds and hundred thousands, seeing the building of the bridge, surrounding, O mighty monarch, the leader named Gavaksha-a Golangula-set up shouts, intending to demolish Lanka with their prowess. Where the trees bring forth fruits of every season and the black bees resort,-in the mountain furnished with solar splendour, which the Sun circumambulates, by whose radiance ever beam beasts and birds with a like hue,--whose table-lands are never forsaken by magnanimous Maharshis; where the trees yield every object of desire and all are fraught with fruits; in which best of mountains excellent honey is found,-there in the charming Golden hill, O king, sporteth this one-the foremost of the principal monkeys, Kaçari by name, a leader of bands. There are sixty thousand charming Golden hills. In their midst is that best of mountains, t even as thou, O sinless one, art among the Rakshas. There in the inmost hill Awell (monkeys) tawny-hued; and white,-with coppery faces: yellowish like honey; sharp-toothed; having nails for their weapons; and four teeth like lions; irresistible like tigers all equal to Vaicwanara, and resembling flaming venomous snakes; furnished with long tails; like unto mad elephants: seeming like gigantic hills; roaring like mighty clouds; with eyes tawny and round; of terrific mein; and emitting sounds,-and these are gazing at Lanka, as if devastating her. And this powerful one staying in their midst, is their leader, eager for victory; and the puissant (monkey) always looketh like the Sun himself; and this one, O king, is famed on earth by the name of Satavali. And this heroic one. powerful and mighty, established in his own prowess, hopeth to devastate Lanka with his own forces. And for compassing Rama's desire, the monkey doth not cherish any kindness for his life. Gaya, Gavaksha, Nala, and the monkey Nilaeach of these is encompassed by ten kotis of warriors. (Besides these), there are other choice monkeys dwelling in the Vindhya mountain, but I cannot enumerate these (monkeys) possessed of fleet vigor, in consequence of their vast number. All these, O mighty monarch, are of exceeding prowess,-all possess persons resembling mighty mountains; and all are competent in a moment to remove mountains and scatter the Earth with them."

^{*} There is a word—rane, in battle—in this line, left out on the ground of pleasasm.—T.

^{*} GangA .-- T.

[†] Vide antè.

^{$} Savarai Meru,-T.

SECTION XXVIII.

HAVING heard the words of Sarana, who had described the forces (of the monkeys), Suka, addressed Ravana, lord of Rakshasas, saying,—"Those, O king, whom thou seest stationed, resembling mad elephants, like unto nyagrodhas" belonging to the Ganga,—like unto Salas in the Himavan,—are incapable of being borne,—they are possessed of strength, and able to wear forms at will; resembling deities and Danavas, and like the gods in conflict. These, numbering nine, five, and seven thousand kotis and thousand sankus and an hundred vrindas, are the ministers of Sugriva, residing in Kishkindha-monkeys begot by gods Gandharvas, capable of assuming shapes at will. And those two whom thou beholdest, staying there, of equal proportions and endowed with god-like shapes, are Mainda and Dwivida, -who have no equals in fight. Permitted by Brahma, they had partaken of ambrosia. They hope to humble Lanka by their prowess. And he whom thou seest staying like a mad elephant, the monkey who, being enraged, can by his strength agitate the deep itself, who, searching for Vaidehi, had presented himself before thee, lord,-behold this monkey come again !--whom thou hadst seen before !*-is the eldest son of Kacari, known as the offspring of the Wind-godcelebrated as Hanuman, who had bounded over the deep. Capable of wearing forms at pleasure, that first of monkeys is endeued with grace and strength,-and is of irresistible impetuosity even as that lord, the Wind. Seeing the Sun risen, (he) while a boy, resolving in his mind,—'Coursing a way measuring three thousand yoyanas, I will bring the Sun, -my hunger is not appeased;' and he sprang up, elated with strength. And, not getting that god, incapable of being subdued by the deities, saints and Rakshasas, he dropped down on the Ascending-hill. And thereat a jaw of that strongjawed one was a little fractured on the rock,-and he is called Hanuman in consequence. I know this monkey and all his previous history. I cannot describe his strength, beauty or prowess. And this one alone hopes to lay Lanka low by his energy. And why dost thou today forget the monkey, who had flung flaming fire ipto Lanka? And next to him ie the hero of dark-blue hue, having eyes like lotuses, the

^{*} This dislocation occurs in the original. These descriptions generally are hardly amenable to a sound syntax.—T.

Atiratha among the Ikshwakus-of prowess celebrated in the world-in whom virtue 'never wavereth and who never swerveth from righteousness; who knoweth the Brahma Mantra and the Vedas,-the best of those versed in them-who pierceth the sky with his shafts and cleaveth the Earth, whose ire is like death, and whose prowess is like that of Sakra,whose wife, Sita, hath been carried away by thee from Janasthana, And this is Rama, who, O king, advanceth to encounter thee in conflict. And on his right side is one of the splendour of pure gold, broad-breasted, having dark curled hair-this one is named Lakshmana, ever mindful of his brother's welfare. He is versed in polity as well as warfare-the foremost of those learned in all the branches of knowledge; wrathful, invincible, victorious, powerful, conquering and strong,-the right arm of Rama and his own life going about. For Raghava he careth not for his life. He hopeth to exterminate all the Rakshasas in battle. He that stayeth occupying the left side of Rama, and surrounded by Rakshasas, is the king, Bibhishana, sprinkled as the king of Lanka by the auspicious king of kings, -he, filled with wrath, approacheth thee (for battle). And he whom thou seest staying in the middle like a firm-based mountain, the lord of all monkeys, of inmeasurable prowess,-and who in energy fame, intelligence, strength, and lineage, is as superior to the monkeys as the mountain Himavan overtoppeth all the mountains, who in company with the principal monkey-leaders dwelleth in inaccessible Kishkindha hard to penetrate, and dense with trees, and difficult of access, and denying approach on account of rocks; and whose goldeo garland consisting of an hundred lotuses looks exceedingly elegant, which is the desire of men and gods, and where is established Lakshmi-(is Sugriva). And Rama, having slain Vali, hath conferred this garland, Tārā, and the eternal monkey-kingdom on Sugriva. An hundred of an hundred thousand is called a . koti by the wise. An hundred of a thousand koti is called a Sanku.

An hundred of a thousand Sanku is known as a Mahaçanku. An hundred of a thousand Mahacanku is here termed a Vrinda. An hundred of a thousand Vrinda is known as a Mahāvrinda. A thousand Mahāvrinda is called here a Padma. An hundred of a thousand Padma is known as a Mahapadma. An hundred of a thousand Mahapadma is termed a Kharva. An hundred of a thousand Kharva is termed a Samudra. An hundred of a thousand Samudra is known as a Mahaugha. Thus backed by a thousand koti, and an hundred Sanku, and a thousand Mahaçanku, and an hundred Vrinda, and a thousand Mahavrinda, and an hundred Padma, and a thousand Mahapadma and an hundred kharva, and an equal Samaudra and an equal Mahaugha,-by kotis of Mahaughasresembling the sea,-and surrounded by the heroic Bibhishana as well as his counsellors,-that Lord of monkeys, always engirt by a mighty force, and possessed of exceeding strength and prowess, will encounter thee in battle. Observing this host, that hath presented itself, resembling a flaming planet, do thou, O mighty monarch, prepare thyself to the uttermost, -so that victory may be thine, and that thou mayst not come by discomfiture at the hands of the foe."

SECTION XXIX.

Seeing the leaders of monkeys as pointed out by Suka,—the exceedingly puissant Lakshmana—Rāma's right arm—and his brother Bibhishana staying near Rāma, and Sugriva of dreadful prowess—sovereign of all the monkeys,—and the strong Angada, grandson unto the thunder-handed one, and the powerful Hanuman; and the unconquerable Jambavan; and Sushena; and Nila; and Nala-best of monkeys,and Gaya; and Gavaksha; and Sarabha; and Mainda; and Dwivida,-Ravana, with his heart agitated a little, and his wrath aroused,-when their talk had ended, rebuked those heroes, Suka and Sarana. And he wrathfully spoke unto them, standing in humble guise with their heads hung down. harsh words faltering with passion,-"That counsellors subsisting (on the wealth of their master and sovereign', should say aught disagreeable to him, whether they meet with his favor or disfavor-is not meet. Without being questioned, it is (proper) for you both to hymn the praises of a foe that is opposed and that hath advanced for encounter! Ye have in vain worshipped your preceptors, aged people, and spiritual guides, for ye have failed to appropriate the cream of Political Science, which should be availed of. Or if ye had appropriated the same, you have forgotten it afterwards; and ye bear the burden of ignorance. And it is owing to my good fortune that, having such stupid counsellors, I have as yet held my kingdom. Have ye no fear of death that ye use harsh speech towards me, who am the ruler and whose tongue dispenseth good and evil? Even trees may exist in the forest, coming in contact with burning fire; but transgressors cannot exist. visited with the chastisement of the monarch. slay these wicked wights, who praise the side of the enemy, if my anger be not moderated, remembering their former good offices. Avaunt! Go hence from near me! I do not wish to slay you, remembering your good acts. Slain ve (already) are, who are ingrate and cherish no affection for me." Thus accosted, Suka and Sarana, seeing (how things stood), covered with bashfulness, went out, saluting Ravana by uttering 'Victory!' Then that ranger of night, the Ten-necked one, said unto Mahodara, who was present, to summon some spies. Thus accosted, Mahodara speedily drdered some spies (to present themselves). Thereat, the spies, hurriedly arriving there at the mandate of the monarch, and, presenting themselves, stood with joined hands, uttering bleseings of victory. Then the lord of Rakshasas, Ravana, addressed the spies, who were heroic, faithful, calm, and courageous,--"Go hence, and acquaint yourselves with the exertions of Rama; as well as with those who, being the custodians of Rāma's closest counsels, have gladly joined him (here). How he sleepeth and how he waketh, and what he engageth himself in,-having deftly acquainted yourselves with all this thoroughly, do you come (back here). The wise king that gathers (a knowledge of) his enemy through spies, can, putting forth a modicum of effort in conflict, neutralise (his exertions)." Thereat the spies, saying,-"So it is", taking Sardula to the fore, with delighted hearts went round the sovereign of the Rakshasas. And, having gone round the high-souled Rakshasa-chief, the spics set out for where Rama with Lakshmana was. And repairing secretly to the vicinity of the mountain bordering on the tair shore,* they saw Rāma and Lakshmana with Sugriva and Bibhishana. And seeing that host, they were overwhelmed with fear. And, while staying there, they, discovered by the righteous lord of Rakshasas, Bibhisana, were sore barassed (by the monkeys). And that wicked Rakshasa, Sardula, alone was taken (before Rāma). But Rāma liberated him, who was assailed by the morkeys. And Rama also, entertaining no enmity against them, also liberated the others, (who accompanied Sărdula). And, on having been nut to straits by the powerful monkeys of fleet vigor, they,† breathing hard, and with their consciousness lost, again arrived at-Lanka. Then those exceedingly strong spies, always ranging outside, presenting themselves before the Ten-necked one, informed him of the forces of Rama, stationed near mount Suvela. .

^{*} i. e. RAvana's

[†] Indra,-T.

^{*} Suvelasya Sailasya-may also mean, of the mount Suvela,-T.

[†] The spies, that is .-- T.

SECTION XXX.

--هيدين---

THEN the spics communicated unto Lanka's lord news concerning Raghava and his host stationed at the mount Suvela. Hearing the words of the spies, that Rama, accompanied by a mighty army, had arrived (there), Ravana was a little agitated and spoke unto Sardula,-"Thy color hath changed its natural aspect, and, O ranger of the night, thou lookest poorly. Didst not come under the control of the wrathful foes?" Thus ordered by him, then (Sărdula), bewildered by fear, addressed that tiger of a Rakshasa, saying,-"Those powerful monkeys, O king, puissant, strong, and protected by Raghava, are incapable of being ranged (by us). And they cannot be conversed with or interrogated. All around, the courses are kept by monkeys resembling hills. As soon as I entered, and was scanning that host, I was discovered. And forcibly taken by the Rakshas, I was pulled by them hither and thither. And furiously assailed by the monkeys with thighs, clenched fists, teeth, and palms, I was dragged in the midst of the army by the enraged monkeys. And, after having been taken all about, I was (at length) taken before Rama, bleeding, with my limbs showing sorry work, and my senses swimming and paralysed. And, having been belabored by the monkeys, I, on craving his kindness with joined hands, was, at his pleasure, rescued by Raghava, with, "Don't, don't'! Having filled up the deep with rocks and crags, Rama equipped with weapons, stayeth, occupying the gate of Lanka. And, letting me off, that one of suspassing vigor, surrounded by monkeys, and, arranging his forces in the Garura fashion, advanceth upon Lanka. And he draweth nigh to the wall. Therefore, do one of these things in preference to the other, -either render back Sita," or give him battle." Hearing this, Ravana, lord of Rakshasas, then reflecting in his mind, spoke unto Sårdula these pregnant words,-"Even if the gods, Gandharvas, and Danavas should array themselves against me, Sita I shall not give, from fear of all creatures." Having said this, that exceedingly energetic one again said,-Thou hast ranged this army. Who here among the monkeys are heroic? amiable one, what is their potency? And what are those monkeys that are hard to approach, like? And, O thou of fair vows, whose sons and grandsons are they? Truly relate all this (to me). Having ascertained their strength and weakness, I shall in this matter adopt my course. Those who wish for fight, certainly take account of all this." addressed by Ravana, Sardula-best of spies-thus began to speak in the presence of Ravana,-"O king, that unconquerable one in fight, Jämbavan, is well known as the son Gadgada, king of bears. The other son of Gadgada is the son of Sakra's preceptor. By which son, single-handed, was done immense oppression to the Rakshas. Ano the righteous and puissant Sushena is the son of Dharma.* And the mild monkey, Dadhimukha, O king, is the son of Soma,† And Sumukha, Durmukha and the monkey, Vegadarcin (resembling) Death himself, were for certain begot by the Self-create in the shape of a monkey. ‡ And Nila himself is the son of the bearer of sacrificial oblations; § and Hanuman is famed as the son of the Wind-god. And the irrepressible and youthful Angada is the grandson of Sakra. And the lusty Mainda and Dwivida are sprung from Acwi. And five are the sons of Vaivaswata, resembling the Reaper himself-Gaya, Gavāksha, Gavaya, Sarabha and Gandhamadana. But I can not enumerate the rest, ten kotis of heroic monkeys-all the shape of a monkey," But I give the more acceptable sense,—T.

^{*} Righteousness.

[†] Moon.

Fire:

sons of deities-burning for battle. And this is Daçaratha's son-this youth resembling a lion, who slew Dushana and Khara and Triciras. There breathes none on Earth that is like unto Rāma in prowess, by whom was slain Virādha and Kavandha, resembling the Destroyer. No person can on earth describe the virtues of Rama; by whom have been slain all those Rakshasas that had gone to Janasthana. And here also is the virtuous Lakshmana, like unto the foremost of elephants, coming in the way of whose shafts, even Vasava doth not live. And here are Sweta and Ivotirmukha. sprung from Våskara's self; and the monkey Hemakuta is the son of Varuna. And the heroic Nala-best of monkeys, is the son of Viçwakarmā. And powerful and impetuous, Durdhara is the son of Vasu. And that foremost of Rakshasas. Biblishana, thy brother, engaged in the welfare of Raghava, hath laid seige to Linka. Thus have I described unto thee the entire monkey host stationed in mount Suvela. As for what remainedly to be done, thou art the master."

SECTION XXXI.

THEN the spies of the king informed him of the forces of Rāghava, incapable of being agitated, which had stationed themselves on mount Suveia. Hearing the arrival of Rāma's mighty army from the spies, Rāvana was a little agitated, and he spoke unto the ministers,—"Let the ministers speedily present themselves, having their wits about them,—the time forsooth hath come for counsel." Hearing his mandate, those Rākshasas, his counselors, swiftly presented themselves. And then he consulted with his Rākshasa counselors. Having deliberated duly, that resistless one, dismissing bis ministers, entered his own abode. Then, taking with him the highly strong Vidyujjibha, huge-bodied and gifted with the powers of illusion, he entered where Mithila's daughter was. And the lord of Rakshasas said unto V dyujjibha, skilled in illusion,-"Do thou bring lanaka's daughter under the sway of illusion. And, O ranger of the night, do thou, taking an illusory head of Raghava, as well as a mighty bow with the shaft (set), present thyself before me." Thus accosted, the night-ranger, Vidynijibha, saying, 'So be it," displayed that desired illusion unto Ravana. Thereat, the king, eager to meet with Sita in the Acoka woods, well-pleased, conferred an excellent ornament on him. Then the exceedingly powerful lord of the Nairitas, the younger brother of the Dispenser of riches, entered (into that place) and saw (there Sita) distressed, albeit unworthy of distress, -with her head hung down, overwhelmed with woe,- sitting on the ground, staying at the açoka woods, engaged in the contemplation of her lord, conciliated by dreadful Rakshasis remaining near, Then, drawing near Sita, Ravana, proclauning his exultation, said these haughty words unto the daughter of Janaka,-"O gentle one, he depending on whom thou, being soothed by (me), slightest me-that slayer of Khara, thy husband, Raghava, hath fallen in battle. Thy roots have been competely severed, and thy pride hath been destroyed by me. In consequence of this calamity, O Sita, thou shalt become my wife. O foolish (girl), renounce this idea. What wilt thou do with him that is dead? O meek (wench), be thou the mistress of all my wives. O thou of slender religious merit! O thou whose object hath been defeated! O thou that presumest to be wise! Hearken unto the destruction of thy lord, like the dreadful destruction of Vritra! Surrounded by a vast army gathered by the sovereign of the monkeys, Raghava had presented himself on the shore of the sea, for compassing my destruction. And . on the sun having set, Rama stationed himself with his mighty army, oppressing the northern shore (of the sea). Then at midnight (my) spies coming to that host, thus stationed, fatigued from travel, and sleeping soundly (in consequence),-first ranged it. Then my mighty forces led by Prahasta slew his host overnight, where was present Rama along with Lakshmara. And repeatedly upraising patticas and bludgeons, swords, rods and other mighty weapons; and (discharging) showers of arrows, and darts, and daggers and maces and sticks and crows and bearded darts and discuses and clubs ;-the Rākshasas discharged these among the monkeys. And while Rama was sleeping, the furious Prahasta by means of a mighty falchion, with speed cut off his head clean. Bibhishana, who was flying at his will, was taken captive. And Lakshmana along with the monkey-army hath departed somewhere. And, O Sita, Sugriva-lord of monkeys-hath his neck broken; and, O Sita, with his jaw fractured, Hanuman hath been slaughtered by the Rakshasas .- And Jambavan, endeavouring to spring up with his thighs, was slain in the conflict; being severed by bearded darts, even as a tree cut off. And the stalwart Mainda and Dwivida -- those foremost of monkeys-sighing and lamenting, bathed in blood,-destroyers of foes-were cut off with a sword. And Panaça is rolling on the earth like a (veritable) Panaça.* And mangled by many iron arrows, Darimukha lieth in a cave. And the exceedingly energetic Kumuda, dumb, is slain by shafts. And torn by innumerable (arrows) discharged on all sides by Rākshasas, Angada, vomitting blood, lieth on the ground. † And the monkeys. hard pressed by elephants, and others by networks of cars, lie low in the field, having been agitated like clouds by winds. And others afflicted with affright, flee, attacked (by the enemy) in the rear, and followed by the Rakshasas, like mighty elephants pursued by lions. And some have fallen into the sea, and some have taken refuge in the sky; and the bears have mounted up trees along with the monkeys. And on the shore of the sea, and in mountains and woods many are the tawny-hued monkeys that have been slain by Rakshasas of frightful forms. Thus bath thy lord been slain by my forces, along with his army; and I have his head, washed in blood and besmeared with dust." Thereat, the exceedingly irrepressible lord of Rākshasas, Rāvana, spake unto a Rakshasi, in the hearing of Sita,-"Bring (hither) the Rakshasa, Vidyojjibha of cruel deeds, who hath personally brought Raghava's head from the field." Thereat, Vidyujjibha, taking the head along with the bow, bowing down the head (unto Ravana), stood before him. Then spake king Ravana unto the Rakshasa, Vidyujjibha of the long tongue, who was staying by,-"Do thou at once hold before Sita the head of Daçaratha's son. Let her clearly behold the ultimate sad plight of her ford." Thus addressed, that Raksha, throwing that graceful head before Sita, swiftly vanished. Ravana cast down the mighty blazing bow, famed through the three worlds, saying,-"This is Rama's. This is the bow of thy Rama with the string fixed. Slaying that man over night, Prahasta brought it hither."

The tree of that name.—T.

[†] This sloka has 'Angada' twice. One, of course, is left out.-T.

SECTION XXXII.

BEING that head and that excellent bow, and (remembering) the union of (Rāma) and Sugriva related by Hanumān,—and (seeing) those eyes, and the complexion of that face, and that countenance like unto that of her lord,—and that hair and that forehead; and that beautiful jewel forming the crest; and recognizing (Rāma) by all these tokens combined,—

(Sita), exceedingly aggrieved, rebuked Kaikeyi, lamenting like a female osprey,-"O Kaikeyi, have thy wishes attained. Slain hath been the son of the race; and the entire race is exterminated by thee, partial to dissension. And what evil had been done unto Kaikeyi by the revered Rama, that along with me, he hadst been banished into the woods, with rags given him (for his covering)?" Having said this, Vaidehi, forlorn and trembling (all over), dropped to the earth, like a plantain cut off. Then, recovering after a while, and having regained her consciousness, the large-eyed one, placing the head in her front, gave way to grief. "Ah! I am undone, O mighty-armed one! O thou that didst follow stern vows! From thy (death), I have come by this final plight, having been rendered a widow. The greatest calamity (that can befall a woman), is said to be the death of her husband. And, possessor of an excellent character, thou hast departed before me, who have ever trod the path of the righteous; but who have come by a mighty grief and am plunged in a sea of sorrow. And thou, who was engaged in delivering me, hast thyself fallen! And my mother-in-law, Kauçalya, attached (to thee), through the death of thee, her son, at the hands of Rakshasas, hath been reduced to the condition of a cow that hath been deprived of her calf. O Raghava, even the astrologers had predicted long life for thce. But their words are false,-thou, O Raghava, wast short-lived. Or didst thy wisdom, wise and good as thou wert, come to naught : For God, who is the origin of all beings, maketh (every one) reap the fruit of his own acts. And why, versed in polity as thou wast, didst thou come by death, unforeseen ? Thou wast acquainted with the means of warding off misfortune, and skilled in doing so. And having been brought hither by me representing the Fatal Night, fierce and fell,after (being) embraced, and by force,—the lotus-eyed one hath met with his death. Here liest thou, O long-armed one, leaving me lone, -and embracing the Earth like thy beloved fair.

Ever carefully worshipped with perfumed wreaths, this bow of thine. O hero, embellished with gold, is dear unto me. O sinless one, thou hast surely gone to heaven, and (art there) in the company of thy sire and my father-in-law, Daçaratha, and all thy ancestors. Thou hast become a star of the firmament as the fruit of thy great act.* Thou hast disregarded thy righteous race of Rajarshis. O king, why dost thou not look at me? And why is it that thou dost not answer me, who am a girl, hardly arrived at youth,-and who am thy wife and companion? That thou at the time of thy espousing my hand hadst vowed-I will practise (righteousness) with thee-do thou, O Kakutstha, recollect the same, and take me, who am overwhelmed with distress. Why, O best of goers, hast thou gone from this world to that other, leaving behind me, overwhelmed with distress? That person of thine which, decked out with auspicious things, I used to embrace, beasts of prey will for certain tear the same. Having performed the Agnishtoma and other sacrifices with Dakshinds (dispensed),-why hadst not thou attained purity by means of the sacrificial fire? Kauçalya, overwhelmed with sorrow, shall only behold one of the three that had gone away to distant lands, -come (back)-Lakshmana. And, on being asked by her,he shall relate thine as well as the deaths of thy friend's troops over night at the hands of the Rakshasas. And, O Raghava, hearing thee slain while neleep, and me staying in the abode of the Raksha, she with her heart cleft (in twain), shall cease to exist. And for the sake of me, abject that I am, that sinless son of the king, Rama, possessed of prowess, having crossed the ocean, hath been slain in the footprint of a cow. I, the befouler of my line, who had been wedded by Daçaratha's son through want of discretion, becoming the wife of the revered Rama, was (in reality) his Death. Without doubt, in another birth I had abstained from choice gifts,-and therefore it is that I sorrow to-day, albeit being the wife of one that was (ever dear) unto guests. Do thou, O Ravana, speedily slay me upon Rama; and, bringing the wife to the husband, compass my best benefit. Do thou join my head to his and my body to his body. I will, O Ravana, follow the way of my high-souled lord." Thus, burning in grief, did that large-eyed one indulge in lamentations; and Janaka's daughter kept fast gazing at the head and bow of her lord. And as the Rakshasa was by while Sita was thus bewailing, there appeared before his ford, with joined hands, the warder, saying,-"May the worshipful one be victorious!" And saluting and propitiating him, (Ravana), he told him that Prahasta, general of the forces, had arrived. "Prahasta hath come to thee, surrounded by all the courtiers. And, O lord, I was despatched by him, desirous of seeing thee. O mighty monarch, surely there is-and thou art forgiving from thy regal sentiment*-some work which is momentous; and do thou see them." Hearing these words of the Rakshasa, the Ten-necked one, leaving the açoka wood, went to see the counselors. And, having decided his entire course of action in consultation with his competent advisers, (Rāvana), entering his court,-well knowing Rama's prowess, set about his work. And as soon as Ravana left that place, that head and that bow vanished. And in company with the councilors of dreadful power, (Ravana) decided his course with reference And then the lord of Rakshasas, Ravana, to Rāma. resembling the day of doom, addressed his generals,-all well-wishers-staying hard by, saying,-"Do ye speedily summon my forces with the beat of drums-nor do ye give out the reason (of the summons)." Then assenting to his speech with "So be it," the envoys immediately summoned that mighty force; and, when it had arrived, they informed their master, eager for conflict, of its arrival.

^{*} The carrying out the command of thy sire .- T.

^{*} This dislocated period insinuates that Ravana, possessed of royal nature, should forgive this untimely intrusion.—T.

SECTION XXXIII.

BEEING Sita overwhelmed with grief, a Rakshasi, named Saramā, who was the beloved companion (of Sitā), drew near to his dear (friend), Vaidehi. And the mild-speeched Sarama comforted the exceedingly distressed Sita, who had been bereft of her senses by the lord of Rākshasas. Sitā, who was protected there (by Sarama), had been made a friend by her. And, protecting her at the command of Ravana, that kindhearted companion, firm in vows, saw Sita, deprived of her consciousness. And she comforted with a frier.d's affection that one of fair vows, who was rolling in the dust and rising up from it like a mare.† "Having come to the solitary wood for protecting thee, I, renouncing all fear of Ravana, have, remaining hid, heard everything that he addressed unto thee. as well as what thou hadst replied unto him. For thee, O thou of expansive eyes, I have no fear of Ravana. And, O Maithili. I, coming out, have also learnt well as to why the lord of Rakshasas hath gone out hence hurriedly. Rama. acquainted with self, is incapable of being surprised in sleep; nor doth the slaying of that tiger-like one commend itself to me as probable. And the monkeys fighting with trees, well protected by Rāghava, like the gods protected by the foremost of the celestials, are incapable of being slain. And, possessed of arms long and rounded; graceful; broadbreasted: powerful; accourred with the bow; and mailed: righteous; and famous over the earth; endowed with energy; and along with his brother, Lakshmana, ever protecting himself and others; of noble descent; and versed in polity; the destroyer of the hostile ranks; and of inconceivable strength and manhood,—the graceful Raghava, O Sita, slayer of foes, is not slain. This illusion hath been spread around thee by that fierce, illusion-creating one, whose mind ever runs upon improper acts and who opposeth himself to all creatures.-All thy sorrow hath departed, and thy good day hath dawned. Certainly Laksbmi seeketh thee. And, O lady, hearken unto what is dear to thee! Having crossed over the ocean, along with the monkey-host, Rama bath encamped himself on the southern shore of the sea. By me hath been seen the complete Kakutstha along with Lakshmana, accompanied by the forces, stationed on the marge of the main,-protected (by his native might). Those Rakshasas of fleet vigor who had been despatched by this one, have brought the news that Raghava hath crossed .- And, O large-eyed lady, having learnt this news, Ravana-lord of Rakshasas-is consulting with all his 'counselors." As the Rakshasi, Sarama, was relating this unto Sita, she heard the leonine roars of the army, emitted with the greatest energy. And, hearing the mighty sounds of kettledrums produced by sticks struck (thereon), the honey-tongued Sarama spoke thus unto Sita,-"These dreadful sounds of the kettledrum, O mother, call to arms. And hark to the solemn notes of the kettledrums, resembling the rumbling of clouds t. The mad elephants are caparisoned and the car-horses are yoked; and thousands (of warriors) are seen, mounted on steeds, with bearded darts in their hands. And, as waters fill up the ocean, mailed warriors of wonderful forms, vehement and roaring, by thousands rush out on all sides and fill the highways. And mark the splendour spread around by the polished arms and bucklers and mail,-and by the cars, horses and elephants of the followers of the Rakshasa-chief,-consisting. of many bues 'sheoting up,-like unto the appearance of a fire in summer, burning a forest,-and also mark the excitement of the high-spirited and fast-coursing Rakshas !# And hear the sounds of bells and the rattling of the car-wheels! And hear the neighing of the steeds and the reports of the drums. And fierce is the excitement of these Rākshasas-followers of the Raksha-chief,-with their hands bearing upraised arms,-capable of making people's hair stand on end. The sorrow removing Sree espouseth thee; and the fear of the Rakshas is come. And as Vasava did unto the Daityas, the lotus-eyed Rāma, thy lord-of controlled anger, and of inconceivable prowess, slaying Ravana in battle and thus delivering thee, shall approach thee. And, as Vasava put forth his prowess among his foes, in company with the foe-destroying Vishnu, thy lord, along with Lakshmana, shall display his prowess among the Rakshas. On the enemy having fallen, I shall behold thee, devoted to thy lord, with thy desire attained, soon lying on the lap of Rāma. And, O Jānaki, embracing (thy lord), thou shalt shed tears of joy on his mighty breast. And, O Sita, soon shall the highly powerful Rama loosen this braid of thine reaching unto thy hips, which thou hast been wearing for many a month. And, O exalted one, seeing his face like the full moon risen, thou shalt shed water begot of ruth, even as a she-serpent casts off her slough. And, O Mithila's daughter, speedily slaying Ravana in battle, that one worthy of happiness shall reap felicity in the company of thee, his beloved. And, loved by the high-souled Rama, thou shalt be happy, even as the Earth furnished with crops brought forth by plenteous showers. Do thou, O exalted one, take refuge with him, who, going round the foremost of mountains, speedily assumeth a steed-like circular movement; for even the maker of day is the source of people's joy and grief."

^{*} Saramå.-T.

[†] The commentator intelligently remarks: As a mare does, to remove faligue.--T.

^{*} This line of verse defice all attempts to make it fall into syntactical order with the rest of the sentence. It is a hideous hiatus in the passage.—T.

SECTION XXXIV.

BURNING with grief on account of those words,* Sarama gladdened and cheered her, even as masses of clouds (cheer up) the burning Earth. And then, desirous of doing her good, (Sita's) friend, conversant with season, and ever prejuding her speech with a smile, spoke unto her seasonably,-"O thou having dark eyes, I can, secretly going to Rama and communicating to him thy auspicious words, come back clandestinely. Nor, when I course the supportless sky, can even the Wind or Garura follow me." As she said this, Sita with her grief a little lightened, said unto Sarama in sweet and smooth words,-"Thou art capable of even going to the nethermost regions. But do thou on my behalf that which is fit to be done by thee. If thou intend doing me a good turn, and if thy sense be steady, I would know what Ravana is doing after having left this place. That guileful and wicked-minded one, Ravana, destroyer of enemies, having powers of illusion, overwhelms me even as the Varuni just drunk. Confining me here for ever and a day, (Rāvana) sets on dreadful Rākshasas to alike threaten and scold me constantly. And I am agitated and alarmed, and my mind is (always) uneasy. And I, dwelling in the açoka wood, is ever agitated. If there is any talk (of delivering me), or keeping me confined,-thou shouldst communicate unto me the decision arrived at. This is the highest favor that I seek (at thy hands)." Thereat, the mild-speeched Sarama, wiping (Sita's) face washed in tears, spake unto her, as she said this, -"If this is thy wish, I will go, O Janaki. O Mithila's daughter, having possessed myself of the intent of the enemy, I shall come back." Having said this, (Sarama), repairing to the Raksha, heard Ravana's converse with his counselors. And having heard of the decision of that wicked-minded one, she, understanding decisions, swiftly retraced her steps to the fair açoka forest. And then, entering there, she saw Janaka's daughter, expecting (her) like a very Sri, bereft of her lotus. And, the fair-spoken Sarama, on getting back (near her), Sita, embracing her affectionately, herself gave her a seat. "Sitting down here at ease, do thou relate to me faithfully all about the determination of the wicked-minded and guileful Ravana" Thus accosted by the trembling Sita, Sarama related everything that had been said by Ravana and his counselors. "O Vaidehi, the Raksha lord was advised by his mother and the aged counselors in prognant words informed with affection, having thy deliverance for their object. 'Do thou make over Maithili unto the king of men, paying him homage due. Thou hast in Janasthana profusely witnessed wonderful instances (of his prowess). The crossing of the ocean, Hanuman's sight (of Sita, -and the slaughter of the Rakshas in fight, -what person is capable of doing all this in battle?' Thus long exhorted by his counselors as well as his mother, Ravana doth not make up his mind to emancipate thee, even as a covetuous person is loath to part with wealth (appropriated). And, O Maithili, without renouncing his life in battle, he doth not intend to, liberate thee. Even this is the dermination which that cruel one hath arrived at along with his advisers. This intent is in consequence of their coveting surcease. He can not yield thee up from sheer fear; nor is he backward in battle, or shirketh his own destruction or that of all the Rakshasas. O dark-eyed lady, slaying Ravana in battle with sharp shafts, Rama shall take the back to Avodhya." In the meanwhile there was heard a mighty uproar occasioned by the whole host, and drums and conchs, -which shook the earth. Hearing that hubbub of the monkey-army, the servants of the Rakshasa monarch, ran who were in Lanka,—growing dispirited, and bereft of energy, with weakness overcoming their powers,—did not see any good, in consequence of the fault of the ruler.

^{*} i.e. the words of Rayana.

SECTION XXXV.

And that captor of hostile capitals, the mighty-armed Rama, was advancing (upon Lanka) with the sounds of drums mixed with the blares of conchs. Hearing this noise, Ravana -lord of Rākshasas-reflecting for a while, cast his eyes upon his counselors. And addressing there all those counsellors, that afflictor of the world-the crooked and highly powerful lord of the Kākshasas, Rāvana, making his court resound.-running down (Rama's) crossing the main. as well as his vigor, strength and manhood, -- said to them, --"What ye have said touching Rama's (prowess), hath been heard by me. And I also know ye to be of sterling valor in the field. Yet why, knowing Rama's prowess, do ye silently look at each other?" Then the maternal grand sire (of Ravana), possessed of exceeding wisdom, named Målyavån, hearing his words, said,-"The king that is accomplished in the various kinds of learning,* and that followeth polity, ever commandeth affluence and bringeth his enemies under his subjection. He that seasonably concludes peace and carries on war with his enemies,-and who advances his own party, attaineth great affluence. A king should enter into peace, if he be an equal or inferior of his adversary, and engage in war, if be more powerful,-but an enemy should never be disregarded.

The commentator says there are four and ten kinds of learning: but undertunately he does not enumerate them.—T.

Therefore, O Ravana, peace with Rama is what commends itself to me; and do thou render unto him that for which thou hast been invaded (by him), vis., Sita. All the Devarshis and Gandharvas wish for (Rama's) victory. Therefore, do not enter into hostilities with him; but do thou bend thy mind to the conclusion of peace with him. That possessor of the six attributes, the Great-father, hath appointed two courses, (respectively) for the Asuras and the celestials, having for their proper objects righteousness and unrighteousness. Righteousness, we hear, is the course of the high-souled celestials, as, O Rākshasa, unrighteousness is that of Rakshas and Asuras. During the Krita Yuga, righteousness swalloweth up sin; and during Tishya,* unrighteousness swalloweth up virtue. Thou, ranging the three worlds, hadst extinguished pregnant piety, and reaped unrighteousness; and it is for this that thy foes have waxed potent.† And, having grown through thy neglect, unrighteousness devougeth us, and that protector of the gods, (righteousness), is strengthening the side of the celestials. Thou, addicted to carnal pleasures and acting in defiance of duty, hadst aroused the high wrath of the saints resembling fire. The power of these possessed of souls sanctified through asceticism, and ever engaged in invoking the aid of righteoutness, is incapable of being resisted and is like flaming fire. The twice-born ones engage in contemplation with intent minds, offer obtations into the fire according to the ordinance, and loudly recite the Vedas. They overpower the Rakshas, uttering the Vedas; and thereat they fly in all directions like clouds scattered in summer. And the smoke that ariseth from the Agnihotra sacrifices of saints resembling fire, enveloping the energy of the Rakshasas, spreads over the ten cardinal quarters. And the fierce austerities of vow-observing saints, performed at particular sacred spots, try the Rakshasas sore. Thou hast obtained a boon, conferring immunity at the hands of deities, Danavas and Yakshas. But men and monkeys, bears and Golangulas. possessed of enormous strength and endowed with vigor. and of indomitable prowess,-coming here, are setting up roars. Witnessing various and many dire portents, I perceive the destruction of all the Rakshasas. Dreadful and terrific clouds, uttering harsh sounds, are showering blood all around Lanka. And (live) vehicles are dropping profuse tears. And all sides, covered with dust, do not appear bright as And beasts of prey, jackals and vultures, are emitting frightful cries, and, entering into the garden of Lanka, form themselves into bands. And in dreams mighty dark-haed women in front of dwellings, seizing at (the furniture) thereof, and speaking inauspiciously, laugh displaying their sable teeth. And in houses dogs are feasting on the articles of worship. And cows bring forth asses, and mungooses, mice. And cats are pairing with leopards, and swine with dogs, and Kinnaras with Rakshasas and human beings. And red-footed white sky-coursing pigeons, arged on by Doom, are going about for the destruction of the Rakshasas. And female-parrots in houses, wounded and worsted by other birds delighting in discord, are dropping down, emitting indistinct notes. And all the birds and beasts are crying (distressfully) with their faces turned towards the sun. And at dusk a frightful, withered, tawnyhued male figure, looking like Death himself, with his head shaven, peereth into the houses (of people). These and other evil omers occur. Rāma I deem as Vishnu assuming the form of a man. Raghava of steady prowess, for certain, is no human being,-he that hath built a bridge over the deep, must be an exceedingly wonderful person. Therefore, O Ravana, conclude peace with Rama-king of men. Having escertained fit course, do thou act properly." Having said this unto that vile one, and known the intention of the lord of Rakshas, that strong Malyavan, of exceeding prowess, became silent, eying Ravana.

^{*} The Kali Yuga.-T.

[#] While ranging the three worlds on a career of conquest, thou didet, disturbing sacrifices, etc., wrong righteousoess.—T.

SECTION XXXVI

HE Ten-necked one, come under the control of Time, did not brook the beneficial speech spoken by Malyavan. Contracting his face into a frown, he, coming under the masterdom of passion, with his eyes rolling in wrath, addressed Malyavan, saying,-"The words which, deeming the strength of the enemy as superior, thou hast harshly spoken, considering it as beneficial, had never before entered my cars. A (mere) man, and feeble, and alone, and having monkeys for his support, why dost thou deem Rama, who hath (further) been east off by his sire, and hath in consequence taken refuge in the woods,-as competent (to cope with me)? And why dost thou consider me, who am the lord of the Rakshas, and feared even by the immortals,as weak and reft of all power? Thou, I suspect, speakest (thus) roughly either from jealousy of my heroism, or for inciting me. And who that is wise and learned, ever addresseth him roughly that is at once puissant and of (high) station, if not to spur him on? Why, having brought Sita like a Sri shorn of her lotus, shall I give her up, from fear of Raghaya? Behold Raghaya, environed by Kotis of monkeys. with Sugriva and Lakshmana, slain one of these days! He before whom even the gods cannot stay in the field,-how can that Ravana ever come by fear? Better that I should be riven in twain,-but bend I never will. This is my native fault; and nature is incapable of being overcome. And if Rama hath at his pleasure constructed a bridge over the ocean, what is the wonder in this that thou hast conceived such a fear? And although Rama hath crossed the ocean along with the monkey-army, yet I swear unto thee truly, living, he shall not back hence." When Ravana, wrought up with passion, had spoken thus, Malyavan, knowing him wroth, did not return a reply. And, duly tendering blessings unto the king, Malyavan, taking his permission, went to his own abode. And the Räkshasa, Rāvana, along with his courtiers, having consulted together as to what was fit to be done, set about the defence of Lanka. And he commanded the Rākshasa Prahasta (to guard) the Eastern gate; and the exceedingly powerful Mahāpārçwa and Mahodara (to guard) the Southern gate; and he ordered his son Indrajit.possessing mighty powers of illusion, girt by innumerable Rākshasas, to guard the Western gate. And he commanded Suka and Sărana to defend the Northern gate. But he said unto the counsellors,-"[will myself go thither."* And he posted in the middle in the garrison the Rākshasa, Virupāksha, endowed with exceeding prowess and energy, backed by countless Rakshasas. Having taken these measures in Lanka, the Rakshasa-chief, urged by Fate, deemed himself as having achieved success. Having thus completely provided for the defence of the city, he dismissed the ministers; and, honored by the counsellors with blessings of victory, (then) entered his magnificent and splendid inner apartment.

SECTION XXXVII.

THOSE kings, man and monkey, that monkey the Wind-god's son, Jambavan—sovereign of bears—the Rakshasa,

^{*} i e to defend the Northern gate.-T.

Bibhishana, the son of Vali, Angada, Sumitra's son, the monkey, Sarabha, Sushena along with his friends, Kumuda, Nala, and Panaça, arriving at the dominions of the enemy, assembled together, began to deliberate. "Yonder is that Lanka ruled by Ravana, invincible even unto the celestials, serpents and Gandharvas. Let us, keeping before us success 'the the enterprise, consult together for the purpose of arriving at a decision. We are here daily nearing Ravana, lord of Rakshasas." As they were speaking thus, Ravana's younger brother, Bibhishana, said in a pregnant speech free from provinicialism,-"Anala, Panaça, Sampāti and Pramāti-all courtiers of mine-having gone up to Lanka, have come back here. Wearing the forms of birds, they entered into the hostile forces; and, having seen the measures that had been adopted (by them, have come (back). O Rāma, hearken to me as I tell thee truly anent the provisions which they have related, made by the wicked-minded Ravana. In the Eastern gate stayeth Prahasta along with his forces; in the Southern, the exceedingly powerful Mahāpārçwa and Mahodara; and in the Western. Ravana's son, Indrajit, supported by innumerable Rākshasas, equipped with patticas, swords and bows, and bearing darts and maces in their hands,-surrounded by heroes carrying various weapons. And, backed by many thousands of Rakshasas weilding weapons, and accompanied by Rākshasas conversant with counsel, Rāvana himself, his heart agitated to the height, guardeth the Northern gate of the city. And Virupāksha with a powerful force accounted in javelins, clubs and bows, protects the garrison in the centre. Having seen these hosts thus disposed in Lanka, my counsellors have speedily come back here. There are ton thousand elephants, an Ayuta cars, two of horses, and about a koti of Rakshasas, powe-ful and strong, and equipped with arms in conflict.* These night-rangers are ever the favorites of the Rakshasa ruler. And, O king, a koti of forces accompany each of these Rakshasas in battle." Having conveyed this information concerning Lanka, which had been communicated by his counsellors, the mighty-armed Bibhishana showed (unto Rāma) those Rākshasas themselves. And in company with his counsellors, Ravana's graceful younger brother, ever striving for the welfare of Ramae by way of answer communicated everything that was going forward in Lanka unto Rama, having eyes resembling lotus-leaves,-"O Rama, when Ravana battled with Kuvera, sixty lacs of Rakshasas marched forth (to meet him). In prowess, energy, vigor, exceeding fortitude, and hauteur, they resembled the wicked-minded Ravana himself. matter, thou ought not to grow wroth,-I only arouse thy wrath, and do not endeavour to frighten thee.* Thou canst subdue even the celestials by thy prowess. Therefore thou, environed by a mighty army, baving arrayed the monkeyforces in order of battle, shalt thrash Rāvana (in battle)." When Ravana's younger brother had spoken thus, Raghava, said these words with reference to his beating the foe,-"Let that foremost of monkeys, Nila, surrounded by an immense number of monkeys, cope with Prahasta at the Eastern gate. of Lanka. And, engirt by a mighty force, let Angada, son of Vali, resist Mahaparowa and Mahodara at the Southern gate (thereof). And let that son of the Wind-god, Hanuman, backed by innumerable monkeys, (beating the host stationed) at the Western gate, find entrance (into the city). I myself, determined to compass the destruction of the lord of Rākshasas, who, waxing powerful in consequence of the boon he bath received, hath brought about the destruction of high-souled saints resembling gods and Danavas,-and who goeth round all regions, oppressing people,-will, along with Sumitra's son, smiting (the foe), occupy the Northern entrance, where Ravana with his army is stationed. And let the

^{*} These are, remarks the commentator, the leaders,-T.

i. e. Thou ought not to be angry with me; for I do not frighten thee, but thuse thy wrath against Rdvana."—T.

powerful king of monkeys, and the puissant sovereign of bears, and the younger brother of the Rakshasa-chief, manage the soldiery posted in the centre. And in this battle, the monkeys need not assume the forms of human being. And let this serve for a sign that the monkeys, in order to the recognition of our own forces, appear with their proper monkey-marks. We seven only shall battle with the foe in human shapes,-vis., I along with my brother, the exceedingly energetic Lakshmana, and my friend Bibhishana counting for the fifth in company with his own following." Having said this unto Bibbishana for attaining success in the enterprise, that lord, the intelligent Rama, seeing the sides of Suvela more beautiful (than other places), intended to ascend it. Then, environed by a mighty host, the highsouled and magnanimous Rāma, his features mirroring forth high exultation,-overshadowing the entire Earth (with his forces), set out for Lanka, determined upon destroying the enemy.

SECTION XXXVIII.

Having been bent upon mounting Suvela, Rāma, followed by Lakshmana, addressed in sweet and excellent words, Sugriva, and that righteous night-ranger, Bibhishana, versed in counsel and conversant with precepts, who was devoted to him,—saying,—"We shall all ascend this mount Suvela, bedight with metals; and pass this night even here. And (from here) will we view the abode of that Rāķshasa who, foul of soul, hath carried off my spouse, to bring destruction down on himself,—who knoweth nor morality nor good conduct nor behaviour (conducive to the dignity of his descent),--and who, in consequence of his base propensity, hath committed himself to so beingus a course of action." Having decided thus, Rama, filled with wrath at Ravana, coming to Suvela, ascended its variegated plateau. And Lakshmana, collected, went in his wake. And, upraising bow and arrow, Sugriva, (ever) engaged in valorous acts, accompanied with Bibhishana as well as his counselors, following him, also ascended (the mountain). And all those rangers of mountains, gifted with the vehemence of the Wind in hundreds ascended mount Suvela, where Raghava was stationed. And ascending the mountain in a short time, they all beheld from its summit the city, appearing to be built on the air. And the monkey-leaders beheld Lanka, exceedingly splendid with noble gateways; gracefully enclosed with a wall; thronging with Rakshasas; and defended by sable Rakshasas. And the foremost of monkeys saw these appearing like another wall (overtopping the one beneath). And on seeing the Rakshasas, the monkeys burning for battle set up various roars in the presence of Rama. Then the Sun, crimsoned with Eve, ascended the Setting-hill; and Night came, illumined by the Moon at his full. Then the master of the monkey-army, Rama, saluted and honored by Bibhishana, accompanied by Lakshmana as well as the leaders of the monkeys, sojourned happily on the breast of Suvela.

SECTION XXXIX

~~~©~~~

HAVING passed the night in Suvela, the heroic monkey-leaders surveyed woods and forests in Lanka. And seeing those extensive (woods and forests), mild, and charming, and beautiful to behold, they were seized with wonderment.

Abounding in champakas, açokas, vakulas, çálas, and palms; covered with tamálas and panaças,-and environed all around with trees,-and surrounded with Hintalas, Aryunas, blossoming Saptaparnas, Tilakas, Karnikaras, and Patalas,trees with flowering tops, entertwined with creepers,-Lank& looked exceedingly lovely, with various sights,-resembling the Amaravati herself of Indra. And trees there, furnished with variegated flowers having tender rosy leaves,-and blue lawns, and rows of woods; and bearing odourous and charming blossoms and fruits,-looked like men adorned with ornaments. And there a delightful and pleasant wood resembling Chaitraratha, and like unto Nandana itself-having all the seasons present,—appeared beauteous to the view, with black bees all around And it had Datyuhas, and Koyasthivas, and peacocks dancing; and the strains of the coels were heard at the woodland rills. And the heroic and exhilarated monkeys, capable of wearing forms at pleasure, entered those woods and groves frequented by maddened birds and ranged by Bhramaras,-tracts overflowing with the lays of coels, and ringing with the voices of songsters,-resonant with the notes of Bhramaras-sovereigns of their species-and eloquent with the cries of ospreys. And as the exceedingly energetic monkeys entered, there blew upon them the breeze -like unto life-redolent of perfume obtained from contact with the blossoms. And others of the leaders among the heroic monkeys, coming out from the bands, ordered by Sugriva, made in the direction of Lanka crowned with ensigns. And, terrifying the fowls and dispiriting beasts and birds and shaking Lanka with their roars, those foremost monkeys set up shouts. And they, endowed with great impetuosity, went on, oppressing the earth with their battle-array; and clouds of dust suddenly arose from the the march of the soldiery. And bears, and lions, and buffaloes, and elephants, and deer, and birds, overwhelmed with affright, made for the ten cardinal points. The graceful and lovely summit of Trikuta was entire, elevated, skypiercing, of golden splendour, measuring an hundred yoyanas. clear-shining, level, inaccessible even to fowls, and incapable of being ascended even in thought--not to say of actual ascension by people. Lanka, ruled by Ravana, was situated on its* top,-ten yoyanas in width and twenty in length. And that city was graced with lofty ornamented gateways resembling pale clouds, and golden and silvern walls; and Lanka was adorned with palaces and pilos; like the skyt graced with clouds on the approach of the rainy season. And that palace, which was adorned with thousands of pillars, and which, as if piercing the heavens, looked like a peak of Kailaça—was the residence of the Sovereign of the Rakshasas-the ornament of the city, (ever guarded by full hundreds of Rakshasas. And Lakshmana's auspicious and puissant elder brother, beholding that flourishing and wealthy city resembling the celestial regions,-charming to the mind, made of gold, graced with mountains, and decked out with mountains containing various metals,-resonant with the notes of various birds; abounding in various beasts,-furnished with various kinds of flowers,-and inhabited by various orders of Rākshasas,-was struck with astonishment. And Rama, surrounded by his mighty forces, saw that palace, filled with diverse kinds of gems, adorned with rows of edifices, and having huge engines and gateways.

&quot; Trikuta's .-- T.

† Madhyamam Vaishnavam padam—the middle foot of Vishnu. When Vishnu in his Dwarf-form took the conceit out of V4li, the renowned Asura king,—he covered the earth with one pace, the sky with another and heaven with the last.—T.

SECTION XL

THEN Rama, accompanied by the monkey-leaders, along with Sugriva, ascended the top o Suvela, measuring a circumference of two yoyanas. And staying there for a while and looking at the ten cardinal points, he saw Lanka finely placed on the charming summit of Trikuta,-graced with elegant groves; and (he also saw) the unconquerable lord of Rakshasas, stationed at the top of the gateway, fanned with white chamaras; graced with the umbrella betokening victory; smeared with red sandal; adorned in red ornaments; resembling masses of sable clouds; and apparelled in golden attire,-his breast bearing scars from the tusk-ends of Airavata; covered with a sheet hued like the blood of hares; and appearing like clouds lighted up by the evening sun. And on seeing the Rakshasa-chief, Sugriva suddenly rose up in the sight of the lords of monkeys as well as Raghaya. And influenced by wrath, he, mustering strength and vigor, rising from the brow of the mountain, bounded to the gateway. And pausing for a while and eying the Rakshasa intrepidly, he, slighting the Raksha, addressed him in harsh speech, saying,-"O Rākshasa, I am the friend as well as the slave of Rama-lord of men. Me, backed by the energy of that king of the Earth, shalt thou not escape to-day." Saving this, he, suddenly springing up, descended on him; and snatching away his variegated crown, let it fall on the earth. And seeing him come abruptly, the night-ranger spoke to him thus,-"Thou that wert Sugriva beyond my ken, shalt be neckless" near me." Having said this, he rose up swiftly and dragged him* down to the earth. Thereat springing like pith, the monkey pushed down his antagonist with his arms. And each having his body bathed in sweat and his person covered with blood, each choking and annuling the efforts of the other, - and resembling a Salmali or a Kinguka, and dealing blows and slaps, and hitting with his arms and hands,-those exceedingly strong ones, the lord of the Rakshasas and that of the monkeys, fought wonderfully. And having for a long time encountered each other in combat on the dais belonging to the gate,-they, now listing up their persons and now lowering them, went down, each felling the other with his legs. And smiting each other, they, their bodies fastened together, went down between the wall and the moat, -and again stood upon the ground. And heaving breath, they, resting for a space, grappled with each other; and they fast bound each other with their arms serving for ropes. And each fired with wrath, and each having both strength and skill, they now bore themselves in the lists like a tiger and a lion, furnished with teeth; or like the young of the foremost elephants engaged in encounter, -and restraining and pushing each other with their arms, they simultaneously both came down to the ground. Then starting again to their feet, they, vituperating each other, ranged the lists, displaying feats expressive of skill and strength. Nor did those heroes speedily come by fatigue. And resembling mighty elephants, they, resisting each other by means of their powerful arms like unto the trunks of elephants, fought for a long while, swiftly wheeling about the arena. And approaching each other, they strove to slay each other, like unto two cats seated, momentarily encountering each other over food. And the some lord of monkeys and Ravana, accomplished in fight, coursed the arena, displaying wonderful mandalas, t various sthánas,(a) curious gomútrakas,(b) gatapratyágatas, tiraschinagatas, vakragatas, parimokshas, varjanas, paridhavanas, abhidravanas (c) aplavanas (d) savigrahavasthanas, (e) paravrittas, (f) apávrittas, (g) apadrutas, (h) avaplutas, (i) apanyastas,(i) and upanyastas.(k) In the meanwhile the Raksha attempted to put forth his power of illusion. Knowing this, the king of monkeys shot into the sky. And Ravana, overpowered by fatigue and out of breath, thus baffled by the monkey-king, stood where he was. Thus the master of the foremost monkeys, securing fame in fight, beat the nightranger, causing him to experience fatigue. And bounding beyond the spacious sky, the offspring of the Sun came to the side of Rama in the midst of the monkey-forces. And having done that deed, the son of the Sun,-lord of monkeys-with his heart surcharged with rejoicing, entered that host having the speed of the wind; enhancing the martial ardour of the son of the foremost of the Raghus, and honored by the monkeys.

&quot;The text has hinagrive—neckless. There is a pun here, turning on the word grive—neck. Ravana says: "Thou wert Sugriva (good-necked) in my absence,—but now thou shalt be hinagrive—neckless."—T.

* Sugriva.

† A mandala is of four kinds, vis , chari, karana, khanda and malamandela.

- (b) A kind of motion resembling cow's urine flowing, as its name significa.
- (c) Swiftly fronting the antagonist.
- (d) Proceeding 'like a summer's cloud.'
- (e) Standing before the adversary, after making others engage in combat. What this means in the passage under notice is hard to divine.
  - (f) Turning away from a foe.
  - (g) Moving off from the side of the enemy.
  - (A) Movement with low posture for seizing at the thighs of the adversary.
  - (i) Going for a kick at the adversary.
  - (j) Distending the chest, so that the antagonist may not catch the arms.
  - (*) Stretching forth the arms for seizing those of the enemy.

Proceeding with one leg advanced is chari, with two alternately advanced is tarana, proceeding after the manner of tarana, with some special movements, is thanda; and two or three thandas combined is a mahdmandala.—T.

(a) A particular adjustment of the steps successively; awry, etc.—It is of six kinds, vis., Vaishnava, Sampada, Vaiçakka, Mandala, Pratyalirka and Andlirka.—I.

SECTION XLI.

SEEING those ominous signs, Lakshmana's elder brother, Rama. embracing Sugriva, said,-"Without consulting with me, thou hast acted thus rashly. But kings should not act in such a rash way. Placing in suspense, me, this army and Bibhishana, thou, O hero, enamoured of daring deeds. hast put thyself to all this trouble. But, O hero, henceforth, do not act so. O subduer of enemies, if thou come by any mischance, what shall Sita avail me; or Bharata; or my younger brother-Lakshmana; or Satrughna, O slayer of enemies; or, again, my own person? Ere thou hadst come, I had arrived at this determination; albeit, O thou that ark equal to the mighty Indra or Varuna, I knew thy prowess full well. Slaying Ravana in battle along with his sons, forces and vehicles, and installing Bibhishana in Lanka, and placing the kingdom in the hands of Bharata, I shall renounce my body, O exceedingly powerful one!" When Rama had said this, Sugriva answered,-"Knowing my own strength, how, O Raghava, viewing Ravana, who had ravished away thy wife, could I forbear, O hero?" As that hero was speaking thus, Raghava addressed Lakshmana having auspiciousness. thus,-"O Lakshmana, occupying some tract furnished with cool water and woods bearing fruits, we shall sojourn, dividing and marshalling our forces. I see a mighty fear present, destructive of people,-and boding destruction unto the foremost heroes among the bears, monkeys and Rakshasas. The winds ruffle; and the earth is tremulous. And the tops of mountains tremble, and the mountains themselves send up loud sounds. And the clouds are goblinish; and fierce; and harsh-sounding. And wearing terrific looks, they fiercely pour down showers mixed with drops of blood. And the Evening resembles the red sandal, and is fearful. And a flaming circle droppeth from the Sun. And exciting great fear, inauspicious birds and beasts, wearing cruel looks, and in distressful guise,-cry in piteous accents, facing the Sun. And at night, the ominous Moon with a black-red brim as at the time of universal wreck, burneth. And, O Lakshmana, there is a crimson, rough, slight, and graceful rim round the Sun; and a blue mark is visible on his disc. And the stars do not course as formerly. Behold, O Lakshmana, all these, prefiguring the Doom. And crows and hawks and vultures drop down. And jackals vell with loud inauspicious notes. The Earth, converted into mud with flesh and gore, shall be covered with darts and javelins and swords, discharged by Rakshasas and monkeys. This very day with all expedition Shall we, surrounded on all sides by the monkeys, march towards the city governed by Ravana." Having said this unto Lakshmana, Lakshmana's elder brother possessed of exceeding strength, hastily descended from the top of the mountain. And descending from the mountain, the righteous Raghava surveyed his troops, incapable of being beaten by enemies. And after making the mighty host of the monkey-king equip itself, Raghava versed in season, along with Sugriva, at the proper hour, issued orders for battle. Then in due time that one, accoutred with his bow, surrounded by a mighty army, set out, with the intention of entering the city of Lanka. And those two-Bibhishana Sugriva-and Hanuman, and Jamvaban, and Nala, and the bear-king Nila, and Lakshmana, followed (Rāma). Behind them, the mighty array of bears and monkeys followed Raghava, cevering a wide surface of land. The monkeys, resembling elephants, capable of resisting foes, took mountain-peaks and tall trees by hundreds. And in a short time those repressors of foes—the brothers Rama and, Lakshmana-arrived at the city of Ravana; with peanons streaming over her; charming; garnished with groves and woods; having variegated gateways; inaccessible; and having walls and gates. And miged on by Rama's command, the wood-rangers,* as commanded, blocking up (Lanka) incapable of being subdued even by the gods, stationed themselves. Coming to Lanka ruled by Ravana, that hero, Rama, son unto Dagaratha, along with Lakshmana, remained stationed at the Northern gate, where Ravana used to reside. None save Rāma was competent to protect that dreadful gate, where Rāvana usid to reside. None save Rāma was competent to protect that dreadful gate, guarded by Ravana himself. like the Ocean guarded by Varuna,-and protected on all sides by terrible Raksbasas equipped with weapons, capable of striking terror into the weak; like unto the nether regions guarded by Danavas. And (Rama) saw there many and various arms and mail of the warriors, ranged together. And coming to the Eastern gate, that leader of the monkey-army, the powerful Nila, along with Mainda and-Dwivida,-took up his post there. And the exceedingly strong Angada, accompanied by Rishaya, Cavāksba, Gaya, and Gavaya, occupied the Southern gate. And the mighty monkey Hanuman protected the Western entrance. And Sugriva himself, with Prajangha, Tarasa and other heroes, was quartered near the garrision in the centre. And accompanied by all the foremost monkeys resembling Suparna or the Wind, twenty ketis of renovined monkey-leaders, blocking up all sides, stationed themselves near the monkey, Sugriva. And at Rāma's command, Lakshmann along with Bibhishana, went from door to door, resuling instructions to kotis of monkeys. On the west of Rāma, Jāmbavān along with Sushena, followed by innumerable troops, remained hard by at the garrison in the middle. And those tiger-like monkeys, furnished with teeth like unto tigers, weilding trees and mountain-tops, stood ready for fight. And all had-their tails curled up, and all were armed with teeth and noils, and all had chequered bodies, and all had frightful faces. And some had the strength of ten elephants; and some had strength ten times as much; and some of the monkey-leaders there had the strength of a thousand elephants, -and some had the strength of numbers (of elephants); and some had strength hundred times as much. And others had immeasurable might. And wonderful and astonishing was their meeting. And the concourse at that place of the monkey-forces was like the concourse of locusts. And the air was filled up, and the earth was covered quite with the monkeys coursing towards Lanka and dropping down into it. And hundreds and thousands making up the army of monkeys, arrived at the gate of Lanka; while others were pouring in from all sides for encounter. And that mount was covered with monkeys. And a thousand ayutas were going round the city. And Lanka, blocked up everywhere with powerful monkeys bearing trees in their hands, was incapable of being entered even by the Wind. And the Rakshasas, sore pressed by thousands of monkeys resembling masses of clouds, and like unto Sakra himself in battle, were seized with amazement. And like unto the roar of water on the ocean being riven, there arose a mighty tumult in consequence of the forces surging hither and thither. And with that sound the entire Lanka, with her wall and gateways, her mountains, woods, and forests, began to shake. And that army, protected by Rama and Lakshmana as well as Sugriva, became all the more invincible even by the Asuras and celestials. And having arranged his forces with the view of destroying the Rakshas, Raghava, versed in the resources of war,* taking counsel of the counsellors, and deciding again and again his course of action,-intendin to adopt further measures,-resolved to abide by the advice of Bidhishanat, remembering the morality regulating oconciliation, &c.

* Monkeys.

† Which was,—" If Rávana should seek thy succour, thou shouldst confer on him his kingdom,"—T.

monarchs*. And then, calling Vali's son, Angada, (Rama) said,-"O mild one, going to the Ten-necked one, tell him in my words,-Bounding over the deep and casting off fear and dejection, I have laid seige to the city of Lanka; and have reft thee of thy prosperity and thy wealth; and rendered thee moribund and senseless. Thou hast, O nightranger, through delusion and pride injured saints and celestials, and Gandharvas and Apsaras, and Serpents, and Yakshas, and crowned heads. But, O Rakshasa, thy pride begot of the boon received from the Self create hath gone from thee, whose destroyer, tl, afflicted in consequence of my wife having been carried off,-weilding the rod, have sat down at the door of Lanka. O Rakshasa, thou shalt, remaining steady in fight, attain the state of celestials and Maharshis and Rajarshis. And, O worst of Rakshasas. do thou display that prowess of thine by which, aided by thy power of illusion, thou hast forcibly carried off Sita, disregarding me. I shall with my sharpened shafts render this world free from Rakshasas, unless rendering back Mithila's daughter, thou throw thyself on my mercy. And, for certain, that foremost of Rakshasas, the righteous and graceful Bibhishana, who hath joined us, shall obtain, without having a thorn in his side, all this wealth of Lanka. For thou, foolish, wicked, ignorant of self-knowledge, and having dolts for counsellors, art not competent to unrighteously exercise kingship for a moment. Fight thou, O Rakshasa, summoning fortitude and heroism. On being slain with my shafts, thou shalt attain peace. D night-ranger, if thou shouldst range the three worlds in the shape of a bird, thou, soming in my ken, shalt not be able to preserve thy life. It is all this for thy good; do thou perform acts for the good of thy body surviving death; and do thou see Lanka well; for thy life is in my keeping." Thus addressed by Rama of untiring deeds. Tārā's son went through the welkin like the embodied bearer of sacrificial offerings.4 And arriving near that subduer of enemies, Ravana, in a moment, that graceful one saw Rayana, sitting calmly in the midst of his ministers. And dropping down in his vicinity like a flaming fire, that best of monkeys, Angada, resembling a golden bracelet,† stood there. And then introducing himself, Angada delivered unto Rāvana along with his ministers all that Rama had excellently spoken unto him, neither extenuating nor setting down aught of bimself,- I am the envoy of the king of Kocola Rama of untiring deeds; and Lam the son of Vali .- I do not know whether thou hast heard of me. And Raghu's son, Rama-enhancer of Kaucalya's joy-hath said unto thee,- Do thou, O fell one, coming out, give me battle and prove thy prowess. Thee shall I slay together with thy ministers, and with thy sons and relations and friends. And thou being slain, the three worlds shall attain peace. And to-day shall I destroy the enemy of the gods and Danavas, and Yakshas, of the Gandharvas, serpents and Rākshasas,-and the thorn fin the side of) the saints. And on thee being slain, all the wealth shall be Bibhishana's ; unless, bowing down (unto me) and paying me homage, thou render back Maithili." When that monkey-chief had spoken thus, the lord of the night-rangers was wrought up with wrath. And coming under the sway of passion, he commanded his counsellors, saying,-"Take this one of perverse understanding, and slay him at once".

* In this connection, the principle referred to is: "If a king can accomplish his purpose by conciliation, he should not employ punishment."—T.

† Dandadhara-lit.-rod-bearing, a name of Yama,-who is described as wellding a rod for chastising wrong-doers -T.

I i. c. attain heaven .- T.

· Fire.

† This simile is hardly happy, but the lure was even the name of the monkey, Angada suggested kanakángada—golden bracelet. This typifies the tendency prevailing to this day of Hindu authors to exercise their ingenuity in Puns.—T.

Hearing Ravana's speech, four grim-visaged night-rangers seized (Angada) flaming in energy like fire itself. And Tārā's son suffered himself to be taken, in order that the hero might then display his prowess before the Yatudhanas.* Then Angada, taking them up, who were pressed against his arms, like insects,-loapt up on a palace resembling a hill. Thereat, in consequence of the impetuosity of his bound, the Rakshasas, slipping off, fell on to the ground in the very , sight of the Rakshasa king. Then the powerful son of Vali with his legs attacked the top of that palace, elevated like a hill, t of the lord of Rakshasas. And thereat, as formerly the summit of the Himavan had been cleft by the thunderbolt, the palace, thus assailed, was split in the very presence of the Ten-necked one. Having reft the top of the edifice, and proclaimed his name, Angada, setting up a mighty roar, sprang into the sky. And, aggrieving the Rakshasas and rejoicing all the monkeys, he came back to the side of Rama in the midst of the monkeys. Ravana was transported with wrath in consequence of the breaking down of the palace. And, finding his destruction (at hand), be began to heave sighs. And Rama, surrounded by innumerable delighted monkeys setting up shouts,-anxious for slaying his foe, prepared for battle. And at the command of Sugriva, the exceedingly powerful monkey-Sushenaresembling a mountain-summit, surrounded by a large number of monkeys capable of assuming shapes at pleasure, began to range from door to door :I like the Moon ranging the stars. Seeing the hundred akshauhinis of the wood-rangers, stationed in Lanka, extending down to the sea, some of the Rakshasas were struck with astonishment, while some came under the influence of fear; and some experienced-delight from the (anticipated) delight of hattle. And the space between the well and the moat all was flooded with monkeys. And the distressed Rākshasas saw the wall thronging with monkeys;* and thereat exclaiming "Alas" "Alas," the Rākshasas were extremely terrified. And on that frightful uproar arising, the warriors of the Rākshasa monarch,—Rākshasas—seizing mighty arms, began to patrol about, like unto winds blowing at the time of the universal dissolution.

* Rákshanas.

† The commentator, however, would make dadarca—saw—understood. "Angada saw that the palace was high like a hill, etc." This is unnecessary.—T.

# For protecting the entire army, as well as for procuring information of the movements of the enemy.—T.

SECTION XLIL

Then those Rākshasas, going to that subduer of enemies, Rāvana, informed him that Rāma along with the monkeys had laid seige unto the city. Hearing the city beseiged, the night-ranger was enraged. And, hearing that double arrangements had been made (by Rāma) in guarding the gateways, (Rāvana) ascended the palace. He saw Lankā with her hills, woods, and forests, covered everywhere with innumerable monkeys eager for encounter. And he saw the entire Earth tawneyed with the monkeys; and he reflected within himself how he could destroy these. And reflecting for long, Rāvana having expansive eyes, assuming patience, gazed at Rāghava and the leader of monkeys. Rāghava with his host was fast approaching (the wall); and Rāvana saw Lankā defended on all sides by Rākshasas. And Daçaratha's son, seeing Lankā crowned with variegated ensigns and standards, mentally went to Sith, with a sad heart. "For my sake, here that one, Janaka's daughter, having eyes resembling those of a young deer,-is undergoing affliction; and lieth down on the ground." And aggrieved at the thought of Vaidehi, the righteous Rama speedily commanded the monkeys to compass the destruction of the enemies. As Rama of untiring deeds said this, the monkeys, filling (the air) with leonine roars, began to press forward furiously. "We shall cleave Lanks with mountain-peaks, or with our blows"-thus thought the leaders within themselves. And the monkey-leaders stood, raising up gigantic mountainpeaks and tops of mountains, and rooting up various trees. And for doing what was dear unto Rama, that army, divided into separate parties, in the presence of the Rakshasachief commenced scaling Lanka. And those copper-faced ones of golden sheen, who had consecrated their lives to the service of Rama, equipped with trees and rocks, began to throng upon Lanka. And the monkeys with trees and hill-tops and blows crushed countless gates and tops of walls; and they filled the moat containing crystal water with dust, tops of crags, straw, and wood. Then leaders of thousands and kotis and hundreds of kotis began to scale Lanks. And the monkeys crushed golden gateways; and, breaking down gates resembling the tops of the summits of Kailaca, bounded roaring, some towards the wall and some all around. And resembling gigantic elephants, they rushed towards Lanka. "Victory to the mighty Rama, and Victory to the exceedingly powerful Lakshmana, and Victory to king Sugriva, who is protected by Raghava.' Thus shouting, those monkeys, wearing forms at will, sending up roars, tushed amain towards the wall of Lanka. And Viravahu, Suyahu, Nala and Panaça-leader of monkeys-breaking (a portion of) the wall, took up their post there. In the meautime, (they) arranged the forces in order of battle. And the Mrong Kumuda, surrounded by ten kotis of victorious monkeys, stood obstructing the Eastern gate. And for backing him, there remained the monkey, Prasabha, as also the long-armed Panaca, surrounded by monkeys. And obstructing the Southern entrance stood the strong and gallant monkey, Satavali, surrounded by twenty kotis. And the strong sire of Taia, the powerful Sushena, obstructed the Western gate, backed by kotis upon kotis (of monkeys). And observeting the Northern gate, remained the puissant Rama himself along with Sumitra's son, as well as the king of monkeys-Sugriva. And that huge-bodied and dreadful Golangula-the mighty and powerful Gavaksha-surrounded by a koti, remained by the side of Rāma. And that destroyer of foes-the exceedingly mighty Dhumra of the bears of terrific wrath, remained by the side of Rama-where, surrounded by vigilant counsellors, and bearing a mace in his hand, stood the exceedingly strong Bibhishana, endowed with wonderful powers, in complete panoply. And Gaya, and Gavaksha, and Gavaya, and Sarabha, and Gandhamadana, protected the monkey-army, coursing all around. And then, his soul wrought up with wrath, Ravana-lord of Rakshasas-speedily ordered the whole host to sally out. Hearing those words, which came out from Ravana's mouth, all of a sudden the night-rangers sent up a dreadful yell. Then awoke the kettle-drums. having moon-like pale faces,-sounded by means of golden sticks. And conchs by hundreds and by thousands, capable of producing loud blares, filled with air proceeding from the mouths of dreadful Rakshasas,-were winded. And with conchs placed in their mouths, those night-rangers, having bodies blue like those of Cukas, resembled masses of clouds, with lightning and cranes. And, commanded by Ravana, the troops cheerfully issued forth like the onrushing of the . mighty main filling all at the time of the universal dissolution. And then the monkey-army gave a roar, spreading all around; and it seemed as if the sound filled all Malays with its sides and caves. And sounds of conchs, and drams, as well as the leonine shouts of the impetuous (warriors), made the earth, air, and ocean, resound; and these mixed with the roars of elephants, the neighing of steeds, the rattle of the car-wheels, and the tread of the Rakshasas' And in the meantime there commenced a mighty mencounter between the Rakshasas and the monkeys, like that which took place of yore between the gods and the Asuras. And displaying their prowess, they* began to slaughter monkeys with maces, and darts, and adzes. And the vehement monkeys (on their side) slaughtered Rākshasas with trees and tops of crags as well as with their nails and teeth. And a mighty sound arose of 'Victory unto king Sugriva!' and 'Victory unto thee, O king,'-each army taking the name of its king. And then other dreadful Rakshasas that were stationed upon the wall, dropping down, pierced the monkeys with darts and bhindipalas. And (thereat) the monkeys, flying into fury, descending to the earth and bounding, brought down the Rakshasas with their arms. And that encounter of the Rākshasas and the monkeys was mighty and wonderful, and the ground became wet with flesh and gore.

A translator cannot help a feeling of disappointment at the difference—to the disadvantage of English—between Sanskrit and English. The original for througing with monkeys' is a verbal attributive—visionial life.

SECTION XLIII.

And as the high souled monkeys and Rākshasas faught on, their wrath vastly increased at sight of each other's farces. And furnished with steeds in golden trappings; and elephants resembling flames of fire; and cars appearing like (so many) suns; and shining armour,—the valiant Rākshasas issued, making the ten cardinal points resound. The Rakshasas of terrific exploits were burning for victory on behalf of Ravana .-- And the mighty monkey-army also, eager for victory, darted against the host of the Rakshas of dreadful deeds. And in the meanwhile, as either party assailed the other, there took place single combats between the Rakshasas and the monkeys. And as Andhaka had combated with the Three-eyed (deity),* that Rakshasa, the exceedingly energetic Indrajit, faught with Angada, son unto Vali. Sampati, hard to bear, engaged with Prajangha; and the monkey. Hanuman, entered into conflict with Jambumali. And Ravana's younger brother, Biblishana, fired with wrath, encountered Satrughna, endowed with exceeding impetuosity. And the highly powerful Nila engaged with Nikumbha. And Sugriva-lord of monkeys-undertook Praghasa, and the graceful Lakshmana was engaged with Virupaksha. And the exceedingly irrepressible Agniketa and the Rakshasa-Raçmiketu - and Mitraghna and Yajnakopa were engaged with Rama. And Vajramu-hiln encountered Mainda, and Açaniprabha, Dwivida. And those foremost of monkeys faught with those dreadful Rākshasas,-the heroic and terrible Pratapana, incapable of being overcome in battle, was combating with Nala of terrific force; and that lusty son of Rightcousness, well-known as Snihena,-a monkey-battled with Vidyunmäli. And other fearful monkeys encountered other Rakshasas; and many were the encounters that took place. And great and herce was the engagement that took place between the heroic Rakshasas and monkeys burning for victory, capable of making people's hair stand on end. And from the persons of the Rakshasas and the monkeys there flowed a river of gore, having hair for grass (growing on its banks), and the bodies of the warriors for pieces of planks floating (adown the current). Indraint, growing enraged, with his mace dealt a blow at that tearer of hostile ranks, Angada,-like him of an hundred sacrifices striking with his thunderbolt. Thereat, that graceful monkey, Angada, gifted with vehemence, with his mace crushed his car decked in gold, together with the steeds and the charioteer. Sampati was pierced with three arrows by Prajangha; and the former (in his turn) slew Prajangha on the edge of battle with an Açwakarna.* And Jambumāli, mounted on a car, possessed of prodigious strength, fired with wrath, with all the access of force derived from his car, wounded Hanuman between his paps. Thereat, getting at his CAR, Hanuman-son unto the Wind-god-with a slap speedily crushed his adversary's vehicle along with the Raksha. Then the terrific Pratapana, roaring, rushed at Nala; and thereat Nala, with his body pierced with sharp shafts by that swifthanded Raksha, plucked out Pratapana's eyes, and cast them to the earth. And that lord of monkeys, Sugriva, with a Saptaparnat swiftly slew Praghasa, who appeared to be devouring up the troops. And, tormenting the Rakshasa of dreadful form with a shower of shafts, Lakshmana slew Virupāksha with a single arrow. And the irrepressible Agniketu, the Rakshasa Raçmiketu, Mitraghua and Yajnakopa, with their arrows rendered Rama aslame. Thereat, Rama, growing wroth, in battle severed the heads of those four by means of four shafts, dreadful, and resembling the tongues of a flame. And Vajramushti was slain in conflict by Mainda with a clenched fist; and down came he to the ground along with his car and horses, like a turret toppling (headlong). And Nikumbla in fight wounded Nila resembling a mass of blue collyrium, with sharpened shafts,-as the Sun pierceth clouds with his rays. Again with an bundred arrows, that light-handed night-ranger pierced Nila in the field; and Nikumbha laughed thereat. At this, even as Viehna did in battle, Nila with a wheel of hist car, cut off in f A tree.

* Siva, fabled to have three eyes,-T.

* A kind of tree.

<sup>1</sup> Nikumbha's

conflict Nikumbha's head together with that of his charioteer. And Dwivida, possessed of the touch of the Vajra and thunderbolt, in the presence of the entire Rakslasa host hurled a mountain-peak at him that was endowed with the splendour of the thunder-bolt. And Açaniprabha in encounter pierced that foremost of monkeys, Dwivida, with shafts resembling thunder-bolts. Thereat, beside himself with wrath, with his entire body wounded with arrows, Dwivida with a sála destroyed Açaniprabha along with his car and horses. And Vidyunmāli, mounted on a car, assailed Sushena with shafts decked with gold, and began to shout momentarily. Seeing him mounted on his car, Sushena-best of monkeys-taking up a huge crag, swiftly brought his car down to the ground. Thereat, endowed with lightness, that night-ranger, Vidyunmali, at once extricating himself from his car, stood on the ground with a mace in his hand. Thereupon, that foremost of monkeys, Sushena, growing furious, taking up a gigantic crag, rushed at the night-ranger. And as he was descending, the night-ranger, Vidyunmali, with his mace swiftly hit at the breast of Sushena-greatest of monkeys. Thereat. without thinking at all of the terrific hit of the mace, that best of mankeys in mighty conflict brought down that upon hist head. And, assailed with the crag, the night-ranger, Vidyunmāli, having his chest crushed, fell down to the earth, deprived of life. And, like the celestials warring against the Daityas, the heroic monkeys warred on and confounded the valiant rangers of the night. And frightful was the field of battle, with darts, and other arms; and clubs, and javeling, and lances, and other weapons; and with broken cars, and war-horses, and mad horses slain, and monkeys and Rakshasas; and wheels and akshas, 1 and yokes and standards,-broken and scattered over the ground; and awarms of jackals began to range on all sides of the monkeys and the Räkshasas; and Kavandhas* began to rise in that terrific encounter, resembling the encounter of the gods and the Asuras. Thus destroyed by the foremost of monkeys, the rangers of night, beyond themselves with the smell of blood,—eagerly wishing for the setting of the Sun,† again made active preparations for a renewal of the fight.

* The crag, shich he had at first hit,-T.

† VidyummSli's.

I A part of a wheel.

SECTION XLIV

As the monkeys and the Rakshasas thus faught on, the sun set, and the fatal Night came. And then commenced a night-engagement between the dreadful Rakshasas and the monkeys of fixed hostility, each party burning for victory. And in that profound darknesss, the monkeys and the Rakshasas began to slav each other, exclaiming,-Thou art a Rakshasa,' and 'Thou art a monkey.' And in that army there was heard a mighty uproar of 'slain,' 'rive!' 'come!' 'why fliest?' And, dark-hued, the Rakshasas, equipped in golden mail, in that deep darkness appeared like elevated hills clad with woods of flaming medicinal herbs. And in that limitless gloom, the Rakshasas, transported with wrath, advanced with impetuous speed, devouring monkeys. And, fired with terrible wrath, they. I bounding up, with their sharp teeth tore up steeds caparisoned in gold, and standards resembling venomous serpents. And the lusty monkeys in battle agitated the Rakshasa host, -and, waxing furious, with their teeth pulled and bit elophants and the riders thereof, and cars furnished with flags and standards. And Rama and Lakshmana with shafts resembling venomous serpents, slaughtered the foremost among the Rakshasas-both those that were seen and those that were not .- And the dust of the earth arising from warring combatants, and from the hoofs of horses and the wheels of cars, choked up eye and eat. And as the mighty encounter, capable of making people's hair stand on end, went on, there flowed a fearful river of gore. And the sounds of kettle-drums and Mridangas and Panavas, mingled with those of conchs and car-wheels,-were wonderful (to hear). And the sounds of steeds neighing, and Rakshasas (roaring), and monkeys, rejoicing,-were something tremendous. And, with able monkeys slain; and darts and javelins and axes; and slaughtered Rakshasas wearing forms at pleasure, lying mountain-like,-the field of battle, seeming to have offerings of arms representing flowers, -became difficult to recognise, and inaccessible; and the earth was drenched with streams of blood. And that Night, destructive to monkeys and Rakshasas,-was dreadful, and difficult of being out-sped by all,-like unto the Fatal Night of beings. And in that profound darkness, the Rakshasas with great vivacity attacked Rama with a shower of shafts. And the roars of those beings as they advanced, sending up shouts in anger, resembled the dashing of the Ocean at the time of the universal dissolution. And in the twinkling of an eye, Rama by means of six shafts resembling tongues of flames, struck six of the night-rangers; vis., Yajnacatru, irrepressible (in fight),-and Mahāpārewa, and Mahodara, and the hugebodied Vajradanashtra,-and those two-Suka and Sarana, And, pierced in their vitals with Rama's shafts, they, having only their lives left to them, disappeared from the field. Then in the twinkling of an eye, that Mahāratha rendered all sides clear (of all gloom) by means of arrows resembling tongues of fire; and those other heroic Rakshasas that were in front of Rama, were destroyed on approaching the place, like insects approaching a fire. And with shafts plated with gold lying in all directions, the night resembled one in autumn decked with fire-flies. And in consequence of the uproar occasioned by the Rakshasas, and the sounds of drums, that night, already dreadful (in itself), became all the more so. And on that sound attaining dimensions on all · sides, it seemed as if the mount Trikuta, containing numerous caverns, had been speaking. And huge-bodied Golangulas of equal lustre with darkness itself,* binding fast the night-rangers with their arms, began to swallow them up. And Angada was present in the encounter, for slaving foes. And Indrajit, fairing sadly at the hands of Angada, abondoning his vehicle, and having his horses as well as his charioteer slain, vanished then and there. And that feat of Vali's son, worthy of being honored, all the celestials with the saints and both Rama and Lakshmana lauded to the height. All beings were acquainted with the might of Indrajit in battle; and, therefore, witnessing his discomfiture, and seeing that high-souled one, they rejoiced exceedingly. And, seeing the enemy vanquished, all the monkeys with Sugriva and Bibbishana, experiencing high delight, exclaimed, -"Excellent!" "Excellent!" And, beaten by Vali's son of dreadful deeds, Indrajit was fired with a mighty wrath. And, being handled hard in battle, and having vanished from the field, the heroic and wicked son of Ravana, who had received a boon from Brahma, transported with passion,remaining invisible, began to discharge sharpened shafts of the splendour of the thunder-bolt. And worked up into rage, he in the conflict pierced Raghu's sons, Rama and Lakshmana all over their hodies, with terrific arrows consisting of serpents. And himself engirt with illusion, that night-ranger, given to fighting in crooked ways,-remaining

&quot; Spectres having bodies without heads.

This was because, as intelligently remarks Ramanuja, night-rangers grow powerful at night.—T.

<sup>$ $\</sup>frac{1}{2}$ $\delta$ the monkeys, as appears from the context.—T.

* Itony.

Invisible to all creatures,—stupified the descendants of Raghu in battle; and by means of his shafts bound the brothers, Rāma and Lakshmana. And then in the sight of the monkeys, those heroes and foremost of men were suddenly overpowered with shafts by the enraged (Indrajit). And when the son of the Rākshasa monarch felt himself incompetent to cope with them* openly, then that impious one, resorting to illusion, bound those princes (by that means).

SECTION XLV

THEN, anxious to ascertain hist course, the king's son possessed of prowess, and endowed with exceeding strength, Rama, ordered ten of the monkey-leaders. And that repressor of foes ordered Vali's son-Angada, the vigorous Sarabha, Dwivida, Hanuman, the mighty Sanuprastha, Rishabha and Rishabhaskandha. Thereat with alacrity those monkeys, weilding mighty trees, shot up into the sky, and began to scour the ten cardinal points. And Ravana's · son, skilled in arms, resisted the impetuous march of those vehement ones by means of a powerful weapon as well as arms more forceful (than the force of their rush). And the exceedingly vehement monkeys, cut and mangled with ndrachas, saw him in the dark like the sun enveloped in clouds. And that conquerer in battle, Ravana's son, with shafts sorely pierced the persons of Rama and Lakshmana. And both Rama and Lakshmana had their bodies entirely covered by the angry Indrajit with shafts turned into serpents. And from their wounds blood began to gush out in streams; and they looked like flower-crowned Kingakas. Then that one having red corners unto his eyes and resembling a mand of crushed collyrium, Ravana's son, said unto the brothers, as he vanished,-"When I fight remaining invisible, even Sakra-the lord of the celestials-cannot see or approach me,-and who are ye? And I, with my soul surcharged with wrath, shall, assailing them with showers of weapons furnished with Kanka feathers, send Raghu's sons to the abode of Yama." Having spoken thus unto the brothers-Rama and Likshmana, cognizent of righteousness-(Indrajit) -pierced them with sharpened shafts, and shouted in joy. And stretching his large bow, that one sable like unto a mass of crushed collyrium again discharged terrific shafts in battle. And that one versed in the inner sense of things, with whetted arrows pierced the vitals of Rama and Likshmana and shouted momentarily. And fast bound by the shackles of shafts on the edge of battle, they tould not attain respite for a moment. Then with their persons pierced with shafts and darts, and resembling the fligs of the Great Indra let loose from the cords and trembling (in the air,-and with their bodies bristling with arrows,-those herbes and mighty bowmen-lords of the earth-tormented' in consequence of their vitals having been pierced, dropped down to the earth. And those heroes, bathed in blood, and their persons covered with arrows,-pained and suffering terribly, lay down as became heroes. And there was not so much room unpierced in their persons as could be measured by a finger; and they were wounded with arrows up to the fore-parts of their hands † And they being wounded by that fell one capable of assuming shapes at will, blood violently gusted out of their bodies like water from a spring. And Rama Felf first, pierced in the vitals with the shafts. And the same

* Râma and Lakshmana.

† Indrajit's.

. e. Rima and Lukshmasa.

<sup>1.</sup> This state is enther obscure, and the Bengali translators have convenient-

Indrajit who had formerly wrathfully routed Sakra, (now) pierced (Rama) with narachas knotted with gold, and having polished heads; swift-speeding; and resembling dust carried about by the wind; and half-ndrachas; and darts resembling anialis;* and vatsadantas : 1 and sinhadanshtras : 1 and razors : and. resigning his stringless bow decked in gold and curved in three places,—with its part for grasping shattered—hed lay down like a hero. And seeing Rama-loremost of mendown within arrow-range, Lakshmana despaired of his life. And seeing his brother, Rama, having eyes resembling lotuspetals and ever delighting in hattle, himself the refuge of others,-lying down in the field; (Lakshmana) began to weep. And the monkeys also, seeing him, were plunged in sorrow; and they, their eyes flooded with tears, began to cry in grief of heart. And when they had been bound and had laid themselves down as become heroes, the monkeys stood around them, -and, conversing with one another, they, headed by the son of the Wind, were seized with extreme SOFFOW.

SECTION XLVI

And the rangers of woods, gazing at the earth and the sky, at length cast their eyes on the brothers—Rāma and Lakshmana, covered all over with arrows. And after that Rākshasa had gone away having performed his work, like the God going away, after having showered,—there came

* The hands joined at the lower sides, with the palms hollowed .- T.

† Weapons resembling the teeth of a calf.

&quot;I Weapons resembling the lion's teeth

<sup>8</sup> Ráfha.

▶ Indra.

to that place Bibbishana with Sugriva. And, mourning Raghu's sons, there also came in all haste Nila and Dwivida and Mainda and Sushena and Kumuda and Angada in company with Hanuman. And moveless; breathing low,covered with blood,-pierced all over with net-works of shafts; dumb; they* were lying on the field. And they were sighing like serpents; and were inert; and deprived of prowess; and washed in blood; and looking like unto golden standards. And as they lay moveless, as become heroes, the leaders of monkeys environed them with tear-charged eyes. And seeing the sons of Raghulying, covered with showers of shafts, the monkeys, with Bibhishana, were pained (exceedingly). And the monkeys, surveying the sky as well as all directions, could not see Rayana's son in battle enveloped with illusion. And then Bibhishana by means of illusion saw his brother's son staying before, hidden by illusion. And Bibhishana saw that hero of incomparable deeds, who had no compeer in the field and who had energy, fame and prowess,-as he remained invisible in consequence of the boon received from Brahma. And Indrajit, seeing his own feat and them lying at length, spake in excess of joy, gladdening all the Rakshasas,- The brothers-Rama and Lakshmana, possessed of great strength, who had slain Khara and Dushana, are themselves slain with my shafts. And all the celestials and Asuras assembled together with the saints, are incompetent to emancipate these from the fetters of my shafts. He for whom my father was exercised with anxiety and tormented by grief, for whom my sire used to spend nights without pressing his bed,-for whom this entire Lanka had resembled a river turbulent in the rainy reason,-that same evil sticking by the root of all, hath been dispensed his quietus by me. And like clouds of autumn, the prowess of Rama and Lakshmana as well as that of all the rangers of the woods, hath been rendered useless." Saying this in the presence of all the Rakshasas, Ravana's son-destroyer of foes-menacing the monkey-leaders, hit Nila with nine arrows, and hurt Mainda and Dwivida each with three powerful shafts. And piercing lambavan with an arrow in the chest, that mighty bowman discharged ten at Hanuman. And Ravana's son possessed of exceeding impetuosity, pierced in the conflict with two shafts each Gavaksha and Sarabha of immeasurable vigor. And Ravana's son, summoning celerity, pierced the king of Golangulas and Vali's son, Angada, with innumerable arrows. And the powerful son of Rayana, endowed with might, piercing the foremost monkeys with shafts resembling tongues of flames, set up shouts in the field of battle. And tormenting the monkeys with volleys of shalts and striking terror into them, that mighty-armed one, bursting out into a laugh, said,- 'Let the Rakshasas behold these brothers, lying fast bound with dreadful arrows in front of the forces." Thus addressed. those Rakshasas -- wily warriors all - resembling masses of clouds, witnessing that deed (of Indrajit), struck with wonder and rejoicing (greatly), set up tremendous roars. And thinking that Rama was slain, they honored Ravana's son. And seeing the brothers-Rama and Lakshmanamotionless, and lying inert on the ground,-they took them for slain. And, experiencing excess of joy. Indiaitconqueres in conflict-entered the city of Lanka, rejoicing all the Nairitas. Seeing the bodies as well as the limbs of Rama and Lakshmana, covered entirely with arrows, fear. took possession of Sugriva. Thereat Bibbishana said unto that lord of monkeys, staying in woe-begone guise, with a tearful countenance, and his eyes wild with wrath,-"Do not give way to fear, O Sugriva. Restrain thy rising tears! This is the way of warfare : victory is not (always) sure. But, O hero, if Fortune ultimately smile upon us, this stupor shall go off from these high-souled and exceedingly powerful ones. Therefore, O monkey, do thou cheer me, who am forlorn." Saying this, with his hand Bibhishana washed Sugriva's graceful eyes with water. And taking water, the righteous Bibhishana by means of his knowledge, washed Sugriva's eyes therewith. And washing the face of the intelligent monkey-monarch, Bibhishana spoke these words, seasonable and sedate,-"O foremost of monkey kings, this is no time for being overcome with stupor. At this hour, even immoderate affection may lead to destruction. Therefore, casting off stupor, which tends to mar all work. do thou bethink thee how thou mayst serve this army headed by Rāma. Or do thou protect Rāma so long as he doth not regain consciousness; and when the Kakutsthas shall have regained consciousness, all our apprehension shall vanish. This is nothing to Rama, and Rama is not dying. And Lakshmi,* who is incapable of being attained by those that are doomed, shall not forsake this one. Therefore do thou comfort thyself, do thou also cheer up thy own forces,while I am engaged in composing all the troops. O best of monkeys, these with distended eyes, come under the governance of terror, are, stricken with panic, whispering into each other's ears. But seeing me, let the forces rushing about, cheered up,-as well as the monkeys,-cast off all fear, like a wreath that hath been used before." consorting Sugriva, Bibhishana-lord of Rakshasas-again instilled spirits into the flying forces of monkeys. And Indrajit-worker of mighty illusions-accompanied by his troops, entered the city of Lanka and presented bimself before his father. And approaching Ravana and saluting him with joined hands, he informed his sire of the welcome tidings that Rama and Lakshmana had been slain. And hearing that his foe had fallen, Ravana springing up in the midst of the Rakshasas, with great joy embraced his son. And scenting the crown of his head, (Ravana) with a delighted heart, asked (Indrajit as to all that had taken place): And * The goddess of prosperity.

* Rama and Lakshmans.

on being asked, he (Indrajit) truly related unto his sire how (Rāma and Lakshmana) had been rendered senseless and lack-lustre by being fastened with shafts. Thereat, with rapture surcharging his inmost soul, Rāvana, hearing the speech of the mighty car-warrior, banished his fear of Daçaratha's son,—and rising up, honored his son with glad words.

SECTION XLVII.

WHEN Ravana's son entered Lanka, after having accomplished his purpose, the foremost monkeys protected Rāghava, surrounding him on all sides. And Hanuman, and Angada, and Nila, and Sushena, and Kumuda, and Nala. and Gaya, and Gavāksha, and Panasa, and Samprastha-a mighty monkey-and Jambavan, and Rishava, and Sunda, and Rambha, and Satavali, and Prithu, -all forming themselves into array, and equipped with trees on all sides, and remaining vigilant,-the monkeys kept gazing at all sides, awry and upwards; and even when a straw stirred, they thought it to be a Rakshasa. And Ravana, on his part, experiencing the height of exaltation, summoned the Rakshasis engaged in guarding Sita .-- And thereat the Rakshasis-Trijata and others-presented themselves at his command. And then the lord of Rakshasas, delighted. addressed then the Rakshasis, saying,-"Tell Vaidehi that Ruma and Lakshmana have been slain in battle by Indrajit. And taking her on Pushaka, show her (Rama and Lakshmana) lying slain on the field of battle. That one depending on whom, she had proudly set her face against me,-that husband of hers, along with his brother, hath been stain in conflict. And then Mithila's daughter, her fear gone off with her anxiety, and herself losing all support, -Sitadaughter unto Mithila-decked out in all ornaments, shall seek me. And today beholding Rama with Lakshmana, come under the sway of Time, she, finding no other way, shall desist from her present course. And seeing no other resourse, that one of expansive eyes shall of herself seek me." Hearing those words of the wicked-minded Ravana, the Rakshasis, saying,-"So be it,"-went to where Pushpaka was. Then taking Pushpaka, the Rakshasis at Ravana's command went to Maithili staying in the açoka wood. Then, taking Sita, who was overcome with grief for her lord, the Rakshasis, placed her on the car, Pushpaka. And placing Sita on Pushpaka along with Trijata, Ravana took her all around (Lanka) crowded with ensigns and standards. And the lord of Rakshasas jubilantly proclaimed in Lanka.-"Raghava as well as Lakshmana have been slain by Indrajit in battle." And going about with Trijata, Sita saw all the monkey-troops slain. And she found the flesh-eaters elated in spirits, and the monkeys afflicted with extreme grief at the side of Rama and Lakshmana. Then Sitā beheld both Lakshmana and Rāma lying in the field, senseless and bound with arrows. And those heroes were lying on the earth, their mail torn, their bows cast off, their bodies mangled all over and thickly pierced with shafts. And seeing those brothers,-foremost of heroes and best of men-having eyes resembling white lotuses, and themselves like unto Kumaras,-lying in the field,*-the firesprung one, Sita, striken with grief, began to weep piteously. And that black-eyed one of an excellent person, Janaka's daughter-seeing them roll in the dust, broke out into lamentation. And with her eyes shedding plentiful tears, she seeing those brothers, endowed with god-like prowess, concluded them to be dead; and overwhelmed with grief, spoke as follows.

* Viran nararshabhan-heroes and best of then-occurs again, -left out on the score of redendancy.-T.

SECTION XLVIII.

AND seeing her husband, as well as the exceedingly powerful Lakshmana,-slam, Sitä, afflicted with grief, burst into bitter lamentation. "The soothsayers had said that I should have sons, and should never be a widow Rama being slain, it seems now that those ones, possessed of knowledge, had spoken untruthfully. And those also, who having celebrated sacrifices and rites, had said that I should become the queen (of Rama), -on Rama being slain, seems to-day to have spoken a falsehood, although they are possessed of knowledge. And they also asserted that I should be honored of the wives of heroic kings as well as of my lord,-but on Rama being slain, they seem to have uttered a falsehood, although possessed of knowledge. And those twice-born ones that in my hearing had said auspicious words, on Rama being slain, seem to-day to have spoken a falsehood, although they were possessed of knowledge. These lotusmarks on the feet, betokening unto gentlewomen possessing them, that they are to be installed in the kingdom in company with their husbands-who are kings,-are on me. And those marks find I none on me by which women of rare fortune come by widowhood,-but I find that in me these good Those marks that are pronounced tokens are nullified. infallible by those versed in such knowledge, on Rama being slain, are nullified in me. My hairs are fine, equal, and bloc; my eye-brows touch each other; my hips are devoid of down't and round; and my teeth are close. My temples, and eyes, hands, feet, ankles, and thighs are equal. And my fingers are furnished with round nails, and are plump and even in the middle. And my breasts are close and firm and developed, and have their nipples sunk. And my navel is depressed, with high sides. And my chest is swelling. And my complexion is like the huc of gems,-and my down soft, And they said that I was furnished with twelve auspicious signs. And my hands in the middle parts of my fingers contain wheat-marks; and in the spaces between the fingers, have no uneven corners. And my feet also partake of the general complexion. And my laugh is a gentle smile. And those versed in marks of women knew that I was possessed of such marks. And those Brahmanas skilled in telling fortune said that I should be installed in the kingdom along with my husband; but all that hath been falsified. Having purified Janasthana (of Rakshasas), obtained tidings of me, and crossed the Ocean* incapable of being agitated, those brothers have been slain in the footprint of a cow! The descendants of Raghu had obtained Varuna and Agricya and Aindra and Vayava and Brahmagiras weapons. † Through illusion have those lords of me, who am forlorn--Rama and Lakshmana, resembling Vasava himself in battle,been slain. Coming in battle within ken of Raghava, a foe, even if he be endowed with the fleetness of thought,-doth not go back, living. There is nothing which is too hard for Time; and the Destroyer is incapable of being overcome; inasmuch as Rama along with his brother Lakshmana hath fallen, in fight. And I do not so much mourn Rama or the mighty car-warrior-Lakshmana-or, for that matter, self,as I do the wretched Mother-in-law of mine. She ever thinketh of the period of the promise. When shall I behold

* The commentator assigns a metaphorical sense to acean,—but this is hairly necessary.

t' And did they not remember this now?' completes the sense,-T.

Sits and Lakshmana with Raghava?" As she was these lamenting, the Rakshisi, Trijata, said,-"O exalted lady, do not weep thus. Thy lord liveth. And, O dignified one, I shall unfold unto thee potent and probable reasons why the brothers Rama and Lakshmana live. When their leader falleth, the countenances of the warriors in battle are not overspread with passion, or display cheerfulness and vivacity. And, O Vaidely, if those had lost their lives, this celestial chariot, named Pushpaka, would not have held thee. An army that hath its heroes and chiefs slain-becoming dispirited and drooping, rangeth the field, like a vessel on water that hath lost its helmsman But, O lorn one, these troops, betraying neither agitation nor anxiety, are guarding the Kakutsthas. This I tell thee of them out of affection. Do thou, at this conclusion bringing in joy, take comfort; and behold the Käkutsthas unslain. This I tell thee from affection, I never told thee untruths heretofore, nor, O Mithila's' daughter, will I tell them unto thee now. Thou by virtue of the character conducive to delight, hast found an acess into my heart. These even the colestials and Asuras with Indra (at their head) are incompetent to quell. Seeing such sight, I speak to their as to their being alive. And behold. O Maithili, this mighty wonder! These are lying insensible with arrows, but of these Grace bath not taken leave. It generally happens that the faces of persons dead and gone, are unsightly to a degree. Therefore, O Janaka's daughter, leave off giref and sorrow and stupor. For the sake of Rama and Lakshmana thou caust not today put a period to thy existence" Hearing her words, Mithila's daughter-Sita - resembling the daughter of a celestial, with hands joined, said,-"May this be so?" Then turning, away the car Pushpaka fleet as the mind, the dietienhed Sita entered Lanka along with Trijata. Then in company with Trijata, alighting from Pushpaka, she along with the Rakshasis entered the açoka wood. And entering sporting-ground of the Räkshasa lord abounding in woody tracts, Sitä, having beheld those princes and reflected on them, became subject to a mighty grief.

SECTION XLIX

Bound up terribly with shifts, Daçaratha's sons, lying down bathed in blood, sighed hard like unto scrpents. And all those foremost monkeys, along with Sugriwa, possessed of exceeding strength,-overwhelmed with sorrow, remained surrounding those high-souled ones. In the meanwhile, the powerful Rama, albeit fast bound by the shafts, awoke by virtue of the exceeding toughness of his person, as well as his might. Then, seeing his brother, having a distressful countenance, covered with blood, feeble, and fast bound by the shafts,-Rama, greatly aggrieved, began to moura, what use unto me is the recovery of Sita, or life either, when to-day I see my brother vanquished in fight and lying down in the field? Seeking in the world (of men), I may light upon a woman like Sita; but never on a brother, or a helper, or a warrior like unto Lakshmana. If that enhancer of Sumitra's joy have met with his end, my life I must renounce in the sight of the monkeys. What shall I say unto Kauçaiya: and what shall I say unto Kaikeyi? And what shall I say unto mother Sumitra, eager for a sight of her son? And if I go (back) without him, how shall I soothe her, like unto a cow reft of her calf; and trembling; and resembling a mourning Kurari? And how shall I say unto Satrughana and the illustrious Bharata,—'He went with me to the forest: but I come (back) here without him? I shall not be able to bear Ales rebuke of mother Sumitra. Therefore even here shall I renounce my person; for certainly I dare not live. Fie on me, who am wicked and base; for me this Lakshmana, brought down, lieth in the field of battle, like one that is without life. O Lakshmana, thou ever comfortest me when I am dispirited. But to day, having lost thy life, thou canst not speak to me, who am afflicted. Thou, O hero, who hadst in hattle slain innumerable Rakshasas lying around, hast (at length) thyself been slain in the field with shafts lying down in the battle-field, bleeding, and covered with arrows, thou appearest like the Sun when he hath gone up the Setting-hill. And in consequence of shafts piercing thy vitals, thou canst not speak, but thy visible expression, albeit thou ast dumb, betokens pain. O thou endowed with exceeding splendour, even as thou didst follow me into the forest, will I follow thee unto the mansion of Yama. Thou, having dear friends, and ever following me, hast come by this plight in consequence of my reprehensible conduct. I do not remember having heard any harsh speech from the heroic Lakshmana, even when he had happened to be exceedingly wroth. He that could discharge at one shot five hundred shafts,-that Lakshmana is superior to Karttavirvya himself in that weapon-the bow. He that with his arms could resist the arms of Sakra himself, -that one worthy of a coatly couch-lieth down on the ground, slain. And that false babble shall now, without doubt, consume me; for by me hath not Bibhishana been made monarch of the Rakshasas. Do thou, O Sugriva, this very moment retrace thy steps. Bereft of thy strength through me, thou wilt be worsted by Rayana. And, O Sugriva, placing Angada to the fore. do thou, taking thy host as well as the equipage, company with Nila and Nala, cross over the Ocean. thee hath been achieved a mighty feat incapable of being done by another in battle. And pleased am I with the king of bears, and the lord of Golangulas; and Angada hath gult himself nobly, as also Mainda and Dwivida. And Macketin and Sampāti have both faught terribly. And Gavaya, and Gavāksha, and Sarabha, and Gaja,—and other monkeys have faught as others are incapable of fighting,—determined to lay down their lives (for me). But, O Sugriva, man cannot overrule Destiny. Thou, my friend, fearing righteousness,* hast done what lay in thy power. And, Ye foremost of monkeys, ye also have acted as becometh friends. Now, with my permission, go ye whithersoever ye are minded." Hearing Rāma's lament, the monkeys—those dark-eyed and others—began to shed tears from their eyes. Then Bibhishana, quieting the army, taking a mace in his hand, swiftly went to where Rāghava was. And seeing him fast making his way, resembling a mass of dark collyrium, the monkeys taking him to be Rāvana's son,† began to run away.

SECTION L

THEN out spake the highly energetic and exceedingly mighty king of monkeys,—"Why is this host agitated like a bark driven hither and thither by the wind?" Hearing Sugriva's speech, Vāli's son said,—"Dost thou not see both those heroes—sons of Daçaratha—Rāma and that mighty car-wasrior—Lakshmana—covered with arrows? And (dost thou not see) those high-sould ones lying in the field of battle, covered with blood?" Thereat, the lord of monkeys, Sagriva, spake unto his son, f Angada—"1 do not deem it had Mally Vall in Klahkindha.-T.

* Diarma-bhiru—feaving righteousness—is the epithet generally applied to persons fearing not in fact righteousness, but unrighteousness. This may be taken as an idiotism in Sanskrit.—T.

† Indrajit. Such was the fear he had spread by his redoubtable deads b-T.
† His step-son, for Sugriva had married Angada's father's wife, after Rama

RAMATANA.

, without cause. This may have come to pass through sheer fear. These monkeys with sad faces, leaving their arms behind them are flying in all directions, their eyes distended in affright. And they are not ashamed of each other, and they do not cast their looks back. And they hig each other, and go leaping over the fillen" In the meanwhile, that hero. Bibhishana, beiting a mace in his Land, (approaching), greeted Sugriva as well as Rāghiva with blessings of victory. And Sugriva, seeing Bibhishairi, capable of inspiring fear in the monkeys, spoke unto the high souled sovereign of hears, who stood by, - 'This is Biblish ma that bath come hither, seeing whom the loremost among the monkeys, from fear of Ravana's son who, they apprehend, I cas, -are fleeing away, serzed with a prince Do thou at once stay these agitated with fear and scampering all around, and proclum,-This is Bibhishana, who hath come here " Thus directed. Jambavan-king of bears-restraining those that were flying, composed the monkeys. Hearing the bear-king's words, and seeing Biblishana, the monkeys, renouncing desisted (from their flight). Then the righteous Bibhishana, viewing Rama's as well as Lakshmana's body pierced with arrows, was exceedingly aggrieved. And washing their eyes with water, he, with his mind overpowered with grief, began to weep and broke out into lamentation,-," The Rakshasas, fighting in willy ways, have brought to this pass these ones endowed with prowess and possessed of every perfection and gifted with might (of arm). And with his guileful mind, that brother's son of mine, wickedsouled and an evil son (unto me).-hath deceived these ones of straight prowess Pierced with innumerable shafts, and covered with blood, these are lying on the ground like: Salyakas". Those depending on whose prowess, I had sought eminence, those foremost of men, aleep here soundly. for renouncing their bodies. Living, today I am is distress and my desire of dominion is admibilated; and my foe, Ravana, hath his promise fulfilled and his aim crowned with success." As Bibbishana was thus lamenting, the lord of monkeys-Sugriva-endowed with strength, embracing him, spoke unto him,-"O thou cognisant of righteousness, thou wilt here in Lanka obtain empire no doubt of this; and Ravana along with his sons will be disappointed in their expectations. Both these-Rama and Lakshmana-are under the ager of Garcia, and, casting off their stoper, they will in battle slay Rayana along with his adherents," Having thus soothed and comforted the Rakshasa, Sugriva addressed his father-in law, who was at his side, saying,-"Do thou along with numbers of hereic monkeys, taking those repressors of foes, the brothers-Rām i and Likshman+ -when they shall have regained their consciousness, repair to Kishkindha And I, slaying Ravana along with his sons and friends, shall bring back Mithila's daughter, even as Sakra recovered the lost Sit" Hearing the words of the monkey-king, Sushena said,-'I had witnessed the war of yore between the gods and the Asuras. Then the Danavas, enveloping themselves, momentarily destroyed the detties, albeit versed in arms and accomplished in weapons. And they, their senses lost, and their lives departed, Vrihashpati treated by means of his knowledge of mantras, as well with , medicines. Let Sampāti, Panaça, and other monkeys speedily hie to the Milky Ocean for the purpose of bringing those medicines. And the monkeys well know that mighty mountainous medicine-divine and capable of reviving the dead,—and made by the deities themselves—vigalyd. There are (the prountains) named Chandra and Drona, where the ambrosia was charned, there is that supreme drug these mountains have been placed by the deities in the mighty. doep. And, O king, let the son of the Wind-god go thither." to the meanwhile, the wind arose, and masses of clouds proposed alongwith lightning. And the wind blew, agitating the waters of the deep, and shaking the mountains. And mighty trees of the ocean-islands, broken down by the wind, began wing-raised toppie headto terrible long into the salt waters. And the serpents dwelling there were seized with affright; and speedily all the aquatic animals dived deep into the salt sea. And then in a moment the monkeys saw Vinata's son, possessed of terrific strength,like unto a flaming fire. And seeing him come, the serpents began to dart away, -those exceedingly powerful ones that, turning into shafts, had bound those persons.* Then, touching the Kākutsthas and saluting them, Suparna rubbed with his hands their countenances furnished with the splendour of the Moon. And their wounds, on being touched by Vinata's son, were (immediately) healed; and the bodies of both speedily became cool and shone with an excellent complexion. they attained immense energy and prowess; and a double share of strength, and of rational and perceptive powers, and of memory. And then raising them up, the exceedingly energetic Garura, resembling Vasava himself, embraced both joyfully. And then Rama addressed (Garura), saying,-"By thy grace we have through means survived the mighty calamity that had sprung from Ravana's son; and we have also speedily been rendered strong. And my heart is delighted on having thee, like unto my father, Dacaratha, or my grand sire, Aia. Who art thou, furnished with beauty. and bearing wreaths and unguents (on thy person); clad in stainless attire : and adorned in noble ornaments?" Unto him spake the exceedingly energetic son of Vinata endowed with great strength,—the lord of birds, with a bleased heart. and his eyes wild with glee,-"O Kakutstha, I am thy friend-thy life ranging externally-Garutman. I am come hither for aiding you. Neither the highly powerful Asuras, nonthe exceedingly strong monkeys, nor the celestials along with the Gandharbas, having him of an hundred sacrifices at their head are,-capable of delivering (any one) from these dreadful arrowy bonds, which had been forged by Indrajit of tortuous deeds by help of illusion. These serpents -offspring of Kadru-are sharp-fanged and venomous; and had bound thee as arrows through the potency of illu-O Rama having truth for prowess, thou art fortunate,-along with that destroyer of foe in fight, Lakshmana. Hearing this, I, summoning energy, have come hither swiftly. And I, doing by thee as a friend, have from affection, at once set you free from these dreadful arrowy bends. But thou shouldst always be on thy guard. By nature the Rakshasas have cunning shifts in fight and thou, who art heroic and of a pure spirit, canst but rely on thy simplicity alone for strength. Therefore thou must not trust the Rakshasas in the field of battle. By this one instance (thou must know) that Rakshasas are ever deceitful in fight." Having said this, the wondrous mighty Suparna, embracing Rāma) tenderly (again), said,-"My friend Rāghava, O thou who even cherishest affection for thy loes, permit me thou. i shall go at pleasure. And, O Raghava, entertain no curiosity as to our friendship.* When, O hero, thou shalt have achieved success in battle, thou shalt know all about this friend-hip of ours. And with the surges of thy shafts, making Lanka contain only children and aged, and slaying thy foe, Ravana, thou shalt recover Sita." Having spoken thus, Suparna, endowed with fleet vigor, having rendered Rama hale in the midst of the monkeys,-having gone round them and embraced them also,—that one possessed of prowess,-set but, covering up the sky, like unto the wind. And seeing Raghu's sons rendered hale, the monkey-leaders set up leonine roars, and began to flourish their tails. And then beat the kettle-drums and the drums struck up. And conchs were cheerfully blown; and shouts were sent. And others struck at their arms with their hands. And the monkeys, accustomed to battle with trees, uprooting them, stood by hundreds and thousands. And emitting tremendous woars and thereby frightening the night-rangers, the monkeys, eager for encounter, approached the gate of Lanka. And that mighty and dreadful din raised by the monkeys, seaembled the terrible rumbling of the clouds at midnight about the end of Summer.

Rama and Lakebmana.

* i. e. how it happened.

SECTION LI.

THEN Ravana heard the tumult raised by the highly energetic monkeys roaring in company with the Rakshasas. And hearing that low and solemn noise-that predigious unroar-Rayana said in the midst of his counsellers,-"From mighty roars that are heard of in innumerous delighted monkeys,-resembling the roar of clouds,-it is evident, beyond a doubt, that there is great rejoicing there. And the salt Ocean is vexed with these thundering noises. The brothers-Rama and Lakshmana-have been fast bound with sharp shafts, and here this uproat is exciting my alarm." Having spoken thus unto his ministers, the lord of the Rakshasas addressed the Nairitas present there, saying,--"Do you speedily acquaint yourselves with the cause of rejoicing that hath arisen of these monkeys on this mournful occasion." Thus accosted, they hurriedly mounting up on the wall, surveyed the forces maintained by the high-souled Sugriva as well as those exalted ones-Raghu's sonsemancipated from their terrific arrowy fetters and arisen (now)." Thereat, with their hearts wrought up, grim-visaged Rakshasas descending from the wall, appeared before the "Rakshasa-lord with pale faces. And then with wee-begune faces, those Rakshasas, skilled in speech, faithfully informed Ravana in full of that unfortunate circumstance. "Those brothers-Rama and Lakshmana-who had in battle been bound up in arrowy fetters by Indrajit,-and whose arms lay moveless,-having been emancipated from the arrowy bonds, are seen in the field of battle; and those ones like unto the foremost of elephants in strength, seem like elephants that have snapped their fetters." Hearing those words of theirs, the exceedingly powerful lord of the Rakshasas was wrought up with anxiety and anger, and his countenance lost its complexion, "Indrajit, having routed them in conflict, had bound them by means of irrisistible and terrible arrows. resembling venomous serpents, and like unto the Sunhimself,-which had been conferred on (Indrajit) as boons. But if my enemy, having actually been bound by the weapons. can have been liberated, all this strength of mine I see placed in peril. And those shalts resembling Fire in fierceness, which had in battle deprived my foes of their lives,-have forsooth been rendered fruitless." Having said this in high rage, Rāvana, sighing like a serpent, addressed a Rākshasa, named Dhumraksha, seated in the midst of the Rakshasas,-"O thou of dreadful prowess, surrounded by a mighty force, do thou march forth to compass the destruction of Rama along with the monkeys." Thus accosted by the intelligent lord of the Rakshasas, Dhumtaksha, turning about, issued out of the abode of the king. And speedily sallying forth from the gate of (Ravana's) residence, he said unto the general of the forces,-"Do thou speedily move off thy forces. Why should a warrior linger?" Hearing Dhumraksha's words, the general of the forces, following them, at the command of Ravana forthwith made the army ready. And those powerful and dreadful night-rangers, bursting with bigh spirits, -with bells tied to their arms, -set up shouts, and surrounded Dhumraksha. And bearing various weapons win their hands, and wielding darts and clubs, and equipped with maces and bearded darts and rods and iron bludgeons and parighas and bhindipalas and lances and nooses and axes,-those terrific Rakshasas sailied out, roaring like unto clouds. And others, accoutred in armour, with cars; adorned with banners; furnished with golden networks, and mules having various faces, and extremely swift steeds, and lusty elephants in rut,-tiger-like Nairitas incapable of being subdued, even as tigets -sallied out (thereafter). And then Dhumiaksha himself ascended a superb car, bearing faces of deer and lions decked with gold,-and sending forth a loud clatter. And the highly powerful Dhumrāksha, surrounded by Rākshasas, cheerfully issued out of the Western Entrance, where Hanuman was posted. And thereat, fell fowls of the air forbade that exceedingly dreadful Rākshasa of a fearful form, as he went out ascending an excellent car, yoked with mulco, and sending sharp sounds. And an exceedingly terrific vulture alighted at the crest of the car; and forming themselves into lines, vultures began to drop down about the top of the banner. And emitting a frightful cry, (a headless trunk) dropped down before Dhumraksha. And that god* showered down blood; and the earth shook. And the wind blew awry with a sound resembling thunder. And every side, covered with darkness. appeared dim. And witnessing those dreadful inauspicious omens at the outset, fraught with fear unto the Rakshasas, Dhumrāksha was greatly aggrieved; and the Rākshasas marching before him, were stupified. And then as that strong and fearful one, eager for encounter, surrounded by innumerable night-rangers, issued out (of the city), he beheld that monkey-host, protected by the arm of Raghava,resembling the deep at the time of the universal dissolution.

* Indra-cloud-compoller.

SECTION LII.

SEEING the Rakshasa-Dhumraksha of dreadful prowess -issue out, the monkeys, rejoicing greatly, eager for encounter, set up roars. And then there took place a terrific conflict between the monkeys and the Rakshasas, charging. each other with fearful trees, and darts, and maces. And the Rakshasas began to scatter the dreadful monkeys on all sides; and the monkeys (on their part) felled the Rakshasas with trees. And the Rakshasas, growing enraged, began to pierce the monkeys with straight speeding sharp shafts winged with Kanka plumes. And riven by the Rakshas with dreadful clubs and bearded darts, daggers and maces and terrible and curious bludgeons and grasped javelins,the exceedingly powerful (monkeys), their anger aroused, began with alacrity to perform deeds of intrepid valour. And " those monkey-leaders, their bodies pierced with shafts and their persons riven with darts, took up trees and crags. And those monkeys, endowed with terrific vehemence, sending up shouts, and proclaiming their respective names, set about tossing the brave Rakshasa ranks. And that conflict between the Rakshasas and the monkeys, waged with diverse rocks and innumerable trees, waxed exceedingly furious. And some among the Rākshasas feeding on gore -on being agitated by the monkeys burning for victory,began to vomit blood. And some were severed along their flanks; and, some, slain with trees, were heaped up; and some were crushed with crags; and some were torn with teets. And some being broken down by means of broken standards, and some by means of fallen swords, and some crushed down by cars,-the rangers of the night suffered sorely. And (anon) the earth was covered with huge elephants measuring mountains, and mountain-tops, and steeds crushed, and the riders thereof,-all borne down by the monkeys. And bounding again and again, the vehement monkeys endowed with terrific prowess, with their fingernails tore up the Rakshasas by the mouths. And with woebegone faces, and with hair dishevelled, (the Rakshasas), stupified with the smell of blood, saught the earth. And other Rakshasas endowed with dreadful vigor, waxing wond rous wroth, dealt the monkeys slaps with hands having the touch of the thunder-bolt. And, gifted with greater impetuosity, the monkeys felled the impetuous (Rakshasas) with blows, and feet and teeth; and some were slain with trees. And seeing the forces fleeing away, that foremost of Rakshasas-Dhumraksha-flying into fury, began a terrific conflict with the morkeys desirous of encounter. And some of the monkeys, sore assailed with praças, began to bleed; and some, wounded with maces, dropped down to the ground. And some were heaten hard with bludgeons; and some were cleft with bhindipalas. And some, on being assailed with bearded darts, became insensible and lost their lives. And some among the monkeys lay slain on the ground, drenched in blood. And some, fleeing away from the field, were slaughtered by the infuriated Rakshasas. And some, having their breasts pierced, lay on their sides. And some were riven with tridents; and the entrails of some had come out. And that mighty and dreadful encounter of the Rakshasas and the monkeys, was waged with countless weapons and rocks and trees. And that battle hecome a musical entertainment* mellifluous with bow-string for Vind. having the neighing of chargers for its measure, and with the cries of Maindas* for its strains. Then in the field, Dhumraksha bow in hand, laughing, pursued the monkeys in all directions with showers of shafts. And seeing the forces hard beset by Dhumraksha and distressed thereat, the Windgod's offspring, waxing enraged, seizing a huge crag, approached (the Rakshasa). And with his eyes doubly reddened in wrath, that one, like unto his sire himself in prowess, brought down the crag upon Dhumraksha's car. And seeing the crag, (Dhumraksha) upraising his mace hurriedly, leapt down in vehemence, and stood on the ground. And having shattered his car, that crag fell down to the earth. And thereat letting go the car furnished with wheels, Kuvaras and a face, as well as a banner; in which Dhumraksha had left his bow,--Hanuman-son unto the Wind-god--laid about him right lustily for destroying the Rakshasas, with trees having branches long and short. And thereat some Rakshasas with their heads shattered, lay drenched in blood; and others, struck with trees, dropped down to the earth. And then Hanuman-son unto the Wind-god-charged in full career against the Rakshasa army; and, taking a mountainpeak, he rushed against Dhumrāksha. And as Hanuman was descending, the powerful Dhumraksha, upraising a mace, and giving out a shout, made towards him speedily. And then Dhumraksha enraged, brought down that mace studded with innumerable pricks, on the head of Hanuman fired with wrath. And thus assailed with the mace of fearful impetuosity, the monkey endowed with the strength of the wind, without at all heeding that blow, let fall a mountain-top right against Dhumrāksha's head. And on being assailed with the mountain-peak, Dhumraksha, having his entire body mangled, suddenly fell to the earth, like unto a toppling hill. And seeing Dhumraksha slain, those night-rangers that survived the carnage, in extreme agitation began to pour into Lanka, attacked by the monkeys. And that high-souled offspring of the Wind-god, having slain his foes, and come under the influence of fatigue incident to his slaughtering his *enemies,--having caused rivers of gore to flow (in the field),--experienced the excess of joy on being honored of the monkeys

* The reader has already perceived that the carrying out of a simile to a number of details is a characteristic as much of Válmiki as of his rival in the epic sphere—Vyasa. But the comparisons are never on all fours, as in the case before us —T.

† A classical Hindu musical instrument, having metallic strings, with a pair of gourds at one end for the sounding-board. Vide Yantra-Reps by Sk. Saurindra Mohan Tagor Mus-Doc.—T.

* A species of elephants.

SECTION LIN

HEARING Dhumrāksha slain, Rāvaπa—lord of the Räkshasas-overwhelmed with a mighty rage, began to sigh like a serpent. And collied with passion, and sighing hot for a long time, he addressed a cruel Rākshasa-the exceedingly strong Vajradanshtra, *- "Go thou, O hero, Go out, environed by the Rakshasas. Slay Daçaratha's son-Ramaand Sugriva along with the monkeys." Thereupon hastily answering "So be it," that foremost of the Rakshusas skilled in illusion, marched forth surrounded by many a leadert of armies, furnished with elephants and steeds, mules and camels,-with his mind concentrated; and adorned with innumerable variegated flags and banners. And then decked out with curious keyuras and a tiara, and wearing armour, he' rushed out with his bow in his hand. And then going round his flaming vehicle, adorned with pennons and garnished with gold, the king! ascended the same. And equipped with slender swords and curious tomaras and smooth maces and Shindipalas and bows and darts and patticas and scimitars and discuses and clubs and sharpened axes, the multiform infantry march bearing arms in their hands. And all those powerful and flaming Rakshasas were variegated raiments.

· Lit .-- the thunder-toothed.

· † Valai-forces-is interpreted leaders by the commentator,

‡ Vajradanshtra.,-T.

And heroic elephants in rat resembling mountains in motion, marched, being led by those well-skilled in battle carrying tomaras and hooks in their hands. And mighty steeds bearing auspicious marks, marched, ridden by heroes. And that, entire Rakshasa army, as it marched forth, resembled clouds in summer roaring with lightning. And (the Rakshasas) sallied forth through the Southern Entrance, where that leader of herds-Angada-was stationed. And as they went out, evil omens appeared. From the cloudless yet herce sky meteors began to shoot. And throwing up flames from their mouths, dreadful jackals began to emit cries. And frightful beasts betokened the destruction of the Rakshasas in battle. And warriors began to tumble down in an ominous way. Witnessing these evil omens, the exceedingly powerful and energetic Vairadanshtra, assuming patience, set out, eager for And seeing them flee away, the monkeys, encounter. burning for victory, set up tremendous shouts, filling all the ten cardinal points. And then there came on a terrific encounter of the monkeys and the Rakshasas, dreadful, of terrific deeds, and wishing for each other's death. And warriors fraught with high spirits, springing up, dropped down to the earth, their bodies and hands riven, and all their persons bathed in blood. And some approaching each other, with bludgeons in their hands, without turning away from the field, discharged various weapons at each other. And there were heard sounds of trees and rocks and weapons,mighty and dreadful and capable of striking terror into the heart. And dreadful and mighty were the sounds of car-wheels, and couchs and trumpets and drums. And some, casting off weapons, engaged in a hand to hand combat by means of slaps, and kicks, and bones, and trees. And some Rakshasas, having their bodies broken, were killed by means of thighs. And some were crushed with crags by Danavas invincible in battle. And Vajradanshtra, resembling the noose-handed Destroyer, frightening the monkeys, ranged in that field fatal to people. And Rakshasas, possessed of strength; equipped with various weapons, transported with passion, slew the monkey-forces. And then in the conflict the proud Wind-god's son, influenced by twofold wrath, spread havoc among the Rakshasa ranks, tike the Fire at the universal dissolution. And the energetic Angada possessed of the prowess of a lion, with his eyes coppery with wrath, upraising a tree, began to spread terrible destruction among the Rākshasas, even as a lion destroyeth tiny deer. attacked by Angada there, the Rakshasas of dreadful vigor, with their heads riven, fell down like unto trees that have been uprooted. And the earth became frightful (to behold), being covered with variegated cars and standards and steeds and the bodies of monkeys and of Rakshasas and streams of blood. And adorned with chains, and Keyuras, and attires, and umbrellas, the field of battle looked like an autumnal night. And agitated by Angada's impetuosity, that mighty army of Rakshasas began to shake, even as water trembleth, moved by the wind.

SECTION LIV.

FINDING his own army destroyed by the might of Angada, the exceedingly powerful Rakshasa—Vajradanshtra—was overcome with rage. And stretching his dreadful bow of the splendour of Sakra's thunder-boit, he began to shower shafts among the monkey-ranks. And the foremost among the heroic Rakshasas also, stationed on cars, furnished with various arms, warred on in the encounter. And the heroic monkeys also—foremost of their kind—with rocks in their hands, faught around in united strength. And in that conflict, the Rakshasas began to incessantly shower ayutas of arms among the flower of the monkey-army. And the monkeys,-pre-eminently valiant, and resembling mad elephants, kept showering over the Rakshasas mountain-trees and mighty rocks. And then took place a hot contest among heroic warring monkeys and Rakshasas, eager for encounter. And some, with their heads unbroken, had their arms and legs torn; and thir bodies pierced with weapons, and laved in blood. And monkeys and Rakshasas lay down in the field,-thronged with numbers of Kankas, and vultures; and swarming with flocks of jackals. And striking affright unto the timid, on the earth started up (spectral) headless trunks .- with their arms and heads torn, and their bodies riven all over. And monkeys and Rakshasas began to drop down to the earth. And the army of night-rangers, being sadly handled by the monkey-hosts, broke up at every point in the very sight of Vajradan htra. And seeing the Rakshasas, discressed with fright and harassed by the monkeys, the powerful Vajradanshtra, with his eyes crimsoned with choler, entered the arena, bow in hand,-frightening the monkey-forces. And he began to pierce the monkeys with straight-speeding shafts winged with Kanka feathers: and he pierced simultaneously seven, eight, nine, five, monkeys (in the field). And the exceedingly powerful Vajradanshtra. transported into a towering passion, began to cleave the hostile ranks. And thereat terrified, the monkeys, with their bodies cut with arrows, rushed towards Angada, like creatures resorting to the Creator. And finding the monkeyranks disordered, Vali's son in a rage cast his eyes on Vairadanshtra, who also was eying him. And Vajradanshtra and Angada faught fiercely with each other over and over again: ranging the field like a tiger and a mad elephant*. Then (Vajradanshtra) with hundreds and thousands (of shafts)

* Hasimattagajáviva-lit, like a lion and a med elephant. The commondator however, remarks, that the contest of a lion with an elephant is in

resembling tongues of flames, pierced the powerful son of the monkey in the vitals. Thereupon Vali's son of mighty strength and tremendous prowess, with his body covered all over with blood, hurled a tree at Vajradanshtra. And seeing the tree in full career, the Rākshasa without betraying any agitation, severed it in pieces; and the tree, thus assailed, fell to the earth. And seeing that feat of Vajradanshtra, that foremost of monkeys, taking up a huge crag, hurled it (at his foe) and sent up shouts. And seeing this descend upon him, that powerful one, calmly leaping down from his vehicle, stood on his feet on the ground. And the crag discharged by Angada, coursing on in the field, dashed to pieces the car along with the wheels and the Kuvara as well as the horses. And then the monkey, taking up another prodigious peak crowned with trees, let it alight on Vajradanshtra's head. Thereat vomitting blood, Vajradanshtra, deprived of his senses, for a moment overcome with stupor, stood embracing his mace, sighing. And then the night-ranger, recovering his senses, with his mace, in high rage hit at the breast Vali's son staying in the field. And thereupon, giving up his mace, he entered into a boxing encounter (with Angada). And hitting each other there, they both—the monkey and the Rakshasa,—began to vomit blood, and were overcome with fatigue consequent on the thrashing each sustained; and they endowed richly with prowess, appeared like Angaraka and Bedba.* Then the exceedingly energetic Angada-best of --monkeys--uprooting a tree, stood there, covered with flowers and leaves. And (Vajradanshtra) took a shield composed of ass's hide, + and a sword broad and sightly, covered with bells, and graced with a leathern sheath. And the monkey and the Rakshasa displayed curious and graceful movements. And compatible in the nature of things, for even an elephant dreaming of a lion, gives up the ghost !-T.

The asterisms so called.

† What could this weapon be like ?-T.

attacking each other, they gave shouts, eager for victory. And with blood flowing from their wounds, they looked beautiful like blossoming Kincukas. And warring, both, overcome with fatigue, went to the ground on their knees. Anon in the twinkling of an eye, that powerful monkey-Angada-started up, with his eyes glowing.-like unto a serpent that hath been smitten with a rod. And (at length) with his stainless and sharpened sword. Vali's son, endeued with exceeding strength severed Vairadanshtra's huge head. And the graceful head of that one having his body covered with blood, cut off by the sword, falling to the ground with its eyes rolling, was severed in twain. Seeing Vairadanshtra slain, the Rakshasas, overwholmed with fear and exceedingly agitated, in pitiful plight, with woe-hegone faces and heads hung in shame,—flod towards Lanka, attacked (all the while) by the monkeys. Having compassed Vajradanshtra's destruction, the powerful son of Vali, endowed with exceeding strength, in the midst of the monkey-army experienced great joy on being honored by the monkeys, like the wielder of the thunder-bolt-the thousand-oyed (Deity)-surrounded by the celestials.

SECTION LV.

----

HEARING Vajradanshtra slain by the son of Vāli, Rāvana said unto the general of his forces, standing before him with joined hands,—"Let invincible Rākshasas of dreadful prowess, march forth, placing before them Akampana, skilled in all weapons and arms. He is capable of chastising sees as well as of protecting his own and leading them, and he is excellent in warfare. And he is always desirous of my prosperity, and always loveth warfare. He will conquer the Kakutsthas, as well as Sugriva endowed with exceeding strength, and, without doubt, slay all the other dreadful monkeys." Taking Ravana's command, toat highly powerful one endowed with fleet vigor, marshalled those forces. Then equipped with various arms, the foremost of Rākshasas, having dreadful eyes (in their heads), and of dreadful forms, marched forth, urged on by their general. And, ascending a large car, adorned with burnished gold, Akampana, possessed of the splendour of clouds," and cloud-hued, and furnished with a voice resembling the roar of clouds, went out, environed by Rakshasas of terrific forms. And Akampana, resembling the sun in power, was incapablet of being shaken in fight by the very gods, and of being beheld by them. † And as, burning for battle, he rushed out in wrath, the steeds drawing his car suddenly lost their energy. And the left eye of that one delighting in encounter, began to throb. And his countenance grew pale. and his voice faltered. And in a fair day, it looked foul with the wind breathing roughly. And fierce and frightful beasts and birds began to emit cries. And that lion-shouldered one like a tiger in prowess, without heeding these ominous occurences, marched forth into the field. And as that Rakshesa was setting out along with the Rakshasas, he set up mighty roars as if agitating the deep. And the mighty army of monkeys was seized with trepidation at that sound. And then there took place a mighty encounter of the Rakshasas and the monkeys equipped staying in fight with trees and rocks; who had given up all concern for their selves in behalf of Rama and Ravana. And each side desirous of slaying the other, the monkeys and the Raksharas were exceedingly strong and heroic and like unto mountains. And each party storming at the other, in that conflict were heard loud cries emitted by those swift-speeding ones in anger. And fearful was the dust red-hued that was raised incessantly by the monkeys and the Rakshas; and it enveloped the ten cardinal points. And in the field of battle, each enveloped with that dust raised, pale as silk, could not be discovered by the other. And in consequence of that dust arising, neither standard. nor ensign, nor shield, nor steed, nor weapon, nor car could be seen. And the fierce cries alone of those roaring and rushing were heard in that dreadful battle; but their forms were not visible to the sight. And in that conflict in the dark then monkeys enraged slew monkeys, and Rakshasas And monkeys and Rakshasas slaying (indis-Rākshsasas. criminately) friends and foes, made the earth wet with blood, and miry. And then with showers of blood the dust was layed; and the earth was covered with corpses. And Rakshasas and monkeys fast slew each other vigorously with trees and darts, maces and pracas, rocks, bludgeons and tomaras, and by means of their arms resembling bludgeons, coped with their adversaries appearing like hills. in the encounter monkeys slew Rakshasas of dreadful deeds. And in their turn Rakshasas, wrought up with passion, hearing in their hands praças and tomaras destroyed monkeys wielding dire arms. And that leader of the force-Akampana-growing wroth, inspired with cheerfulness all the Rakshasas endowed with dreadful vigor. And the monkeys forcibly snatching away the weapons (of the Rakshasas), began to rive the Rakshasas with mighty trees and giant crags. In the meanwhile those heroes among the monkeys-Kumuda, Nila and the exceedingly exasperated Mainda, summoned the utmost impetuosity they were masters of. And those foremost of monkeys and redoubtable able warriors without much ado began to spread quite a carnage in the van of the Rākshasa army, and by means of various arms terribly beat the Rākshasas.

There is a pun here on the word Akampana—lit.—one incapable of being thaten.—T.

Possessed of a person measuring, according to the commentator, a mass of clouds I give the apparent sense, which answers.—T.

# Monkeys.

SECTION LVI.

And witnessing that mighty exploit at the foremost of the monkeys, Akampana waxed furious with wrath. And transported with passion, he, twanging his mighty bow, seeing that feat of his foe, addressed his charioteer saying,-"O charioteer, swiftly conduct thou the car to that same These powerful ones are slaying innumerable Rakshasas in fight. And all those vigorous monkeys of dreadful deeds stay before me, armed with trees and rocks. Those, pluming themselves overmuch on their martial worth, I intended to slay in battle. And all this Rakshasa force appeared to be harassed by these." Then on a car drawn by moving steeds, Akampana from a distance attacked the monkeys with showers of arrows. thereat the monkeys could not so much as maintain their ground in the field,-and how could they fight? And broken by the arrows of Akampana, they began to fly. And the exceedingly strong Hanuman, seeing his kindred come under the masterdom of Death and follow the course pursued by the shafts of Akampana, advanced (to the conflict). And seeing that mighty monkey, all those heroic prime monkeys together surrounded (Hanuman) in the field. And those best of monkeys, seeing Hanuman stay, grew strong by relying onthat strong one. And even as the great Indra showereth down rain, Akampana showered shafts on Hanuman resembling a mountain-summit in grandeur. And without casting & thought on the showers of arrows poured on his person; that monkey gifted with exceeding strength, set his heart oncompassing the death of Akampana. And laughing, that exceedingly energetic offspring of the Wind-god rushed after that Raksha, as if making the Earth herself tremble. And the form of that one roaring and flaming up in energy, was irresistible, like unto the appearance of a flaming fire. And thinking that he was unfurnished with any arms, that foremost of monkeys, waxing wroth, vehemeotly rooted up a hill. And . taking that huge hill, the Wind-god's son endowed with prowess, sending on a tremendous roar, began to whirl it with a single arm. And as of yore Purandara had in encounter pursued Namuchi with the thunder-bolt, (Hanuman) pursued that best of Rakshasas-Akampana. And Akampana, seeing that uplifted crag, from a distance cut it off with mighty crescent-shaped shafts. And finding that mountainton severed by the shalts of the Raksha and scattered in pieces. Hanuman was seized with a mighty wrath. And that monkey, wrought up with rage and pride, grasping an Acwakarna elevated like unto a hill, at once upronted it. And taking that broad-shouldered Acwakarna, that one furnished with high splendour, with great glee whirled it above the ground. And thereat rushing amain vehemently, (Akampana) speedily broke the trees.* And (seeing this), Hanuman, transported with passion, rived the earth with his kicks. And Hanuman slaughtered elephants, and the riders thereof, and cars with their riders, and dreadful Rakshasas, and footmen. And seeing the enraged Hanuman resembling the Finisher armed with trees and destructive, the Rakshasas began to fly fast. And seeing that one enraged, terrific unto the Rakshasas, the heroic Akampana was agitated greatly and sent up shouts. And Akampana pierced Hanuman endowed with exceeding prowess with four and ten shafts, sharpened and capable of cleaving the bodies of people." And thus covered with iron arrows and whetted darts, that hero-Hanuman-looked like a hill covered with trees. And that huge-bodied one endowed with wondrous prowess and great strength, appeared like a flowering Açoka or a fire without smoke. And then uprooting another tree, (Hanuman) summoning up his best impetuosity, swiftly hit Akampanaforemost of Rakshasas-on the head. And slain with that tree by that high-souled monkey-chief wrought up with passion, that Rakshasa fell down and died.* And seeing that foremost of Rākshasas-Akampana-slain (and lying) on the ground,-the Rakshasas were extremely aggrieved, and (appeared) like trees in an earthquake. And those Rakshasas defeated, leaving their arms behind, made for Lanka in fear, pursued by the monkeys. And with their hair flowing loosely, (the Rakshasas), afflicted with affright, and despirited and beaten, fled fast, with the water of fatigue running down their persons. And crushing down each other, they entered the city in a panic, momentarily casting their looks behind them. When the Rakshasas had entered Lanka, the exceedingly mighty monkeys, assembled together, paid homage unto Hanuman. And Hanuman, gifted with strength, honored the seniors each as he deserved in consideration of his lineage. And the monkeys eager for victory shouted with might and main, and began to drag the Rakshasas with the view of taking their lives. And that mighty monkey-son unto the Wind god-having destroyed the Rikshasas and arrived (in the midst of the host), attained heroic glory, -even as did Vishnu, having slain that destroyer of enemies-the mighty and dreadful Asura possessed of exceeding strength. -stationed in the van of the forces. And then the deities and Rama himself and the highly powerful Lakshmana, and also the monkeys headed by Sugriva, and Bibbishana endowed with great strength, honored that monkey,

&quot; Why plural ? So it le, however, in the text .- T.

* This sentence, "And slaiu.....and died" reads foolish. But the original is answerable for—in logical parlance—this identical proposition.—T.

SECTION LVII

EARING that Akampana had been killed, the lord of Rakshasas, overwhelmed with anger, with his face somewhat fallen, cast his eyes on his counsellors. And then pendering and reflecting for a while, in the forenoon he went round the city of Lanka for inspecting the barracks. And the king surveyed the city guarded by the Rakshasas, covered with innumerable barracks, and crowned with ensigns standards. And seeing the city beseiged, Ravana--lord of the Rākshasas-seasonably spoke words of welfare unto Prahasta skilled in light, - "Save battle, deliverance find I none for the city suddenly beleaguered and put to straits. And this strain must be borne by these versed in warfare-me or Kumbhakarna, or thee-my general-or Indrajit or Nikumbha.* And therefore do thou from this place, speedily taking this force, march to where the monkeys are, for securing victory (in the encounter). And as soon as thou settest out, the monkey-forces, hearing the roars of the foremost Rākshasas-speedily setting themselves in motion, -shall flee away. And volatile and haughty and of fickle minds, the monkeys will not be able to bear thy shouts; even as elephants are incapable of bearing the roaring of a lion. And on that monkey-army running away, Rama in company with Sumitra's son, deprived of his power and shorn of support, shall, O Prahasta, come under thy subjection. In this matter, thy being slain is uncertain, but victory is certain. Now do thou, as thou weighest our welfare, declare thyself for or against this course." Thus addressed by Rayana, Prahasta-general of the forces-said unto the Rakshasa-chief; like Uçanas addressing the lord of Asuras.

* Grammatically faulty such is the sentence in the original .- T.

-"O king, before this we had deliberated together with wise counsellors, and then we disputed with each other in our respective views. And I had declared myself for giving up Sita as fraught with our welfare; and we saw war involved in witholding her. I have ever been honored by thee variously with gifts and regard and soft speech. And what is thy good for which I shall not be at the pains? My life I do not care to keep,-nor yet my sons or my wife. Behold ! for thee will I offer up my life into the sacrificial fire of conflict." Having said this unto his master-Ravana-the general, Prahasta, addressed his generals staying before him, saying,- At once bring up the mighty host of Rākshasas. To-day in the field of fight will I entertain the flesh-feeding fowls of the forest with the bodies of the foes slain with my resistless shafts." Hearing his speech, the highly powerful leaders arrayed the army in that abode of the Rakshasa. And in a moment Lanka swarmed with heroic and terrific Rakshasas equipped with various arms,-as if with elephants,-as well as with people worshipping Fire and bowing down unto Brahmanas. And the perfumed breeze blow, laden with the incense of sacrificial offerings. And the Rakshasas, inspired with martial ardour, put on diverse garlands, consecrated with scriptural formulæ; and donned on their armour. And furnished with their bows and wearing their armour, the Rākshasas, on seeing king Rāvana, leaving (their vehicles), stood, surrounding Prahasta. Then greeting the monarch, Prahasta, furnished (with all appliances of battle), -winding his dreadful trumpet, ascended bis car; having all sorts of weapons; yoked with wondrous fleet steeds; driven by a competent charioteer,--excellently furnished; sending up sounds resembling the rumbling of mighty masses of cloud,appearing like the very Sun or Moon; invincible with a serpent-standard; having a defence as well as a portion exceedingly bandsome; netted with gold all round; and seeming to be laughing in grace. And then, ascending this car, Praffasta, whom Ravana had entrusted with authority, surrounded by a vast host, swiftly went out of Lanka. And then there were heard the sounds of kettle-drums, resembling the roars of Parjanya, -and the sounds of musical instruments, as if filling the Earth. And on that general of the forces marching, sounds of conchs were heard (all around); and the Rakshasas of dreadful forms and huge bodies, going before Prahasta, advanced, emitting tremendous roars, Narantaka,* Kambhahanu, Mahanada,† and Samunnata,1-Prahasta's counsellors all of them-went on, surrounding him. And he went out by the Eastern entrance, environed by this exceedingly dreadful array, resembling troops of elephants. And resembling the Destroyer-Yama himself-Prahasta in rage went out surrounded by that mighty host resembling the sea. And at the tumult raised by their exodus, as well as the roars of the Rakshasas, all creatures in Lanka began to cry in preternatural tones. And swarming under the cloudless welkin, birds feasting on flesh and gore began to gyrate at the right hand of the car. And dreadful jackals, emitting live flames from their mouths, set up cries. And stars began to shoot from the firmament: and the winds to ruffle. And enraged at each other, the planetary bodies were shorn of their brightness. And clouds emitting sharp sounds, showered down blood upon the car, and those marching in front were washed therewith. And alighting at the topof the standard, a vulture set up cries, facing the south, and began to prick both its sides, -- thereby depriving (Prahasta) of his grace. And from the hands of his charioteer and his driver conducting the steeds, never given to turning away from the field, the goad began to drop again and again. And the auspiciousness that was bright and rare when the army set out, was clean gone in a moment,—and the steeds began to stumble on even ground. And as Prahasta of renowned worth and valor marched, the monkey-army equipped with various arms, presented themselves before him. And loud was the tumult that was raised by the monkeys. And mighty was the din that was heard of those, uprooting trees and taking up ponderous crags, of the Rākshasas roaring and the monkeys storming in both the exhibitanted armies of Rakshas and wood-rangers,—of vehement and able (warriors) eager for slaying each other, and challenging each other to fight. And like an insect falling into a flame, the wicked-minded Prahasta, for obtaining victory, increasing his impetuosity entered into that host of the monkey-king.

Lit. destroyer of men. Almost all the names of the Rákshasas are thus significant names. This assigning of names, embosoming some harmonising image, has by Sir Francis Palgrave, justly been considered as betokening a high poetical faculty.

† Lit .- loud-throated.

$ Lit.—lafty.

SECTION LVIII

Seeing Prahasta sally, ready for encounter, that chastiser of foes—Rāma—with a smile said unto Bibhishana,—"Who is this huge-bodied one that armed with impetuosity, advanceth to the encounter? And what is his power and prowess like? O mighty-armed one, tell me this concerning this powerfut night-ranger." Hearing Rāghava's words, Bibhishana answered,—"In Lankā this is the general of the lord of Rākshasa—the Rākshasa named Prahasta, surrounded by a third of the forces. He is possessed of prowess and is of distinguished gallantry. And that mighty army of strong monkeys, wrought up with wrath, and roaring at Prahasta, saw him dreadful and of terrific prowess and huge-bodied,—surrounded on all, sides by the Rākshasas,—and setting up roars, marching. And the Rākshasas, cagerly desirous of victory, pursued the monkeys, wielding swords and darts and rishtis, and javelins and shafts and maces and clubs and bludgeons and praças and various axes and curious bows. And the monkeys on their part, eager for encounter, took up flowering trees and hills and huge and broad crags. And each party approaching the other, great was the encounter that took place. And innumerable (monkeys and Rakshasas) kept showering rocks and arrows. And many Rakshasas in conflict slew many a powerful monkey, and the monkeys on their part slaughtered many a Rākshasa. And some were pierced with darts and with (other) powerful weapons; and some were wounded with bludgeons; and some were hewn with axes. And some rendered senseless, dropped down to the earth; and some hit with weapons, had their breasts riven. And some, severed in twain with swords, dropped to the earth lifeless. And monkeys were hewn in their sides by heroic Rakshasas. And numbers of Rākshasas all around were beaten to the ground by infuriated monkeys with trees and mountain-peaks. And some smitten sore with slaps having the touch of the thunder-bolt, began to vomit blood from their mouths, with faces and eyes turned pale. And great was the uproar that arose in consequence of Rakshasas and monkeys emitting distressful cries and sending forth leonine roars. And monkeys and Rakshasas wrought up with wrath, engaged in treading the path of heroes,-looking terrific with their faces moving about,-performed deeds of intrepid courage. And Naiantaka and Kambhahanu and Mahanada Samuunata-all counsellors of Prahasta-set about slaughtering the rangers of the woods. Of these doing swift execution among the monkeys, Dwivida, taking up a mountain peak, slew one-namely Narantaka. And then the monkey. Durmukha, rising up afresh, armed with a mighty tree, killed the light-handed Rākshasa-Samunnata. And Jambavan endowed with energy, waxing enraged, uplifting a giant crag brought the same down on Mahanada's breast.

And there speedily assailed by Tara, with a mighty tree, the powerful Kumbhahanu gave up the ghost in the conflict. And not brooking that feat, Prahasta, mounted on a car, taking a bow in his hand, fell to spreading a dreadful havoc among the rangers of the woods. And then there the two hosts mingled into almost a vortex; and the sounds that arose from those infuriated ones of immeasurable might, resembled the roar of the ocean. And in terrific encounter the enraged Rakshasa irresistible in battle drove the monkeys to sore straits with showers of arrows. And the earth was covered quite with the terrible bodies of monkeys and Rākshasas; and it looked as if covered with mountains. And the earth drenched with streams of gore looked as if swarming with blossoming paldças in the month of spring. as leaders of elephant-herds cross a lotus-tank covered with lotus-dust, those Rakshasas and choice monkeys crossed that river flowing in the field of conflict incapable of being crossed; having for her banks hosts of heroic warriors slain; for her mighty trees broken arms; for her volume of waters showers of blood; coursing to Yama resembling the Ocean; with livers and spleens for her vast slime; with scattered entrails for her moss; with riven bodies and heads for her fish; limbs for her lawns; swarming with vultures for her swans; with Kankas for her cranes; filled with fat representing her foam; with the roars (of warriors) for her sounds,-incapable of being crossed by cravens,-and resembling a real river swarming at the end of the rains with cranes and swans. Then all of a sudden Nila saw Prahasta stationed on his car, discharging vollies of shafts and harassing the monkeys therewith. And mounted on a sunbright vehicle, that leader of the army-Prahasta-seeing Nila advance towards him amain in the encounter, like the wind in the sky scattering a mighty mass of clouds,rushed towards Nila. And that leader of forces-Prahastic -foremost of bownen, stretching his bow, began to shower arrows on Nila. And having pierced Nila sore and wounded him, those shafts sought the earth like enraged serpents. And that mighty monkey-Nila-endowed with energy, struck with those sharpened shafts resembling flames,-uprooting a tree, assailed therewith the irrepressible Prahasta-who was rushing against him. And thereat, that foremost of Rakshasas, on being attacked, flaming up into fury and uttering roars,poured showers of arrows on the monkey-leader. And not being able to resist the arrowy vollies of that wicked-minded Rākshasa, (Nila) bore them, even as a bull beareth with closed eyes a fast-descending autumnal shower. And in the very same way did Nila with his eyes closed suddenly stand the mighty arrowy buffet of Prahasta incapable of being withstood. And wrought up with rage, the exceedingly strong and mighty Nila with a giant Sála slew the steeds of Prahasta. And then his soul surcharged with wrath, Nila swiftly shattered the bow of that wicked-minded one, and then shouted again and again. On being hereft of his bow, Prahasta, general of forces, taking a terrible mace, leapt down from his car. And the redoubtable leaders endowed with activity, bearing hostility to each other, their persons bathed in blood, stood (on the ground) like two elephants (with their temples) riven. And they kept tearing each other with their teeth like a lion and a tiger, and also striving like a lion and a tiger. And endowed with victorious vigor, those heroes, never knowing to desist from fight, were eager for fame, even like Vritra and Vasava (fighting). And then Prahasta putting forth his dearest effort, hit Nila on the temples with a mace; and the blood began to flow. And then the mighty monkey, with his person drenched in blood, -wrought up with passion discharged a tall tree at Prahasta's breast. And without caring for that hit, he, taking up a mighty mace, furiously rushed against the monkey-Nila And witnessing that enraged (hero) rushing against him with exceeding impetuosity, that redoubted monkey endowed with vehemence, took up a tremendous crag. And in the encounter Nila at once let that crag alight right on the head of Prahasta, eager for encounter and fighting with the mace. And hurled by that foremost of monkeys, that huge and terrific crag then shattered Prahasta's head in pieces. And then bereft of life and shorn of nerve and devoid of sense,he suddenly dropped down to the earth like a tree whose roots have been severed. And even as fountains flow from the sides of a hill, blood flowed profusely from the person of that one, whose head had been riven. On Prahasta being slain by Nila, that mighty army of Rakshasas, never trembling (from fear),- retreated towards Lanka. And like waters rushing (through a breach in) a dyke, the Rakshasas could not stand their ground, on their leader being slain. And on that head of the hosts being killed, the Rakshasas, growing dispirited, repairing to the residence of the lord of Rakshas, remained plunged in thought, without speaking anything. And plunged in that sea of sorrow, they seemed as if they had been bereft of their senses. And then the highly powerful and victorious Nila, leader of forces, on being extolled with gracious offices, and on being joined by Rama and Lakshmana, looked exceedingly exhilarated.

SECTION LIX.

And on the leader of the Rākshasa host being slain in buttle by the foremost of monkeys, that army of the Rākshasa monarch, resembling the ocean in violence,—furnished with dreadful weapons, began to scamper away. And going to the lord of the Rākshasas, they apprised him of the dealth of his general at the hands of the Fire-god's offspring. And hearing those words of theirs, the Rākshasa lord was overcome with rage. And hearing that Prahasta had been killed in battle, (he), exercised with passion, with his beart influenced with grief, addressed those foremost of the Rakshasa hosts, even as Indra addresses the chiefs among the celestials, saying,-"That foe should no longer be disregarded that hath slain along with his followers and elephants that leader of my hosts that had destroyed the forces of Indra himself. Therefore, without taking thought, will I, for compassing the destruction of the foe, myself march to that marvellous field of fight. And to-day, even as a flaming fire burneth down a forest, will I with showers of shafts burn up that monkey-army, and Rama and Lakshmana." Saying this, that enemy of the sovereign of the immortals ascended a flaming vehicle of dazzling sheen yoked to rows of excellent steeds,displaying itself gloriously and having a glowing body. And eulogized with sacred hymns, the sovereign of the Rakshasa rulers then set out to the sounds of conchs and trumpets and panavas; and in the midst of those produced by persons striking at their arms, with their hands, and of the sounds defiance, and leonine roars. And like that lord of the immortals-Rudra-surrounded by ghosts, the foremost of the Rakshsa monarchs was surrounded by bands of flesh-feeding (Rakshas) resembling cliffs and clouds, -with eyes glowing like fire. And at once issuing from the city, that one endowed with high energy saw that fierce array of monkeys, extended as the ocean or a mighty mass of clouds,-with arms upraised with rocks and stones. And seeing that terrific host of Rakshasas, that eminently auspicious one, followed by the forces, having arms resembling the lord of serpents-Rama-spoke unto Bibhishana, foremost of those bearing arms,-"Whose is this force furnished with various ensigns and standards -- and equipped with pracas and swords and darts and other arms, -consisting of intrepid (Rakshasas), and having elephants. resembling Mahendra* itself." Then hearing Rama's speech,

* The mountain so named.

Bibhishana, possessed of the prowess of Sakra himself, isiformed Rama anent that foremost of hosts consisting of that flower of high-souled Rakshasas, saying, -"O king, him do thou know to be Akampana, who, possessed of a high soul, is on the back of that elephant,-whose face looks like the sun new risen, and who approacheth making the head of his elephant tremble (with the splendour of his person).* And that one is named Indrajit-foremost by virtue of the boon (that he hath obtained), who ascending a car and having a lion for his ensign,-twangeth his bow like the very bow of Sakra displayed,-and who with his terrific round teeth appeareth like an elephant. And that one of a gigantic person is named Atikaya, that, like unto the Setting-hill of Vindhya, furnished with the bow and stationed on a car,-highly heroic, stretcheth his bow of unparalleled proportions. And that highsouled hero is named Mahodara that, furnished with right coppery eyes resembling the sun new risen, and ascending a car resonant with the sound of hells, shouteth shrill. And that one having the vehemence of the thunder-bolt is Picacha, that, mounted on a steed in variegated golden trappings, and having the aspect of a mass of evening clouds, or a mountain,-(appeareth) with a praça furnished with effulgence. And that one is the famed Trigiras,† that, grasping a whetted dart endowed with the splendour of lightning and having the speed of the thunder for its minister, approacheth, riding a bull-the best of his species-and having the appearance of the Moon himself. And that one looking like a mass of clouds, that, having a broad and beautiful breast and a banner surmounted with the king of serpents, goeth in collected carriage, stretching his bow is Kumbba. And that one is Nikumbha of wondrous valorous deeds (in battle) that, grasping a flaming and smoky* bludgeon embellished with gold and diamonds, cometh-a very banner of the entire Raksha host. And that one is Narantaka, fighting with mountain-peaks,-that appeareth before us, mounted on a car flaming like fire, furnished with pennons and equipped with bows and swords and shafts. And that crusher of the hauteur of even the celestials,-that surrounded by various spectres of dreadful forms having faces of tigers, or camels, or powerful elephants, or deer, or horses,-and with their eyes rolling,-where the white umbrella resembling the Moon,-shineth, graced with slender ribs-the highsouled sovereign of Rakshas appeareth like Rudra himself environed by spectres,-the sovereign of the Rakshas decked with a diadem, with his countenance graced with pendulous ear-rings,-with a person resembling that monarch of mountains-even Vindhya himself,-that humbler of the pride of Indra the Great and Yama,-shineth like the Sun." Then Rama—repressor of foes -answered Bibbishana, saying,-"Alas! Ravana-lord of the Rakshasas-is of exceeding glowing splendour; and Ravana shineth in glory, and is incapable of being gazed at like the Sun himself. And his grace, being enshrouded in his own splendour, I cannot view plainly. And the persons of celestials appear splendid as doth the person of the Rakshasa-chief. And all the warriors of that high-souled one are like mountains and fight with crags; and all are equipped with flaming weapons. And environed by glowing ghosts of dreadful forms and fiercelooking and furnished with material tenements +, -the king of Rakshasas appeareth imposing like the Destroyer himself. And by lack it is that to-day the wicken-minded one hath come within the range of my vision; and to-day will I vent

This meaning is the commentator's.

† Some other than the colebrated hero slain by Rama at the very outset off his sojourn in Dandaka.—T.

On account of lapises set on it.

† Having, according to the commentator, goodly persons. But dehawades is terrally having hodies; and this sense, with reference to spirits, I fancy, fits in with the context.—T.

my wrath incident to the ravishment of Sita." Having said this, Rama endowed with prowess, ever followed by Lakshmana, stood, taking up his bow and pulling out a powerful shaft. And then that high-souled lord of Rakshasas addressed that mighty host, saying,-"Do ye tasting off fear stay at ease, at the gateways, high ways, and the edifices (in Lanka). Taking note of this lapse,-vis., that ye have all come hither with me, the wood-rangers in a body, subduing the empty city incapable of being withstood,-shall suddenly put (all) to straits." Then leaving those counsellors, (Ravana), on the Rakshas having departed agreeably to his injunction, dived into that ocean of monkeys, like a mighty fish diving into the waves of over brimming deep. And seeing the lord of Rākshasas, furnished with flaming a bow and arrows, -suddenly rushing, -the king of monkeys, uprooting a mighty mountain-top, darted against the sovereign of the Rakshas. And taking up that mountain-peak having its sides covered with innumerable trees, he hurled it at the night ranger. And seeing it descend swiftly, (Ravana) in battle severed the same by means of gold-knobbed shafts. And on that gigantic peak furnished with fair sides filled with trees, falling to the earth, severed in pieces,—the lord of Rakshasas took up an arrow, resembling a mighty serpent and having the splendour of the Destroyer himself. And taking that shaft endowed with the vehemence of the wind, flaming like a fire aglow, and having the impetuosity of the great Indra's thunder-bolt, (Ravana) hurled it in rage to compass the destruction of Sugriva. And even as the fierce dart discharged by Guha* had pierced Krauncha,† that shaft shot by Ravana, rushing in violence at Sugriva, possessed of a person having the touch of Sakra's thunder-bolt, pierced it., Thereat, agonised by the shaft, that hero, with his senses. bewieldered, dropped down to the ground with shrieks,

* The generallissimo of the celestials.

† The mountain so named,

seeing, him down on the earth bereft of his senses, the Yatudhanas were filled with rejoicing. And then Gavaksha and Gavaya, Sushena, Rishabha, Jyotimukha and Nala, uprooting crags and magnifying their bodies, rushed against the lord of Rakshasas. And the lord of Rakshasas with hundreds of shafts having sharpened heads, rendered their strokes fruitless. And then he rived those foremost of monkeys with showers of arrows having variegated golden knobs, and covered those fierce monkey-ranks with networks of arrows. And on being sore assailed and falling in consequence, those heroes, the monkeys, pierced with terrific arrows, and distressed with the shafts of Ravana, emitting cries, sought the shelter of Rama worthy of being sought. Then the high-souled and excellent bowman-Rama,-taking his bow, at once sallied forth. And thereat, Lakshmana, approaching Rama, with joined hands addressed him words couching prime import. "O noble one, I alone am fit to compass the destruction of this wicked-minded one. I will slay him. Do thou, O master, permit me." To him replied Rama of exceeding energy, having truth for his prowess,-"Go then, O Lakshmana, and put forth thy utmost exertions in the encounter. Ravana is for sooth endowed with mighty energy, and his prowes in battle is wonderful. Without doubt, when enraged, he is incapable of being borne by this triple world. Do thou keep an eye on his shortcomings as thou shouldst watch thine own failings. Being always on the alert, thou must with thy eyes as much as thy bow protect thyself." Hearing Raghava's speech, Sumitra's son, embracing Rama, and saluting him and paying him his respects, went forth to battle. And Troing unto the field), he found Ravana, endowed with arms resembling the trunks of elephants,-wielding his dreadful and flaming bow, and covering with showers of arrows those monkeys, whose bodies had been swarming with shafts. And seeing Ravana, the exceedingly powerful Hausman -son unto the Wind-god-resisting that downpour of torows, charged him vehemently. And coming at his car, the intelligent Hanuman, uplifting his right arm and terrifying Ravana, said,--"Incapable of being slain by gods, Danavas or Gandharvas, Yakshas or Rakshasas,-Fear hath (at last, found thee, coming even from monkeys. This my upraised right erm furnished with five fingers, shall rob thee of thy soul long resident (in thy body)." Hearing Hanuman's speech, Ravana possessed of dreadful prowess, with his eyes reddened in wrath, said these words,-"Strike thou swift maugre fear; and acquire lasting renown. And, O monkey, having (at first) taken the measure of thy might, will I finish thee." Hearing Ravana's words, the offspring of the Wind-god said,-"(First) remember thou thy son-Aksha-slaughtered by me !" Thus addressed, the exceedingly energetic lord of the Rakshasas possessed of prowess dealt a slap unto the offspring of the Wind-god. And struck with his slap, he shook momentarily. And staying for a moment and calling up fortitude, that magnanimous one administered a slap unto the foe of the immortals. And hit by the high souled monkey, the Ten-necked one trembled, as trembleth a mountain during an earthquake. And witnessing Ravana struck with a slap (by Hanuman saints and Siddhas and celestials and the Asuras shouted in glee. Then attaining a little respite, Ravana said,-"Well done, O monkey. In prowess thou art a fee I pride in." Thus addressed by Ravana, the Wind-god's son said,- Fie on my prowess, seeing that thou breathest yet, O Ravana. Strike at the same time, O perverse one. Why dost thou bluster? And then my blow shall despatch thee to the mantions of Yama." And at the speech of the Wind-good son, his ire flamed up. And then that one endowed with prowess, clenching his right fist carefully, let it alight amain on the monkey's chest. And hit at his spacious chest, Hanuman shook over and over again. And seeing the mighty Hanuman overwhelmed, that powerful car-warrior ascended on his car, approached Nila. And the powerful lord of Rakshasas-the Ten-necked one -made that general of forces -Nila-affame with dreadful shafts entering into the vitals, resembling snakes. And assailed with shafts, Nila-leader of monkeys-with one arm took up a mountain-top and hurled it at the lord of Rakshas. And the energetic and high-minded Hanuman, attaining respite, eager for encounter. seeing (the fight between the Rakshasa and the monkey), wrought up with rage, said,-"It is not meet for me to attack Rayana-lord of Rakshasas-engaged with Nila." And the highly powerful Ravana, by means of seven shafts with sharpened points, hit at the mountain-top; and shivered in pieces, it fell (to the earth). And seeing that mountain peak shattered, that general of the monkey-forces-slayer of hostile beroes--flamed up in wrath like the fire at the universal wreck. And in that encounter Nila discharged Acwakarna trees, and Salas, and mangoes in full flower, and various other trees. And Ravana, getting at the trees, severed them (by means of his arrows), and poured on the Fire-god's son terrific showers of shafts. And assailed with fearful showers of arrows as with a mass of clouds, that one endowed with eminent strength, decreasing his dimensions, dropped on the top of Ravana's banner. And seeing the son of the Fire-god descend on the top of his banner. Ravana was fired with ire. and Nila shouted (thereat). And seeing the monkey (now) at the top of the hanner, and (now) at the end of his bow. and (now) at the crest of his tiara, Lakshmana and Hanuman and Rama were struck with astonishment. And also Rayana endowed with exceeding energy, astonished at the lightness of the mostley, took up a wonderful flaming fiery weapon. And the monkeys seeing Ravana bewildered, and delighted thereat, set up shouts. And Ravana enraged at the shouts of the monkeys, with his heart overwhelmed with agitation. could not address himself to any affort. And then taking a hery shaft and setting the same on his bow, the night-ranger gazed at Nila. And the exceedingly energetic lord of the Rakshasas said,-"O monkey, by virtue of thy skill in illusion, thou art furnished with lightness. But, O monkey, if thou canst, preserve thy life. Thou transformest thyself into many shapes. Yet this shaft of mine discharged from my weapon, shall deprive of thy life thee that art preserving it." Having said this, the mighty-ormed Ravana-lord of the Rakshasas-fixing his shaft on his bow, shot it at the general. And Nila, struck at the chest with that arrow, which had been shot (by Ravana), burning, suddenly fell down to the earth. And by virtue of the greatness of his sire and also of his own energy, he went to the earth on his knees, but was not utterly deprived of life. And seeing the monkey deprived of his senses, the Ten-necked one, eager for encounter, riding a car emitting a rattle resembling the rumbling of clouds, darted against Sumitra's son. And entering into the arena of fight and posted there flaming, the powerful lord of the Raleshasas, baffling (the foc), kept stretching his bow. And as that one of immeasurable prowess kept stretching his bow, Sumitra's son of unflagging mettle, addressed him, saying,-O lord of night-rangers, do thou to-Jay try me in encounter. Thou ought not to strive with the monkeys." And hearing Saumitri's speech uttered in a full voice, as well as the terrific twangs of his bow-string, that Raksha-the king-approaching Sumitra's son staying in the field, spoke unto him wrathfully,-"O Raghu's son, by my luck hast thou of perverse sense, finding thy fate come within the range of my ken. This very instant, tormented with the springes of my shafts, thou wilt repair to the regions of Death." Thereat,-Sumitia's son, without being overwhelmed withwonder (on witnessing Ravana's prowess), addressed that one furnished with large and sharp teeth,-setting up roars,-"O king, those who are (really) endowed with prowess, do not storm. O prince of sinners, in vain thou vauntest. O lord of Rakshasas, I know thy prowess and strength and energy and vigor. Here am I stationed, bow and shafts in hand. Come thou, What is the use of vain-glorious self-laudation?" Thus accosted. the Raksha monarch, growing wroth, discharged seven shafts furnished with knobs. Thereupon Lakshmana split them up with sharp-pointed arrows having variegated golden knobs. And they suddenly severed like powerful serpents cut off, Lanka's lord came under the sway of passion, and discharged other whetted arrows. And Rama's younger brother poured showers of arrows from his bow; and, planting himself at his post, cut off those arrows (of his adversary) by means of razors, and crescents, and excellent karnas and darts. And seeing his arrowy net-works rendered ineffectual, that enemy of the celestials-the king-was seized with wonderment, and again shot sharpened arrows. And Lakshmana also, rosembling Indra the Great, setting on his bow sharpened, sharp-pointed. flaming, and luminous shafts, endowed with the dreadful vehement impetus of the thunder-bolt, discharged (them), to compass the destruction of the lord of Rakshas. And thereat the Rākshasa sovereign cut oft those whetted arrows; and smote Lakshmana in the forehead with an arrow resembling the Fire of Dooms-day in energy,-which had been conferred on him by the Self-create. And Lakshmana, tortured with Ravana's arrow, shook, loosely holding his bow; and then recovering his consciousness after undergoing extreme agony, he severed the bow of the foe of the foremost of celestials. And having cut off Ravana's bow, Daçaratha's son hit (him) with three sharp-pointed arrows. And the king smarting under the shafts, with much ado regained his consciousness. And the enemy of the immortals of terrific power with his bow severed. and himself hit with shafts, and his body covered with fat, and himself washed in blood, took up a dart conferred on him by the Self-create. And the sovereign of the Rakehasas and their lord in that encounter hurled at Sumitra's son the dart resembling smoking fire, sending un living flames, and striking terror into the monkeys. And as it coursed on, Bharata's younger brother resisted it with arrows resembling a sacrificial flame. Yet the dart pierced into the broad arm* of Daçaratha's son. And smit with the dart, that hero of the Raghu race, although possessed of strength, was aglow. And the king at once with his arms seized that one, who had been deprived of his senses. But he that could with his arms wield Himavan or Mandara or Meru or the triple world itself along with the immortals, could not (for all his strength) lift up Bharata's younger brother. And hit at his chest by the dart of Brahma, Sumitra's son remembered that he was verily a portion of Vishnu himself. And pressing hard Sumitra's son-that humbler of the hauteur of the Daityas. that thorn in the sides of the celestials-could not move him (from his place). And then the Wind-god's off-pring waxing wroth rushed at Rayana, and overwhelmed with rage smote at his chest with his elenched fist resembling the thunderbolt. And boxed (by Hanumana), Ravana-lord of the Rakshasas-went down to the ground on his knees, and shook and dropped to the earth. And blood gushed out in streams from his mouths and eyes and arms; and staggered and senseless, he sat down on the platform of his car. And he was rendered insensible with his senses lost; and he knew not where he was. And seeing Ravana endued with terrific prowess, rendered insensible in the encounter, saints and monkeys and gods with the Asuras set up shouts. And then the energetic Hanuman taking Lakshmana racked by Ravana. with his arms brought him before Raghava. And albeit incapable of being moved by the foes, (Lakshmana), on account of the friendship of the Wind-god's offspring as well as the high reverence in which he was held by Hanuman. became extremely light to the monkey. And then that dart. renouncing Sumitra's son vanquished in fight, again sought its place in Rayana's car. And the exceedingly powerful Ravana, recovering his consciousness in that dread encounter.

* Bhujdataram is vague. It may also mean the chest .- T.

took up whetted shalts and seized a mighty bow. And that finisher of foes-Lakshmana-recovered the exercise of his senses, and had his entire person perfectly healed, -or his recalling that he verily was a part and parcel of Vishnu himself. And witnessing the mighty army of the monkeys and the redoubted heroes brought down in the conflict. Raghava rushed at Ravana. Thereat drawing near to him, Hanuman said unto him, - "It behoveth thee to chastise the foe ascending my back, even as Vishnu chastiseth the enemies of the immortals, riding Garutman." Hearing the words spoken by Hanuman, Raghava at once got up on that gigantic monkey; and that master of men beheld Ravana in battle. And seeing him, that highly powerful one darted against Ravana, even as the enraged Vishnu had rushed against Virochana's son,* upraising his weapons. And he sharply twanged his bow-string sounding like the terrific crash of thunder; and then in solemn tones, Rama addressed the lord of Rakshasas, saying, - "Stay, stay, having done me such wrong. Repairing whither, shalt thou. O powerful Rakshasa, attain respite? Even if thou shouldst seek Yama or Indra or the Sun-son unto Vivaçwan-or the Self-sprung or the Fire-god or Sankara himself,-or go to the ten cardinal points in ten portions,-yet shalt thou not, so resorting, attain deliverance. And (Lakshmana), going forth to the fight, hath been wounded with the dart and hath suddenly been stupified. But, O king of the Rakshas, to-day in conflict Death shall claim for his own thee and thy sons and grandsons. By me with my shafts have been slaughtered four and ten thousand Rakshas residing in Janasthana, wielding excellent weapons." Hearing Raghava's words, the exceedingly strong lord of the Rakshasas, overwhelmed with a mighty wrath, recalling enmity agone, with burning shalts resembling the fire of Doom hit in encounter the exceedingly impetuous offspring of the Wind-god, who was bearing Raghava. And although struck and resisted by the Rakshasa with arrows, the energy of that one, endowed by nature with prowess-increased greatly. And the exceedingly energetic Rama, on seeing that foremost of the monkeys wounded by Ravana, was mastered by wrath. And Rama, closing with his enemy, by means of whetted arrow-points severed in pieces his car together with the wheels and the steeds, the banner, the umbrella, and the majestic streamer, as well as with the charioteer and the thunder-bolts and darts and swords. And then as the reverend Indra cleaveth Meru with his thunder-bolt, (Raghava) swiftly smote on Ravana's spacious and shapely chest with a shaft resembling Vajra and the thunder holt. And-that the king hero-who had not smarted nor shaken under the impetus of Vaira and the thunder-bolt,-assailed with the arrow of Rama and agonised in consequence, shook and lost hold of his bow. And seeing him overwhelmed, Rāma took up a flaming half-moon, and with the same at once severed the sun-bright tiara of the high-souled sovereign of the Rakshasas. And Rama in the encounter addressed the lord of Rakshasas. resembling a serpent bereft of vonom, shorn of his splendour, like unto the sun shrouded (in mist),-without his wonted grace, and having his entire tiara riven-saying, -- "Thou hast (in battle) performed high and dreadful deeds,-and hast also (in the conflict) slain my foremost heroes. And therefore I know thou art fatigued. And for this reason it is that I will not with my shafts bring thee to the door of Death. Go thou. I know* that thou art worn out with fight. Therefore, O king of night-rangers, enter Lanka. Having a little respite, do thou depart on thy car along with thy bowmen. Afterwards, mounted on thy car, shalt thou behold my power". And thus addressed, the king, with his pride and joy defeated, with his bow severed, and his steeds and charioteer killed, himself smarting under shafts,-and having his crown splintered,—speedily entered Lanka. And on that foe of the deities and the Danavas—the puissant lord of the night-rangers—entering (into Lanka), Rama rendered the monkeys along with Lakshmana hale in that fierce conflict. And at the break-down of that foe of the immortals, the celestials and the Asuras, the ghosts and the Cardinal points, and all the mighty serpents together with the oceans and the creatures inhabiting earth and water, felt exceedingly delighted.

<sup>* *</sup> The Asura-Vali,

* Mindmi-lit. I know. The commentator says that here this work means I bermit. But the literal sense answers.—T.

SECTION LX'

And entering the city of Lunka, the king afflicted with the fear of Rama's arrows, with his pride humbled, was undergoing great torments. And overpowered by the highsouled Raghava, the king resembled an elephant defeated by a lion or a serpent defeated by Garura. And remembering Raghava's arrows resembling a comet risen at the universal wreck, and of the splendour of live lightning the Rākshasachief was aggrieved. And seated on a superb golden seat, Rama, eying the Rakshasas, spoke,-"Forsooth all austere asceticism I have performed goeth for nothing, for although resembling the redoubtable Indra, I have been overcome by a mortal. And this dire speech of Brahma also reverts to my remembrance,-'Know thou that thy fear cometh from a human being. Thou art incapable of being slain by deities and Danavas, Gandharvas, Yakshas, Rakshasas and serpents. But thou hast not asked for immunity from men.' And I deem even this son of Daçaratha as the occasion of my fear. And I was formerly cursed by that lord of the Ikshwaku line-Anaranya-saying,-'O worst of Rakshasas, a person shall spring in my race, who,

O wicked-minded one, shall slay thee in battle along with thy sons and courtiers and forces and horses and charioteers.' And I was also cursed by Vedavati, who was formerly outraged by me. And she is (perchance) born as the exalted daughter of Janaka. And what had also been uttered by Uma and Nandicwara and Rambha and Varuna's daughter.* hath come to pass.† And taking note of this, we should strive (to the uttermost.) And let the Rakshasas be posted at the gateways, highways, and the walls. And do ye wake up that destroyer of the pride of the deities and the Danavas-Kumbhakarna, endowed with unparalleled gravity, overwhelmed with the curse of Brahma." And seeing himself worsted and Prahasta also slain, that Raksha endowed with dreadful power issued his orders to that fearful force. "Do ve vigilantly guard the gates and mount the wall. And do ye wake up Kumbhakarna come under the sway of slumber. deprived of his senses through lust, he sleepeth secure. the Rakshasa sometimes sleepeth nine, seven, ten, or eight months away. Of measureless might he hath slept for nine months. And foremost of all the Rakshasas in fight, that long-armed one shall speedily slay the monkeys as well as the princes. He is a very banner in battle, and the crown of all the Rakshas. But intent on common pleasure, Kubhakarna, with his senses stupified, sleepeth ever. I have been worsted in herce fight by Rama; but on Kumbhakarna being awakened, my grief shall go. If he doth not help me in such high peril, what shall I do with his strength resembling the strength of Sakra himself?" Hearing the speech of the lord of the Rakshasas, the Rakshasas, bestirring themselves, went to the abode of Kumbhakarna. And desired by Ravana, those feeding on flesh and blood went off hurriedly. taking perfumes and wreaths and a mass of food. And entering Kumhhakarna's charming cave having a wide gateway, measuring a voyana breathing around perfumes of flowers,-those highly powerful ones, pushed off hy Kumbhakarna's breath, with the utmost energy they could summon up stood their ground and entered the cave. And then entering that charming cave having floors paved with gold and gems, those Nairitas endowed with great strength, saw that one of dreadful prowess, lying down. And then they together set about waking up the slumbering Kumbhakarna looking like a bill extended,-and sunk in profound slumber; with his body having its down standing on end; lying down; like a sighing serpent; rolling people* with his powerful breath,-reposing; possessed of dreadful prowess; having a huge nose; of a person vast as the nether sphere; lying stretched at length; smelling of fat and blood; decked with golden angadas; and waring a diadem endowed with the splendour of the Sun. And (they) saw that sunduer of enemies and foremost of Nairitas-Kumhhakarna. And then they piled up Meru-like animals for conferring rare gratification, and heaps of deer and buffaloes and boars. And the Rakshasas made an astounding heap of rice. And then the enemies of the immortals put up before Kumbhakarna jars of blood and various kinds of food, and smeared that repressor of foes with excellent sandal, and made him inhale perfumes and the aroma of wreaths. And they made (the place) rife with the incense of dhupa, and extolled that smiter of enemies.. And then the Yatudhanas roared around here and there like clouds. And they winded couchs beaming moon-like. And they incapable of being beaten shouted in full chorus. And the night-rangers shouted and struck at their arms with their hands and began to pull him. And for rousing Kumbhakarna, mighty was the din that they raised. And hearing those loud sounds of conchs and drums and panavas; and those proceeding from persons striking at their arms with their hands; and leonine roars,rushing on all sides and riving the very heavens,-birds suddenly dropped down. And when the high-souled Kumbhakarna sleeping soundly did not awake at that terrific tumult, the Rakshasas took up Bhushandis* and maces. And then the Rakshasas, drawing near, smote Kumbhakarna sleeping sweetly in the chest with mountain-peaks, maces and clubs. But the Rakshasas could not stay before Kumbhakarna owing to the hurricane heaving at his breath. Then tightening their cloth+ (about their waist), those Rāksl asas of dreadful prowess sounded mridangas and panavas, conchs and kumbhas. And ten thousand Rakshasas together surrounded that one resembling a heap of dark-blue collyrium and fell to rousing him. But albeit assailed with shouts and smit with weapons, he did not wake up. And when they succeeded not in rousing him, they more than ever exerted themselves, And then they smote him with horses and camels, and mules and snakes, rods and lashes and hooks, and with might and main sounded kettledrums and conchs and mridangas. And they struck his body with innumerable huge blocks of wood. And summoning up their dearest energy, they dealt him blows with maces and clubs. And at that mighty uproar, entire Lanka was filled with her woods and hills; yet he did not wake up. And then they simultaneously sounded a thousand kettle-drums beaten with sticks of polished gold.

· Punjikasthala.

† Punjikasthalà cursed Rávana that he should come by death if he should use violence on a woman against her inclination. Râvana had not been cursed by Rambhá herself, but by Nala Kuvera in her interest. 'Thy head shall he sundered in seven when thou forcest a female against her will.' Umå had cursed Râvana that for a woman he should meet with death on the shaking of the peak of Kailāça.—Nandiqwara had cursed him that as he had slighted and scoffed at him, he should find his fate at the hands of the monkeys, being emanations of himself.—T.

* An instance of the material sublime unsurpassed in all literature. Kumbhakarna himself is the emblem of the material as contrasted with the spiritual typified by Ráma,—T.

* A variety of the mace.

† Another reading is, Tatak prapuritah garham—then densely filling the cave.—T.

And coming under the sway of the curse,* when that one sunk in slumber did not wake up, the night-rangers were wrought up with wrath. And overcome with choler, they endowed with dreadful prowess addressed themselves vigorously to awakening him; and others put forth their energy. And others smote the kettle-drums, and others set up loud cries. And others cut off his hair, and others bit his ears. And others poured into his ears a thousand vessels of water. But Kumbhakarna come under the spell of a mighty slumber did not wink. And others-strong ones-armed with poniards (kutas) and maces. made their poniards and maces alight on his person. struck with sataghnis bound with cords,† that huge-bodied one did not wake up. And then when a thousand elephants rushed against his body, recovering his consciousness, he awoke. And assailed with mountain-peaks and trees descending on his body, he, without minding those tremendous blows,-on sleep having been dispelled, suddenly got up, yawning,suffering the pangs of hunger. And then that night-ranger resembling an elephant or a serpent or a mountain-peak, casting about his arms superior in force to the thunder-bolt itself, and opening his deformed mouth like unto that of a mule, yawned (again and again). And as he yawned his mouth resembling the subterraneous regions, looked like the Sun stationed at the summit of Meru. And that night. ranger possessed of unwieldly strength woke up, yawning. And the breath that he breathed resembled a storm raging in a mountain. And then as he sat up, Kumhhakarna's form appeared like that of the Destroyer himself at the universal wreck,-intent upon_consuming all creatures. And the large eyes of that one, resembling a live flame and endowed with the splendour of lightning, appeared like a pair of glowing planets. And then they pointed unto him all those heaps of edibles, various and profuse,-bears and buffaloes,-and that powerful (Rakshasa) fell to. And hungering, he fed on flesh and atherst, drank blood. And then that enemy of Sakra drank vesselfuls of fat and blood. And concluding that he was replete, the night-rangers came up; and bowing down their heads, stood circling him on all sides. And then with his eyes discolored and drooping from drowsiness, he casting his eyes around, addressed those night-rangers. And that foremost of Nairitas cheered all those Nairitas; and surprised at his having been roused,-spoke unto the Rakshasas,-"Why, being honored, have I been awakened by you? Is it well with the king? Or hath any fear sprung up here? Or hath a mighty fear presented itself forsooth from among others; for which I have been speedily awakened by you? This very day will I uproot quite the fear of the sovereign of the Rakshasas. I will split up the great Indra himself,-or make Fire himself give up his heat. One doth not awaken my like for a light cause. Therefore do ye give the real truth of the cause of your awakening me." Thereat a minister of the king, named Yupāksha, with joined hands said unto that humbler of foes-Kumbhakarna-wrought up with wrath, who was thus speaking,-"No fear anywise springs to us from the Deities. But, O king, a great fear doth cross us, coming from a mortal. And never fear so cometh unto us anywise from Daityas or Danavas, as it hath arrived from a man. O king. This Lanka hath been bemmed in by monkeys resembling mountains. And terrific is the terror that cometh even from Rama scorched with fire springing from the ravishment of Sita. Ere this by a single monkey was this splendid city burnt down. And the prince Aksha hath been slain along with his following and elephants. And that thorn in the sides of denties, that lord of the Rakshasas-Pulasta's son himself-hath been set free in conflict by Raghava endowed with the splendour of the Sun,-saving-'Go thou,' And what had been done unto the king by neither the gods nor the Daityas nor yet the Danavas, hath been done by Rama; and he hath been set free, having come to a pass imperilling his life." Hearing Yupaksha's speech and hearing of the defeat of his brother, Kumbhakarna, with his eves whirling, spoke unto him, saying,-"To day, O Yupāksha, after vanquishing in battle the monkey-army together with Lakshmana and Raghava, shall I see Ravana. And I shall regale the Rakshasas with the flesh and blood of the monkeys. and myself drink the blood of Rama and Lakshmana." Hearing his words as he haughtily spoke thus with his spirit of insolence magnified by much, that foremost of the Nairita soldiers, Mahodara, with joined hands observed, -- "O longarmed one, having at first heard Ravana's words and considered their justice or otherwise, thou wilt afterwards defeat the foe in fight." Hearing Mahodara's words, the exceedingly energetic and mighty (Kumbhakarna) surrounded by the Rakshasas, prepared to depart. And having roused from his slumbers that one of terrific prowess having dreadful eyes,the Rakshasas speedily arrived at the residence of the Ten-necked one. And presenting themselves before the Ten-necked one seated on a superb seat, all the night-rangers spoke with joined hands,-"O lord of the Rakshasas, thy brother, Kumbhakarna, hath been roused. Shall be march from there; or wilt thou see him come here?" Thereat, Ravana, pleased, spoke unto those Rakshasas who had presented themselves, -"I wish to see him here, and do ye honor him fittingly." Thereat, saying 'So be it', the Rakshasas, directed by Ravana, going back, spoke unto Kumbhakarna,- " "That foremost of all the Rakshasas-the king-wisheth to see thee. So mind thou going, and gladden thy brother." And the rerepressible Kumbhakarna possessed of prodigious prowess, learning the mandate of his brother, saying,-'So be it,"-rose up from his bed. And washing his face, and having bathed, that one, feeling refreshed and enjoying exceeding exhibaration of spirit, -wishing to drink, urged (the Rakshasas) to bring the nerve-conferring draught. And then the Rakshasas, at the command of Ravana speedily procured wine and various kinds of viands. And having drunk two thousand vessels (of wine), he prepared to go. And slightly swolen and flushed, Kumbhakarna, attaining access of strength and fire, waxed wroth,and resembled the Doom and Destroyer -Yama himself. And striding to the residence of his brother backed by the Raksha force, Kumbhakarna shook the earth with his tread. And illuming the highway with the splendour of his person, like the thousand-rayed (Sun) discovering the earth with his rays, (Kumbhakarna) went on, engirt around by joined hands resembling wreaths,-like Satakratu* going to the abode of the Self-sprung. And suddenly seeing that slayer of foes of immeasurable prowess, resembling a mountain-summit,-walking along the highways, the wood-rangers stationed outside (the monkey-camp), along with the leaders of bands, were seized with affright. And then some sought the shelter of Rama. worthy of being so sought; and some, stricken (with panic), dropped to the earth; and some, suffering (from fear), fled to the carindal points; and some through stress (of apprehension) lay down on the ground. And seeing that one resembling a very mountain-peak, decked with a diadem, seeming to touch the Sun himself with his energy, of colossal altitude, and wonderful to behold,-the wood-rangers, tormented with fright, began to scamper on all sides.

* Brahmá had cursed him, as will appear afterwards.-T.

• What does this mean?

* Lit, him of an hundred sacrifices-an appellation of Indra .- T.

SECTION LXI.

AND then the exceedingly energetic Rama possessed of prowess, taking his bow, saw Kumbhakarna, having a huge body and decked with a diadem. And seeing that foremost of Rakshasas looking like a mountain; filling all the heavens as formerly Nārāyana had done; resembling clouds charged with rain; and adorned with golden angadas,—the mighty army of monkeys began to run away at the top of its speed. Seeing the army scamper and the Rākshasa swelling, Rāma struck with surprise, said unto Bibhishana,-"Who is that tawney-eyed one, decked with a diadem, and looking like a hill? And in Lanka the hero appeareth like a mass of clouds embosoming lightning. And alone he seemeth like an ensign of the Earth; and seeing him the monkeys dart away hither and thither. Tell me who he is, -whether a Raksha or an Asura, The like of him mine eyes had never before lighted on." Accosted by the king's son-Rama of untiring deeds-the exceedingly wise Biblishana said unto Kakutstha, -- "By whom in battle Vivascwata's offspring* and Vasava himself had been vanguished, this is he—the wondrous powerful Kumbhakarna -son unto Viçravan. No Rakshasa is there that equalleth this one in size. O Raghava, this one in battle hath brought down Danavas and Yakshas and Serpents+ and flesh-feeders and Gandharvas and Vidyadharas and Pannagas; by thousands. The immortals themselves thinking the dart-handed and fierceeyed Kumbhakarna possessed of great strength, as the Destroyer himself,-were overwhelmed with stupor and were foiled in their exertions to slay him. The exceedingly power ful Kumbhakarna is mighty by nature : the strength of other redoubtable Rakshasas is owing to booms obtained by them. As soon as this high-souled one was born and was a babe, he began to devour up countless creatures by the thousand. And on these having been devoured, creatures, afflicted with affright consequent on those having been eaten up, sought the shelter of Sakra and told him what had happened. And thereat the great Indra, waxing wroth, smote Kumbhakarna with the whetted levin. And hit at with Sakra's thunderbolt, that high-souled (hero, shook, and in wrath set up roars. And hearing the roars of the Rakshasa-Kumbhakarna-as he kept crying, creatures, seized with fear, were greatly agitated. And thereat, enraged with the great Indra, the mighty Kumbhakarna plucking a tusk of Airavata, hurled it at Vasava's chest. And with blood overflowing his person, Vasava looked as if aflame. And thereat, all of a sudden the gods and the Brahmarshis and the Danavas were dispirited. And then they informed the lord of creatures touching the ravages of Kumbhakarna, and informed the gods about Kumbhakarna's devouring up creatures, destroying asylums and outraging others' wives. "If this one devour creatures constantly, in a short space the world would be empty of Hearing Vasava's speech, the Great-father of all any." called up# the Rakshasas and saw Kumbhakarna (before him). And seeing Kumbhakarna, Prajapatit was seized with exceeding great fear. And then, pacifying Kumbhakarna, the Self-sprung addressed him, saying,-- Forsooth for compassing the destruction of creatures, hast thou been begot by Paulasta Therefore from this day forth, thou shalt lie down as one dead." Stricken with the curse of Brahma, Kumbhakarna fell down before the Lord. Then, extremely agitated, Ravana said,--"Thou hewest down a golden tree when about to bear fruit. O lord of creatures, thou ought not to curse

* Yama-son of Vivacwata or the Sun.

† Bhujangdh :--semi-divine serpents.

<sup>2</sup> Semi-divine serpents.

By raciting a certain scriptural formula.—T.

† Lit.-lord of creatures.

<sup>1</sup> Viçravá

thus thine own grandson. Thy words will never go for naught; sleep he will, without doubt. But do thou appoint a time for his sleeping and one for his awaking." Hearing Ravana's speech, the Self-sprung said,-"Having slept for six months, he shall wake for one day. single day, that hero, coming under the influence of hunger, shall range the earth, opening his mouth wide open, and devouring people like a fire that bath spread far and wide. And now king Ravana struck with terror at thy prowess, encompassed with peril, hath waked up Kumbhahere possessed of dreadful prowess, karna. And that wrought up with high wrath, sallying forth from his camp, rusheth about, eating up monkeys. And soon as the monkeys see Kumbhakarna, they fly away. And How can they resist in battle the enraged Kumbhakarna? Do thou tell the monkeys this is an uplifted engine. Thus assured, the monkeys shall take heart." Hearing Bibhishana's words informed with reason and tending to the good (of the monkeys), Raghava then addressed general Nila, saying,-"Let you, monkeys, equipped with weapons and holding hilltops in your hands,-and furnished with mountain-summits and trees and rocks, stay, occupying the highways and the Thus instructed by Raghava, that powerful monkey, Nila-general of the forces-accordingly issued his orders to the monkey-hosts. And then Gavāksha and Sarabha and Hanuman and Angada, themselves endowed with the splendour of mountain-summits, taking up mountain-tops, drew.towards the gateway. And bearing Rama's words,* the heroic monkeys inspired with intrepidity, fiercely fell on the foe with trees. And then that dreadful army of monkeys, upraising crags and holding trees in their hands, appeared like mighty masses of scowling clouds bordering a mountain.†

* Namely, "that is an uplifted engine."

† This is apt, seeing that Lanká was situated on a hill .- T.

SECTION LXII.

AND that tiger-like Rakshasa possessed of prowess, (still) under the influence of slumber, strode along the picturesque highway. And that exceedingly unconquerable one, surrounded by thousands of Rakshasas, went on, showered with biossoms from the bouses (standing by). And then he saw the grand and graceful residence of the lord of the Rakshasas, having golden networks and sun-bright to behold. And entering the mansion of the Rakshasa sovereign, like the sun ontering into a mass of clouds, he saw his elder brother seated at a distance; even as Sakra sees the Self-sprung seated. And Kumbhakarna surrounded by numbers of Rākshasas, entered his brother's abode making the very earth tremble with his tread. And arriving at "the abode and passing the entrance, he saw his superior anxiously seated on the car, Pusphaka. Seeing Kumbhakarna come, the Tennecked one, exceedingly rejoiced, raised him up and drew him near himself. And then the exceedingly mighty Kumbhakarna saluted the feet of his brother and said, - "What dost thou say?" Thereat, delighted, Ravana, springing up, again embraced (his brother). And embraced (by his brother), and duly greeted by him, that brother (of Ravana)-Kumbhakarna seated himself on a shining and superb seat. And seating himself on that seat, the wondrous powerful Kumbhakarna, with his eyes reddened in wrath, addressed Ravana, saying,-"O king, why, honoring me, hast thou awaked me? Tell me, whence springeth thy fear? And who shall be a ghost?"* Thereat, Ravana, waxing wroth. and with his eyes rolling in rage, said unto Kumbhakarna, seated, -- "O highly powerful one, thou hast slept away a long-

* Having been slain by me.

space of time. And having been asleep, thou dost not know the great lear of mine springing from Rama. This graceful son unto Dacaratha possessed of strength, along with Sugriva, having crossed the ocean, is destroying our race. Alack! see in own Lanka, woods and forests have been flooded with an ocean of monkeys coming without any ado by the bridge (which they have constructed), Rākshasas that were prime, have been slain in battle by the monkeys; but I find no destruction of the monkeys in fight. Nay, the monkeys have never been before even vanquished (by the Rākshasas) in battle. And therefore bath this fear sprung up (in my heart). Save me from this, O exceedingly powerful one. Do thou now destroy these. It is for this that I have roused thee. Do thou, favoring me, whose exchequer is empty, save this city of Lanka, having only young folks and the aged left. And, O long-armed one, do thou perform thy dearest acts in behalf of thy brother. And, O subduer of enemies, I had never before said so unto my brother. In thee is my affection and great is the probability of thy succeeding. In the wars of the celestials and Asgras, O foremost of Rakshasas, countless were the celestials that thou as an antagonist hadst beaten. Therefore, O thou of dreadful strength, summon thy entire energy. Him find I not among all beings, who is thy peer in prowess. And, O lover of battle! O dear unto friends, as thou likest, do this beloved good office, this prime benefit, unto me. By thy own energy, smite the hostile hosts, even as a mighty and strong wind (scattereth away) autumnal clouds.

SECTION LXIII.

HEARING the lament of the king of Rakshasas, Kumbhakarna, laughing, said,-"That evil which on the accasion of the conclave we had seen, hath befallen thee, who hast passed by what was fraught with thy good. Even as a singer reapeth perdition, verily hath the fruit of thine unrighteous act found thee. At first, O mighty king, thou didst not ponder over this course of conduct; nor, from pride of prowess, didst thou at all take note of the evil thereof. He that doeth last what should be done first, and first what should be done last, is ignorant of what is prudence and what not. Acts not performed in harmony with season and place, like unto acts performed counter to season and place, are the occasions of misery, and resemble clarified butter poured into fire that hath not been sanctified. He stayeth well in the path that, in consultation with his counsellors, ascertaineth the five ways touching the three kinds of action.* The king that aided by his own intelligence as well as his counsellors acteth after reflection in consonance with the science of polity, that distinguisheth his friends from his foes), and O ford of the Rakshasas, that seasonably; pursueth righteousness, or profit, or desire,-or any two, or all these combined, -truly hath understanding. I But the king or the heir-

• The five ways are (1) the means of commencing an act (2) person, thing and wealth, (3) division of season and place, (4) providing against mischance, (5) success. The three kinds of action are treaty, war, etc. All this is sebulous; and the commentator is sadly reticent over this extremely important passage.—T.

† Religion is to be sought in the morning, profit in the afternoon, and desire at night,—so the commentator—T.

‡ One is at sea in the mudst of these formless generalities. The tantalized intellect makes a desperate attempt to grasp the body of the shadow seeming substance, but the empty air mocks his pains. A translator, however, in fact, bound to the oar and must pull on, will be, nil he.—T apparent, that, having heard what is prime, among the three, doth not understand, bath spent his time in vain on his erudition. He that, controlling his own self, consultetle with his counsellors seasonably touching gift, forbearance; difference and prowess, as well as virtue, profit and desire.doth not in this world come by calamity. Perceiving the fair fruit (of a line of action) accruing to him here, a king should act in consultation with counsellors endowed with intelligence and versed in the import of things. Not understanding the sense of the scriptures, persons possessed of beastly intelligence, -entering into the heart of their counsellors,are inspired with a desire of speaking out of sheer volubility.* Albeit uttered heedfully, the speech of those that are ignorant of learning and the knowledge of the sense of things, -and who are intent upon attaining abounding affluence,-should not be acted upon. And those-spoilers of business-who from recklessness talk of pernicious as if profitable, -should certainly be rejected as counsellors. Some counsellorsdestroyers of their masters-joining intelligent enemies (of their lords), act in a way opposed to their interests in this world. Their lords, at the hour of consultation, by their behaviour should know these counsellors-enemies in the guise of friends-who have been won over (by the opposite party). Even as the fowls of the air enter the hole in the Krauncha, t enemies find an easy entrance into the shortcomings of him that is ficklet and that rusheth into act without heed. He that disregarding his foe, omitteth to guard himself, cometh by disasters and loseth his place. Even what had been advanced by thy beloved and my younger

* The sense is obscure, and the commentator does not help me.-T.

† The hole indented by Skanda the celestial generallissimo in the mountain blamed in the text.—T.

A Chapaly—field. The commentator, however, reads between the lines. Comments to him the epithet means—he that is pleased with speech immediately grantly. But the received sense answers.—T.

<sup>14</sup> Ravana's princir'si queen, Mandodari.

brother is fraught with our welfare. Do thou now what thou wishest." Hearing Kumbhakarna's words, the Ten-necked one knit up his brows, and, wrought up with wrath, said unto him, -"I am worthy of being honored by thee, like thy superior. What needs this verbal travail? Do thou what is fit. Vain is the mention now of what I did either through stupor or delusion or pride of prowess. Now bethink thee of what is proper. Do thou through thy prowess assuage the sorrow of mine springing from my impolitic conduct, if thou cherishest any feeling for me, if thy strength stayeth, and if thou deemest this business of mine as by far more momentous unto thee. He is a friend that succoureth one fallen in distress and is undergoing affliction; and he acts friendly that helpeth a person lapsing from the path of morality." As he was speaking thus in words sedate yet severe, Kumbhakarna;concluding that Ravana was delighted, made his remarks mildly. And seeing his brother extremely sorry, Kumbhakarna, pacifying him, gently said,-"O king, intently hear my words, O repressor of foes! O lord of Rākshasas, banish this sorrow, and casting away thy wrath, return thou to nature. And, O king, so long as I live, thou must not suffer thy heart to fare thus. Him will I slay for whom thou grievest. But whatever condition thou mayst be in, I must tell what is for thy welfare; and therefore from sentiment of friendship as well as from fraternal affection I have spoken thus unto thee, O king. And what a friend from affection should do at a time like this, I shall do the same. See the havock I spread among the foes in fight. And, O long-armed one, behold, on Rama having been slain by me on the edge of battle along with his brother, the monkey-army in headlong flight. And to-day seeing Rama's head brought by me from the field, be thou, O long-armed one, happy; and let Sita be overwhelmed with woe. And let those Rakshasas in Lanka who have had their kindred slain (in battle), see that dear sight-Rama slain (in fight. And to-day shall I slaying the enemies in battle, wipe the tears of those who mourn their friends slain and are overwhelmed with grief. To-day behold the lord of monkeys-Sugriva-resembling a mountain or a mass of clouds lighted up by (the living) sun,-lying stretched on the field. But why, O sinless one, albeit comforted by these Rakshasas eager for slaving Daçaratha's son, as well as by me,-dost thou persist in thy sorrow? Raghava forsooth shall slay thee after slaying me. But, O lord of Rakshasas, I cannot come by grief* (at Raghava's hands). O repressor of foes, do thou now command me, O thou of unparalleled prowess, thou needst not thyself face the foe in fight. I shall abolish thy foes endowed with redoubled might. If even Sakra himself, and Yama, and the god of Fire, and the god of Wind, and Kuvera, and Varuna-shall range themselves against me, them shall I encounter in fight. Purandara himself is seized with fright at sight of me, having a body measuring a mountain,-equipped with sharpened spears,furnished with sharp teeth,-and setting up shouts. And who wishing to save himself shall be able to stay before me as I casting away my weapons keep pounding my enemies with celerity? No need of the dart, or the mace, or the sword, or whetted arrows. I shall with my bare arms alone slay (Rāma) along with the thunderer himself. If Raghava bear the impetus of my blows, then shall the vollies of my shafts drink his life. blood. Why, O king, while I remain, dost thou burn in anxiety? And I am ready to sally out for compassing the destruction of thine enemies Cast off all terror of Rama. I shall slay in battle Raghava and Lakshmana and the exceedingby powerful Sugriva and the Raksha-destroying Hanuman, who made Lanka blaze. I shall cat up the monkeys present in the encounter. And signal is the celebrity that I shall confer on thee. And, O king, if thy fear springs from Indra or the Self-create, even the immortals shall measure their lengths on the earth when I am wrought with rage. And I shall subdue Yama himself and devour the God of Fire. And I shall bring down the very welkin garnished with stars, And I shall slay Satakratu and drink up the abode itself* of Varuna. And I shall crush the mountains and rive the earth. And to-day let all creatures as they are being eaten up, witness the prowess of Kumbhakarna, after he hath slept for a long time. Even the celestial regions do not suffice for me as my fare. I go for securing felicity ushuring in pleasures plenteous flowing from the destruction of Dacaratha's son. And slaying Rama along with Lakshmana, I shall eat up all the foremost of monkey-bands. Make merry, my king; to-day drink Varuni. Enjoy pleasures, banishing sorrow. to-day on my having despatched Rama to the manaion of Yama, Sita shall come under thy control for good."

SECTION LXIV

HEARING the speech of the huge-bodied, long-armed and mighty Kumbhakarna, Mahodara said,—"O Kumbhakarna, although sprung in a noble line, thou art wondrous haughty and of a vulgar form; and thou art not everywhere competent to discern thy course. It certainly cannot well be that the king cannot distinguish between proper and improper; but thou hast from thy youth upwards been insolent; and thy joy is in talking perenially. But the foremost of the Rākshasas is versed in place and increase and injury,—and knoweth the duties touching season and place,—and how to advance his own party and lower that of the foe. But what person over acteth according to what is proposed feebly by one having strength, yet of inferior intelligence, and who hath never respected the agod? And thou art not naturally competent to understand what thou thyself sayest touching the opposed virtue, profit and desire. Verily action is the spring of all agencies of happiness or misery; and it is only those that act either well or ill that reap the results of their acts. Virtue,† and interest! bring about emancipation as . well as heaven and prosperity. But evil cometh from unrighteousness and harms spring therefrom & People reap the fruit of their acts in this world or the next; but the fruit of desire is reaped readily. Therefore should a king set about attaining his desire. And this also had we advised thee with our soul. And what is the harm that one should display his prowess before a foe? Dost thou show the reasons for thy taking the field alone? But I shall point thee out what is improper and unreasonable in this (proposed) course. How shalt thou alone vanouish that Raghava who formerly routed in Janasthana innumerable Rakshasas possessed of exceeding strength? Dost theu not to-day in the palace behold those prowerful Rākshasas that had been beaten in Janasthāna.cowed down in fear? Alar thou wishest to awake Rima,son unto Dacaratha-knowing full well that he resembles an entaged lion or a sleeping serpent. But whom doth it behove

* Vaktum açakyam—incapable of saying But what sense can be attached to—"What man acteth according to what is not advanced by one having strength ....aged ?" I therefore venture to render the passage—forbly proposed—ie proposed with vascillation or half heartedly—T

† The maxims enunciated by this counsellor are hardly all of a piece. The text may have been tampered with -T.

† Artha means sacrifices, gifts, &c., which are capable of being performed with wealth. 'Sacrifice, gift, and ascettcism purify the pious' The Lard's word.—7.

Dharma remarks Râmanuja, is here used for contemplation and recitation of scriptural formula performed without regard to happiness as the fruit of those actions. This is what hath been termed nished dharma—disapterested histor—T.

to confront him ever flaming in energy, difficult of being approached when enraged,-and unbearable even like Death himself? On approaching the foe, this whole host itself shall be imperilled; and therefore, my child, thy marching alone doth nowise recommend itself to me. Who is there that, albeit weak bent on renouncing his life, wisheth to bring under subjection a fee that is powerful,-as if he would act with reference to one that is inferior? O foremost of Rakshasas, why dost thou wish to fight with him whose peer there is none among men, and who is equal to Indra and Vivacwata himself?" Having said this unto Kumbhakarna wrought up with wrath, Mahodara addressed that destroyer of creatures-Ravana-in the midst of the Rakshasas,-"Having already obtained Vaidehi, why dost thou delay? It thou wishest it, Sita shall come under thy control. I have perceived a way as to how Sita may smile upon thee Do thou listen; and should it please thee, act thou accordingly. Do thou proclaim it about that I and Dwijibha and Sanhradi, and Kumbhakarna and Vitardana-these five-are marching for compassing the destruction of Rama. And we, marching out, shall battle with Rama, putting forth our uttermost. And if we succeed in securing victory, no expedient need we resort to (or bringing Sita round). But if our foe live after fight and we also having faught the fight, then shall we do what I conceive in my mind. We shall come hither from the field, bathed in blood, and having our bodies cleft with arrows marked with the name of Rama. And we shall give out that both Rama and Lakshmana have been eaten up by us. And then we shall hold thy feet, saying,-'Do thou gratify us.' Then, O king, do thou through Gajaskandha publish it all round that Rama hath been slain along with his brother and the army. And, O repressor of foes, (pretending to be) well pleased, do thou dispense-viands, and servants, and objects of enjoyments, and wealth unto thy retainers; and unto the many heroes and warriors distribute wreaths" and attires and unguents. And do thou (simulating) delight, drink. And on this report-name that Rama hath been eaten up by the Rakshasas along with his friends,-having spread round and round and entering (the açoka wood), and soothing and pacifying Sita in solitude, allure her with corn and riches and gems. By this deceit, O king, working powerfully through Sita's sorrow, she, albeit unwilling, shall, having lost her lord, come under thy control. Losing her charming husband, she from despair and female frailty, shall come under thy sway. Having formerly been brought up in happiness, she, although worthy of felicity, (ultimately) had come by misfortune. And now finding happiness to be in thy custody, she shall unreservedly come over to thee. In my opinion this is the properest course to follow. As soon as thou seest Rama. evil shall befall thee. Remain here. Do not wish (to go to the field). By reframing from fight, thou shalt acquire great good. And, O lord of people, by conquering the foe without battle, thou without losing thy forces and putting thyself to peril, thou, O ford of earth, shalt attain fame and high religious merit, and prosperity and renown for ever and for ever.

SECTION, LXV.

Thus addressed, Kumbbakarna rebuking Mahodara, said unto that foremost of Rakshasa—his brother—Ravana,—"Even I shall remove thy great fear by slaying the wicked-minded Rama. On thy foe having been slain, attain thou ease. It is not for naught that the heroes roar, like unto clouds containing no rain.* Behold thou their roaring resulting in action in the field! Heroes do not vaunt; but i, s. autumnal plouds and which roar but do not pour.-T.

without boasting of their prowess in speech, they perform feats difficult of being achieved. O Mahodara, what thou sayest is ever acceptable only to kings that are incompetent, and toolish, pluming themselves on their knowledge. All the affairs of the monarch have been wrecked by you-craveus in hight,-sleek-tongued,-following the king (fawning) ye have made Lanka contain only the king the treasury is lean; and the forces have been slain. By the king we have done like foes in the guise of triends. For repairing in mighty conflict the wrong that ye have perpetrated, I am about to set out for battle for routing the enemy" Thus addressed by the intelligent Kumbhakaina, the lord of Rakshasas, laughing answered,-"Sure this Mahodara is affrighted at Rama. And therefore, my child, O thou versed in warfare. he doth not relish battle Like thee have I none either in friendship or strength. Therefore, O Kumbhakarna, go for destroying the foe and securing celebrity. I have waked thee up that wast lying down, in order that thou mightst destroy the enemy. O subduer of foes, perilous is the time for the Rakshasas. Go forth, grasping thy spear, like the noosebanded Destroyer himself. Do thou devour up the monkeys as well as the princes possessed of the energy of the Sun himself. On seeing thy form, the monkeys shall flee away: and the breasts of Rama, and Lakshmana shall be riven." Havilly spoken thus unto Kumbhakarna endowed with prodigious might, that foremost of Rakshasas-the exceedangly energetic Ravana -felt as if he had received life over again. And well acquainted with Kumbhakarna's might, and knowing his prowess, the king felt delighted, like the cloudless Moon." Having been thus accosted, that highly powerful one, went out cheerfully." And hearing the king's speech, he' made ready for fight. And he took a whetted dart destructive to foes on account of its impetuous

&quot; He did not, however go yet awhile, T.

vehemence; entirely made of black iron; flaming; decorated with garniture, of shining gold; looking like Indra's açani; nonderous as the thunder-bolt; capable of destroying gods and Danavas, Gandharvas, Yakshas and Pannagas; adorned with festoons of crimson flowers; and belching forth flames. And taking that huge dart decked with the blood of foes; the wondrous energetic Kumbhakarna spoke unto Ravana, saying,-"I shall go alone: let this mighty host remain here. To-day hungry and enraged, I shall devour up the monkeys Hearing Kumbhakarna's words, Ravana said,- 'Go thou, surrounded by the forces bearing darts and maces in their hands. The monkeys are high souled, heroic and well skilled in battle; and if they find thee alone or unwary, they may slay thee with their teeth. Therefore do thou exceedingly irrisistible, go, environed by the forces; and destroy the entire party of the foes, who are bent upon doing harm unto the Rakshas." Then starting up from his seat, the exceedingly energetic Ravana hung on Kumbhakarna's neck a wreath stringed with gems in the centre. And Ravana also decked that high-souled one with angadas, and hogerfences, and noble ornaments, and a chain resembling the And Ravana adorned his person with garlands gorgeous and fragrant, and set ear rings to his ears. And adorned with golden angadas and Keyuras and other ornaments of gold, the large-eared Kumbhakarna appeared like a fire fed full of sacrificial libations. And with his great dark girdle he seemed like the Mandara fastened by the serpent on the occasion of the churning of the sea. And donning on his impenetrable golden mail, splendid like lightning, and shining in its own brilliance, Kumbhakarna appeared like the monarch of mountains enveloped with evening clouds. Having all his limbs adorned with ornaments and hearing a dart in his hand, the Rakshasa resembled Narayana in elation of spirits, when he covered heaven and earth and the nether regions with three pates. And then embracing his brother and going round him and bowing down the head unto him, that exceedingly powerful one went out. And Ravana sent him with choice benedictions, -while he caused kettle-drums and conchs to be sounded and forces equipped with excellent weapons, to accompany Kumbhakarna. And high-souled mighty warriors followed that foremost of heroes with elephants and steeds and chariots sending out rattle resembling the rumbling of thunder. And mounting serpents and camels and asses and lions and leopards and deer and birds, (Rakshasas) followed the grim Kumbhakarna endowed with tremendous strength. And strewn with blossoms, and, with an umbrella held over him, that exceedingly terrible enemy of the Deities and the Danavas, wielding a dart in his hand, -went out maddened with the smell of blood. countless footmen wondrous powerful and mighty and dreadful and fierce-sighted Rakshasas, carrying weapons in their hands, went in his wake. The Rakshas measuring each many a vyama and red, eyed, and resembling masses of dark-blue collyrium,-went out upraising darts and swords and sharpened axes and bhindipalas and parighas and maces and huge talaskandhas and irrisistible Kshapanis. And the exceedingly energetic Kumbhakarna endowed with prodigious strength sallied forth, assuming another form terrific and dreadful to behold. And the gigantic huge-faced and fierce Kumbhakarna, measuring an hundred bows in breadth and six hundred in altitude, having eyes resembling car-wheels, and resembling a towering hill, or a mountain burnt,marshalling the Rakshas, said with a complacent countenance. -"Like fire consuming insects, shall I to-day, wrought up with wroth, burn up one by one the bands of the flower of the monkey-forces. But the wood-ranging monkeys have not transgressed anywise unto the like of us. That species is the ornament of the gardens attached to our residences. The cause of the seige of the city is Righava along with Lakshmana. He being slain, all are slaif. Therefore shall I slay him in battle." As the Raksha-Kumbhakarna-was speaking thus, the Rakshasas sent up terrific shouts, as if making the very sea shake. As the intelligent Kumbhakarna sallied out speedily, dreadful were the omens that presented themselves on all sides. Clouds containing meteors and lightning looked dark like asses. And the earth shook with her oceans and woods. And fierce jackals began to cry, opening their flaming mouths. And birds began to wheel at the left. And as he marched a vulture alighted on his dart. And his left eye throbbed and his left arm shook. And a meteor dropped down with a tremendous crash. And the sun was bedimmed, and the air did not blow, enhancing pleasure. But without heeding these mighty omens that took place, capabale of making people's down stand on end, Kumbhakarna went out, urged on by the force of the Finisher. And leaping over the wall with his legs, that one resembling a mountain saw the wonderful array of the monkeys. resembling clouds. And seeing that foremost of Rakshasas resembling a hill, the monkeys began to disperse in all the ten cardinal directions like clouds driven by the wind. And seeing that terrific host of monkeys scattering in all directions, like clouds broken through (by winds), Kumbhakarna possessed of the splendour of clouds, from joy, emitted roars like clouds. Hearing those terrible shouts like unto the roating of clouds in the welkin, innumerable monkeys dropped to the earth even as sala trees that have their roots severed. And issuing forth for destroying the foe, the high-souled Kumbhakarna, equipped with a tremendous bludgeon, struck extreme terror into the monkey-ranks, like unto the Lord armed with the Fatal rod at the Universal wreck.

SECTION LXVI.

HAVING leapt over the wall, the exceedingly powerful and gigantic Kumbhakarna resembling a mountain-summit, speedily went out of the city. And then he sent up a mighty shout making the sea resound, and as if drowning the roar of the thunder and riving mountains. And seeing that herce-eyed one, incapable of being vanquished by Maghavan or Varuna or Yama, the monkeys began to fly away. And seeing them scamper, the king's son-Angada-said unto Nale and Nila and Gavaksha and the mighty Kumuda,-"Forgetting your lineage and prowess, whither do ye, exercised with fear, fly,-like inferior monkeys? Ye amiable ones, desist. Why should ye save yourselves? This Raksha doth not come to fight,-this is only a great phenomenon to affright, We shall by our vigor destroy this fearful phenomenon of the Rakshasas that hath presented itself. Therefore, let the monkeys desist. Cheered with much ado, the monkeys rallying, took up trees and advanced to the field of fight. And ceasing from flight, the wood-rangers waxing enraged, began to assail Kumbhakarna, like unto elephants in rut. And the exceedingly strong* Kumbhakarna, attacked with towering mountain-peaks and crags and trees with flowering top, did not shake. And countless crags descending on his person, were shattered, and trees with flowering tops, being broken, fell down to the earth. And incapable of containing himself (through rage), Kumbhakarna on his part fell to agitating the ranks of the powerful monkeys, even as a fire breaking out burneth down a forest. And many a prime monkey, crimsoned and drenched (with blood) lay down (on the ground); and many, resisted dropped to the earth, like trees bearing coppery flowers. And without looking before or after, the monkeys bounded and rushed. And on being attacked by the Rakshasa with ease some of those heroes drapped into the deep, and some entered the wilderness. And some van by the same way by which they had crossed the ocean; and some with pale faces darted into downs. And some of the hears ascended up trees, and some took shelter in mountains. And others dropped* down; and some ran on. And some fell down to the earth, and some lay insensiblet as if dead. Seeing the monkeys break down, Angada addressed them, saying,-"Stay we shall fight. Desist. ye monkeys. Going round this Earth, place find I none where ve may rest. Stop ye all. What is the need of preserving your lives. Ye poltroons, if ye fly away Jeaving your arms behind, your wives shall deride you; and that is more painful to honorable persons than death itself. Porn in long and noble lines, whither go ye, suffering from lear, like abject monkeys? When renouncing your prowess, ye fly away in fear, forsooth we are base. Where now is gone that talk of yours anent your nobility and the welfare (of your king) which you had held in society. He that liveth, despised (of all), hear the reproach of being a craven. Therefore do ye follow the way frequented by the worthy, and cast off fear-We will either lie down on the earth, being slain in consequence of our shortness of days, and thus attain the region of Brahma incapable of being attained by dastardag or achieve renown by slaying the foe in fight and slain in battle, we shall enjoy the wealth of the region of heroes. Like an insect coming to a glowing and flaming fire, Kumbhakarna. seeing Kakutstha, shall not away hence living. If we save our lives by flight, and if the many are brought down by one we shall lose our fame utterly." As Angada decked in golden angudas was saying this, the monkeys, flying away spake unto that here words not worthy of being spoken unto in hero,—"Great is the havor that the Rākshasa—Kumbhakarna—hath spread amongst us. 'Tis not the time to stay: life is dear unto us." Having said this the monkey-bands darted to the ten cardinal points; as they saw that dreadful and grim-eyed one approach. And as those flower of the forces were on the flight, those heroes were made to desist by Angada with words of comfort and hope pointing to the future. On being cheered by the intelligent son of Vali, all the monkey-bands stood expecting his commands.—

* Mahavaldh plu-evidently a misprint for man valah slam - 1....

En fighting, remarks the commentator.

Suptible esteeping; but here, I presume, it means senseless.—T.

SECTIONILX VIII.

AND having desisted on hearing the words of Angada, those huge-bodied ones, regaining calmness, became (again) intent on fight. And attaining energy at the exhortation (of Angada), and summoning up their prowess, they stayed in the field agreeably to the words of the powerful Angada. And inspired with spirits, the monkeys, determined to face their fate, rushed into the conflict, and, casting away all care for their lives, entered into a furious fight (with the foe). And speedily upraising trees and gigantic crags, the hugehodied monkeys charged Kumbhakarna. Thereat the mighty Kumbhakarna possessed of a prodigious person waxing wroth, taking up his mace let the same alight on the enemies. And attacked by Kumbhakarna, seven, eight hundreds and thousands of monkeys measure their lengths on the earth. And casting about his arms, he rusheth on, devouring sixteen, eight, ten, twenty or thirty. And he devoured (the monkeys) like Garura swallowing up serponts. And then cheered up with much ado, the monkeys meeting together, and taking trees and rocks in their hands, stood their ground in the van of battle. Then uprooting a crag, Dwivida-foremost of monkeys-resembling an extended mass of clouds rushed against (Kumbhakarna) having the aspect of a mountain-And uprooting it, the monkey hurled it at summit. Kumbhakarna. And without descending on him, the crag fell down amidst the army, and smashed steeds and elephants and cans and choice chargers. And then taking mountain top, Dwivida hurled it at other Rakshas. And smit with the impetus of the peak, Kumbhakarna had his chargers and his charioteers slain; and the terrific field overflowed with the blood of Rakshas. And Rākshasa car-warriors by means of arrows resembling the Destroyer himself, cut off the heads of the foremost monkeys who had been setting up roars. And the high-souled monkeys also, uprooting giants trees, destroyed cars and horses and elephants and camels and Rākshasas. - And remaining in the sky, Hanuman discharged at Kumbhakarna's head mountainpeaks and rocks and various trees. And all those mountaintops he cut off with his dart; and the mighty Kun,bhakarna also baffled the shower of trees.-Then grasping his sharpened spear, Kumbhakarna darted against that terrific array of monkeys. And as he charged them, Hanuman armed with a mountain-peak, stood before him. And waxing enraged (Hanuman) vehemently smote Kumbhakarna with a gigantic crag. And overpowered by that, Kumbhakarna experienced great torments, and his body was covered with fat and blood. And then as Guha had pierced Krauncha with his fierce dart. Kumbhakarna the mountain-like smote the Windgod's son in the chest with his dart resembling lightning or like a glowing mountain-summit. And having his mighty chest pierced in the mighty encounter, Hanuman, overwhelmed, and vomitting blood,-transported with wrath, set up roars resembling the roaring of the clouds at the universal disruption. And then, beholding him in torments, the Rakshas suddenly rejoiced, emitted shouts; and the monkeys aggrieved and overcome with fright, began to fly Kumbhakarna in battle, And then the powerful Nila, arranging his forces, discharged a mountain-peak at the intelligent Kumbhakarna. seeing it descend, he dealt it a blow; and struck by the blow. the mountain-top was shattered in pieces; and dropped to the earth glowing and shooting living flames. And then Rishabha and Sarabha and Nila and Gayāksha Gandhamadana-these five terrific monkeys-rushed against Kumbhakarna. And in the encounter those mighty monkeys began to sorely assail the huge-bodied Kumbhakarna with crags and trees and slaps and kicks and blows. But those blows seemed to him like touches* and did not at all pain him. Then he fastened the vehement Rishabha with his arms. And agonised on being fastened with Kumbhakarna's arms, that foremost of monkeys, the dreadful Rishabha, fell down to the earth, vomitting blood by his mouth. And thon the enemy of Indra smit, Sarabha with blow, and Nila, in the conflict with his thigh, struck a slap at Gavāksha. And suffering great plun in consequence of the blows (dealt by Kumbhakarna those monkeys), deprived of their senses and bathed in blood, dropped down to the earth like Kincukas that have been cut down. And on those highsouled and mighty monkeys falling down, thousands of monkeys rushed at Kumbhakarna. And ascending a mountainsummit, those foremost of monkeys,† possessed of the splendour of a mountain-peak, sprang upon him and tore him with their teeth. And those foremost of monkeys attacked the long-armed Kumbhakarna with their claws and teeth and blows and arms. And then with thousands of monkeys on him that extraordinary one that fearful Rakshasa -resembling a hill,-looked like a mountain with trees on it. And like Garura cating up serpents, that wondrous strong one, wrought up with rage, devoured those monkeys, seizing them with his arms. And cast by Kumbhakarna into his mouth resombling the nether regions the monkeys emerged from his nose and ears. And eating up the monkeys, that foremost of Rakshasas resembling a hill, growing wroth, and fired with rage," began to break the monkeys down,-And transported with passion, that Rakshasa, making the earth miry with flesh and blood, spread among the monkeyranks like unto the fire at the time of the Universal dissolution. And in that encounter, Kumbhakarna armed with his dark in his hand, resembled the thunder-handed Sakra, or the noose-handed Destroyer himself. And as a conflagration burneth up a withered forest in the summer, Kumbhakarna burnt that host of the monkeys. And thus beaten (by Kumbhakarna), those monkeys, with their ranks destroyed, the monkeys, I racked with anxiety, began to cry in unnatural tones. And having innumerable monkeys slain by Kumbhakarna, the monkeys, aggrieved and their hearts riven with sorrow, sought the shelter of Raghava. Seeing the monkeys broken in the terrific encounter, the son of the thunderbanded. 8 darted impetuously against Kumbhakarna. And taking up a mighty crag, he momentarily setting up roars, and thereby terroizing all the Rākshasas-followers of Kumbhakarna, he discharged the mountain-peak right against Kumbhakarna's crown .- And struck with that mountainpeak, Indra's enemy-Kumbhakarna-flamed up in fierce wrath. And the lood-throated Kumbhakarna, terrifying all the monkeys vehemently darted against the enraged son of Vali; and then that wondrous strong one hurled his dark

Like the feel, remarks Ramanuja, of wreaths, unquents, etc .- T.

† Planagenshandh—foremost of the monkeys occurs price—one is lait out. in the translation. T.

* Sandrudas—infuriated, and Kradha, angered—this piconasm is in the tent.—T.

† The text has pavala-fire.- T.

* Plevangandh and vanardh-both mean monkeys. One is left out .-- T

A The skinetic-kend of in Indra—bis son is Vali; and Vali's son is Angada, at Angada. And as the dart descended, that foremost of monkeys endowed with strength,* and skilled in battle, evaded the weapon from his fleetness. And then swiftly springing up, he slapped (his antagonist) in the chest. thereat that one resembling a hill, lost his senses. And recovering his senses, that exceedingly strong Rakshasa, dealt a blow at Angada; and the latter dropped down senseless. And on that powerful monkey falling down insensible, Kumbhakarna, taking his dart, rushed against Sugriva. And seeing the exceeding stout Kumbhakarna approach, the heroic king of monkeys-Sugriva-sprang up; and taking a mountain top that one possessed of great strength darted against the mighty Kumbhakarna. And seeing that monkey, Kumbhakarna, stretching his limbs, stood before the lord of mankeys. And seeing Kumbhakarna, with his body laved in the blood of monkeys; and eating up mighty monkeys, Sugriva addressed him, saying,--- "Thou hast felled heroes done deeds difficult of being performed, and hast devoured the warriors; and thou hast thus attained renown. But let go now the monkey-army. What shall thou do with the ignoble? Do thou, O Rakshasa bear the descent of this mountain." Hearing those words of the monkey-king instinct strength and fortitude, that terrible Rakshasa-Kumbhakarna-said,-"O monkey, thou stormest, because thou art the grandson of Prajapatit and the son of the king of bears; and because as such thou art endowed with fortitude and prowess." Hearing Kumbhakarna's speech, Sugriva whirling that mountain-peak, suddenly let it go; and with that rock resembling Vajra or the thunder-bolt smote Kumbhakarna in the chest. And on coming in contact with his wide breast, that mountain-peak was at once shattered in shivers. And thereat the monkeys grew dispirited and the Rakshasa's ranks shouted in joy. And struck with the mountain-summit. Kumbhakarna was fired with wrath; and roared, expending his face. And then, whirling his dart resembling lightning displayed, he burled it for compassing the destruction of the master of monkeys. Then swiftly bounding up, the Wind-god's son, resisting that whetted dart fastened with golden chains,-with his hands violently snapped it in twain. And placing the same on his thighs. (Hanuman) snapped that ponderous and terrible dart composed of black iron, and thereat the monkeys waxed delighted. And seeing the dart severed by Hanuman, the monkey-army, growing delighted, set up countless shouts and rushed in all directions. And the Rakshasa was seized with tear and turned away (from the field.) And the monkeys excessively delighted, set up loud shouts, and finding the dart broken, poured forth thanks to the Wind-god's son. Then the mighty-minded lord of Rakshasas seeing the dart thus severed, uprooted a peak from the Malaya and with it smote Sugriva. The king of monkeys struck with the mountainpeak fell senseless upon the field, and the demons finding him in this plight shouted out in great joy. Kumbhakarna coming to the wonderfully mighty master of monkeys, took him up and stole away from the field, as a violent gust of wind stealeth away a patch of cloud. Kumbhakarna, who resembled a mountain in loftiness of stature, while taking him away like a mass of cloud appeared like Sumeru overtopped with lofty peaks. Thus the lord of Rakshasas went on hearing thanks (from the Rakshasas) and shouts from the lords of the heavens, wondered at the capture of the foremost of monkeys. Thus taking him captive, that mighty one resembling Indra in puissance, thought his death would destroy the entire host of the opponents together with Raghava. . Then Hanuman, the shrewd son of Maruta, finding the whole host of monkeys scattered in all directions, as well as Sugriva captured by Kumbhakarna bethought himself-

* Palaván-strong occurs twice.

† Rikskarajas—the father of Sugriva, was produced from the yawning of Prajapati or Brahma,—T.

"What ought to be done by me now that our king has been captured? I will doubtless do as befits me now-let me assume theshape of a mountain and kill the Rakshasas. Let me kill the mighty Kumbhakarna, splitting his body with my strong fist and thus relieve the master of monkeys-thus let the whole host of monkeys become delighted. Or, even when captured by the whole host of gods or Asuras or serpents he is mighty enough to extricate himself. Meseems, the logd of monkeys struck with dart in battle by Kumbhakarna has not yet recovered his senses. Else in a moment he would do the needful for himself as well as the monkeys. Should the relief of the neighty-minded Sugriva come from me, I should be incurring his displeasure and it would certainly lead to the loss of his reputation for ever; then I must wait a moment and see his own might displayed by himself when relieved. Meanwhile let me cheer up the monkey-host." Thinking thus within himself, Hanuman, that son of Maruta, began to stay the mighty host of monkeys. In the meantime Kumbhakarna entered Lanka with Sugriva trembling, being honored with the showering of beautiful flowers from the sky, the buildings on the main roads and the town-gate. Then the mighty one (Sugriva) slowly recovered his senses with the shower of fried paddy and sweet scent and the sprinkling of water as well as with the coolness of the streets. Then that mighty-minded (Sugriva), caught in the arms of the powerful Rakshasa, having with difficulty come to his senses and surveying around him the strenge of the town bethought himself: -- "When thus within the grasp of the enemy how can I take revenge? Or let me do what will be acceptable and advantageous to our army." Then advancing all on a sudden, he with his nails and sharp teeth cut off the ears and nose of that lord of the enemies of the gods and split both his sides with the blow of his feet. Kumbhakarna losing his ears and nose and having his sides split with nails and teeth grew angry, and becoming all covered over with blood, threw Sugriva to the ground and pressed him. Thus pressed upon the ground with main force and severely struck by the enemies of gods, he flew to the skies like a ball-rolling, and once more joined Rama. The mighty Kumbhakarna having lost his nose and ears and drenched in blood, appeared like a mountain covered all over with streamlets. That huge-bodied Rakshasa, younger brother of Ravana, terrible in appearance, resembling a mass of deep black collyrium, and covered all over with blood, appeared like an evening cloud; and (once more) made up his mind to appear in battle. Sugriva having thus escaped, that dreadful enemy of the king of the celestials in wrath again rushed to battle; and finding himself destitute of arms took up a fearful mace. And then that mighty-minded one, the Raksha Kumbhakarna, issuing out of the city began to devour the terrific host of monkeys, as doth the mighty fire ent up people at the end of a Yuga. On entering the mighty host of monkeys, the hungry Kumbhakarna, hankering after flesh and blood, ate up the monkeys, and with them, devoured many a Rakshasa and Pisacha by, mistake. Thus, as Death devoureth creatures at the end of a Yuga, he destroyed the mighty monkeys. And he in wrath, taking up with one hand the monkeys along with the Raksbasas, hurriedly threw them into his mouth,-one, two three, or many at a time. And blood and fat flowed copiously down his body; and though struck by the monkeys with peaks of mountains, the mighty one devoured all those mankeys. And the mankeys as they were being devoured, saught the shelter of Rama. And Kumbhakarna wrought up with wrath, chased amain hundreds of monkeys, eating up seven, eight, twenty, or thirty. And fastening (the mankeys) with his arms, he, devouring them, tushed on. And resembling the Destroyer of prodigious dimensions at the end of a Yuga, that one furnished with extremely sharp teeth, having his body covered with fat, marrow and blood, and coiling entrails about his ears, began to discharge darts. And at this moment, that subduer of hostile hosts and captor of the capitals of foes-Sumitra's son-Lakshmana growing enraged, entered on an encounter with the enemy. And Lakshmana endued with prowess shot seven shafts at Kumbhakarna's body; and next, taking up other arrows also discharged them (at his antagonist). And thereat that Rakshasa, smarting under the wounds inflicted by that weapon,* cut it off (hv means of a weapon). Thereupon grew enraged the powerful Lakshmana-enhancer of Sumitra's joy And then as the wind overspreadeth evening clouds, he with his shifts covered hist shining and graceful mail entirely made of gold. And smit with arrows dight with gold, that one resembling a mass of dark-blue collyrium appeared beautiful like the ray furnished Sun surrounded by clouds. Then that dreadful Rakshasa voiced like masses of clouds, scornfully addressed the enhancer of Sumitra's felicity, saying,- By dauntlessly fighting with me, who have without ado brought down the Destroyer himself in battle, thou hast established thy heroism. Even by staying before me, who am equipped with arms in this encounter, and who in mighty conflict resemble Death himself, thou deservest to be honored. What shall I say of thy fighting? Not even that lord-Sakia biniself-mounted on his Airawata. and engirt by all the immortals,--had ever before stayed before me in the field But to day, O Sumitra's son, albeit a boy, thou hast gratified me with thy prowess. Now taking thy leave, I wish to go to Raghava. And as I have been well pleased in battle with thy vigour and strength and enthusiasm, I now wish to slay Rama alone, who being stain, all are stain. On Rama being here stain by me, the rest remaining in the encounter-them shall I undertake with my all-crushing vigour." When that Raksha had spoken thus,

* But Lakshmana had not discharged a single weapon only against Kumbhakarna.—T.

† Kumbhakarna's

(Lakshmana) Sumitra's son, present in that contest, answered him laughing in terrible words, saying, -- "That thy prowess is incapable of being borne by Sakra and other celestials,-is It is not otherwise, O hero. To-day I myself have witnessed thy prowess. Yonder is Daçaratha's son-Rāma-staying like a moveless mountain" Hearing this, that night-ranger -Kumbhakarna-possessed of immense might, disregarding Lakshmana and passing beyond Sumitia's son, rushed against Rama, making the carth tremble. Thereat Dagaratha's son, Rāma, employing a terrific weapon discharged sharpened shafts at Kumbhakarna's breast Thereat flames mixed with live embers shot out from the mouth of that enraged one suddenly rushing (against Rāma),—as Rāma pierced lum (with his arrows). And on being frightfully pierced by Rama's weapons that foremost of Rākshasas toaring writhfully darted against Rama, and pursued the monkeys in the conflict. And those shafts adorned with percock's plumes, alighting on · (Kumbhakarna's) chest, his mace, escaping his hand, dropped to the earth, and all his other) arms also were scattered on the ground. And when that exceedingly powerful one saw himself deprived of all his aims, he began to spread a luge havoe by means of his clenched fists and hands. And with his body entirely covered with acrows and bathed in blood, he began to bleed like a hill overflowing with fountains. And fired with wrath and maddened with blood,* he rusheth on, devouring monkeys and Rakshasas and bears. And that redoubtable one possessed of dreadful prowess, resembling the Reaper himself, whirling a mighty mountainpeak, hurled it siming at Rama. Thereat Bharata's elder brother, the righteous Rama, ere that prodigious peak had alighted, severed the same by means of seven straightspeeding shafts wrought with gold. Intent on finishing Kombhakarna, the virtuous Lakshinana, revolving many a means, (at last) spoke unto Rama,-"O king, this one knoweth not monkeys and Rakshasas, -maddened with the smell of blood, he eateth up his own as well as his enemies. Now let the foremost monkeys, putting forth their best, mount on him; and let the leaders of bands according to their rank, stand surrounding him. And then to-day this wicked-minded Rakshasa, oppressed with a mighty weight, will no longer be able to eat up any more monkeys." Hearing the words of the intelligent prince, those exceedingly powerful monkeys with alacrity ascended Kumbhakarna. And Kumbhakarna mounted by those monkeys, waxing exceedingly entaged, shook them vehemently, even as mad elephants shake the drivers thereof. And Raghava seeing them shaken, and concluding the Rakshasa to be wroth, turiously sprang forward, taking his bow. And with his eyes crimsoned with choler, the gentle Raghava, as if burning up the Rakshasa with his eyes, rushed forth vehemently, summoning up all his impetuosity, thereby cheering up the leaders of bands that had been sore tried by the might of Kumbhakarna. And equipped with an excellent quiver and arrows, Rama cheering up the monkeys spraog forward, taking a bow, resembling a serpent; terrific; having a stout string; and embellished in gold. Then surrounded by exceedingly invincible monkey-bands, that highly powerful hero, followed by Lakshmana, marched forth. And he saw the redoubtable and high-souled Kumbhakarna, with his body drenched in blood, and with blood-shot eyes; rushing against all, like unto an infuriated elephant of the cardinal points, pursuing the monkeys; wrought up with wrath; environed by Rakshasas; appearing like the Vindhya or the Mandara; decked with golden angadas; bleeding from his mouth; like clouds pouring showers; licking at the corners of his mouth laved with blood; smashing the monkey-ranks; and resembling Yama the Destroyer. And that best of persons, seeing that foremost of Rakshasas having the splendour of a living fire, stretched his bow to its full bent. And fired with wrath at the twang of his bow, that foremost of Rakshasas, inflamed with wrath,--not brooking that report, rushed against Raghava. Thereat, the gentle Rama, endowed with arms resembling the body of the sovereign of serpents, in that encounter addressed Kumbhakarna, like unto an elevated cloud and possessed of the splendour of a mountain, -as he darted forward, saying,-"Come, O king of Rakshas! Let no grief be thine! Here I stay, taking my bow in my hand, Know me for the destroyer of the race of the Rakshasasthou who in a moment shalt be deprived of thy senses." Kowing that this was Rāma, (Kumbhakarna) laughed in frightful accents; and then, wrought up with wrath, rushed against the monkeys in the encounter. And as if riving the breasts of all the monkeys (present), the exceedingly energetic Kumbhakarna, laughing frightfully and in a terrific manner, -resembling the rumbling of clouds, addressed Raghava, saying,--"Take me not for Viradha, or for Kavandha, or yet for Khara. I am not Vali or Māricha. I am Kumbhakarna, that am come. Behold my dreadful and mighty mace entirely made of iron. By help of this I had formerly brought down deities and Dânavas. It doth not behave thee to scorn me in that my cose hath been severed. I do not feel any the smallest torment in consequence of my ears and nose having been cut off. O tiger of the Ikshwaku line, O sinless one, do thou witness the prowess that is in my frame. And thereafter, when thou shalt have displayed thy prowess and power, shall I devour thee up." Hearing Kumbhakarna's words, Rama discharged (at him) shafts furnished with knobs. And smit with these having the impetus of the thunderbolt, the fee of the celestials did not feel any pain or smart. And those shafts which had severed the seven stately salas, and, to boot, had slain Vali-best of monkeys,-they resembling the thunder itself-could not impart any pain to Kumbhakarna's body. And drinking up in his body those arrows resembling a shower, the enemy of the great Indra whirling his mace possessed of herce vehemence, put out the arrowy discharge of Rama. Then that Raksha whirling his mage washed in blood, capable of striking terror into the mighty hosts of gods and Danavas, and possessed of fierce impetus,-made the monkey-army take to its heels. Rama, taking a mighty Vayavya weapon, used the same against the night-ranger; and cut off his arm with the mace. having his arm cut off, he set up tremendous roars. his arm with the mace, resembling a mountain-peak, cut off by Raghava's arrows, fell in the midst of the army of the monkey-king, and destroyed that army,* Thereat the monkeys remaining after those broken and slain, -dispirited and having their limbs wounded, -moving aside, looked on the dreadful encounter between the Raksha and the lord of And then Kumbhakarna, having his arm severed, resembling the foremost of mountains with its crest hewn away by a mighty sabre, tore up a tree with his (remaining) arm and in the conflict rushed against the monarch of men. Thereupon with a shaft plated in gold, set upon a weapon of Indra, Rama cut off his uplifted arm with a palm tree, looking like the body of a pannaga. And that arm of Kumbhakarna, being severed, dropped inert on the earth, like a hill, and crushed trees and rocks and crags and monkeys and Rakshasas. And Rama, seeing that one shorn of his arms suddenly spring up, roaring,-took up two whetted crescents, and in the. contest cut off the legs of the Rakshasa. And thereupon those legs (of his), making all sides and quarters and rocks' and caves and the mighty main and Lanka herself and the army of the monkeys and the Rakshasas,-resound,-dropped down (on the ground). And having his arms cut off and his legs also severed, (Kumbhakarna), opening wide his mouth resembling in sheen the mouth of a mare, roaring swiftly darted against Räghava,-even as Rähu pursueth' the Moon in the firmament. Then Rama stuffed his mouth full of sharpened shafts having their feathered parts furnished with gold. And having his mouth filled he could not articulate; but with extreme effort uttered indistinct accents and swooned away. Then Rama took an arrow of Indra,--whetted and knobbed, impetuous as the wind, resembling the effulgence of the Sun, and like unto the very banner of Brahma, or the Destroyer himself; and fatal to foes. And then Rama hurled it at the ranger of the night. And thereat that weapon burled by Rama's arm, resembling a smokeless flame, lighting up the ten cardinal points with its own glory,-saught him that was possessed of the dreadful energy of Sakra's thunder-bolt. And therewith he (Rama) cut off the head of the lord of Rakshas resembling a mountain-summit, furnished with prominent teeth,-from which the ear-rings had fallen off, -even as formerly Purandara had cut off the head of Vritra. And then Kumbhakarna's huge head deprived of the ear-rings appeared like the Moon seated in the midst (of the heavens) on the rising of the Sun in the morning. + And struck with Rāma's arrow, the head of the Raksha resembling a hill fell down to the earth; and (in its fall) crushed edifices on the highways and gateways; and elevated walls also it bore down to the ground. And then that Raksha of gigantic proportions and vast to the view plunged into the deep; and crushing huge and mighty fishes and serpents, saught the depths. And on that enemy of the Brahmanas and gods, endowed with immense strength,-having been slain in battle, the earth shook and the mountains also; and from excess of joy the celestials shouted aloud. And those deities and saints and Maharshis and Pannagas, and celestials and (other), beings and birds and Guhyakas, together with Yakshas and Gandharbas, -all these who had stationed themselves in the welkin, -were rejoiced at the prowess of Rama, And at his (Kumbhakarna's) great destruction, the intelligent adherents of the king of Nairitas,-aggrieved exceedingly, began to cry at the sight of that best of the Raghus, even as mad elephants cry at sight of a lion. And like unto the Sun emerged from the mouth of Rāhu, and destroying the darkness of the celestial fields,—shone Rāma in the midst of the monkey-army having slain Kumbhakarna "in battle. And countless monkeys experienced the very height of delight; and on (their) foe of terrific strength having been slain, they with countenances resembling awaked lotuses paid homage unto the king's son—Rāghava—the sharer of good fortune. And as the monarch of the immortals had rejoiced on slaying the mighty Asura—Vritra—Bharata's elder brother rejoiced on having in battle slain that smiter of celestial hosts, Kumbhakarna in mighty conflict, never (before) vanquished in renowned encounters.

* This, of course, is not to be taken literally .-- T.

† This sloke is wanting in many texts.-T.

SECTION LXVIII.

Seeing Kumbhakarna slain by the high-souled Räghava, the Rākshasas conveyed the tidings to the lord of the Rākshasas—Rāvana; (and addressed him, saying),—"O king, that one resembling the Destroyer himself, urged on by Death,—having scoured the monkey-army and eaten up monkeys,—and for a while displayed his prowess, hath met with his quietus at the hands of Rāma exerting his energy. And with half his body immersed in the dreadful deep, thy brother, Kumbhakarna, with his nose and ears cut off, and blood besmearing his body,—with his head and limbs hewn away, and his body uncovered,—mountain-like blocketh up the gate of Lankā with his person,—and resembleth a tree that hath been consumed by a forest-fire." Hearing the mighty Kumbhakarna slain in battle, Rāvana burning in grief, swooned away and dropped to the earth. And hearing their uncle slain, Triciras* and Atikaya-destroyers of gods and men,-began to weep, oppressed with sorrow. And Mahodarat and Mahaparcwat hearing of their uncle slain by Rama of untiring deeds, were overcome with grief. Then regaining his senses with extreme exertion, that foremost of Rakshasas, distressed in consequence of the destruction of Kumbhakarna, mourned with his senses overwhelmed. saying,-"O hero! O humbler of the pride of the foe! mighty Kumbhakarna! Leaving mc, thou through Destiny, hast gone to the abode of Yama. O exceedingly powerful one, leaving me (lone) whither dost thou wond, without extracting my dart as well as that of thy friends? Now really I am not, inasmuch as my right arm hath dropped. Backed by this one, I would not fear celestials and Asuras. How to-day forsooth hath such a hero-crusher of the hauteur of gods and Danavas-resembling the Fire arisen at the hour of universal wreck,-been slain in fight by Raghava? He who could not be harmed by the concussion of the thunderbolt itself-how can be, smitten with Rama's arrows, sleep soundly on the earth? These gods stationed in the sky along with the saints, -beholding thee slain in battle, are shouting in glee. Surely to-day the monkeys overjoyed,finding occasion, will scale all the gateways and fortifications of Lanka. I have nothing to do with empire. And what shall I do with Sita? And deprived of Kumbhakarna, I do not even wish to live. If I do not slay in encounter that slayer of my brother-Raghava,-certainly death is even that which is good for me,-otherwise, this life is useless. This very day will I repair to that place where my younger brother is. Forsaking my brother, I forsooth dare not live for a moment; for the gods shall laugh on seeing me, who had formerly wronged them. But, how, O Kumbhakarna, thou having been slain, shall I conquer Indra? Now the beneficial words of Bibbishana have been verified. And as through blindness I did not accept the advice of that high-souled ore, Kumbhakarna and of Prahasta, this disaster arisen, shameth me sore. And as I had disgraced the virtuous and graceful Bibbishana, this peril producing grief, hath been the consequence of my conduct." Having thus piteously and long lamented Kumbhakarna, the Ten-necked one, with his inmost soul overwhelmed with sorrow, and sore distressed in consequence of grief,—fell down, knowing his brother—the enemy of Indra—slain in battle.

* Three-headed.-T.

+ Huge-bellied .- T.

‡ Mighty-flanked.—T.

SECTION LXIX

Hearing the lamentations of the wicked-minded Ravana, overwhelmed with grief, Triciras addressed him, saying,—"O Sire, this second uncle unto us possessed of mighty prowess hath" forsooth been slain in fight. But, O sing, heroes never indulge in grief as thou doest. O lord, thou certainly alone art competent to conquer the triple world. Wherefore then dost thou vent such sorrow like an ignoble one? Thou hast thy dart conferred on thee by Brahmä; and thy mail and thy weapon—the bow—and thy car yoked with a thousand asses, sending forth clatter resembling the rumbling of clouds. The deities and the Danavas have by means of thy arms been terrified over and over again. And furnished with all arms, thou ought to chastise Raghava. But stay at thy pleasure, O mighty sovereign, I will go out to battle; and even as Garura captureth serpents, will t' capture thine enemies. And as Samvara was vanquished by the lord of the immortals, or Naraka by Vishnu, will I bringing down Rama in battle make him sleep (in the field)." Hearing Triciras' words, Ravana-lord of Rakshasas-urged on by Fate, considered himself as having regained his life. And hearing the speech of Trigiras, Devantaka, and Narantaka, and the energetic Atikaya also, were wrought up with martial enthusiasm. And then those foremost of Nairitas-the heroic sons of Ravana-endowed with the prowess of Sakra himself-roared out, 'I will go,' 'I will go,' And all could range the sky, and all were skilled in illusion. and all were crushers of the pride of the immortals; and all were irrisistible in encounter. And all of them were endowed with superior strength, and all had achieved wide celebrity. They had never been heard of as having been beaten in fight even by the gods along with the Gandbarvas, or the mighty serpents accompanied by the Kinnaras. And all were skilled in weapons and heroic; and all were versed in warfare. And all were possessed of the higher knowledge; and all had obtained boons. And then the king surrounded by those sons of his,appearing like celestials, -capable of injuring the force and fortune of the foe,-looked splendid like Maghavan environed by the immortals humblers of the hauteur of mighty Danavas. And embracing his sons and adorning them in ornaments.he sent them to the field with his best benedictions. And Ravana sent the brothers-Yudhyonmatta and Matta-for protecting the princes in the field. And then, saluting the high-souled Ravana-destroyer of creatures,-and going round him, those hage-bodied ones marched forth. And furnished with every description of medicinal herbs and perfumes, these six Nairitas-foremost of their kindendowed with great strength,-burning for battle, marched forth,-Triciras and Atikaya, and Devantaka and Narantaka, and Mahodara and Mahaparçwa went out.

* Evamova—forsooth, as I reader it. The commentator, however, says it means such as thou hast described him.—T.

urged on by Fate. Then Mahodara mounted the elephant-Sudarcana-sprung in the race of Airavata, and resembling dark-blue clouds. And accoutred in every weapon, and decked with quivers, he looked splendid on his elephant like the Sun ascending the crest of the Setting-hill. And Ravana's son-Triciras-ascended a car yoked with excellent steeds, and furnished with every variety of arms. having ascended the car, Triciras bow in hand appeared beautiful like a mass of burning clouds having lightning and meteors, and crowned with Indra's bow.* And dight with three diadems, Trigiras looked splendid in that superb car, like the monarch of mountains Himavan-with the three golden hills. And then that foremost of all bowmen-the powerful Atikaya-son unto the lord of Rakshasas-ascended the best of cars, having excellent wheels and akshas, and yoked with excellent steeds,-and furnished with bottoms and holes; flaming with quivers and bows; and bristling with praças and swords and blugdeons. And adorned with a crown plated with wrought gold and (other) ornaments, he looked like the Meru swimming in its own splendour. And that powerful son of the king surrounded by the Nairitas looked lovely on that car like the thunder-handed (Deity) engirt by the immortals. And Narantaka mounted a white steed resembling Uchchaiçrava, caparisoned in gold, having a large frame and endowed with the velocity of the Wind. And taking a praça, Narantaka appeared like the energetic Guha mounted on the peacock, grasping his dart. And taking a bludgeon decked in golden ornaments, Devantaka resembled Vishnu at the time of the churning of the ocean, holding the Darbhya, and staying burthening (the earth). And the powerful Mahaparçwa endowed with terrific energy, taking his mace, appeared like Kuvera holding in his hand a mace in the encounter. And like immortals issuing out of Amaravati, they marched out with elephants and steeds and cars sending out clatter resembling the rumbling of clouds. And them followed high-souled Rakshasas equipped with mighty-arms. And those sun-bright high-souled princes decked with diadems appeared splendid like burning planets in the firmament. And the various gorgeous attires which they had worn resembled rows of cranes in the sky, looking like autumnal clouds. Resolved on dying or conquering the foe in fight, those heroes sallied out seeking encounter. And those high-souled ones, incapable of being repressed in fight, roared and shouted and discharged shafts and held them. And the earth shook as they sent up leonine roars and struck at their arms with their hands; and the sky seemed riven with the leonine roars of the Rakshas. And issuing out cheerfully, those foremost of Rakshasas endowed with great strength beheld that monkey-army staying with upraised rocks and stones. And the high souled monkeys also saw that mighty host of Rakshasas thronging with elephants. horses and cars, and ringing with hundreds of bell-lets; resembling dark-blue clouds; upraising mighty arms; and environed on all sides by Nairitas resembling flaming fire. And seeing that force advance, the monkeys, finding opportunity, upraising giant crags, momentarily set up shouts. And thereat, the Räkshasas, incapable of bearing those shouts, shouted in reply unto the monkeys. And again the monkeys shouted unto the Rakshas, who were unable to put up with that cry. And hearing that loud shout of the monkey-leaders, the mighty Rakshas incapable of bearing that noise expressive of exhibaration,-shouted still more dreadfully. And then diving into that dreadful Rakshasa army, the monkey-leaders began to range it with uplifted rocks,-like unto mountains. And equipped with trees and stones, the monkeys enraged, ranged the Raksha army, now rising into the sky, and now coming down to the earth. And some among the powerful monkeys went about taking broad-shouldered trees. And the encounter that took place between the thronging Rakshas and monkeys was something terrific. And (the monkeys) began to pour a wonderful shower of trees and rocks and cliffs. And the monkeys of dread prowess were resisted with vollies of shafts. And in the contest the monkeys and Rākshasas emitted leonine roars. And monkeys crushed Yātudhānas with rocks, and, wrought with rage, (they) in the encounter slew (Rakshasas) covered with armour and ornaments; and some slew beroes mounted on cars and elephants and steeds. And the mankeys on a sudden slew heroic Yatudianas. And smit with mountain peaks on their persons, and with their eyes falling off, the foremost of Rākshasas moved, dropped down, or roared in the scene of conflict. And the Rakshasas ion their part) pierced the foremost of monkeys with sharpened and keen darts and clubs and scimitars; and slew them with darts and pracas. And, eager for bringing down each other, the monkeys and the Rakshasas with their persons washed with the blood of their antagonists felled each other. And in a moment the earth was covered with crags and swords discharged by monkeys and Rakshasas, -and was drenched in gore. And the field was blocked up with scattered mountain-like Rakslas influenced by martial ardour,-mangled by their enemies. monkeys thrown down and felled by means of broken crags and monkeys* and arms and legs,-waged a wonderful war. And those foremost of Nairitas slew monkeys with (the dead bodies of monkeys); and the monkeys smote Rakshasas with (the dead bodies of) Rakshasas; and the Rakshasas slew (the monkeys), hurling rocks and crags. And snatching away their own arms by main force, the monkeys finished Rakshas; and they slaughtered them with mountain-peaks. and also wounded each other. And the monkeys and

* The rain-bow is called sometimes Indra's bow and at others Rdma's bow.-T.

† The mountain Mandara which served as the churning-stick .- T.

* i.s. the carcasses thereof.

Rakshasas emitted leonine roars in the encounter. And the Rakshasas, shain by the monkeys, having their mail and defence for the body rent, bled like unto trees exuding sap. And in that encounter, some among the monkeys destroyed cars with cars, elephants with elephants, and steeds with steeds. And the Rakshasas rived the trees and rocks of the foremost monkeys by means of Kshurapras and crescents and sharpened Bhallas and arrows. And in that encounter, the earth became impassable, having been scattered with crags baffled and severed trees and (warriors) slain by monkeys and Rakshas. And those monkeys, equipped ? with various weapons, and with their vigor unworn, entering upon the conflict casting off fear, - cheerfully putting forth efforts springing from pride of spirit, warred on with the Rakshasas. And in that fearful conflict, which was being waged, on the monkeys having been exhibitated and the Rakshasas having been brought down, the Maharshis and the deities sent up shouts. Then mounted on a charger endued with the celerity of the Wind, and grasping a whetted dart, Narantaka entered into that fierce army of monkeys, like a fish diving into the deep. And that hero by means of an effulgent bearded dart pierced seven hundred monkeys; and at one time the high-souled enemy of India slew the army of And the Vidyadbaras and the foremost of monkeys. Maharshis saw that high-souled one mounted on horseback, ranging the monkey-ranks. And his course was discovered, miry with flesh and blood and blocked up with mountain-like monkeys fallen. And when the monkeys set their hearts on displaying their prowess, Narantaka, hassling them, pierced them with sha'ts. And he consumed the monkey-army, like fire burning a forest. And when the wood rangers uprooted trees and crags, they slain by bearded darts dropped down like mountains riven by the thunder. And raising a glowing praça, the powerful Narantaka began to range about in the rear* of the forces; dashing everywhere (against the foe) in fight, like the wind in the rainy season. And the heroes could not appear prominently, or keep their posts. And how could they then move freely? And that one endued with prowess pierced everyone, whether springing, or staying, or moving. And broken through by a single praça, resembling the Reaper, and furnished with solar effulgence, the monkey-ranks began to roll on the earth. And the monkeys were ill fitted to bear the impetus of that praça having the touch of thunder itself; and they raised a loud cry. And the appearances of those monkey-heroes falling were like mountains toppling, having their summits riven with the thunder-bolt. Those high-souled and powerful monkeys that formerly had been brought down by Kumbhakarna,-having recovered, were present with Sugriva in this encounter. And Sugriva, looking around, saw that monkey army flying in all directions, agitated with the fear of Narantaka. And after seeing the army in flight, he saw Nürantaka himself, advancing, wielding a praça, and mounted on a steed. And as soon as he saw (that hero), the exceedingly energetic lord of monkeys-Sugriva-addressed the heroic prince Angada, endowed with strength equal to that of Indra. saying,-"Go against this heroic Rakshasas that is mounted on a steed; and speedily deprive of life that one who is devouring up the ranks of his foes." Hearing his master's speech. Angada descended from that host resembling clouds, like the powerful Sun himself. And resembling a mass of crags, Angada-foremost of monkeys-adorned with Angadas. appeared beautiful like a mountain with metals on it. And weaponless himself, and furnished only with nails and teeth, Vali's son attacking Narantaka, said, - "Stay! What shalt thou do with these inferior monkeys? This praça, having the feel of the thunder-bolt, do thou hurl at my heart itself."

* Sangedendate, I presume, means rear of the forces, although literally it

means, at the conclusion of the conflict,—because this interpretation would not be proper, the battle being now at its hottest.—T.

Hearing Angada's words, Narantaka was fired with wrath. And knawing his upper lip with his teeth and sighing like a serpent, Narantaka, wrought with wrath, approached Vali's son. And then whirling his praça, he suddenly discharged that flaming (weapon) against Angada. And then it was snapped on the breast of Vali's son, resembling the thunderholt, and dropped to the earth. And seeing the praça broken in pieces, like a powerful snake severed by Suparna, Vali's son, raising his hand, dealt a slap at the head of his (Narantaka's) steed. Thereat, with his legs sinking down and his eye-balls coming off and his tongue hanging down, and wearing the look of a mountain, -on being smit with that slap, Narantaka's steed fell down to the ground, with its head lying at random. And Narantaka seeing his charger slain and fallen, was seized with a furious wrath, and raising his clenched fist, that one endowed with exceeding great energy in that conflict hit Väli's son on the head. Thereat Angada having his head wounded by that blow, warm blood gushed out plentifully. And momentarily burning and momentarily swooning, he, regaining his senses, was amazed. Then Vali's son, the high-souled Angada clenching his list into a blow resembling Death itself in energy, and like unto a mountain-peak, let it descend on the chest of Narantaka. Thereat, with his breast riven and broken down, vomitting flames and having his body bathed in blood, Narantaka dropped down to the earth, like a hill shattered by the impetus of the thunder-bolt. And on Narantaka of exceeding prowess having been slain by Vali's son in battle, there arose a tremendous uproar in the firmament from the woodrangers and the foremost of celestials. And Angada having performed that difficult deed of prowess, capable of delighting the mind of Rama, was seized with amazement; * and that one of terrific feats in fight was again inspired with delight in the encounter.

* Probably, at his own prowess,-T.

And seeing Narantaka slain, the foremost of Nairitas -including the thre-headed Devantaka and Pulastva's descandant, Mahodara,-began to cry (in chorus). And then the vehement Mahodara, mounted (on horseback), rushed against Vali's son endued with energy. And aggrieved in consequence of the calamity that had befallen his brother, the strong Devantaka grasping a dreadful bludgeon, darted against Angada. And ascending a car resembling the Sun yoked with superb steeds, the heroic Tricins rushed against Vali's son. Then charged by those three powerful Rakshasas -crushers of the hauteur of immortals. Angada uprooted a tree furnished with gigantic branches. And as Sakra hurleth the mighty flaming thunderbolt, that hero-Angada -at once hurled against Devantaka that mighty tree having giant branches. And Triciras cut off that tree in pieces by means of shafts resembling serpents. And seeing the tree severed, Angada darted up; and* then that foremost of monkeys showered crags and trees. And all those Triciras wrought with wrath cut off by means of whetted arrows; and Mahodara snapped those trees with the end of his bludgeon. And then Triciras rushed against that hero-Vali's son-with shafts; and Mahodara chased himst mounted ou an elephant; and struck Angada in thechest with tomaros resembling the thunder-bolt. And Devantaka, enraged advancing, hit Angada with his bludgeon, and then, endowed with velocity, he swiftly turned away. And attacked simultaneonly by those three powerful Nairitas, the exceedingly energetic son of Vali possessed of prowess, did not feel any pain. And that impetuous one incapable of being conquered, summoning his utmost vehemence, rushing on, pealt a slap at hist mighty elephant. And thereat the elephant fell down in his very sight and expired. And then pulling out his tusks, the highly powerful son of Vali, darting against Devantaka, dealt him a blow therewith in that encounter. And thereupon that strong one overwhelmed like a tree buffetted by the wind, began to discharge blood profusely, looking like the bue of lac. And then cheering him, the exceedingly energetic and powerful Narantaka, violently whirling his bludgeon with might and main, hit Angada with it. And albeit struck with the bludgeon, the son of the lord of monkeys, going down on his knees, again darted up. And as he sprang up, Triciras hit at the temples of the son of the king of monkeys with three straight-speeding terrific shafts. And seeing Angada assailed by the three redoubtable Rākshasas, Hanumān and Nila proceeded (to his rescue). Then Nila hurled a mountain-top at Trigiras; and thereat that son of Ravana severed it with sharpened arrows. And that mountain-top on being tiven, dropped down, aflame and shooting out sparks of fire. And seeing him* yawning in joy, the stalwart Devantaka in that encounter pursued the Wind-god's son with his bludgeon. And as he rushed on, that foremost of monkeys-Hanuman-dealt on the crown of his head, a blow resembling the thunder-bolt itself. And the mighty and heroic son of the Wind-god hit (at his autagonist); and that redoubted monkey also with his roars made the Raksbasas tremble (in fear). And thereat with his head crushed and cleft, and his teeth and eyes falling out, and his tongue hanging down, that son unto the sovereign of the Rakshasas suddenly dropped to the earth, deprived of life. On that fierce and mighty Rakshasa warrior-that foe of the immortals-having fallen in fight, the Threeheaded one, waxing wondrous enraged began to shower terrific sharpened shafts on Nila's chest. And Mahodara, getting enraged, again swiftly mounted an elephant like the ray-furnished (Sun) mounting Mandara. Then even as a mass of roaring clouds poureth down showers enwheeled with breast. Thereat showered with those shafts, that leader of monkeys Nila with his person pierced, had his body riven and was stupified by that exceedingly powerful one. Then that (monkey) possessed of tremendous vehemence, having regained his senses, uprooting a crag with a whole tract of trees, struck it at Mahodara's head. And struck by that mighty enemy, Mahodara, broken down by the impetus of that rock, deprived of his senses, dropped down dead on the ground, like a cliff smit with the thunder-bolt.

* The text has Angada, avoided for euphony.

† The text has Vali's son.

<sup>1</sup> Mahodara's.

* Triçiras.

Seeing his uncle slain, Triciras took up his bow; and inflamed with fury pierced Hanuman with whetted arrows. And thereat the Wind-god's son, enraged, hurled a mountainpeak (at his adversary). And Triciras by means of keen arrows severed the same in shivers. And seeing the mountain-peak baffled, the monkey in the encounter began to shower trees on Ravana's son. And Triciras endowed with prowess by means of sharpened shafts cut off that descending arrowy shower in the sky and shouted (in delight). Then - Hanuman flying into a fury, bounding to the welkin, with his nails ript the steed of Triciras, even as a lion cleaveth a powerful elephant. Then taking a dart even as the Destroyer employeth the Fatal Night, Ravana's son-Tricirasdischarged it at the offspring of the Wind-god. Thereat catching the dart of resistless course as it descended from the sky, the powerful monkey snapped it and then shouted, And seeing that dreadful dark broken by Hanuman, the monkeys, transported with delight, sent up shouts, even as clouds rumble. Then upraising his sword, that foremost of Rakshasas-Triciras -brought it down on the breast of the monkey-chief. Overpowered with the sword-blow, Hanuman -son unto the Wind-god,-endowed with energy, dealt the Three-headed one a slap on the head. And smitten with that . blap, the highly powerful Triciras, with his hands and attire dropping off, fell down to the earth, deprived of consciousness.

Then that mighty monkey resembling a hill broke his sword as he fell, and roared, terrifying all the Rakshasas. But not brooking that uproar, that night-ranger sprang up and springing up, he dealt a blow at Hanuman. And at that blow, the redoubtable monkey was wrought up with wrath; and inflamed with rage, he smote that foremost of Rakshasas about his diadem. And then with a sharp sword the Windgod's son cut off his heads decked with diadems and furnished with ear-rings; even as Sakra had severed the heads of Tashtri's son * Thereat even as burning stars, loosened, drop down from the course of Indra, the large organs of sense, and eyes flaming like glowing fire, and heads of that foe of Indra, dropped down to the ground. On Tricirasenemy of the immortals-baying been slain by Hanuman endowed with the prowess itself of Sakra, the monkeys shouted, the earth shook, and the Rakshas began to fly on all sides And seeing Triciras and Yudhyonmatta slain and seeing also the irrepressible Devantaka and Narantaka slain (in the encounter), that highly irascible and powerful Rakshasa-Matta-was transported with passion, and then took up a flaming mace entirely wrought with iron inlaid with gold; frothy with flesh and goro; mighty to behold; gratified with the blood of foes; with its end flaming in splendour; decked with red wreaths; and capable of striking terror into Airavata and Mahapadma and Sarvabhauma.† And flaming up like the Fire arisen at the end of a Yuga, that foremost of Rakshasas-Matta-wrought with fury,-rushed against the monkeys. Then the mighty and powerful monkey -Rishabha-springing up before Ravana's son, before the hosts of Matta. And seeing that mountain-like monkey staying before (him), Matta, enraged, dealt him a blow on the breast. And smit with the mace, that foremost of monkeys, with his breast riven and trembling, bugan to bleed copiously. And regaining his senses after a long while, Rishabha-lord of monkeys-inflamed with wrath, pouting out his upper hp, gazed at Mahaparcwa.* And then impetuously approaching the Rakshasa, that foremost of heroic monkeys resembling a hill, endowed with vehemence, clenching his fist, suddenly smote him with a blow on his breast. Thereat like a tree whose roots have been severed. he suddenly dropped on the ground, covered with blood. And thereupon, (Rishabha) swiftly snatched his dreadful mace resembling the rod of Yama himself; and shouted. Only for a moment did het remain like one dead. Recovering his senses, the enemy of the immortals looking like evening clouds in hue, suddenly springing up, attacked the son of the king of waters. I And thereat, he dropped down to the earth, senseless. In a moment regaining his consciousness, he again bounded up,-and whirling the mace resembling a peak of the foremost of mountains, in that encounter dealt (Matta) a blow therewith. And descending on the body of that dreadful one-the enemy of deities, sacrifices and Vipras-that terrific mace rived his breast; and he began to bleed profusely, even as the lord of mountains discharges minerals and water. And taking the terrific mace of the (Matta) and swinging it again and again, high-souled (Rishabha) rushed (against the Rakshasas). And that high-snuled one began to slaughter Matta's forces in the field. And broken down by his own mace, Matta dropped down like a hill, with his teeth and eyes shrivelled up; and he dropped to the earth deprived of strength and life, with his eyes paling. And on that Rakshasa falling, the Rakshasa forcea began to fly. And on that brother of Ravana havings been slain, that host of Nairitas appearing like the ocean inf Matta.

Viçwarupa,

† Elephants of the cardinal points,-T

. Otherwise called Matte.-T.

<sup>1</sup> Varuna.

grandeur, leaving its arms behind,—solely for life rushed away, like unto the deep riven (by the winds).

SECTION LXXI.

SEEING in sore straits his own mighty forces capable of making people's down stand on end,-and seeing his brothers resembling Sakra in prowess, routed; and seeing also his uncles brought down in battle, as well as his brothers-Yudhvonmatta and Matta-foremost of Rakshasas, that crusher of the pride of detties and Danavas-the exceedingly energetic Atıkaya-resembling a hill, who had obtained from Brahma a boon in battle, was fired with wrath. Ascending a car effulgent like a thousand suns mingling their rays into a burst of brilliance, that enemy of Sakra, charged the monkeys. And stretching his bow, (Atikaya) decked with a diadem and wearing polished ear rings, proclaimed his name (among the monkey-ranks) and shouted in lofty tones. And with his leonine roars and the proclamation of his name, and the tremendous twang of his bow-string, he struck terror into the monkeys. Seeing the magnitude of his person, the monkeys thinking that it was Kumbhakarna who had come, -and affrighted thereat, sought the shelter of each other. And seeing his form like unto that of Vishnu when he displayed his threefold energy, the monkey-warriors seized with fear, began to scour on all sides. And on Atikaya appearing before them, the monkeys, stupified in that conflict, at the shelter of Lakshmana's elder brother. And from a distance Kakutstha saw the mountain like Atikava monated on the car and equipped with his bow, like unto roar ing clouds (seen) on the occasion of the universal disruption.

And seeing that huge-hodied one, Raghava struck with surprise, comforting the monkeys, addressed Bibbishana. mying, -"Who is this one resembling a mountain, furnished with a bow and having leonine eyes, that is stationed on a large car yoked with a thousand steeds, -he that with effulgent sharpened darts and keen praças and tomaras, shineth like Maheçwara environed by spectres-he that displaying his fatal tongue, appeareth splendid surrounded with darts in his car; like a mass of clouds graced with lightning. And his bows adorned and backed with gold all over, beautify his car even as Indra's bow beautifyeth the firmament. And who is this foremost of Rakshasas and best of bowmen that embellishing the field of battle, approacheth on a car glorious as the sun; who, displaying the ten cardinal points with his shafts resembling the rays of the sun, appeareth handsome with his peak of a banner bearing the figure of Rahu-whose bow bent in three places, emitting roars resembling the rumbling of clouds, and plaged with gold, looketh like the bow itself of Satakratu? And his mighty car furnished with a banner and ensign and bottom, and having clatter resembling the roaring of clouds, hath four horsemen (attached to it). And there are on the car eight and thirty quivers and dreadful bows and yellow-golden bow-strings. And there are (in that car) two effulgent swords at his side, illumining it,-their hafts measuring four hands and their blades ten each. And that calm (warrior) wears red garlands about his neck, and resembles a mighty mountain. And a very Destroyer, he hath a mighty mouth, appearing like that of the Destroyer himself; and he looketh like the sun stationed on clouds. And with his arms adorned with golden angadas, he appeareth splendid like that best of mountains the Himavan with its towering summits. And which his of ear-rings, his charming yet terrific countenance shineth like the full Moon entering into Punarvaçu.* O mighty-armed one, tell me all about this foremost of Rakshasas, seeing whom the monkeys, overwhelmed with fear, fly away in all directions." Asked by the king's son-Rama of immeasurable prowess-tife exceedingly energetic Bibbishana spoke unto Rama, informing him,--"The highly powerful king, Vaicravana's younger brother of dreadful deeds, the high-souled Ravana-is the sovereign of the Rakshasas. This one is his mighty son, like unto Ravana himself in strength. He serveth the aged, is of wide celebrity and is the prime of those versed in all branches of knowledge. And he is competent to ride horses and elephants, to wield the sword or draw the bow,-or in sowing dissensions, or giving away, or in counsel,—he reposing in whose arm Lanka hath cast off fear, Know him to be Atikaya, son unto Dhanyamali. Having adored the pure-souled Brahma with austerities, he hath obtained weapons, and hath defeated his foes (in fight)." 'Thou shalt be incapable of being slain by celestials and Asuras'-was the boon conferredgen him by the Self-sprung; and he also gave him this celestial mail and this car resembling the effulgent Sun himself. He hath vanquished (in battle) hundreds of deities and Danavas; and he hath (always) protected the Rakshas, and destroyed Yakshas. And this intelligent one resisted the thunder-bolt itself of Indra: and in encounter baffled the very noose of the king of waters. This one is Atikava-foremost of Rakshasas; and that son of Ravana is the humbler of the hauteur of deities. and Danavas. Therefore, O best of persons, do thou endeavour thy best. This one with his shafts slaughtereth the monkey-hosts before (us)." And then the powerful Atikaya entering that monkey-force, stretched his bow and shouted again and again. And the high-souled principal more than (hero) possessed of a dreadful person, that best of car-warriors-stationed on his car, rushed forward. And Kumuda and Devivida and Mainda and Nila sad Sarabha deshed on at one time with trees and monotain.

* The seventh lunar asterism .- T.

peaks. Thereupon that foremost of those skilled in weapons. the exceedingly energetic Atikaya, severed those trees and racks by means of shafts dight with gold. And in that encounter that powerful one possessed of a gigantic person, skilled in arms, pierced all those monkeys staying before him with arrows entirely made of iron. And agonised, having their persons pierced in that mighty conflict by that arrowy shower, they were incapable of resisting the same. And the Rakshasa terrified that host of monkey-heroes, even as an enraged lion priding in his youth terrifyeth a society of deer. And in the midst of those bands of monkeys, that lord of Rakshasas did not slay anyone without battle. And then springing up before Rama, that one furnished with his bow and quiver, addressed him in haughty words, saying,-"Stationed in this car holding the bow and arrows in my hands, I will not fight any that is ignoble. Him that hath strength, and that also understandeth this business,-let him today speedily give me battle." Hearing Ifis speech, that slayer of foes-Sumitra's son-was fired with wrath. And not bearing him, he sprang forward disregarding his antagonist's words, and took up his bow. And flying unto fury, Samitra's son, darting up, took out arrows from his quiver. and stretched his mighty bow in front of Atikaya. And filling the entire earth and the sky and the ocean and all the cardinal quarters,-the terrific twang of Lakshmana's bow struck terror into the (hearts of the) night-rangers. And hearing the dreadful twang of the bow of Suffitra's son, the exceedingly energetic and powerful son of the lord of Rakshasas was struck with surprise. Then Atikaya, enraged. seeing Lakshmana advance, taking sharpened shafts, spoke unto him,-"Thou art a boy, O Sumitra's son; and as such, knowest not how to display prowess. Go thou. Why wishest thou to fight with me resembling Death itself. Not Himklaya itself or the firmament or the earth is capable of bearing the impetuosity of shafts shot by my arms. Those wishest to rouse a fire slumbering sweetly. Leaving alone the bow, do thou return. Do not lose thy life by coming in contact with me. Or it may be that thou art proud; and, therefore, hast no mind to return. Stay then. Renouncing thy life, thou shalt go to Yama's mansion. Behold my whetted arrows-crushers of the insolence of foes-resembling the weapon itself of the Lord,*-adorned with burnished gold. And even as a lion enraged sheddeth the blood of a mighty elephant, this arrow of mine resembling a serpent shall shed thy blood." Having delivered himself thus, he fired with wrath set his shaft on his bow. Hearing in that encounter Atikava's wrathful speech fraught with hauteur, the highly powerful and intelligent son of the king possessed of exceeding grace, was transported with passion; and he said,-"Thou canst not attain pre-eminence solely by virtue of thy speech. One cannot be a worthy person simply by say. O wickedminded one, do thou display thy strength on me equipped with the bow and holding arrows in my hands. To-day shall my shafts decked in gold, drink thy blood flowing from thy person and issuing out of wounds inflicted by my arrows resembling darts.-'This one is a boy', thinking this, thou ought not to slight me. Whether I am a boy or an old man' -death shalt thou know in the conflict. It was as a boy that Vishnu had overpowered the triune world with his prowess." Hearing Lakshmana's words, fraught with reason and high sense, Vidyadharas and ghosts, deities, Daityas and Maharshis, and the high-souled Guhyakas then beheld that marvel.1

Then Atikaya, enraged, setting his arrow on his bow, shot it at Lakshmana, as if devouring up the welkin. Thereat, Lakshmana—slayer of hostile heroes—with a croscent sever-

* Issuran Sive .-- His weapon is the trident -T.

# The commentator says the passage means—"Thou knowest (me) for digeth itself. I prefer the sense given:—T.

‡ The encounter that essued between Lakshmana and Atikaya.-T.

ed that sharpened shaft resembling a venomous serpent, as it was descending. And seeing the shaft severed, like a serpent having its person cut off, Atikaya waxing exceedingly enraged, took up five arrows; and the night-ranger discharged them at Lakshmanu. Thereat Bharata's younger brother cut off the approaching arrows with whetted shafts. And having severed them with sharpened shafts, Lakshmana-slayer of hostile heroes-took up a sharpened arrow, as if flaming in energy. And taking it, Lakshmana set it on his excellent bow; and drawing the latter, vigorously discharged the shaft. And that hero endowed with prowess hit that foremost of Rakshasas in the forehead with that shaft having bent knots, discharged from his bow drawn to its full bent .-- And that arrow piercing the forehead of that dreadful Rakshasa, and smeared with blood, appeared like the lord of serpents in a mountain. And the Rakshasa, smarting under Lakshmana's shaft, showered, like the dreadful gateway of Tripura battered by Rudra. Then recovering himself and reflecting. he said, *- Excellent well t By this discharge of thy shaft, thou approvest thyself as a foe in whom I can well glory." Having spoken thus candidly, he, folding his hands at ease, and seated on the platform of his car, began to range in it. And then that foremost of Rakshasas began to take up, set, and shoot one, three, five, or seven shafts. And those shafts resembling Fate itself, plated with gold at the feathered parts,-and looking like the Sun himself (in splendour),-discharged from the bow of the lord of Rakshasas, lighted up the heavens. Thereat Raghava's younger brother by means of many a sharpened shaft calmly cut off all those vollies of arrows shot by the Rakshasa. And finding all those arrows riven in the encounter, that enemy of the lord of the immortals, Ravana's son, was fired with wrath, and took up a whetted shaft. And then aiming that arrew, that highly powerful one suddenly shot it; and with that, rushing on, hit Sumitra's son in the chest. And struck in the encounter by Atikaya, the son of Sumitra began to bleed copiously, like a mad elephant discharging the temporal juice. And then that 18rd at once extricated the arrow; and then took up a keen shaft and fixed the same on his weapon.* And then he set a shaft (on his how-string) reciting a formula for the Agneyat weapon; and thereat his arrow as well as bow flamed up. Then the highly powerful Atikava took up a Raudra; weapon; and thereon fixed a shaft plated with gold at the feathered part, and resembling a serpent in sheen. And even as the Reaper hurleth his rod, did Lakshmana hurl that weapon inspired with divine energy, dreadful and aflame,-at Atikaya. And seeing that shaft set upon an Agneya weapon, that night-ranger discharged a Raudra arrow set upon a Solar weapon. And there like a pair of infuriated serpents, those arrows with their heads flaming in energy, baffled each other in the sky. And burning each other, the shafts fell on the earth; and those best of arrows, shorn of brilliance and reduced to ashes, were deprived of their splendour. And having blazed in the welkin, those two fell down to the earth reft of their lustre, Then Atikaya wrought up with wrath discharged an arrow called Aishika dedicated to Tashtri. Thereat the powerful son of Sumitra severed that shaft by an Aindra weapon. Seeing Aishika baffled, that Prince-son unto Ravana-fired with rage, fixed an arrow on a Yamya weapon; and then the night-ranger shot that weapon at Lakshmana. And Lakshmana resisted it by a Vavavya¶ weapon. And then as a mass of clouds poureth down showers, Lakshmana, enraged, poured volleys is. the bow.

. Chintapamdsa-thought, I apprehend, means said in this connection,

† Belonging to the god of Fire.

Relative to Rudra.

Belonding to Indra.

I What could this be like? The commentator is silent over this important point.—T.

T Belonging to the Wind-god.

of shafts on Ravana's son. Thereupon, nitting Atikaya, those arrows coming in contact with his mail, had their barbs broken, and fell down to the earth. And seeing them baffled. that slayer of hostile heroes-the renowned Lakshmanabegan to shower shafts by thousands. And albeit showered with those arrows, that Rakshasa-the mighty Atikaya-in that encounter was not pierced by them on account of his impenetrable mail; and that best of men failed to hurt him in the contest. Then approaching him, the Wind-god spake unto him, saying,-"This one hath received a boon from Brahma, and is covered with an impenetrable mail. Pierce him with a Brahma* weapon. He cannot otherwise be slain This one clad in mail and endowed with prowess is forsooth incapable of being slain by others." Hearing the words of the Wind-god, Sumitra's son like unto Indra in prowess took an arrow endowed with fierce impetuosity, and at once set it on a Brahma weapon. And on that sharp-headed best of arrows being fixed on that foremost of wearons, the cardinal quarters and the Moon and the Sun and the mighty planets and the sky were seized with affright; and the earthushook. And inspiring that arrow furnished with a feathered part and resembling an emissary of Yama himself. and fixing the same on his bow, Sumitra's son in that encounter discharged that shaft like unto the thunder-boit at the son of the enemy of Indra. And in that conflict Atikaya beheld that shaft fair-feathered and having its feathered part dight with splendid diamonds, acquiring enhanced vehemence arising from its having been discharged by Lakshmana, -and hissing and rushing on with tremendous impetuosity. And seeing it, Atikāya swiftly resisted it with countless sharpened shafts. But endowed with the energy of Suparna himself, that shaft vehemently went to him. And seeing that shaft flaming and resembling the Fatal Destroyer himself,-coming, he, exerting imself to the utmost resisted it with darks and rishtis and maces and adzes and javelins and arrows. But beating down all those weapons of wonderful forms, that arrow alive with flames, coming to the diadem-decked head of Atikaya, severed the same (in twain) And that head furnished with a corsalet, cut off by Lakshmana's arrow, suddenly dropped to the earth, like a summit of Himavan toppling (to the ground). Seeing him rolling on the earth, with his attire and ornaments scattered about, those night-rangers that survived were overwhelmed with grief. And with pale forces and distressed, they, fatigued in consequence of the thrashing they had undergone, suddenly began to cry in frightful accents. And on their leader having been slain, those night-rangers that were about (Atikāya), without waiting any longer,-overwhelmed with panic, rushed towards the city. And on their foe endowed with terrific prowess and incapable of being confronted, having been slain, innumerable monkeys filled with excess of joy, and displaying countenances resembling blown lotuses, paid homage unto Lakshmana working out their welfare.

† Belonging to Brahmå.

SECTION LXXII.

---

HEARING Atikaya slain by the high-souled Lakshmana, the king was filled with exceeding great anxiety and spoke thus, —"Dhumraksha exceedingly wrathful,—best of those equipped with all arms—and Akampana and Prahasta and Kumbhakarna—all these exceedingly mighty heroes—Rākshasas ever seeking warfare, conquerers of the forces of fees, and never defeated by antagonists, have together with their hosts been alain by Rāma of untiring reats. And other Rakshasas baving gigantic bodies and skilled in various arms,—countless high-souled heroes-have also been brought down. These brothers were formerly bound by my son Indrajit of renowned strength and prowess with terrific shafts, obtained as boons. And I do not know by what power or superhuman virtue or stupifying energy did those brothers-Rama and Lakshmanaliberate themselves from those dreadful bonds, which could be loosed neither by celestrals nor the highly powerful Asuras combined nor Yakyas, Gandharbas and Pannagas. And all those heroic Rakshasa warriors that marched forth at my bidding, have been destroyed by monkeys of marvellous might. Him see I not that can now slay Rama with Lakshmana, -that hero together with his forces and Sugriva and Bibhishana. Alack! mighty must be Rama and wondrous is his strength of weapon—he coming in contact with whose prowess, these Rakshasas have met with their d-aths. Now let this palace be everywhere guarded by a vigilant garrison, -as also the açoka wood where Sita is being guarded. We should always be acquainted with the ingress and egress (of every person). And do ye, surrounded by forces, remain where there are garrisons. And the night-rangers should in the evening at midnight and in the morning always watch the movements of the monkeys. The monkeys should by no means be slighted. And ye should know whether the enemy putteth forth (fresh) efforts,-and whether they advance or remain stationed where they at present are."-Thereupon those exceeding mighty Rakshasas did as they had been And having directed them, Ravana-lord of desired. Rakshasas-bearing the dart of ire (in his heart), in forlorn guise entered his own mansion. And with the fire of his rage blazing up, the exceedingly powerful sovereign of the night-rangers, absorbed with the danger that had befallen his son, began to sigh momentarily.

SECTION LXXIII

 ${f T}$ HOSE Rakshas that remained after the others had been slain, swiftly informed Ravana that all those foremost of Rākshasas-Devantaka and the rest, Triciras, Atikāva and others-had been slain. And suddenly hearing them slain, the king with his eyes charged with brine, thinking of the disastrous destruction of his sons and brothers, was extremely agonized. Thereupon, seeing the king afflicted, and sunk in a sea of sorrow, that foremost of car-warriors-son unto the Rāksbasa king-Indrajit, addressed (bis sire), saying,-"O father, it doth not behave thee to be overcome with this excessive grief, inasmuch as, O lord of Nairitas, Indralit vet breaths. Smit by the enemy of Indra, (Raghava) can by no means save his life in encounter. To-day behold Rama along with Lakshmana with their bodies torn with my shafts,lying down lifeless on the ground, having their persons covered with my sharpened arrows! Hear this yow of the foe of Indra, never swerving and instinct with prowess and divinity,-this very day will I with unfailing shafts slay Rama along with Laksmann. To-day let Indra and Vaivaçwata and Vishnu and Rudra and Sadhyas and Vaicwas and men and the Sun and the Moon, behold my immeasurable prowess, terrific like that of Vishnu at the sacrificial ground of Vali." Having spoken thus, that foe of the lord of celestials endowed with exceeding energy, taking the king's permission, ascended a car having the velocity of the wind itself, yoked with asses, and furnished with every variety of weapons. And ascending the car, resembling the car of Hari himself, that exceedingly powerful repressor of enemies et once set out for the field of battle. And as that high-souled (hero) marched, he was followed by countless mighty (Rakshasas) breathing spirits? bearing bows in their strong hands. And some of those, resembling mountains, were mounted on elephants, and some on superb steeds, and some on bears, and some on beasts of prey, and some on lions and jackals,-and some of the Rakshasas endowed with dreadful vigor were mounted on crows, and some on swans, and some on peacocks,-they were equipped with praças and maces and nistrinças and axes and clubs. And all sides were filled with the blares of conchs and the sounds of kettle-drums. And then that enemy of the lord of celestials marched forth with impetuosity. And with an umbrella hued Ike the Moon, that destroyer of enemies appeared like the full Moon stationed in the sky. And that hero garnished in golden ornaments-that foremost of all bowmen-was fanned by an excellent and graceful golden chowri. And with Indrajit furnished with the splendour of the Sun himself, and possessed of peerless prowess. Lanka looked beauteous even as the firmament graced with the glorious Sun.

Arriving at the scene of conflict, that highly powerful repressor of foes arrayed his forces aound the car. And then that foremost of Rakshasas with choice mantras duly offered libations unto Fire.* And that powerful lord of Rakshasas there worshipping Fire with fragrant wreaths and fried paddy, sacrificed unto it. And arms served for Kaca and Bibhitakas for fuel; and there were red cloths and a ladle made of black iron. And spreading Fire there, with tomaras representing Kaça, he seized the neck of a living goat. And then the kindled smokeless fire blazing up brilliantly, displayed signs betokening victory. Thereat, with his right tongue whirling, the Deity of Fire himself looking like one made of gold,-arising, accepted the offering. And then that (Rakshasa) skilled in weapons acquired a Brahma weapon (from that Deity), and inspired his bow and car with mantras Dn that weapon baving been invoked,* and on (the god of Fire) also having been worshipped, the firmament furnished with the suns and stars and planets was afflicted with affright. Having worshipped (the god of Fire), that one endowed with the splendour of Fire itself, that one possessed of the prowess of the great Indra and gifted with inconceivable vigor, accounted in bows and arrows and swords and having steeds and cars and darts,-disappeared in the sky. Then burning for battle, setting up roars went out the Rakshasa ranks, thronging with steeds and ears, and graced with pennons and standards. And they fell to slaughtering monkeys in the engagement with countless shafts, sharp, variegated and decorated; as also with tomaras and hooks. And Ravana's son, fired with wrath, seeing those night-rangers, addressed them, saving,-"Do ye, burning with a desire to destroy the monkeys, fight cheerfully." Thereat all those Rakshasas, eager for victory, smitting roars, covered the dreadful monkeys with showers of shafts. And environed by Rakshas in that encounter, het poured on the monkeys nalikas and naráchas and maces and clubs. And trembling in the encounter, those monkeys armed with trees at once began to shower rocks and trees on Ravana's son. Then the exceedingly powerful Indrajit, son unto Ravana, endowed with wondrous energy, pierced the bodies of the monkeys (with arrows). And fired with wrath, that (hero) rejoicing the Rakshasas with a single shaft pierced nine and seven monkeys And that invincible hero in that coffict in that encounter. mangled the monkeys with shafts resembling the Sun. decked with gold. And their persons pierced in that contest, and the mselves pained with those arrows, they began to fall down, giving up all intention of fight, like mighty Asuras smit by the celestials. And then waxing highly enraged, those considerable monkeys in that conflict hotly pursued (Indrajit)

· Hulabhoktaram-eater of sacrificial offerings-a designation of Fire,

* f. e. on the deity presiding over that weapon, being invoked,

† Indrajit.

seembling the Sun himself and having terrific arrows for his rays. And all the monkeys, with their bodies riven and deprived of their senses, and bathed in blood and writhing in torments,-pursued (Indrajit). And putting forth their prowess in behalf of Rama, those monkeys, equipped with Tooks in the encounter, who had set apart their very lives (for him), paused, shouting up loudly And they in that conflict showered trees and crags and mountain-tops on Ravana's son. And that destroyer of foes-the exceedingly energetic son unto Ravana-resisted that mighty shower of trees and stones capable of compassing destruction. Then that Lord pierced the monkey-hosts in the encounter with shafts resembling fire or venomous serpents. And piercing Gandhamadana with eight and ten sharp arrows, he wounded Nila stationed at a distance with nine shafts. And that one endowed with redoubtable prowess pierced Maioda with seven shafts capable of piercing into the pith; and he pierced Gaja with five shafts in the encounter. And he pierced Jambavan with ten and Nila with thirty. And then with dreadful sharp shafts obtained as boons, he rendered Sugriva and Rishabha and Angada and Dwivida (almost) lifeless. And transported with passion, and resembling the Five arisen at Doomsday, Indrajit, harassed other principal monkeys with countless arrows. And in that terrific conflict. he agitated the monkey-hosts with swift-speeding shafts. resembling the Sun himself, deftly discharged (from his bow). Then in that encounter, leaving his army, Indrajit became suddenly invisible unto the monkey-hosts, -and began to shower fierce arrows, like dark clouds pouring rain. And with their persons torn by the arrows of the conqueror of Sakra,-slain by his power of illusion,-with their teeth uprooted, those mountain-like monkeys fell down in the field, emitting frightful cries,-like a mountain amit with Indra's thunderbolt. And in the conflict they could only see sharp pointed shafts among the monkey-ranks; but that foe of the celestial chief-the Rakshasa, hidden by virtue of illusion, they could not discover there. And then the high-souled lord of Rakshas covered all sides with sharppointed shalls resembling the rays of the Sun; and he rived the foremost monkeys. And whirling darks and nistraicas and axes, flaming and having the effulgence of Fire,-and furnished with flames shooting forth sparks,-be discharged them furiously at the forces of the sovereign of monkeys. And the monkey-leaders struck with Sakrajit's shafts resembling flames, appeared like laughing Kincukas. And some looking at the sky were struck at their eyes. And they gradually began to hide themselves in each other and drop to the earth. And that foremost of Rakshasas-Indrajit-with práças and darts and whetted arrows, inspired with mantras. pierced all those powerful monkeys, - Hanuman and Supriva and Angada and Gandhamādana and Jāmbavān and Sushena and Vegadarcin, and Mainda and Dwivida and Nila and Gavaksha and Gavaya and Kesari and Hariloman and the monkey Vidyutdanshtra and Suryyanana and Jyotimukha and the monkey Dadhimukha and Pāvakāksha and Nala and the monkey Kumuda. And having pierced those foremost monkeys with golden-hued maces, he showered on Rama and Lakshmana arrows resembling the rays of the Sun. And showered with those vollies of arrows, Rama, without heeding that discharge resembling a very downpour, -reflecting, spoke unto Lakshmana, -"O Lakshmana, this lord of Rakshasas, this foe of the lord of celestials, having obtained the Brahma weapon,-after having brought down the monkey-hosts, are assailing us with sharpened shafts. And that high-souled heedful one, having been given a boon by the Self-sprung, hath rendered his dreadful body invisible. How can we alay him, who is fighting with upraised weapons. but who hath hid his body. The reverend Self-sprung, I deem, is incomprehensible. And this is his weapon, embodying his energy. Therefore, O intelligent one, do thou to-day along with me calmiy bear this. And let this foremost of them all—this lord of Rākshasas—cover all sides with the showers of his shafts. And in consequence of this, the army of the monkey-king with its greatest heroes fallen, doth not appear to advantage. And seeing us also fallen senseless,—and desisting from fight with our joy and anger gone off from us, for certain will the enemy of the immortals, taking the Fortune of fight seek his home." And assailed by Indrajit with networks of arrows, they were then sore distressed in the field. And having struck them with sadness, Indrajit from joy shouted in the encounter. And having thus worsted in battle that monkey-army and Rāma along with Lakshmana, he speedily entered the city ruled by the hand of the Tennecked one. And extolled by the Yātudhānas, he, filled with, delight, related everything unto his sire.

SECTION LXXIV.

And they* were rendered inert in the field; and the army of the monkey-leaders was stupified, with Sugriva and Nila and Angada and Jāmbavān,—and they did not show any signs of activity. Thereupon, seeing them dispirited, that foremost of intelligent persons—Bibhishana—cheering them up with his peerless speech, said, —"Ye heroes of the king of monkeys, do not give way to fear. This is not the time to indulge in grief at this place; for the sons of that noble one,†—inactive and depressed, and seeming to be wounded with the showers of Indrajit's shafts,—are in reality

i. e. Râma and Lakshmana.

† Daçaretha.

in this plight, for showing reverence unto the words* of the Self-sprung one.-On him the Self-sprung hath conferred the . mighty Brahma weapon of unfailing power; and the king's sons are doing honour to it by lying down on the field of battle. Why then do ye grieve now?" Hearing the words of Bibhishana and honoring the Brahma weapon, Hanuman spoke as follows :- "The host of the quick-paced monkeys hath been slain by this weapon. Let us go and console them who are still living." And those two great heroes-Hanuman and that foremost of the Rakshasas, with fire-brands in their hands, began to range to and fro in the battle field. And they beheld there the earth strewn on all sides with monkeys lying down like so many hills and various shining weapons. And some of these monkeys were deprived of their tails. some of their hands, some of their thighs, some of their legs, some of their fingers, and some of their heads. And blood was gushing out from the persons of some, and others were urinating out of fear. And Bibbisham and Hanuman bebeld there Sugriva, Angada, Nila, Gindhamadana, Jambavan, Sushena, Vegadarshin, Mainda, Nala, Jyotimukha, and the monkey, Dwivida,-almost slain. And Bibhishana and Hanuman saw in the field seven and sixty kotis of fleetfooting monkeys slain (in battle) at the fifth part of the day by the darling of the Self-sprung. And surveying that host worsted, dreadful like the surges of the sea, Hanuman and Bibhishana began to search for Jambavan. And finding that heroic son of Prajapati, afflicted with natural decrepitude, aged, and resembling smouldering fire,-wounded with hundreds of shafts, Pulastya's son said,-"O noble one, hath not thy life been destroyed with those sharp shafts?" Hearing Bibbishana's words, Jambavan-best of bearsevoking utterance with extreme effort, said,-"O foremost of Nairitas, endowed with exceeding provess, I know thee by thy voice. Having my person pierced with sharp shafts, I cannot see thee with my eyes. Doth he through whom Anjana as well as Mataricwa* are blessed with fair offspring .doth that prince of monkeys-Hanuman-live?" Hearing Jambavan's speech, Bibhishana said,-"Why, passing by the son of the high and mighty,† dost thou enquire after the Wind-god's offspring? O noble one, thou dost not show that overflowing affection either for king Sugriva or Raghava that thou showest for the son of the Wind-god." Hearing Bibhishana's words, Jambavan said,-"Hoar, O foremost of Rakshasas, why I enquire after the Wind-god's son. While this hero is alive, this force, albeit destroyed, liveth; but if Hanuman is reft of life, although living, we are destroyed. O child, if the Wind-god's offspring, resembling his sire himself or (the deity of) Fire in prowess, is alive, there is hope for our lives." Then approaching that aged one, Habuman-son unto the Wind god-saluted him humbly, holding Jambavan's feet. Hearing Hanuman's voice, that foremost of monkeys, with his senses sorely smarting, deemed himself as having regained his life. Then that exceedingly energetic one addressed Hanuman, saying, -- "Come, O powerful monkey. It behaveth thee to rescue the mankeys. There is none else. Endowed with profuse prowess, thou art the greatest friend of these. This is the hour when thou shouldst display thy might. Any other see I not. Do thou cheer up this host consisting of bears and monkeys; and do thou also heal the wounds of these two tormented by them. Bounding sheer pyer the main, thou, O Hanuman, shouldst repair to the Himavanforemost of mountains. There thou wilt see that best of mountains-the golden Rishabha of terrific aspect, and, O smiter of foes, the peak also of Kailaça. Lying in the lap of these two, thou, O here, O powerful monkey, wilt see the mountain of medicines, fraught with healing herbs of all kinds. On its summit thou wilt find four medicinal herbs

The Wind-god.

† Vide Hamlet,

flaming and illumining the ten cardinal quarters-vis., Mritasanjivani,* Vicalyakarani,† Suvarnakarani,† and the mighty medicine, Sandhani. O Hanuman, providing thyself with these; thou shouldst come bither without delay. Do thou, O offspring of the Wind-gods bringing back lives unto these monkeys, cheer them up." Thereat Hanuman filled himself with energy, even as the Ocean beaveth with the force of the winds (blowing on its breast). And ascending the summit of that mountain. I and hurting it with his tread, that hero-Hanuman-appeared like a second mountain. And crushed under the tread of that monkey, the mountain was dispirited; and sore distressed, it could hardly contain itself. And the trees on it began to topple to the earth; and on account of the vehemence of the monkey, they flamed up. And smitten by Hanuman, its peaks were scattered around. And monkeys could no longer dwell on that foremost of mountains, which, being hard pressed (by Hanuman), was trembling all over, with its slopes covered with broken trees and rocks. And with her giant gateways shaking, and the doors of her edifices broken, that night Lanka, overwhelmed with fright, seemed to be dancing. And the offspring of the Wind-god, resembling a mountain itself, bringing that mountain to sore straits, agitated the entire earth with her Oceans. And burting the mountain with his tread, he, opening wide his mouth resembling that of a mare. sent up loud shouts, terrifying the night-rangers. hearing those tremendous roars as he kept emitting cries, the powerful Rakshasas were quite stupified. And bowing down unto the Ocean, that subduer of enemies, the Windgod's son, endowed with dreadful prowess, began to ponder

* Lit, reviving the dead.

† Lit. healing wounds inflicted by darts.

Lit. transmuting any thing to gold.

• Gandhabahdtanaya—lit., son unto the bearer of smell-a designation of the Wind in Samilritt-T.

I Tribute.

over the mighty mission with which he had been entrusted in the interests of Raghava .- And, then upraising his tail resembling a serpent, bending his back, contracting his ears. and opening his mouth looking like that of a mare, that one possessed of terrific impetuosity, bounded into the sky. And with the vehemence of his rush,-he carried away in his wake whole tracts of trees, and rocks, and crags, and inferior monkeys;* and after having been carried away some distance by the vehemence of his arms and thighs, they, at length losing their velocity, fell into the waters (of the Ocean.) And stretching his arms resembling serpents, the son of the Wind-god endowed with the prowess of Garurat coursed on towards the monarch of mountains, as if making all the quarters tremble. And seeing the sea with its hosts of billows rolling furiously, and with the confideracies of aquatic animats bewildered by the angry waters, he coursed on rapidly, like the discus discharged by the hand of Vishnu. And surveying hills and birds and pools and rivers and tanks and splendid cities and flourishing provinces, that one equal to his sire himself in celerity, held his way. And that hero-Hanuman-like unto his father in prowess, and incapable of being fatigued, vigorously proceeded along the orbit of the Sun. And that powerful monkey possessed of the speed of the Wind itself, and having mighty impetuosity, careered, making all sides resound with his roars. And remembering lambavan's words, that redoubtable monkey, son unto the Wind-god, possessed of terrific prowess, and resembling a mountain, suddenly saw (before him) the Himavan; furnished with countless cascades and numerous caves and rivulets; with splendid summits appearing like massess of pale clouds; and graced, with various trees. And arriving at that lord of mighty mountains, furnished with excellent towering golden summits, he saw the great sacred asylums (of the ascetics), inhabited by the flower of celestial saints. And he saw Brahmakoca(a) and Rajatalaya(b) and Sakralaya(c) and Rudraçarapramoksha(d) and Hayanana(e) and the flaming Brahmaciras,(1) and the servants of Varvagwata.(2) he saw the abode of the Fire-god, and the abode of Vaicravana and the effulgent Suryyanivandhana,(h) and the abode of Brahma. (6) and the bow of Sankara, and the navel of the Earth (1) And he saw Kailaça of terrific aspect, and the stone (8) of Himavan, and that bull, (1) and the golden mountain, and that foremost of mountains furnished with all medicinal herbs, flaming, and illuminated with every kind of medicinal plants. And beholding that flaming mass of fire, the off-pring of Vasava's(m) emissary wondered. And bounding up to the lord of medicinal mountains, he fell to searching for the drugs. And that mighty monkey -- the Wind-god's sonleaving behind a thousand yoyanas, began to range the mountain containing the divine remedies in its entrails. And those potent medicines, in that foremost of mountains, knowing (before-hand) that one was coming sceking for them, rendered themselves invisible. And not seeing them, the high-souled Hanuman was angered; and from wrath he set up roars

* Residing in the Trikuta mountain.

† The text has, the Foe of responts-an appellation of the sural and any

(a) The place of Hiranyagarbha.

(b) The place of Rajatanabha—silver-naveled—another form of Hirany-garbha.

(c) The abode of Sakra.

(d) The place wherefrom Rudra discharged his arrow on the occasion of the destruction of Tripura.

(e) The place of the Horse-norked.

(f) The place of the deity presiding over the Brahma weapon.

(g) An appellation of Yama.

(A) The spot where the suns meet.

(i) The place of the four-faced Brahmi.

The spot of Prajapati.

<sup>(4)</sup> On which Rudra sat when engaged in asceticism.

<sup>(4)</sup> Which had been mentioned by Jambayan.

(at) The emissary of Vasava in his cloud-form is the Wind driving the cloud; and the paragraph velors to Hannaha.—T.

And not brooking that, (Hanuman) with eyes resembling glowing fire, addressed that foremost of mountains, saying,-"What is this that thou hast decided on, that thou showest no compassion for Raghava? But, O lord of mountains, to-day witness thyself, overpowered by my arms and torn in pieces!" And (anon) on a sudden, he violently rooted up its summit with trees and elephants and gold, and furnished with thousand varieties of ore,-having its tops torn and its slopes aflame. And uprooting it, he sprang into (the bosom of the air), terrifying the worlds containing celestials and the lords thereof. And hymned by countless rangers of the air, that one endowed with the terrific impetuosity of Garura himself, taking that summit furnished with the splendour of the Sun, went along the orbit of the Sun. And near the Sun, that Sun-like one seemed to be another Sun. And with that mountain, the offspring of the bearer of perfumes appeared surpassingly grand, like very Vishnu equipped with the flaming discus having a thousand edges. And seeing him, the mankeys shouted,-and he also, seeing them, shouted in delight. And hearing their tremendous cheers, those residing in Lanka shouted still more dreadfully. And then the high-souled one dropped on that best of mountains in the midst of the monkey-forces; and, bowing down unto the principal monkeys there, he embraced Biblishana. And then those sons of that king of men, smelling the perfume of that mighty medicine, were then and there healed of their wounds; and the heroic monkeys also sat up. And all the heroic monkeys were instantly healed and cured; and those also that were slain (in battle), through the smell of that best of drugs, sat up, like persons risen after sleep at break of day. Ever since the monkeys and Rakshasas had begun-to fight, for maintaining honor, all those Rakshasas that were slain there by the mighty monkeys, were thrown into the sea. Then that monkey, the offspring of the bearer of fragrance/ endowed with terrific speed, took that medicinal mountain (back) unto Himavan and again presented himself before Rama.

SECTION LXXV.

----

THEN the exceedingly energetic lord of monkeys, Sugriva, said unto Hanuman these words fraught with import,-"Inasmuch as Kumbhakarna hath been slain as also the princes,* Ravana can no longer defend the city.† Now let those principal monkeys that are endowed with great strength and that are furnished with fleetness, taking fire-brands (in their hands) rapidly rush towards Lanka". Then when the Sun had set and at the terrific front of Night, those foremost of monkeys marched towards Lanka, equipped with fire-brands. And charged at all points by numbers of monkeys armed with fire-brands, those fierce-eyed (Rākshasas) that guarded the gates I suddenly fled away. And thereat (the monkeys) delighted set fire to gates and upper apartments and spacious high-ways and various by-ways and edifices. And the fire burnt their mansions by thousands; and mountain-like superstructures toppled headlong to the earth. And there burnt aguru, and sweet sandal, and pearls, and sheeny gems, and diamonds and corals. And there

* Nishuditah-slain, left out for euphony.

† Upanishdram is a contested term. Kataka gives the sense adopted by me. Tirtha says it means 'Rávana cannot give battle in the open field.' According to othere, it means 'He cannot offer truce to us.—T.

† Arabadh—according to some means gates. According to others, a Eulma or division of an army.—T.

I Hutabhuk-lit, enter of sacrificial offsprings-a designation of Pire.

According to the commentator this refers to the fire lighted by the monkeys. I differ.

bornt linen and fine silk and dvikas and various kinds of woolen cloths; and vessels of gold, and weapons; divers kinds of furniture, trappings and ornaments of steeds; cords for tying elephants; burnished ornaments for cars; armour of warriors; and hides of horses and elephants. And swords and bows and bow-strings and arrows and tomaras* and ankucast and darts. And blankets and chowris and tiger-skins and musk and other things. And pearls and excellent gems; and edifices all around. And there the fire burneth heaps of various kinds of arms. And then the fire burnt various kinds of curious structures, and the dwellings of Rakshasas and all householders. And there the fire flaming up again and again burnt down by hundreds and thousands the houses of the denizons of Lanka, -clad in curious golden mail; and wearing wreaths and ornaments and attires; having their eyes wildly moving in intoxication; regling in drink; those whose paramours were dressed in flowing apparels; or those wroth with their foes; or bearing maces and darts and swords in their hands; or engaged in eating or drinking; or asleep with their beloved on costly couches; or who, agitated with fright, were hastily going taking their sons with them .- And that fire burnt down firm-based rich dwellings furnished with innumerable apartments, and garnished with golden Moons and crescents,and mansions having graceful crests; and variegated windows and daises raised there, embellished with rubies and lapises, and seeming to touch the Sun; and piles resembling mountains in grandeur,-and resonant with the cries of Kraunchas and peacocks and the tinklings of ornaments. And the flaming gateways all round appeared like clouds in the rainy season lighted up by lightning, or like the peaks of a mighty mountain ablaze with a forestconflagration. And superb damsels asleep in lofty edifices.* being burnt, cast away their ornaments and shricked. And consumed by the fire, buildings began to drop down like the summits of a mighty mountain smit with the thunder-bolt of the thunderer. And those burning, appeared from a distance like the peaks of Himalaya aglow. consequence of those tops of the edifices burning and of the living flames, that night Lanks looked as if swarming with flowering Kincukas. And with elephant-riders, and elephants, and steeds let loose. Lanka appeared like the Ocean at the hour of Universal tumbling,-with its ferocious aquatic animals whirling in wild chaos. Sometimes, an elephant seeing a steed let loose,-was flying away in fear; and sometimes a horse seeing a frightened elephant, was stopping, himself seized with fear.-And on Lanka burning, the mighty main with the reflection (of the conflagration) looked like an Ocean of red waters. And in a short time that city see on fire by the monkeys, looked like the earth glowing at the time of the Universal dissolution. And the cries of the females amidst the drift of smoke, heated by the flames, could be heard from an hundred Yoyanas. And as Raksbasas having their bodies burnt came out of houses, monkeys eager for excounter on a sudden sprung upon them. And the shouts of the monkeys and the cries of the Rakshasas made the ten cardinal quarters and the ocean and the Earth resound.

An fron club.—T.

† The hook used to drive an elephants. T.

And on those high souled ones—both Rama and Lakshmana—having been cured of their wounds, possessing themselves in calmness, took up their excellent bows. And Rama drew that best of bows. And thereat there was heard a tremendous twang striking terror into the Rakshasas. And drawing his redoubtable bow, Rama appeared like the reverend enraged Bhava, drawing his bow having sounds and instinct with Brahma energy. And the twang of Rama's bow, drowning the roars of both the

* Vindag, accepting to Ramanuya, is a seven-storeyed edifice. Te

monkeys and the Rakshasas,-was alone heard. And the ululations of the monkeys and the cries of the Rakshasas and the rattle of Rama's bow-these three filled the ten cardinal quarters. And with the shafts discharged from his bow, the gateway of the city resembling the summit of Kailaça was crushed in pieces, scattered around on the ground. And beeing Rama's shafts in cars and dwellings, the preparations for conflict were pushed on with great vigor. And in consequence of the foremost Rākshasas preparing for fight, and emitting roars, that night appeared like the Fatal Night itself. And the foremost monkeys were directed by the high-souled Sugriva, saying,-"Ye monkeys, do ye fight, approaching the gate lying at hand. But he that flyeth from his ranks, should be slain by main force". As the principal monkeys stationed themselves at the gate, equipped with fire-brands, wrath took possession of Ravana. And as he yawned, the wind (blowing) from his mouth), filled the ten cardinal regions; and his wrath resembled that appearing in the person of Rudra. And wrought up with a mighty rage, he sent forth Kumbha and Nikumbha-both sons of Kumbhakarna-in company with innumerable Rakshasas.-And in accordance with Ravana's command, Yupaksha and Sonitāksha, and Prajangha, and Kampana went with Kumbhakarna's sons. And, setting up leonine roars, he commanded all those highly powerful Rakshasas, saying,-"Do ye go this very day for battle." Thus directed, those heroic Rakshasas, equipped with flaming weapons, went out, roaring again and again. And the firmament was illuminated with the splendour of the ornaments of the Rakshasas and the splendour of their persons and the fire kindled by the monkeys. And there the light of the Moon and that of the stars and the brilliance of their ornaments,-combined, lighted up the welkin .- And the beams of the Moon and the brilliance of the ornaments and the flaming splendour of the planets emblazoned all round the forces of the monkeys and Rakshasas. And the light of half-burnt houses, again, falling on the restless ripples of the sea, made it wear an extremely And those dreadful Rakshasa hosts, beautiful aspect. nossessed of dreadful prowess and energy, were seen,-with ensigns and banners; excellent swords and paracwadhas,* terrific steeds and cars and elephants rife with paths, + and flaming darts and clubs and scimitars and vrasas and tomaras and bows; bearing blazing prdsas; ringing with the tinklings of hundreds of balls; with their arms encased in golden networks; flourishing axes; whirling their mighty weapons; fixing shafts on their bows; making the air swoon away with the perfumes of their wreaths; extremely terrific: swarming with heroes; sending out sounds like those of the sea. And seeing the army of the Rakshasas incapable of being coped with advance, the monkey-forces began to move and send up loud cheers. And thereat that array of Rakshasas vehemently sprang forward before the force of the foe, like unto insects plunging into a flame. And whirling with their arms bludgeons and acanis, that army of Rakshasas appeared exceedingly grand. And the monkeys, eager for encounter, darted forward like maniacs; and began to despatch the night-rangers with rocks and trees and clenched fist. And Rakshasas possessed of dreadful prowess with whetted arrows swiftly cut off the heads of falling monkeys. And the Rakshasas ranged there, with their ears torn with teeth, or their heads broken by blows, or their limbs crushed with the discharge of crags. And in the same way other grim-visaged night-rangers slew with sharpened swords the foremost of monkeys on all sides. And one about to slay another was himself slain by the latter; and one, about to bring another down, was himself brought down (by his adversary, and one that was railing at another, was in turn rebuked by his enemy; and one who was going to bite his foe, was himself bitten by him. And one was crying 'Give,'* and his adversary anon giveth; and another, again said,—'I will give. Why puttest thyself to trouble? Stay.' Thus there did they accost each other. And there was waged a ferrific encounter between the monkeys and the Rākshasas,—in which arms lay scattered about; and armour and weapons strewn around; and mighty pracast were upraised; and which was faught with blows and darts and swords and Kuntalas! And in that conflict the Rākshasas slaughtered monkeys by tens and sevens. And then the monkeys hemmed in the Rākshasa-forces, with their appearels falling off and with their mail and standards strewn around.

* A platoon consisting of one chariot, que elephant, three horge and five foot.-T.

† A kind" mword.

SECTION LXXVI.

On that furious and destructive carnage proceeding, Angada, eager for encounter, approached the heroic Kampana. Thereat, challenging Angada in wrath, he assailed him with impetuosity. And Kampana dealt a blow to Angada with his mace; and thereat, wounded with it, he recled. Then regaining his senses, that energetic one hurled a mountaintop. Borne-down by the blow, Akampana dropped down to the earth. And seeing Kampana slain in the conflict, Sonitāksha mounted on a car, intrepidly rushed against Angada. And he then impetuosly pierced Angada with sharpened shafts, keen and capable of cleaving the body

Baitle.

+ A bearded dart.

t What could this be like? The commentator is mute. Wilson has Kuntalika-butter-knife or scoop. Kuntala may, however, with a Manife. T.

and resembling the Fatal Fire itself in appearance,-with Kshuras(a) and Kshurapras(b) and Nārāchas(c) and Vatsadanta-(d) and Siliumkha-(e) and Karnis(f) and Salas(s) and Vipatas,(4) and countless (other) whetted arrows. powerful son of Vali - Angada-endowed with prowess having his person pierced with arrows suddenly smashed (his adversary's) car and arrows and dreadful how. And thereate Sonitaksha swiftly took up his sword and shield; and without reflecting for a moment, that vigorous one sprang forward. And the powerful Angada, speedily bounding up, seized his enemy's sword and holding the same with his hands shouted. And then bitting at (Akampana's) shoulder-blade, that powerful monkey-Angada-hewed him in twain, his blow going obliquely down like the sacred thread. And taking that terrific sword, and shouting again and again, in the field, Vali's son rushed against other enemies. And then strong and heroic Yupaksha accompanied by Prajangha,mounted on a car, wrathfully approached the mighty son of Vāli. And taking an iron mace, that hero, Sonitāksha, adorned with a golden angada,-attaining a little respite. advanced against Angada. And that redoubtable hero, the powerful Prajangha, also, accompanied by Yupāksha, fired with wrath, equipped with a mace, advanced towards the son of Vali endowed with exceeding prowess. And placed between those two-Sonitaksha and Prajangha-that foremost of monkeys appeared like the full Moon placed between the Visākhās. () And Mainda and Dwivida defending Angada,

(a) Arrows having razor-like edges.

<sup>(6)</sup> Crescent-shaped shafts.

(c) Arrows made entirely of iron.

(d) Arrows resembling the teeth of calves.

(e) Arrows resembling the feathers of the Kanka.

(f) Arrows furnished with two sides resembling cars.

(e) Arrows with short leads.

(A) Arrows resambling the tops of Karaviras-Tirtha.

(i) The asterisks so named.

remained beside him, desirous of witnessing the encounter between those two (combatants). And fired with fury, those huge-badied Rakshasas endowed with dreadful prowess, equipped with swords and shafts and maces, - being on their guard, fell upon the moukeys. And the encounter that took pface between those three lords of mankeys combined (on one side), and the three redoubtable Rākshasus (on the other), was dreadful and capable of making people's down stand on end. And they,* taking up trees, hurled them in the conflict (against their antagonists); and the powerful Prajungha resisted all those with his swords. And (the monkeys) in the contest showered rocks and trees on the cars (of their enemies: and the exceedingly strong Yupaksha cut them off with vollies of arrows. And the powerful Sonitaksha, endowed with prowess, with his mace severed in the middle the trees which Dwivida and Mainda had uproot-d and discharged. And summoning speed, Prajangha darted against Vali's son, upraising a huge scimitar capable of piercing into the vitals of trees. And seeing him approach, that lord of morkeys possessed of exceeding strength and great prowess struck him with an Açwakarna tree; and with a blow smote his antagonist on his arm holding a nistringa. And seeing the sword resembling a mace dropped to the earth, that exceedingly mighty one clenched his fist into a blow like unto the levin; and that one, endowed with wondrous energy, smote in the forehead that foremost of monkeys possessed of redoubtable prowess. And thereat he for a moment was staggered. And then recovering his senses, the energetic and powerful son of Vali by means of his elenched fist severed Praiangha's head from his body. Thereat Yupaksha, seeing his uncle slain in battle, with his eyes filled with tears, finding his shafts exhausted, swiftly descended from his car and took a sword. And finding Yupaksha charge, Dwivida, waxing wroth, specdily smote him on the breast; and that

* The monkeys.

powerful one also seized him. And finding his brother taken, the highly energetic Sonitaksha then dealt the mighty Dwivida a blow in the chest. And overcome by that blow, that one endowed with great strength, shook; and Dwivida seized his antagonist's upraised mace. In the meanwhile Mainda came to the side of Dwivida. And Sonitāksha and Yupāksha, bestirring themselves, began to vehemently and forcibly drag and pull those (two) monkeys. And Dwivida with his nail tore Sonitaksha's face; and that powerful one violently bringing him down to the earth, pressed him with might and main. And fired with wrath, Mainda-foremost of monkeys-grasped Yupāksha with his arms; and that one dropt down dead on the earth. And thereupon the force of the lord of the Rākshasas, having its foremost heroes slain,and aggrieved thereat, went to where Kumbhakarna's son was. And then cheering up the flying forces, that best (of Rakshas),-the energetic Kumbha-seeing that Raksha host with its mighty heroes slain by highly powerful monkeys crowned with success, began to perform difficult feats in the encounter. And heedfully taking his bow, that first of bowmen discharged shafts resembling venomous serpents capable of piercing the body. And his excellent bow with shafts shone resplendent like the very bow of Indra himself affluent with the splendour of Airavata and lightning. And then drawing his bow to its utmost bent, he hit Dwivida with a feathered shaft knobbed with gold. And suddenly wounded with it, that best of monkeys having the splendour of Trikuta, fell down senseless to the earth, stretching his legs wide. And Mainda, seeing his brother, broken in mighty encounter, furiously rushed forward, taking a gigantic cray; and that one possessed of great strength, hurled it at the Rakshasa. And thereat Kumbha severed that crag with fire shafts discharged (from his bow). And then aiming other fairheaded arrows resembling venomous snakes, that exceedingly energetic one smote Dwivida's elder brother in the chest.

And struck (with those arrows), that leader of monkeybands, Mainda, with his marrow pierced therewith, fell down to the earth, deprived of his senses. And Angada seeing his uncles* endowed with exceeding prowess, overpowered, darted vehemently at Kumbha staying with bow upraised. And as he descended, Kumbha pierced him with fire shafts; and as one pierceth an elephant with fomaras, he also pierced (Angada) with three other arrows. And the powerful Kumbha pierced Angada with a great many arrows, sharppointed, whetted, keen and ornamented with gold. And Vali's son Angada, albeit pierced all over in his person, did not shake; and he kept showering on hist head stones and trees. And the graceful son of Kumbhakarna cut off and cleft all those (stone and trees) discharged by Vali,s son. And seeing him spring up, Kumbha pierced that monkey-leader on the ground with shafts, even as one assaileth an elephant with And blood gushed out of his closed eyes. And then covering his eyes with his hand, Angada with another took a sala that was hard by. And placing on his breast the sala furnished with shoulders, and pulling its branches and bending its top, he cleared it of its foliage, in that mighty encounter. And then in the sight of all the Rakshas he violently discharged that tree resembiing the very banner of Indra and appearing like Mandara itself. And thereat hel severed it with seven sharp shafts capable of piercing the body. And Angada experienced a sharp pang and fell down deprived of his senses. And seeing the invincible Angada down like ebbing sea, the foremost monkeys informed Raghava of it. And Rama, hearing that Vali's sow had come to grief in terrific fight, directed the principal monkeys, headed by Jambavan. And hearing Rama's command, the monkeys, fired with wrath, charged Maternal uncles.

† Kumbha's.

! Kumbba,

Kumbha, staying with his bow upraised. And those powerful monkeys, with their eyes crimsoned with tholer and bearing rocks and trees in their hands, were engaged in defending Angada. And Jämbavan and Sushena and the monkey. Vegadarçi, wrought with wrath, durted against that hero-son unto Kumbhakarna. And seeing them spring forward; he covered up those exceedingly mighty lords of monkey, with showers of shafts, even as a crag obstructeth the course of a current. And even the great deep cannot see his own shores, those high-souled lord of monkeys, coming within the range of his arrows, could not even see. And seeing those monkeys sore distressed by the shafts, the king of the monkeys, Sugriva, in that conflict taking his brother's son on his back, rushed against the son of Kumbhakarna, even as a powerful lion rusheth at an elephant ranging on the slopes of a mountain. And that mughty monkey, uprooting many an acwakarna and other mighty trees of various kinds, discharged them (at the foe). And by means of his sharp arrows the graceful son of Kumbhakarna cut off that downpour of trees covering the welkin; and incapable of being resisted. And being baffled those trees looked like cataghnis. And seeing that shower of trees riven by Kumbha, the graceful lord of the monkeys endowed with exceeding strength and prowess, did not feel any mortification. And suddenly attacked, he bearing those arrows, seized Kumbha's bow resembling in resplendence the very bow of Indra. And swiftly bounding up and performing that feat difficult of being achieved, he, exceedingly enraged, addressed Kumbha resembling an elephant shorn of his tusks, saying,-"O elder brother of Nikumbha, marvellous are thy might and the force of thyself as well as the modesty and prowess that are thine and Ravana's. And, O thou equal unto Prahrada or Vali or the slayer of Vritra or Varuna or Kuvera! thou alone walkest in the wake of thy yet mightier father. As mental anguish doth not dog one that hath controlled his senses,-the relestials cannot cope in conflict with thee alone, O repressor of foes, O of mighty arms, bearing thy dart in thy hand. O thou of high intelligence, put forth thy prowess! and do thou also witness my work. It is only by virtue of the boon he tath received, that thy uncle can bear the deities and the Danavas. But Kumbhakarna copeth with the immortals and Asuras by means of his native might. And in the bow equal to Indrajit himself and in power equal to Ravana, thou now in might and energy art the foremost of Rakshasas. And to-day let all creatures witness the mighty and wonderful encounter in conflict between thee and me, like unto the meeting of Sakra and Samvara. And unparalleled is the feat thou hast performed; and thou hast displayed thy skill in weapons. And beroic monkeys endowed with dreadful vigor, have been brought down by thee. And, O hero it is only because of the apprehension* of censure of the people that I do not slay thee who art fatigued in consequence of the acts that thou hast performed. And reposing from fight, do thou see my strength!" And being thus honored (by Sugriva) with fair speech, (Kumbha) flamed up like a flame into which oblations have been poured. And then Kumbha seized Sugriva by the arms. And like two elephants in rut, they sighing momentarily, fastened on each other's person, and possessed each other.-and from fatigue emitting from their mouth flames mixed with vapour. And with the stamping of their feet, the earth was rent into rivers, and the main was waxed, with its billows surging furiously. Then Sugriva lifting up Kumbha clean, violently plunged him into the salt wash, making his eyes acquainted with the locality of the deep. And in consequence of Kumbha's plunge, the waters heaving up, rolled on all sides like the Vindhya or Mandara. Then springing up, and bringing Sugriva down, Kumbha, transported with wrath dealt a blow on his chest, like unto the levin. And thereat his skin was rent, and blood began to meh out,-and the impetus of that blow broke Sugriva's bones. And the vehemence (of the blow) caused a great fire to blaze up at that spot; even us the thunder-bolt smiting the mountains Meru, maketh place blazed. And the mighty Sugrivaforemost of monkeys-sorely handled by him, fastened his fingers into a box resembling the thunder-bolt, and furnished with all the effulgence of the solar disc having a thousand ways. And then that powerful one made that blow descend right on Kumbha's breast. And agonised with that stroke, Kumbha reft of his senses, dropped like unto a fire that hatle lost its brightness. And overpowered by that blow, tho Rākshasa anon dropped down, like unto the bright Lohitanga dropping from the firmament urged on by Destiny. And the aspect of the falling Kumbha with his breast broken by the blow, appeared like that of the Sun routed by Rudra. And on his being slain, in encounter, by the foremost of monkeys endowed with terrific strength, the earth with her hills and woods, shook; and a mighty fear took possession of the Rakshas.

• i.e. Lest people should censure me, saying, - Sugriva slew Kumbha when he was fatigued in fight. -T.

SECTION LXXVII.

SEEING his brother slain by Sugriva, Nikumbha, gazed at the lord of the monkeys, as if consuming him with his passion. And then that one endowed with calmness, grasped a bludgeon entwined with wreaths, and furnished with an iron ring measuring five fingers, and resembling the top of the Mahendra; plated with gold and embellished with diamonds and lapises, -- and looking like the rod of Yama himself; dreadful, and capable of removing the fear of the Ramshas. And whirling this, that highly powerful one, resembling the banner itself of Sakra in energy, Nikumbha tiossessed of terrific strength, with his mouth wide open, set up shouts. And with gold adorning his breast, and angadas placed on his arms and a pair of curious and variegated earrings, Nikumbha, with his ornaments and that same bludgeon, appeared beautiful like a mass of roaring clouds laughing with lightning and furnished with the iris. And the head of that huge-bodied heroe's parigha undid the conjunction of the "Seven" Winds and appeared tlike a noiseless and smokeless flame. Along with the gyration of Nikumbha's parigha the whole welkin, together with the excellent city! of the Gandharbas, and the planets, stars and the moon, began to whirl. And Nikumbha was hard to approach like unto the fire of dissolution, being resplendent with the brilliance of parigha and other ornaments and having his anger for its fuels. And the Rakshasas and monkeys did not dare stir even out of fear. And the heroic Hanuman, spreading his breast, stood before him. And thereat the powerful (Nikumbha) having long-arms threw his parigha resembling the Sun at the breast of that powerful one. And falling on the firm and spacious breast of Hanuman it was broken into hundred pieces. And the broken portions, being scattered, appeared like hundreds of fire-brands in the sky. Like unto a mountain standing still even at the time of an earthquake that mighty monkey was not moved albeit struck with the parigha. Being thus burt that highly powerful Hanuman, the foremost of the monkeys, with great velocity clenched his fist. And with this, the powerful (monkey)

. The mountain, so named.

This indicates the length of the Parigha.

† This might refer to Kumbha as well.

Some say Vitapabati and some say Alaka.

$ Lit. arms resembling parighas.

gifted with great impetuosity, and resembling the wind in prowess, struck Nikumbha on his breast. And with that fist, his (Nikumbha's) armour* was riven and blood gushed out. And a light rising out of his breast suddenly disappeared like unto lightning disappearing in a mass of clouds. being struck with his (Hannman's) fist Nikumbha was greatly moved and restoring himself attacked the mighty Hanuman and pulled him up. And beholding in conflict the terrible and powerful Hanuman pulled up by Nikumbha, the residents of Lanka began to shout with joy. Being thus put to shame by that Raksha, Hanuman the son of the Wind, struck him with his iron fist. And releasing himself from the grasp of Nikumbha, Hanuman the Wind-god's son instantly planted his foot on the earth. Inflamed with ire, he, throwing down Nikumbha, began to crush him; and gifted with vehemence, he, with great impetuosity, leaped up and sat on the breast (of the Raksha). And holding his head with two hands, he, emitting loud roars, displaced his head. Nikumbha being thus stain in conflict by the Wind god's son, there ensued a terrible conflict between the highly enraged armies of the son of Daçaratha and the lord of Rākshasas. And Nikumbha being deprived of his life, the monkeys began to shout—as if resounding all the quarters. And with it the whole earth moved and the abode of the celestials dropped down. And the Rakshasa-hosts were greatly terrified.

* Some tests read charma (skin), in the place of Barma—(armour) i. e. his skin was rent.—This equally indicates Hanuman's strength.—T.

SECTION LXXVIII.

BEHOLDING Kumbha and Nikumbha slain, Ravana was 'excited with ire like unto flaming fire. And being beside himself, simultaneously with wrath and gr ef Ravana* spoke unto Makaraksha, Khara's son, having spacious eyes, saying, -"O child, do thou proceed at my command with the army and destroy Raghava and Lakshmana with all the monkeys." Hearing the words of Ravana, Khara's son, Makarāksha, proud of his own prowess, delightedly spoke unto the night-ranger, saying, "Be it so." And saluting and circumambulating the Ten-necked one, that hero, at Ravana's behest, issued out of the house. And Khata's son spoke unto the commander who was near him, saying,-"Do thou speedily bring the chariot here and all the soldiers." And hearing his words, that commanding night-ranger, soon led before him the army and the chariot. And going round the chariot and addressing the charioteer that night-ranger (Makarāksha) said,-"O charioteer, do thou soon drive the And Makaraksha addressed those Rakshasas. saying,-"O Rākshasas! do ye all fight before me. I have been commanded by the high-souled Ravana, the lord of Rākshasas, to slay both Rāma and Lakshmana in conflict. I shall blay to-day, O night-ranger, with my excellent arrows. Rāma, Lakshmana, Sugriva and all other monkeys. Like upto fire consuming dry fuel, shall I to-day slay the host of monkeys with my darts." Hearing those words of Makaraksha, the mighty night-rangers, (addressed themselves for fight). They were armed with various weapons, cautious: assuming shapes at will, crooked, having fearful teeth coppery eyes; roaring like elephants, having dishevelled hair and terrible. And encircling the huge-bodied son of Khara, those gigantic (Rākshasas) began to proceed, delighted and moving the earth (with the weight of their persons). There arose a terrible noise on all sides from the sound of conches. and thousands of bugles, and from the moving of the arms of the heroes. And all on a sudden the reins slipped off (the hands: of) the charioteer and the flag of the Rākshasas dropped down. And the course of the steeds was thus slackend and they began to move slowly and poorly with their heads droop. ing down. There blew a terribly rough wind mixed with dust when the fearfully wicked-minded Makaraksha's issued out for battle. Those powerful Rakshasas neglecting those bad omens proceeded towards where Rama and Lakshmana were. They were all black like unto clouds, elephants and buffaloes, and had marks of swords and maces on their persons. And all those night rangers were skilled in the art of warfare and began to range to and fro (in the battle field) saying, "T shall go first,"

* Nairita is another name of Ravana.

SECTION LXXIX.

BEHOLDING Makaraksha out for battle, those foremost monkeys, leaping on a sudden, addressed themselves for fight. Thereupon ensued a terrible conflict, capable of making one's down stand on end, between the night-rangers and the monkeys like unto one between the celestials and Danavas. And those monkeys and night-rangers crushed each other down with trees, darts, maces and parighas. And those night-rangers began to assail those foremost of monkeys with sakti,* swords, maces, kuntas, tomaras, patticas,

A short arrow thrown from the hand or shot through a tube."-T.

Vindipalas,* arrows, nooses and clubs. Being thus assailed with fearful arrows by Khara's son, those monkeys, stricken with fear, fled away. And beholding the monkeys fly away, the victorious Rakshasas began to roar like excited lions. The monkeys thus flying away to all quarters, Rama with a downpour of shafts assailed the Rakshasas. And beholding the Rakshasas thus overpowered, the night-ranger Makaraksha, excited with the flame of ire, said,--"Stay, O Rāma, let us both fight with each other; I shall take thy life with sharp arrows discharged off my bow. Thou didst slay my father in the forest of Dandaka. Remembering thy action and finding thee before, my ire is excited. O Raghava! O Vicious souled one! My limbs are being burnt (with wrath) for I did not see thee then in that mighty forest. O Rama, by my good luck. I have got thee to-day, like unto a hungry lion desiring to have other animals. Being despatched by my arrows to the world of devils, thou shalt live with those heroes, who had been killed by thee before. What is the use of speaking more, O Rāma, do thou hear my words. Let all the people behold thy as well as my prowess in the battlefield. Either with weapon or with clubs, in whatever thou art expert, do thou fight with me in the battle-field,O Rama." Hearing the words of Makarāksha, Rāma, Daçaratha's son. smiling, replied to the words of the babbler. "O Raksha, what is the use of idle prating? None can achieve success in a battle with idle words-but with fighting. I slew in the forest of Dandaka thy father with fourteen thousand Rakshasas, Tricira and Dushana. O vile one, thou being slain to day, with thy flesh, vultures and crows, having sharp beaks and nails, and jackals shall be satisfied. † Being thus

* An Iron spear or dart .- T.

† Here is another sloka, which is to be found in all N. W. P. texts and in one or two texts published in Bengal—but it has been omitted by many for it conveys the same meaning as the previous sloka; the meaning is:—And the birds drinking thy blood shall fly away to various quarters.—T.

addressed by Räghava, the mighty Makarāksha, began to dart sharp arrows towards him in the battle-field. And Rāma, with his shafts, sundered into several pieces, those arrows. And being thus rendered useless those arrows, feathered in gold, fell down on the earth. Then there arose a terrible conflict between the Rakshasa Khara's son and Daçaratha's son. And there were audible in that battlefield, the outcry of the heroes and the twang of the bows stretched by their hands, like unto the muttering of the clouds in the sky. And to beheld that wondrous conflict, the celestials, Danavas, Gandharbas, Kinnaras and the mighty serpents stationed themselves in the sky. They were wounded with the arrows discharged by each other and their strength was doubled. And they began to fight in that battle-field one attacking and the other withstanding the attack. And in that conflict the Rakshasa sundered the shafts discharged by Rama. And likewise Rama severed into several pieces the arrows shot by the Rākshasa. All the quarters were covered with arrows and nothing on earth or in the sky was visible. Thereupon being excited with ire, Raghava of long arms sundered his (Rākshasa's) bow in conflict and with eight Nărachas pierced the charioteer. And with arrows Rama sundered the chariot and killing the horses brought them down. And the night-ranger Makarāksha was brought down on the earth from the chariot. He then again rose up with a dart in his hand creating terror unto all creatures and resembling the Fire of Dissolution in resplendence. It was a terribly lauge dart conferred on him by Siva, shining in the sky in its native brilliance and like unto another weapon of destruction.* And beholding which dart even the celestials fly away in fear to different quarters. And taking up that huge flaming dart, the night-ranger, being excited with ire, hurled it at the high-souled Raghava.

This refers to the weapon used by Siva for destruction—for Siva, according to the Hindu Mythology is the God of destruction.—T.

And Raghava, with four shafts, sundered that dayt, in the sky, flaming and hurled at him by the son of Khara. And that flaming dart, feathered in gold, being splintered into several pieces by Rāma's arrows fell down on earth like a huge fire brand. And beholding that dart baffled thus by Rama of unwearied actions all those, stationed in the welkin began to shout, "Well done! Well done!!." And beholding his dart thus sundered, the night-ranger Makarāksha clenching his fist spoke unto Kākutstha, saying, "Stay! Stay!" And seeing him advance thus, the descendant of Raghu, smiling, fixed a fiery arrow on his And with that arrow the Raksha was slain by Kakutstha in battle. And having his heart pierced he fell down and died. And beholding Makarāksha thus slain all the Rakshasas, being afraid of Rama's arrows, proceeded towards Lanka. And seeing that night-ranger, the son of Khara, slain hy Rama's arrows, like unto a mountain clept by a thunder-bolt, the celestials were greatly delighted.

SECTION LXXX.

Ravana, being excited with ire, began to grind his teeth. Being thus angered, and thinking within himself what steps to take, he ordered his son Indrajit to proceed to the battle-field. "O hero, gifted with great prowess as thou art, do thou, hidden (in clouds) or appearing before them, slay the two heroic brothers Rama and Lakshmana. Thou didst defeat in conflict Indra of unequalled prowess. Shalt thou then neglect to slay men as they are?" Being thus addressed by the lord of the Rakshasas and obeying his lathers.

command, Indrajit proceeded towards the sacrificial ground. to satisfy Fire (with oblations). There came some she-demons with crimson turbans and waited respectfully where Ravana's son was offering oblations unto Fire. In that sacrifice the weapons were the leaves of sara,* bibhutaks† were fuels, and there were brought crimson clothes and sruvast made of black iron. And spreading fire on all sides with sara leaves and tomaras, (Indrajit) caught a living goat, all black, by the neck. And the fire, with oblations of sara, became greatly blazed and devoid of smoke. And there were visible many good omens indicating victory. The flame of the fire was like unto gold, and moving Southwards began to receive offerings of clarified butter. And thus offering oblations unto fire and unto celestials. Danavas Rakshasas, he ascended an excellent car and soon disappeared. It was drawn by four horses and a huge bow, set with sharp arrows, appeared beautiful on that excellent car. The chariot was brilliant with its own native resplendence, adorned with gold and painted with the figures of deer and a cresent. It was encircled on all sides with golden bracelets, adorned with flags made of vaiduria and was like unto the flaming fire. And being thus well protected with Brahma weapons resembling the Sun in brilliance, the mighty son of Ravana became invincible. And offering oblations unto Fire in accordance with demonaic incantamens and thus obtaining the power of hiding himself, that hero, even victorious in battle, issued out of the city and said,-"Slaying these two brothers in battle, who have uselessly wandered away into the forest, shall I crown my father Ravana with victory. Destroying Rama and Lakshmana, and clearing the moukeys off the earth, shall I satisfy my sire greatly."

* Saccharum—a reed or grass.

Peleric myrobalan.

Saving this, he disappeared from their view. Thereupon that fearful foe of the lord of celestials appeared in the battlefield, excited with wrath, armed with bow and sharp Narachas and commissioned thus by the Ten-necked one. He beheld there those two heroes discharging flaming arrows and surrounded by the monkeys like unto the fearful threehooded serpent in the midst of other serpents. And thinking "these must be Rama and Lakshmana," and stretching his bow he began showering arrows like unto clouds. He was seated in a car in the welkin and hidden from the human gaze and began to assail Rama and Lakshmana with sharp shafts. And being burt with the arrows, Rama and Lakshmana, fixing arrows on their bows, began to discharge celestial shafts. And those two highly powerful heroes could not even touch his person with their arrows resembling the Sun albeit they covered the whole welkin therewith. And clouding the whole sky with smoke that effulgent one, enveloped in frost, hid himself from their gaze. There was not audible the twang of his bow, the sound of the wheels, or the noise of the steeds. Nor was he seen by any. In that terrible darkness of clouds that one of mighty arms began to make a downpour of Nărachas and arrows like hail storms. And in that encounter, Ravana's son, inflamed with ire, wounded Rama, with shafts, resembling the Sun and obtained by him as a boon. And being burt with Marachas, like unto mountains wet with rain, those two foremost of men, began to discharge shafts feathered in gold. And reaching the son of Ravana in the sky and soaked in blood those golden arrows, fell down on earth. And those two best of men, burt with his arrows, became more effulgent and baffled the shafts discharged by the Rakshasa. Thereupon Rāma and Lakshmana began to aim their sharp shafts to the direction whence the arrows came down. And stationed in his chariot that mighty caremarrior disturbed all quarters with his arrows and pierced Dacaratha's sons with sharp shafts won by him. And being greatly hurt with those sharp-pointed and terrible arrows Rama and Lakshmana appeared like blossoming kingsukas. Like unto the sun hidden in clouds they could see neither his countenance and motion, nor his bow and arrows. And being wounded with those arrows hundreds of monkeys died and fell down on the earth. Thereupon Lakshmana, being excited with wrath, spoke unto his brother, saying-"To slav all the Rakshasas shall I discharge to-day Brahma weapon." Thereupon Rama spoke unto Lakshmana, gifted with auspicious marks, saving-"It doth not behave thee to clear all the Rakshasas off the earth for the folly of one individual. Thou shouldst not slay him, who hath retired from battle, hath hidden himself, hath sought thy shelter, hath stood before thee with joined palms, hath fled away or who is bewildered. Othou of mighty-arms, let us try to slay him (Indrajit). And to accomplish it I shall use the weapons gifted with great impetuosity and resembling the serpents. He is hidden from the public gaze so we must slay himhad he been fighting openly the leaders of the monkey hosts could have slain that Rakshasa. Truly he shall be burnt to death with my shafts and fall down on the earth albeit he entereth the regions under the earth or the abode of the celestials." Having said these words pregnant with a high significance, the high-souled and heroic descendant of Raghu, being surrounded by monkeys, began to concert various plans for the destruction of that terrible Rakshasa of wicked deads.

SECTION LXXXE

HAVING read the intention of that high-souled Raghava, he retired from the battle-field and entered into the city of Lanka. And remembering the destruction of many a quickpaced Rakshasa, his eyes were rendered coppery with ire; and that hero, the son of Ravana, issued out of the city again. And that highly powerful, Indrajit, a descendant of Pulasta and an enemy of the celestials, issued out, encircled by the Rakshasas, by the western gate. And beholding the heroic brothers Rama and Lakshmana prepared for fight, Indrajit spread illusions. And placing an illusory figure of Sita on the car, encircled by a huge army he began to make arrangements for her destruction. And desiring to charm all with his illusions, that one of wicked intent, preparing himself to slay Sita, proceeded towards the monkeys. And beholding him thus proceed, the monkeys, inflamed with ire, desirous of fighting and with crags in their hands, moved on. And preceded them all, Hanuman, the foremost of the monkeys. with a huge mountain-top in his hand. He beheld there, on Indrajit's car, Sita, deprived of all joy, poorly, greatly reduced with fasts and wearing a single braid. And Raghava's beloved spouse wore a piece of soiled cloth, and though highly beautiful, the grace of her person was greatly spoiled with dirt. That daughter of Janaka, was not seen by him for a long time. And beholding her and deciding instantly that she is the daughter of Mithila, (he became greatly sorry). And seeing her on the car, innocent, poor, deprived of joy and brought under the influence of the son of the lord of Rakshasas that great monkey thought within . himself-'What must be the intention of Indrajie?' and accompanied by heroic monkeys advanced towards the conof Ravana. And beholding that monkey host, Rayana's and became beside himself with Ire and unsheathing his weapon Nistrinsha, caught her by the hair. And that Rakshasa addressed himself to strike her in the presence of all those monkeys, and that illusory figure of Sita began to bewail saying, "O Rama! O Rama!" And seeing her thus caught by the head, Hanuman, the son of Maruta, greatly sorry, began to And beholding that beloved spouse of Rama, having a tender and beautiful person, he addressed angrily the · son of the lord of Rakshasas with harsh words. "It is for thy destruction. O Vicious-souled one! that thou hast touched her hair. Being descended from that great Brahma ascetic thou art born as a Rākshasa. O! cursed art thou, since thou hast cherished such a desire and engaged in such a vicious deed. O vile 1 O wicked 1 O cruel and dishonorable wight 1 O thou having vice for thy prowess! O shameless! Art thou not ashamed of perpetrating such an inhuman deed. What hath Maithili done by thee, O cruel one! that thou art ready to slay her-She hath been banished from her home, territory and hath been separated from her lord. O thou worthy of being slain, destroying Sita, thou shalt nut live long as thou hast been brought under me. Thou shalt after the death reach the place which is occupied by those who murder women-a place which is avoided even by those who commit every sort of crime punishable by law." Saying this Hanuman, accompanied by monkeys armed with weapons, and excited with ire, proceeded towards the son of the lord of Rakshasas. Beholding the highly powerful monkeys advance thus the Rakshasas, inflamed with wrath, obstructed them. And assailing the monkey-hosts with thousands of arrows, Indrajit spoke unto that foremost of monkeys, Hannman, saying,-To-day I shall slay before you all Vaidehi, for whom thou, Sugriva and Rama have come. Slaying ber, O monkey, I shall afterwards kill thee, Rama, Laksimana and Sugriva and the dishonorable Bibhisana. And, O monkey, about not destroying women, of which thou wert speaking (I might say) that we must always do what pains our enemies."* Saying this, Indrajit with a sharp sword, himself killed the illusory Sita thus bewailing. And being sundered by him obliquely in a way in which a seacred thread lies on one's own person, the innocent (Sita) having a beautiful countenance fell down on the earth. And slaying her Indrajit spoke unto Hanuman, saying,-"Behold I have slain (before thee) with my sword Rama's beloved. And Vaidehi being thus slain, all your labours have been rendered useless." And destroying her with his own hand by means of a huge sword, Indrajit, greatly pleased ascended his car and began to emit dreadful roars. And the monkeys stationed near heard that terrible roar and saw him enter the castle.† And slaving Sitat that wicked-minded son of Ravana became greatly pleased. And beholding him thus delighted the monkeys being greatly sorry fled away.

SECTION LXXXII.

HEARING that dreadful uproar resembling the sound of Indra's thunder-bolt, the monkeys, casting their looks on all sides fled away. Thereupon Hanuman, the son of Maruta, spoke unto them, poorly, terrified and of a sorrowful countenance, saying,—"O monkeys, why do ye look so melancholy

There is one sloka intervening according to some texts—but it has been omitted by many. The reasons for this omission are best known to them. The purport is —"Why did Râma slay Târakâ belore? And I shall therefore also his spouse the daughter of king Janaka." Hearin Indrajit attempts to justify himself and wants to prove that Râma is equally blameable for this.—T.

† The castle built by Indrajit by means of his illusory power in the air.-T. .

<sup>. 1</sup> This refers to the figure of Sith made by illusion .- T.

and why are you flying away? Why have ye renounced your earnest desire for fight? And where is your heroism gone? Do ye remain behind me, I shall go first in the battle." Being thus addressed by that highly intelligent son of the Wind-god, they were greatly excited with wrath and being pleased took up trees and crags in their hands. And roaring thus the leading monkeys advanced towards the Rakshasas and stood encircling Hanuman in the battle-field. And being surrounded on all sides by leading monkeys, Hanuman began to burn down enemy's host like unto fire spreading its flames. And being encircled by monkey-hosts that mighty monkey resembling Death himself began to grind the Rakshasas. And being overwhelmed with grief and wrought up with ire, that monkey Hanuman, threw a huge crag on the car of that son of Ravana. Beholding that crag about to fall down on the car, the charioteer moved his horses and it was speedily brought at some distance. And not reaching Indrajit stationed on the car and the charioteer, that crag, uselessly hurled, fell down on the earth. And that crag falling down many of the Rakshasas were crushed. Thereupon hundreds of huge-bodied monkeys, emitting cries and taking up crags and trees proceeded towards him (Indrajit) and hurled them at him. And the monkeys gifted with dreadful prowess began to make a downpour of crags and trees. They thus assailed the enemies and frequently emitted cries. And the grim-visaged nightrangers were thus assailed with trees in that field by the terrible monkeys. Beholding his army thus distressed by the monkeys, Indrajit, excited with wrath, and taking up his dart, proceeded towards the enemies, and encircled by his soldiers showered terrible shafts upon them. And that one of dreadful prowess slew many a leading monkey by means of darts, Açanis, swords, patticas and clubs. And the highly powerful monkeys destroyed his retinue, with crags, stones and trees having strong trunks. And Hanuman thus crushed many a Rakshasa of terrible deeds. Obstructing the Rākshasas (for some time) Hanuman spoke unto monkeys, saying,-"Stay, we should not fight now. That daughter of Janaka hath been slain, for whom we have engaged in fight, renouncing all hope of life and desiring to accomplish Rama's satisfaction. Let us now go and inform Rama and Sugriva of it. And we shall do as we shall be commanded by them. Saying this and desisting all the monkeys from encounter that foremost of monkeys proceeded undaunted and heroically. And beholding Hanuman proceed thus where Raghava was that wicked-minded one (Indraint) with a view to to oblations unto Fire entered the sacrificial altar Nikumbhild. And reaching there Indrajit lighted up fire and began to pour oblations therein. And the Fire blazed up receiving oblations of blood, and being satisfied assumed the appearance of the setting sun. And Indrajit conversant with all ceremonials, offered oblations in due form for the welfare of the Rakshasas. And they all stood there watching the result and desirous of ascertaining the success of the battle.*

SECTION LXXXIII

Hearing the terrible war-cry of the Rākshasas and monkeys Rāghava spoke unto Jāmbavān, saying:—"O gentle one, forsooth hath Hanuman performed some mighty act—for I hear the dreadful sound of the weapons. Do thou therefore proceed speedily, O lord of bears, with all thy soldiers to assist that foremost of monkeys.

. This sloke bath been left off in some editions. T.

Thereupon, saying, 'So be it,' that king of bears, surrounded by his forces, approached the Western gate, where the monkey, Hanuman, was stationed. And then the lord of bears saw Hanuman approach, surrounded by monkeys sighing hard, who had faught the fight. And seeing on the way that host of bears dreadful and resembling dark clouds, on the march, Hanuman made them desist. And that illustrious one along with that force, speedily presented himself (before Rama), and with a heavy heart addressed him, saying,-"As we were fighting the field, Ravana's son, Indrajit in our very sight slew Sita, crying (in distress). O subduer of enemies, seeing her (in this plight), I, with my senses bewildered, have been overwhelmed with grief. Therefore I have come unto thee to inform thee of what hath befallen." Hearing these words of his, Rāghava, overwhelmed with grief, dropped down to the earth, like a tree whose roots have been severed. Seeing the god-like Rāghava down on the earth, the foremost monkeys from all sides rushed forward and came to where the was). And with water scented with lotuses,* they fell to sprinkling that one resembling a furious firet that hath suddenly arisen. Thereat Lakshmana, overcome with sorrow, embracing Rāma, spoke unto him words fraught with reason and import,-"Profitles-1 virtue is incapable, O noble one, of delivering from calamities thee, who hast subdued thy senses, and who ever abidest in the good path. Beings and the mobile as well as the immobile cannot have that direct percention of virtue which they have of happiness. Therefore, I ween, virtue is a non-entity. Inasmuch as the immobile (albeit devoid of any regard for vitue) are nevertheless happy, and affithe mobile also are so, this virtue cannot lead to happiness. (If it were so), one like thee would have not been placed in peril. If unrighteousness would bring unhappiness on treatures, Ravana should hence to hell, and those possessed of virtue, shouldst not come by misfortune. And seeing that he is free from danger, and thou art in it, righteousness and its opposite are found to have tendencies the very reverse of those assigned to them respectively (by the Vedas). And if by means of virtue, one attained the felicity attached to it, and by means of unrighteouness, one reapeth proper fruit, then let those that are unrighteous reap the fruit of their implety, - nor let those that set their face against sin. be deprived of the fruit of their righteousness; and let those that walk in the way of virtue reap the fruit of their piety. But as prosperity attendeth those that are established in unrighteousness, and as those regardful of righteousness fare lamentably,-these* have not the senses assigned to them (by the scriptures). If, O Raghava, (it is contended that)unrighteousness cutteth off the wicked, then whom shall Unrighteousness, himself slain by the act of slaughter of the destroyer,slay in his turn? Or if it is said that one is slain or slayeth another by ordinance, then it is Destiny, which is touched by the sinful act and not he. O chastiser of foos, incapable of meting out retribution, +--unmanifest itself, and non-existent, how can virtue, even if we grant its existence, find out the person that should be slain? If, O foremost of the good, it had existed, thou wouldst not have come by any misfortune. But inasmuch as thou hast fallen into this plight, there is no such thing as virtue. Or itself feeble and impotent, it taketh refuge in manliness. And being powerless and bereft of dignity, it should, I deem, by no means be followed. And if virtue is a property of manliness, then carefully foreak-

* Padmotpalasugandhrohih—water scented with padmas—lotuses proper, and utpalas—blue lotuses—(Nymphea cerulea).—T.

<sup>† &#</sup>x27;Rama,' remarks the commentator, 'was a fire lighted by his grief for Sita'.-T.

. Virtue and vice.

* In consequence,' remarks Râmânuja, 'of their being deviod of conscientings.'

ing virtue, do thou follow strength as thou hast hitherto followed virtue. But, O subduer of enemies, if truthfulness be virtue, art thou not bound by that departing from which the king lost his life?* And, O chastiser of foes, if virtue must be practised above all, or if prowess must have precedence,-then the thunder-handed Satakratu would not have celebrated his sacrifice, slaying the ascetic. + O Raghava, virtue aided by prowess, destroyeth enemies. Therefore, O Käkutstha, people, for compassing their ends, resort to both virtue and prowess. This, sire, is my opinion: this, O Raghava, is virtue. But thou, having them renounced the kingdom, hast laid the axe at the roots of righteousness. Like streams issuing out mountains, all acts spring from wealth flowing from various regions and attaining magnitude. Like a shrunken stream in summer, all the acts of that foolish person who bath been divorced by wealth, are annihilated.-He that remouncing riches within his reach, & hankers after enjoyment, -being carried away by his overmastering desire, taketh to getting at wealth by sinful acts; and then he incurreth guilt. Unto him that hath wealth are friends, unto him that bath wealth are acquaintances,-he that hath wealth is an individuality in this world, and he that hath wealth is a learned person. He that hath wealth is powerful; he that hath wealth is intelligent; he that bath wealth is mighty-armed; and he that hath wealth is full of all graces. All these that I have ennumerated are the evils of forsaking fortune. (I cannot divine) what made thee, renouncing the monarchy, to adopt such a course.-

Explains the commentator,—'King Dacaratha lost his life, because he did not observe his word of installing thee in the kingdom. Art thou not bound by his word as well?'—T.

† The Logic is all in a jumble; but such is the text. The ascetic was Vigurana. The meaning, according to the commentator, is that, provens in first and virtue next. Indra first used force, and then acquired merit.—T.

<sup>$ &#</sup>x27;Root', remarks Ramanuja,-- 'which is interest !'

. The commentator would have 'gotten riches'

He that hath riches, bath virtue and desire attending on him, and hath everything auspicious. That one without wealth, that seeketh it, cannot secure the wealth of prowess. without riches and desire. And, O lord of men, Cheerfulness, and desire, and pride, and piety, and anger, and self-restraint, and self-control-all these come from wealth. As the planets are not discovered on a stormy day, that wealth, the want of which renders this world naught even unto the ascetics practising righteousness,-is not visible in thee. O hero. thou having abode by the words of thy superior and having come (to the forest), thy wife dearer then life itself hath been ravished by Rakshas. But, O hero, to-day, O Raghava, by my acts will I remove this huge sorrow that hath been heaped upon us by Indrajit. Therefore, rise thou up. Rise up, O foremost of men, O long-armed one, O thou who observest vows. Why dost thou not understand thyself as the Supreme Soul ?* And, O sinless one, urged on behalf of thy welfare, I, waxing wroth on hearing of the slaughter of Janaka's daughter, shall with my shafts entirely raze to the ground Lanka with cars and elephants and steeds and the foremost Rakshas."

SECTION LXXXIV.

As Lakshmana devoted to his brother was comforting Rāma, Bibhishana, posting his forces at their proper quarters, came there, surrounded by four heroes accounted in various arms, resembling masses of collyrium or leaders of elephant-herds. And approaching the high-souled Rāghava, overwhelmed with grief, he saw the monkeys with tears in their eyes. And he saw that joy of the Ikshwaku race-the high-souled Raghava-stupified with grief, lying on the lap of Lakshmana. And seeing Rama caste down and inflamed with grief, Bibbishana, inly pained, said,-'What is this?' Thereat, gazing at Bibhishana's countenance as well as all those monkeys, Lakshmana, with his eyes flooded with tears, said these words pregnant with dire import,-- "O placid one, hearing from Hanuman's lips that Sita hath been slain by Indrajit, Raghava hath been overcome with stupor." As Sumitra's son was speaking thus, Bibhishana, preventing him, addressed the stupified Rama in these pregnant words,-"O king, all that Hanuman in distressful guise had communicated unto thee I deem as improbable, like unto the drying of the deep. I know the intent of the impious Ravana with reference to Sita, O mighty-armed one. Her he will not slay. I, seeking his welfare, had besought him much, saying,-'Let go Vaidehi',-but he did not act up to my speech. Neither by conciliation, nor by gift, nor by dissension,-and where is war 9-nor by any other means is one capable of obtaining the very sight of Sita. Having bewildered the monkeys, the Rakshasa hath gone back; and, O mighty-armed one, know her to be the illusory daughter of Janaka. To-day, going to the sacrificial ground (called) Nikumbhila, he will offer oblations into fire; and there the deity of fire will present himself along with Vasava and the (other) divinities. And then Ravana's son shall be in sincible in battle. Indubitably that illusion hath been wrought by him, to deceive (the monkeys), so that they might not through their prowess disturb him there. Thither will we go before he hath furnished his (sacrifice). O foremost of men, shake off this vain sorrow that hath overcome thee! Seeing thee smitten with grief, this entire host is dispirited. Here, with thy heart composed, do thou stay, summoning thy strength. Send Lakshmana along with us and the flower of the forces.

* Rama is conceived as an incarnation of Vishnu.-T.

This foremost of men by means of sharpened shafts will make Ravana's son give up his rites; and then shall he be capable of being slain by us. These keen and sharpened shafts of his, attaining access of velocity through the feathers of birds, and themselves resembling fierce fowls, will drink his* blood. Therefore, O mighty-armed one, do thou in order to the destruction of the Rakshasa, commission Lakshmana, even as the wielder of the thunder-bolt commandeth the same. And as to-day no time should be lost, therefore do thou send Lakshmana for campassing the destruction of the foe, even as Mahendra sendeth the thunderbolt for bringing about the destruction of the enemies of the immortals. If that foremost of Rakshasas can finish his rites, he shall be invisible to both celestials and Asuras; and, he fighting after finishing his sacrifice, the celestials themselves shall be placed in great jeopardy."

SECTION LXXXV.

HEARING his speach, Rāghava, overwhelmed with grief, could not perfectly comprehend what was said by the Rākshasa. Then, summoning up patience, Rāma—captor of hostile capitals—spoke unto Bibhishana, seated near the monkeys,—"O lord of Nairitas, I once more wish to hear what, O Bibhishana, thou hast said." Hearing Rāghava's words, Bibhishana, skilled in speech, again spoke these words, saying,—"O mighty-armed one, I have stationed the forces, O hero, agreeably to thy directions. The entire force hath been divided around; and the leaders have also been placed property. Further, O mighty master, listen to what I have to say. Or thy having been causelessly aggrieved, we all of us were seized with grief. If this anxiety of thine conduceth to the joy of the enemy, do thou cast it off. And, O hero; bestir thyself,and summon up spirits. If thou art to have Sita, and if the night-rangers are to be slain by thee, do thou, O Raghu's son, listen to my profitable speech. Let Sumitra's son go forth, environed by a mighty force, for slaying in battle the son of Ravana, who hath gone to Nikumbhila; with shafts resembling venomous serpents, discharged from the round* of his bow. By virtue of his austerities, that hero, from a boon conferred by the Self-sprung, hath obtained the Brahmaçiras weapon, together with steeds coursing at their will. Now he with his army hath gone to Nikumbhila; and when, having finished his rites, he gets up, know that all of us are slain. 'When not reaching Nikumbhila, and not having finished thy offerings unto fire, thou, equipped with arms, art slain by a foe,-O enemy of Indra, that is thy death.'-Thus, 'O mighty-armed one, did the lord of all creatures confer a boon (on Indrajit), and, O king, thus was the death of this intelligent one ordained. O Rama, for compassing the destruction of Indrajit, do thou commission a mighty force. On his being slain, know that Ravana along with his retainers are slain."-Hearing Bibbishana's words, Rama said,-"O thou having truth for prowess, I know the illusion of that fierce one. Without doubt, he is skilled in the Brahma weapon, is potent in illusion and, is possessed of exceeding strength. In conflict, he depriveth of consciousness even the celestials with Varuna (at their head). And as that illustrious (one) goeth about in the welkin on his chariot, none, O hero, can perceive his course, like the course of the Sun when the sky is covered with clouds." And Raghava, being well acquainted with the illusive energy of his wicked-minded foe, addressed the renowned Lakshmana, saying,-"Environed by the entire host of the lord of monkeys,-accompanied by the leaders, O Lakshmana, headed by Hanuman,-with Jambavan-king of bears-and girt round by the forces,-do thou slay this son of the Rakshasa, possessed of the strength of illusion. accompanied by his counsellors, this high-souled night-ranger shall follow at thy back, in this engagement with that one skilled in illusion." Hearing Räghava's words, Lakshmana endowed with dreadful prowess, with Bibhishana,-took up another excellent bow. And donning on his mail, and putting on his armour and his sword, and furnished with arrows, and a bow in his left hand,-Sumitra's son, touching Rāma's feet, feeling elated, addressed Rāma, saying,-"To-day the shafts discharged from my bow, piercing Ravana's son, shall fall into Lanka, even as swans drop into a tank. This very day shall my arrows, shot from my redoubtable bow-string, rive the body of that terrific one." Having spoken thus, the effulgent Lakshmana, eager to slay Ravana's son, went before his brother. And having saluted at the feet of his superior and went round him, Lakshmana set out for the sacrificial ground (named) Nikumbhita, protected by the son of Ravana. And accompanied by Bibhishana, that powerful son of the king-Lakshmana-after his brother had offered up prayers in his behalf,-set off with all speed. And surrounded by thousands of monkeys, Hanuman as well as Bibbishana together with his counsellors -speedily went in the wake of Lakshmana. And strongly encompassed by that mighty monkey-host, (Lakshmana) saw the forces of the bear-king stationed on the way. And having proceeded far, Sumitra's son-enhancer of the delight of friends-from a distance discovered the forces of the Rakshasa-monarch, drawn up in battle-array. And that subduer of enemies-Raghu's son-bearing his bow in his hand, coming upon him whose martial might lay in illusion, -stopped (there) for conquering his foe agreeably to the ordinance of Brahma. And accompanied by Biblishana, the heroic Angada, and the Wind-god's offspring, the powerful son of the king dived into the forces of the foe, various, blazing with burnished arms, dense with standards, and thronging with mighty cars,† capable of striking terrer (into the hearts of the spectators), instinct with immeasurable energy, and resembling darkness.

. The bow drawn to its full stretch, becomes circular,-T.

SECTION LXXXVI

WHEN things were in this condition, Ravana's younger brother addressed Lakshmana in words fraught with evil to fues and conducing to the welfare ( of his own party ), saying,-"Do *thou without delay bring on an engagement between this cloud-black Rakshasa army, which thou beholdest, and the monkeys having rocks for their mens. O Lakshmana, do thou exert thyself to break through his! mighty-army; and when the ranks are broken, the son of the Rakshasa-lord shall be visible. And scattering among the foes shafts resembling indra's thunder-bolt, charge him while he bath not yet finished this ceremony. Slay, O hero, this wicked one, this son of Ravana, given to illusion, and of terrific feats,—the fear of all the worlds." Hearing Bibhishana's words, Lakshmana graced with auspicious marks began to shower arrows on the son of the Rakshasachief. And bears and monkeys, given to fighting excellently with trees, to a body rushed towards that army (of Rakshai) drawn up there. And the Råkshasas (on their part) burning to slaughter the monkey-forces, rushed in the encounter with sharpened shafts and darts and tomaras. And there took place a tremendous onslaught of the monkeys and the Råkshasas. And Lankå resounded all around with that mighty Tumult; and the sky was covered with weapons of various shapes, and whetted arrows and trees and dreadful upraised mountain-tops. And Råkshasas having frightful faces and arms, plying their arms among the foremost monkeys, began to spread terror (there). And in the same way the monkeys in the conflict fell to slaying and wounding the Råkshasas with trees and hill-tops. And great was the terror that was spread among the warring Råkshasas by the flower of the bears and monkeys, possessed of gigantic persons and endowed with prodigious strength.

The optimance was that Indrajit should be slain while remaining outside Mikumbhila, histifice not set finished.—T.

+ Makdrathai (ab.) may also mosn with mighty car-warriors -T.

Andrajitte, that is.

Hearing his own army hard beset by the enemies, and drooping,-the unconquerable one, ere yet he had finished his rites, rose up. And issuing from the gloom of the trees, Ravana's son, fired with wrath, ascended his car, which had already been well yoked (with steeds). And accounted in a dreadful bow and arrows,—that one resembling a mass of collyrium, having a red face and eyes, looked dreadful like the Reaper-Death. And soon as they saw him mounted on his car, that host of Rakshas possessed of dreadful impetuosity, eager to engage with Lakshmana, stood on their ground. At this time that subduer of enemies- Hanuman-resembling a mountain, uprooted a giant tree incapable of being handled. And in that encounter, the monkey, consuming (the forces) like the fire risen at Dooms lay, made that army of Rakshasas insensible with innumerable trees. And finding the Windgod's son, Hanuman, suddenly spreading devastation among the Rakshasas by thousands, (they) showered (shafts) on him. And approaching on all sides that one resembling a hill, those bearing whetted darts attacked him with darts ; those bearing swords in their hands, with swords; those bearing javelins in their hands, with javelins; with patticar, those equipped with patticas; and with bludgeons, and maces and graceful kuntas; and with hundreds of sataghnis. and aron clubs; and with terrific axes; and with bhindipalar; and with boxes like unto thunder bolts; and slaps resembling the acani. And fired with fury, he (on his part) spread a huge havoc among them. And Indrajit saw that foremost of monkeys resembling a hill, the offspring of the Windgod-possessing himself in calmness, while destroying his foes. And thereat, he* addressed his charioteer, saying,-"Go where the monkey is. Being disregarded by the Bakshasas, he makes havoc among us." Thus accosted by him, the charioteer went where the Wind-god's off-pring was, carrying the exceedingly invincible Indrajit seated on the And rushing forward, that irrepressible one-the Rakshasa-began to shower on the monkey's head arrows and swords and patticas and scimitars and axes. bearing all those dreadful arms, the Wind-god's offspring, overcome with a mighty rage said,-"O wicked-minded son of Ravana, if thou art a hero, fight on. Combat with me with thy arms. If in the encounter, thou bearest my impetus, thes,O thou of perverse sense, thou indeed art the foremost of Rakshasas." Then Bibhishana pointed out unto Lakshmana the son of Ravana, who with his bow upraised, was eager to slay Hanuman. "This one that, mounted on his car, is eager to slav Hanuman, is the son of Ravana that hath vanquished Vāsava himself (in battle). Do thou, O son of Sumitra, with peerless shafts capable of resisting enomies,-dreadful, and competent to finish the lives (of foes),-slay the son of Ravana." Thus accosted by Bibhishana terrific unto foes, that high-souled one saw (Indrajit) of dreadful prowess, difficult to get at, and resembling a hill,-stationed on his car.

SECTION LIXXXVI

Having spoken thus unto Sumitra's son, Bibhishana sexperienced delight, and taking (Lakshmana) bearing a bow in his hand, hurriedly went off. And proceeding some way and entering the mighty wood, Biblishana pointed out unto Lakshmana the (place of) sacrifice. And the energetic brother of Ravana showed unto Lakshmana, the Nyagrodha, dreadful to behold and resembling a mass of sable clouds. "Here offering presents unto the ghosts, the powerful son of Ravana afterwards engages in conflict. Then the Rakshasa becomes invisible to all beings; and he slaveth his enemies in battle and fastens them with excellent shafts. Do thou, ere he hath passed beyond the Nyagrodha, with flaming arrows destroy the powerful son of Ravana along with his car and steeds and charioteer." Thereupon saying--'So be it,' the exceedingly energetic son of Sumitra-that delight of his friends-took up his post there, stretching his variegated bow. And Ravana's son Indrajit, endowed with strength, mailed, and armed with a sword, and furnished with a banner. was seen mounted on a fire-hued chariot. And the highly powerful Lakshmana addressed Pulastya's son, never knowing defeat, saving,-"I challenge thee to the encounter. Do thou give me battle, exerting thy utmost." Thus addressed, the exceedingly energetic and intelligent son of Ravana. seeing Bibhishana there, spoke unto him harshly, thus -"Born and bred in this (Rākshasa race) thou art the very brother of my father. Why, O Rakshasa, being my uncle. dost thou range thyself against thy son? But neither minehip, nor emity, nor race, O wicked-minded one, nor co-birth, can, O destroyer of righteousness avail to make thee discorn thy duty. O thou of perverse understanding, thou art indeed to be pitied; as thou art worthy of being repreached by the virtuous; since, renouncing thine own, thou hast espoused servitude under another. Neither by thy character nor yet thy understanding dost thou perceive the mighty-difference that lieth between living with one's own kindred, and taking refuge with the base. If one that is not our own, be furnished with every grace, and if one's own be void of all merit, -- one's kindred, albeit unworthy, is preferable; and he that is not ours, is even always such. He that, forsaking his own party, serveth that of another, is destroyed even by the latter, when his own party is destroyed. O night-ranger, such is this thy relentlessness, that, O Ravana's younger brother, thou being a kindred, art capable of displaying thy manliness (as no other person can do so)." Thus addressed by his brother's son, Bibbishana answered,-"O Rakshasa, why dost thou speak as if in ignorance of my character? O impious son of the Rakshasa chief, do thou forego the roughness which thou assumest on behalf of my dignity.* Albeit born in the mace of Rakshas of cruel deeds, yet having regard to the first of principles pertaining to men, my character is not that of a Rakshasa. I do not take pleasure in the terrible; nor do I revel in unrighteousness. But how can a brother, although differing from his brother in character, be renounced by the latter? One renouncing a person, lansing from virtue and bent on sinful acts, attaineth happiness, even as one doth by shaking off a venomous snake from his hand. The wise have called that impious one given to stealing others' goods and violating others' wives, -as worthy of being forsaken, even like a bonse that is aflame .- Robbing others' property, outraging the wives of others, and inspiring fear among friends,-these three vices lead to destruction. The dreadful slaughter of sages.

* Or, on account of thy heroism.

† Some read Pinkamaçilana. Then the sense would be: How else could a brother hearing pifference in character, tenounce his brother P manning blance.—T.

rebellion against all the gods, overweening conceit, anger. tong-continued enmity, and running amuck of counsel,these sins are sapping the life and fortune of my brother; and they have hidden his virtues even as clouds cover a mountain. It is on account of these vices that my brother, thy sire, hath been deserted by me. And this city of Lanka will not be, nor thou, nor thy father. Thou art proud, and haughty, and a boy. O Rakshasa. Thou art fettered by the noose of Fate. Do thou say unto me whatever thou likest. To-day. thou hast addressed harshly me, who have fallen on evil days; but, O worst of Rakshasas, thou canst not pass this Nyagrodha. Having smitten the Kakutstha, thou canst not live. Fight with that man-god, Lakshmana, in encounter. Being slain, thou shalt serve the deities in the abode of Yama. Displaying thy own prowess, do thou spend all thy weapons and all thy shafts. But coming within the ken of Lakshmana's arrows, thou wilt not to-day go hence, hving, with thy forces."

SECTION LXXXVIII.

Hearing Bibbishana's words, the son of Ravana, deprived of his senses by passion, spoke harshly, and rushed forward in wrath. And with upraised weapons and scimitars, he, resembling the Destroyer lumself, was mounted on a mighty car yoked with black steeds, and ornamented (on all sides). And that one endowed with terrific strength upraised a huge, gigantic, strong and powerful bow, and shafts capable of destroying foes. And that mighty towman and slayer of foes—the powerful son of Ravana—adorned (with ornaments) and mounted on his chariot, saw him

dight (with his own splendour). And fired with wrath, (Indrajit) addressed Sumitra's son, who, mounted on Hanuman's back, like unto the risen sun in splendour-accompanied Bibhishana; and he also addressed all those principal monkeys, saying,-"Do ye behold my prowess! To-day do ye in the conflict bear my arrows shower shot from my bow. incapable of being approached, and resembling the downpour in the sky. To-day my shafts discharged from my mighty bow shall mangle your limbs, even as fire burneth up a heap of cotton. To-day with your persons pierced with sharp shafts, with darts, and javelins, and rishtis and arrows, shall I despatch you all to the abode of Yama. Who shall stay before me, fleet-handed, creating an arrowy shower in the field, and roaring like unto clouds? Formerly in a night-engagement, with my shafts resembling the thunderbolt and vajra, ye two along with your foremost adherents, were rendered insensible and laid down on the earth by me. But, perhaps, thou hast forgotten it. As thou hast presented thyself for battle before me, fired with wrath and resembling a venomous serpent, it is evident thou wilt go to the region of Yama." Hearing the vaunt of the Rakshasachief, Raghu's son, inflamed with rage, with as undaunted countenance, spoke unto Rāvana's son,-"O Rākshasa, hard is the achievement of the task that thou hast mentioned. He that compasseth business by act is alone intelligent .-But thou, O wicked-minded one, incompetent as thou art to bring about thy end, attaining thy arduous aim by words only, deemest thyself as crowned with success. That thou hadst rendered thyself invisible in the field of conflict, was the work of a thief, -and not the way of a hero. Coming within the range of thy shafts, I stay here,-do thou display thy prowess. What dost thou say in words?" addressed, the mighty Indrajit-conquerer of enemies-stretching his dreaded bow, showered sharpened shalts. discharged by him, those exceedingly impetuous arrows, resembling the venom of serpents, hitting Lakshmane, fell down like unto hissing snakes. And in that encounter, Ravana's son-Indrajit-possessed of eminent impetuosity, pierced Lakshmana, graced with auspicious marks, with vehement shafts. And pierced with those arrows and bathed in blood, the graceful Lakshmana appeared like a smokeless fire. And seeing his own feat, Indrajit, coming forward, and setting up a tremondous cry, said,—"O son of Sumitra, my feathered and sharp-edged shafts shot from my bow, capable of destroying life, will to-day finish thee up. To-day. O Lakshmana, swarms of jackals and hosts of hawks and vultures shall alight on thee lying lifeless, baving been slain by me. This very day shall the exceedingly wicked Rama behold thee, who art the friend of Kshatriyas and devoted unto thy brother,—and who ever bearest thyself ignobly, slain by me; to-day see thee, O Sumitra's son slain by me, with thy armour fallen off thy person, thy bow broken, and thy head severed." As Ravana's son was speaking thus harshly, Lakshmana conversant with the import of words, replied in a reasonable speech, saying,-"Leave off thy strength of tongue, O thou of perverse sense, O Rakshasa, O thou of crooked ways! Wherefore dost thou speak thus? Bring all this to pass in worthy deed. Why, O Rakshasa, without doing (what thou sayest), dost thou simply say it? Do the deed,-so that I may have regard for thy utterances. Mark! without speaking anything harsh, without censuring thee in the least, without venting any brag, shall, I, O cannibal, slay thee." Saying this, Lakshmana drawing his bow to its full bent, hit at the Rakshasa's chest five narachaswondrous impetuous arrows. And those arrows resembling flatning serpents, with their velocity accelerated by the feathers (with which they were furnished), blazed on the Nairita's breast like the rays of the Sun. And wounded with those shafts, Ravana's son, fired with wrath, pierced Lakshmuna with three arrows discharged (from his bow).

And exceedingly dreadful was the encounter that took place between those leonine man and Rakshasa, each eager to conquer the other. And both powerful, and both endowed with strength and possessed of prowess,—and both exceedingly invincible; and both baving unparalleled might and energy,—those heroes faught like two planets in the welkin; or like Bala and Vrita, irresistible in conflict; and those high-souled ones faught like two lions. And showering countless shafts and displaying many maneuvers, that foremest of men and that of Rakshasas, faught on cheerfully.

SECTION LXXXIX.

 ${f T}_{ ext{HEN}}$  sighing like an enraged serpent, that chastiser of foes, Daçaratha's son, setting shafts (on his bow-string) showered them on the Rakshasa-chief. And hearing the twang of his bow-string the lord of Rakshasas, with his countenance fallen, gazed at Lakshmana. And then Bibbishana spoke unto Sumitra's son as he was fighting, "I find (inauspicious) signs in Rāvana's son. fore hasten on,-broken he is, without doubt." fixing arrows (on his bow) resembling venomous snakes, he let go those keen shafts, like unto serpents furnished with poison. And smit by Lakshmana with arrows having the touch of the levin, (Indrajit) for a while was stupified and had his senses overwhelmed. And eying that hero-son unto Daçaratha-present in the encounter, (Indrajit) with his eyes crimsoned in choler, drew near Sumitra's son. And coming up to him (Lakshmana), he again addressed (that hero) in a harsh speech, saying,-"Dost thou not remember my prowess at that first encounter, when thou along with thy brother was bound up,-that now thou art discharging, arms (at me)? Forsooth ye two in mighty encounter, with shafts resembling the thunder-bolt and vaira, by me were first laid down on the ground, deprived of your lives, along with your principal adherents. Either this hath escaped thy memory or I fancy, thou plainly wishest to go to the abode of Yama,-inasmuch as thou hast set thy heart on beating me. If at the first encounter thou hast not witnessed my prowess, to-day shall I show it unto thee. Do thou now stay, summoning thy attention." Seeing this, he pierced Lakshmana with seven shafts, and Hanuman with ten keenedged excellent shafts. And then, fired with double fury, that powerful one pierced Bibhishana with an hundred arrows, powerfully discharged (from his weapons). Seeing this act of Indrajit, that foremost of men, Rama's younger brother, Lakshmana, with an undaunted countenance, fired with wrath without minding the same, -and saying with a laugh,-'This is nothing',-taking dreadful arrows, in the conflict, discharged them at the son of Ravana. "O nightrangers, heroes, coming to the field never discharge (such shafts as these). These arrows of thine are light and of slight strength, and they conduce to my comfort. Heroic warriors, eager for encounter, do not fight thus." Speaking thus, (Lakshmana) accoutred with his bow showered vollies of shafts (on his adversary). And at his arrows (hitting), (Indarjit's) mighty golden mail fell off his person, and dropped to the platform of his car like a cluster of stars dropping from the welkin. And with his armour dropping off, that hero-Indrajit-was wounded with narachas, like the Sun at dawn. That hero-Ravana's son-endowed with dreadful prowess, in that conflict, pierced Lakshmana with a thousand shafts. And thereat Lakshmana's gorgeous and mighty mail was rent in pieces. And each rushing forward was engaged in dealing blows and harrying them. And sighing again and again, they faught furiously. And with their persons cut all over, and laved in blood, for a long while the heroes kept cleaving each other with sharpened shafts. And those high-souled ones versed in warfare, and endowed with terrific prowess exerted their utmost in securing victory. And covered with vollies of shafts, with their armour and banners rept, they drew each other's warm blood flowing like water from a fountain. And they discharged dreadful showers attended with tremendous sounds. like the sounds of black clouds at Dooms-day* pouring torrents in the sky. And a long time went by as they faught. did they turn away from the encounter, or know fatigue. And those foremost of those acquainted with weapons repeatedly displayed their weapons; and their long and short shafts enveloped the welkin. And the skill that they displayed was perfect, and showed lightness, variety and grace; and both man and the Rakshasa carried on fearful and terrible conflict. And the dreadful and tremendous roars of each were audible (at that place); and terrific like the levin, they made the hearts of hearers tremble (in terror). And as they faught with might and main, the sounds that they sent resembled the deep rumbling of clouds in the sky. And pierced with narachas knobbed with gold, those powerful and illustrious (warriors) with their hearts set on celebrity, bled profusely. And in that engagement goldknobbed shafts hitting each other's person, pierced the same and covered with gore, entered the earth. And other shafts were resisted in the sky by sharpened weapons; and some were snapped, and thousands of their arrows were cleft (in the sky). And in that field, the vollies of their shafts were dreadful to behold like unto a heap of Kuça aflame in a sacrifice. And the wounded frames of those high-souled ones appeared beautiful like a leafless, flowering Kinçuka and Salmali in a wood. And each eager to vanquish the other, ladrajit and Lakshmana momentarily discharged tremendous and terrific showers (of arms). And Lakshmana smiting Ravana's son, and Ravana's son smiting Lakshmana,—they did not experience any fatigue. And with net-works of arrows deeply entering their persons, those vehement and exceedingly powerful ones resembled mountains topped (with trees). And all their limbs, drenched in blood and covered with arrows, looked like a blazing fire. And a great while did they fight; yet they neither turned away (from the fight), nor did they experience any exhaustion. Then to remove (Lakshmana's) fatigue from fight, the high-souled Bibhishana, working the weal of Lakshmana staying in front of the field, came forward in the encounter and took up his post.

* Kalamaghaye (gen). The commentator says the word means (black clouds; but I prefer the sense given.—T.

SECTION LXL.

Seeing the man and the Rākshasa engaged in battle, with their whole soul, each eager to beat the other,—like unto elephants with the temporal juice trickling from their temples,—desirous of beholding their encounter, Rāvana's mighty and heroic brother, bearing an excellent bow, stood in front of the arena. And taking up his post, he stretched his great bow and shot terrific sharp-pointed shafts at the Rākshasas. And even like thunder-bolt cleaving mighty mountains, those shafts furnished with peacock's plumes falling powerfully (upon the foe), rent the Rākshasas. And those foremost of Rākshasas, Bibhishana's followers, also, in the encounter discharged darts and scimitars and patticas at heroic Rākshasas. And surrounded by those Rākshasas, Bibhishana, then in the midst of his followers, appeared like an elephant in the midst of young ones. Then laciting the monkeys, whose dear object was to slay Ravana, that one versed in time, the foremost of Rakshasas, spoke seasonably thus,-"This one that stayeth (in the field) is the sole and mighty support of the Rakshasa-chief; and this is his remaining force. Why then do the monkey-chiefs remain inactive? On this wicked Rakshasa being slain on the edge of battle, the remnant of his army, with the single exception of Ravana, is destroyed. That hero-Prahasta-hath been slain, and Nikumbha possessed of wondrous strength, and and Kumbha, and the night-ranger Kambhakarna. Dhumtāksha, and Jāmyumāli, and Mahāmāli, and Tikshnavega and Hemaprabha, and Suptaghna, and Jajnakopa, and the Rākshasa Vajradanstra, Sankrādi, and Vikata, and Arighna, and Tapana, and Manda, and Praghasa, and Prajangha, and Jangha, and Agniketu, and Durdharsha, and the powerful Racmiketus and Viddojjibha, and Dwijibha, and the Rakshasa-Suryyaçatru, and Akampana, and Supārçwa, and the Rākshasas-Chakramāli, and Kampana, and Satwavanta, and Devāntaka and Narantaka. -Having slain these many powerful Rakshasas endowed with excess of might,-having crossed the sea with your arms, do ye cross this foot print of a cow. This is the remaining force which you monkeys must conquer; all those Rakshasas, that had come forward, elated with the pride of strength, have all been slain. It is not meet for me to slay the son of my brother, yet, casting off compassion will I for Rama slay him.* Tears surcharge the eyes of me who seeketh to slay him. Let therefore Lakshmana administer him his quietus. Ye monkeys, do ye in a body (first) slaughter those that are beside him (Indrajit.)" Thus exborted by that illustrious Rakshasa, the monkey-chiefs were exhilarated and began to flourish their tails. And then those mighty monkeys roared again and again, and sent up various shouts, even as peacocks cry on seeing clouds. And then Jambavan surrounded by his own forces, assailed the Rakshasas with rocks and with their nails and taeth. Thereat Rakshasas, endowed with exceeding strength. equipped with various weapons reproaching the lord of bears, as he was engaged in smiting (the foe),-and renouncing fear, with shafts and sharp axes and patticas and yashtis, and tomaras, in the encounter assailed Jambavan, who was engaged in beating the Rākshasa forces. And that conflict between the monkeys and the Rakshas, waxed furious, like unto the tumultuous encounter of the immortals and the Asuras fired with wrath. And the magnanimous Hanuman incapable of being approached growing wroth,uprooting a mountain, and putting down Lakshmana from his back, began a great carnage among the Rakshasas by thousands. And fighting a furious fight with his uncle, the powerful Indrajit-slayer of hostile heroes-again rushed against Lakshmana. And then there took place an encounter between those heroes in the field.-Lakshmana and the Rakshasa-discharging vollies of shafts and smiting each other; and those mighty and impetuous ones repeatedly covered each other with networks of arrows: like unto the sun and the moon covered by clouds at the expiration of Summer. And on account of their light-handedness, neither discharge of arrows, nor the drawing of the bow; nor the setting of the shaft on the bow-string; nor the taking of the bow; nor the selection of shafts; nor the clenching fast of their fists; nor the hitting of aims,-could be perceived as they faught on. And in consequence of the sky being covered with networks of arrows all around, discharged powerfully from their bows, the forms (of objects) could not be discovered. And Lakshmana having at Ravana's son, and Ravana's son having at Lakshmana, critical was huggermugger that ensued* in the encounter between each other. And they both kept ceaselessly showering feathered and sharpened shafts, the firmament was engulphed with a deep darkness. And in consequence of countless keen arrows alighting in hundreds, all sides and all the cardinal quarters were swarming with shafts. And all being overspread with gloom, a mighty fright took possession (of creatures) when the Sun having ascended the setting-hill, and darkness environing all objects. And that day# mighty torrents of blood flowed in thousands of streams; and fierce beasts of prey set up terrific yells (all around). And at that hour the wind did not blow, and fire did not blaze; and the Maharshis said,—'Fair befell creatures.' And the Gandharvas along with the Charanas grew exceedingly agitated. Then Sumitra's son pierced the four black steeds of the leonine Rakshasa, caparisoned in gold. And then he hit at (Indrajit's) charioteer with another yellow and sharpened javelin splendid, furnished with feathers; and resembling the thunder-bolt of the great Indra. And through his fleet handedness the graceful son of Raghu with the thunder-bolt of his shaft, resonant with the sound of his palm, separated the (charioteer's head) from his trunk. And on his charioteer slain the exceedingly energetic son having been Mandodari, himself began to perform the function of a charioteer, and took up his bow. And this in the encounter was wonderful to behold. And then as (Indrajit) was eagerly engaged in managing the steeds, (Lakshmana) pierced him with sharpened shafts; and when (Indrajit) was eagerly wielding his bow, (Lakshmana) discharged shafts at his steeds. And on his steeds having been torn with shafts, Sumitra'sforemost of fleet-handed-in the encounter assailed (Indrajit) doubtlessly ranging the field. Seeing his charioteer slain in the contest, Ravana's son forewent his martial ardour, and was cast down. And seeing the Rakshasa with his face fallen, the leaders of monkey-bands, were exceedingly delighted and rendered homage unto Lakshmana. And then those monkey-chiefs-Pramathi, Rabhasa, Sarabha and Gandamadana, not brooking (their foe) summoned their impetuosity. And suddenly springing up, those highly powerful monkeys endowed with terrific prowess descended upon those four best of steeds. And on those chargers being assailed by those monkeys resembling mountains, blood gushed out of their mouths. And then the steeds were smashed and sent to the ground. And having slain the steeds, and smitten the mighty car-warrior,* again by a vehement bound, came to the side of Lakshmana. And springing down from his car whose steeds had been slain, Ravana's son, his charioteer having been pounded, charged the son of Sumitra with arrows. And then Lakshmana resembling the great Indra, on (Indrajit's) best of chargers having been despatched, in the encounter began to terribly rive with arrows discharged (his foe) footing on the earth and showering excellent sharpened shafts.

* The text has 'brother's son.'

* i. e. in consequence of all sides being covered with arrows, neither the

Rakshas not the monkeys could distinguish their several parties in the seconder, and the blows that each dealt were raisdirected in consequence.--T.

. Aire to-day in the text.

SECTION LXLI.

AVING his steeds slain, the night-ranger—Indrajit. standing on the ground, waxing fiercely angered, flamed up in energy. And armed with bows, they, desirous of slaying each other with shafts resembled an elephant and a bull in a forest, came out for securing victory in encounter. And * Maharatham (ac.) may also mean mighty car. By the way the samese or junction called Tatpuruska is a frequent source of obscurity in Sanskrit, specially where the gender of the word without samesa is the same with that of the thirg signified by the samesa, as in this case.—T.

slaughtering one another, the Rakshasas and the woodrangers, rushing this way and that, did not (for a moment) leave their lords. Then Ravana's son, gladdening all the Rakshasase and himself feeling cheered, addressed them in words of praise, saying,-"All sides are entirely enveloped in this gloom,-so that, O foremost of Räkshasas, here we do not know who belongeth unto us and who not .- Do ye fight fearlessly for stupifying the monkeys; and I too. mounted on a car, shall come hither into the conflict. Do ye so het that the high souled rangers of the woods may not attack me as I enter the city." Saying this, that slayer of foes-Ravana's son, deceiving the wood-rangers, entered the city of Lanka for providing himself with a (fresh) car. And embetlishing a chariot, graceful and adorned with gold, furnished with pragas and swords and arrows, yoked with superb steeds, and driven by a charioteer. knowing borses and possessed of instructions (anent his art),-that victor in battle-the exceedingly energetic son of Rayana-ascended it. And that hero, Man lodari's son, urged on by the force of the Finisher, went out of the city. surrounded by the foremost Rakshasas; and drawn by fastspeeding steeds, he presented himself before Lakshmana along with Bibhishana. And seeing Rāvana's son scated on the car, the son of Sumitra and the exceedingly powerful monkeys and the Rakshasa-Bibbishana-were highly amazed at the lighthandedness of that intelligent one. And Ravana's son, waxing furious, in that contest began to bring down monkeys by hundreds and by thousands. And that victor in battle-Ravana's son-fired with wrath, summoning all his celerity, slaughtered monkeys, drawing his bow into a circle. And slaughtered by narhchas of terrific impetuosity, the monkeys saught the shelter of Sumitia's son, like creatures seeking the refuge of their Lord. Then the son of, Raghu, fliming up in martial wrath, severed his* Low, displaying his fleethandedness. Thereat, taking another bow. (Indrajit) hurriedly fastened the string to it. And this bow also did Lakshmana cut off by means of a brace of arrows. And when (Indrajit) had his bow severed, Sumitra's son pierced the son of Ravana with five shafts resembling the wenom of a poisonous serpent. And the shafts discharged from his mighty bow, piercing his person, dropped to the earth like unto powerful red serpents. And having his bow cut off, Ravana's son, vomitting blood by his mouth, took up a superior bow powerful to a degree and having a stock string. And then aiming at Lakshmana, he, summoning his utmost celerity, showered arrows, as showereth Purandara in the season of rains. Thereat Lakshmana, subduer of enemies, retaining his calmness, resisted that powerful arrowy shower shot by Indrant. And then that exceedingly energetic one, Raghu's son, possessing himself in calmness. displayed (his prowess) unto the son of Ravana; and this was wonderful (to behold). And then displaying his lightness in the use of weapons, Lakshmana, growing furious, pierced the Rakshasas with three arrows each in that mighty encounter; and the lord of Rakshasas struck him with showers of shafts. And pierced sore by that powerful enemy-slayer of foes-he incessantly sent innumerable arrows after Lakshmana. And ere they reached their destination, that slayer of hostile heroes severed them with whetted arrows; and in the encounter that righteous one and foremost of car-warriors with a dart having bent joints, cut off the head of his charioteer mounted on the car. And deprived of their driver, there the steeds, retaining their calmness, began to go in rounds,-and this was wonderful. Then Sumitra's son of steady prowess, fired with anger, in that contest, frightening all, pierced his horses with arrows. And not brooking that act (of his adversary), Rayana's son

Lakshmana's.

† Indrajit's

in the encounter pierced with ten shafts Sumitra's son capable of making people's down stand on end. And his shafts resembling thunderbolts, and like unto all varieties of venom, touching (Laksimana's) mail having a golden splendour, were reduced to naught. Thereat considering Lakshmana as cladin an impenetrable armour, Ravana's son-Indrajit-growing furiously enraged, displaying his lighthandedness in arms. pierced Lakshmana in the temples with three well-knobbed shafts. And with those arrows lodged in his temples. Raghu's son, delighting in battle, appeared beautiful in the field like a mountain furnished with three summits. Albeit thus smitten in the contest by the Raksha with shafts. Lakshmana swiftly smote him in turn with five arrows; and in the encounter Lakshmana drawing his bow, pierced with shafts Indrajit's face graced with elegant ear-rings, those heroes-Lakshmana and Indrajit-equipped exceedingly powerful bows, and endowed with heroism and dreadful prowess, wounded each other with sharp arrows. And both Lakshmana and Indrajit, with their persons bathed in blood in that encounter, appeared like unto flowering Kincukas. And approaching each other, those bowmen, each setting his heart on victory, wounded each other all over the body with terrific shafts. Then Ravana's son, carried away by martial rage, pierced Bibbishana in his handsome face with three arrows. And piercing the lord of Rakshasas, Bibbishans, he with three iron-headed arrows, pierced the monkey-leaders each with a shaft. Thereat, enraged at him more furiously than ever, the exceedingly energetic Bibbishana with his mace despatched the steeds of the wicked-minded son of Ravana. Then jumping down from his chariot with its horses slain, (Indeajit), endowed with great energy, who had his charioteer pounded, discharged a dark at his uncle. And sceing it descend, the enhancer of Sumitra's joy severed the same with whetted arrows and brought it down in ten fragments to the ground. And Biblishana of a tough bow, growing entaged, discharged at (Indrajit), who had his steeds slain, five speeding shalts having the touch of the thunder-bult .- And those arrows Surpished with gold at the feathered parts, riving his person, were bathed in blood, and resembled mighty red serpents. Thereat wroth with his nucle, Indrajit took up an excellent shaft-bestowed on him by Yama himself-endowed with terrific force,-the flower of shafts among all the Rakshas. And seeing that mighty shaft set by him (on the bowstring), the highly powerful Likshmana, possessed of dreadful prowess, (in his turn) took up another arrow, bestowed by Kovera himself of immeasurable soul in a dream,-unconquerable, and incapable of being borne even by the celestials and Asuras with Indra at their head. And on their best of bows being powerfully drawn with their arms resembling bludgeons, they set up cries like unto Kraunchas. And on those foremost of shafts set on those excellent bows of those heroes, being drawn, flamed up in exceeding splendour. And those flaming arrows, discharged from the hows, illumining the welkin, with vehemence struck at each other's head. And a concussion took place of those arrows of terrific aspects; and a furious fire sprang up thereat, with embers shooting around. And dashing against each other like unto mighty planets, they, reduced to an hundred shivers in the encounter, saught the earth. Seeing their shafts baffled, Indrajit and Lakshmana, staying on the edge of the battle, were seized with shame and wrath. Thereat Sumitra's son, flying into a fury, took up a Varuna weapon. And the conquerer of the great Indra intent on battle, in the encounter discharged a terrific Raudra weapon : and the exceedingly wonderful Varuna weapon was baffled by him. Then, waxing wroth, that victor in battle-the wondrous energetic Indrajit-as if annihilating the world, discharged a firming Agneya weapon. And the heroic Equahmana resisted it with a Solar weapon. Seefing his weapon resisted, Ravana's son, transported with passion took up an Asura arrow, capable of rending foes. And from that weapou issued daggers and clubs and darts and bhucundis and maces and swords and axes.* And in the conflict, seeing that dire and dreadful weapon, irrisistible to all creatures and capable of riving all arms, the effulgent Likshinana baffled it with a Mahegwarat weapon. And the encounter that took place between them was wonderful and capable of making people's down stand on end. And beings stationed in the sky surrounded Lakshmana on all sules. And m that terrific encounter of the monkeys and the Rakshasas resounding with dreadful rours, the welkin was covered with innumerable beings seized with wonderment, saints and Pitris and deities and Gandharbas and birds and serpents, placing Satakratu in their front, protected Lakshmana in the conflict. And then that hero, Raghava's younger brother, fixed (on his bow) another superior shaft, having the feel of fire, itself, and capable of riving the son of Ravana; furnished with fair feathers; tapering; having elegant joints; symmetrical; and plated with gold,-an arrow capable of finishing the body; irrisistible; dreadful; terrific unto Rakshasas; resembling the venom of poisonous serpents; and worshipped by the celestial hosts; by which the exceedingly energetic and wonderful Lord riding the horset-Sakraof old in the war between the celestials and the Asuras had defeated the Danavas. And Sumitra's son, Lakshmana graced with auspiciousness, drawing on his best of bows that foremost of shafts-the Amdra weapon-invincible in conflict, spoke these words, tending to bring about his success. 4-

* This arrow resembled somewhat the bomb shells to modern European wasfare.—T.

† i.e. belonging to Maheçwara or Sira.

The celestial steed, Uchchaigrava, sprung from the ocean on the signation of the charsing of the deep.-T.

Words addressed to the deity presiding over the weapon.

"MDacaratha's son-Rama-is righteous and truthful, and if in prowess he hath no rival, then slay this son of Ravana." Saying this, the heroic Lakshmana in that conflict, drawing the straight-speeding arrow up to his ear, " discharged it at Indrajit. And shooting the Aindra weapon, that destroyer of heatile heroes-Lakshmana -severing from its trunk the head of Indrajit with its corslet, graced with burning ear-rings, brought it down to the ground. And the mighty severed head of the Rakshasa's son, resembling one made of gold, was seen covered with blood. And slain, Ravana's son dropped to the earth, with his armour and corslet on, and his bow fallen (from his grasp). And then all the monkeys with Biblishana set up cheers, even as the immortals cheered at the destruction of Vritra. And in the sky there arose the victorious shouts of all beings and high souled saints, and also of Gandharbas and Apsaras. And knowing (Indrajit) fallen (in fight), the mighty army of Rāsshasas, attacked by monkeys burning for victory, fled in the ten cardinal directions. And assailed by the monkeys, the Rakshasas, pursued (by their foes), with their senses lost, rushed towards Lanka, leaving their arms behind. And overwhelmed with fright, Rakshasas fled in an hundred directions, all renouncing their arms-bearded darts, and swords, and axes. And harassed by the monkeys, some hurriedly entered Lanka, and some plunged into the sea, and some saught shelter in the mountains. And seeing Indrajit slain and lying down one the field of battle, thousands of Rakshasas fled away. As when the Sun sets, his rays remain no longer, on that Rākshasa having fallen, the Rākshasas dispersed in the ten cardinal quarters, like unto the Sun when his rays have been rendered mild, or fire which hath been extinguished. And the mighty-armed (Indrajit) was utterly reft of life. And on the son of the Rakshasa-chief falling, the world, having its for slain, with its huge affliction gone off, experienced the height of joy. And on that unrighteous Rakshasa having been slain, the reverend Sakia together with the Maharshis was filled with delight. And sounds of kettledrums were heard in the sky proceeding from the celestials. And blossoms were showered by dancing Apsaras and high-souled Gandharbas. And this was wonderful (to behold.) And on that Rakshasa of fell deeds having been slain, the dust was laid, the water became transparent, the sky looked bright, and the deities and Danavas were filled with rejoicings. And on that Dread of all creatures having been slain, the gods, Gandharbas and Danavas, assembled together in joy, said,-"Now let the Brahmanas who have their sins removed, with their anxiety gone off, range about." And then the monkey-leaders, seeing that foremost of Nairitas of unparalleled prowess slain in battle, began to gladly pay homage (unto Lakshmana). And Bibbishana and Hanuman and lambavan-leader of bears-saluted and hymned Lakshmana on the score of his victory. shouting and bounding and roaring, the monkeys at this hour of high joy stood surrounding Raghu's son. And flourishing their tails and striking the earth (with them), the monkeys shouted,-'Victory unto Lakshmana !' And embracing each other, the monkeys with delighted spirits began to converse in various ways touching Raghava's welfare. And beholding that deed, difficult of being done, performed by their beloved friend-Lakshmana-and hearing their foe-Indrajit-slain (in battle), the celestials attained the summit of joy.

* i.e. drawing the bow to its utmost street.

Descendant, that is,

SECTION LXLII.

HAVING in the conflict slain that conquerer of enemies, Lakshmana graced with auspicious marks, with his body bathed in blood, experienced delight. And then supporting himself on Biblishana and Hanuman, the exceedingly powerful Lakshmana endowed with prowess, Jambavan, Hanuman and all the monkeys with him, speedily went to the place where Sugriva and Raghava were. And then going round Rama and saluted him, Sumitra's son stood before his brother, like Indra's brother staying before Sakra. And approaching with a look which of itself was significant,* the heroic Bibbishana described unto the highsouled Raghava the dreadful destruction of Indrant. And then the delighted Bibhishana related unto Rama how the high-souled Lakshmana had cut off the head of Ravana's son. And as soon as that exceedingly powerful one heard of the destruction of Indrajit by Lakshmana, he experienced a huge accession of joy, and thus delivered himself .--"Excellent, O Lakshmana! Pleased am I (with thee). Thou hast performed a difficult feat. The son of Ravana having been slain, know for certain that we have been victorious." And then smelling the head of the hashful Lakshmana, enhancer of fame, (Rama) endowed with prowess, from affection forcibly hugged him into his lap. And making him seat on his lap, and overpowering him with embraces,* (Rama) again and again tenderly eyed his brother, Lakshmana. And moved with grief, that best of persons. Rama, smelling the head of Lakshmana, wounded with darts and having his person pierced (with arms), sighing and breathing hard -

i. e. of the destruction of Indrajit.

† Acapiritam—(ac) poince: Ramanuya says this epithet refers to Lakehmana's having been wounded in the encounter. I differ from him.—T.

and nursing his body with his hand, addressed Lakshmana, soothing him, - 'To-day his son having been slain, I deem Ravana himself as slain in fight. On that wicked-minded enemy of nine having been destroyed, I am victorious (in encounter). By luck, Olhero, hast thou in conflict severed the right arm of the fell Ravana. Verily he (Indrajit) was his stay. Both Bibhishana and Hanuman have done mighty deeds in battle. In three days and nights, (my enemy) hath been brought down. To-day have I been made foeless. Now Ravana will for certain march forth,-backed by a mighty phalanx. Ravana will for certain sally out, hearing his son brought down. That unconquerable lord of Rākshasas, aggrieved for the destruction of his son, marching out,shall I slay, environed with a mighty force. O Lakshmana, the conqueror of Sakra having in battle been slain by theewho art my lord-Sita and the (entire) earth are not incapable of being obtained by me." Having thus soothed and embraced his brother, Raghu's son-Rama-highly rejoiced, calling Sushena, said,-"Do thou so act that this highly wise son of Sumitra, devoted to his friends, may be healed and be eased. Do thou without delay heal Sumitra's son, attached to his friends, of his wounds. And do thou also carefully relieve all those heroes in the army of bears and monkeys fighting with trees,-as well as others, who have been wounded and have got sores (in consequence)." Thus addressed by Rama, the high-souled monkey-leader administered a potent medicine to the nose of Lakshmana. And smelling the same, he got healed; he was relieved of his pain and his outgoing vitality was shut up. And at the mandate of Raghava he likewise treated his friends headed by Biblishana and all the principal monkeys. And restoged to his natural condition, Sumitra's son, healed, and with his exhaustion removed, and his suffering gone off in a moment, experienced exhitaration of spirits. And Rama and the monkey king and Biohishana and the powerful lord of before along with their hosts, seeing Sumitra's son risen halo, rejoiced greatly in delight. And the high-souled son of Daçaratha honored exceedingly that exceedingly hard feat of Lakshamana, and the monkey-king, hearing that the conquerer of Sakra had fallen in fight, was filled with joy.

BECTION LXLIII.

THEN the counsellors of Pulastya's son, hearing of Indrajit having been slain, speedily conveyed the tidings unto the Ten necked one, who was ignorant* of the same. "O mighty monarch, in our very sight they exceedingly effulgent son hath been slain by Likshmana with the help of Bibbishana. And that hero confronted by the (other) hero, hath been vanquished in fight. And the hero, thy son, the conquerer of the celestial chief, hath also been slain by Lakshmana. And having gratified Lakshmana with his shafts, he hath repaired to the supreme regions." Hearing of that mighty terror, vis., the rueful and dreadful destruction of his son, Indrajit, in battle, he straightway awooned away. Then regaining his consciousness after a long while, that foremost of Rakshasas-the king-overwhelmed with grief for his son, and distressed, burst into Inmentations, with his senses wildered,-thus,-"O foremost In the Rakshasa army! O my child endowed with high might! Having conquered Indra himself, wherefore to-day hast thou come under the sway of Lakshmana? Doubtless. thou enraged could pierce with thy arrows the Destroyer of Time himself, and the summit of Mandara, - what shall I say Avojudys. Râmânuya says it means "ignorant of the same." Think they it means, "Seeing." Then the seam would be, 'the committees, haring "first sees findmit slam, informed Râvana of it.'—T.

of Lakshmana in encounter? To-day king Viwacwata bath raised himself immensely in my estimation, for to-day he, O mighty-armed one, hath brought thee under the law of Time, But this is the way of capable warriors as well as celestials. He that layeth down his life for his lord, repaireth to heaven. To-day seeing Indrajit slain, the deities and the guardians of the worlds, and the mighty saints, their fear gone off, shall sleep peacefully. This triple world and this entire earth with her woods, reft of one-Indrajit-appear to me as vacant. To-day shall I hear the cries of the daughters of the Nairitas in my inner apartment, like unto the roars of she-elephants in a mountain-cavern. Renouncing thy state of an heirapparent, and Lanka and the Rakshas, O subduer of enemies, and thy mother, and me, and thy wife-whither hast thou gone, (leaving) us all t O hero, I having gone to the region of Yama, thou ought to have performed my last rites, but thou standest in a relation the very reverse of this.* And Sogriva living and Lakshmana and Raghava, without extracting my dart, whither hast thou gone, leaving us all ? And then arising from the disaster that had befallen his son, a mighty wrath overcame the lord of Rakshasas-Rayana, as be was thus indulging in lamentations. And even as in summer, the (Solar) rays flame up the Sun, the destruction of his son flamed up all the hercer, him, who was naturally irascible. And as he kept yauning in passion, a flaming fire with smoke darted from his mouth, even as it did from the mouth of Vritra. And burning in grief for the destruction of his son, and coming under masterdom of passion, that bero-Ravana-reflecting (awhile) in his mind, resolved upon elaying Vaidehi. And naturally red, and reddened (still more by the fire of wrath, Ravana's glowing eyes were dreadful (to behold). And his form, terrific by nature, in for I have to perform thy last rites, thou having fullen in fight while I san alice. T.

consequence of the fire of his wrath having possessed it entirely, resembled the form of the enraged Rudra. And from the eyes of that insuriated one fell drops of tears as drop from a flaming lamp drops of burning oil. And as he grinded his teeth, the guashing resembled the sounds sent by the machine" drawn by the Danavas and churning the deep. The Rakshasas durst not approach that one eying round and resembling the Destroyer himself, intent on devouring both mobile and immobile. Then exceedingly enraged, Ravana-lord of Rakshasas-spoke in the midst of the Rakshasas, inciting them to battle,-"I practised severe austerities for thousands of years; and gratified the Selfsprung at times. Neither from Asuras nor from celestials can any fear spring to me. My mail conferred on me by Brahmä, which in effulgence resembles the Sun himself, was not broken by blows like unto thunder bolt at the war between the detties and demons. To-day who will come forward against me in battle accounted in that and mounted on a car in the conflict? Not even Purandara himself. Do ve, beating hundreds of drums, to-day raise that mighty and dreadful bow of mine which, with arrows, had been bestowed on one by the gratified Self-sprung at the war of the gods and Asuras,-so that I may therewith compass the destruction of Rama and Lakshmana in mighty battle." Burning (in grief) for the destruction of his son, the fell Ravana, coming under the influence of anger, reflecting (in his mind). resolved to slay Sita. And eying round, that copper-eved and dreadful one of a terrific aspect, distressed, in a piteous voice addressed all the night-rangers, saying,-"By his power of illusion, my beloved child, for deceiving the woodrangers, slaying something (else), had shown it unto them Now will I do that good office myself .--Vaidehi will I slay-even her that is devoted to that friend of Kshatriyas." Having spoken thus unto his counsellors.

he swiftly took up a sword; and raising it, of excellent temper and of cerulean hue, he rushed out vehemently, surrounded by his wives and counsellors. From grief for his son, Ravaga with his consciousness wildered, taking up a sword, in rage, rushed towards the place where Mithila's daughter was. Seeing the Rakshasa rising on, some. emitted leonine roars, and seeing the Rakshasa enraged, embracing each other, said,-"To-day those two brothers. seeing this one, will be exceedingly pained. By this one, influenced with passion were the four guardians of the worlds conquered; and many other foes were brought down in battle. Procuring gems from the three worlds, Ravana enjoyeth them. Neither in strength nor in prowess is there any one on earth who is his compeer." As they were speaking thus, Ravana, reft of his senses by wrath, rushed against Vaidehi, who had taken up her abode in the Acoka wood. And dissuaded by his friends endowed with good intelligence, he wrought up with high wrath, darted (against Sits), even as an enraged planet* rusheth against Robini† in the firmament. And the blameless daughter of Mithila protected by the Rakshasis, saw the infuriated Rayana bearing that best of blades in his hand. Seeing (Rāvana) approach, sword in hand, despite the earnest entreaties of his friends, Janaka's daughter, Sitä, pained and overcome by grief, said, weeping, -"From the way in which, wrought up with wrath, this wicked-minded one is rushing on at me personally, it appears that he will slay me, who have a lord, as one who hath not. He did urge me much ever devoted to my lord, saying 'Be thou my wife;' but forsooth I disregarded him. And plainly in consequence of my refusal, he hath given way to despair. And overcome by anger and passion, he is ready to slay me. Or it may be that to-day for me those foremost of men, the brothers-Rama and Lakshmana-have been slain in encounter by this inglorious one. I heard a furious and

* Kuja, etc.

feagini uproat raised by countless Rakshasas rejoicing, and expressing their delight .-- Alas | O fie | For me those princes have met with destruction. Or it may be that not without slaying Rama and Lakshmana, this terrific Rakshasa, having his heart set on sin, from grief for his son, will slay me. Fool that I am, I did not then act agreeably to Hanuman's words. If I had gone away seated on his back, without waiting for the victory (of my lord), I devoted to him, placed on his lap, should not have come by this repentance. When Kancalva, having an only son, will hear of her son slain in battle, I fancy, her heart shall burst. And, weeping, she will remember that high-souled one's birth and boyhood, and youth and pious acts and loveliness. And that one bereft of her consciousness, filled with despair, after having performed his sråddha.* will doubtless enter into fire or water. Shame on the unchaste and hump-backed Manthara, having her beart fixed in sin, for whose sake this grief shall exercise Kaucalva!" Seeing the distressed daughter of Mithila lament thus, like unto Robini come under the sway of a planet in the absence of the Moon, in the meanwhile hist pure and good courtier, named Suparcwa. endowed with intelligence, albeit prevented by other coustiers, spoke unto Ravana, foremost of Rakshusan-"Wherefore, O Ten-necked one, O thou who art the very younger brother of Vaicravana himself, Dost thou desire to alay Vaidehi, forsaking righteousness? Why, O bero. Q lord of Rakshasas! having led the Brahmacharyva mode of life, studied the Vedas, and returned from the house of the spiritual guide, and ever engaged in religious acts, to-day dost thou intend to slay a woman? Do thou, O king, now stay expecting Mithila's daughter! endowed with loveliness ?

* Funereal rites performed is accordance with the injunctions of the Made Scriptures.-T.

<sup>. 4</sup> RAveou's.

Explains the commentator : "till thou slayest Rama in hattle" - 1"

and do thou along with us vent thy wrath on him.* To-day being the fourteenth day of the dark fortnight, do thou this very day prepare for conflict; at amdvasyā,† environed with thy forces, do thou march for victory. Heroic, and intelligent, a mighty car-warrior and swordsman, thou, mounted on a car, slaying the redoubtable son of Daçaratha, wilt obtain Mithila's daughter." Thus exhorted by his friend, the unrighteous Rāvana accepted his virtuous speech; and then that mowerful one went (back) to his house, and, surrounded by his friends, entered the court.

SECTION LXLIV

ENTERING his court, the king, distressed, and exceedingly aggrieved, sat him down on the foremost seat sighing like an enraged lion. And tricken with grief in consequence of his son's death, that highly powerful Ravana, with folded hands, addressed all the heroic Rakshasas, saying :- "Do ye all proceed to hattle with elephants, horses and cars. And encircling Rama only and discharging shafts at him, delightedly, like unto clouds, in the rainy season, pouring water, do ye slay him. Or I shall slay him to morrow in the presence of all, wounded by you in the mighty encounter with sharpened arrows." Hearing the speech of their lord. the Rakshasas, with a huge army and a host of cars, speedily issued but for battle. And they all threw at the monkeys life-destroying Parighas, Patticas, arrows, daggers and Parashwadhas. And the monkeys too threw crags and trees at the Rakshasas. Thus on the eve of sun set there areses a terrible conflict between the Rakshasas and the monkeys.

* Raub

And they struck each other in the conflict with clubs, chitras. Prasas, daggers and Parashwadhas. The conflict being thus carried on, there arose a mighty dust which was again destroyed by the current of blood gushing out of the persons of the Rakshasas and the monkeys. Elephants and cars were like the banks of that river of blood, the arrows were like the fishes, and the flags were the trees on their banks and the corpses were like planks affoat there. Being thus wounded and assailed by the Rakshasas, those beroic monkeys leaped and broke down the flags, armours, cars, horses and other weapons. And with their sharp teeth and nails they scratched the hair, ears, foreheads and the noses of the Rakshasas. Like unto vultures falling upon a felled tree, hundreds of monkeys fell upon one Rakshasa in that encounter. And the Rakshasas resembling mountains, with huge clubs, prasas, daggers and parashwadhas, struck the monkeys (in their turn). Being thus assailed by the Rakshasas, the mighty host of monkeys took refuge of Rama, the son of Daçaratha, the worthy refuge of all creatures. Thereupon the landly effulgent and powerful Rama, taking up his bow, entered the Rakshasa host and began to make a downpour of arrows. entering the field, those terrible Rakshasas, being burnt with the fire of his arrows, could not stand before him like unto clouds disappearing before the Sun in the welkin. And the night-rangers only espied the dreadful feats performed by Rama and which were above the power of others. Except when guiding the huge army or driving the cars they could not see Rama like unto the wind invisible in a forest. They all beheld the Rakshasa force scattered, wounded, burnt down with arrows, broken and assailed with weapons, by Rama, but none could see the quick-moving Rama. As *paople cannot see the soul which governs all objects of sense so they could not see Rama, who was thus indictions wounds on them. "It is he who is destroying the soldiers riding the elephants, it is he who is breaking down the mighty cars, and it is he who with sharp arrows is slaying the cavalry-rider and horse." Thus saying those Rakshasas, in that conflict and in the very presence of Ramb highly enraged, began to slay each other. They were all bewildered by the Buge Gandharba weapon discharged by the highsouled Rama and so they could not see Rama, who was thus burning down their force. And the Rakshasas sometimes heheld thousands of Rama in the battle field and again saw one Rama only. They at times saw the quick-moving golden end of the bow of that high-souled one, resembling a circular fire brand but they did not behold Raghava. And be looked like kala chakra, having his middle body as its navel, his own strength as its lustre, the arrow for its radius or spoke, the bow for the circumference, the twang of the bow for its sound, his power and intelligence for its brightness, and the aim of the celestial weapons for its limit. And in the eighth division of the time by Rama alone with arrows resembling the flame of fire were destroyed ten thousands swift-coursing parts, eighteen thousand elephants fourteen thousands horses and riders and two million Rakshasa infantry abuming shapes at will. And those nightrangers, who were still left, having their horses killed, cars and flags broken, fled in fear of life to the city of Lanka. And the battle field, filled with slain horses elephants and infantry, looked like the high-souled and enraged Rudra's arena of sports. Thereupon the celestials with Gandharbas, Siddhas and the great ascetics glorified the wonderful feat of Rama. And the virtuous-souled Rama addressed Sugriva, Bibhishana the monkey Hanuman, the leading monkey Jambavan, Mainda and Divida who were near him, saying-"This is the power of my weapons and as well as that of Rudra." The high-souled Rame, equalling Sakra in prowess, thus slaving the huge liest of the lord of Rakshasas and assailing them with shafts and wespons—the celestials, delighted, sang his praises.

SECTION LXLV.

By Rama, of unwearied actions, with flaming arrows feathered in hurning gold, were destroyed thousands of slephants-many horses with their riders, many a car crested with flaming banners; thousands of heroic Rakshasas assuming shapes at will, engaged by Ravana, and armed with clubs and parighds; and golden pennons. Beholding and hearing of this the remaining night rangers assembled and were greatly bewildered, poorly and stricken with anxiety. The widows and those who had lost their children or kinsmen approached those Rakshasas and overwheimed with grief, bewailed piteously,-"Alas ! why did the aged and grim-visaged Surpanakha, having her belly extending downward, behold in the forest Rama graceful like Kandarpa. And beholding him of great beauty and prowess, ever engaged in the welfare of all creatures, that ugly one, worthy of being slain by people, was excited with lust. did that ugly-faced she-demon, devoid of all qualities, address Rama, having a beautiful countenance, gifted with many virtues and great effulgence? Alas for the misfortune of the Rakshasas, the aged Rakshasee brought before him such a vile proposal, hated of all and worthy of creating laughter. For the destruction of Khara, Dushana and other Rakshasas that ugly one approached Raghava with such a vile intention. It was for her that Ravana created enmity (with Rame) and Sita was carried away by the Ten-necked Rakshasa. But he could not spread his influence upon Sita the daughter of king Janaka and deep rooted and eternal became the enmity with the highly powerful Raghava. And beholding the Rakshasa Biradha slain by Rama alone-(Ravana) wishing Vaidehi should have regarded that as a sufficient proof of his prowess. And fourteen thousand Rakehasas of terrible deeds were slain by him in Janasthana with shafts resembling the flame of fire. Khara, Dushana as well as Trigita were slain by him in conflict with arrows resembling the Sun this was a sufficient proof (of his power). Yoyanabahu and Kavandha, drinking blood, were slain by him, roaring with wrath-this too was a sufficient proof of his power. Rama slew the powerful Vali, the son of the thousand eyed one, resembling the cloud-that too was the sufficient proof of his prowess. By him Sugriva, poorly and living in the mount Rishyamukha, having all his desires frustrated, was placed on the throne-that too even was the sufficient proof of his power. He (Rāvana) from foolishness did not like the becoming speech of Biblishana conducive to the acquirement of piety and wealth and securing the welfare of the Rakshasas. Had the younger brother of the lord of wealth (Rāvana) observed the words of Bibhishana, Lanka would not have been overwhelmed with grief and reduced to the state of a cremation ground. Hearing of the destruction of the highly powerful Kumbhakarna by Rama of the irrepressible Atikaya by Laksumana as well as of his beloved son Indrajit, Ravana did not come to his senses.* There is audible in every house of the Rakshaeas, the cry,-'My son, my brother, my husband is slain in battle.' In conflict have been destroyed by the heroic Rama, thousand cars, horses, serpents and infantry. Perhaps Rudra, Vishnu, Mahendra or the performer of hundred sacrifices, or even Death, in the shape of Rama, is slaving us. By Rama all the heroes have been slaindespair has taken possession of our minds-we do not behold the end of our terror and are bewaiting being deprived of our lords. Does not the Ten necked hero, who has obtained boons (from Brahma) perceive that a mighty disaster shall befall him from Rama? Neither the celestials, Gandharbas, Picachas nor Rākshasas shall be able to save him from Rama in conflict. In every bittle many an accident befalls Ravana-this bespeaks of his destruction at the hands of Rama. The great Patriarch, being pleased, conferred upon Ravana the boon that no fear would proceed unto him from the celestials, the Danavas or the Rakshasas -but he did not beg of him, security from men Forsooth, he is that fearful man who shall slay Ravana and the Bakshasas. The celestials, being thus oppressed by Ravana, who had obtained the boon, worshipped the great Patriarch with severe austerities. And being propiliated with them, the high-souled Patritich, for their welfare, addressed the celestials, with the following pregnant speech, 'From today shall the Rakshasas and Danavas roam for ever. afraid of the celestials." Thereupon the celestials headed by Indra engaged in propitiating Mabadeva, the slayer of Tripura, and who rides upon a bull. And being pleased, Mahadeva addressed them, saying, - For your welfare there will be born a woman who shall be the cause of the destructron of the Rak-hasas." As hunger, being engaged by the celestrals, did destroy in olden time, all the Danavas. so shall she (Sita) the root of the extinction of Rakshana race destroy us all with Ravana. Alas! for the foolishness of the victors minded and insolent. Ravana, destruction has faced us and we are overwhelmed with grief. We do not see any such being in the world who can afford us shelter. Raghava has attacked us like unto the fire of dissolution. There is no refuge for us who have been stricken with fear as no help reaches the alephants in a cforest beset with fire. The high-souled Biblishana add the inst tiling in proper timesselve took shelter of him from whom he expected danger." Thus bewalled pretropply and leading -the she-demons holding each other by the neck and being stricken with fear and grief.

One sloke has been omitted here by some of the editors, which when translated stands thus :— When one monkey only Hanuman killed the prises Akshaya and reduced the whole city to askes with the fire of his tail Rayma should have come to his senses.

SECTION LXLVI

THEREUPON Ravana heard in every house of Lanka the piteous cries of the she-demons possessed by sorrow. And sighing hard he engaged in meditation for some time. And terrible-looking as he was, Rāvana was greatly worked up with ire. Having his eyes reddened with anger, and gnashing his teeth and biting the lips, that one, irrepressible by other Rakshasas, looked like the fire of dissolution incarnate. Thereupon the lord of Rakshasas, in anger, as if burning down everything with his look, addressed the Rakshas who were near him -Mahodara, Mahāpārsha, Birupāksha- 'Do ye spcedily speak to the soldiers that they should sally out for battle at mry command. Hearing his speech-those Rakshas, possessed by fear, asked by the command of the king, the Rakshasa soldiers to be ready. And thereat all those grim-visaged Rakshasas saying 'so be it' and performing benedictory ceremonies proceeded to the battle-field. And those mighty car-warriors, worshipping Ravana, and desiring the victory of their lard, stood before them with folded hands. Thereupon Rayana, beside himself with anger, laughing, adddressed those Rakshasas, Mahodara, Mahaparsha, and Birupaksha, saying-"To-day shall I despatch both Rama and Lakshmana to the abode of Death with arrows resembling the sun at the time of dissolution, discharged off my bow. And slaying the enemies I shall repair the loss of Khara, Kumbhakarna, Premasta and Indrajit. The atmosphere, the quarters the thy and the deep being enveloped with the cloud of arrows shall become invisible. I shall slay to-day all the beroic munkeys with my winged arrows. Ascending my car gifted with the velocity of the wind shall I churn to day the monkey host with arrow-like waves coming from the ocean-like bow. I shall like an elephant distress to-day the monkey-like pools having their countenances for the blown lotuses, and the lustre of their bodies for the filaments. To-day in the encounter, the leaders of the monkey hosts, with their heads transfixed with arrows, shall cover the earth, like unto lotuses. with their stalks. I shall to-day with a single arrow, cleave hundreds of heroic monkeys fighting with trees in their hands. I shall wipe to-day the tears of those whose brother or son has been slain by destroying their foe. In the encounter to-day I shall, with the monkeys deprived of their breath and elept with my arrows, so cover the earth that it may not be seen by any. I shall satisfy to-day with the flesh of the enemies slain by my shafts, the crows, vultures and others who live upon flesh. Get ready soon my car and bring his bow. And let the remaining night-rangers follow me in battle." Hearing his words Mahaparsha addressed the leaders of the army who were near him, saying,-"Get your soldiers ready." And the commanders too quickly went round all the houses in Lanka and asked the Rakshasas to be ready soon. Thereupon began to issue out in a moment terrible-looking Rakshasas, emitting roars, having dreadful faces and with various weapons in their hands-daggers, Pattiças, maces, clubs, furrows, sharpened saktis, traps, various rods, sharpened chakra, parashwadhas, vindipalas, sataghnis and various other excellent weapons. Thereupon at the command of Ravana the commanders brought one Nijuta (a hundred thousand) cars, three Nijuta elephants, sixty million horses, asses and camels and numberless infantry. They arranged the soldiers before the king and in the interval the charioteer brought the car-filled with excellent celestial weaponsrichly adorned, containing many an armour, girt with we network of tinkling ornaments crested with various jewels, having jewelled pillars and a thousand golden jars. Beholding the car the Rakshasas were greatly astonished, And Ravana, the lord of Rakshasas, rising up all on a sudden, a-cended that car, brilliant like the fliming fire and the aggregate rays of a million sun, quick-coursing, having a charioteer, drawn by eight horses, huge and shining in its native lustre. Thereupon proceeded Ravana, encircled by many a Rakshasa as if rending the earth with the excess of his prowess. There arose a huge sound of bugles accompanied with that of Mridangas, drums, conchs, and kalapas. The lord of the Rakshas -wicked, the slaver of the Brahmins-the thorn of the celestials, and who hath brought away Sita by stealth, has come with his umbrallas and chowries to fight with the foremost of Raghus-this cry was heard everywhere. And with his tremendous roar the earth shook. And hearing all on a sudden that sound, the monkeys fled away in fear. And the highly effulgent Ravana, having huge arms and surrounded by his ministers, came there being certain of gaining victory. Being commanded by Ravana, Mahaparsha, Mahodara and the irrepresible Birupaksha ascended the car. They, desirous of winning victory, issued out emitting dreadful roars in delight and as if rending the earth therewith. Thereupon the highly effulgent (Ravana) resembling Death, with uplifted bow, sallied out for battle along with the army of Rakshas. And that mighty car-warrior, went out in his chariot drawn by quickcoursing steeds by that gate which led to where Rima and Lakshmana were. Thereat the sun lost its brilliance -the quarters were enshrouded with darkness : the birds sent forth dreadful cries and the earth shook. The celestials poured down bloody rains-the course of the horses was slankened-the vultures sat on the banners and jackals emitted inauspicious cries. His left eye and the left arm began to shake this countenance became pale and his voice grew harsher. The Ten-neeked Rakshasa thus going out for battle there appeared many bad omens indicating his destruction. From the sky fell a fire-brand accompanied with the sound of thunder; vultures and crows emitted inauspicious cries Disregarding these dreadful omens which appeared then, Ravana, incited by death, foolishly went out to alay his (enemies). And by the wheel-sound of the chariots of the great Rakshasas the bost of monkeys calling each other, excited with anger and willing to gain victory, addressed themselves for fight. Thereupon the Ten-necked one enraged, with his arrows feathered in gold, made a dreadful slaughter of the army of monkeys. And some of those heroic monkeys were beheaded by Ravana-some had their bearts rent and others were shorn of their ears. Some had their breath choked, some were killed and others had their sides broken. Some had their hands cut off and others had their eyes put out. And wherever in the encounter, the Ten-headed Rakshasa, whirling his eyes in ire, went in his car-the monkey leaders could not stand the vehemence of his arrows

SECTION LXLVII.

THERE the earth was covered with monkeys whose bodies were rent with the arrows of the Ten-necked (Rāvana). As the flies cannot stand before the flaming fire so they could not bear the vehemence of Rāvana's shafts. Being thus assailed with pointed arrows they fled away crying, like unto elephants being burnt by fire. And Rāvana with his arraws pursued in conflict the course of clouds. Thus slaughtering the monkeys the lords of Rākshasas speedily reached in the encounter where Raghava was. And beholding the monkeys assailed and afraid Sugriva placing Sushena in charge of a gulma* addressed himself for the battle. And placing that heroic monkey, his equal in prowess, in that command Sugriva sallied out with a tree in his hand to meet the enemy. And followed him on all sides the leaders of the monkeys with buge crags and various trees. The heroic Sugriva emitted terrible roars in the conflict and assailed the heroic Rākshasas and many others. The huge-bodied monkey-chief crushed the Rakshasas like unto the wind oprooting the trees at the time of dissolution. He began to make a downpour of crags at the Rakshasa host like unto the cloud pouring down hailstorms at the birds in the forest. And being beheaded by the crags discharged by that monkey chief the Rakshasas fell down like unto mountains cleft. The Rakshasas being thus attacked and shattored by Sugriva and roaring and falling down on all sides, an irrepressible Rākshasa, skilled in archery, by name Birupāksha, pronouncing his own name, got down from the car and mounted an And mounted on the elephant that highly powerful Birupaksha sent forth leonine roars and dashed against the monkeys. Exciting the joy of the Rakshasas and removing their anxiety he discharged dreadful shafts at Sugriva and his army. And being assailed by the pointed arrows of that Rakshasa that lord of monkeys roared in anger and made up his mind to destroy him. Thereupon uprooting a tree the heroic monkey, skilled in warfare, leaped and struck that huge elephant down in his presence. And being assailed greatly by Sugriva that huge elephant proceeded a little within the range of the bow and roared and died. And being greatly enraged on the destruction of that elephant the highly powerful Rakshasa dashed forward to face the enemy. That one of quick movements took up

The division of an army; a body of troops consisting of nine platoous or simplification via citations, threaty-seven horses and forty-five foot.

Me dagger and armour and viling, approached Sagriva. And beholding his movement Sugriva took up a huge crag resembling cloud and hurled it against Birupaksha. That highly powerful leading Rakshasa, finding the crag about to fall, turned a little away and struck the monkey with his dagger. And being assailed with dagger by that powerful Rakshasa the monkey remained senseless for sometime on the ground. And rising up all on a sudden he, clenching his fist, struck that Rakshasa in the mighty encounter on his breast and got him down. Being struck with the fist the night-ranger Birupaksha greatly enraged cut down with his dagger Sugriva's armour and tumbled him down with his feet. And the monkey rising up again was about to deal him a blow, hard as a thunder-bolt, with a dreadful sound. And receding a little, he baffled its aim and returned one on Sugriva's breast. Finding his aim baffled and himself struck in return by the Rakshasa, Sugriva, the lord of monkeys, was excited with anger. And the monkey-chief was now on the look-out for an oppurtunity to strike Birupāksha. immediately in anger he struck him down with a blow on And being thus assailed with the fist resembling the thunder-bolt of Mahendra, he fell down on the earth bathed in a pool of blood. And blood gushed out of the person of Birupaksha like unto water issuing out of a fountain. And the monkeys beheld their enemy(Birupākska) with his eyes disfigured in anger, bathed in a foam of blood, his whole body discoloured, trembling, rolling and crying piteously. Thereupon those too armies of the monkeys and Rakshanas, being ready to engage in the encounter, began to roar like unto two mighty oceans having their banks brokes. And observing that highly powerful Rakshasa, of discoloured eyes, slain by the king of monkeys, the moukeys and Rakshasa forces engaged in fight and looked like the rising Ganges.

SECTION LXLVIII.

LIKE unto a pond in the summer both the armies became gradually reduced. Beholding his own army and Birupaksha slain, Ravana, the lord of Rakshasas, was doubly excited with ire. And observing his army reduced and slain by the heroic (monkeys) he perceived ill omons in the fight and was accordingly pained at heart. And he addressed Mahodara, who was near him, saying, "O thou of great arms, all my hopes of success are now centered in thee. Do thou slay the enemy's force, O hero, and display thy prowess. Now bath come the time of returning the favours of thy master. Do thou fight bravely." Being thus accosted that Rakshasachief Mahodara, saying "so be it" entered the enemy's army like unto a fly entering into a flame. Excited by his master's command and empowered by his own prowess that (Rakshasa) gifted with great strength, began to assail the monkeys. And the highly powerful monkeys too taking up huge crags dashed against the dreadful army of the enemies and crushed all the Rakshasas. And Mahodara, greatly angered, severed in that mighty encounter, with his arrows feathered in gold, the hands, feet and thighs of the monkeys. Then the monkeys, in fear of the Rakshasas, fled away to different quarters and same sought shelter of Sugriva. And beholding his powerful monkey force thus assailed in the conflict, Sugriva dashed forward and fronted Mahodara. And taking up a huge and dreadful crag resembling a mountain, the monkey-king hurled it with great vehemence to stay him. Thereupon finding that crag about to fall, Mahodara fearlessly severed it with his arrows. And being sundered into a thousand pieces by the arrow. of that Rakshasa, it fell down on the earth like unto a band of sultures. And beholding that crag thus severed, Sugriva was beside himself with ire; and uplifting a sala tree harled it': and the heroic Rakshasa, the slayer of enemy's force, severed it into several pieces with his arrows. Thereupon excited with wrath he saw a parigha on the ground. And hurling that flaming parigha and displaying his (lighthandedness) he struck his excellent horse therewith. And having his horse slam, that hero-the Rakshasa Mahodara, ascended his car, and in great anger took up his club. Those two heroes, with club and parigha in their hands, engaged in battle, roaring like two bulls or clouds accompanied with lightning. Thereupon the nighttanger Mahodara, inflamed with tre, burled at Sugriva, the club flaming like the Sun. And beholding that dreadful club about to fall the highly powerful Sugriva-the lord of monkeys, uplifting his parigha struck it therewith. And parigha, being sundered, fell quickly down on the earth. Thereupon the effulgent Sugriva picked up from the ground musala made of iron and ornamented with gold. Taking that musala up he hurled it at the Rakshasa and who again burled a club; and both of them being severed fell down on the earth. Having their weapons baffled thus, those two heroes, gifted with great prowess and effulgence and resembling the burning fire, were ready to interchange blows. They, emitting roars again and again, struck each other down on the earth with their clenched fists. And rising up speedily they again assailed each other. Thus those two heroes, unsubdued, struck each their with their arms. Thereupon both of them, highly proficient in fighting with arms, were greatly exhausted. Thereupon they took up daggers. And uplifting them, (those two heroes) with their persons trembling in ire, proficient in fighting and skilled in the use of weapons, dashed on roaring. And both of them enraged with each other and anxious to score success, moving in citale you each other's right side, addressed themselves for netion. Thereupon the vicious-minded, heroic Mathedira, gifted with great vehemence and proud of his own heroism, flung his dagger at (the monkey's) armour. And as he was about to extricate his dagger from the armour, that foremost of monkeys severed with his dagger that Rakshasa's head with helmet and kundalas. And beholding the Rakshasachief fall down on the earth with his head off, his forces fled away from the neld. And slaying him that monkey-chief, delighted, began to roar along with other monkeys. Thereupon the Ten-necked one became highly enraged and Raghava greatly delighted. And all the Rakshasas, with their hearts broken and countenances rendered poorly and stricken with fear fled away to different quarters. Slaving and striking down on earth Mahodara like unto a portion of a mighty hill severed, that son of the Sun appeared resplendent in his own effulgence, and became irrepressible like unto the Sun And winning victory in the action that lord of monkeys was espied by the celestials, Siddhas and Yakshas along with all creatures on earth, having their eyes flushed with joy.

SECTION LXLIX

MAHODARA being thus slatt by Sugriva, the highly powerful Mahaparshwa, having his eyes reddened with ire, looked towards him. And the Rakshasa, with his weapons, assailed the dreadful army of Angada as well as the leading monkeys. The Rakshasa severed the heads from the bodies of the monkeys like unto the wind throwing away the straits from trees. And he cut off, with his arrows, the arms of some and some were deprived of their sides. The proceeds were thus assailed by Mahaparshwa with a shower of, shafts. All the monkeys were thus stricken with grief and rendered senseless. And hearing of the anxiety of bia gwo army thus assailed by the Rakshasa, Angada, gifted with great vehemence, taking his parighs made of iron and resembling the rays of the sun, dashed on like the rising deep during the lunar half of a month. And that foremost of monkeys encountered Mahaparshwa, who, thus struck by the monkey, became insensible with his quarioteer and fell down on the earth. Thereupon leaped on the battle field the highly powerful and effulgent lord of bears, having the hue of red collyrium, with his army resembling the cloud. And excited with ire, he, taking up a huge crag resembling the summit of a mountain, speedily struck down his horses and broke down his car. And regaining his senses in a moment the highly powerful Mahaparshwa, again assailed Angada with many arrows. He struck Jamvaban, the lard of bears, on his breast with three arrows and assailed Gabaksha with many shafts. And beholding Jamvaban and Gabāksha overwhelmed with arrows, Angada, beside himself with ire, took up a dreadful parigha. And holding with two hands that parigha made of iron and bright like the rays of the sun, Angada, the son of Vali, with his eyes reddened in wrath, hurled it at Mahaparshwa who was stationed at a distance, to slay him. And being hurled by the highly powerful (Angada) the parigha, struck down from bis hands the bow with arrows and the helmet of the Rākshasa., And approaching him vehemently, Vāli'a son. gifted with great provess, in anger, struck him, with clenched fist, on his ears having excellent bundalas. Thereupon Mahaparshwa gifted with great vehemence and effulgence, highly angered, took up in his bands a huge sarashwadha, sharpened with oil, bright and hard as iron and discharged it at Vāli's son, and struck him therewith on the left shoulder. And Angada baffled that parashmedha. Thereupon that hero, power(ut like his own father, clenching his fist, hard as thunder-bolt and resembling even indra's again; dealt it, in great anger, upon the Raksha's breast. And being struck with that fist the Rākshasa's breast was shattered and he fell down on earth. He falling down on earth slain, his soldiers were greatly sorry and Rāvana attained to an excess of ire in the conflict. The noise set up by the delighted monkeys like unto a dreadful leonine roar, as if rending the city of Lankā abounding in editices and gates, resembled the great roar of the celestials along with Indra. And hearing the noise of the celestials and monkeys, the lord of Rākshasas, the enemy of the gods, in great anger, again proceeded towards the battle field.

SECTION C.

Beholding Mahodara, Mahaparsha and the highly powerful Birupaksha slain in the encounter Ravana attained to an excess of ire. And ordering his charioteer to hurry on he gave vent to the following words—"All my courtiers have been slain and my city is shut up—I shall remove my grief consequent on all these by slaying Rama and Lakshmana. I shall destroy Rama-like tree in the conflict whose flower is Sita and whose branches are Sugriva, Jambavan. Kumuda, Nala, Divida, Mainda, Angada, Gandhamadana, Hanuman and all other leading monkeys." And resounding the ten quarters with the sound of his chariot wheels that mighty car-warrior proceeded quickly towards. Raghava. With that sound all quarters were filled, and the earth, with rivers, mountains and forests shook and all the lions, deer and birds were terrified. He created a decadini darkness with the discharge of his sharp weapons: and burnt down the monkeys who fled away to different directions. Dust was raised on the ground by those mankeys assailed and flying to various directions. They were unable to withstand the power of that weapon made by Brahma bigaself. Beholding his own army, assailed and cut into hundred peices by the excellent weapons of Ravana. Raghava dashed forward. And assailing the monkey-host. that foremost of Rakshasas espied Rama, unconquered, at a distance with his brother Lakshmana like unto Basava with Vishnu, holding a huge bow like one painted on the sky, having expansive eyes like lotus-petals, long arms, and always subduing the enemies. Beholding the monkeys slain in the encounter and Ravana approach, the heroic and highly powerful Rama, with Sumitia's son in his company, delightedly set arrows on his bow. And as if rending the whole earth with that dreadful sound he began to draw the string of his excellent bow. With the sound, of Ravana's and the twang of Rāma's bow hundreds of Rakshasas fell down on earth. And coming within the range of the arrows of those two princes, Ravana appeared like Rahu in presence of the sun and the moon. And desiring to fight with him first Lakshmana setting sharp arrows on his bow, discharged shafts at him resembling the flame of fire. And the highly powerful Ravana too with his arrows stopped the course of those shafts in the sky as soon as they were discharged by Lakshmana, skilled in archery. And displaying his light-handedness, he, with one arrow, severed Lakshmana's one, with three his three and with test his ten. Surpassing thus the son of Sumitra, Ravana, cote victorious in battle, confronted Rama in the encounters standing like another hill. And approaching Raghava. Ravana the lord of Rakshasas, with his eyes reddened in ire, began to make a shower of arrows. Thereupon beliefing the arrows shot off Rivana's bow fall on all sides, Rima speedily took up a valla." And Raghava sundered with his sharp valla his dreadful arrows flaming and resembling poisonous serpents. With various sharpened arrows Raghava assailed Ravana, and he again assailed Rama in return. And forming a circle, they passed each other by the right side. Uprooting the earth with the vehemence of their arrows, irrepressible by each other, fighting equally discharging arrows, they looked dreadful like Death himself -and created terror in all creatures. The sky was filled with their various weapons, like unto clouds in the rainy season accompanied with lightning. And the welkin appeared full of windows with that shower of arrows, sharpened, shot with great vehemence and winged like vultures. The earth was stricken with darkness caused by these arrows like unto clouds appearing after sunset. There took place a dreadful conflict between them, desiring to slay each other, having their prowess unknown and fighting like Vitra and Vasava. Both of them were proficient in archery, skilled in the art of conflict and foremost of those conversant with the use of weapons. And they began to veer round the battle-field. And wherever they went, there appeared arrows like unto waves of the deep roused by the winds. Then that destroyer of creatures-Ravana-with his hand engaged in discharging shafts, shot at Rama's forehead a network of acrows. And thereat Rama on his head bore that shower of shafts shot from his terrific bow, having the lustre of the petals of blue lotuses; nor did he experience any pain. And then reciting a formula, the exceedingly energetic Rama endowed with prowess, wrought up with wrath, engaged in incessantly shooting his shafts, taking his Raudra weapon and again seizing his arrows, discharged them at that lord of Rakshasas. And alighting at the impenetrable mail of the Rakshasa-cuief, resembling a mass of mighty clouds, those arrows did not then occasion him any pain.

· An acrow with a crescent shaped head.

Again Rama skilled in all weapons, from a powerful weapon discharged arrows at the sovereign of the Rak. shasas mounted on his car. And piercing Ravana, those like unto five-hooded serpents, resisted by him, entered the earth, hissing. Having baffled Raghava's weapon. Navana, transported with passion, took up a dreadful Asura weapon; and discharged sharpened shifts having the faces of lions and tigers, and the faces of kankas and kokas * and the faces of vultures and hawks, and the faces of jackals, and the faces of wolves, - with gaping mouths, - and terrific of aspect; five-mouthed and red-hued. And that highly powerful one, enraged, sighing like a snake, by his power of illusion shot at Rama other keen arrows having the faces of mules and the faces of bears, and the faces of dogs and cocks, and the faces of makarast and venomous serpents,these as well as others. Covered with that Asura weapon, that foremost of the Raghus, himself resembling fire, discharged an exceedingly vigorous weapon informed with fire; and shot various shafts having faces filled with live flames, and faces like unto suns,-and hued like unto planets and stars,-and furnished with faces resembling mighty meteors, or resembling tongues of lightning. And those terrific shafts of Ravana, resisted by Raghava's weapon, were annihilated in the sky, and destroyed (monkeys) by thousands. And seeing that weapon (of Rivana) destroyed by Rama of untiring deeds, all those heroes, the monkeys-headed by Sugriva, capable of wearing forms at will, shouted, surrounding Raghava. And the high souled son of Decaratha-Raghava-having by his might destroyed that weapon discharged by Ravana's arms, was delighted; and the monkey-chiefs, filled with glee, began to emit shouts.

* Koka-a ruddy goose. It may also mean a lizard, a chamaleon, a wolf.

† A marine monster, generally confounded with the siligator and the shark but really a fabulous animal -T.

SECTION CL

On that weapon of his having been haffled, Ravanalord of the Rakshasas-was fired with double fury, and the highly effulgent Ravana from wrath set about discharging at Raghava a dreadful Raudra weapon, which had been conferred on him by Maya. And from his bow began to issue forth in large numbers darts and maces and clubs, flaming and having the might of thunder; and various kinds of sharp clubs and daggers and nooses and flaming thunderbolts began to descend like unto the winds at the universal tumbling. And thereupon the graceful and exceedingly effulgent Raghava-foremost of those accomplished in noble arms-resisted that weapon with a powerful Gandharva weapon. On that weapon being baffled by the high-souled Raghava, Ravana, with his eyes rendered coppery with passion, took up a Solar weapon. Thereupon from the how of the wondrous vehement and intelligent Tenmerked one rushed out discuses flaming and mighty. And the firmament all round blazed up with those unpendent (arms), as blaze up the cardinal quarters on the Sun and the Moon and the planets dropping down. Thereat Raghava in the van of that army by means of vollies of shalts cut off Ravana's wonderful weapons and discuses. And seeing that weapon destroyed, Ravana-lord of Rak-hasas-with ten arrows pierced Rama all through his vitals. And pierced by Ravana with those ten shafts discharged from his mighty bow, the exceedingly [powerful Raghava did not so much shake. Then Raghava-victor in fight-waxing wondrous wroth, with countless shalts pierced Ravana all over his person. In the meanwhile Raghava's younger brother, the mighty Lakshmana-destroyer of foes-growing enraged, took up seven arrows. And with those highly impetuous arrows that exceedingly effulgent one severed the human-headed standard of Ravana. And the mighty and graceful Lekshmana with a shaft cut off the head of the Nairita's charioteer, illumined with ear-rings. And then with five sharpened arrows Lakshmana severed the bow of the Raksbasa-chief, resembling the trunk of an elephant. And Biblishana, bounding up, with his mace despatched Ravana's excellent steeds, resembling hills or dark-blue clouds. Thereat, leaping down from his mighty car, whose horses had been slain. Ravana was fired with high wrath against his brother. And the powerful ford of Rakshasas endowed with immense strength, hurled at Biblishana a dart resembling the flaming thunder-bolt. And ere the dart had reached its destination, Lakshmana severed it with three shafts; and thereat in that mighty conflict there arose a mighty uproar from the monkeys. And the dart dight with networks of gold fell down in three fragments, as droppeth a mighty meteor from the firmament, flaming and, shooting out scintillations. Then (Ravana) took up a huge dart, glowing in its own energy, celebrated as being irrisistible, and incapable of being borne by the Destroyer himself. On being whirled by the impious and strong Ravana, the dart possessed of exceeding energy, flamed up. In the meanwhile the heroic Lakshmana swiftly came to the side of Bibhishana,* whose life was placed in peril. And in order to save him, that hero-Lakshmana-drawing his bow, covered the dart-handed Ravana with showers of shafts. On being covered with arrows shot by that high souled one, Ravana, with his provess baffled, made up his mind to let (his brother) go. And seeing his brother delivered by Lakshmana, Ravana, facing Lakshmana, spoke these words,-"O thou proud of thy prowess! as Bibhishana hath this wise been delivered by thee, passing by the Rakshasa, this dark, discharged from my bludgeon of an arm, will depart, depriving thee of thy life." Having said this, Ravana, waxing furiously enraged, discharged at Lakshmana that dart forged by Maya with his power of illusion, furnished with eight bells, having mighty sounds,-incapable of being resisted.—competent to finish foes; and flaming in energy,and shouted simultaneously. And hurled with terrific force. the dart sending sounds resembling that of Vaira or the thunder-bolt, vehomently alighted at Lakshmana in that encounter. Thereat, as the dart descended, Räghava addressed* it, saying,-"Peace be to Lakshmana! Be thou fraustrated; and let thy energy go out of thee." But the dart discharged in the encounter by the enraged Ravana, resembling a venomous serpent, dived into the dauntless and heroic Lakshmana; and (the dart) exceedingly splendid and blazing, possessed of dreadful impetuosity and resembling the tongue of the king of serpents, smote Lakshmana in his mighty chest. And with his breast riven by the dart, driving deep through the force of Ravana, Lakshmana fell down to the earth. And Raghava, standing by, seeing Lakshmana in that plight, had his heart overspread with sorrow. But reflecting only for a while, he, with his eyes surcharged with tears, was filled with greater martial ardour, and resembled the fire risen at the universal dissolution. Then thinking,-'This is not the time to indulge in grief;' he, gazing at Lakshmana, entered into a terrific encounter, resolved upon alaying Ravana, laying under contribution his dearest energies. And Rama saw Lakshmana with his chest riven by the dart in the mighty conflict, lying drenched in blood, and resembling a hill with serpents present in it.--And in spite of all their efforts, the foremost monkeys failed to extract the dart which had been hurled by the powerful Ravana .- And, further, they were (all the while) sore assailed with showers of shafts by the foremost

* The commentator explains. "Himself coming before the dart, Lakshmann saved Bibbishana."—T.

. f. a. as Rāmāpuya remarks, addressed the deity presiding over it .- T.

Rabshasa of them all. The dast, having piercad Sumited's son, had entered the earth. In the encounter the mighty Rama, grasping the dreadful dart with his hands, extracted the same and wrathfully snapped it * As he (Rama) was engaged in pulling the dart out, the mighty Ravana kept bearing marrow-piercing shafts all over his person. Thinking nothing of those arrows. Rama, embracing Lakshmana, spoke unto Hanuman and the mighty mankey, Sugriva,-'Ye foremost of monkeys, do ye stay here, surrounding Lakshmana. The opportunity for putting forth my prowess which I had sought, is present. I shall slay this wickedminded Ten-necked one, who is resolved to pursue the course of unrighteousness. Even as on the expiry of summor the Chataka is eager for the sight of clouds, I had long been eager to obtain at sight of (Ravana) Ye monkeys, this, I swear unto you,-this very hour not long after ye will see this world without Ravana or Rama. To-day baving slain Ravana in battle, I shall renounce all sorrow arising from the loss of my kingdom, from my sojourn in the woods, from my wandering in Dandaka, from the ravishment of Vaidehi, from encounter with the Rakshas, -all the terrible evils that I have suffered, and all the troubles resembling hell. He for whom I have brought over the monkey-forces, made Sugriva king, slaying Vali in battle, for whom I have crossed the ocean and constructed a bridge over the deep-the same hath been come at by me in conflict, and the same bath come within the range of my vision. - And having come within my ken, Ravana will not live, even as one coming within ken of a serpent of poisonous sight, doth not live; or even as a serpent doth not live, coming within ken of Vinata'st son. Do ye, ye irrepressible ones, ye foremost of

The commentator has a characteristic note. This dark, having pierced the fee, used always to return to Rávana. But Ráma, who was the Lard numell, having spoken to it as he did, it could not this time go back; and Báma snapped it, which none also could do.' 1—T.

† Garnra.

monkeys, seated at the brow of the mountain, behold the battle between me and Ravana. To day let the three worlds with the Gandharvas, and the Siddhas, and the Charanas, see that for which Rama is Rama. To-day I shall do a deed of which the worlds with the mobile and the immobile and the gods, shall speak as long as the Earth sustaineth (creatures.)" Having delivered bimself thus, Rama, concentrating his attention, began to charge the Tennecked one in encounter with whetted arrows decked with burnished gold. And in the same way Ravana showered on Rama great núrdchas and clubs, even as clouds pour down showers. And there arose a tremendous uproar of mighty arrows discharged by Rāma and Rāvana, smiting one another. And the shafts shot by Rama and Ravana, severed and scattered, with flaming heads dropped to the Earth. And the mighty twangs of the bow-strings of both, terrifying all creatures, were wonderful to behold.* And then even as clouds disperse on being trampled by the Winds, Ravana, covered with showers of arrowy networks by that high souled one and reduced to sore straits by that one (Rāma) of a glowing bow, fled away in fear.

SECTION CIL

SEE ING the heroic Lakshmana brought down by the dark discharged by the powerful Ravana, and lying drenched in blood, he (Rama) after having fought furiously with the wicked minded Ravana,—and having showered vollies of shafts, addressed Sushena, saying,—"This heroic Lakshmana

Addunted or gana - wonderful to behold, - wonderful to wisness in the

Accordit down to the earth by the prowess or mavans, neces lite a serpent, enhancing my sorrow. Seeing this hero, dearer to me than life, what power have L with my soul overwhelmed with dole, to fight? If this brother of mine graced with auspicious marks, delighting in battle, breathe his last, what shall life avail me or happiness? My prowess is ashamed; my bow falleth off from my hand; my arrows droop; my sight is dimmed with tears; my limbs weaken as do those of men in a dream; thought racks me; and I even desire death." Seeing his brother wounded by the wicked-minded Ravana, crying in preternatural accents. and sore stricken in his vitals, (Rama) overcome by a mighty sorrow, lamented with his senses wildered. "Seeing my brother, Lakshmana, wounded, and lying over the dust of the field, even victory, O hero, doth not seem to me sweet. If the Moon is hid from the sight, whom doth he then delight? What have I to do with battle? What have I to do with life? I have no more to do anything with fighting, seeing that this Lakshmana wounded, lieth in the field of battle. As this highly effulgent one had followed me into the forest, so will I in the same way follow him to the abode of Yama. Ever seeking my welfare and ever devoted to me, he hath been reduced to this pass by Rakshasas fighting in crooked ways. In land after land one meets with wives, in land after land one meets with friends, but country find I none where a uterine brother may be met with. What, O irrepressible one, shall I do with the kingdom without my Lakshmana? And what shall I say unto mother Sumitra. fond of her son? And I shall never be able to bear the renroach Sumitra shall cast upon me. And what shall I say unto Kaucalya, and what unto mother Kaikeys? And what shall I say unto Bharata, and what unto the exceedingly powerful Satrughna ? Thou hadst gone to the woods with bim. Why then dost thou come (back) without him?" 'Tis better (for me) to renounce my life here, instead of bearing the censure of friends. What a sin had I committed in another birth, seeing that my virtuous brother, staying before me, hath been slain? Ah, my brother! Thou best of men! O master, who wert the foremost of heroes! Why, forsaking me, dost thou repair to the other regions. Wherefore, brother, dost thou not speak to me, who am lamenting? Get up. See! Why dost thou lie down? Look on me with thine eyes. O mighty-armed one, in the woods and mountains thou didst ever use to cheer me, tried by griet and pining in despondency, with my mind overwhelmed (with woo)." As Rama was speaking thus with his senses overwhelmed with emotion, Sushena, soothing him, spoke these pregnant words,-"O foremost of men, cast off this train of thought tending to overwhelm thy understanding,-this anxiety giving birth to grief, and resembling the shafts of focs in the van of the embattled forces. Lakshmana enhancer of auspiciousness is not dead. His face is not distorted or blackened. Do thou look at his countenance, which is beautifully bright and cheerful. His hands have palms resembling lotus-petals, and his eyes are pleasant. O king, one dead doth not look thus (Therefore), O hero, do not grieve. O subduer of enemies, this one is instinct with life. As he is lying down on the ground, stretched at length, his heart, O hero, trembling momentarily, testifieth to his respiration." Having spoken thus unto Raghava, the highly wise Sushena thus addressed the mighty monkey, Hanuman, saying,-"O placed one, hiering hence to the mountain, Mahodaya, which, O hero, had formerly been mentioned unto thee by Jambavan, bring hither the mighty drug sprung at its right summit-Vicalyakaraní by name, and Savarnyakarani,* and Sanjivakarani, O hero, and the potent medicine-Sandhani. Do thou bring (these) in order that the hero-Lakshmana-may be revived." Having been thus instructed, Hanuman, repairing to the Medicinal mountain, was wrought up with anxiety, not knowing the drugs. And then the thought sprang up in the mind of the Wind-god's offspring of immeasurable prowess,-'I shall go, even taking this (entire) summit of the mountain. In this very summit must that delightful drug have sprung. This I infer, inasmuch as Sushena had forsooth said so. If I fail to take Viçalyakaranı, I shall come by disgrace,—and if I spend much time (in thought), that would be fraught with evil."* Having reflected thus, the exceedingly powerful Hanuman, foremost of monkeys, -swiftly drawing up to that best of mountains, and giving three shakes to the mountain filled with various flowering trees,-raised it up with his hands. And taking that summit of the mountain resembling dark-blue clouds charged with rain, Hanuman from the earth bounded up into the sky. And arriving (at his quarters), that wondrous vehement one, putting down the mountain-peak, and reposing for a while, spoke unto Sushena,-"I did not find the drug, O best of monkeys; and therefore have I brought this entire summit of the mountain." When the Wind-god's offspring had spoken thus, that foremost of monkeys-Sushena-praising him, uprooted the herb and secured it. Seeing Hanuman's feat, incapable of being done by even the celestials, the choicest of the monkeys were amazed. Then crushing the healing herb, that best of monkeys-the exceedingly effulgent Sushena, made Lakshmana smell the same. And thereupon the wounded Lakshmana, -slayer of hostile heroes-smelling it, cured of his wound and ailments, speedily rose up from the ground. Seeing Lakshmana rise up from the earth, the monkeys, exceedingly rejoiced, honoring Lakshmana. exclaimed, "Excellent! Excellent!" "Come!" said that slayer of hostile heroes-Rama-and with his eyes filled with tears, he deeply embraced Lakshmana. And baving embraced Sumitra's son, Raghava then addressed him, saying,-"By good fortune it is that, O hero, I see thee returned from (the mansion of) Death,-Verily my life, or Sita, or Victory is worthless (without thee). And thou being dead, what is my life worth " When the high-souled Raghava had spoken thus, Lakshmana, aggrieved on account of the words (of Raghava) expressive of infirmity of purpose, said,-"Having bound thyself by that vow, it doth not, O thou having truth for prowess, behave thee to speak like one fickle and feeble. Those speaking the truth, never falsify their promise: the mark of a great one is even observance of vow. O sinless one, do not suffer thyself to be overcome by despair on my account. Do thou to-day by slaying Ravana, make thy promise good. Thy foe coming within the sway of thy shafts, will not hence, living, even like a mighty elephant coming before a sharp-toothed roaring lion. I wish the speedy destruction of this impious one, ere the maker of day, having performed his work, has ascended the Setting-hill. . If thou wishest to slay Ravana in battle, if thou desirest to recover the princess, then, O noble one, O hero, to-day speedily set about what I say."

Lis.—that which restores the former complexion.—T.

* Explains the commentator: 'If I take any other medicine by mistake, I shall make a lool of myself; if I spend much time in thought, Lakshmana may die.'-T.

SECTION CHI.

HEARING the words uttered by Lakshmana, that slayer of hostile heroes—Rāghava—endued with prowess, taking his bow, set shafts on it, and in the brunt of battle began to discharge dreadful arrows at Rāvana. And mounted on another car, Rāvana—lord of Rākshasas—rushed against Kākutstha, even as Swarbhānu rusheth against the Sun. And even as a mass of clouds powreth down torrents on a mighty mountain, the Ten-necked one, mounted on his car, smote Rama with shafts resembling; thunder-bolts. And in the encounter Rama, concentrating his thoughts, showered on the Ten-necked one arrows embellished with gold and looking like living fire. And celestials and Gandharvas and Kinnaras declared that there had been no other battle like unto the encounter of Rama stationed on the ground and the Raksha mounted on his car. Then the foremost of celestials-Sakra-hearing their ambrosial speech, summoning Matali, said,-"Taking my car, hie to the best of the Raghus. And reaching the earth, do thou, welcoming (him), bring about great good unto the gods." Thus accosted by the sovereign of the celestials. Matali-celestial charioteer -bending down his head, addressed that celestial, saying,-"Speedily shall I go, O lord of the celestials, and I shall also do the office of a charioteer (unto Rāghava)." Then voking with steeds that best of cars, curiously wrought with gold; adorned with hundreds of small bells; resembling the Sun new rison; having its pole studded with lapises; yoked with excellent horses caparisoned in gold; furnished with white chowris.-drawn by steeds resembling the Sun; decked with golden net-works,-and provided with a golden standard,the graceful car of the sovereign of the celestials,-Matali. commanded by the king of the immortals, ascending the car, went out of the celestial regions and came to Kākutstha. And with his hand holding the reins, the charioteer of the thousand-eyed (Deity) with joined hands addressed Rama. saying,-"O Kakutstha, in order that thou mayst obtain the victory, the thousand-eyed (god) hath sent thee this car. And, O exceedingly powerful one! O graceful (hero)! O thou that slayest thy foes! this is the redoubtable bow of Indra,-and this is the mail resembling fire,-and these are the arrows looking like the very Sun; and this is the dart shining and fraught with fair fortune. Ascend thou this car,

* This conversation between Rama and Lakshmana took place, says the commentator, on the first day of the lighted fortnight.—T.

O hero. Slay the Rākshasa-Rāvana, with me as thy charioteer, even as the lord of the celestials slayeth Danavas." Thus addressed, Rama, going round the car and saluting it, ascended the same, illumining the worlds with his splendour. And the encounter that took place between the two cars with the mighty-armed Rama (on one side),and the Raksha-Ravana-(on the other), was wonderful to behold. And Raghava highly proficient in weapons with a Gandharva weapon resisted the Gandharva weapon of the Rakshasa king, and with a celestial weapon, his celestial weapon. And then that lord of Rakshasas-the night-ranger -fired with high rage, again discharged an exceedingly dreadful Rakshasa weapon. And the gold-decked shafts shot from Ravana's bow, becoming furiously venomous serpents, covered Käkutstha. And vomitting living flames, they of terrific aspect, having flaming faces, showered over Rama with gaping mouths. And those flaming venomous serpents, having the feel of Vāsuki himself, covered all sides and enveloped all quarters. And seeing those serpents descending in the encounter, Rama employed a dreadful Garura weapon. And discharged from Raghava's bow, those arrows plated with gold at the feathered parts, and furnished with the splendour of peacocks, becoming golden birdsbegan to range (the field of battle) as the enemies of the serpents. And the shafts of Rama capable of wearing forms at will, turned into birds, destroyed all the exceedingly swiftcoursing arrows having the forms of serpents. On his weapon having been baffled, Ravana-lord of Rakshasaswaxing wroth, poured tremendous showers of shafts on Rama. And smiting Rama of untiring deeds with thousands of shafts, (Rāvana) pierced Mātali with vollies of arrows. And with an arrow, Ravana severed the standard; and having brought down the golden standard on the floor of the car. Ravana wounded even Indra's steeds with a net-work of arrows. And seeing Rama hard pressed, celestials and Gendharvas, and Charanas along with Danaves, and Siddhas, and the supreme saints were overcome with sadness; and the foremost monkeys together with Bibhishana were aggrieved. And seeing a Moon of Rama Chandra in the grasp of a Rahu of Rayana, that bringer of evil unto creatures-Budha -stood, assailing the Pravapatya star-Rohini-beloved of the Moon. And the enraged Ocean, heaving with smoking surges, and flaming as it were, swelled up, seeming to the touch the Sun. And the Sun was blackened and assumed a stern aspect, with his rays dimmed. And he was seen with a headless trunk on his lap, and he was in conjunction with a comet. And that star of the Koçalas, relating to the deities-Indra and Agni-Angaraka-stood in the sky, attacking Vicakha. And the Ten-necked one, having ten faces and twenty arms, equipped with his bow, looked like the mountain-Mainaka. And Rama reduced to sore straits by the Ten-necked Raksha, could not discharge his arrows in the conflict. And then the enraged Rama with his eyes slightly red, flew into a tremendous passion, as if burning up the Rakshasas, Seeing the face of the enraged Rama endued with understanding, all the creatures were overwhelmed with fear and the Earth herself shook. And mountains abounding with lions and tigers began to tremble, and trees to shiver. And even the deep-lord of streams-was wrought up wondrously. And rough and terrific clouds in the sky sent forth fierce roars. And stormy clouds rumbling went about the heavens. And seeing Rama wrought up with a mighty passion, and the fearful disastrous omens, all creatures were possessed by fright and Ravana was struck with dismay. And then stationed in the sky, celestials and Gandharvas and mighty serpents and saints and Danavas and Daityas and those related to Garura-fowls-beheld that conflict like unto the universal tumbling, as the two heroes faught on with various dire arms. And as they looked on the mighty encounter, the celestials and the Asuras, who had come to the conflict, from feeling of regard,* cheerfully spoke (these words). And the Asuras staying there said unto the Ten-necked one, Be victorious;' and the celestials again and again said unto Rama, 'Be victorious!' In the meantime, the impious Ravana, desirous of slaying Raghava, from wrath took up a mighty weapon, fraught with the essence of the thunderbolt; sending terrible sounds; capable of destroying all focs,-furnished with forks resembling mountain-peaks; tending to strike terror unto mind and sight; sharp-pointed, sesembling the smoking fire risen at the hour of universal dissolution; exceedingly terrible; irrisistible (in battle); unbearable even by the Destroyer,-the terror of all creatures-terrific; and competent to rive (all things). Flaming up with wrath, Ravana took this dart. And fired with furious wrath, that powerful one took the dart in the encounter, surrounded in that contest by many heroic And uplifting (the dart), the huge-bodied Rākshasas. Ravana, with his eyes reddened in passion, emitted mighty roars. And the shouts of the Rākshasa sovereign made the earth and the sky and the cardinal quarters and all sides tremble. And at the roars of that wicked-minded and buge-bodied one, all creatures were struck with terror, and the sea was vexed. And the exceedingly energetic Ravana, taking that mighty dart, and sending up furious shouts, addressed Rāma in a harsh speech, saying,-"O Rāma, I in wrath uplift this dart having the strength of the levin. This will utterly deprive of life thee who art assisted by thy brother. O thou that delightest in battle, to-day swiftly slaving thee. I shall make thee even with those heroic Rakshas slain in the van of the forces. Stay now. O Ragbava, thee shall I slay with this dart." Saying this, the lord of the Rakshasas hurled the dart. And discharged from Ravana's hand, (the dart), surrounded with garlands of lightning furnished with eight bells, sending mighty roars,tising to the sky, looked rexceedingly splendid. Seeing the dart, flaming and of terrific aspect, Ragbu's son-Ramaendowed with prowess, drawing his bow, discharged arrows, And with vollies of shafts Raghava res sted the descending (dart), even as Vasava extinguisheth the fire of doomsday with his showers. Then even as a flame consumeth insects, the mighty dart of Ravana burnt up those shafts shot from the bow of Rama. Seeing those shafts reduced to ashes and crushed on coming in contact with the dart, as they were coursing in the sky, Raghava was transported with passion. And then waxing wondrous wroth,-Raghu's son-Rāghaya -took up a javelin, liked by Vasava himself, brought by Matali. And on being wielded by that strong one, the javelia, resonant with bells, made the welkin blaze up, like a burning meteor on the occasion of universal rack. And when hurled, it alighted on that same dart of the Rakshasachief. And thereat, with its splendour lost, the mighty dart, riven, dropped (to the earth.) Then Rama, shooting straight-speeding arrows, pierced his (Ravana's) exceedingly fleet steeds. And then he pierced Ravana in the chest with And the energetic Raghava hit (Ravana) whetted arrows. in the temples with three feathered shafts. And thereat with all his limbs pierced (with arrows), and his body laved in blood, the lord of Rakshasas furnished with many limbs, looked like a flowering Açoka. And with his person pierced with the shafts of Rama, the lord of night-rangers having his body drenched with blood, was stricken with sadness in the midst of his forces.--and was also overwhelmed with terrific wrath.

* I. e. each party out of regard for the warrior to whom it wished well.-T.

<sup>† &#</sup>x27;The still-wexed Bermoothes.'-Tempest.

SECTION CIV.

On being greatly harassed by Kakutstha in anger, Ravana, delighting in battle, came under the sway of a towering passion. And with his eyes aglow, that powerful one from wrath and fury assailed Raghava in mighty encounter. And even as clouds pour down from the sky on a pool, Ravana showered thousands of arrows on Raghava. And covered with vollies of shafts discharged from (Ravana's) bow in the conflict, Kakutstha like unto a mighty mountain did not shake. And that one endowed with prowess stood in the field, resisting those networks of arrows, and took up shafts resombling the rays of the Son. Then the fleet-handed night-ranger, fired with rage, discharged a thousand arrows at the chest of the high-souled Raghava .-- And thereat in that encounter Lakshmana's elder brother, with his body bathed in blood, appeared like a mighty Kinçuka tree in a forest. And with his ire aroused by the blows he received, the exceedingly energetic Kakutstha took up arrows resembling the Sun risen at the time of the universal dissolution. And in the darkness spread by the arrows (discharged), Rama and Rayana both fired with wrath could not be discovered of each other. Then that hero-Dacaratha's son-Rama, overcome with wrath, addressed Ravana, laughing, in a harsh speech, saying,-"Thou vilest of Rakshasas, in consequence of having through lack of sense carried off my wife from Janasthana and brought her under thy subjection, thou hast been deprived of thy prowess. Having forcibly carried away Vaidebi staying in that mighty forest, forlorn and without me, thou thinkest-'I am a hero.' Outraging the helpless wives of others,-doing this craven deed, thou thinkest-I am a hero.' O thou having thy dignity destroyed! O shameless wight! O thou of volatile character. having through thy violence brought destruction on thyself, thou thinkest,-'I am a hero.' A great and samous act hath been performed by thee,-a hero, and the brother of the Bestower of riches, surrounded with thy forces! Ta-day receive the mighty fruit of that infamous act done through pride, productive of evil.* O wicked-minded one, thou thinkest of thyself-'I am a hero;' but thou that hast taken away Sita like a thief, hast no feeling of shame. Hadst thou forcibly outraged Sita in my very presence, thou, slain by my shafts, wouldst have seen thy brother-Khara. By luck, O thou of an evil soul, thou hast come within the range of my vision. To-day by means of sharp shafts shall I bring thee to death's door. To-day beasts of pray will drag thy head having burning ear-rings, severed by my shafts and covered with the dust of the battle-field. O Ravana, voltures will alight on thy breast, as thou wilt lie low on the ground; and, athirst, they will drink the blood gushing out from thy wounds. To-day fowls of the air will keep pulling at thee pierced with my shafts, and lying lifeless, as birds do serpents." Having spoken thus, that slayer of foes-Ramashowered arrows on the lord of Rakshasas, staying before. And the prowess and strength and spirits and force of arms of Rama burning for the destruction of his foe, were doubled. And all the Weaponst presented themselves before that one cognisant of self; and the Seet-handedness exceedingly powerful one increased immensely exhilaration of spirits. Seeing all these auspicious omens coming of themselves, Rama, finisher of Rakshasas, set about smiting his foe more energetically than ever. And assailed with stones by the monkeys and showers of shafts by Raghava, the Ten-necked one felt his heart undergoing a revolution. And when through the stupifaction of his inner self, he could not discharge any weapon, or draw his bow, or put forth his prowess, (Rama) did not persist in smiting him. And the shafts and various arms discharged by him betokened his death; and his last moments were present. And his charioteer, driving his car, perceiving this, calmly took the car away from the field of fight. And then, seeing the king shorn of prowess, and dropt, his charioteer, struck with fear, swiftly turned away his dreadful car having the clatter of clouds, and went away from the field of battle.

* Remarks Ramanuya, 'here and in the next world.'

.t i. o, the presiding delties of them.

SECTION CV.

A FTER gradually regaining his senses, Ravana, urged on by the force of the Finisher, getting into a furious passion, with his eyes reddened in wrath, addressed the charioteer. saying,-'O thou of perverse sense, disregarding me as devoid of prowess, and incompetent, and bereft of vigor,as cowardly, light, nerveless and shorn of energy,-and as divorced by the power of illusion and debarred by arms.-thou actest on thine own understanding. Wherefore disregarding me, and not minding my purpose, hast thou taken away my car from before the presence of the enemy? O abject one! by thee have my long-earned renown and energy and prowess and credit been brought to naught. In the very sight of an enemy of renowned prowess, and one capable of being gratified with valorous deeds, hast thou made me, burning for battle, look as if I were a coward. As, O wicked-minded or ethou dost not even through heedlessness, * Vighurnakridayak: had his heart paralysed, according to the commentator. I prefer the sense given as more graphic.—T.

take the car to the field of battle, I infer for certain that thou hast been bribed by the foe. The act that thou hast done. doth not appear as that of a friend seeking our welfare; but to-day thou hast acted like an enemy. If thou hast been maintained by me, if thou rememberest my merit, do thou swiftly turn the car before my enemy has departed." Thus admonished by him of slender sense, the charioteer possessed of intelligence, humbly spake unto Ravana words fraught with good,-"I am not afraid, nor stupified, nor have I been bribed by the foe, nor am I negligent. And I have not forgotten thy affection or thy good offices. And studious of thy welfare, I have saved thy fame; and with a mind overflowing with affection I have done (unto thee) this unpalatable good. O mighty monarch, for this, thou shouldst not, like a frivolous and base one, criminate me that am ever engaged in what is good and dear unto thee. Listen! I shall render thee reason why I turned away from the field the car, rushing like a river when the sea is swelled up.* I knew that thou hadst been fatigued in consequence of thy mighty exertions in the fight. And I could not perceive that thy prowess then stood superior (to that of the foe).† And the steeds of my car were worn out by carrying it; and they were battered, and helpless, and perspired like kine in a shower. And bad omens last sprang up before us. And on these occurring. I perceived that things would go against us. O thou endowed with exceeding might, a charioteer should be conversant with season and place, with omens, and the expressions of emotions; as also with depression of spicits. exhitaration, and grief. And he should have a knowledge of low, level and uneven grounds, and the time for conflict. and he should be able to perceive the shortcomings of the enemy. And a charioteer mounted on a car, should know when to draw near an enemy, when to turn away from him; when to stay: and when to turn round from before the foeall these (he should know). What I, for bringing respite unto thee as well as the horses of the car, have done by way of removing the terrific exhaustion, is proper. I did not, O hero, turn away the car of my own sheer will. What I have done. O lord, had been dictated by my affection for thee. Command me. What thou savest, O destroyer of foes, I will do every way. O hero, with my whole soul," Thereat, wellpleased with the speech of the charioteer, Ravana, eager · for encounter, after praising him in various ways, said,-"O charioteer, do thou swiftly take the car towards Raghava. Without slaving his foe in fight, Ravana turneth not away (from the field)." Speaking thus, Ravana-lord of Rakshasas -gave the charioteer on the car an excellent ornament for the hand. Hearing Ravana's words, the charioteer drove the car. And urged on by the speech of Ravana, the charioteer drove on the steeds,-and in a moment the mighty chariot of the Rakshasa-chief appeared before Rama in the field of battle.

On the ascension of the Moon.

&#x27;t Two negatives in this verse amounting to an affirmative. This is the only instance of double negatives in Valmiki.—T.

SECTION CVI.

THEN the revered Agastya, who, desirous of witnessing the fight, had along with the deities come there,—seeing Rāvana spent with the toil of conflict, staying in the field plunged in thought, and stationed before Rāma for engaging in encounter,—addressed Rāma,drawing near to him, saying,—"Rāma, Rāma, O mighty-armed one, hearken to the eternal secret, whereby, my child, thou wilt conquer all foes in fight,—Aditya-hridaya,* sacred, capable of destroying all foes, bringing victory-the recitation, enduring and indestructible,-and supremely good; fraught with all welfare, removing every sin,-chasing away anxiety and grief, bringing length of days; and excellent. Do thou worship Vivacwata's offspring-the Sun-lord of the world, furnished with rays,-who maketh people engage in work, and who is bowed down to by deities and Asuras. This effulgent one, producing rays, is instinct with the spirits of all the deities; and he with his rays ruleth all creatures-and the hosts of celestials and Asuras. This Sun is Brahma and Vishnu and Siva and Skanda(4) and Prajapati,(6) and Mahendra and Dhanada(e) and the Destroyer-Yama-and Soma(d) and the Lord of waters; and the Pitris (e) and the Vasus, and the Sadhyas(f) and the two Acwinis(s) and the Maruts and Manu,(h) and the Wind-god and the God of fire and the creatures and the Creator of life and the seasons. And he is Aditya() and Savita(i) and Suryya(i) and Khaga(i) and Pusha(ii) and

# Int - The heart of the Six - the designs tien of a Vedic Hyn m.

(a) The celestial generallissimo. The commentator gives a spiritual interpretation. 'He that by means of his rays openeth up the five organs of perception.'

(b) The lord of all creatures, by virtue of his bringing forth all beings through his energy.

(a) Dispenser of riches, a name of Kuvera.

(d) Furnished with splendour, a name of the Moon. According to some 'endowed with energy.'

(e) Lit. the ancestral manes. Here the generator of everything.

(f) An order of semi-divine beings. Here, 'He who is adored by the spiritual.'

(g) In virtue of his omnipresence and his being the healer of all ailments.

<sup>(4)</sup> All-knowing and being the primæval sovereign.

(i) 'He from whom all derive sustenance.'

(f) 'The producer of heart and the spiritual faculties by heat, and corn, etc. by showers'

<sup>(#) &#</sup>x27;Coursing alone, according to the commentator. It may also means—'He that sets people to work.'

(i) 'Coursing the highest heavens,' or says the commontator 'the heavens of the heart.'

(m) 'The maintainer.'

Gavastimān, (a) and the Golden-looking and Bhānu(b) and Hiranyaretā (c) and Divākara, (d) And he is Haridaçwa(e) and Sahasrārchi(f) and Saptasapti(g) and Marichimān, (h) And he subdueth darkness, and he is Sambhu(i) and Tashtā(f) and Mārtandaka (b) and Ançumān. (i) And he is Hiranyagarbha, (m) Sicira, (n) and Tapana, (o) and Ahaskara (b) and Ravi, (v) and Agnigarbha, (r) and Aditi's son, (s) and Sankha, (d) and Siciranāçana, (u) Byomanātha, (v) and Tamabheda, (m) the one proficient in Rik, Yajus and Sāma; and Ghanavrishti, (x) and

- (b) Bhdnu-'having brightness.'
- (c) Hiranyaretd-'instinct with the cosmic energy.'
- (d) Divákara 'maker of day.'
- (e) Haridaçua-'pervading all sides,' or 'having black steeds,'
- (f) Sahasrarchi—'thousand-rayed. The commentator explains spiritually, He whose cognition points in infinite directions.'
- (g) 'He from whom proceed the seven organs of sense of people.' Or 'he who has seven steeds.'
  - (h) 'Having rays.'
  - (i) 'He from whom proceed the several sorts of happiness.'
  - (f) 'He who removes the misfortunes of his votaries.'
  - (4) 'He that infuses life into the lifeless mundanc egg,'
  - (I) 'Having rays.'
- (m) The cause of the creation, preservation and destruction of the Universe.
  - (#) 'Good-natured.'
  - (e) Tapa-means 'wealth.' Tapana-the possessor of all riches.
  - (p) Ahas-day and Kara-maher.
  - (9) Rauti-teacheth-Ravi-he that teacheth.
  - (7) Lit. fire-wombed. He that carries the fire of doom within himself.
  - (s) Aditi-'without destruction'-means 'Brahma knowledge.'
  - (t) Supreme happiness.
  - (4) The remover of intellectual stupor or evil-mindedness.
  - (v) Lord of the welkin.
  - (a) Dispeller of darkness.
- (x) He from whom floweth the fruit of acts: or he from whom come downpours. The latter epithet is justified on grounds of Physical Geography, rain being ultimately dependant on waar heat.

(a) Gavastimin-'Ray-furnished, or having the all-permeating Spirit of Auspiciousness.'

the friend of the Apas. (a) and he that swiftly courseth in the Vindhya way. And he is Atapi@ and Mandali@ and Mrityn. (4) And he is Pingala. (e) and the destroyer of everything, and the Omniscient, and he having the universe for his form, (7) and the exceedingly energetic one, and the beloved of all, and that one lording it over all kinds of actions. And he is the lord(s) of stars and planets and constallations, and the origin of everything, and the one powerful pre-eminently of powerful things.(h)—and the one having twelve forms.(h) I bow unto thee (baving these forms and functions). Salutation unto the Eastern mount and the mount of the West. Salutation unto the lord of the stellar bodies and salutation also unto the lord of day. Salutation and salutation unto him that bringeth victory, and the joy that springeth up from victory; and unto him of vellow steeds. Salutation, salutation, O thousand-rayed one | Salutation and salutation unto Aditya. Salutation unto him that keepeth his senses under subjection; Salutation and salutation unto the Hero,(i) and unto Sarangu(i) and unto him that awakenest the Lotus. (1) And (salutation) unto thee, O fierce one. Salutation unto the Lord himself of Brahma, Içana(m) and Achchyuta,(n) and unto Sura(n) and unto bim

(a) Apas may mean either 'the good,' or 'water.' Vindhya way mean either the way known as Brahmanári or the orbit of the Sun.

(b) He that is intent on creating the cosmos.

(c) Ray-crowned or adorned with gems.

(d) The bringer of death.

(e) The motive force of the blood-tube called Pingali.

(f) Or the ornament of the Universe.

(g) i. e. the controller of them, remarks Ramanuja.

(h) Such as, observes the commentator, as fire.

(i) i. e. the months of the year.

(j) Him that leadeth the senses, and that is endowed with the prowess of slaying Tripura etc.

<sup>(4)</sup> Him that deservest the pranaba, the holiest formula in all Hindu Ccripture.

(f) That awakenest the external lotus as well as the lotus of the heart,-

(m) Siva.

(a) Vishnu,

(c) The sun.

that constitutes the knowledge of Aditya, and unto him that unfoldeth me and not me; and unto the devourer of all, and unto the form of the destroyer of the darkness of ignorance. Salutation unto the destroyer of darkness, and unto the destroyer of enemies, and unto him of immeasurable Soul, and unto the destroyer of the ingrate, and unto the deity, and unto the lord of all stellar bodies. And salutation unto him that boasteth of the splendour of burning gold, unto the destroyer of all mental obscurity, -and unto the maker of the universe. Salutation unto the remover of darkness; unto the · illuminator of the Soul; unto the all-beholding one of all the worlds. The lord createth everything and verily destroyeth it. And with his rays he sucketh up, and destroyeth and createth (everything). When all are asleep, this one waketh. and he is resident in the hearts of all creatures. This one is both Agnihotra as well as the fruit reaped by the sacrifices thereof. And he constitutes the gods and the sacrifices and the fruit also, thereof; and he is the lord of all acts that are performed by creatures. If a person recites this (hymn), he, O Raghava, doth not come by misfortune, when he is in peril of his life, or is ill, or in a lonely place, or in fear. Do thou, with concentration, worship this god of gods, this lord of the universe. By reciting (this hymn) instinct with the three virtues, thou wilt obtain victory in battle. This very instant, O mighty-armed one, thou wilt conquer Ravana." Having said this, Agastya went whither from he had come. Hearing this, that exceedingly energetic one had his grief gone. Then, well pleased, Raghava, exerting himself, contemplated (the hymn). And reciting this, he beholding the Sun, attained excess of joy. And sipping water again and again, and becoming purified, that powerful one, taking up his bow, and viewing Ravana, advanced with a delighted heart, to obtain victory. And he became intent on his death with his dearest energies. Then exceedingly delighted, and filled with rejoicings, the Sun, in the midst of the celestial hosts knowing that the destruction of the Sovereign of the night-rangers was at hand,—spoke unto Rāma "Bestir thyself."

SECTION CVII.

THEN the charioteer fully drove with speed Ravana's car, capable of bringing down the hosts of foes, resembling in form a city of the Gandharvas, having elevated streamers. voked with surpassingly superb steeds, engarlanded in gold. stocked with war-like implements; furnished with ensigns and standards; appearing to devour the welkin; making the earth herself resound; destructive to hostile nosts; and filling its own party with delight. And as, it speedily descended, the monarch of men beheld that Rakshasa-king's resounding car, having buge standards, yoked with black chargers, and endowed with fierce splendour; as if flaming in the firmament: having the resplendance of the Sun himself; with thronging lightning pennons; displaying the glow of Indra's weapon; * showering arms; and resembling rain-charged clouds. Seeing the enemy's car resembling a mass of clouds having a chatter resembling the sounds sent by a cleaving mountain rived by the thunder, Rama, vehemently drawing his bow curved like the infant moon, addressed Mātali-charioteer unto the thousand-eved (deity), + saying, -"O Matali, behold the enraged chariot of my foe as it courseth on. From the furious with which he is again wheeling at my right, it appeareth that he hath set his heart on slaying me in encounter, Do

<sup>* .</sup> The rain-bow.

t Indra.

thou therefore heedfully drive the car right against the vehicle of my foe. I wish to destroy this one even as the wind scattereth clouds that have appeared. Do thou with all thy wits about thee, without trepidation, and holding thy heart as well as thy eye in calmness, swiftly drive the chariot ruled by the reins. Worthy of Purandara's car, thou ought not to be taught by me. Desirous of encounter and my whole soul bent on fight, I simply remind thee-not teach thee." Pleased with these words of Rama, the excellent celestial charioteer-Mātali-drove the car. Then leaving · Ravana's mighty car on the right, he enveloped Ravana with the dust raised by the wheels. Thereat the Ten-necked one, enraged, with his eyes coppery and dilated (in passion), covered with arrows Rama staying in front of his car. Enraged at the smiting, Rama, with his ire aroused, but summoning up patience, took up in the encounter the bow of Indra endowed with exceeding vehemence; as well as highly impetuous shafts having the resplendance of the solar rays. And then there began a furious encounter between those (two) eager for slaying each other; confronting each other like unto flaming tions. And then desirous of destruction of Rayana,-celestials Gandharvas, and Siddhas and supersaints assembled to go to behold the encounter taking place between the two care. And for the destruction of Ravana and the success of Raghava, there occurred round about the cars terrible bodements capable of making people's down stand on end. The god poured down showers of blood on the car of Ravana; and a violent tornado eddied on his right. And a mighty swarm of vultures, wheeling in the heavens, pursued the car wherever it moved. And Lanka was enveloped with evening resembling the red java flowers and even in day appeared ablaze. Lightnings and firebrands accompanied by a terrible sound began to fall down on all sides. And beholding these omens inauspicious unto Ravana all the Rakshasas were greatly sorry. And wherever Ravana moved the earth shook and the hands of all the Rakshasas fighting were as if paralysed. The copper coloured, the yellow, the red, and the white rays of the sun falling before Rayana appeared like melted metals of a mountain. And the jackals followed by vultures, vomitting forth fire and casting their looks at him, began to emit inauspicious cries. And in that battle-field the unfavourable wind began to blow raising dust and obstructing the vision of the king of Rakshasas. On the Rakshasa host on all sides dreadful lightnings were showered without the sound of the clouds. All the quarters were enshrouded with darkness and the welkin became invisible being covered with darkness. And setting up a dreadful quarrel hundreds of terrible Sharikas* began to fall down on his chariot. The horses emitted forth sparks of fire from their hips and tears from their eyes. These and various other dreadful omens arose there announcing the destruction And there appeared on all sides many an of Ravana. auspicious and good sign intimating the approach of Rama's victory. And beholding all those auspicious marks announcing Rama's success, Lakshmana was greatly delighted and considered Ravana as slain. Thereupon beholding all those auspicious signs, Raghava, well qualified to decipher them attained an excess of delight and became anxious to display a greater prowess.

A kind of bird (Turdus Salica, Buch).

SECTION CVIII.

THEREUPON there ensued a mighty and dreadful encounter of two cars between Rama and Ravana, creating terror unto all people. And the army of Rakshasas and the mighty host of the monkeys, although they had weapons in their hands, became stupified (for the time being). And beholding them (Rāma and Rāvana) fight, all the Rākshasas and monkeys, having their minds agitated, were greatly surprised. With various weapons and hands uplifted for fight, they, greatly wondered, stood there beholding them and did not address themselves to fight with each other. The Rākshasas beholding Ravana, and the monkeys beholding Rama with wonder-stricken eyes, the whole army appeared like a picture. And espieing all omens Raghava and Ravana began to fight, undaunted, firm, resolute and unagitated by anger. And determining that Kākutstha would win victory and Ravana would die, they began to display their own prowess. Thereupon the highly powerful Ravana, setting his arrows in anger, discharged them at the pennon stationed on Raghava's car. Those arrows reaching the flag staff of the Purandara chariot and perceiving its might fell down on the earth. Thereupon the highly powerful Rama, wroth, stretching his bow, made up his mind to return the blow. And aiming at Ravana's flag staff he discharged a sharpened shaft flaming unbearably by its own lustre like a huge serpent. And the effulgent Rama discharged a shaft aiming at (Ravana's) banner which, piercing the Ten-necked demon's flag fell, down on the earth. And beholding his flag staff thus broken down the highly powerful Ravana became ablaze as if burning down every thing with his unbearable ire. And being possessed by wrath he began to make a downpour of shalls. Ravana then, with flaming arrows, pierced Rama's steeds. The celestial horses were not bewildered thereby nor their course was slackened. And they remained thoroughly unagitated as if they were stricken with lotus stalks. Beholding the steeds thus unmoved Ravana way again exercised with wrath and began to discharge afresh his various weapons—gadas, parighas, chakras and musalas, mountain tops, trees, darts and parashus and thousands of other shafts by virtue of his illusive powers. And unmoved was his energy. And that downpour of various weapons became buge and terrible in the conflict creating terror and making a dreadful noise. Thereupon leaving aside Räghava's car he began to assail the monkey-host and enveloped the sky with a continual discharge of arrows. The Ten-necked demon let loose many a weapon even at the risk of his own life. And beholding Ravana in the encounter thus actively engaged in the discharge of arrows, Kākuthstha, smiling, set up pointed shafts, and discharged them by hundreds and thousands. Beholding them Ravana again filled the welking with arrows-and thus with shafts discharged by them both another flaming sky was created. None (of the arrows) missed the aim, none of them failed to pierce another and none of them was fruitless. And the arrows discharged by Rama and Ravana stricking each other fell down on the earth. And they standing on their right and left began to make a continued downpour of arrows and enveloped the sky entirely. And they opposing each other, Ravana slew Rāma's steeds and Rāma in his turn slew Rāvanan's. They, thus enraged fought with each other and for sometime there ensued a terrible encounter capable of making ones down stand on end. And the highly powerful Ravana and Rama" fighting with each other in the conflict by means of sharpened arrows, the lord of Rakshasas beholding his flag staff broken down became enraged with the foremost of Raghus.

The epithet in the text is Lakshmana's older brother.

SECTION CIX.

RAMA and Ravana thus opposing each other in battle, all the animals beheld them, stricken with astonishment. And those two great heroes, highly angered, began to dash towards and assail each other; and being determined to slay each other they looked greatly dreadful. And their characteers drove the cars on, displaying their skill by moving in circles, in rows and diverse other ways. And those two excellent heroes, discharging their shafts and influenced by illusions, assauled each other proceeding and receding, Rama attacking Ravana and Ravana withstanding him. And these two cars coursed the earth for sometime like clouds accompanied by showers. And displaying many a movement in the conflict they again stood facing each other, the forepart of one car touching that of the other and the heads of the steeds touching each other; and the pennous, stationed on one touched those of the other. Rama, with four sharpened arrows, shot off his bow, removed the flaming horses of Ravana to some distance. And finding his steeds thus removed he was exercised with wrath. And the Ten-necked one discharged sharpened arrows at Raghava. And be was pierced by thuse arrows coming from the powerful Ten-necked demon. He was neither overwhelmed nor pained therewith and he again discharged arrows resembling the thunder-bolts. And the Ten-necked domon again discharged arrows at the charioteer, which fell with great vehicinence on the person of Matali. Matali was not the least pained or overwhelmed in that encounter. And beholding his charioteer thus assailed Rama was excited with wrath and overwhelmed his foe with a net of arrows. And the heroic Raghava showered on his enemy's chariot shafts by twentys, thirtys, sixtys, hundreds and thousands. And the lord of Rakshasas, Ravana, who was stationed on the car, wroth, attacked Rama in the conflict with maces and Musalas. And there again ensued a terrible conflict capable of making one's down stand on end. And the seven oceans were overwhelmed with the sound of maces, musalas, Parighas and gold-feathered arrows. And those inhabiting the regions under the agitated oceans, all the Danavas and thousands of Pannagas were greatly pained. And greatly shook the earth with her mountains, forests and gardens. The Sun was shorn of its resplendance and the wind blew very rough. Thereupon the celestials, with Gandharbas, Siddhas, great saints, Kinnaras and serpents, were all worked up with anxiety. And beholding the dreadful encounter between Rama and Ravana capable of making people's down stand on end, the celestials with ascetics began to pray,-"May good betide the Brahmins and cows, may people live in peace and may Raghava defeat Ravana, the lord of Rakshasas, in the conflict." And the crowd of Gandharbas and Apsaras beholding that wonderful battle between Ramaand Ravana, said,-"The occan resembleth the sky and the sky resembleth the ocean-forsooth this encounter between Rama and Ravana befits them only." Thereupon Rama of long-arms, the enhancer of the glory of Raghu's race, enraged, set his arrow, resembling a serpent, on his bow, and cut assunder Ravana's head wearing shinning Kundalas. And that head in the presence of the inhabitants of the three regions fell down on the earth. Instantly there arose another head resembling the former; and it was spendily cut off by the light-handed Rama. As soon as the second head was chopped off in the encounter by means of shafts another appeared again. And that was again severed by Rama's shafts resembling thunder-bolts. And thus were severed hundred heads all equal in brilliance. But the end of Ravana's life was not seen by him. Thereupon the heroic Raghava, conversant with the use of all weapons, the enhancer of Kaucalva's joy, began to reason within himself in various ways .- "Verily these are the arrows by which Maricha was killed, and Khara with Dushana was slain-Viradha was destroyed in the forest of Krauncha-the headless demon in the forest of Dandaka-Salas and mountains were broken - the ocean was agitated-and Vali was killed ;-- I do not perceive the reason, why they are becoming fruitless when discharged at Ravana." Thinking thus Raghava made himself ready in the conflict and began to shower arrows on Ravana's Thereupon Ravana too, the lord of Rakshasas, seated in a car and highly enraged, assailed Rāma in the conflict with a downpour of maces and Musalas. dreadful and huge conflict, capable of making hairs stand on end, continued for seven nights before the eyes of the celestials, Dānavas, Yakshas, Pisāchas, Uragas and serpents stationed in the sky, on the earth or on the mountain tops. Neither for the night nor for the day, nor for a moment did the fight between Rama and Ravana cease. And beholding the conflict between Dacaratha's son and the lord of Raksbasas, and Raghava's victory, the high-souled charioteer of the lord of the celestials spake speedily unto Rama engaged in the conflict.

SECTION CX.

THEREUPON Matali, reminding him, spake unto Raghava— "Why dost thou, O hero as if not knowing, fear him? Do thou. O lord, discharge at him the weapon obtained from the great Patriarch. The time for (his) destruction, as described by the celestials, hath arrived." Being reminded by those words of Matali, Rama took up the flaming shaft, breathing as if like a serpent. The great Rishi Agastya first conferred this upon him. This is a huge and dreadful shaft given by Brahma and highly useful in battle. It was made by Brahma of undecaying prowess for Indra and conferred by him upon the Lord of celestials desirous of acquiring victory. In its wings there is wind, in its head there is fire and the Sun, in its body there is the sky and in its weight there are the (hill) Meru and Mandara. it is resplendent by its own lustre, well feathered and adorned with gold-made of the essence of all objects and bright as the rays of the Sun. It is like the fire of dissolution enveloped in smoke-like the flaming serpent, capable of piercing men, serpents and horses and was swift-coursing. (It can) rend the gateways, Parighas and hills-is soaked in blood, dipped in marrow, and extremely dreadful. It is hard as the lightning-producing a dreadful sound, assailing various (divisions of the) army, creating terror unto all, dreadful and (as if) breathing like a serpent. It is terrible as the Death in the conflict and provides food always for the herons, vultures, cranes, jackals and the Rakshasas. It is the enhancer of the monkey-leaders' joy and the repressor of the Rakshasas and is feathered like unto a bird with many a picturesque wing. And the highly powerful Rama, consecrating in accordance with the mantras laid down in the Vedas, that huge shaftthe foremost of all in the world, removing the fear of the Ikshwaku race, destroying the fame of the enemies and conducing to the joy of its own party, set it on his bow. And that excellent arrow being mounted on his bow by Raghava all the animals were stricken with fear and the earth shook. And (Rama) highly enraged, and greatly wary, suppressing (his breath) discharged that shaft at Ravana-piercing to the vitals. (That Brahma weapon) irrepressible as the thunder, dreadful as the Death and discharged by Rama, fell down on Ravana's breast. And that shaft, capable of bringing about death and gifted with velocity, when discharged, cleft the breast of the vicious-souled Rayana. And that body-ending arrow, bathed in blood, stealing away the life of Ravana, entered the earth. That shaft, slaying Ravana, soaked in blood and successful, again entered the quiver* humbly. And from his hand, who was deprived of his life, fell down instantly on earth his shafts and bow. And fell down on the earth from the chariot, the highly effulgent Rayana, gifted with dreadful velocity and shorn of his life. And beholding him thus fallen down, the remaining night-rangers, deprived of their lord and stricken with terror fled away to various quarters. And beholding the destruction of the Ten-necked (demon) and the victory of Raghava, the monkeys, fighting with trees, pursued them on all sides. And being assailed by the monkeys and having their countenances full of tears in consequence of their lord being slain they fled away to Lanka in fear. Thereupon the monkeys being greatly delighted roared out the victory of Rama. The celestial bugle was sounded in the sky and there blew the excellent air carrying the celestial fragrance. Flowers were showered upon Rāma's car which was covered therewith. The celestials in the sky began to chaunt the glory of Rama and praise him. And Ravana, the dread of all people, being slain, the celestials with the

In some texts there is "napunarabishat" i, e, did not enter the Charanas were greatly delighted. And slaying that foremost of the Rākshasas, Rāma satisfied the desire of Sugriva, Angada and Bibbishana. Thereupon the celestials attained their peace, the quarters were delighted, the atmosphere was clear, calm air began to prevail all over the earth, and the Sun appeared in its full rays. Thereupon Sugriva, Bibbishana and Lakshmana, welcomed Rāma, of unmitigated prowess, singing his glory. And there appeared beautiful at the battle-field Rāma of firm promise, slaying his enemy and encircled by his army and friends, like unto the Lord of the celestials surrounded by the gods.

SECTION CXI.

BEHOLDING his brother defeated, slain and lying down on the battle-field, Bibhishana, overpowered with the weight of his grief, began to lament-"O hero, well-known for thy prowess, wise and conversant with polity, thou wert used to excellent beds, why dost thou lie down on the earth, spreading (on the earth) thy long and actionless arms, always adorned with Angadas and being shorn of thy helmet having the resplendance of the Sun? O hero, thou hast come by what I had anticipated and what did not please thee who wert possessed by delusions. Prahasta, Indrajit, Kumbhakarna, Atikaya, Atiratha, Narantaka, yourself and others-none of you paid head, out of haughtines, to what I had said which hath now been brought about. Oh! the bridge of the gious hath been broken, the figure of the virtue hath been spoiled, the refuge of the strong and powerfulhath disappeared and thou hast attained to the state of the heroes! The sun hath fallen down on the earth, the moon hath been shorn of its lustre, the fire hath been extinguished and virtue hath desisted from its action, this heroe, the foremost of those using weapons, falling down on the earth. O thou the foremost of the Rakshasas lying down in the dust on the battle field like one asleep, whom else have these remaining (Rakshasas) deprived of their power and energy, got? The huge tree, of the lord of Raleshasas, having patience for its leaves, velocity for its flowers, the power of asceticism and heroism for its firm roots, bath been uprooted by the Rághava wind. Mad-elephant-like Ravana, having prowess for its tusk, family rank for its back bone, anger for its legs, and delightedness for its trunk, hath been laid low on the ground by the lion of the Ikshwaku race. The powerful Rakshasa-fire, having prowess and energy for its rays, angry breath for its smoke, own strength for its power of burning, hath been extinguished in battle by Ramalike cloud. The Rakshasa bull ever defeating others and powerful as the wind, having Rakshasas for its tail, hump and horns, and fickleness for its ears and eyes, bath been slain to-day by Rama-tiger." Hearing these words, pregnant with sound reasonings from Bibhishana and beholding him overwhelmed with grief Rama said,-"(This lord of Rakshasas) of dreadful prowess hath not been slain in battle disabled. He is gifted with great prowess and energy and devoid of the fear of death.* The heroes abiding by the virtues of the Kshatriyas, who fall at the battle field for enhancing their glory, when dead, should not be mourned for. This is not the time to mourn for him although possessed by death, by whom gifted with intellect, Indra with the three worlds was terrified in conflict. Besides success in battle is not perpetual; either one slays his enemy or meets with his destruction at his hands in the conflict. Tols procedure of the Kshatryas was laid down by the ancient preceptors that a Kshatrya, when slain in battle should not be mourned for. Beholding this to be certain and attaining calmness, do thou be freed from thy sorrow thick what should be done now. Bibbishana stricken with grief addressed the powerful son of the king speaking thus with words tending to his brother's well-being. "Thou hast, like the ocean breaking down its banks, broken him down, who had not been ere this even defeated by Basava and the celestials. By him were conferred many a gift on those who wanted them, were'enjoyed many a luxury, were maintained many a servant, distributed wealth unto friends and slain the enemies. He propitiated fire, performed great austerities, was conversant with the Vedas and the great performer of sacrifices. I desire to perform, by thy instructions, his becoming obsequies." Being thus addressed by Bibbishana with piteous accents, the high-souled son of the lord of men, gifted with great energy, ordered him to perform his obsequies and said. "With death our enmity hath terminated and our object hath been accomplished: he is as dear unto me as unto thee: perform (therefore) his funeral rites."

f. e. he has accidentally met with death.

BECTION CXII.

BEHOLDING Ravana slain by the high-souled Raghava Rakshasees, stricken with grief, issued out of the inner appartments. Stricken with grief and with dishevelled hairs they rolled in the dust albeit prevented again and again like unto cows separated from their calves. And coming with the northern gate along with the Rakshasas, entering the dreadful arena of battle and searching their slain lord the

she-demons cried piteously-"O lord, O husband, O our all" and moved along the battle field soaked in blood and filled with headless corpses. With eyes full of tears and overwhelmed with the grief of their husband they began to move about like she-elephants without the lord of their herd. Thereupon they beheld there on the earth the huge-bodied and the highly powerful and effulgent Ravana slain like red And beholding their, lord lying down on the battle-field they all fell on his body like creepers torn assunder. Some wept embracing him respectfully-some holding his feet and some placing themselves around his neck. And some taking up his hand rolled on the ground and some were beside themselves (with grief) beholding the slain (Ravana's) countenance. And some placing her head on his lap, and beholding his face, wept, bathing it with tears like a lotus enveloped with snow. Seeing their husband Ravana thus slain on the earth, they stricken with grief, bewailing again and again in sorrow, wept profusely. by whom the king Vaisrabana was deprived of his flower car, who terrified the high-souled Gandharbas, ascetics and the celestials in battle field, who did not know of any fear from the Asuras, celestials and the Pannagas, hath now been overpowered by a man. He, whom the celestials, the Danavas and the Rakshas could not slay, hath been slain in conflict by a man walking on foot. He, who was incapable of being killed by the celestials, Yakshas and Asuras, hath met with death like one devoid of prowess at the hands of a mortal." Speaking in this wise, the she-demons, overpowered with sorrow, wept and bewailed again and again (saying),-"Not hearing (the counsels) of thy friends, always pointing out thy welfare, thou didst bring Sita for thy destruction as well as that of the Rakshasas. Although thy brother Bibhishana addressed thee with words pregnant with thy welfare-thou, for thy own destruction, out of thy misgivings, didst excite his anger and hast (now) seen (the result thereof). Hadst thou returned Sita the daughter of the king of Mithila to Rama, this mighty and dreadful disaster, destroying the very root, would not have befallen us. Rama's desire would have been encompassed-his friends would have been successful (through Bibbishana)-we would not been widowed and our enemies would not have got their desires fulfilled. By thee, Sita was kept by force in captivity in a ruthless manner, and the Rakshasas, ourselves and thyself-all three equally have been slain. O foremost of the Rakshasas, forsooth this is not thy own folly-it is Accident that uniteth all things and it is Accident again that bringeth about destruction. O thou of huge arms-the destruction of the monkeys and the Rakshasas as well as that of thyself hath been brought about by Accident. When the course of accident is about to bring about result-wealth, desire, prowess or command-nothing is capable of withstanding it." Thus wept piteously the wives of the lord of Rakshasas like unto so many she-elephants-rendered poorly, stricken with grief and with tears in their eyes.

SECTION CXIII.

THE foremost of the wives of the Rakshasa (king) bewailing piteously cast her looks poorly towards her husband. And beholding her Ten-necked husband slain by Rama of inconcievable actions Mandodari bewailed there piteously,—"O thou of huge arms! O younger brother of Baishravana! Even Purandara feared to stand before thee when enraged. The great Rishis—the far-famed Gandharbah and the Cháranas, fled away to different quarters in thy fear.

And then (how) hast thou been overpowered in battle by Rama who is a mere man? Why is it that thou art not ashamed of it, O king, O lord of the Rākshasas ? Conquering the three worlds with thy prowess thou didst attain thy glory: and it is unbearable, that a man, ranging in the forest, bath slain thee. Thou, who art capable of assuming shapes at will, hast been slain in conflict by Rama, in the city of Lanka unapproachable by men. I do not believe that thy destruction,-who hadst always been crowned with success, before the forces, is work of Rama. (Methinks) Death (himself) came there in the shape of Raina and spread illusions unconsciously for thy destruction, O thou of great strength. Or thou hast been slaip by Vasava-(no) what power has he got to face thee in the conflict gifted with great strength, prowess and energy and an enemy of the celestials as thou art ? It is evident that the great ascetic Vishnu, having truth for his prowess-the soul of all beings, ever existing, without beginning, middle or end, greater than the great, the Preserver of the Nature, holding conch, discus and club, having Sribatsa* on his breast, always beautiful, incapable of being conquered, without destruction, devoid of end, and the lord of all men, assuming this shape of a man and encircled by the celestials, assuming monkey shapes, hath for the behoof of mankind, slain (thee) the dreadful enemy of the gods with all (thy) family and Rakshasas. Subduing all thy passions, those didst conquer the three worlds-remembering their grudge they have now overpowered thee. Rama is not a man since he slew at Janasthana thy brother Khara encircled by many a Rakshasa. We were sore-distressed when Hanuman, by his own prowess, entered the city of Lanka incapable of being approached even by the celestials. And I prevented thee from creating enmity with • A particular mark usually said to be a curl of hair on the breastsof Vishou. The emblem of the tenth fina or the mark above ascribed to Vishou or Krishou.

Raghava, but thou didst not pay heed to my words and this is the result (thereof). O foremost of Rakshasas-O thou of a vicious understanding, for the destruction of thy wealth, thyself and thy relatives, thou didst suddenly cheriah amour for Sita, greater than (even) Asundhuti and Robini. Forsooth thou didst perpetrate an unbecoming deed by distressing the adorable Sita ever devoted unto her lord, an earth* even unto Earth berself and a Sreet even unto Sree berself. And having brought in a false guise from the solitary forest the sorrowful and chaste Sita, having a blameless person, thou didst bring on the destruction of the family. Thou didst fail to encompass thy desire for the company of Sita. But now, forsooth, O my lord, thou hast been burnt down by her devotion who is devoted unto her husband. I Thou wert not burnt down when thou didst captivate that middle-statured (damsel) whom fear all the celestials headed by Indra and Agni. O husband, (proper) time appearing the perpetrator gets the result of his vicious deeds; there is not the least doubt in this. The performer of the good receives good (result)—the perpetrator of the vicious (deeds) meets with bad (result). Bibhishana hath attained to happiness and thou hast met with this thy end. There are damsels in your seraglio far more beautiful than she but thou possessed by cupid couldst not perceive this. Maithilee is not my equal nor superior either in birth, beauty or accomplishments, but thou didst not perceive this by thy misgivings. Death doth not always visit all men without any cause-and Maithilee is the cause of thy death. And death, in consequence of Maithilee, hath taken thee far away. And she, shorn of all sorrow, shall enjoy in the company of Rama, and I, of limited picty, am now sunk in the the ocean of grief. Roaming at large with thee in a car unequalled in beauty on the hill Kailaça, Mandara, Maru, in the garden of Chaitraratha and all other celestial gardens, beholding many a country, wearing variegated clothes and garlands, I have been deprived of all pleasures and enjoyments, O hero, by the death. And I am a widow now. O fie on fickle fortune! O king, in lustre of countenance thou art like the Sun, in grace like the Moon, in beauty like the lotus; thou art graceful, O thou having excellent brows; thou hast got excellent skin, high nose and thy countenance is graced with a brilliant crown and Kundalas. Oh how beautiful. thou didst look with various garlands when thy eye whirled with intoxication on the drinking ground and how beautiful were thy smiles, O lord. Thy countenance doth not shine now-being severed with Rama's shafts, bathed in a pool of blood, having thy back-bone and brain deranged and covered with the dust raised by the wheels of the chariots. Alas! by my ill-luck I have attained to that after state making me a widow which I did never think of. My father is the king of Danavas, my husband the lord of Rakshasas, and my son the subduer of Sikra. I was greatly proud of this and always confident that my protectors were undaunted, dreadful repressors of the enemies and famous for their strength and manliness. O ve foremost of the Rakshasas, how could this fear from man overwhelm you all who were so powerful? (This thy body) is cool, green like Indrancela, high like a huge mountain, and adorned with Keyura, Angada, jewels and garlands of flowers. It was graceful in places of enjoyments and incapable of being looked at in the field of battle. It was brilliant, being decked with ornaments like unto clouds accompanied by lightnings. And this thy person hath been pierced with shalts to-day; (and knowing) that it is not easy of attainment for me I am incapable of embracing

The Earth is an emblem of patience but Sità is more patient than the Barth.-T.

† Sree is the goddess of wealth and good fortune—but Sith is more fortunate than fortune herself.—T.

.‡ is that thou wert not burnt down there and then shows her greatness of mind. +T. § The god of Fire.

(it), covered with shafts piercing through the very vitals. O king (this thy body) green-hued (but now) blood-red is now lying on the ground like unto a mountain shattered with thunder-bolts. That thou wouldst be slain by Rama was Ifke a dream, but it hath proved true! Thou wert like death unto Death himself, why hast thou been possessed by him then? Thou wert the enjoyer of the three worlds' wealth and dread unto them; thou wert the conqueror of the deities presiding over various quarters; thou didst shake Sankara . (himself)-thou wert the subduer of the proud and thy prowess was well-known; thou didst repress the people and slav many a pious man-thou didst, by thy prowess, use to give vent to haughty words before the enemies; thou wert the maintainer of thy kinsmen and servants and the slaver of many perpetrating dreadful deeds; thou wert the destroyer of thousands of celestials, Danavas and Yakshas; thou wert the subbuer of Nivata Kavachas in the encounter: thou didet hinder the performance of many sacrifices and wert the protector of thy relatives; thou wert the obstructer of pious observances, creator of illusions in conflict and thou didst bring away from hither and thither the daughters of the celestials, demons and men; thou didst aggrieve the wives of thy enemies; thou wert the leader of thy own men, the protector of the island of Lanka and the performer of many a dreadful deed; thou didst confer upon us the enjoyment of many a pleasure-and wert the foremost of car-warriors, Beholding such a husband slain by Rama, I am, deprived of my dear lord, still maintaining my being; (forsooth) my heart is very hard. O lord of Rakshasas, used ere to many a valuable bed, why art thou sleeping on earth covered with dust? When my son Indrajit was slain by Lakshmana in conflict I was greatly pained -but to-day I am stain. Deprived of my friends and relatives, separated from thee O my lord, deprived from the enjoyment of many pleasures I shall lament for thee perpetually. Thou hast, O king.

reached the way, long and hard to be treaded-do thou take me, who am stricken with grief and who shall not be able to live without thee. Why dost thou wish to go leaving me hehind who have been rendered poorly? Why dost thou not welcome me, unfortunate and poor, who am bewailing? Why art thou not angry, O lord, beholding me, having put off my veil, walk out on foot by the city-gate? O beloved of thy wives, do thou behold thy wives-who have thrown off their veils. Why art thou not angry seeing them all come out (of the city)? I was thy companion in sports, O my lord; I long for having thee; why art thou not consoling and welcoming me? O king, being imprecated by those damsels, not one, devoted to their husbands, pious and ever engaged in attending upon their superiors, who had been widowed hy thee, thou hast been overpowered by thy enemy. The curse, proceeding from them who had been ill-treated by thee. hath borne fruit. O king, the saying, that the tears of chaste damsels do not uselessly fall on the ground, bath been verified (here) forsooth. O king, conquering the worlds with thy prowess, how couldst thou, always honored by the king, cherish the vile desire of stealing away women? Taking away Rama and Lakshmana from the hermitage by an illusionary deer, thou didst steal away Rama's spouse. I remember to have never heard thee lament in battle. Forsooth, it is our misfortune and the sign of impending death (that thou didst do this) conversant as thou art with the past, present and future. Beholding the daughter of the king of Mithila brought (in the city of Lanka) what, thy younger brother Bibhishana, thinking and sighing, said, bath now proved true, O thou of long-arms. This destruction of the leading Rakshasas hath proceeded from the disaster arising from thy anger and lust. For thy (vicious) deeds all our good fortune is lost-(and from them) hath proceeded the great disaster exterminating the race. And by thee all the Rakshasa families have been deprived of their lords. Thou, well-known for thy strength and manliness, art not worthy di being grieved by me. On account of my effeminate nature my understanding is possessed by sorrow. Carrying thy pious and iniquitous deeds thou hast attained to thy own state-I am only lamenting for me who have been so-ry for thy destruction. O Ten-necked one, thou didst not hear the words of thy friends and brothers, who spoke those well meaning words out of affection. Thou didst not obey the words uttered by Bibhisana, duly and mildly, pregnant with meaning and reasoning and tending to thy welfare. Maddened with thy own prowess thou didst not hear the words of Maricha, Kumbhakarna as well as those of my father-and this is the result thereof. O thou resembling the red clouds. O thou wearing yellow cloth and excellent Angada, stretching thy person on the ground why art thou in the long run bathed in blood? Why dost thou not, like one aslesp, welcome me who am stricken with grief? I am the grand-daughter of the highly powerful Rakshasa Sumali who never flies away from the field of battle: why dost thou not welcome me? Rise up! rise up! why dost thou lie down (on this occasion of) new discomfiture? To-day have the rays of the Sun entered fearlessly the city of Lanka. The Parigha, by which, brilliant as the rays of the Sun, thou didst distress the enemies in conflict, which was always adored by thee like the thunder of the wielder of thunder-bolt, which slew many in battle, and which was adorned with golden nets, now lieth shattered into thousand pieces by arrows. Why dost thou lie on the battle-field embracing her like your beloved spouse? Why dost thou not wish to welcome me like one not beloved unto thee? Oh fie on this heart of mine which is not sundered into thousand (pieces) albeit distressed with the grief of thy death t" Bewailing thus, she, with profuse tears in her eyes, and with her heart overflowing with affection. became senseless. And being beside kerself she flung herself on Ravana's breast, like unto the bright lightning appearing on red evening clouds. Thereupon the other wives, of Ravana, greatly distressed and weeping, and rasing her up who was greatly weeping, began to console her saying :-- "Dost thou not know, O worshipful dame, that the life of beings is very uncertain, and with adverse circumstances even the royal fortune becometh fickle?" Being thus accosted she again wept aloud, bathing with tears her breast and beautiful countenance. In the meantime Rama said to Bibhisana .-"Do thou perform the funeral ceremonies of thy brother and console his wives." Whereto the intelligent Bibbisana replied with the following words-pointing out wealth and piety, and judging by his understanding what is proper. "I do not think it proper to perform his cremation ceremony who had renounced all pious deeds, was wicked, cruel, liar and who had ravished others' wives. He is my enemy in the shape of a brother ever engaged in doing injury unto othersand Ravana is not worthy of my adoration albeit he is adorable by virtue of his being my elder brother. O Rama. perhaps people of this earth will call me cruel but they will again recognise my act as good when they will hear of his vicious deeds." Hearing those words, Rama, the foreignst of the pious and conversant with the skill of speech, greatly delighted, spoke unto Bibbishana (equally) skilled in speech,-"It behoveth me to encompass thy welfare since by thy help I have gained the victory. Olord of Rakshasas, forsooth, thou shouldst hear my well-meaning words. Although this night-ranger perpetrated many vicious and impious deeds still he was ever powerful, heroic and strong in warfare. I have heard that this high-souled Ravana, gifted with strength and a dread unto all people, was not defeated (even) by the celestials headed by the performer of hundred sacrifices. Enmity extendeth up to death-so it thath ended; there is no necessity (of carrying it on). Do thou (therefore) perform his cremation ceremony—he is unto thee as he is unto me. O thou of long-arms it behoveth thee to perform, speedily with due fites and religious ceremonies, his funeral ceremony-thou shalt be the object of praise (unto people)." Hearing the words of Raghava, Bibbishana hastened on and began to make arrangements for the cremation of his slain brother Ravana. And entering the city of Lanka, Bibhishana, the lord of Rakshasas, speedily got out Ravana's Agnihotra, * carts, brass utensils, fire, (and brought) Jaiakas, + sandal-wood, other woods, essences, Agura, other fragrant substances, precious stones, pearls and corals. Thereupon arriving immediately accompanied by Rakshasas and Malyavana he engaged in the performance of cremation ceremony. Thereupon the twice-born ones, with tears in their eyes, covered the Rākshasa-king Rāvana's body, with a silken cloth and placed it on a golden celestial litter. With the sound of various bugles they began to chaunt his praise. And taking up this litter adorned with various charming paintings and flags and carrying fire woods, all the Rakshasas headed by Bibhishana proceeded 'towards the South. The Brahmins, versed in Yayur Veda and with burning fire in their hands, proceeded and were followed by the And the damsels of the seraglio followed speedily leaping (being ever unused to walking). And placing Ravana on the cremation ground, they, greatly stricken with grief, prepared the funeral pyre according to due rites with sandal-woods, Padmakas, Ushiras and sandal and spread an antelope-skin thereon. They (then) performed the excellent obsequies of the manes of the lord of Rakshasas. And raising an altar at the south-east corner they placed fire at the proper place. They then poured curd and clarified butter upon (Ravana's) shoulders. And placing

* A pot for preserving sacred fire.

† The Brahmins who perform obsequies.

‡ Cremation-place.

A sort of drug commonly called Padmalas.

| The root of a fragrant grass.

Sakata on his legs, Ulukhala* on his thighs, and the brass untensils. Arunis and Musals in their proper places, they celebrated (the obsequies of his manes). Thereupon slaying beasts according to the rites laid down in Sastras and pointed out by the great saints, the Rak hasas (made a coverlet dipped in their marrow and clarified butter) and placed it on the face of the lord of Rakshasas. And decking Ravana with fragrant garlands and various clothes, the friends, of Bibhishana, with depressed heart and tears in their eyes. showered dried paddy (on his person). And Bahhishana 'according to due rites put fire to his (luneral pyre). Bathing and with wetted cloth, offering duly liaseed and sacrificial grass mixed with water and consoling (Ravana's) wives again and again, he entreated them to go back. They they entered And those damsels having entered the city, the city. Bibhishana, the lord of Rākshasas, approaching Rāma, stood by his side gently. And Rama too, along with his army, Sugriva and Lakshmana, was greatly delighted after slaying his enemy like unto the wielder of thunder-bolt after slaying (the demon) Vitra. Thereupon leaving aside his bow with arrows, and the huge armour conferred by Mahendra and renouncing ire after the destruction of his enemy Rama assumed gentle mein.

SECTION CXIV.

BEHOLDING the destruction of Ravana the celestials, Gandharbas and Danavas ascending their respective cars went away chanting this excellent theme. And talking of Ravana's dreadful destruction, Raghava's prowess, the excellent warfare of the monkeys, the counsels of Sugriva, the devotion and prowess of the Wind-God's son and Lakshmana and Sita's devotion unto her husband, those high souled ones, delighted, repaired to their respective quarters. And Raghava, having long arms, permitting the charioteer to take back the celestial car bright as the sky sent by Indra. honoured him greatly. And being commanded by Raghava Matali, the charioteer of Sakra taking the celestial car. rose up in the welkin. And that charioteer rising up into the celestial region. Raghava, the foremost of car-warriors. greatly delighted, embraced Sugriva. And embracing Sugriva, bowed unto by Lakshmana and worshipped by the monkey be repaired to the camp of his soldiers. Thereupon Kakuthsha spoke unto Lakshmana-tho son of Sumitra gifted with auspicious marks who was near him-"O gentle one, take this Bibbishana to the city of Lanka ever devoted and attached unto us, and who had done us good. This is my great desire that I may behold Biblishana the younger brother of Ravana installed on the throne of Lanka," Being thus addressed by the high-souled Raghava, the son of Sumitra, saying-'So be it" and greatly delighted, brought a golden jar. And placing that jar at the hands of the lord of monkeys, that one, gifted with great energy, ordered them tom bring water from the Ocean. And repairing speedily those excellent monkeys came back with water from the ocean. And taking that jar and placing him on an excellent sest Saumitre with that water sprinkled Bibbishana as king of Lanka in the presence of all the Rakshasas, at Rama's command. And (Lakshmana) encircled by friends sprinkling him according to rites laid down in the Vedas, all the Rakshasas, devoted unto him, his counsellors and the monkeys attaining incomparable delight, sang the glory of Rama. And beholding Bibhishana the lord of Rakshasas installed in the city of Lanka, Raghava along with Lakshmana attained to an excess of delight. And consoling his subjects he went to Rama. And the monkey citizens, delighted, brought him curd, fried grain, sweetmeats, fried paddy and flowers. And taking all those things indicating auspiciousness, he, irrepressible and gifted with energy, conferred them upon Raghava and Lakshmana. And beholding Bibhishana crowned with prosperity and success, Ramaaccepted them all for his satisfaction. Thereupon Rama spoke unto the hereic monkey Hanuman, resembling a a mountain and standing before him humbly with folded hands, saying-"O gentle one, obtaining permission from the King Bibhishana, do thou enter the city of Lanka and enquire after Maithili's welfare. Do thou, O foremost of monkeys, inform Vaidehi of the destruction of Ravana in conflict after communicating unto her mine health as well as that of Lakshmana and Sugriva. O lord of monkeys, it behoveth thee to return with the tidings of Vaideht after informing her of this pleasant news.

* A wooden mortar used for cleaning rice.

SECTION CXV.

Being thus commanded, Hanuman, the son of Maruta, worshipped of the night-rangers, entered the city of Lanka. Entering the city with Bibishana's permissiom, Hanuman, again permitted, entered the Briksha Vatika.* And entering there duly, the monkey, who was already known to Sita, espied her, having her person not cleansed, like Rohini, oppressed by Rahu, sitting at the foot of a tree, devoid of joy and encircled by she-demons. And approaching her and bowings unto her, he stood there humbly and unmoved. And beholding the highly powerful Hanuman arrived there the worshipful dame stood silent for sometime and then tecognising him became greatly delighted. And beholding her gentle countenance, Hanuman, the best of monkeys, began to relate unto her what Rama had said-"O Vaidehi, it is all well with Rama Sugriva and Lakshman: He hath enquired after thy welfare. He hath accomplished his end subduing his enemies-and his enemy is slam. O worshipful dame, the powerful Ravana hath been slain by Rama, helped by Bibhishana and accompanied by the monkeys and Lakshmana. I do relate unto thee this pleasant news, O worshipful dame; I do again delight thee, it is by thy grace, O thou conversant with piety, O Sita, victory hath been gained. Do thou be consoled and relieved of thy anxiety. The enemy Ravana hath been slain and the city of Linka hath been brought under submission (Rama said),- For discomfitting thy enemy a bridge was constructed over the seaby me who was determined and who did not sleep (for days) and thus my promise hath been fulfilled. Do thou not be alraid for living in Ravána's abode for I have placed at Bibhishana's hands the sovereignty of Lanka. Do thou be consoled thinking as if that thou art living in thy own house. behold thee, Bibbishana, delighted, shall soon proceed." Being thus accosted the worshipful Sita, having a moon-like countenance, and her voice choked in delight, could not utter any thing And beholding Sita incapable of replying the foremost of monkeys said,-"What art thou thinking of, O worshipful dame? Why art thou not welcoming me?" Being thus addressed by Hanuman Sita, ever treading the paths of morality, greatly delighted, replied with words suppressed by tears. "Hearing this pleasant news concerning the victory of my husband-and being brought under the control of joy I am speechless for sometime. O monkey, I do not perceive any such thing which I can confer upon thee, in return, for this pleasant news. I do dot see any such thing on this earth which can match thy pleasant tidings and bestowing which upon thee I may be happy. Silver, gold, or diverse jewels or the kingdom of the three worlds-nothing is a becoming return for thy speech." Being thus addressed by Vaidchi the monkey replied-folding his hands with delight and stationed before Sita,- O blameless damsel, forsooth this excellent speech becometh thee, who is ever engaged in the welfare of thy husband and ever desirous of his victory. I do consider, O worshipful dame, these words of thine, far greater than the wealth, jewels or even the sovereignty over the celestials. Forsooth I have gained the kingdom of the celestials and other things since I have beheld Rāma, slay his enomy, victorious and peaceful. Hearing those words of (Hanuman) Maithili the daughter of king Janaka spoke unto the Wind-god's son far more excellent words-"Thou art capable of speaking words, chaste, pleasant and significant of eight sorts of knowledge. Thou art the praise-worthy son of the Windgod and greatly virtuous; strength, prowess, heroism, knowledge of Sástras, noble-mindedness, energy, forgiveness, patience, endurance, humility and many other excellent qualities crown thee," Thereupon not being elated the least, he again, humbly folding his hands with delight and stationed before Sitā, said-"If dost thou permit me I may slay all these she-demons who had tortured thee before, distressed thee in the forest of Acoka, stricken with grief of thy lord, and who are cruel, have grim eyes and who perpetrate always dreadful deeds. O worshipful dame, I have heard that these grim-visaged she-demons distressed thee greatly with harsh words at the command of Ravana. I desire to slay all these dreadful, crooked, ugly (she-demons) having fearful eyes, meting out unto them various punishments. I wish to slay all these she-demons, who had used , harsh words and lad always offended thee, stricking them with fists, fingers, arms, dreadful knee-joints, teeth, chopping off their ears and noses, and pulling them by their hairs: do thou confer upon me this permission. O far famed lady. I shall slay them by these various means, by whom, dreadful as they are, thou hadst been distressed before." Being thus addressed by Hanuman, she ever kind unto the poor, thinking and meditating, said to bim-"O foremost of monkeys, why art thou angry with these she-slaves, who subject as they are to the command of their lord, have done this in accordance with another's order. For my adverse fortune and vicious deeds perpetrated in another birth. I have been subject to such a plight and been suffering the consequence thereof. Do thou not speak thus, O thou of huge arms. Such is the course of Fortune. Forsooth by my ill-luck I have met with (this misfortune). I forgive, out of pity, all these she-servants of Ravana; they used to torture me at the command of that Rakshasa. And he Leing slain they shall not repress me any longer, O son of the Windgod. Do thou, O monkey, hear of a Slaka, related in a Purana and pregnant with religious import, which was uttered by a boar to a tiger. 'No one taketh upon himself the iniquity of a perpetrator of vicious deeds. So it behaveth the pious crowned with an excellent character to observe the rules (of piety). So it is proper to show compassion even upon those who perpetrate crimes and are worthy of being slain. Who is there who doth not commit a crime? It is not proper to act cruelly even by them who take delight in killing men, although they commit various iniquitous deeds." Being thus addressed by Sita, Hanuman. skilled in speech, spoke unto the blameless Rama's spouse. saving-"Thou art the worthy spouse of Rama, religiously wedded and crowned with many qualities. Permit me, O worshipful dame, to proceed where Raghava is." Being thus accosted by Hanuman, Vaidehi, the daughter of king Janaka, said,-"I wish to see my lord, ever fond of those who are devoted unto him." Hearing these words, the high-minded Hanuman, the son of Maruta, pleasing Maithili said—"Thou shalt behold Rāma, having a countenance like the full moon, with Lakshmana, surrounded by his friends and having his enemies slain as Sachi beholdeth Indra the king of the celestials." Addressing these words unto Sitā appearing like Sree herself the highly effulgent Hanumān returned where Rāghava was. Thereupon Hanuman, the foremost of monkeys, related duly all what did the daughter of king Janaka say unto Rāghava resembling the lord of the celestials.

A garden in the city of Lanka.-T.

SECTION CXVI.

THEREUPON bowing unto Rama, the foremost of bowmen, having eyes, resembling lotus-petals, the highly wise monkey said,- 'It behoveth thee now to see Maithilee, stricken with grief for whom thou didst initiate all these works and the fruit whereof both now been attained. Hearing of thy victory Maithilee, possessed by grief and having eyes full of tears, expressed her desire to see thee. And I was told by her, confident of her previous trust, with profuse tears in her eyes,-"I wish to see my husband." Being addressed by Hanuman, Rama the foremost of the pious being bathed in tears, engaged instantly in meditation. Thereupon sighing hard and casting his looks upon the ground he spoke unto Biblishana resembling clouds, who was near him. "Do thou speedily bring Sita here -the daughter of the king of Mithila-bathed, sprinkled with celestial paste and adorned with celestial ornaments." Being thus addressed by Rama, Bibhishana hastened on and enfering the inner appartment sent information unto Sita through the female attendants. And beholding the great Sita, the graceful ford of Rakshasas-Bibhishana. humbly and placing his joined palms on his crown, said,-"O Vaidehi, may good betide thee; sprinkled with celestial paste and adorned with celestials ornaments do thou ascend this car; thy husband wisheth to see thee." Being thus addressed Vaidehi replied unto Bibbishana,-"O lord of Rakshasas, without bathing even I wish to see my husband." Hearing those words Biblishana replied,-"It behoveth thee to do what thy lord Rama hath said." Whereto the chaste Maithilee, regarding her husband as God and filled with devotion unto her husband, replied saying "So be it." Thereupon placing Sita, bathed, performing the due rites wearing valuable clothes and adorned with valuable ornaments, on a palanquin, carried by many a capable Råkshasa, brought her (unto Rāma). Thereupon approaching the high-souled Rama, who, being informed of (Bihhishana's approach) was engaged in meditation, Bibhishana bowing down and delighted communicated unto him the arrival of Sita. And hearing of her arrival who had lived long in the abode of the Rakshasa Raghava, the slayer of enemies attained (simultaneously) to anger, delight and depression. And considering Sita, who was in the palanguin, overwhelmed with grief, Raghava delighted addressed Bibhishana with the following words. "O lord of Rakshasas, O gentle (king). O thou ever engaged in encompassing my success, do thou speedily bring Vaidehi nearer to me." Hearing these words of Raghava, Bibhishana, conversant with piety speedity cleared (the people out of that place). And attendants with armours and head-dresses on and with cane and drums in their bands began to move about driving away the crowd thereform. And the crowds of bears, monkeys and Rakshasas being driven on all sides began to fly at a distance. And they being thus driven there grose a huge noise resembling that of the ocean when agitated by the wind. Beholding the monkeys driven on all sides and troubled, Raghava out of anger and compassion prevented him. And thereupon as if burning (every thing) with his angry eyes Rama addressed the highly intelligent Bibhisbana with the following angry words-"Why dost thou insult me by destroying all these? Do thou remove their anxiety-they are all my own men. Neither the houses, clothes, walls not reception like these are the veils of women. There is no sin consequent upon seeing women in danger, difficulty, war. Svyambara* sacrifice and marriage. She is now in great danger and difficulty-there is no sin in seeing her specially in my presence. Therefore leaving behind the palanquin let her come here on foot and let the monkeys behold Vaidehi in my presence." Being thus addressed by Rama, Bibbishana, being sorry, humbly brought Sita near him. Thereupon hearing Rama's accents, Lakshmana, Sugriva and the monkey Hanuman were greatly sorry. As if hiding herself in her own person in shame Maithili, following Biblishana, approached her husband. And she, having a countenance and always regarding her husband as her god, fixed her looks upon her lord's face out of surprise, joy and love. And beholding the gentle countenance of her dearest lord, resembling the full moon she removed her mental distress. Thereupon she appeared (beautiful) having the countenance of the clear moon.

* It is a form of marriage in which the bride scleets a bridegroom for harvelf.

SECTION CXVII.

---

BEHOLDING Maithili standing humbly by him, Rama began to give vent to his pent-up feelings-"O gentle one, destroying all the enemies in the arena of battle I have subdued thy enemy-I have done all that can be accomplished by manliness. I have reached the other end of my anger, rubbed off (the insult) for my spouse being taken away hy the enemy and have killed simultaneously my disgrace and enemy. My manliness hath been displayed to day, my labour hath been crowned with success and to-day I have fulfilled my promise by my own prowess. That accidental misfortune. under the influence whereof thou wert carried away by the fickle-minded Rakshasa in my absence, hath been subdued to-day by me, a man. What is the use of hir manliness, who when insulted, cannot remove it? Even if he be a great man he may be called mean. The praise-worthy works of Hanuman-the crossing of the deep and the devastation of Lanka, have been crowned with success to-day. The labour of Sugriva with his army, who displayed valour in the encounter and gave me good counsels, bath borne fruit to-day. To-day also the labour of Bibhishana hath borne fruit-who renouncing his brother, devoid of all good qualities, came to my side." Hearing those words of Rama, Sita began to look wistfully like a hind, with eyes full of tears. And beholding his beloved spouse near him and afraid of popular ignominy his heart was broken into two. Therespon he spoke unto the exquisitely beautiful Sita, in the midst of the monkeys and Rakshasas, having eyes resembling lotuspetals and black and curling hairs, saying,-"As the southern quarter, incapable of being got at by the people, was conquered by the self-controlled great ascetic Agastya, ad for thee slaying Ravana, I, (always) anxious to have honour, have removed my insult—as is the duty of a man. May good betide thee-do thou know that all my labour, in the battle-field, backed by the prowess of my friends, is for thee. To uphold the dignity of my well-known family, to remove the ignominy consequent upon thy being stolen away as well as to wipe off my own insult I have encompassed this. I have suspected thy character; thou, (therefore) standing before me,art distressing me like unto a lamp before one who is subject to an eye-desease. Do thou therefore proceed, O daughter of king Janaka, wherever thou likest to one of these ten quarters. I permit thee, O gentle one. I have nothing to do with thee. What powerful man, born in a high family, take back his wife considering her as friend out of lust, who hath lived long in another's house? Thou wert taken by Ravana on his lap, beheld by him with sinful eyes; how can I, taking thee back, bring disgrace upon my great family? The object, with which I have gained thee back, hath been accomplished. I have got no attachment for thee-do thou go wherever thou wishest. O gentle one. I speak these unto thee impelled by my sense of duty. If thou wishest thou mayest live with Lakshmana, Bharata or Satrughna or with Sugriva or Rakshasa Bibbishana. Do thou settle, O Sita, where you may find thy own pleasure. O Sita. (I do not think) Ravana bath overlooked thee, who lived in his house, beholding thee so graceful and beautiful." Thereupon hearing those unpleasant words from her beloved (husband) Sitā, always sensitive and who had never heard such unpleasant words, trembling like a creeper torn by the trunk of an elephant, began to weep shedding tears profusely.

SECTION CXVIII.

REING thus addressed by Raghava, enraged, with those harsh words Sitā was greatly pained. And hearing those words of her lord, unheard of, before the great assembly Maithili was greatly humiliated with shame. As if entering unto her own person (with shame) and greatly pained with these arrow-like words the daughter of king Janaka began to shed tears. Thereupon wining the tears off her countenance, she with sorrowful words addressed her husband-"Why dost thou, O hero, like a common man addressing an ordinary woman, make the hear these barsh and unbecoming words painful unto ears? O thou of long arms, I am not what thou hast taken me to be. Do thou believe me-I do swear by my own character. Seeing the ordinary women thou art distrusting the whole sex. Do thou renounce this suspicion since thou hast tried me. O ford, though my person was touched by another-but it was not in my power, nor was it an wilful act (of mine); accident is to blame in this. My heart is under my control and that is in thee ;-- and what could I do of my body which was subject to another and of which I was not the mistress. O thou the conferrer of honour-our affection towards one another was increased by our fiving continually for a long time; even then if thou bast not been able to understand me I am ruined for ever. O king, when the great hero Hanuman was despatched by thee to Lanka to see me why didst thou not renounce me then? Hadst thou deputed the monkey with that message I would have renounced my life there and then, O hero. Thou wouldst not have been required to undergo this toil-at the risk of thy own life and giving unnecessary trouble to thy friends. O foremost of kings, being subject to ire-thou dost not perceive anything but womanhood in me, like an ordinary man. Although I am known to have a father but in fact I am born of the earth. Thou dost not sufficiently honour .my character, O thou conversant with characters. Thy marriage with me in boyhood shall be disproved and thon art not sufficiently considering all my devotion and good conduct unto thee." Saying thus with accents choked in tears and weeping Sita spoke unto Lakshmana, poorly and engaged in meditation. "Make a funeral pyre for me, O Saumitri, that is the only remedy for this disaster. Being thus branded with an unfounded stigma I do not like to keep my life. To adopt the proper course for me who had been renounced before this assembly by my disaffected husband I shall enter this." Being thus addressed by Vaidehi. Lakshmana, the slayer of enemies, being possessed by anger. looked towards Raghava. And understanding Rama's intention by gestures and at his command the powerful Saumitri prepared a funeral pyre. None dared there request, speak with or even look at Rama like unto Death at the time of dissolution. Thereupon circumambulating Rama, standing with his head down. Vaidehi approached the burning And bowing unto the celestials and Brahmanas. Maithili, with folded hands, spoke before the fire :- "As my heart hath never gone away from Raghava, may thou protect me, O fire, the witness of the people. As Raghava considereth me vile, who have got a pure character, may fire, the witness of the people, protect me on all sides." Saying this and going round the fire, Vaidehi, with undaunted heart, entered the flaming fire. The great assembly there, young and old, overwhelmed with grief, saw Maithili enter the flaming fire. And (Sita) resembling the burning gold entered the flaming fire in the presence of all people. All behald Sita, having expansive eyes, enter fire like unto a golden altar. The ascetics, celestials and Gandharbas saw time great damsel enter fire like unto a full oblation in the sacrifice.

And beholding her fallen into the fire like unto Vasuakhra, sauctified by Mantras in a sacrifice, all the females began to weep. And the three worlds—the celestials, Gandharbas and Danavas saw her fallen like unto a celestial from the heaven when imprecited. She having entered the fire, lamentations, unheard of before, rose from all sides from the Räkshasas and monkeys.

SECTION CXIX

HEARING the lamentations (of the Rakshasas and monkeys) the virtuous-souled Rama, with a poor heart and having his eyes full of tears, engaged in meditation for some time. Thereupon the king Vaisravana, Yama with his progenitors, the thousand-eyed lord of the celestials, Varuna, the lord of water, the three-eyed graceful Mahadeva-the rider of bull, Brahma the creator of the world and the foremost of those conversant with the knowledge of Brahma -all these arriving at the city of Lanka in their cars bright as the rays of the sun, approached Raghava. Thereupon raising up their huge hands, decked with various ornaments and folding them, those foremost of the celestials said unto Raghava-"O lord, thou art the preserver of all the worlds and the foremost of the wise, why dost thou neglect Sita entering into fire? Why dost thou not understand thyself the foremost of the celestials? Thou wert before the Patriarch of all Vasus,* by the name of Kratadhama. And thou art thyself, O lord, the creator of the three worlds, Thou art the eighth of the Rudrast and the fifth of the

* A kind of demi-god of whom eight are enumerated.

† A demi-god—an inferior manifestation of Siva : they are sleves in humber.

Sadhyas : the Acwinis are thy two ears and the sun and the moon are thy eyes. O slayer of enemies, thou appearest at the begining and the end of the creation. Why dost thou neglect Vaidehi like an ordinary man?" Being thus addressed by the deities presiding over quarters, Raghava, the lord of people and the foremost of the pious, spoke unto those leading celestials, saying:-"I know myself to be man-Rama, the son of Dacaratha. the great Patriarch tell me, who I am and whence I have come." Thereupon Brahma, the foremost of those conversant with the knowledge of Brahma, spoke unto Kakutstha, who had spoken thus, saying,-"Do thou hear my true words, O thou having truth for thy prowess. O lord, thou art the great and effulgent. Narayana holding discus and mace; thou art the boar having one tusk; thou hast conquered the past, present and future; thou art undecaying and without end, O Raghava; thou art the great virtue of the pious-thou art the propounder of all laws and art fourarmed; thou art the holder of bow of time-the subduer of senses-the exectiont Purusha (person), unconquerable by sins; thou art Vishnu holding dagger, Krishna and of incomparable atrength; thou art the army, the minister-the universe-the understanding, forgiveness and control of passions; thou art the creation and destruction; Upendra and the slayer of (demon) Madhu; thou art the creator of Indra; thou art Mahendra; thou hast a lotus-like navel and thou art the slayer of enemies. The celestials and the great saints style thee as the refuge of those who seek for shelter. Thou art the foremost of Vedas with its thousand branches and hundred regulations. Thou art thyself the creator of the three worlds, O lord. Thou art the refuge of the Siddhast and Sadhyas, thou art the Purvaja, the sucrifice, Vashatkar, * Out and Parathara. 1 No one is conversant with thy birth and destruction-thou art manifest in all creatures—cows and Brahmins—in all quarters, in the sky, in the mountain, and in the river. Thou art gifted with thousand legs, thousand heads and thousand eyes. Thou dost uphold all creatures, the earth and all the mountains. Thou appearest like the great serpent in the water underneath the earth. O Rama, thou dost uphold three creations-the celestials, the Gandharbas and the O Rama-I am thy heart, the worshipful Swaraswati (Goddess of learning) is thy tongue and all other celestials, O lord, created by Brahma are thy down. The closing of thy eye is the night and the opening is the day. The Vedas are significant of thy desire and the control thereof-none hath got independent existence but thee. The whole universe is thy body, the earth is thy patience, the fire is thy anger—the sun and the moon are thy delight: thou hast got Sreebatsha (a peculiar curl of hair)"; thou didst before tread the three worlds with thy three foot steps: thou didst get the dreadful Bali bound and make Mahendra king; Sita is Lakshmi and thou art Krishna and Vishnu the Preserver of people. For Ravana's destruction thou bast assumed the human shape. Thou hast accomplished that work of ours, O thou the foremost of the pious. O Rāma, Ravana hath been slain. Do thou go up to heaven delighted. Sure is thy godly energy and never goes for nothing thy prowess. O Rama, never is fruitless thy view and the chanting of thy glory. And always successful shall be these persons on earth who shall be devoted unto thee. Those who shall be devoted unto thee at one with Purána* and the excellent Purasha,† shall attain all their desires both in this world and the next. Those persons shall never be unsuccessful both in this world and the next who shall chant this theme—excellent, instinct with the knowledge of Brahma and describing the old history.

An inferior deity or demi-god, one of a class of twelve.

* Saints of accomplished piety.

Produced or appearing before creation.

Burnt offering, oblation with fire—from the exclamation used on the securion.

&quot; † Om—the first term of the Mantra, Om or Omldra is well-known as a combination of letters invested by 'thindu mysticism with peopliar sanithy.

<sup>1</sup> Greatest of the great.

SECTION CXX.

HEARING those excellent words uttered by the great Patriarch rose up Bibhabasut with Vaidehi on his lan shaking the funeral pyre. With the daughter of the king lanaka, the receivers of sacrificial offerings, being incarnate. rose up. And carrying on his Iap Vaidehi, wearing a red cloth, resembling the newly risen sun, adorned with ornaments of hurning gold-having black curling hairs and decked with fresh garments, Bibhabasu gave her unto Rama. Thereupon the Deity of Fire, the witness of the people, spoke unto Rama, saying-"O Rama, here is thy Vaidehino sin hath visited her. Neither by words, mind, understanding nor eyes, she, good-natured and beautiful-hath deviated from thee who hath got a good character and is heroic. She was in the solitary forest separated from thee, poorly and having no control over herself and hence she was carried away by the Rakshasa Rayana having enough prowess in Although shut up in the inner appartment-well protected and guarded by the dreadful she-demons she had

A class of writings considered sacred by the Hindus...

† Great or supreme spirit-Purasha meaning that which abides or is fuirment ill body.

<sup>2</sup> The Deity of Fire.

<sup>4</sup> Pire

always her mind in thee and was devoted unto thee. Although tempted in many a way and remonstrated with she did not think of that Rakshasa in her inner mind. Her heart is pure and she is not spoiled with sin-do thou therefore take back Maithili. Do thou not speak otherwise-I do command thee," Thereupon hearing those words-the virtuous-souled Rama, the foremost of those skilled in speech, with his eyes agitated with delight, meditated for sometime. Being thus addressed, the highly effulgent and intelligent Rama, of unmitigated prowessthe foremost of the pious, spoke unto that best of celestials saying-"Beautiful (Sita) lived in the inner appartment of Ravana for a long time so she needs this purification in the presence of all people. If I would take the daughter of lanaka without purifying her, people would say that Rama the son of king Daçaratha is lustful and ignorant of the morality of the people. I know it full well that Maithili. the daughter of king Janaka, hath her mind devoted unto me and hath not given it to any one (else). As the ocean cannot go beyond its banks so Ravana could not approach her having expansive eyes protected by virtue of her own chastity. The greatly vicious-souled one could not even by his mind get Maithili, who was beyond his reach like unto the burning flame of fire. Her mind could not have been moved although she lived in the inner appartment of Ravana-she belongs to none else; Sita is mine as the rays belong to the Sun. Maithili-the daughter of Janaka hath been purified before the three worlds-So I am incapable of renouncing her as a self-controlled person cannot forsake his (own) reputation. It behoveth me to carry out the wellmeaning words of you all-the lords of people who have spoken them out of affection." Saying this, the victorious. highly powerful, well renowned Raghava, worthy of enjoying bappiness, and having his praise chanted in consequence of his noble action, regaining his spouse, attained to happiness.

SECTION CXXI.

HEARING those excellent words uttered by Raghava, Maheswara (Siva) spoke far more important words-"O thou having lotus-eyes, O thou having huge arms and a spacious breast, O thou the slayer of enemies, O thou the foremost of the pious-it is a good fortune that this hath been done by thee. It is by good fortune, O Rama, the dreadful and increasing darkness-the fear of all people -Ravana, hath been removed by thee in the encounter. Consoling the poor Bharata and the famed Kaucalya. beholding Kaikeyi and Sumitra the mother of Lakshmana, obtaining the kingdom of Ayodhya, pleasing all thy friends, establishing the prestige of thy family, O thou of great strength, performing horse-sacrifices, attaining fair fame and conferring riches upon the Brahmins do thou repair to heaven. This king Daçaratha stationed on the car is thy father. He was thy superior on this earth, O Kakutstha. Obtaining thee as his son, that graceful (king) hath repaired to the region of Indra. Do thou bow unto him with thy brother Lakshmana." Hearing the words of Mahadeva, Raghava, along with Lakshmana, bowed unto their father who was seated on the top of the car. He with Lakshmana beheld their father shining in his own effulgence and wearing an unsullied cloth. Thereupon beholding his dearer than his life, attaining great delight (in consequence thereof) placing him on his lap and embracian him with his arms, the great king Dacaratha, having long arms and scated on an excellent scat in the car, said-"I am now in heaven and am equal with the celestials, but without thee, O Rama, I do not like it-this is true-I do awear by thee. O thou the foremost of these skilled in speech, I have still in my mind the words which were uttered by Kaikeyi for sending thee away to the woods. Beholding thee all well and embracing thee with Lakshmana I am now shorn of grief like unto the sen, devoid of dues. I have been emancipated, O my son, through thee-a good and high-souled son, as the virtuous-souled Brahmana Kapala was by Asthabakra. O gentle one, I have heard from the colestials, (that thou art) the excellent Purusha in the guise (of a man) for the destruction of Ravana. Blessed is Kauçalya, O Rama, who shall be greatly delighted, on beholding thee, the slayer of enemies, gone home from the forest. Blessed are those men, O Rama, who shall behold thee installed in the city as the king of the world. I wish to behold thee reconciled with Bharata, devoted powerful, pure and performing pious observances. O gentle one, thou hast spent fourteen years in the forest with Sita and Lakshmana. The term of thy exile is over-thy promise hath been fulfilled; and slaying Ravana, in the conflict thou hast pleased the celestials. Thou hast performed a mighty deed and attained to excellent fame. O slaver of enemies ; and placed in charge of thy kingdom do thou with thy brothers attain a long life." The king speaking thus Rama spoke unto him with folded hands saying,-"O thou conversant with piety, do thou be propitiated with Bharata and Kaikeyi. Thou didst imprecate Kaikeyi, saying,-"I renounce thee with thy son"-may not that dreadful curse visit her and her son." Saying "so be it" unto Rama with folded hands and ombracing Lakshmana the great king said to him :--- "O thou conversant with piety and fame on this earth, thou shalt attain to heaven and excellent state there. O thou the enhancer of Sumitra's joy-do thou attend upon Rama; may good betide thee; Rama is ever engaged in the welfare of all beings. All these celestials headed by Indra, Siddbas and Great saints, bowing unto this high-souled and excellent Purusha, worship him. Bama, the subduer of foes, is the indescribable and undecaying letter Brahma, which has been described (in the Vedas) as the heart and secret of the celestials. For serving him along with Sita, the daughter of king of Videha, thou hast attained piety and excellent fame." Addressing Lakshmana thus, the king spoke unto his daughter-in-law, who was standing before him with folded hands, saying :- "It doth not behave thee, O Vaidehi, to be enraged (with Rama) for renouncing thee; for parifying thee this was done by him ever wishing thy welfare. What thou hast performed. O daughter, to establish the purity of thy character, is hard to perform. What thou hast done, shall glorify all other females. Though there is no necessity for giving thee any instruction as regards thy duty towards thy husband-still I should say that he is thy great god." Having thus instructed his two sons and Sita, he repaired, in his car, to the region of Indra. Having advised his two sons along with Sita, ascending the car, and shining in his effulgence, that excellent king, greatly delighted, repaired to the region of the king of celestials.

SECTION CXXII

PASARATHA having repaired, Mahendra greatly delighted spoke unto Räghava, stationed there with folded hands, saying :—"O Rāma, O foremost of men, this our presence here, must not be fruitless, we are pleased—do thou ask for what thou wishest." Being thus accosted by the high-souled Mahendra—delighted, Rāghava spoke, with a pleased heart—"O lord of the celestials, O thou the foremost of those existed is speech, if thou art propitiated with me, I shall pray for (iny wished-for-object); do thou grant it. Let all these highly powerful monkeys, who have been despatched to the abode of Death, on my account, regaining their life, stand up. O thou the conferror of honour, I wish to see all those delighted monkeys, who were separated from their wives and children on my account. O Purandara, do thou revive all these heroic and powerful (monkeys) who did not care for death, and who worked hard and were distressed (for me). May all those, by thy favour, who were ever devoted unto me and did not care for death (even) regain their life-this is the boon I pray for. O conferror of honour, I wish to see all these monkeys, Golangulas and bears, pale and hurt, unheart and gifted with strength and prowess like before. Let there he flowers, fruits and roots, even out of season wherever these monkeys shall live-and let rivers there be full of clear water." Hearing those words of the high-souled Raghava Mahendra replied with words instinct with delight-"O my boy. O foremost of the Raghus, mighty is the boon thou hast prayed for-my words shall never be falsified, so let them be be fulfilled. Let all those bears and Goldngula: rise up who were slain in the conflict by Rakshasas and had their heads Let the monkeys gifted with their and arms severed. pristing strength and prowess rise up unhart and healthy as if after the end of sleep. And being reconciled with their friends, relatives and kinsmen let them attain to excellent joy. O thou the weilder of a huge bow, all the trees shall be filled with flowers and fruits and all the rivers shall be filled with water even out of season (wherever they shall live)," Thereupon all these leading mockeys who had their persons wounded but now healed up, rose up like those asleep. And all those monkeys were greatly wondered, saying, "What is it?" And beholding Kakutstha of accomplished end and eulogizing Rama and Lakshmana, all the celestials, greatly delighted, said,-"Do thou, O king, repair to Avodhybdespatch all the monkeys-console the lamed Linkhiles. ever devoted unto thee- behold thy brother Bharata observing ascetic vows in consequence of thy grief-and the high-souled Satrughna and all thy mothers, O slayer of foes. And being installed on the throne do thou conduce to the joy of all citizens." Having thus addressed Rāma along with Lakshmana, the thousand-eyed Deity, delighted, went away along with the celestials, in their cars resembling the Sun (in brilliance). And saluting all the celestials, Kākutstha, with his brother Lakshmana, ordered the encampment of the army. Thereupon that famous and well-pleased huge army of the monkys protected by Rāma and Lakshmana, appeared resplendant on all sides like unto a night beautified with the rays of the Moon.

SECTION CXXIII.

RAMA having spent that night happily and risen up the next morning, Bibbishana, chanting his victory, spoke unto that slayer of foes, with folded hands, saying: --- "Here are various articles for bathing, pastes, clothes, ornaments. sandal and various excellent garlands. And here are present women having eyes like lotuses and conversant with the act of decking. Let them perform their duty, O Raghava." Being thus accosted Kakutatha replied unto Bibhishana, saying: -"Do thou invite all these monkeys headed by Sugriva to bathe. The virtuous-souled Bharata, having huge arms and ever used to comforts, is greatly distressed on my account. Without Bharata the son of Kaikeyi, ever performing pious rites, I do not value bathing or these clothes and ornaments. Do thou so manage that we may go to the city of Ayodhya speedity. For difficult is the way leading to Ayodhya." Being thus accosted Bibbishana relied unto Kakutstha,-"O son of the lord of warth, may good betide thee, I shall soon take thee to that city. The car Pushpaka resembling the Sun, belonging to my brother Kuvera, was brought by the powerful Ravana. O thou of unequalled prowess, that celestial and excellent car, going everywhere at will, since the destruction of Ravana in battle, is ready for thee. And that car resembling the cloud is in the city of Lanka, in which thou shalt, relieved of thy anxiety, repair to Ayodhya. If I am worthy of being favoured by thee, if dost thou remember any accomplishment of mine-if thou bast any friendship for me, do thou, O wise one, wait here with thy brother Lakshmana and spouse Vaidehi till I accomplish all my desires by worshiping thee. And then thou shalt go (to Avodhya) O Rama. I shall worship thee with great delight and do thou, O Rama, with thy friends and army, accept that adoration. O Rama, out of love, honor, and brotherly feeling, I do crave thy permission. I am a servant I cannot command thee." Being thus addressed, Rama replied unto Bibbishana in the presence of all the Rakshasas and monkeys, saying: -"I have been worshipped by thee, O hero, with thy excellent counsels, with thy earnest endeavours and with thy great friendship. Do not think, O lord of Rakshasas, that I do not comply with thy request-my heart hastens me to behold my brother Bharata, who, to take me back, did come to the mount Chitrakuta, who laid low his crown at my feet and whose words I did not keep. (I am anxious to see) Kauçalya, Sumitra, Kaikeyi, with my friends, citizens and villagers. Do thou regard me. O Bibhishana, O gentle one, as worshipped. O friend do thou be not angry-I request thee. Do thou speedily being the car for me, O lord of Rakshasas-my work is done-how can I wish to live here long." Being thus addressed by Rama, Bubishana the lord of Rakshasas, speedily brought the carresembling the Sun.

Thereupon arrived there the car adorned all over with gold paintings, altars crested with Baidurja jewels, having upper rooms, silvered all over, adorned with white flags and flagstaffs, beautified with gilt lotuses, adorned with golden houses, covered with a network of girdles. having windows made of pearls and jems, girt on all sides with a net of bells, giving forth melodious sound. resembling the summit of the mount. Meru, constructed by Viçwakarma (the architect of the celestials) adorned with huge apartments beautified with silver and pearls-having its base crested with crystal, containing excellent seats made of Baiduria, abounding in valuable coverlets and immense wealth, incapable of being broken down and coursing at will. And communicating unto Rama (the arrival of that car) Bibbishana waited there. Beholding that flowery car. coursing at will and resembling a huge mountain, Rama, of a generous spirit, along with Saumitri, attained to an excess of astonishbrent.

SECTION CXXIV

Having brought that car Pushpaka, adorned with flowers and having stationed himself at a distance, Bibhishana the lord of Rakshasas, being incited to hurry on, humbly and with folded hands, spoke unto Rama, saying, "What shall I do, O Raghava?" Hearing those words the highly powerful Raghava, in the presence of Lakshmana, gave vent to the following accents out of affection—"All these monkeys and bears have brought about the accomplishment of my work with great care. Do thou, satisfy them, O' Bibhishana, with diverse jewels and riches. With these and thee, I conquered the city of Lanka, O lord of Rakshasas. They all fought with a delighted heart, having renounced all fear of life and who did never go away from the battlefield. Do thou, with a gift of riches and jewel, make good the work of these monkeys and bears who encompassed the accomplishment (of my end). Being honoured and delighted by thee grateful, all these leading monkeys shall repair (to their respective quarters). (If thou art found to be) sacrificing, self-controlled, compassionate and (the just) collector of revenues, all shall be attached unto thee. For this I do address you (thus). O lord of men, the soldiers, disgusted, renounce that king who is void of all royal accomplishments, and who uselessly slays soldiers in the conflict." Being thus accosted by Rama, Bibbishana, with a distribution of jewels and riches, honoured all those And beholding all those leading monkeys worshipped with jewels and riches Rama ascended that excellent car, taking the bashful, and high-minded Vaidehi on his lap and accompanied, by his powerful brother Lakshmana, a skilled bowman. And being stationed on the car Kākutstha honouring all the monkeys, the highly powerful Sugriva and Bibhishana, said-"O foremost of monkeys, ye have performed a friendly service-it hath been appreciated by me-do ye repair to your wished-for quarters. O Sugriva, thou, ever afraid of impiety, hast performed all that a loving and well-wishing friend should Do thou, encircled by thy army, proceed towards Kishkindha. Do thou, O Bibhishana, live in thy kingdom, Lanka, conferred upon thee, by me. Not even the celestials, headed by Indra shall be able to assail thee. I wish to return to Ayodhya, the capital of my father's (kingdom). I wish to obtain your permission (and for this) I have invited you all." Being thus addressed by Rama, all the leading menkeys bears as well as the Rakshasa Bibhishana said with folded hands- We wish all to go to Ayodhya. Do thou take us.

We shall all range with delight at forests and gardens. Beholding thee installed and bowing unto Kaucalya, we shall soon return to our respective homes, O foremost of kings." Being thus accosted by the monkeys with Bibbishana, the virtuous-souled Rama, spoke unto them and Sugriva and Bibhishana, saying-"Dearer than the dear, I shall attain to, when returning my city, along with you all, I shall enjoy in the company of all my friends and relatives. O Sugriva, do thou soon ascend the car along with the monkeys. Do thou ascend too, O Bibbishana, lord of Rakshasas, with all thy courtiers." Thereupon ascended that celestial car Pushpaka, Sugriva, greatly delighted with the monkeys and Bibbishana, with his courtiers. And they all having got up, the excellent car, of Kuvera at the command of Raghava, rose up in the welkin. And in that car coursing at will and drawn by effulgent ganders, Rama greatly delighted appeared like Kuvera (himself). And all the monkeys, bears and the highly powerful Rakshasas sat in that celestial car unobstructed and at their pleasure.

SECTION CXXV

----

Being commanded by Rāma, that excellent car, drawn by ganders, with a huge noise, rose high up in the welkin. And casting his looks on all sides, Rāma, the descendant of Raghus, spake unto Sitā, the daughter of the king of Mithilā, having a moon-like countenance, saying,—"O Vaidehi, do thou behold Lankā, situate on the summit of the mount Chitrakuta, resembling that of Kailāça and constructed by Viçuakarma. And behold, O Sitā, that huge arena of battle, bathed in the blood and flesh of the monkeys and Rakshasas. Do thou behold, O thou having expansive eyes, Ravana, the lord of Rakshasas, the repressor of people and who obtained a boon, lying there, slain by me on thy account. Kumbhakarna was slain there, the night-ranger Prahasta, as well, and Domraksha, were slain by the monkey Hanuman. Bidyutmali was slain there by the high-souled Sushena-and Indrajit, the son of Ravana, was slain there in the encounter, by Lakshmana. The Rakshasa named Bikata was slain there by Angada-and Birupaksha, hard to look at and Mahaparsha and Mahodara. And the powerful Akampana was slain (there) and all other Rahshasas-Trishira, Atikaya, Devantaka and Narantakaand the two leading and powerful Rakshasas, mad after conflict-the sons of Kumbhakarna-Nikumbha and Kumbha, Bajradanstra, Danstra and many other Rakshasar were slain and the prepressible Makaraksha was slain (there) by me in the conflict. Akampana was slain-and the powerful Sonitaksha. And Yupaksha and Prajangha were destroyed (there) in the great conflict. The grim-visaged Rakshasa Viddutsjuha was slain there-and Yajnasatru and the highly powerful Suptaghna. (And there was slain) Suryasatru and Brahmasatru. (And there bewailed for Ravana) his spouse Mandodari, surrounded by his thousand other wives. O thou having an excellent countenance, do thou behold the descending place of the ocean, where I spent the night after crossing the deep for thee. O thou having expansive eyes, for thee, this difficult construction of the bridge was made by me over the deep by the help of Nala. Do thou, O Vaidehi, behold the unagitated deep-the abode of Varuna, appearing as if without the other end, roaring and abounding in conchs and pearl oysters. O Maithili, do thou behold the golden mount, which rose above the deep for affording a rerting place unto Hanuman. And on the bank of this" ocean I halted with my soldiers. And here Mahadeva, the lord of the celestials, was propitiated with me. It behoveth thee to behold this descending place of the high-souled Ocean, known as Setubandha,* worshipped of the three worlds, highly sacred and destroying even the worst sin. There, Biblishana, the king of Rakshasas first to me. Do thou behold, O Sita, Kishkindha, having beautiful gardens, the pleasant city of Sugriva, where Vali was slain by me." And beholding the city of Kishkindha, ruled over by Vāli, Sitā, incited by her love, addressed Rāma, with worthy words, saying-"O king, I wish to repair to Ayodhya thy capital with thee, in the company of Tara, the dear wife of Sugriva, as well as of the wives of other leading monkeys." Being thus addressed by Vaidehi Raghava replied-saying, "this shall be done" and getting at Kishkindha he stopped the car. And having beheld the car stationed he spoke unto Sugriva, saying-"O foremost of monkeys, do thou speak unto all the leading monkeys that they may go to Ayodhya accompanied by their wives. O thou of great strengththey may all go with Sits. Do thou hurry them on, O Sugriva. We shall (soon) go, O thou the lord of mankeys." Being thus addressed by Rama, of unmitigated prowessthe beautiful lord of monkeys, encircled by them, entered speedily the inner apartment and beholding Tara there, said-"O dear, at the command of Raghava and the kind desire of Sita, do thou soon go, taking with thee the wives of all the high-souled monkeys. We shall see Ayodhya and the wives of Daçaratha." Hearing the words of Sugriva, Tara, having a pecfectly beautiful person, assembling all the wives of the monkeys, said-"You have been ordered by Sugriva to repair (to Ayodhya) with the monkeys; -to behold Ayodhya, is also a dear object of mine. ('I shall behold)

* This is still to be seen in the shape of a delapidated bridge near Ramssmer a place of pilgrimage. Pilgrims go there Via Madura, a district in South Madran. The Raja of Ramnud in whose Zemindari it is cituate is called Setupati.—T.

Rama enter the city with the citizens and villagers and the wealth and riches" of the wives of Daçaratha." Being thus commanded by Tara, the wives of the monkeys, putting on all their ornaments and circumambulating (her) ascended the car, with a view to behold Sita. And beholding the car going up with them all, Raghava again spoke unto Sita, near the mount Rishyamuka, saying,-"Do thou behold there, O Sita, the huge and foremost mount Rishyamuka abounding in gold and various metals, like unto clouds accompanied with lightnings. There I was joined by Sugriva, the lord of monkeys. And there I entered into an agreement, O Sita. for the destruction of Vals. And there is (the lake) Pampa abounding in lilies and skirted by picturesque forest where senarated from thee, I bewailed piteously. And on its bank I helield the pious Savari. And there I slew Kavandha and Yovanaváhu. Behold there, O Sita, a beautiful tree, in Janasthana, where, O thou ever used to luxuries, for thee, the highly powerful and onergetic Yatayu, the foremost of birds, was slain by Ravana. Do thou behold there, O thou of a beautiful person, O thou of auspicious looks, our hermitage and the beautiful cottage of leaves, wherefrom thou hadst been carried away by force by the lord of Rakshasas. Do thou behold there the beautiful and sacred river Godaveri having clear water and the hermitage of Agastya, surrounded by plantain trees. Do thou behold there, O Vaidehi, the great hermitage of Sarabhanga, where came the thousand-eyed, Sakra, the subduer of enemies' cities. O worshipful dame, O thou having a middle stature-amongst all those ascetics, thou beholdest, there lived Atri, the lord of our family-resembling the fire of the Sun. There was slain. the huge-bodied Biradha by me. There thou didst behold. O Sita, the female astectic (the wife of Attri) ever performing pious observances. There cometh in view, O thou, baving a beautiful person, the king of mountains, Chitrakuta, where to propitiate me, came the son of Sumitra. Behold the beautiful Yamuna, having picturesque forest on its bank and the pleasant hermitage of Varadwäya. Behold there the sacred river Ganges, dividing itself into three branches. Behold there the city of Sringabera, where I made friendship with Guha. Behold there, O Sitä, the capital of my father. Do thou bow unto Ayodhyā, O Vaidehi." Thereupon all the monkeys and Rākshasas along with Bibhishana rose up delightedly and saw the city. Thereupon the monkeys and Rākshasas beheld the city abounding in white houses having spacious compartments, filled with elephants and horses and looking like Amarāvati, the capital of Mahendra.

SECTION CXXVI.

Having completed the fourteen years (of exile), the self-controlled elder brother of Lakshmana, arriving at the hermitage of Varadwäya on the fifth day, saluted the ascetic. And bowing unto Varadwaya, having asceticism for his wealth, he said,—"O thou gifted with six sorts of wealth, hast thou heard of the prosperity and well being (of my city)? Is Bharata still engaged (in guarding the people)? Are my mothers living?" Being thus addressed by Rāma the great ascetic Varadwäya replied, delighted, and smiling, unto that foremost of Raghus,—"Abiding by thy command and with matted locks, Bharata is waiting for thee, always honoring thy sandals. And all others are well in thy house. O subduer of thy enemies, I was greatly pained, when I saw thee before entering the huge forest, wearing bark, three with thy wife, deprived of thy kingdom for piety only, walking on foot, renouncing every thing, obeying the command of thy sire, deprived of all comforts, like a celestial banished from heaven, deprived of thy kingdom at the words of Kaikeyi, and living on wild roots and fruits; but beholding thee now of accomplished end, with all thy friends having vanquished the enemy, I have attained to highest delight. O Raghava, I am apprised of immense griefs and happinesses which befell thee when thou didst live in Janasthan'a. Thy blameless spouse was carried away stealthily by Ravana engaged as thou wert in the behoof of the Brahmanas, and in the protection of all the ascetics. The view of Maricha-the carrying away of Sita,-the beholding of the headless demon,-thy going to (the lake) Pampa,thy friendship with Sugriva, where Vali was slain by thee,the enquiry of Vaidelii undertaken by the son of Wind-god,the construction of the bridge by Nala after the whereabouts of Vaidehi had been known-the conflagration of Lanka by the delighted and the leading monkeys-the destruction, in the conflict, of Ravana proud of his own strength, along with his sons, friends, courtiers, army and steeds-the arrival of the celestials on the destruction of Ravana, the thorn of gods and the grant of boon by them-I have known all these by virtue of my asceticism, O thou fond of virtue. disciples used to go hence to that city to bring tidings. shall even now grant thee a boon, O foremost of those using weapons. Do thou accept my Arghya* and then repair to Ayodhyā to-morrow." And respectfully abiding by his words, that effulgent son of the king, delighted, begged of him the boon. "O thou gifted with six qualities, on my way while proceeding to Ayodhyā, let all the trees, hearing fruits out of season, and producing honey, bear many a nectar-smelling fruit." No sooner he replied saying,-"Thy promise shall be fulfilled" than all the trees there became like those of heaven.

* i.a. thyself, Lakshmana and Sita.

A respectful oblation to gods or venerable men of rice, desers grass, flowers &c with water in a small boat-shaped vessel.

Trees without finits were filled therewithal and trees without flowers were covered with them. All the trees, whose leaves were dried up, were enveloped with foliage and all of them began to pour honey. The way to Ayodhya for three Yoyanas was thus filled all over (with trees). Thereupon thousands of monkeys, living, at pleasure and delightedly, on various celestial fruits, thought as if they were in heaven

SECTION CXXVII.

THEREUPON beholding Ajodbyā, Rāma, the descendant of Raghu, of light movements and desirous of affording delight unto others, thought of welcoming (them). Thinking thus the intelligent and effulgent (Rama) cast his looks towards the monkeys and spoke unto Hanuman, saving,-"O foremost of monkeys, speedily reparing to Ayodhya do thou learn of the welfare of all people in the palace of the king. Arriving at the city of Sringavera, do thou communicate unto Guha, the king of Nishadhas* having the forest as his kingdon, my well-being, at my command. Hearing that I am hale and hearty and relieved of all troubles, Guha, my friend like my own self, shall attain to delight. And Guha, the lord of Nishadhas, delighted, shall inform thee of the way to Ayodhya and the well being of Bharata. Do thou ask of Bharata his well-being at my words, and communicate unto him my (arrival) with Lakshmana and my speuse after having made good the vow

* It low caste aboriginal Hindu corresponding to our Chandolas always living in the forest. The Raja of Ramond in the district of Madurá in Madray traces his descent from this Guba.

(of my sire)-the carrying away of Sita by the powerful Rayana-the friendship with Sugriva and the destruction of Vali in the conflict—the search of Maithili instituted by thes having got over the huge lord of rivers-the advance (of the monkeys) to the banks of the deep-the view of the ocean, the construction of the bridge—the destruction of Ravana,-the grant of boon by Mahendra, Brahma and Varuna -my meeting with my father by the favour of Mahadeva. Do thou, O gentle one, communicate unto Bharata, my arrival here with the lord of Rakshasas and king of monkeys. (Tell him) 'vanquishing his foes and attaining to excellent fame Rama hath arrived at the gate of the city with his valiant friends, having satisfied the vow (of his sire).' Thou shouldst read the signs expressive of joy or sorrow that Bharata shall display on hearing this and infer therefrom his attitude towards me. Thou shouldst know, from the colour of his countenance, his looks and his words, all the movements and actions of Bharata. Whose mindedoth not change obtaining such an ancestral kingdom, filled with all prosperity and abounding in elephants, horses and chariots? If the effulgent Bharata, the descendant of Raghu, ruling over it, wisheth the kingdom for himself, let him lord over the entire earth. Therefore, O monkey, it behoveth thee to come back speedily apprised of his intention and movements, before we proceed further." Being thus commanded, Hanuman, the son of Wind-god, assuming a human shape speedily proceeded towards Ayodhya. Hanuman the son of Maruta rose up in the welkin with velocity like unto Garuda ready to fall upon a huge serpent. Then crossing the Windpath and the abode of the birds, getting over the terrible confluence of the Ganges and Yamuna, reaching the city of Sringavera and meeting Guha, the energetic Hanuman, delighted ,(addressed him) with the following exgellent words-"Thy friend Rama, the descendant of Kakutstha, having truth for his prowess, with Sitä and son of Sumitra.

hath enquired of thy welfare. Having spent five nights* till to-day, he, having obtained permission from the ascetic Varadwaja, shall proceed to morrow." Having said this the highly energetic monkey, not caring for the exhaustion of travel, greatly delighted and with hairs erect, rose up with great velocity. Beholding the holy river sanctified with the name of Parasurama, the rivers - Balukini, Baruthi, Gomati, the huge forest of Sála trees, the various countries populated with thousands of people, and proceeding a great distance , speedily, that foremost of monkeys got at the trees near Nandigramt like unto those of Chaitraratha, the garden of the lord of celestials the flowers whereof were being plucked off by many a damsel accompanied by their children decked in various ornaments. He saw at a distance of one crosa from Ayodhyā Bharata wearing the skin of an antelope, poorly, greatly reduced, living in a hermitage, wearing matted hairs, having his body covered with dirt, greatly pulled down in consequence of his brother's disaster, living on roots and fruits, self-controlled, living the life of an ascetic, observing pious observances, with a bundle of clotted hairs on his head, wearing bark and deer skin, having control over his passions and senses, effulgent like Brahmarshis, ruling the earth always placing the sandals before him, protecting people of four Varnas against all fear, with courtiers, priests leading a holy life and soldiers all wearing red clothes around All those citizens, fond of piety, did not like to use good clothes beholding the prince use bark and deer skin. Thereupon Hanuman, the son of Maruta spake with folded hands unto him, conversant with piety like virtue incarnate, saying-"Kakutstha, living in the forest of Dandaka with bark and matted hairs, for whom thou art lamenting, hath enquired after thy welfare. Do thou, O worshipful sire, speak out thy welfare and renounce the dreadful grief. Thou shalt in this moment be reconciled to thy brother Slaving Ravana, and regaining Maithili, Rama, having accomplished his end, bath arrived here with his valiant friends. The highly effulgent Lakshmana and the famed Vaidehi (have also come). Sita fareth well with Rama like unto Sachi in the company of Mahendra." Being thus addressed by Hanuman, Bharata, the son of Kaikevi, delighted, fell down all on a sudden in a swoon of inv. Thereupon rising up in no time, and welcoming him, Bharata, the descendant of Ragbu, spake unto Hanuman communicating the pleasant tidings, the following words. And embracing the monkey respectfully the graceful Bharata sprinkled him with profuse tears not out of grief but of nov. He said,-"Art thou a man or god who hast kindly come here? O gentle one, I shall confer upon thee, who hast communicated unto me this pleasant tidings; hundreds and thousands of kine, hundreds of prosperous villages, sixten young wives, prous, wearing excellent Kundalas, golden-hued, having beautiful noses and breast having moonlike countenances, decked with all ornaments and born of respectable families." And hearing from that leading monkey of that wonderful return of Rama, the son of the king. delighted became anxious to behold him and again addressed joyously Hanuman with the following words.

* Having spent five nights after the expiry of fourteen years of exile he is a living to the hermitage of Varadwaja. He shall leave that place to morrow.—T.

† The cruntry of Bharata's maternal uncle - T.

SECTION CXXVIII.

HEAR the tidings of my brother affording me great delight who hath been living in the huge forest for many a year. The saying of the people appeareth to me as instinct with well meaning that a man, if alive, may attain to joy even after a century. Do thou relate truly unto me, how and in what country the union between Raghava and the monkeys was brought about." Being thus accosted by the prince and seated on Kuça, he, thereupon, began to describe Rama's life in the forest. "How Rama was exiled, the two boons conferred upon thy mother, how king Dacaratha died in consequence of (bis) son's grief, how by emissaries, O lord, thou wert brought up from the house of thy maternal sucle, how thou didst not wish for the kingdom having entered Ayadbya, how thy brother, the repressor of enemies, was solicited by thee for accepting the kingdom, reparing to the mount Chitrakuta, who hast ever wended the track of the pious, the renouncement of kingdom (by him) abiding by the words of the king, thy return after taking the sandals of thy revered (brother)-all these, O thou of long-arms, are known to thee. I shall relate unto thee all that happened after thy return. Thyself having returned thence, all the birds and animals were overwhelmed with terror and that forest appeared as if distressed. Thereupon he entered the solitary and huge and dreadful forest Dandaka distressed by the elephants and abounding in lions, tigers and deer. And they entering the dense forest there appeared before them the powerful Biradha* emitting a dreadful sound. And taking him up roaring aloud like an elephant Rama threw him with his arms upwards and face downwards into a pit-

Having accomplished that difficult work the two brothers Rama and Lakshmana, arrived in the evening at the pleasant hermitage of Sarabhanga. And Sarabhanga having attained to beaven, Rama, having truth for his prowess, saluting all the ascetics, repaired to Janasthana. And by the highsouled Raghava, living there, fourteen thousand inhabitants of Janasthana were slain. In the company of one person only and at the commencement of the fight, by Rama, withinthe one fourth part of a day, were exterminated all the highly powerful and valiant inhabitants of the forest of Dandaka always putting obstructions in the way of the ascetics. All the Rakshasas were grinded (to death) by Raghava, Khara was slain in the conflict; Dushana being slainfirst Trishira was slain thereafter by him. Thereafter (a she-demon) named Surpanakhā, came to the side of Rāma, Thereupon being commanded by Rama, the highly powerful-Lakshmana rose up all on a sudden and taking a dagger chopped off her ears and nose. Being thus insulted by himthat she-demon came to Ravana. Thereupon a dieadful-Raksbasa named Maricha-an attendant of Ravana, assuming the shape of a jewelled deer, allured Vaidehi. Andbeholding it, Vaidehi spake unto Rama, saying,-'Do thou catch it; with it when caught our hermitage shall be more charming.' Thereupon Rama, with bow in his hand, pursued that deer and with one shaft destroyed it. O gentle one, Raghava going out on hunting, and Lakshmana having issued out of the hermitage, the Ten-necked (demon) entered therein. And he speedily got hold of Sita, like unto Rohini possessed by the planet in the sky. Thereupon slaying the vulture Yatayu in the conflict desirous of rescuing ber and getting hold of Sita that Rakshasa speedily repaired (to his capital). Thereupon some monkeys resembling mountains, stationed on the summit of a mountain, steickenwith wondrous fear and astonishment, beheld Ravana, the ford of Rakshasas proceed with Sita. Ascending the car

Pushpaka, going at will, with Vaidehi and hastening his course that highly powerful Ravana, the lord of Rakshasas entered Lanka. And entering the huge and excellent golden palace Ravana consoled Maithili with (diverse) words. But she regarded that foremost of Rakshasas and his words as straw. And Vaidehi was placed in the forest of Aseka. Thereupon returned Rama after having slain the deer in the forest. Having returned and seen the vulture, dearer than his father, slain, Rama, the descendant of Kakutstha was pained. And searching Vaidehi and ranging at the banks of Godaveri and forest-lands covered with flowers, Rama, with Lakshmana, met in that huge forest a Rākshasa named Kavandha. Thereupon at the words of Kavandha, Rama, having truth for his prowess, repairing to the mount Rishyamuka, was united with Sugriva. There had grown mutual love in them before they were known to each other. Sugrivawas driven away by his angry brother Vali. And informed of each other's affairs their friendship grew closer. Thereupon slaying the huge-bodied and highly powerful Vali in the conflict by virtue of the strength of his own arms Rama obtained (for Sugriva) his own kingdom. And being placed on the throne with all the monkeys, Sugriva promised unto Rama the enquiry of the Princess (Sita). Being commanded by the high-souled Sugriva, the lord of monkeys, ten kotis of monkeys repaired to (various) quarters. Among them some of us lost our way in a cavity of the Vindhya mountain, and were striken with great terror-and accordingly much time was lost. The powerful brother of the king of vultures named Sampati communicated unto us the residence of Sita in the palace of Ravana. Thereupon removing the grief of my relatives stricken with sorrow and resorting to my own prowess, I jumped over hundred yoyanas and beheld her placed in the forest of Asoka, wearing a red cloth, paie, deprived, of all joy and observing strict penances. And then nearing her and beholding her of a perfectly blameless person I bestowed upon her an ensign a ring with Rama's name engraven on it. And obtaining a jewel as an ensign, I, with my object accomplished, returned. And having returned I presented Rama of unwearied actions with that ensign of a brilliant gem. And hearing (of the news of Vaidehi) Rama regained his life like one on the verge of death regaining his being after drinking nectar. And exciting (his soldiers) for making preparations like unto Fire about to destroy all people he made up his mind for the devastation of Lanka. Thereupon arriving at the banks of the ocean he had a bridge constructed by Nala by which the army of monkey-heroes crossed (the deep). destroyed Prahasta, Raghava slew Kumbhakarna, Lakshmana killed the son of Ravana and Rama himself slew Ravana. He was then met by Sakra, Yama, Varuna, Siva, Brahmā and Dacaratha. And that graceful descendant of Kakutstha, the slaver of foes, obtained the boon from them as well as from the saints assembled there—(celestial and otherwise). Having obtained the boon he, delighted, met the monkeys and in the car Pushpaka reached Kishkindha. Again reaching the Ganges he is living with the ascetic; it becometh thee to behold him to-morrow under the auspices of of Pushya,* without any hindrance." Thereupon being delighted with the sweet accents of Hanuman, Bharata addressed him, with folded hands, with words affording delight, saying,-"After a long time my desire hath been fulfilled."

The lunar asterism comprising three stars of which one is the Cancer.

BECTION CXXIX.

HEARING those words affording great delight, Bharata, the slayer of enemies, having truth for his prowess, delighted, ordered Satrughna, (saying),-"Let all people being purified worship all the deities and alters of the city with fragrant garlands and diverse music. Let all the bards conversant with the chanting of the pedigree, the flatterers, all those conversant with music, the dancing girls, the queens, the courtiers, the soldiers with their wives, Brahmanas, Kshatryas, and people of all other castes, issue out to behold the moon-like countenance of Rāma." Hearing the words of Bharata, Satrughna, the slaver of enemies, divided the work amongst the servants, (saying),-"Do ye level the high and low ground from Nandigram to (Ayodhya). Do ye perfectly water the ground with cold water. Thereafter sprinkle all the places with flowers and dried paddy; hoist up fligs all over the city; decorate all the houses, before the rising of the moon with garlands, jewels, flowers of gold and things of five other colours. Let hundreds of men watch the thoroughfares." Hearing the command of Satrughna, issued out with delight Dhristi, Jayaota, Vijaya, Siddartha, Arthasadhaka, Asoka, Mantrapāla and Sumantra. Thereupon issued out men on horse back and in cars with thousands of mad elephants well-decked with pennons and she-elephants with golden seats (on their back). And some heroes proceeded encircled by thousand excellent steeds and persons carrying Sakti, Risthi, maces and pennons and thousands of infantry. Thereupon proceeded Sumitra and all other wives of Dacaratha placing Kaucalya before them and seated in excellent conveyances. And hearing of the return of his brother and attaining to delight, the high-souled and pions Bharata, reduced with fasting, poorly, wearing bark and 'skin of an antelope and conversant with religion, issued but to receive back Rama in the company of his counsellors and encircled by the twice-born ones, the people of diverse castes, his own relations and kinsmen and ministers with garlands and Modaka* in their hands, eulogized by the bards, having his arrival announced with the sound of conchs and bugles and placing the saudals of his worshipful brother on his head and taking white umbrella adorned with white garlands and white Chowries decked with gold and worthy of being used by the kings. Thereupon with the sound of the horses' hoofs and cars, couchs and hugles the earth shook. And the whole city went to Nandigram. And beholding the Wind-god's son, Bharata said,-"Didst throu not resort to the usual fick!eness of the monkeys? We do not behold the worshipful Rama, the descendant of Kākutstha -- the slayer of foes. Nor do we behold the monkeys assuming shapes at will?" Having been addressed with those words, Hanuman replied, communicating unto Bharata, having truth for his prowess, the truth, -"Having reached the trees, covered by the favour of Varadwain, with fruits and flowers and pouring honey, the monkeys are emitting noise like maddened black bees. O slayer of foes, this boon was granted him (Rāma) by Vāsava. (Varadwaya) is treating him with his army with all hospitality. Hear the dreadful noise of the delighted monkeys. Methinks the monkey host hath crossed the river Gomati. Behold the huge upheaval of dust towards the Sala forest. Methinks the monkeys are agreating the graceful Sála forest. Behold there at the distance the car resembling the Sun. This celestial car Pashpaka, constructed by Brahma's mind. was obtained by the high-souled (Rama) after having slain Ravana with his friends. This celestial car, resembling the newly risen Sun, coursing at will and carrying Rama (was gained) by the favour of the Giver of wealth. (There are) the two heroic borthers-the descendants of Raghu with Vaideli, the highly effulgent Sugriva and the Rakshasa Bibbishana. Thereupon with the sound of "there is Rama" there arose a joyous noise reaching the abode of the celestials from among women, children, the young and the old, Thereupon descending upon the earth from chariota, elephants and horses all people beheld him (Rama) stationed on the car like unto the moon in the sky. And facing delightedly Raghava and with folded hands Bharata worshipped him with agreeable words, Arghya and water to wash his feet. There appeared in the car constructed by Brahma's mind the elder brother of Bharata having expansive eyes like the immortal weilder of thunder-bolt. Thereupon Bharata humbly saluted his brother Rama seated on the top of the car like unto the Sun on the summit (of the mount Meru). And commanded by Rama that excellent car drawn by ganders got down on the earth with great velocity. And ascending that car, Bharata, having truth for his prowess, reaching Rema, delighted, again bowed unto him. And raising Bharata up who had been seen after a long time and placing him on his lap Kakutstha, delighted, embraced him. Thereupon Bharata, the slayer of foes, bowed unto Vaidehi and welcomed Lakshmana. And the son of Kaikeyi (then in turn) embraced Sugriva, Jambabana, Angada, Mainda, Dwivida, Nila and Rishava. And he then embraced Sushena. Nala. Gabaksha, Gandhamadana, Sarabha, and Panasa. assuming human shapes, those monkeys, assuming shapes at will, delightedly enquired after Bharata's well-being. And embracing Sugriva, the foremost of monkeys, the highly effulgent prince Bharata, the foremost of the pious, said-"O Sugriva, thou art our filth brother. From brotherliness groweth friendship and doing injury is the sign of an enemy." And Bharata, then addressed Bibbishana with soothing words-"It is by fortune that through your help he hath accomplished such a difficult work." Thereupon the heroic Satrughna saluting Rama and Lakshmana, respectfully bowed unto Sita. And having approached his mother, pale and pulled down with grief, Rama humbly touched her feet and enhanced her delight. And thereupon saluting Sumitra, famed Kaikevi and all his mothers be approached the priests. Thereupon all the citizens with folded hands welcomed him saving-"Welcome art thou, O thou of long arms! O thou the enhancer of Kaucalya's joy !" And the elder brother of Bharata observed the folded hands of the citizens like so many blown lotuses. And himself taking the sandals of Rama, Bharata, conversant with piety, placed them at the feet of that lord of men. Thereupon Bharata with folded hands spoke unto Rama, saying-"This all thy kingdom, which thou didst leave to my care, I return thee. Blessed is my birth to-day and accomplished is my desire, since I behold thee again as king in Ayodhya after thy return. Do thou examine thy wealth treasury, palace and army. By thy favour I have increased all these ten fold." Hearing Bharata speak in that wise and beholding him devoted to his brother all the monkeys and the Rakshasa Biblishana shed tears. Thereupon placing Bharata, in delight, on his lap, Raghava, with his army in that car, proceeded towards Bharata's abode. And reaching Bharata's palace Rāghava with his army descended upon the earth. Thereupon Rama said to the excellent car- Do thou (now) go to Vaisravana-I do permit thee." Thereupon being thus commanded by Rama, that excellent car, proceeding towards the north, reached the abode of the Giver of wealth. That celestial car Pushpaka had been taken away hy the Rākshasa (Rāvana); but now at the words Rama it reached (again) the Giver of wealth. And touching the feet of his priest the powerful Raghava sat on a separate ard excellent seat like unto Sakra, the lord of immortals (by the side of) Vrikashpazi.

&#x27; A kied of sweet most,

SECTION CXXX.

----

THEREUPON having placed her palms on his head Bharata, the enhancer of Kaikeyi's joy spoke unto his elder brother Rama, having truth for his prowess, saying,-"Abiding by my mother's request thou didst confer this kingdom upon me; I do return thee the kingdiom thou didst give me. Like unto a young one unable to carry a heavy burden thrown off by a powerful bull I am unable to carry this huge burden (of the kingdom). I do consider this kingdom inlested with thieves, difficult to govern, as it is difficult to re-construct a bridge broken down by a powerful current of water. As an ass cannot follow the course of a horse and a crow cannot follow that of a gander, so I am unable, O hero. O slayer of foes, to follow thy footsteps. If a tree, planted in the inner appartment of a house, growing huge with a big trunk and many branches, is dried up as soon it blossoms without bearing fruits, his object for whom it is planted, becomes fruitless. And this simili, O thou of long-arms, shall prove good in thee, if dost thou not, our master, govern us, O lord of men, who are thy servants. Let the world, O Raghava, behold thee installed (to-day) like unto the powerful mid-day Sun burning in effulgence. Do thou sleep and rise up with the sound of stringed instruments, womens' girdles and Nupuras and charming songs. Do thou govern the people as long as the solar system exists and as far as the earth extends." Hearing the words of Bharata, Rama the conqueror of enemies' cities, saying,-"So be it" sat on an excellent sent. Thereupon at the command of Satrughna, expert, skilful and quick-handed barbers gathered round Raghava. At first, Bharata, the highly powerful Lakshmana, Sugriva the lord of monkeys, and Bibhishana the lord of Rakshasas bathed. Thereupon shorn of his matted hairs, bathed, with paste excellent garlands and precious clothes on, he appeared there shining in grace. The valiant and graceful Satrughna, the upholder of the dignity of Ikshwaku race, himself got ready the dresses for Rama and Lakshmana. And all the high-minded wives of Dacaratha with their own hands decked Sita with various charming (ornaments). Thereupon Kaucalya, delighted and fond of her son, herself with great care, decorated the wives of monkeys. Thereupon at the words of Satrughna, the charioteer by name Sumantra got ready the perfectly beautiful car. And beholding that celestial car, bright as the fire of the sun, stationed before him, Rama, having long-arms, the conqueror of enemies' cities, ascended it. Sugriva and Hanuman, graceful like Mahendra, bathed, dressed in celestial clothes and wearing excellent Kundalas, proceeded (to view the city). And then went Sita and all the wives of Sugriva decorated with all ornaments and wearing excellent Kundalas, anxious to behold the city. All the ministers of king Dacaratha in Ayodhya began to hold consultation respectfully with the priest. Asoka. Vijava and Siddhartha, with undivided mind. consulted with each other about the welfare of Rama as well as that of the city. (Thereupon they ordered the servants) saying,-"Do ye collect materials necessary for the auspicious installation of the high-souled (Rama) worthy of being crowned with victory". The priest and the ministers having ordered thus all speedily issued out of the city to behold Rama. Like unto the thousand-eyed Indra in his car drawn by horses the blameless Rama, seated in his car, proceeded towards the excellent city. Bharata took up the reins, Satrughna held the umbrella and Lakshmana began to fan men on the head with Chowries. And Bibhishana, the lord of Rayshasas standing on one side, took up the white Chowrie shining like the second moon. There was audible the sweet encomium of Rama chanted by the crowd of ascetics in the sky, the celestials and the Marutas. Thereupon the highly effulgent Sugriva, the foremost of monkeys, got up upon an elephant named Satrunyaya resembling a mountain. And riding nine thousand elephants proceeded the monkeys assuming human shapes and adorned with various ornaments. And with the music of conches and bugles that foremost of men entered the city abounding in houses. (And the citizens) beheld Räghava enter the city with a graceful person and seated in the car. And they having bowed unto that descendant of Käkutstha were welcomed by him. And they followed that high-souled one encircled by his brothers. And surrounded by his courtiers, Brahmanas and subjects Rama appeared beautiful like unto the Moon encircled by stars. And he went preceded by men who play on stringed instruments, by people with Karatal and Sustika in their hands and by men chanting delightedly auspicious songs. Parsons with Akshata and gold in their hands, kine, girls, Brahmanas and persons with Modaka in their hands went before Rama. Thereupon before the ministers Rama. began to describe the friendship of Sugriva, the prowers of the Wind-god's son and the works accomplished by the monkeys. And hearing of the works of the monkeys and the prowess of the Rakshasas, the inhabitants of the city of Ayodhya attained to astonishment. Having related thus (the works of the monkeys) the graceful Rama encircled by the monkeys entered (the city of) Ayodhya abounding in delighted and plump persons. Thereupon the citizens hoisted up flags upon every house and he reached the picturesque abode of his ancestors inhabited by the descendants of Ikshwaku. And having reached and entered his agcestral palace and bowed unto Kauçalya, Sumitra and Kaikevi, the high-souled prince, the enhancer of the joy of the-descendants of Raghu, addressed Bharata the foremost of the pious, with sweet words instinct with meaning, saying,

-"Do thou set apart for Sugriva my huge and excellenpalace abounding in pearls and Vaidurias." Hearing those words, Bharata, having truth for his prowess, taking 'Sugriva by the hand, conducted him to the palace. And commanded by Satrughna, (servants) speedily entered (that palace) with oil, lamps, bedsteads and beddings. Thereupon the highly effulgent younger brother of Raghava spoke unto Sugriva, saving .- "Do thou, O lord, order some (to bring water" for Rama's installation." And Sugriva conferred upon for leading monkeys four golden jars crested with diverse jewels and said to them,-"Do ye so conduct, O monkeys, than ye may return by the dawn with the jars filled with the water of the four oceans." Being thus addressed by the high-souled (Sugriva) the monkeys resembling the elephans' speedily rose up in the welkin like unto quick-coursing vultures. Jambavana, Hanuman, the monkey Vegadarshi anz Rishabha brought the jars filled with water from five hundred Sushena, gifted with prowess, brought that jar crested with gems, filled with water from the Eastern Ocean. And Rishabha speedily brought water from the Southern Ocean. And Gabaya brought, from the great Western Ocean in that golden jar, water perfumed with the fragrance of red sandal and camphor. And the virtuous-souled Windgod's son, gifted with all accomplishments and the prowess of Garuda and Wind-god, brought, speedily from the Northern Ocean, water in that jewelled jar. And beholding water thus brought by the leading monkeys for the installation of Rama, Satrughna, with his ministers, communicated that unto the leading priests and friends. Thereupon the self-controlled Vasishtha, striken in years, along with other Brahmanas placed Rama with Sita on a jewelled seat. Vasishtha, Vijayā, Jāvāli, Kātyāyana, Goutama and Bamadeva, sprinkled that foremost of men, with clear and fragrant water as Vasus did the thousand eyed Vasava. (He was then sprinkled by) the Rittigas, Brahmanas, maidens thou with me and four-fold forces, govern this kingdom, ruled by our predecessors. Like unto our ancestors do thou now carry the burden of an associate in the Birone." When the son of Sumitra did not accept the heir apparentship albeit solicited earnessly again and again, the high souled (Rama) conferred upon Bharata that dignity. And that son of king performed various sacrifices such as Paundarika, * Aswamedhat, Bajimedha and others. And governing the kingdon for ten thousand years Raghava performed ten horse-sacrifices with excellent horses and profuse presents. And that highly powerful Rama, having his arms extended up to the knee-joint, having a spacious breast and Lakshmana as his attendant ruled the earth (in this wise). And ubtaining that excellent kingdom, the virtuoussouled Raghava performed many sacrifices with his sons, brothers and friends. And Rama governing the kingdom. the widows were not distressed and there was no fear from voracious animals or from diseases. The people were saved from the thieves and there was no other trouble. And the old were not constrained to perform the funeral ceremonies of the children. All were delighted and devoted to pious observances. And beholding Rama they did not envy one another. And Rama governing the kingdom, (people) lived for thousand years and had thousand children,-they were freed from diseases and sorrow. And the trees bore fruits and flowers perpetually-there were showers at will and the wind blew pleasant. And the people delighted engaged in their respective works and the subjects grew pions and truthful, under Rama's regeme, and were devoted to the observance of all pious works and gifted with all auspicious marks. And Rama ruled the kingdom for ten thousand years. And this sacred Epic, the first of its kind, affording pietly, fame, and long life, and describing the conquest of the bings, was composed by Valmiki in the days of yore.

A kind of sacrifice.

t A kind of sacrifice in which a horse is slain.

Baidurja. And Rama conferred upon Sita an excellent pearl necklace crested with precious jems, celestial clothes and various excellent ornaments. And taking off the necklace from her person Vaidehi, the daughter of king Janaka, conferred it upon the Wind-god's son remembering the services (rendered by him) and cast her looks again and again upon her lord and the monkeys. And beholding that (Rama) capable of reading the gestures, spoke unto the daughter of king Janaka, saying-"O fortunate and beautiful lady, do thou confer this necklace upon him with whom thou art pleased." Thereupon the lotus-eyed (Sita) conferred that upon the Wind god's son. And Hanuman, the foremost of monkeys, in whom perpetually exist, energy, forgiveness. fame, skillfullness, prowess, humility, tactics, manliness, valiance and intellect, appeared with that necklace like a mountain beautified with the rays of the moon and white clouds. And all other elderly and leading monkeys were respectively honoured with clothes and ornameats. And being honoured by Rama of unwearied actions with enough of jewels and other wished-for objects, Bibbishana, Sugriva, Hanuman, Jambhaban and other leading monkeys, delighted, returned to their respective habitations. Thereupon, the lord of earth and the slayer of foes conferred, all wished-for things, upon Dwivida, Mainda and Nila. And beholding (the installation of Rama) the high-souled monkeys, taking leave of the lord of earth, went to Kishkindha. And beholding the inauguration of Rama, Sugriva, the foremost of monkeys, honored by Rama, repaired to the city of Kish-And having obtained his own kingdom, the greatly famous and virtuous-souled Biblishana, with all the Rakshasas, repaired to the city of Lanka. Having slain bis foes, the highly generous and glorious Rama, ruled in great delight, the kingdom extending all over the earth. And Rama, fond of the pious, spoke unto Lakshmana, conversant with piety, saying-"O thou conversant with piety, do thou with me and four-fold forces, govern this kingdom, ruled by our predecessors. Like unto our ancestors do thou now carry the burden of an associate in the throne." When the son of Sumitra did not accept the heir apparentship albeit solicited earnesMy again and again, the high souled (Rama) conferred upon Bharata that dignity. And that son of king performed various sacrifices such as Paundarika, *Aswamedhat, Bājimedha and others. And governing the kingdon for ten thousand years Raghava performed ten horse-sacrifices with excellent horses and profuse presents. And that highly powerful Rama, having his arms extended up to the knee-joint, having a spacious breast and Lakshmana as his attendant, ruled the earth (in this wise). And obtaining that excellent kingdom, the virtuoussouled Raghava performed many sacrifices with his sons, brothers and friends. And Rama governing the kingdom. the widows were not distressed and there was no fear from voracious animals or from diseases. The people were saved from the thieves and there was no other trouble. And the old were not constrained to perform the funeral ceremonies of the children. All were delighted and devoted to pious observances. And beholding Rama they did not envy one another. And Rama governing the kingdom, (people) lived for thousand years and had thousand children,-they were freed from diseases and sorrow. And the trees bore fruits and flowers perpetually—there were showers at will and the wind blew pleasant. And the people delighted engaged in their respective works and the subjects grew pious and truthful, under Rama's regeme, and were devoted to the observance of all pious works and gifted with all auspicious marks. And Rama ruled the kingdom for ten thousand years. And this sacred Epic, the first of its kind, affording piety, fame, and long life, and describing the conquest of the bings, was composed by Valmiki in the days of yore.

A kind of sacrifice.

+ A kind of sactifies in which a horse is slain.

He, who on this earth, shall hear (this story) shall be divested of sins. People, wishing for children, shall obtain the same and those, wishing for riches, shall get by them. Thus people on this earth shall attain to their wished-for objects hearing of this Rama's installation-the king may conquer the earth and subdue his foes. Females may obtain sons (in the same way) as Kauçalyā gave birth to Rāma, Sumitrā to Lakshmana and Kaikeyi to Bharata. Hearing the story of this work describing the victory of Rama of unwearied actions one may attain to a long life. He, who with devotion and having his anger subdued, shall hear the story of this epic written by Valmiki in the days of yore shall get over all troubles. And hearing the story of the Epic composed by Valmiki in the days of yore, one living in foreign countries, shall return home and enjoy in the company of his friends. Hearing this people shall secure all their wished-for objects from Raghava and the celestials shall be greatly delighted. When this book is kept in a house it becomes free from the disturbance of evil spirits. Hearing this a king may conquer the earth, and one living in a foreign country fareth well. female, during her monthly course, hears the story, she shall give birth to an excellent son. By reading and worshipping this ancient history people are freed from all sins and attain to a long life. The Kshatryas, bending low their heads, should hear this daily from the Brahmanas. Hearing or reading the whole of Rāmāyana, forsooth shall people get sons and riches. Rama is ever pleased with him. He is the ever-existing Vishnu-the first God, the huge-armed Hari, Nārāyana and Lord. This ancient work produceth such fruits. May good betide ye. Do ye openly declare that Vishnu's prowess may increase. The celestials shall be greatly delighted for reading or hearing this story of Rama and the progenitors shall be always pleased. Those, who shall write this story of Rama first recorded by the Rishi (Valmiki) shall reach the region of Brahma. Hearing this people attain to, on this earth, multiplied relations, increased wealth and crops, beautiful wives, excellent happiness, and the accomplishment of all desires. They attain to long life, thealth, tame, intellect, prowess, and good brothers. Therefore it behoveth those good men, who wish for prosperity, to hear this story perpetually.

THE END OF YUDDHAKANDAM.