LIST of One Hundred and Seventy-two TALES,

CONTAINED IN A MANUSCRIPT COPY OF

The "ALF LEELA O LILA," or "Arabian Nights;"

AS IT WAS PROCURED BY THE AUTHOR IN EGYPT.

N.B. The Arabic Words mentioned in this List are given as they appeared to be pronounced, in English characters; and of course, therefore, adapted to English pronunciation.

The Number of Tales amounts to 172; but one tale is supposed to occupy many nights in the recital, so that the whole number is divided into "One Thousand and One Nights." It rarely happens that any two copies of the manuscript resemble each other. The title of "Alf Leela o Lila" is bestowed upon any collection of Eastern Tales divided into the same number of parts. The compilation depends upon the taste, the caprice, and the opportunities of the scribe, or the commands of his employer. Certain popular stories are common to almost all copies of the Arabian Nights, but almost every selection contains some tales which are not found in any other. Much depends upon the locality of the scribe. The popular stories of Egypt will be found to differ materially from those of Constantinople. A nephew of the late Wortley Montague, living in Rosetta, had a copy of the Arabian Nights; and, upon comparing the two manuscripts, it appeared that out of the 172 tales, here enumerated, only 37 were found in his manuscript. In order to mark, therefore, the stories which were common to the two manuscripts, an asterisk has been prefixed to the 37 tales which appeared in both copies.

Owing to some unaccountable oversight; the List of Plants collected in the Island of RHODES, has been omitted in every preceding Edition of this work. It may be hereafter inserted in p. 278. of this Volume, as a Note. We found, upon this island, a species of Snap-dragon, the Linaria latifolia triphylla sicula of Boccones Icones et Descriptiones Rariorum Plantarum, p. 45. tab. 22. taken by Linnæus for a variety of the Antirrhinum triphyllum (Linn.) or three-leaved Spanish Snap-dragon, described and figured by Clusius, and more recently by the late Professor Cavanilles, in his Icones Plantarum; but from which, however, it is very distinct; in the leaves being of an inversely ovate form, and broader in proportion to their length, than in that species, where they are also pubescent; whereas here they are always glaucous and naked, with the stems and calyxes also smooth, and the plant generally more spreading and branched from the root. We have called it ANTIRRHINUM NEGLECTUM.

Antirrhinum glabrum, foliis ternis oblongo-ovatis glaucis, spicis terminalibus oblongo-ovatis ovatis; calcaribus corollâ brevioribus, subulatis.

A. triphyllum. Lin. Hort. Cliff.

Linaria latifolia triphylla sicula. Bocc. Ic. supra citata.

Among the other plants, of which we collected specimens in Rhodes, were the following:

- Ny-leaved Snap-dragon . . . . Antirrhinum Cymbalaria, Lin.
- Cretan Viper's-bugloss . . . . Echium Creticum, Lin.
- Purple Grape-Hyacinth . . . . Hyacinthus conosus, Lin.
- Flat-podded Medic . . . . Medicago orbicularis, Lin.
