In the Saxon Time, it was ancient Demesne, of the Crown Imperial of this Realm: and, being one of the Royal Palaces, was erected into a Liberty independent of that Hundred, or indeed of any Jurisdiction, either Ecclesiastical or Civil, of the County, having in itself a Tribunal for Life and Death. The Reason of this seems to be, that the Kings of England having here a Hunting-house, at which they passed much of their Time, their Officers should take cognizance of Crimes within the Verge of their Court, and that Offenders should receive sentence under their more immediate Inspection.—Or else it was an usual Privilege belonging to the Royal Palaces.—This, probably, was the Cause of esteeming Becontree, in modern reckoning, an Half Hundred, because so great a Branch had been lopt off from it as Havering.”—Morant's Essex, vol. 1, p. 58.

Joan*, founded first a Chapel dedicated to St. Laurence, and gave it to the Prior and Convent of Wymondham, who were to keep two or three of their Monks here, where afterward were settled a Prior and several Black Canons. This Monastery was suppressed among others, 20th Hen. VIII., and given to Cardinal Wolsey toward the better Endowment of his College at Ipswich; After the Cardinal's Fall, it was granted to ———; but it may be doubted whether the Cardinal ever got Possession of it, for on its Dissolution William Hals the Patron is said to have seized it as an Eschaet, and it has since gone along with the Manor.”—*Tanner's Not. HAWES, in Allerdale Ward, below Darwent, Co. of CUMBERLAND: in the Parish of Bassenthwaite: a Chapel with the Curacy of Bassenthwaite.—“In the Year 1471, divers of the Parishioners petitioned the then Bishop for leave to build a Chapel in the said Parish (Bassenthwaite,) which was granted to them, on their engaging to deposit £50.0.0 for a Salary, and to build a Dwelling-house for the Reader, and lay thereto one Acre of Land for a Garden or Orchard. Whereupon the Chapel, called Hawes Chapel, seems to have been then built; but there is no account of any Curate, or any thing else belonging to it in the Bishop's Archives. But in the Year 1738, the Sum of £45.0.0, called by the Name of Chapel Stock, unto which the Parishioners added £5.0.0, (probably to supply what seems to have been lost from the ancient Stock,) was laid out in a Purchase of Lands for the Use and Benefit of the Curate of Bassenthwaite for ever. So that, all along, the Church and Chapel seem to have been supplied by one and the same Curate.”—Nicolson's Cumberland, vol. 2, p. 94.

“1082, the old Episcopal Church here with all that belonged to it was made Part of the Endowment, upon which here was afterward a Cell of Benedictine Monks, subordinate to the Priory of Durham, which was valued, 26th Hen. VIII., at £48..18..11 per ann. Dugd.; £60..5..0 Speed. It still continues Part of the Possessions of the Dean and Chapter of Durham, being granted to them, 33rd Hen. VIII.”—Tanner's Not. Mon.—“Bede calls it a Semi-island, being as he justly observes, twice an Island and twice Continent in one Day; for at the flowing of the Tide it is encompassed by Water, and at the Ebb there is an almost dry Passage, both for Horses and Carriages to and from the Main land; from which if measured in a straight Line it is distant about two Miles eastward; but on Account of some quick Sands, Passengers are obliged to make so many Detours, that the Length of the Way is nearly doubled, the Water over these Flats at Spring Tides is only seven Feet.—This Island was by the Britons called Inis Medicante; also Lindisfarn from the small Rivulet of Lindi which here runs into the Sea, and the Celtic Word Fahren or Recess; also on Account of its being the Habitation of some of the first Monks in this Country, it afterwards obtained its present Name of Holy Island. It measures from East to West about 2½ Miles, and its Breadth from North to South is scarcely 1½ Mile. At the North West Part there runs out a Spit of Land about a Mile in Length. The Monastery is situated at the southermost Extremity; and a small Distance North of it stands the little Town inhabited chiefly by Fishermen. This Island though really Part of Northumberland belongs to Durham; and all civil Disputes must be determined by the Justices of that County.”—Grose's Antiq. vol. 4, p. 109.
