E18065

Drawn by M^rDal^l Guildhall Bombay

NAWAB SALAR JUNG BAHADUR

Engraved by Edw^d F

SATARA

London Published by Longman & C^o 1826

HISTORY

OF

THE MAHRATTAS.

BY

JAMES GRANT DUFF, Esq.

CAPTAIN IN THE FIRST, OR GRENADIER, REGIMENT OF BOMBAY NATIVE INFANTRY, AND LATE POLITICAL RESIDENT AT SATARA.

IN THREE VOLUMES

VOL. III.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR

LONGMAN, REES, ORME, BROWN, AND GREEN

PATERNOSTER-ROW.

1826.

LONDON:
Printed by A. & R. Spottiswoode,
New-Street-Square.

CONTENTS

OF

THE THIRD VOLUME.

CHAPTER I.

FROM A. D. 1784, TO A. D. 1787.

Tippoo. — Nurgoond — Origin and progress of the dispute respecting it. — Tippoo's treachery — takes Nergoond — seizes Kittoor — forcibly converts many Hindoos. — Nana Furnuwees proposes an alliance with the English. — The latter less solicitous to co-operate than Nana expected. — Nana applies to the Portuguese. — French said to be in alliance with Tippoo. — Reported alliance between the Mahrattas and the French. — British Resident instructed to proceed to Poona. — Mr. Macpherson's offer of assisting in the defence of the Mahratta territory — rejected by Nana Furnuwees — Mahratta army advances to form a junction with Nizam Ally and Moodajee Bhonslay. — Moodajee in close alliance with the Poona Court. — Mahratta and Moghul armies unite — plan of operations. — Badamee taken. — Nana Furnuwees returns to Poona, and Moodajee Bhonslay to Nagpoor. — Holkar's proceedings. — Tippoo attacks Adonee — Gallant defence till relieved by the confederates. — Adonee abandoned. — Gujendergurh given up to Hurry Punt. — Holkar makes a sudden march to Savanoor — his object — Burhan-ud-deen attacks him — is repulsed by Holkar, who is joined by the Nabob of Savanoor. — Hurry Punt's operations. — Tippoo unexpectedly passes the Toongbuddra — operations of the armies. — Savanoor abandoned by the Mahrattas — Tippoo takes possession — proceeds to Benkapoor. — Hurry Punt takes Seerhutty. — Feeble operations on both sides. — Tippoo suddenly tenders proposals of peace. — Peace concluded. — Motives elucidated. — Sindia. - - - - Page 1

CHAPTER II.

FROM A. D. 1785, TO A. D. 1790.

Sindia's embarrassments — His impolitic conduct — Sequestrates many of the Jagheers — consequent enmity of the Mahomedan chiefs. — Mohummud Beg Humadanee. — Sindia levies tribute from the Rajpoots — The Rajpoots revolt — Attack and rout Sindia's troops under Ryajee Patell. Sindia takes the field — difficulties of the crisis — endeavours to negociate with the Rajpoots without success. — Mohummud Beg and his nephew join the Rajpoots — Battle in which Mohummud Beg is killed, but victory declares for the Rajpoots. — The emperor's regular infantry, with eighty pieces of cannon, desert Sindia in a body, and join the Rajpoots — Sindia evinces great fortitude and conduct — retreats unmolested by the Rajpoots — followed by Ismael Beg — continues his retreat to Gwalior — applies to Poona for aid. — Views of Nana Furnuwees. — Sindia's exertions. — Able defence of Agra by his General, Luckwa Dada. — Gholam Kawdir — takes Aligurh — joins Ismael Beg before Agra. — Jhats obstruct the operations of the siege — Sindia reinforces the Jhats. — Battle near Bhurtpoor, in which the Mahrattas and Jhats are worsted. — Successful diversion planned by Rannay Khan. — The battle of Agra in which Ismael Beg is totally defeated. — Ismael Beg joins Gholam Kawdir — They repair to Delhi. — Barbarities perpetrated by Gholam Kawdir. — Mahrattas at last advance — Gholam Kawdir flees — is pursued — taken — suffers mutilation, under which he dies. — Shah Alum restored to his throne, and Sindia recovers his ascendancy — His situation — Changes introduced in the constitution of his army. — Gosaeens. — Himmut Buhadur. — Regular infantry. — Sindia's views. — Transition to Deccan affairs. - - Page 20

CHAPTER III.

FROM A. D. 1787, TO A. D. 1792.

Tippoo breaks the treaty with the Peishwa — His great preparations — supposed by the English to be intended against them. — Nana Furnuwees proposes a defensive alliance, which is declined by Lord Cornwallis. — Transactions between the British authorities and Nizam Ally.— Guntoor given up. — Nizam Ally negociates with the English and with Tippoo — results. — Lord Cornwallis's letter to Nizam Ally. — Tippoo considers that letter tantamount to an offensive alliance against him. —His unsuccessful attack on the lines of Travancore. — Alliance of the English, the Peishwa, and Nizam Ally, against Tippoo — its terms. — First campaign of the English in this war against Tippoo. — Dilatory proceedings of the allies. — A British detachment joins Pureshram Bhow. —Mahrattas cross the Kistna.—Moghuls advance to lay siege to Kopaul and Buhadur Benda. — Mahrattas lay siege to Dharwar — operations — Dharwar capitulates after a protracted siege — Capitulation infringed. — Lord Cornwallis assumes command of the British army. — Capture of Bangalore. — Mahratta army marches from Poona under Hurry Punt Phurkay. — Sera surrendered — Mahratta armies advance to join the British and Moghuls before Seringapatam — Lord Cornwallis defeats Tippoo at Arikera, but is compelled to abandon his design of besieging Seringapatam — Distress of his army — relieved by the unexpcctcd junction of the Mahrattas. — Various operations. — A party of Mahrattas surprised and cut off by Kummur-ud-deen. — Lord Cornwallis reduces the forts between Bangalore and Gurumcondah. — Moghuls unable to reduce Gurumcondah, leave a party to mask it, which is surprised. — Pureshram Bhow's scheme of reducing Bednore. — Battle of Simoga. — Admirable conduct of Captain Little. — Simoga capitulates.—Pureshram Bhow advances towards Bednore, but retires with precipitation. — Operations at Seringapatam. — Peace concluded with Tippoo.—Cause of Pureshram Bhow's retreat explained.—The armies return to their respective territories. — Distress of Pureshram Bhow's army. Page 37

CHAPTER IV.

FROM A. D. 1792, TO A. D. 1794.

An inquiry into the reasons which induced Lord Cornwallis to refrain from subjugating Tippoo's territory, is foreign to the object of this work. — Opinion of the Mahratta ministers on this subject. — Mahadajee Sindia's proposals at the time of forming the confederacy against Tippoo, to which Sindia did not become a party. — Sindia's proceedings in Hindoostan.— Battle of Patun. — Ismael Beg defeated—Rajpoots continue the war—battle of Mairta—peace with the Rajpoots. — The regular infantry of De Boigne. — Holkar entertains the Chevalier Dudrenec and raises some regular corps.—Ali Buhadur assisted by Himmut Buhadur establishes himself in Bundelcund. — Sindia moves towards Poona. — Surmises with regard to his intentions — declares that he is proceeding as bearer of the insignia of office, for the Wukeel-i-Mootliq, from the emperor to the Peishwa. — Grand state ceremony on presenting the insignia. — Sindia endeavours by various ways to gain the confidence of the young Peishwa to the prejudice of Nana Furnuwees. — Discussions respecting the affairs of Hindoostan.—Ismael Beg again raises disturbances, but is taken prisoner and confined for life in the fort of Agra. — The troops of Sindia and Holkar commit hostilities against each other—obstinate battle of Lukhairee. — Sindia's troops victorious. — Consequences at Poona. — Hostilities suspended in Hindoostan, by orders from the Peishwa and Sindia — the latter all powerful in Hindoostan — his attempts to render himself popular in the Deccan—perseveres in his endeavours to supersede Nana Furnwees in the young Peishwa's favour.— Remarkable explanation betwixt the Peishwa and Nana. — Views of Mahadajee Sindia—his death. - - 71

CHAPTER V.

A. D. 1794.

Mahadajee Sindia's death, an event of great political importance. — Review of his policy and summary of his character — Is succeeded by his Grand Nephew Doulut Rao. — Sindia's regular infantry. — Opinions of many Mahrattas respecting that force. — Holkar long averse to its introduction. — Rughoojee Bhonslay had no infantry disciplined by European officers. — State of affairs at Nagpoor, and at Baroda. — Govind Rao Gaekwar succeeds as regent. — Piracy on the coast of Maharashtra. — The Peishwa's fleet. — Angria of Kolabah.— Scedees of Jinjeera — Revolutions and events in that State, Malwan and Sawuntwaree. — Various attempts of the English to suppress their piracies, and those of the Raja of Kolapoor—never completely effected until the year 1812. Page 87

CHAPTER VI.

FROM A. D. 1794, TO A. D. 1795.

Reflections on the preceding details, and on the condition of the Mahrattas as a military nation at this period. — Their claims on Nizam Ally occasion a temporary union of the chiefs. — Course of policy adopted by the English, in the negotiation which preceded the war between the Mahrattas and Nizam Ally. — Discussions between the Courts of Poona and Hyderabad—war declared—assembly of the armies respectively—march to oppose each other—skirmish in which the Moghuls obtain some advantage—battle of Kurdla—extraordinary discomfiture of the Moghul army. — Submission of Nizam Ally, who surrenders the person of his minister, cedes large tracts of territory, and promises to pay three krores of rupees. — Anecdote of the young Peishwa. — Nizam Ally offended at the neutrality of the English, whose influence at Hyderabad is likely to be wholly superseded by a French party. — Unexpected rebellion of the prince Ali Jah, occasions the recall of the English battalions. — The rebellion suppressed by the exertions of M. Raymond—Movements of the Mahrattas during the insurrection. — No proof of their having been in any manner accessory to the rebellion. — Nana Furnuwees at the summit of power, when his anxiety to preserve it, brings on an unforeseen catastrophe. Page 104

CHAPTER VII.

FROM A. D. 1795, TO A. D. 1796.

Nana Furnuwees—his conduct towards Mahdoo Rao—the Raja of Satara—and the family of the deceased Rugonath Rao. — The sons of Rugonath Rao confined in the fort of Sewneree. — Bajee Rao the particular object of Nana's jealousy. — Bajee Rao's character at this period—his accomplishments. — The young Peishwa desirous of cultivating his friendship. — Nana advises him to beware—Bajee Rao corrupts one of Nana's agents and opens a communication with the Peishwa—his insidious messages. — Discovery—its consequences. — Mahdoo Rao throws himself from the terrace of his palace, and dies — Nana endeavours to exclude Bajee Rao from the succession. — Bajee Rao gains over Balloba Tattya and Sindia to his interests. — Nana Furnuwees determines on anticipating Sindia, and brings Bajee Rao to Poona—Sindia influenced by his minister marches on the capital—Nana withdraws from Poona. — Balloba Tattya resolves to set aside Bajee Rao, and raise Chimnajee Appa to the Musnud, with Pureshram Bhow as his minister. — Nana Furnuwees being consulted by Pureshram Bhow, assents with seeming cordiality to the proposal. — Nana's proceedings. — Suspicions of Balloba Tattya. — Conspiracy matured, and Bajee Rao confined. — Chimnajee Appa declared Peishwa. — Sindia's pecuniary distress — plan for alleviating it — enlargement of Musheer Ool Moolk. — The new administration pretend a wish that Nana Furnuwees should take a principal share in the government. — Nana discovers their treachery. — Desperate situation of Nana—evinces great ability in extricating himself, and circumventing his enemies. — His interests in unison with those of Bajee Rao. — Rise of Ballajee Koonjur. — Nana discloses a part of his plans to Bajee Rao. — Rise of Shirzee Rao Ghatgay. — Nana Furnuwees gains Sindia to his views. — The imprudent proceedings of Bajee Rao's party bring on a premature discovery of a part of the conspiracy.— Bajee Rao sent off towards Hindoostan—enters into a compact with Shirzee Rao Ghatgay. — Proceedings at Poona. — Schemes of Nana Furnuwees matured—excites the Raja of Kolapoor to fall upon the districts of Pureshram Bhow. — Treaty of Mhar. — Treaty with Rughoojee Bhonslay. — Sindia arrests Balloba Tattya. — Pureshram Bhow accidentally forewarned of his danger—flees from Poona—is overtaken and made prisoner. — Nana Furnuwees obtains the guarantee of Nizam Ally and of Sindia, before trusting himself at Poona- Bajee Rao proclaimed Peishwa. — The adoption of Chimnajee Appa declared illegal. — Chimnajee Appa appointed to the government of Guzerat, with Aba Sheelookur as his deputy. - - - - Page 122

CHAPTER VIII.

FROM A. D. 1797, TO A. D. 1798.

New administration. — Army in a disorderly state. — Ahmednugur made over to Sindia, and the conditions of the treaty with Roghoojee Bhonslay fulfilled. — Bajee Rao refuses to ratify the treaty with Nizam Ally — Musheer Ool Moolk suddenly quits Poona in consequence — Nana Furnuwees endeavours to soothe him — Bajee Rao's policy. — Death of Tookajee Holkar — dispute among his sons — Sindia espouses the cause of Khassee Rao — Mulhar Rao killed, and the house of Holkar rendered for a time subservient to that of Sindia. — Sindia's arbitrary conduct. — Bajee Rao still popular — his real character little known — proposes ridding himself of both Nana Furnuwees and Sindia — employs the latter to seize the former, and Nana, with most of the principal ministers, is thrown into confinement — the property of Nana and his adherents given up to plunder — outrages and alarms at Poona. — Amrut Rao becomes prime minister. — Sindia espouses the daughter of Ghatgay. — Ghatgay becomes Sindia's prime minister — is empowered to raise the money secretly promised by Bajee Rao, by plundering the inhabitants of Poona — dreadful cruelties. — Amrut Rao proposes to seize and confine Sindia — Bajee Rao approves. — Differences with Hyderabad revived. — Bajee Rao summons Sindia to his presence. — Bajee Rao's weakness and treachery. — Affairs of Satara — a force required in that quarter — Bajee Rao's troops mutiny. —Pureshram Bhow enlarged — raises troops — disperses those of the Raja, but afterwards refuses to disband his army. — Bajee Rao grants him a pardon - - - - Page 146

CHAPTER IX.

FROM A. D. 1798, TO A. D. 1800.

Disorders increase at Poona. — The Byes. — Commencement of their insurrection against Sindia — they seek protection in the camp of Amrut Rao — negotiation. — Amrut Rao's troops treacherously attacked. —Rupture between the Peishwa and Sindia. — The Peishwa negociates with other powers. — Sindia releases Nana Furnuwees. — Reconciliation between Sindia and the Peishwa. — Shirzee Rao Ghatgay is seized and confined by Sindia's orders. — The union of Bajee Rao and Sindia, strengthened by the course of policy adopted by the English. — The British government endeavours to negociate a new treaty with Nizam Ally and the Mahrattas. — Nana Furnuwees is solicited to resume charge of the administration. — Nana, deceived by Bajee Bao, assumes charge without the guarantee he had at first demanded. —Treachery of Bajee Rao — Nana's behaviour. — The Peishwa's agents seized and confined. — New treaty between Nizam Ally and the English —regarded by the Mahrattas with much jealousy. — Nana's advice. — Bajee Bao's dissimulation. — Plan of a confederacy against the English, disconcerted by the subversion of Tippoo's government. — Orders sent by the Peishwa for the advance of his troops after the war had terminated. — Dispersion of the followers of Dhoondia Waug. — Dhoondia joins the Raja of Kolapoor. — Remarks on the conquest of Tippoo's territory — partition — discussions with the Poona court. — New treaty between the English and Nizam Ally. — Affairs of Sindia — the insurrection of the Byes becomes extremely formidable — by the re-appointment of Balloba Tattya, it is nearly suppressed. — State of the war with Kolapoor — exploits of Chitoor Sing — proposed plan of operations — Pureshram Bhow defeated and killed — Kolapoor besieged — siege raised - - Page 161

CHAPTER X.

FROM A. D. 1800, TO A. D. 1802.

Death and character of Nana Furnuwees — fresh dispute between Sindia and the Peishwa. — Balloba Tattya's confinement and death — dreadful executions of Dhondeba and Narrain Rao Bukhshee. — Peishwa's plans for ruining the adherents of Nana Furnuwees and the family of Pureshram Bhow. — Sindia on being promised the Jagheer of the Putwurdhuns, sends a force into their districts. — Great disorders — insurrection of Dhoondia Waug—suppressed by a detachment of British troops. — State of affairs at Poona. — Bajee Rao's situation and views — critical state of Sindia's affairs in Malwa. — Rise and progress of Jeswunt Rao Holkar — Umeer Khan joins him — Jeswunt Rao recognised in Malwa, as the representative of his nephew Khundee Rao — imbecility of Sindia's proceedings — Sindia induces Holkar to attack the Byes. — Marches towards Hindoostan. — Holkar cuts off two of Sindia's detachments—is repulsed by Major Brownrigg. — Events at Poona — execution of Wittoojee Holkar. —Shirzee Rao Ghatgay defeats a plot against him in a singular manner — he is ordered to join Sindia — defeats Jeswunt Rao Holkar at Indore, which he plunders — Sindia injudiciously gives Holkar time to recover himself — Jeswunt Rao carries the war into the Deccan — his successes there — Sewdasheo Bhow Bhaskur sent to oppose him. — Peishwa's conduct. — Battle of Poona — Holkar is victorious. — The Peishwa flees to Singurh — and sends to the British resident a preliminary engagement, binding himself to receive a subsidiary force.— Resident's interview with Holkar. — The Peishwa proceeds to Bassein. — Affairs in Guzerat - - 187

CHAPTER XI.

FROM A. D. 1793, TO A. D. 1803.

Affairs of Baroda. — War between Govind Rao Gaekwar and Aba Shelookur. — The English depose the Nabob of Surat— they are promised the Gaekwar's share of the Chouth and the district of Chourassy. — Gaekwar reduces Sheelookur and obtains the Peishwa's share of Guzerat in farm. — Death of Govind Rao Gaekwar — his eldest son Anund Rao succeeds him — two parties in the government, the one under Rowjee Appajee, the other under Kanhojee Rao Gaekwar — both apply to the British Government for aid — the Governor of Bombay supports the party of Rowjee Appajee, by sending a small detachment into Guzerat under Major Walker. — Mulhar Rao Gaekwar attacks the British troops — reinforcements sent into Guzerat — Mulhar Rao is reduced. — A British subsidiary force established at Baroda — embarrassed state of the finances — Sunkhera reduced. — The Arab mercenaries oppose the projected reforms. — Siege and surrender of Barodá. — Kanhojee Rao Gaekwar maintains an insurrection against the Government. — Affair of Sauree — gallant conduct of Major Holmes - Page 211

CHAPTER XII.

FROM A. D. 1802, TO A. D. 1803.

Events at Poona. — Winaek Rao, the son of Amrut Rao, is placed on the musnud by Holkar. — Treaty of Bassein. — Sindia and Rughoojee Bhonslay unite to obstruct the objects of the treaty. — Advance of the British troops — return of the Peishwa to Poona — Negotiation with the confederates — preparations for war — war declared — capture of Ahmednugur — battle of Assaye — Burhanpoor — Asseergurh — Baroach, and Pawungurh taken. — Of the war in Hindoostan. — Revert to General de Boigne — his opinions and those of his successor — advance of the Bengal army — affair of Coel — storm of Aligurh — successful attack on Shekoabad by

M. Fleury—battle of Delhi — battle of Agra —battle of Laswaree — conquest of Kuttack, and of Bundelcund — supplemental articles to the treaty of Bassein — prosecution of the war in the Deccan — Captain Baynes' defence — negotiations — battle of Argaom — siege and storm of Gawelgurh — negotiations — treaty of Deogaom —treaty of Surjee Anjengaom, and of Burhanpoor — partition treaties — treaties with the Rajpoots, Jhats, and Ambajee Inglia - Page 222

CHAPTER XIII.

A. D. 1804.

Reflections on the late war. — Views of Jeswunt Rao Holkar. — Negotiations. — Lord Lake advances against Holkar, preceded by a detachment under Col. Monson. — Holkar retires across the Chumbul. — Tonk-Rampoorah taken. — Umeer Khan cuts off part of a detachment in Bundelcund. — Lord Lake reinforces Monson and cantons the main army for the rains. — Monson advances — escalades Hinglaisgurh — Holkar crosses the Chumbul — Monson hesitates — Holkar attacks him — Monson retreats. — Bravery — privations — distresses — disasters — and discomfiture of his detachment. — Holkar invades Hindoostan — Muttra evacuated — is repulsed at Delhi. — Defence of Col. Burn at Shamlee — Holkar carries his depredations into the Dooab — is pursued by Lord Lake — battle of Deeg — surprise at Furruckabad — storm of Deeg. — Holkar's possessions in the Deccan reduced — Indore evacuated. — Lord Lake determines on besieging Bhurtpoor — Raja's resolve - - 269

CHAPTER XIV.

FROM A. D. 1805, TO A. D. 1806.

The siege of Bhurtpoor commences. — Holkar and Umeer Khan attempt to obstruct the operations. — Umeer Khan proceeds to Rohilcund — is pursued by General Smith — defeated and compelled to return to Bhurtpoor. — The Jhats repulse the British army in four assaults. — The Raja sues for peace — terms granted — principal reason for admitting him to terms. Disputes with Sindia. — The Marquis Cornwallis returns to India as Governor-General — his views — death — is succeeded by Sir George Barlow — Holkar takes the route of the Punjab — is pursued by Lord Lake. — Peace with Sindia — and with Holkar. — System of policy pursued by Sir George Barlow — remonstrances of Lord Lake — declaratory articles annexed to the treaties — policy of the British Government towards the Rajpoots — particularly ungenerous towards the Raja of Boondee. — Treaty with the Gaekwar - - - - - Page 293

CHAPTER XV.

FROM A. D. 1806, TO A. D. 1814.

Review of the condition of the Mahratta states — and of the British policy in regard to them. — Holkar's proceedings — insanity — confinement — death and character. — Regency under the control of Umeer Khan — factions — embarassments and anarchy. — State of Sindia's territory. — Death of Shirzee Rao Ghatgay. — Affairs of Rughoojee Bhonslay. — Rise of the Pindharees — their mode of assembling and conducting an expedition — their progress — general anarchy in central India — alarming increase of predatory power - - - - - - 314

CHAPTER XVI.

FROM A. D. 1803, TO A. D. 1817.

The Peishwa's proceedings, after being re-established on his musnud. — Appoints Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir to conduct affairs with the British residency. — Ingratitude to Khundee Rao Rastia — and total disregard of the claims of the former servants of the state. — Appoints Ballajee Luximon, Sur-Soobehdar of Candeish and Buglana. — Treacherous seizure and murder of the Bheels at Kopergaom. — Rebellion of the Pritee Needhee — Suppressed by Bappoo Gokla, who is enriched in consequence. — Appa Dessaye Nepankur — called to interfere in the wars of Kolapoor and Sawuntwaree. — Affairs of these petty states. — Revert to affairs at Poona. — Collusion of Sewdasheo Mankesir and Khoosroojee Moodhee. — Mr. Elphinstone is appointed resident. — Settlement with the southern Jagheerdars, who are compelled to submit to the Peishwa. — Suppression of piracy in the Concan. — Treaties with Kolapoor and Sawuntwaree. — Exultation of the Peishwa — he raises a brigade of regular troops. — Accusations against Khroosroojee Moodhee, by Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir. — Rise of Trimbukjee Dainglia. — Bajee Rao extends his views of policy — recruits his army. — Conduct of Bappojee Sindia in regard to the surrender of Dharwar. — Trimbukjee Dainglia becomes prime minister. — Mode of letting the districts in farm. — Bajee Rao's neglect of civil government — amasses considerable wealth — perseveres in sequestrating Jagheers. — Case of Mahdoo Rao Rastia. — Plan of an extensive confederacy. — Endeavours to establish an ascendancy in Guzerat. — Affairs of the Baroda government. — Able management of Lieutenant-Colonel Walker. — Claims of the Peishwa. — Counter claims of the Gaekwar. — Attempt at adjustment — fails. — Gungadhur Shastree is deputed to Poona — progress of his mission — he is murdered by Trimbukjee. — Trimbukjee delivered up to the British government — effects his escape from confinement. — The Peishwa raises troops through Trimbukjee, for the purpose of maintaining war secretly against the British government. — Conduct of the resident for defeating this design. — The troops assembled are declared insurgents — pursued, and attacked. — Intercourse suspended. — Proposed preliminary to an adjustment. — Bajee Rao denies all knowledge of Trimbukjee or his adherents. — Refuses to comply with the proposed terms. — Poona surrounded. — The Peishwa submits. — New treaty - - Page 332

CHAPTER XVII.

FROM A. D. 1814, TO A. D. 1817.

The Marquis of Hastings assumes charge of the government of British India. — State of India from the increase of predatory power. — Patans and Pindharees. — Plan for improving the defensive military positions — failure of the negotiations with Bhopaul and Jeypoor — defensive alliance embraced by Appa Sahib, the regent at Nagpoor — Appa Sahib falls into the views of the Poona Court — murders Pursajee. — Progress of the Pindharees. — Plans of the Marquis of Hastings, for the suppression of the predatory system — political and military arrangements. — Sindia is forced into the governor-general's views — progress of the negotiations with the Rajpoots, Umeer Khan, the chiefs in Bundelcund, and the Nabob of Bhopaul - - - - - Page 388

CHAPTER XVIII.

FROM A. D. 1817, TO A. D. 1818.

The Peishwa proceeds to Punderpoor—pretended reduction of his military establishment.—Poona auxiliary force. — Sir John Malcolm political agent of the governor-general, arrives at Poona — interview with the Peishwa at Maholy — is deceived by Bajee Rao — system recommended in consequence. — Advance of the divisions of the Deccan army. — Peishwa's proceedings at Maholy — invests Bappoo Gokla with full powers — plan for corrupting the troops — fidelity of the Sepoys — murder of the resident prevented by Gokla. — Festival of the Dussera — alarming appearances at Poona — Peishwa hesitates — arrival of the European regiment. — British troops take up a new position — are suddenly attacked by the Peishwa's army — battle of Khirkee — residency plundered and burnt — violent proceedings of the Peishwa — remonstrances. — Interview between the resident's moonshee and Gokla. — General Smith returns to Poona — flight of the Peishwa. — Poona is occupied — pursuit of the Peishwa — defence of Korygaom. — The Peishwa continues his flight — pursuit taken up by General Pritzler — resumed by General Smith. — Mr. Elphinstone is appointed commissioner, and two divisions of the army of the Deccan placed at his disposal. — Capture of Satara. — The Satara proclamation — new distribution of the force. — General Smith surprises the Peishwa's army at Ashtah — death of Gokla — rescue of the Raja of Satara. — Affairs of Nagpoor — treacherous attack on the British troops. — Battle of Seetabuldee — arrival of General Doveton — Appa Sahib surrenders himself — his guns are stormed and taken — attack on Nagpoor repulsed — Arabs capitulate — operations of General Hardyman and reduction of the northern districts. — Appa Sahib is reinstated. — Revert to affairs in Malwa and Hindoostan - - - - Page 406

CHAPTER XIX.

FROM A. D. 1817, TO A. D. 1818.

Pindharees. — Divisions close in upon the Durras of Khureem Khan and Wasil Mohummud—pursuit of Cheetoo by Sir J. Malcolm. — Cheetoo is protected in Holkar's camp—hostile appearances. — General Malcolm forms a junction with Sir Thomas Hislop—battle of Mehidpoor—treaty with Holkar. — Cheetoo is protected by Jeswunt Rao Bhow one of Sindia's generals. — Jeswunt Rao is in consequence treated as an enemy — Camp attacked and Jawud stormed by General Browne—destruction of the Durras of Wasil Mohummud and Khureem Khan—and of Cheetoo—dispersion of the Pindharees—and dismemberment of the Patan association. — Treaties with the Rajpoots. — Recompence of the Raja of Boondee and Nabob of Bhopaul. — Sir John Malcolm appointed to the government of central India. — Operations in Bundelcund. — Storm of Talneir. — Operations against the Peishwa. — Affair of Sewnee. — Bajee Rao reduced to great distress—writes to Sir J. Malcolm, who negociates with him — interview — surrender — terms — remarks. — Seizure of Trimbukjee. — Escape of Appa Sahib. — Siege and capture of Asseergurh - - - - - 455

CHAP. XX.

FROM A. D. 1818, TO A. D. 1819.

The final reduction and settlement of the Peishwa's territory — Capture of the principal forts by General Pritzler. — The Raja of Satara placed on his throne. — Success of General Munro — attack and dispersion of the remaining infantry at Sholapoor. — Reduction of the Concan accomplished by the Bombay government — Appointment of officers to the civil government of the country — instructions — procedure. — The capture of Mallygaom and Prucheetgurh completes the reduction of the Peishwa's territory — mode of preventing insurrection — of settling the Bheels — detection of a conspiracy. — Claims — the Nizam — Jagheerdars. — Judicial and revenue administration — Punchayets — rewards — charitable donations. — Hindoo college. — Remarks on the settlement - - - Page 480

A

HISTORY

OF

THE MAHRATTAS.

CHAPTER I.

FROM A. D. 1784, TO A. D. 1787.

Tippoo. — Nurgoond — Origin and progress of the dispute respecting it. — Tippoo's treachery — takes Nurgoond — seizes Kittoor — forcibly converts many Hindoos. — Nana Furnuwees proposes an alliance with the English — The latter less solicitous to co-operate than Nana expected. — Nana applies to the Portuguese. — French said to be in alliance with Tippoo. — Reported alliance between the Mahrattas and the French. — British Resident instructed to proceed to Poona. — Mr. Macpherson's offer of assisting in the defence of the Mahratta territory — rejected by Nana Furnuwees — Mahratta army advances to form a junction with Nizam Ally and Moodajee Bhonslay. — Moodajee in close alliance with the Poona Court. — Mahratta and Moghul armies unite — Plan of operations. — Badamee taken. — Nana Furnuwees returns to Poona, and Moodajee Bhonslay to Nagpoor. — Holkar's proceedings. — Tippoo attacks Adonee — Gallant defence till relieved by the confederates. — Adonee abandoned. — Gujendergurh given up to Hurry Punt. — Holkar makes a sudden march to Savanoor — his object — Burhan-ud-deen attacks him — is repulsed by Holkar, who is joined by the Na-bob of Savanoor. — Hurry Punt's operations. — Tippoo unexpectedly passes the Toongbuddra — Operations of the armies. — Savanoor abandoned by the Mahrattas — Tippoo takes possession — proceeds to Benkapoor. — Hurry Punt takes Seerhutty. — Feeble operations on both sides. — Tippoo suddenly tenders proposals of peace. — Peace concluded. — Motives elucidated. — Sindia.

A.D. 1784. TIPPOO, in assuming a right to the province of Beejapoor, and in threatening to attack the territory of Nizam Ally, had probably no other intention than to show the members of the confederacy, which he suspected was formed against him, that he was as well prepared to resist as they to prosecute the hostility meditated. At the subsequent accommodation with Nizam Ally, both parties understood that the adjustment was merely temporary. Tippoo continued to discipline his army and to prepare his forts with increased exertion; and as the crisis approached, the

A.D. 1785. security of the frontier garrisons became a principal object of his attention.

The fort and district of Nurgoond, situated about twelve miles south of the Malpurba, belonged to a Bramin Dessaye, and had fallen under Hyder with the other Mahratta possessions south of the Kistna, in 1778. This district had only been subject to the payment of a moderate tribute, and Hyder, satisfied with the Dessaye's submission, exacted nothing more than what had been usually paid to the Mahrattas. Tippoo, however, soon after his father's death, had increased the demand, with which the Dessaye refused compliance; but concluding it would eventually be enforced, he secretly claimed protection from the Peishwa, whose subject he declared himself; and as secretly, through the agency of an Englishman in his service, named Yoon, applied to the Bombay government for the aid of some regular troops, representing that he was an independent Raja willing to co-operate in the invasion of Tippoo's dominions. This application to Bombay was made before the treaty of Mangalore; but as no notice was taken of his overtures, the Dessaye continued to court the protection of the minister at Poona, and the friendship of the powerful Bramin family of Putwurdhun, with whom he is said to have been connected. When Tippoo, therefore, pressed his demand, Nana Furnuwees interposed, and declared that he had no right to exact more than the ordinary tribute, — "that Jagheerdars, on the transfer of districts, were liable to no additional payments: and that the rights of Suwusthanees *, who had been guilty of no treason against the state to which they owed allegiance, had been invariably respected." † Tippoo replied, that he had a right to levy what he chose from his own subjects; and soon after detached two separate bodies of his troops to enforce demands beyond the Dessaye's ability to pay, which was, in other words, an order to reduce his fort. The siege commenced in the month of March; and a body of Mahrattas, under Gunnesh Punt Behree and Pureshram Bhow Putwurdhun, advanced to its relief. Tippoo's wukeels still remained at Poona, and Nana Furnuwees had sent orders to the Mahratta commanders not to precipitate hostilities; but by the time they arrived in the neighbourhood of Nurgoond, Tippoo's officers had been compelled, from want of water, to raise the siege and encamp at some distance. They however sent, in derision, a message to the Bramin commanders, intimating that they had withdrawn their troops from respect to their master the Peishwa. Fired at the insult, the Mahrattas rode on to their camp, drove in their out-posts, and pressed forward, until repulsed by two of Tippoo's regular battalions supported by the cavalry; when they retired with the loss of twenty men and an elephant. This premature attack was contrary to the orders of Nana Furnuwees; but as it had been made, he immediately directed Tookajee Holkar, with a considerable force, to support Gunnesh Punt and Pureshram Bhow; though he at the same time intimated to Tippoo, his concern for the quarrel, and his desire for an accommodation. Tippoo, whose motives will become apparent, expressed an equal readiness to meet his wishes, and even offered to pay two years' tribute, provided his right of sovereignty was recognised in regard to Nurgoond. Nana Furnuwees, by the advice of Nizam Ally, and on assurance that submission only was required from the Dessaye, acceded to what Tippoo proposed, and every thing appeared to be settled except the mode of payment, for which a period of twenty-seven days was allowed, and the Mahratta army recrossed the Kistna. But Tippoo had practised a gross deception: — Nurgoond left to its fate, submitted; and the terms promised to the unfortunate Dessaye were not observed. After evacuating the fort, he and his family were treacherously seized; his daughter was reserved for the Sultan's seraglio, and the rest were immured in Cabuldroog, where they perished. The fort of Kittoor, which also belonged to a tributary Dessaye, had likewise been seized, and both that place and Nurgoond, before the opening of the fair season, were occupied by strong garrisons of the Sultan's troops.

* Bramins who possess old hereditary Jagheers are so styled.

† Mahratta MS.

To crown these acts, as if he designed to render himself as odious as possible to the Mahrattas, Tippoo forcibly circumcised many of the Hindoo inhabitants of the territory south of the Kistna, and two thousand Bramins, disciples of Shunkeracharya *, destroyed themselves to avoid the detested violation.

Nana Furnuwees very soon found that he had been duped by Tippoo, and he even began to doubt how far he might rely upon the co-operation of Nizam Ally: the inefficient state of the Moghul army had not escaped his observation when they met at Eedgeer, and he was alarmed by accounts of the excellent state of discipline, to which Tippoo's battalions had attained. These circumstances, combined with a report of Tippoo's having entered into a new and closer alliance with the French, had the effect of overcoming his reluctance to calling in the aid of British troops. But as Nana imagined the English would join in an offensive alliance against Tippoo on almost any terms, and being solicitous not to pledge himself so far as to prevent his eventually receding, the overtures to Mr. Boddam, governor of Bombay, were made with much caution. In the month of July he sent an agent to that presidency, offering, on the part of the Peishwa, to give up to the Company, any two of Tippoo's sea-ports on the Malabar coast, on condition of being assisted with a body of troops to co-operate in the reduction of his territory. Mr. Boddam received the proposal without expressing the least surprise at the inadequacy of the terms, and referred Nana Furnuwees to the supreme government, with an unfeigned indifference, which did not escape the quick sighted envoy, and from which Nana began to change his opinion of the English policy. Although Nana Furnuwees sent a private agent of his own to Calcutta, it was necessary to prosecute the negotiation through Mahadajee Sindia, whilst there was no British resident at the Peishwa's court. Sindia immediately applied to the Governor-general, through Lieutenant James Anderson then resident envoy in his camp, informed him of the probability of a rupture between the Peishwa and Tippoo, and artfully assumed as a matter of course, that the English would afford every assistance "as by the treaty of Salbye the friends and enemies of the Mahrattas and English were mutual." He added, that the Peishwa was sure of the co-operation of Nizam Ally, that the terms of their alliance were, that each state should recover its lost territory, and, of any new acquisitions, there should be an equal participation. Mr. Macpherson, in reply, observed, that the treaty of Salbye did not stipulate that the friends and enemies of the two states should be mutual, but that neither party should afford assistance to the enemies of the other, and that by the treaty of Mangalore the English were bound not to assist the enemies of Tippoo. Mr. Macpherson, in declining the alliance, made strong general professions of friendship towards the Mahrattas, hinted at some reasons for dissatisfaction with Tippoo on the part of the British government, in consequence of his not having fulfilled all the stipulations of the treaty of Mangalore, and concluded, by assuring Sindia, that in case of any reverse, the British government would not suffer the Mahrattas to be overpowered.

* A famous Gooroo of the southern Mahratta country.

Nana Furnuwees, the less solicitous the Governor-general appeared, became the more anxious to obtain the co-operation of the English, and he urged it the more, in consequence of a new treaty supposed to have been concluded between Tippoo, and the French. At last, either in despair of obtaining the aid of the English, or in order to quicken their decision, he made overtures to the Portuguese by whom he was promised assistance. It is certain that Nana believed in the existence of this new treaty between Tippoo and the French, as the Mahratta envoy at Pondicherry publicly remonstrated with the French governor, and accused him of having thereby violated the promises of the king of France to the Peishwa. The French governor denied the existence of such a treaty, and as a proof of what he alleged, proposed a closer connection with the Peishwa, a circumstance which is said to have greatly offended Tippoo, who was already jealous of the high and independent tone assumed by his French friends. The French envoy at Poona was treated with much attention, and it was believed that the Peishwa's government had agreed to cede Rewadunda to that nation, on condition of their not assisting Tippoo.

These negotiations showed, more than ever, the necessity of appointing a British resident at the Poona court, and Mr. Malet, then in Calcutta, was instructed to repair to Bombay, and there await an invitation from the Peishwa to proceed to his capital.

In the meantime the army was assembling at Poona for the purpose of invading Tippoo's territory, and Mr. Macpherson offered to send three battalions to assist in the defence of the Mahratta country, provided they were not employed within Tippoo's boundary; but as Nana's views extended to conquest he did not contemplate defence, and therefore rejected the proposal. *

The periodical rains were this year of unusual duration, and the Mahratta army, under Hurry Punt Phurkay, did not quit Poona until about the 1st December. The troops advanced towards the eastern frontier for the purpose of forming a junction with Moodajee Bhonslay and Nizam Ally.

Moodajee, as we have had occasion to observe, had visited Poona during the preceding season; he showed a sincere desire to connect himself with the head of the state, and in the name of his son Rughoojee, entered on a new agreement, promising to adhere strictly to that which had been framed by Mahdoo Rao and Janojee in 1769. He pledged himself particularly never to assist the English against the Peishwa's government, and promised to co-operate in the expected war with Tippoo, for which purpose he was now advancing.

* Bengal and Bombay Records.

A. D. 1786. Nana Furnuwees followed the army for the purpose of conferring with Nizam Ally, and overtook Hurry Punt at Punderpoor, whence they moved down the right bank of the Beema, and were joined by the Moghul troops, near the spot where the interview took place during the preceding season. It was now resolved to reduce the whole of Tippoo's territories, and to divide the conquests into six equal parts, of which Nizam Ally should receive two shares, the Peishwa two, and Sindia and Holkar two shares between them, or one sixth each. It was further agreed, that their first efforts should be directed, to the recovery of the Mahratta districts between the Kistna and Toongbuddra. Tookajee Holkar and Gunnesh Punt Behree were detached with twenty-five thousand troops, chiefly horse, to attack a body of Tippoo's, under Burhan-ud-deen near Kittoor, and to expel his garrisons from that district; whilst the main army of the confederates advanced towards Badamee. As they approached that place, reports were received of Tippoo's having marched with his whole army; and it was agreed, in case this intelligence should prove correct, to postpone the siege, but to encamp in the neighbourhood of Badamee until the rains had fallen, when the swelling of the rivers would, in all probability, secure them from interruption.

The prospect of a monsoon campaign was so little relished by Nizam Ally, that, in giving his assent to this plan of operations, he intimated his desire of returning to Hyderabad, and of leaving his general Tuhuwur Jung with 25,000 men, under the orders of Hurry Punt; a measure entirely conformable to the wishes of the Mahrattas, who felt themselves encumbered by the form and ceremony necessarily observed to the Soobeh of the Deccan.

Soon after the departure of Nizam Ally, it was ascertained that Tippoo had sent forward some troops from Bangalore; but had himself returned to Seringapatam, on which, it was immediately resolved to commence the projected siege. Operations began on the 1st May.* The fortified town of Badamee is built on the plain, with a small gurhee or citadel in the body of the place; but it is further protected by two hill-forts, one on each flank.† After battering the walls of the town for three weeks, they were very little injured; but it was determined to try the effect of an escalade. On the morning of the 20th May, twenty thousand infantry of the confederate armies were drawn up for that service. The garrison, consisting of upwards of three thousand five hundred troops, manned the works to oppose them; and when the assailants advanced, which they did with great resolution, they found the ditch and covert way full of small mines, constructed by digging pits, and placing in them large dubbers ‡ filled with

* Poona Records. Mahratta MS.

† Sir C. Malet's dispatches.

‡ Dubbers are large vessels, which, in appearance, resemble immense blown bladders; they are extremely useful for many purposes, but principally for preserving oil and ghee. They gunpowder; these were fired, and proved exceedingly destructive; but the Mahrattas and Moghuls, vying with each other, rushed forward in a most impetuous, though tumultuous manner, applied ladders, mounted the walls in various places, and except a slight check, sustained at the gurhee, carried all before them within the town. The garrison fled to the forts above, closely followed by the assailants; but the pursuers did not succeed in entering with the fugitives. They, however, continued to crowd up the face of the hills, though huge stones were rolled down, and a heavy fire of musketry opened upon them. Their casualties were numerous; but the garrison becoming intimidated at their furious and persevering attack, offered to surrender, if their lives were spared; a condition which was immediately granted.*

After the fall of Badamee, Nana Furnuwees returned to Poona, and Hurry Punt was left to prosecute the war. Moodajee Bhonslay went back to Nagpoor, but left the greater part of his troops with Hurry Punt, under his second son Khundoojee, promising to return with a reenforcement after the Dussera.

are made of hides, which are first beaten into a pulp, and then spread in thin coats over shapes composed of clay, and as each coat dries, a new one is added, until the requisite thickness has been attained. When the whole of the coats become solid and dry, the clay is broken to dust and shaken out. Dubbers are sometimes made larger than a wine pipe, and will last upwards of a century.

* Poona Records and Malet's despatches.

While these operations were prosecuted by the grand army, the detachment which proceeded to the westward, under Holkar, had expelled Tippoo's troops from every part of the Kittoor district, except the fort of the same name, which they invested, but could not hope to reduce.

Hurry Punt's first care was to send back all his wounded from Badamee; he then moved towards Gudjendergurgh, but as the small fort of Seertee lay in his route*, he breached and stormed it; but scarcely had he accomplished that object, when he was informed, that Tippoo was marching to give him battle; and such was the vigilance of a corps of Berudst in Tippoo's service, consisting of both horse and foot, that the address and dexterity of Mahratta spies, famous only where their own language is spoken, could obtain no correct intelligence of his motions, and the first certain accounts which Hurry Punt received, assured him that Tippoo was in full march to attack Adonee. That fortress was then held by Mohubbut Jung, son of the late Busalut Jung, and nephew of Nizam Ally, who was totally unprepared for a siege. The families and seraglio of the late Basalut Jung, as well as those of his sons, were then in the fort, and Mohubbut Jung's first application was to Nizam Ally, calling upon him to save the honor of his house. A pressing requisition was also sent to Hurry Punt, who immediately sent forward Tuhuwur Jung, with the whole of the Moghul troops, and twenty thousand Mahrattas, under Krist Rao Bulwunt, and Rugonath Rao Neelkunt. These troops were on their march towards Adonee, when they received intelligence of the advance, towards Raichore, of the whole of the disposable force from Hyderabad, under Moghul Ally. A junction was formed at Bumnoor, when they moved towards Adonee, with an army of nearly sixty thousand men. Tippoo endeavoured to carry the place before the arrival of the approaching succour; his desperate but premature attempts, were most gallantly repulsed by Mohubbut Jung, and as the allies drew near, he was compelled to raise the siege, and retire some miles to the southward. The confederates had forded the Toongbuddra with difficulty; and, as the country to the southward of that river was entirely at Tippoo's command, whilst they could place no dependance on the resources of the tract between the Kistna and Toongbuddra, much of which still remained to be reduced, they prudently resolved to withdraw the garrison from Adonee, and recross the latter river. The retreat was judiciously executed; but the unpardonable oversight of leaving the fort, guns, ammunition, and stores, without an attempt to render them unserviceable to their enemy, cancelled any merit the commanders might otherwise have claimed.*

* Hurry Punt's official report to the Peishwa. I do not know the exact situation of Seertee; the Hindoo names frequently differ from the Mahomedan. The propagators of the Koran have always been prone to bestowing new, and the Hindoos to retaining old appellations.

† The class of people already described, resembling the Ramoosees of Maharashtra, and improperly called Beders.

* Hurry Punt's despatches. Bombay Records. Wilks.

The troops from Hyderabad returned to that capital, and the main body rejoined Hurry Punt at Gudjendergurh, of which place he had obtained possession by bribing the Killidar.

Holkar still lay before Kittoor, apparently in careless inactivity; when decamping suddenly, he made one march of upwards of sixty miles to Savanoor, with the Nabob of which he had been some time in correspondence. The immediate object of Holkar's movement, was an attempt to seize the person of Ragwundur Naik, one of Tippoo's principal bankers, but he had just time to escape across the Toongbuddra, and only two or three inferior soucars fell into Holkar's hands, from whom he exacted a ransom of two lacks of rupees. Burhan-ud-deen, with a body of Tippoo's troops, attacked Holkar: but the Mahrattas, joined by the Nabob of Savanoor, repulsed them; and on the ensuing night, Burhan-ud-deen retired to Jereeanwutty on the Wurdah, thirty miles above Savanoor.

About the year 1779, the Nabob of Savanoor had married the sister of Tippoo, and on that occasion Hyder restored the whole of the twelve districts originally dependant on his principality, on condition, that he should keep up two thousand Patan horse for the service of the state. Tippoo entertained a personal enmity against the Nabob, and on his accession to power, found a pretext for indulging it, owing to the Nabob's having omitted to keep up the stipulated number of horse. Following a systematic plan, Tippoo mulcted and plundered both the Nabob and his subjects: so that it was not surprising the Nabob should seek the first opportunity of throwing off his allegiance and declaring, as he now did, for the Mahrattas.

Hurry Punt's operations, after obtaining possession of Gudjendergurh, were directed against Buhadur Benda and Kopaul; the former had been delivered up and he was in treaty for the latter, when he was astonished by information of Tippoo's having actually crossed the Toongbuddra at Gurhghaut *, with the greater part of his army, in basket boats. Hurry Punt advanced towards him: but finding the ground very unfavourable for the operations of his cavalry, he encamped at the distance of ten miles, where Tippoo made two unsuccessful attempts to surprise him. Grain and forage being extremely scarce, in order to procure supplies as well as to draw Tippoo into the plain, Hurry Punt proceeded to Savanoor. Tippoo marching along the bank of the Kistna, followed him, and encamped in a strong position within six miles of the confederates, keeping the town of Savanoor between the camps. In this situation both parties continued for fifteen days, until, on the 1st of October, two hours before dawn, the Mahratta camp was alarmed by a sudden firing, which was speedily answered by the Mahratta artillery. Tippoo, who had headed the attack in person, on discovering where their guns were posted, directed his principal effort to that spot, which induced Hurry Punt to draw them off until day light, when they again opened on the assailants. The position occupied by the Mahrattas was still very unfavourable; their horse were prevented from charging by the steep banks of a rivulet, which Tippoo cautiously refrained from crossing, and after cannonading for several hours, he withdrew to his encampment.

* Col. Wilks calls this place Kurrucknaut. It is not marked in any map that I have seen, nor do I know its precise situation.

There was a scarcity of forage in the Mahratta camp, and their own situation, and that of their enemy, precluded all hope of being able to gain any advantage by continuing at Savanoor. Hurry Punt, therefore, deemed it necessary to retire, although he thereby sacrificed the capital of his new ally. The Nabob of Savanoor reluctantly fell back with him ten miles, where the confederates took up a new position. Tippoo possessed himself of the town, but declined advancing upon them: he lay inactive at Savanoor, until the Mohurrum, when he retired to celebrate that festival at Benkapoor, leaving Hurry Punt to breach, storm, and take Seerhutty, a fortified town twenty miles N. E. of Savanoor, without interruption. Tippoo having deposited his heavy baggage in Benkapoor, moved from that place; but aware of his enemy's superiority in cavalry, he did not quit the broken ground on the banks of the Wurdah and Toongbuddra. Proceeding down the left bank, he encamped between Kopaul and Buhadur Benda, and again obtained possession of the latter place. The confederates followed him, and endeavoured to cut off his supplies; but their own forage being brought from a great distance, whilst Tippoo drew his with facility from the south bank of the Toongbuddra, they soon abandoned the attempt.

Tippoo renewed his endeavours to surprise the camp of the confederates, and on one occasion took some baggage belonging to the Moghuls. *

(A. D. 1787.) In these feeble operations, neither party could boast of much advantage, and the confederates were at a loss to account for Tippoo's motives in suddenly tendering proposals of peace. Even after the arrival of two envoys of high rank, Budr-ul-Zeman Khan, and Ali Reza Khan, who negociated through Tookajee Holkar and Gungadhur Rastia, Hurry Punt for a time imagined, that Tippoo's professions were only a prelude to some stratagem. His suspicions contributed to prolong the negotiation, for although an armistice took place on the 10th February, the peace was not concluded till April. The Mahrattas obtained the cession of Badamee, Kittoor, and Nurgoond; the other towns and districts reduced by them were restored to Tippoo. Tippoo also agreed to pay forty-five lacks of tribute, thirty of which were immediately produced, and the remainder promised at the expiration of a year. Adonee was restored to the nephew of Nizam Ally; but Tippoo had destroyed the works and carried off the guns. The Nabob of Savanoor obtained a promise of the restoration of that portion of his territory which he possessed prior to his marriage with Hyder's daughter, but dreading Tippoo's treachery, he did not venture to return to Savanoor at this period, but continued with his Mahratta friends at Poona. *

* Just at this period, the following letter appears in the official correspondence of Hurry Punt, and in his own hand writing: —"The loss sustained by the army, in consequence of the cholera morbus, is very great; medicines are liberally supplied; some do recover, but by far the greater part die."

Tippoo's motives for acceding to a pacification, so disadvantageous, have been imputed †, it would appear justly, to his apprehending that the English were about to take part against him. Mr. Malet had not only been invited to Poona as resident, but at the request of Nana Furnuwees he had joined him at Badamee, a circumstance which Tippoo conceived, bespoke a very intimate connection; but the acting governor-general was studious to allay any alarm it might create, and had partly succeeded. Shortly afterwards, however, in September 1786, Lord Cornwallis, having assumed charge of the supreme government, addressed letters to the Peishwa and Nizam Ally, in which although he expressly intimated his determination to take no part in the war between the confederates and Tippoo Sultan, yet the state of military efficiency in which it became the immediate care of the new governor-general to place all the presidencies, occasioned a bustle and apparent preparation which seem to have convinced Tippoo, that the designs of the English were decidedly hostile; and may not merely account for his earnestness to terminate the war with the confederates, but afford some reason for that rancorous hostility which led him to persevere in schemes, for annihilating the power of the British nation in India.

* Poona Records. Mr. Chaplin's report.
† Wilks.

The appointment of a resident at the Peishwa's court was not more a cause of alarm to Tippoo, than of jealousy to Mahadajee Sindia. A tardy acquiescence was obtained from Sindia to the measure, and in order to reconcile him to it as much as possible, Mr. Malet was instructed to send his despatches to the supreme government through the resident for the purpose of being submitted for Sindia's information and obtaining his opinions. But Sindia was at this period, and for several years afterwards, too much occupied by his own vast projects in Hindoostan, to be able either to prevent the English from establishing their influence at Poona, or to direct much of his attention to the affairs of the Deccan. The history of his progress will be found in the ensuing chapter.

CHAP. II.

FROM A. D. 1785, TO A. D. 1790.

Sindia's embarrassments — His impolitic conduct — Sequestrates many of the Jagheers — consequent enmity of the Mahomedan chiefs. — Mohummud Beg Humadanee. — Sindia levies tribute from the Rajpoots — The Rajpoots revolt — Attack and rout Sindia's troops under Ryajee Patell. — Sindia takes the field — difficulties of the crisis — endeavours to negociate with the Rajpoots without success. — Mohummud Beg and his nephew join the Rajpoots — Battle in which Mohummud Beg is killed, but victory declares for the Rajpoots. — The emperor's regular infantry, with eighty pieces of cannon, desert Sindia in a body, and join the Rajpoots — Sindia evinces great fortitude and conduct — retreats unmolested by the Rajpoots — followed by Ismael Beg — continues his retreat to Gwalior — applies to Poona for aid. — Views of Nana Furnuwees. — Sindia's exertions. — Able defence of Agra by his General, Luckwa Dada. — Gholam Kawdir — Takes Aligurh — Joins Ismael Beg before Agra. — Jhats obstruct the operations of the siege — Sindia reinforces the Jhats. — Battle near Bhurtpoor, in which the Mahrattas and Jhats are worsted. — Successful diversion planned by Rannay Khan. — The battle of Agra in which Ismael Beg is totally defeated. — Ismael Beg joins Gholam Kawdir — They repair to Delhi. — Barbarities perpetrated by Gholam Kawdir. — Mahrattas at last advance — Gholam Kawdir flies — is pursued — taken — suffers mutilation, under which he dies. — Shah Alum restored to his throne, and Sindia recovers his ascendancy — His situation — Changes introduced in the constitution of his army. — Gosaeens. — Himmut Buhadur. — Regular infantry. — Sindia's views. — Transition to Deccan affairs.

(A. D. 1785.) THE resources of the provinces which Sindia had acquired in Hindoostan were, from their exhausted state, totally inadequate to meet the great additional disbursements which his late success, more brilliant than lucrative, had entailed. Pressed by pecuniary embarrassments, he was driven to acts equally impolitic and unjust. Against foreign adversaries he might have prevailed, but domestic enemies soon became too strong for his newly established power. The principal cause of discontent arose from his sequestrating the Jagheers of many of the Mahomedan chiefs, and from being suspected of entertaining like designs towards all of them. The most considerable of these chiefs whom he had not yet dispossessed, was Mohommud Beg Humadanee, whom Sindia had recalled from Raghoogurh to Delhi, and endeavoured, without success, to prevail upon him to disband a portion of his troops. Mohummud Beg, suspecting that Sindia intended to enforce compliance, ever after harboured a secret enmity against him, which the course of events soon afforded an opportunity of declaring.

(A.D. 1786.) Under the sanction of the emperor's name, Sindia had not only preferred a claim for tribute on the Rajpoots, but at the head of his army at the gates of Jeypoor, had fixed the first payment at sixty lacks of rupees, of which a part was received and the balance promised in a given time. When the period expired, Sindia sent Ryajee Patell to recover the remainder; but the Rajpoots having prepared for resistance, and being secretly assured of support from Mohummud Beg and the disaffected Mahomedan nobles, refused to pay the amount, derided the authority of Ryajee Patell, attacked his troops and routed them. The faction at Delhi opposed to Sindia was much strengthened by this revolt; even the imbecile monarch, whose stipend was irregularly paid, and who readily became the tool of any new party, joined in the increasing murmurs: complained of the invaded rights of imperial dignity, and of the arbitrary acts, and uncourteous manner of the Mahratta chiefs. Sindia, though sensible of these discontents, though his funds were exhausted, his own and the imperial troops in arrears, and his fortunes depending on the issue of a very doubtful campaign, was obliged to take the field against the Rajpoots. He ordered the troops under Appa Khunde Rao, with the two battalions of De Boigne, lately returned from Bundelcund, to join him; but, to add to his difficulties, he was obliged to detach two separate bodies of troops to the northward of Delhi, under two of his own officers, Hybut Rao Phalkay and Ambajee Inglia, to repel an incursion of the Seiks.

(A. D. 1787.) On approaching Jeypoor, Sindia endeavoured to negociate, but his overtures were disregarded. The Raja of Joudpoor, with several Rajpoot chiefs of less note, united with Pertaub Sing, the Raja of Jeypoor, who had succeeded his father Jey Sing, and their army was already very formidable. The greater part of Sindia's troops being very different from those of an army wholly Mahratta, the Rajpoots by acting on the supplies, and cutting off the foragers, soon rendered their situation critical. Both Mahrattas and Moghuls, irritated by privation, became dissatisfied; and Mohummud Beg Humadanee, together with his nephew, Ismael Beg, chose this moment for deserting Sindia, and joining the Rajpoots. Lest the disaffection should spread to the whole of the emperor's troops, Sindia took the earliest opportunity of leading them into action. An obstinate battle took place — Mohummud Beg fell by a cannon shot, and his troops were on the point of flying, when they were rallied by Ismael Beg, who retrieved the day, and forced the Mahrattas to retire. Sindia was preparing to renew the contest, when, on the third day after the battle, the whole of the emperor's regular infantry, with eighty pieces of cannon, went off in a body to join Ismael Beg. *

At no period of his life did Sindia evince greater fortitude and conduct, than at this alarming crisis. † He immediately sent off his heavy baggage and many of his followers, to Gualior, by the route of Kooshalgurh; he then made a rapid retreat to Deeg, recalled his detachments, and restored Deeg, with several other places, to the Jhats, in order to preserve an interest with that people. He also deposited his heavy guns in their fort of Bhurtpoor, and strengthened his garrisons in Aligurh and Agra. ‡

To effect these, and other contingent arrangements, required some time, and had the Rajpoots pressed the war with vigour, they might probably have confined the Mahrattas to the southern bank of the Chumbul; but they only sought to suppress

* Mahratta MS. and letters. Bengal Records, &c.

† From the Oral information of General De Boigne.

‡ Sindia's letters to the Peishwa, confirmed by General De Boigne.

the ambitious pretensions of Sindia, not to annihilate the Mahratta ascendancy in Hindoostan. They therefore returned to their respective capitals when Sindia retreated, and left Ismael Beg to recover the imperial districts.* Ismael first proceeded towards Agra; in the neighbourhood of which Sindia was still hovering, but he was determined to avoid another general action. At that time, however, skirmishes took place for eight successive days, and one village was repeatedly taken and retaken; but it being reported that Gholam Kawdir, the son of Zabita Khan Rohilla, was on his march to assist Ismael Beg, Sindia made a rapid retreat towards Gualior, on which occasion many of his men perished, by losing themselves in the ravines contiguous to the Jumna.† Sindia had made repeated applications to the Peishwa for troops, and now wrote to Nana Furnuwees, representing, that although he by no means considered his own affairs desperate, yet as he had reason to believe the English were about to form an alliance with the emperor and the Rajpoots, he submitted to his consideration the danger that must ensue to the whole Mahratta empire, by allowing the English to establish their sway over the provinces of Hindoostan, and to gain such an influence as they must acquire, if assisted by the weight of the imperial name. He strongly disavowed every feeling of jealousy, and called on Nana, if such did exist towards himself, to erase it from his mind; to ask Holkar,

* Scott's History. Mahratta MS.; original letters, and English Records.

† General De Boigne.

Hurry Punt, and Pureshram Bhow, if he, (Sindia,) had ever interfered with their views, and if they had not seen that all his endeavours tended to the aggrandizement of the empire: "we serve," continued Sindia, "a common master; let our exertions be directed to the common cause: if you personally entertain jealousy of me, ask yourself who supported you against the faction of Moraba, and put your rival Sukaram Bappoo into your power; who suppressed the insurrection of the pretended Sewdasheo Rao Bhow; beat the English at Tullygaom, maintained a great share of the war against them, and concluded an advantageous peace?—Think of these services, banish suspicion, and silence calumniators, who are our mutual enemies—let the cause of the Mahratta nation be upheld in Hindoostan, and prevent our empire from being disunited and overthrown." *

These observations, though incorrect with regard to any alliance then meditated by the English, carried much of truth in them; but the grand aim of Nana Furnuwees was to cement the Mahratta confederacy, under the authority of the Peishwa, and the whole conduct of Sindia, had so fully proved, that his views were directed to independence if not to supremacy in the empire, that Nana, however unwilling to relinquish Mahratta claims in Hindoostan, hesitated as to the extent and mode of re-inforcing Sindia's army.

A body of troops had been held in readiness,

* Original letter from Mahadajee Sindia to Nana Furnuwees.

under Ali Buhadur *, even prior to Sindia's retreat; but Nana wished to employ them in making a distinct settlement with the Rajpoot states, in the name of the Peishwa, for the purpose of extending the Mahratta influence, without confirming the power of a rival of such inordinate ambition. It is supposed by some of his countrymen, that Nana had some communications with the Raja of Jeypoor for the purpose of preserving the Hindoo power, but with a view also of controlling Sindia; the moderation shewn by the Rajpoots in not molesting Sindia's retreat is adduced as a proof of this conjecture, but without an absolute rupture with Sindia, which was justly considered ruinous to the empire, Nana saw no means of attaining the ascendancy he desired. Besides the difficulties arising from these considerations, some fresh acts of hostility on the part of Tippoo rendered him averse to detach troops from the Deccan. Sindia, however, whilst he urged these applications at Poona, was using every exertion to retrieve his affairs by his own resources. His most active enemy was Ismael Beg, who, after the retreat of the Mahratta army, invested Agra, which was vigorously defended by Luckwa Dada-a Mahratta Bramin of the Shenwee tribe. At this time appeared Gholam Kawdir, who on the death of his father Zabita Khan, which happened in January 1785, succeeded to the Jagheer. His disposition, equally cruel and turbulent, was kept in check whilst the power of Sindia, his hereditary enemy, was predominant;

* The son of Shumsher Buhadur, and grandson of the great Bajee Rao.

but no sooner did he see a field open to his view, by the reverses which befel that chief, than he collected troops, and rushed on a scene which promised ample gratification to his inclinations. Instead of proceeding to join Ismael Beg, as was reported to be his intention, he, in the first instance, drove the Mahratta garrison from the city of Delhi, where he placed his own troops, but left the emperor unmolested in the citadel. He next besieged Aligurh which he reduced, and then proceeded to assist Ismael Beg, who was still (A.D. 1788.) engaged in the siege of Agra. The Jhats, whom Ismael Beg might have conciliated, by confirming the cessions made to them by Sindia, took every opportunity of obstructing his operations and encouraging the besieged in the fort, till at last, Sindia determined to support them. For this purpose he sent forward Rannay Khan *, and Appa Khunde Rao with a body of horse supported by the two regular battalions of De Boigne, and some other infantry. As the junction of Gholam Kawdir with Ismael Beg was known at Gwalior, before the march of these troops, it was deemed an imprudent measure on the part of Sindia. Rannay

* Rannay Khan, says Sir John Malcolm, was originally a Bihishtee, or water carrier, who saved Mahadajee Sindia's life, by carrying him off when wounded at Panniput, and in gratitude for this service, Sindia raised him to high command.—Whatever may have been Rannay Khan's origin, his conduct proved that he was worthy of his master's confidence. The escape of Mahadajee Sindia, however, is generally attributed with more probability, to Trimbukjee Inglia, one of his Sillidars, who is said to have carried him off behind him on his horse.

Khan, however, united his forces with those of the Jhats at Bhurtpoor, when the whole marched towards Agra; but they had only proceeded sixteen miles, when they met Ismael Beg and Gholam Kawdir, who had raised the siege in order to give them battle.

The cavalry of the Jhats was commanded by Sew Sing Foujdar, their infantry, chiefly regulars, was under M. Listenaux, a Frenchman, and two Mahomedan officers, each commanding separate bodies; but one of these Mahomedan officers named Jehanjeer Khan, with his three battalions, deserted to Ismael Beg, without firing a shot. The action commenced by a cannonade from the guns of Ismael Beg. The Jhats were on the right, the Mahrattas on the left: Gholam Kawdir made a furious attack upon the infantry of the right wing, which soon put them all to the route, excepting those under M. Listeneaux, who for some time maintained his ground. Ismael Beg opposed to the infantry on the left, advanced with all the energy of his character, but found himself received with remarkable steadiness and intrepidity by the infantry of De Boigne. All parties admitted, that had De Boigne and Listeneaux been properly supported by the cavalry, the issue of the day might have been very different; but, after a heavy loss, the regular troops at last gave way, and the whole favoured by the night, effected their retreat to Bhurtpoor. Ismael Beg and Gholam Kawdir, called upon Runjeet Sing, the Jhat chief, to renounce his connexion with the Mahrattas, otherwise they would, after the reduction of Agra, besiege him in his capital. But their triumph was of short duration; Luckwa Dada, the Killidar of the fort of Agra, persevered in his gallant and successful defence; the Mahomedan chiefs soon evinced a distrust of each other, and Rannay Khan, hearing of an incursion of the Seiks, sent a body of Mahrattas and Jhats to join and encourage them to fall on the Jagheer of Gholam Kawdir. This diversion had the desired effect: Gholam Kawdir immediately set off to repel the invaders, and Sindia, having re-inforced the division of Rannay Khan, the Mahrattas and Jhats once more advanced towards Agra, at which place an obstinate battle was fought, in which De Boigne and his battalions greatly signalized themselves. (June 18th) The army of Ismael Beg was defeated and dispersed; that chief himself, after receiving two severe wounds, escaped from the field by the swiftness of his horse, plunged into the Jumna, gained the opposite bank, and with a few followers reached the camp of Gholam Kawdir, by whom he was courteously received. His dispersed army flocked to Delhi, whither, in hopes of again collecting them, he immediately repaired. Gholam Kawdir followed him to the capital. The emperor refused to admit either the one or the other into the citadel; but Gholam Kawdir, having corrupted one of the confidential servants, not only gained admittance, but seized the gates, occupied every part of the palace and citadel with his own troops, and commenced a systematic train of violence, rapine, and barbarity, almost without example in the annals of the world. These enormities continued for two months; at the end of that time, when the unhappy monarch had been plundered, insulted, and dethroned, his eyes destroyed in their sockets, by the point of a dagger in the hand of the merciless Gholam Kawdir; when his wives, daughters, sons, and relatives had been exposed, dishonored, degraded, and some of them starved to death, the Mahratta army at last marched to his relief. Ismael Beg, who at first had so far concurred in the views of Gholam Kawdir, as to agree to plunder the imperial palace, for the purpose of procuring the means of subsistence to their troops, turned with abhorrence from the commission of the cruelties exercised by his colleague; and on the promise of a Jagheer from Sindia, joined with the Mahrattas against him. Gholam Kawdir retired from Delhi upon their approach, carrying with him Bedar Bukht, the son of Ahmed Shah, whom, on the dethronement of Shah Alum, he had proclaimed emperor of the Moghuls.

(April 24th.)

Mahadajee Sindia was severely censured for not immediately proceeding to the capital, but he probably foresaw that Gholam Kawdir and Ismael Beg, if left for a time to themselves, could not remain united, and, as the result proved, that he should soon be able to secure one party in his interests. Besides these reasons, he was assured, that reinforcements under Ali Buhadur, followed by Tookajee Holkar, were on their march from Poona to join him. These troops were granted by Nana Furnuwees, on condition, that all territory acquired north of the Chumbul, should be equally shared by the Peishwa, Sindia, and Holkar.

The Mahratta army which advanced from Agra, was under three principal officers, Rannay Khan, Ali Buhadur, and Appa Khunde Rao, accompanied by the two battalions of De Boigne. Rannay Khan, who was chief in command, on taking possession of Delhi, did every thing which humanity dictated for the relief of the unfortunate emperor. The arrival of the Mahrattas in the Moghul capital, was, on this occasion, hailed with the greatest joy. A large body immediately pursued Gholam Kawdir, and forced him to take shelter in the fort of Meerut, where he defended himself vigorously; but the place being destitute of provisions, and his capture, if he continued, inevitable, he mounted a swift horse and fled alone. But after he had proceeded some distance, the horse fell, and his rider being completely stunned, lay senseless on the ground. In this situation he was at day-light discovered and recognised by some of the peasantry, and by them carried to the Mahratta camp, where he was closely guarded, and shortly after, by Sindia's orders, he suffered a dreadful mutilation which he did not survive. The prince Bedar Bukht was retaken at Meerut; and at first, without any harshness, was remanded into confinement, but he was afterwards put to death by order of Shah Alum *

(A. D. 1789.) Mahadajee Sindia arrived in Delhi a short time after the success of Rannay Khan. Shah Alum was reseated on his throne with much pomp, and the honours of Wukeel-i-Mootluq, formerly conferred on the Peishwa, and those of his deputy on Sindia, were renewed with formal solemnity.

* Bengal Records. Francklin, Scott, and Mahratta MS.

Meanwhile the Jagheer of Gholam Kawdir was reduced, and the greater part of the Dooab, with the provinces of Delhi and Agra, were annexed to the Mahratta dominions. The situation of Sindia, however, was by no means secure; he for some time dreaded an invasion of the Abdallee, who under their King Timoor Shah, were in the field in great force, and he well knew, although the Moghul faction was broken, and Ismael Beg had received his stipulated Jagheer in the province of Meywat, that in the event of the appearance of the Afghans, the Mahomedans would unite against him. He had also powerful enemies in the Rajpoots; and his co-adjutors, Holkar and Ali Buhadur, were more solicitous to share his acquisitions and obstruct his measures, than to unite in upholding his cause. He at the same time experienced some inquietude from the escape of one of the sons of the emperor, who fled to the court of Nizam Ally at Hydrabad. Little notice being taken of him, he repaired to Poona where he was received with attention, but more to excite Sindia's jealousy, than with any intention of affording to the fugitive, assistance or relief.

These obstacles did not deter Mahadajee Sindia from pursuing his plans of independence. In detailing his political schemes and the progress of his conquests, we must not omit to notice the changes which he introduced in the constitution of his army. Amongst the minor innovations of Sindia, may be enumerated the great proportion of Rajpoots and Mahomedans whom he enlisted; the alteration of the dress of his horsemen, who, from the short breeches worn by the Mahrattas, adopted the long trowsers covering the heel *, and lastly, the large bodies of Gosaeens, whom he entertained, and who, until introduced by Sindia, had rarely appeared as soldiers in the Mahratta armies. † The Gosaeens were kept distinct by Sindia from his other troops, and were attached to the division of Ambajee Inglia, principally under a leader named Himmut Buhadur, who was both their military commander and their spiritual director, and whose history merits some digression.

Himmut Buhadur accompanied Sindia on his first advance to Delhi in 1784: he was left in charge of Muttra when Sindia retreated to Gualior, and by means of a secret understanding, which he contrived to establish with Ismael Beg and Gholam Kawdir, he continued unmolested. Sindia, who knew that the sole object of Himmut Buhadur was to obtain a Jagheer for himself from either of the contending parties, had, on a former occasion, in consequence of the Gosaeen's misconduct, resumed, and afterwards, on promised amendment, restored the lands granted for the support of his followers; and although he pretended, on his return, to be highly satisfied with the Gosaeen, for retaining possession of the Jagheer, he determined to deprive him of it, on the first opportunity. Sindia's chief causes of displeasure arose from finding that he was engaged in secret intrigues with Holkar and Ali Buhadur, the partizans of Nana Furnuwees; and that he persisted in an intercourse, he had long kept up, with the Nabob Vizier, in whose dominions he had at a former period sought refuge, when apprehensive of Sindia's enmity. At length, on pretence that the Gosaeen was employed in magical arts to take away his life, Sindia sent a party of troops who seized Himmut Buhadur at Muttra, and were conveying him to their master; but the camp of Ali Buhadur, being contiguous to the road by which the prisoner was brought, he contrived to elude his guards, and gain the tent of Ali Buhadur, before they could secure him. It was in vain that Sindia remonstrated, Ali Buhadur declared he could not surrender the person of Himmut Buhadur without an order from the Peishwa; and in the meantime, before any answer could be obtained from Poona, he connived at his escape to Lucknow.

* This, to the mere European reader, may appear unimportant, but though now quite common among all Mahrattas, it tended, at that time, to make a difference between Sindia's horse and those of the Deccan; and, as the act of a Hindoo prince, was an important innovation.

† For some account of the Gosaeens, the reader may revert to Preliminary Observations, Vol. I.

The departure of the leader did not affect the great body of Gosaeens, as might have been the case at an earlier period; they remained with Sindia, and being attached to his service by habit, became intermingled with the rest of his irregular infantry.

But the most important of all the changes introduced by Sindia, was the well-organized, regular force, which he, about this time raised, by augmenting the two battalions of De Boigne into a brigade, which was subsequently, at different periods, increased to three brigades. A brigade consisted of eight battalions, of seven hundred men each. Attached to every brigade there were five hundred horse; and to each battalion five pieces of artillery, two six-pounders, two three-pounders, and a howitzer. To provide for the regular payment of these troops, he made over assignments of land, to the charge and management of De Boigne; to whom he allowed two per cent upon the net revenue, independent of his regular pay, which was ten thousand rupees a month. A select body of irregular infantry was attached to De Boigne's force, to whose efficiency that officer greatly contributed, by adding a bayonet to their matchlocks. The augmentation of De Boigne's army was gradual, as was his train of artillery, which consisted at last of upwards of two hundred pieces of cannon, of different calibres. Sixty of his best guns were cast by Mr. Sangster, the officer already mentioned, who quitted the service of the Rana of Gohud, and entered that of Sindia, under De Boigne. His officers were Europeans of all nations; many of them British, and men very respectable, by birth, education, and character. *

A. D. 1790. At the present conjuncture, in the commencement of the year 1790, Sindia had only raised one regular brigade. His immediate views were directed to conciliate Holkar and Ali Buhadur, with the hope of obtaining their assistance in checking the incursions of the Seiks; in humbling the Rajpoots, who continued in opposition to his authority; and in securing the dependance of Ismael Beg, who, it was apprehended, had serious intentions of joining the Rajpoots. His reason for contemplating this fresh desertion, are partly ascribable to the artifice of Holkar, who, in order to occasion a rupture between him and Sindia, plundered some of the villages in his new Jagheer, which, though expressly contrary to Sindia's wishes and injunctions, was attributed by Ismael Beg to some inimical design on the part of that chief.* We shall, for the present, however, leave Mahratta affairs in Hindoostan, and return to those of the Deccan.

* Palmer's despatches. General De Boigne.

* Sindia's letters.

CHAP. III.

FROM A. D. 1787, TO A. D. 1792.

Tippoo breaks the treaty with the Peishwa — His great preparations — supposed by the English to be intended against them. — Nana Furnuwees proposes a defensive alliance, which is declined by Lord Cornwallis. — Transactions between the British anthorities and Nizam Ally. — Guntoor given up. — Nizam Ally negociates with the English and with Tippoo—results. Lord Cornwallis's letter to Nizam Ally. — Tippoo considers that letter tantamount to an offensive alliance against him — His unsuccessful attack on the lines of Travancore. — Alliance of the English, the Peishwa, and Nizam Ally, against Tippoo — its terms. — First campaign of the English in this war against Tippoo. — Dilatory proceedings of the allies. — A British detachment joins Pureshram Bhow. — Mahrattas cross the Kistna. — Moghuls advance to lay siege to Kopaul and Buhadur Benda. — Mahrattas lay siege to Dharwar — operations — Dharwar capitulates after a protracted siege — Capitulation infringed. — Lord Cornwallis assumes command of the British army. — Capture of Bangalore. — Mahratta army marches from Poona under Hurry Punt Phurkay. — Sera surrendered — Mahratta armies advance to join the British and Moghuls before Seringapatam — Lord Cornwallis defeats Tippoo at Arikera, but is compelled to abandon his design of besieging Seringapatam — Distress of his army — relieved by the unexpected junction of the Mahrattas. — Various operations. — A party of Mahrattas surprised and cut off by Kummur-ud-deen. — Lord Cornwallis reduces the forts between Bangalore and Gurumcondah — Moghuls unable to reduce Gurumcondah, leave a party to mask it, which is surprised. — Pureshram Bhow's scheme of reducing Bednore. — Battle of Simoga. — Admirable conduct of Captain Little. — Simoga capitulates—Pureshram Bhow advances towards Bednore, but retires with precipitation. — Operations at Seringapatam. — Peace concluded with Tippoo. — Cause of Pureshram Bhow's retreat explained. — The armies return to their respective territories. — Distress of Pureshram Bhow's army.

A.D. 1787. At the period when Sindia retreated to Gualior, we have observed, that one reason which prevented Nana Furnuwees from supporting him with troops from the Deccan proceeded from fresh aggressions on the part of Tippoo; in fact, the latter scarcely permitted Hurry Punt to recross the Kistna, when he retook Kittoor; and an army, assembled at Bednore, threatened a descent on the Mahratta territories in the Concan. As often happens with respect to the capricious conduct of the native princes of India, it is difficult to reconcile this procedure with the reasons which had so recently induced Tippoo to tender hasty proposals of peace. Some of the English, from the various rumours in circulation, concluded that it was a deception, contrived with the consent of Nana Furnuwees, preparatory to a general confederacy against the British; in which the Mahrattas, Nizam Ally, Tippoo, and the French, had become parties. In regard to the Mahrattas, there was no foundation for this supposition, but there was reason to believe that Tippoo had renewed his engagements with the French, and that his designs were more hostile to the British than to the Mahrattas; but he wished to conceal his real object until he could prepare his army and obtain effectual assistance from France. Nana Furnuwees believed that the invasion of the Mahratta territories was his chief object; and in the end of the year 1787, proposed to the governor-general, Lord Cornwallis, through Mr. Malet, to form, on the part of the Peishwa, a defensive alliance with the English, in order to control the overbearing and ambitious spirit of Tippoo. Lord Cornwallis, though impressed with a belief of the great importance of this offer, as essential to the safety of British India, was prohibited, by act of parliament, from accepting it, until Tippoo should break through his engagements by some unequivocal act or declaration of hostility. In declining it, therefore, he instructed Mr. Malet to offer general assurances of the sincere desire of the governor-general to cultivate the friendship of the Peishwa's government.

A.D. 1788. The reports of Tippoo's hostile intentions became less prevalent during the early part of 1788; and this apparent tranquillity afforded a favourable opportunity of carrying into effect the intentions of the governor-general respecting the district of Guntoor, which, by the treaty concluded with Nizam Ally in 1768, ought to have been ceded to the English upon the death of Busalut Jung in 1782. Captain Kennaway was the agent deputed for the purpose of obtaining its surrender; but the motive of his mission was kept secret until he could reach Hyderabad, and preparations be completed at Madras for supporting the demand. Soon after captain Kennaway's departure from Calcutta, it was again confidently reported, that Tippoo was engaged in hostile machinations; that an attack made upon Tillicherry, by the Raja of Cherika, was at his instigation; and that he meditated the subjugation of the territories of the Raja of Travancore, the ally of the English, which formed an important preliminary to the conquest of the British settlements in the south of India. Captain Kennaway, in consequence of these reports, was instructed, to confine his immediate communications to general expressions, of the great desire of the governor-general to maintain, the most amicable understanding with the Soobeh of the Deccan, in all affairs that might arise requiring adjustment. But soon after, as appearances bespoke no immediate hostility on the part of Tippoo, and Nizam Ally seemed disposed to settle every thing with the British government in an equitable manner, the demand for Guntoor was made, and the district given over without impediment, and almost without hesitation, in September 1788. Notwithstanding his apparent readiness, Nizam Ally was greatly mortified at finding himself compelled to surrender Guntoor; but he was by this time sensible, that of the four great powers in India, his own was the weakest; and that without a steadfast alliance with some one of the other three, his sovereignty must be swallowed up. The Mahrattas, from contiguity, and from their claims and peculiar policy, he most dreaded; personally, he was inclined to form an alliance with the Mahomedan ruler of Mysore; but some of his ministers, particularly Meer Abdool Kassim, in whom he had great confidence, strongly advised him to prefer a connection with the English, and endeavoured to show, by what means the late concession might be made instrumental in effecting the desired object. He proposed, that as the English had obtained possession of Guntoor, they should be called upon to filfil those articles of the treaty of 1768, by which they had agreed to furnish the Hyderabad state, with two battalions and six pieces of cannon; to reduce the territories of Tippoo, and to pay the Soobeh of the Deccan a certain annual tribute. Nizam Ally, acceding to these suggestions, despatched Meer Abdool Kassim to Calcutta, for the purpose of obtaining the concurrence of the governor-general. With his habitual duplicity, however, Nizam Ally, at the same time, sent another envoy * to Tippoo, proposing a strict and indissoluble union between the Mahomedan states; to which Tippoo declared his readiness to subscribe, on condition of an intermarriage in their families: but the Moghul haughtily rejected such a connection, and the negotiation terminated.

A.D. 1789. When the envoy deputed to Calcutta submitted his proposals, the governor-general found himself under considerable embarrassment. No specific revisal of the political relations between the English and Nizam Ally, had taken place since the treaty of 1768; but the treaty of Madras, between the English and Hyder in 1769, and that of Mangalore, with Tippoo in 1784, had each recognised both father and son, as lawful sovereigns of that territory; of which, by the treaty with Nizam Ally in 1768, Hyder was declared usurper; and of which the English had then arrogated to themselves the certainty of a speedy reduction. The governor-general was, as already mentioned, prohibited by act of parliament from entering on any new treaty, without express authority from the Court of Directors; but he was particularly desirous of securing the alliance both of Nizam Ally and the Mahrattas, in consequence of his belief in Tippoo's hostile proceedings, already commencing, by an attempt to subjugate Travancore, without appearing as a party in the aggression. The proposed alliance of the Mahrattas, Lord Cornwallis had been constrained to decline; but the danger which now more distinctly threatened, and the covert nature of Tippoo's operations, which precluded proofs wholly sufficient for legal justification, induced Lord Cornwallis to adopt a line of conduct more objectionable than an avowed defensive alliance. In reply to Meer Abdool Kassim's application, Lord Cornwallis explained the reason of his inability to perform that part of the treaty of 1768, which related to the conquest of the Carnatic Balaghaut; but by a letter which he now wrote to Nizam Ally, which letter he declared equally binding as a treaty, he promised that should the English, at any future period, obtain possession of the territory in question, they would then perform their engagements to him, and to the Mahrattas. This promise certainly implied, at least an eventual intention of subduing Tippoo, and that inference was strengthened, by an explanation of a part of the treaty, relative to the two battalions, which was before equivocal. Instead of being furnished with these battalions, as before expressed, when they could be spared, they were now to be sent, when required, and to be paid for, at the same rate as they cost the Company; merely on condition, that they were never to be employed against the allies of the British government. These allies were at the same time expressly named; the Maharattas were included, but Tippoo was omitted.

* His name was Hafiz Fureed-ud-deen Khan.

Tippoo considered this letter as a treaty of offensive alliance against him. He was now at less pains to conceal his intended invasion of Travancore, and his unsuccessful attack on the lines, which he headed in person, was of course considered to be a declaration of war. Nana Furnuwees no sooner heard of it, than he made specific proposals to the governor-general, through Mr. Malet, in name, both of his own master, and of Nizam Ally; which, with slight modifications, were accepted. A preliminary agreement was settled on the 29th March, and a treaty, offensive and defensive, was concluded at Poona, on the 1st June, between Mr. Malet on the part of the Company, and Nana Furnuwees on the part both of the Peishwa and Nizam Ally; by which, these native powers stipulated that an army of 25,000 horse should attack Tippoo's northern possessions, before and during the rains, and reduce as much as possible of his territory. That after the rains, they should act against Tippoo with their utmost means, and in case the governor-general should require the aid of 10,000 horse to co-operate with the English army, that number was also to be furnished within one month from the time of their being demanded, but maintained at the expence of the Company's government. Both states were to be allowed two battalions, and their expence was to be defrayed by the Peishwa and Nizam Ally respectively, at the same rate as they cost the Company. All conquests were to be equally shared, unless the English, by being first in the field, had reduced any part of the enemy's territory before the allied forces entered on the campaign, in which case, the allies were to have no claim to any part of such acquisition. The Polygars and Zumeendars, formerly dependant on the Peishwa and Nizam Ally, or those who had been unjustly deprived of their lands by Hyder and Tippoo, were to be re-instated in their territory on paying a Nuzur, at the time of their re-establishment, which should be equally divided among the confederates, but afterwards, they were to be tributary to Nizam Ally and the Peishwa, respectively. It was also stipulated, that if, after the conclusion of peace, Tippoo should attack any of the contracting parties, the others became bound to unite against him.

(Dec. 29th.)

A. D. 1790.

(June 1st.)

The treaty was not finally concluded by Nizam Ally until 4th July, as he hoped, by procrastination, to obtain the guarantee of the British government, not simply, as he pretended, to ensure protection to his territories from the Mahrattas during the absence of his troops on service, but to procure the interposition of the English in the settlement of the Mahratta claims, which even, where just, he had neither disposition nor ability to pay; and he foresaw that a day of reckoning was at no great distance. Lord Cornwallis, viewing the proposal simply as stated, could not accede to it without giving umbrage to the Mahrattas; but he assured Nizam Ally of his disposition to strengthen the connection between the two governments, when it could be effected consistently with good faith, and a due regard to subsisting engagements, with other allies.

The first campaign of the English against Tippoo in this war, was conducted by General Medows. It commenced on the 26th May, 1790, and terminated by the return of the army to Madras on the 27th January 1791. The advantages obtained were by no means inconsiderable, but not so great as had been anticipated. General Medows, with the Madras army, invaded Tippoo's territory from the south, and reduced Caroor, Dindigul, Coimbatoor, and Palghaut; whilst Colonel Hartley *, with a detachment of the Bombay army, assailed it from the west, gallantly attacked and routed a strong corps in the neighbourhood of Calicut, and a reinforcement being brought from Bombay by General Sir Robert Abercromby, who assumed the command, the province of Malabar was soon cleared of Tippoo's troops. †

The Mahratta and Moghul armies had been declared ready to take the field, before the march of General Medows in May; but Nizam Ally, as we have seen, did not finally sign the treaty till July, and Pureshram Bhow Putwurdhun, the officer appointed to command the Mahratta army, did not receive his commission to raise and equip (May 5.) his troops until 5th May; on which day, he had his audience of leave from the Peishwa, and immediately set out for his own Jag-

* This is the same officer with whom the reader is already well acquainted.

† Bombay and Bengal Records. Col. Wilks, &c.

heer at Tasgaom, to make the necessary arrangements. The two battalions with their artillery *, which by the treaty the English had engaged to furnish, sailed from Bombay about the 20th (20th.) May, (29th.) disembarked on the 29th at Sungumeshwur, (the same place where Sumbhajee was made prisoner by the Moghuls upwards of a century before,) and ascended the Ambah (June 10.) Ghaut by the 10th June, although the natural difficulties of that stupendous pass were much increased by the setting in of the monsoon. On the 18th the detachment arrived (18th.) at Koompta, a village within a few miles of Tasgaom, when the commander, Captain Little, found, that not above two thousand horse had as yet assembled. Two carcoons had been sent to meet and accompany the British detachment on its march from the coast, and the many artificial delays and difficulties, raised by these Bramin conductors, to prolong the march, and conceal their want of preparation, were now explained. The dilatoriness of the Mahrattas appeared ambiguous to the English, especially as it was found, that Tippoo's wukeels were still at Poona, where they were allowed to remain, as subsequently avowed by that court, in the vain hope, that Tippoo would endeavour to purchase their neutrality; for, although the Mahrattas had really no intention of breaking their engagements with the English, this mode of obtaining a supply of money from a tribu-

* The 8th and 11th battalions of native infantry, one company of European artillery, and two companies of gun Lascars, with six field pieces.

tary who owed so much, was by them con-
(Aug. 5.) sidered wholly justifiable. On the 5th of August, however, the wukeels were finally dismissed, but Pureshram Bhow did not cross the Kistna until the 11th; at which time, in (11th.) addition to the British detachment, he had only five thousand horse, and about one-third of that number of infantry. In the course of a few days, he was joined by a body of horse, belonging to the Pritee Needhee; and a separate body of one thousand horse, whom it was at first proposed to attach exclusively to the British detachment, also joined, under a partizan officer named Dhondoo Punt Gokla, originally an agent superintending a part of the marine establishment at Viziadroog. His horse were not continued with the detachment as proposed; but the intention of thus employing them, was the commencement of a connection between Gokla's family and the English; by whose influence, Bappoo Gokla, the nephew of Dhondoo Punt, was raised to high rank at the Peishwa's court, where we shall ultimately see him, by no uncommon revolution, an active enemy of the British government.

Hostilities, on the part of the Mahrattas
(Aug. 25.) against Tippoo, commenced on the 25th August by an attack upon a fortified village, from which the Mahrattas expelled the garrison with trifling loss. As they advanced, the country was rapidly occupied. The inhabitants assisted to expel Tippoo's Sebundees, but the latter were easily reconciled to a change of masters, enlisted with Pureshram Bhow, and aided him in collecting the outstanding revenue. The Mahratta force, daily joined by small parties, soon amounted to ten thousand horse and three thousand infantry, exclusive of captain Little's detachment. With this (Sept. 18.) army Pureshram Bhow arrived before Dharwar on the 18th September, and after much unnecessary exposure, and considerable loss in reconnoitring, commenced the siege by firing cannon from a great distance during the day, and withdrawing them at night; an absurd practice not unusual with Mahrattas.

In the Carnatic, south of the Toongbuddra, Tippoo had stationed two officers, Budr-ul-Zeman Khan, and Kootub-ud-deen, at the head of about five thousand men, a few of whom were cavalry, but the greater part regular infantry. The Moghuls, as the Mahrattas were proceeding towards Dharwar, moved from Pangul to cross the Kistna in order to besiege Kopaul and Buhadur Benda; on which Kootub-ud-deen, with the whole of the horse and a part of the infantry, advanced to observe their motions, whilst Budr-ul-Zeman threw himself into Dharwar. The defences of this fortress are principally of mud, and though irregular, and now greatly decayed, were then very strong. It is situated in a plain, having an outer and an inner ditch from twenty-five to thirty feet wide, and nearly as many feet deep. Adjoining to the fort, on the south side, and outflanking it to the eastward, is a town or Pettah, defended by a low mud wall, and a ditch of no strength. The garrison, on being re-inforced, consisted of seven thousand regular and three thousand irregular infantry.

(Oct. 30.) The first operation of any consequence, was an attack on a party of the enemy who had advanced outside of the town, but were driven back with the loss of three guns and a considerable proportion of killed and wounded, principally from the fire of the British troops. By their exertions also, the Pettah was stormed and taken; Captain Little the commander, and Lieutenant Forster were the first who mounted the wall, and both were wounded, the former severely, the latter mortally. This acquisition, which cost the British detachment sixty-two men, in killed and wounded, was made over to a body of Mahrattas, under Appa Sahib the son of Pureshram Bhow; but no sooner had the British returned to their camp, than the garrison sallied, and a very severe conflict ensued in the Pettah; five hundred Mahrattas were killed, and a still greater number of the garrison. Although the advantage was rather on the side of the Mahrattas, Appa Sahib withdrew his troops to camp, and permitted the garrison to re-occupy the town. After a truce, in order to allow each party to burn and bury their dead, the Mahrattas, who were ashamed again to call in the aid of the British detachment, attacked and retook the Pettah

(Dec. 18.) themselves. The feeble and absurd operations, however, which generally distinguish Mahratta sieges, were never more conspicuous than on the present occasion. It must ever be a reflection upon those under whose orders the auxiliary force from Bombay was equipped, that there was no efficient battering train to assist the operations of the Mahrattas: whose aid, if so supplied, might have contributed much more to the success of the war. In the first instance, it was excusable, because it might have been expected that the Mahrattas, if unprepared with battering cannon, would not employ themselves in sieges; but Captain Little had early represented, how necessary it became to send some heavy guns, ammunition and stores, not merely to save the credit of the British arms, but to ensure some useful co-operation on the part of their Mahratta allies. No battering train was sent, but a battalion of Europeans and another native corps were despatched under Lieutenant-colonel Frederick, who arrived in camp, before Dharwar, on the 28th December, and assumed command of the British force.

A. D. (1790.) Every possible exertion was made by Colonel Frederick. Pureshram Bhow's artillery was manned by Europeans: but the guns were old, clumsy, and nearly unserviceable; so scanty was the supply of ammunition that they were frequently silent for days together, and the garrison, on these occasions, never failed to make a complete repair in the intended breach. A considerable quantity of powder was at length obtained, but a prospect of its being again (Feb. 7.) wholly expended, induced Colonel Frederick to attempt the assault before the breach was entirely practicable. He would probably have succeeded; but at the moment when the troops were to pass the ditch, the fascines, which they had thrown into it, were set on fire, and so rapidly consumed, that it became necessary to retire to the trenches. In this attempt the British detachment lost eighty-five men. The chagrin occasioned by failure, followed by a series of harassing delays, operating on an ardent mind and a debilitated constitution, proved fatal to (March 13th.) Colonel Frederick, who died on the 13th March, and was succeeded in the command of the detachment by Major Sartorius. Materials were furnished so sparingly, that little impression was made by the batteries; but the Mahrattas carried on the approaches after their own manner, by running trenches and digging mines under the glacis. Frequent sallies, with various success, were made by the garrison; at length, after a protracted siege of twenty-nine weeks, a lodgement having been effected by the Mahrattas and the English, on the crest of the glacis, the brave veteran Budr-ul-Zeman Khan capitulated. The troops, with all the honours of war, were allowed to march out of (April 4.) the fortress, which was taken possession of by the confederates on the 4th of April. But the late garrison had only moved a short distance, when they were attacked by the Mahrattas, the greater part of them dispersed, and their commandant wounded, overpowered, and, with several others, made prisoner. It appears that Budr-ul-Zeman Khan had stipulated to surrender the fort, ammunition, and stores, in their actual condition, but the Mahrattas, having discovered that he had destroyed them after the capitulation was made, upbraided him with his want of faith; and accused

Hyder, Tippoo, and himself, of habitual violation of their engagements, particularly in regard to Gootee and Nurgoond. Their accusations were just; but Budr-ul-Zeman Khan, enraged at the insult, drew his sword, and his troops followed his example; the result of the fray proved as above related. Though the circumstances may induce us to believe that there was no premeditated treachery, the subsequent confinement of Budr-ul-Zeman Khan and several other prisoners, reflects discredit on the conduct of Pureshram Bhow. *

Before the fall of Dharwar, the British army had been some time in the field. Its first campaign against Tippoo, in this war, terminated, as we have already briefly mentioned, on the 27th January. On the 29th of the same month, Lord Cornwallis assumed the command of the army, and marched, on the 5th February, towards Vellore, where he concentrated his forces and advanced to Bangalore, which he invested on the 5th March, and carried it by assault on the night of the 21st of that month. This success tended to discourage the enemy, and stimulate the allies to exertion. The fall of Bangalore had some share in influencing the surrender of Dharwar, and also of Kopaul, besieged by the Moghuls, which was shortly afterwards given up, as was Buhadur Benda. The Moghuls, according to the treaty, were supported by two battalions of Madras native infantry, in the same manner as the Mahrattas were aided from Bombay. An army of

* Narrative of Capt. Little's detachment. Wilks, Moor, Bombay Records, Mahratta MSS. and Letters.

A. D. 1791. thirty thousand Mahrattas, of which 25,000 were horse, marched from Poona, on the 1st January, under the command of Hurry Punt Phurkay; advanced by Punderpoor and Sorapoor, forded the Kistna, where it is joined by the Beema. and proceeded to Geddawal, whence Hurry Punt directed the main body of his army to continue its route to Kurnoul, whilst he proceeded to Paungul, with an escort of two thousand cavalry, for the purpose of conferring personally with Nizam Ally, whose court was then held at that frontier position, whence he affected to direct the operations of his field army. At this conference it was agreed, by Nizam Ally, and by Hurry Punt, on the part of his master the Peishwa, that they should abide by the terms of the treaty with the English, but only so far as might humble Tippoo, without absolutely annihilating his power. After the interview, Hurry Punt joined his army at Kurnoul, where he remained some time, until hearing of the capture of Bangalore, he sent forward 10,000 horse with orders to endeavovour to join Lord Cornwallis, in which he had been anticipated by the Moghuls; a body of that strength, having effected a junction with the English army on the 13th of April, after routing the party of Kootub-ud-deen, which we had occasion to mention, before the siege of Dharwar. But the Mahrattas, on arriving some days afterwards at Anuntpoor, found that Lord Cornwallis had advanced towards Seringapatam. They therefore halted until joined by Hurry Punt with the main army, when the whole moved on to Sera.

It having occurred to the Mahratta commander to try the effect of summoning the place, Sera was most unexpectedly surrendered, and found full of stores and in high order. This success induced Hurry Punt to detach a party under Bulwunt Soob Rao, to besiege Mudgeery, situated twenty miles to the east of Sera; after which, leaving a strong garrison in his new acquisition, he proceeded to join the army at Seringapatam.* The other Mahratta army, acting on the north-western quarter of Tippoo's territory, whose operations before Dharwar have been detailed, was now also advancing by orders from Hurry Punt towards Seringapatam. After the termination of the siege of Dharwar, a part of the British detachment was recalled to Bombay, and Captain Little, with three native battalions, the two with which he entered on the campaign having been much weakened by casualties, continued with Pureshram Bow. The possession of Dharwar, and the forts taken by the Moghuls, gave the allies a strong hold on the country situated between the Kistna and Toongbuddra; Kooshgul, and several other places of less note, surrendered to Pureshram Bhow at the first summons; and the occupation of the country, with the consequent realization of revenue, became so inviting to the Mahratta general, that he soon evinced a greater care of his own interests, than those of the confederacy. It was recommended that he should join the Bombay army, under General Abercromby, then on its march from Malabar towards the capital of Mysore, through the territory of a friendly chieftain, the Raja of Koorg. The Mahratta army, under Pureshram Bhow, had been greatly increased during the siege of Dharwar; he crossed the Toongbuddra on the 22d April, and arrived within twenty-four miles of Chittledroog, on the 29th of that month. Several fortified towns surrendered without resistance, and Mycondah was besieged by a detachment from his army; but when urged by Captain Little to advance in the direction by which General Abercromby was expected, or send on a part of his troops, he objected to it as unsafe, and continued his system of collecting from the surrounding country, until summoned by Hurry Punt to accompany him to Seringapatam.* Whilst Hurry Punt marched south-west, Pureshram Bhow moved south-east. Their armies were united at Nagmungulum, on the 24th of May, and on the ensuing day, they advanced to Mailgotta. But although thus near the capital, where they knew their allies were encamped, they had not been able to convey any intimation of their approach to Lord Cornwallis, as every letter was intercepted by the admirable activity of Tippoo's mounted Beruds. This circumstance is considered very discreditable to Hurry Punt and Pureshram Bhow, by their own countrymen; and it was matter of most serious regret to Lord Cornwallis, that he had remained ignorant of their approach.

* Hurry Punt's despatches.

After the Moghul cavalry joined him, as already noticed, Lord Cornwallis resolved to undertake the siege of Seringapatam, and directed General

* Mahratta MS. and Letters. Captain Little's despatches, &c.

Abercromby to move forward from the westward, for the purpose of joining him at that capital. As the grand army advanced from the northward, Tippoo burnt the villages, destroyed the forage, and drove off both the inhabitants and their cattle, so that the space on which the army moved was a desert, and the condition of its cattle and horses soon proved the efficacy of this mode of defence.

On the 15th, Tippoo made a stand at Ari-(May.) kera, but was defeated; and, on the 19th, Lord Cornwallis encamped at Caniambaddy, to the west of Seringapatam. But the battle he had gained on the 15th, and his position at the gates of the capital, were advantages more than counterbalanced by the state of his cattle, and the alarming scarcity which prevailed in his camp. The want of forage and provisions, aggravated by the presence of the useless and wasteful Moghul horse, soon became so much felt, that, combined with the lateness of the season, Lord Cornwallis abandoned all hope of being able to reduce Seringapatam, before the monsoon; he therefore sent orders to General Abercromby to return to Malabar; destroyed his own battering guns and heavy stores, raised the siege, and on the 26th May, marched towards Mailgotta, from which place the Mahrattas had also moved that morning. Great was the surprise of the English army, when large bodies of horse were seen advancing, of whose approach they had no intimation. Conceiving them to be enemies, preparations were at first made to treat them as such; but their real character was soon discovered, and though not unclouded with regret and disappointment, their arrival was hailed with great joy, as the ample supplies of the Mahratta Bazars afforded immediate relief to the famished camp. That we may not unjustly detract from the merit of the Mahratta commanders, as they have been accused of self-interested motives in the readiness with which they permitted their Bazar followers to sell to all comers: it is proper to mention, that though their followers took advantage of the period to raise the price of grain, their own troops suffered by the scarcity which for a few days ensued. Hurry Punt's despatches evince a very humane and laudable anxiety to alleviate the distress of his allies. The junction of the Mahrattas near the spot where Trimbuck Rao Mama had gained the victory over Hyder, in 1771, was considered by them an omen particularly propitious.

The confederate armies remained for ten days in the neighbourhood of Seringapatam, in order to allow time for the convoys of grain, expected by the Mahrattas, to join the camp: after which, the whole moved to Nagmungulum. Hurry Punt proposed that they should proceed to Sera and take possession of the whole country between that place and the Kistna. Lord Cornwallis, however, considered it of prior importance to reduce the Baramahal and country in the neighbourhood of Bangalore, in order to facilitate the approach of the necessary supplies from Madras. Hurry Punt urged similar reasons in support of his own proposal, and was naturally seconded by the Moghuls; but as both depended on the English artillery and military stores, they yielded to the wishes of the governor-general. The army moved forward by very slow marches, necessary to the English, from the exhausted state of their cattle, and the motions of the confederates were regulated accordingly. The fort of Oosoor was evacuated on the approach of the grand army. Pureshram Bhow, accompanied by Captain Little's battalions, was detached towards Sera for the purpose of keeping open the northern communication, and overawing the country which had already submitted. Nidjigul surrendered to Pureshram Bhow, and the Killidar of Davaraydroog, promised to give it up, provided a part of the British detachment was sent to take possession; but on approaching the fort they were fired upon, and as Pureshram Bhow had not the means of reducing it, he burnt the Pettah in revenge, and proceeded to Sera. Being desirous of returning to the north-west, he assigned want of forage as a reason for hastily withdrawing to Chittledroog, where he surprised and cut off three hundred of its garrison, who happened to be outside and neglected to seek timely protection in the fort. Pureshram Bhow long indulged hopes of obtaining possession of this strong-hold by seducing the garrison; but all his attempts proved abortive; he however took several fortified places in its vicinity.

With regard to the operations of the other troops at a distance from the grand army, Bulwunt Soob Rao, the officer sent by Hurry Punt to besiege Mudgeery, did not succeed in gaining possession of it, but he left a detachment in the Pettah and went on to Makleedroog, Bhusmag, and Ruttengerry, of all which he took possession. * The army of Nizam Ally, with the two Madras battalions which continued to the northward, took Gandicottah on the Pennar, and laid siege to Gurrumcondah.

* Hurry Punt's despatches.

The operations of Lord Cornwallis, after his retreat from Seringapatam, until the season should admit of his renewing the siege, were chiefly in the Baramahal, the whole of which he reduced, except the strong hill-fort of Kistnagheery, which he intended to blockade, but previous to this arrangement one of Tippoo's detachments, under Kummur-ud-deen, having surprised and cut off the party of Mahrattas left by Bulwunt Soob Rao at Mudgeery, the report of this circumstance was magnified into the total defeat and dispersion of Pureshram Bhow's army, and induced Lord Cornwallis to proceed to Bangalore without forming the intended blockade. After hearing the true state of the case, he resolved on reducing the forts between Bangalore and Gurrumcondah, in the siege of which last the Moghul troops were still occupied. The whole tract soon fell; and amongst other places of strength the hill-fort of Nundidroog, when a part of the battering train used in its reduction was sent off to assist the Moghuls at Gurrumcondah, whither also most of their horse repaired.

By the beginning of December, Lord Cornwallis's army had assembled at Bangalore, and might have advanced to Seringapatam, but the Bombay troops had a difficult march to perform before they could join; and Pureshram Bhow, though directed to be prepared to support their advance, remained on pretence of sickness near Chittledroog. The Moghuls loitered with the camp at Gurrumcondah; and although Hurry Punt continued with Lord Cornwallis, the greater part of his troops were dispersed on various pretexts, but in reality, to occupy the districts, and to collect as much money as they could. As circumstances thus detained Lord Cornwallis from the main object of reducing the capital, he in the meantime laid siege to the forts in his route. Savendroog and Ootradroog were taken; Ramgheery, Shevingheery and Hooliordroog surrendered.

The Moghul army, after months spent before Gurrumcondah in a series of operations still more feeble than those of the Mahrattas before Dharwar, were at length put in possession of the lower fort by the exertions of Captain Read, the officer who had succeeded to the command of the English detachment. * The Moghuls having resigned all hope of reducing the upper fort, being anxious to join in the siege of Seringapatam, determined to mask it, and for that purpose, a considerable body of troops was left under Hafiz Fureed-u-deen Khan, a part of whom, under his personal command, he kept in the lower fort, and a small body was encamped at a little distance on the south side, under the orders of Azim Khan, the son of the Nabob of Kurnoul, and a Frenchman who had assumed the name of Smith. These arrangements being completed, the main body moved on with the intention of joining Lord Cornwallis, but they were speedily recalled in consequence of an unexpected attack on the blockading party, many of whom were killed, and Hafiz Fureed-u-deen having been made prisoner, was basely murdered, from motives of revenge; he having been the envoy through whom the proffer of marriage on the part of Tippoo was sent, which was indignantly refused by Nizam Ally. The Frenchman Smith was also taken and put to death. On the return of the main body of the Moghuls, Tippoo's troops, who were headed by his eldest son Futih Hyder, retired, and left the Moghuls to strengthen their party in the lower fort. * This arrangement being again completed, the Moghul army moved on, and joined Lord Cornwallis at Outradroog on the 25th January, 1792.

* Bombay Records. Col. Wilks.

We have noticed the delay of the Mahratta commanders in collecting their detachments, and in engaging actively with the English, in the operations against the capital. The object of Hurry Punt was obviously plunder, but that of Pureshram Bhow extended to the long meditated Mahratta scheme of obtaining possession of the district of Bednore. Pureshram Bhow conceived that the present opportunity, whilst aided by a body of British troops at his absolute disposal, was too favourable to be omitted. Though fully informed by Lord Cornwallis of the general plan of operations, in which he was requested to co-operate, he no sooner saw the English army engaged in besieging the fortresses already mentioned, on its route towards Seringapatam, than he directed his march straight towards Bednore. Hooly Onore having been assaulted and taken by the (Dec. 21.) British detachment, the Mahratta general continued his advance along the left bank of the Toong, intending to reduce the fort of Simoga. But at that place, besides the regular garrison, there was a force consisting of seven thousand infantry, eight hundred horse, and ten guns, under the command of Reza Sahib, one of Tippoo's relations, who, on the approach of the Mahrattas, either from not deeming his position advantageous, or with a view to attack Pureshram Bhow when engaged in the siege, quitted his entrenchments close to the walls of the fort, and took post in a thick jungle a few miles to the south-west of it. His position was uncommonly strong, having the river Toong on his right, a steep hill covered with impenetrable underwood on his left, and his front protected and concealed, both by underwood and a deep ravine, full of tall and close bamboos, than which no trees form a stronger defence. One road only ran through this position, but it was more clear and open to the rear. Pureshram Bhow came in sight of the fort on (Dec. 29.) the morning of the 29th December; but instead of attacking, made a considerable circuit to avoid it, and continued his route towards the position occupied by Reza Sahib. Having arrived in its neighbourhood, the main army took up its ground of encampment; but Appa Sahib advanced towards the enemy with a body of cavalry. Pureshram Bhow requested of Captain Little to leave eight companies for the protection of the camp, and move on with the rest of the battalions to support his son, which he immediately did. The closeness of the country rendered the attack of cavalry impracticable; and Captain Little's three battalions, on this memorable occasion, mustered about eight hundred bayonets! Notwithstanding the comparative insignificance of his numbers, he did not hesitate in moving down on the enemy's position: the irregular infantry of the Mahrattas following in his rear. Captain Little, for the purpose of ascertaining the manner in which the enemy was posted, and aware of the advantage of keeping his strength in reserve in such a situation, went forward with one battalion; and as the fire opened, he directed two companies to advance on the enemy's right and two other companies to attack their left, whilst the rest were engaged with the centre. Every attempt to penetrate into the jungle was warmly opposed, but the enemy's right seemed the point most assailable, though defended with obstinacy. Two companies were sent to re-inforce the two engaged on the right; but Lieutenants Doolan and Bethune, who led them, were wounded successively. The grenadier company under Lieutenant Moor * was sent to their support, that officer also fell disabled. Six companies of the 11th battalion were then brought forward, and Brigadier Major Ross, who directed them, was killed. The Sepoys repeatedly penetrated a short distance into the jungle; but most of their European officers being wounded, they could not keep their ground. The Mahratta infantry, on every advance, rushed forward tumultuously, but were driven back in disorderly flight, which only added to the general slaughter, and contributed to the confusion of the regular infantry; but Captain Little, watching the opportunities when his men's minds required support, with that admirable judgment and gallantry, which have, on so many occasions, distinguished the officers of British Sepoys, rallied, cheered, and reanimated them; sent on parts of the reserve, and continued the apparently unequal struggle with steady resolution. At last, the whole reserve was ordered up; the action continued with fresh spirit, and a small party got through the jungle into the enemy's camp. Captain Little, who immediately perceived the importance of this advantage, skilfully prepared a strong body to support them. This reinforcement he headed in person, and arrived in time to secure the retreat of the small advanced party which had given way on their officer being wounded, and were completely overpowered and flying; rallying, however, at Captain Little's word, and seeing themselves seconded, they turned on their pursuers with fresh energy. The enemy began to waver. The whole detachment was ordered to press forward. Captain Thomson, of the artillery, and the few European officers that remained, imitating the example of their gallant commander, led on with the greatest animation, drove the enemy from every point, and thus gained this well-fought battle. The Mahrattas rushed forward with their usual avidity to share the plunder, and were useful in the pursuit, which Captain Little continued in the most persevering manner until he had taken every one of the guns, and rendered his victory as dispiriting and injurious to the enemy, as it was creditable and cheering to his own party.

* Letter from Lieut. Stewart, 1st assistant to the resident at Hyderabad.

* Author of the interesting narrative of the operations of Captain Little's detachment.

The whole conduct of Captain Little, on this occasion, was most exemplary: it reminds us of the generalship of Lawrence, or of Clive, and of itself, entitles him to a very respectable rank in the military annals of British India. Of the small number of British troops engaged, sixty were killed and wounded, and the loss would have been much greater, but for the judicious conduct of their commander, who exposed them as little as possible until he knew where their strength could be exerted with effect. The Mahrattas, though they contributed but little to the success of the day, lost about five hundred men. The fort of Simoga did not long hold out after the defeat of the cover-

A.D. 1792. ing army: it surrendered to Captain Little on the 2d January, and it was to him a very humiliating circumstance, that he was compelled to place the principal officers at the disposal of Pureshram Bhow, who, contrary to the terms of capitulation, detained them in the same manner as he had kept Budr-ul Zeman Khan.

Some time was spent in making arrangements for the occupation of the country about Simoga; but towards the middle of January, Pureshram Bhow, to complete his design, advanced through the woods in the direction of Bednore, which he reached on the 28th, and was preparing to invest it, when, for reasons which will be hereafter explained, he suddenly retreated, and after returning to Simoga, took the straight route towards Seringapatam.* Lord Cornwallis, accompanied by Hurry Punt and the son of Nizam Ally, Sikundur Jah, arrived with the combined army before Tippoo's capital on the 5th February. On the following day, the well-concerted and brilliant attack made by the English on his camp within the bound hedge, put the allies in possession of the whole of the outworks, and immediate preparations were made for commencing the siege. General Abercromby's division joined on the 16th, and materially contributed to forward the operations, particularly by the gallant repulse of Tippoo's attack on their advanced position on the 22d of February.

Tippoo repeatedly endeavoured to open negotiations; but his first overtures were for various reasons considered inadmissible; at last, in consequence of the more becoming form and tone of his proposals, together with the intercession of the allies, particularly of Hurry Punt, two wukeels, Gholam Ali and Ali Reza, were admitted to an audience on the 14th February, whilst in the mean time, the attack and defence were going forward as if no peace had been meditated. The wukeels were met by three agents, appointed by the allies respectively; Sir John Kennaway, on the part of Lord Cornwallis; Buchajee Rugonath, on that of Hurry Punt; and Meer Abdool Kassim, now distinguished by his title of Meer Alum, in behalf of Sikundur Jah. After considerable discussion, and many references by the wukeels to their master, Tippoo, on the 23d February, the day after his unsuccessful attack on General Abercromby's division, consented to cede half the territory which he possessed before the war; to pay three krores, and thirty thousand rupees, one half immediately, and the rest by three equal instalments within a year; to release all persons made prisoners from the time of Hyder Ally; and to deliver two of his sons as hostages for the due performance of the conditions. An armistice had taken place for two days, the hostages had already arrived in the English camp, upwards of one krore of rupees of the money had been paid, and the definitive treaty on the point of being concluded, when Tippoo, who appears to have at first overlooked the circumstance, finding that the principality of Koorg was included in the list of cessions, loudly remonstrated against yielding what he termed equivalent to the surrender of one of the gates of Seringapatam. Appearances indicated his determination to break the truce, but the prompt measures adopted by Lord Cornwallis for renewing the siege, and his declared resolution to give up none of the advantages already secured, induced Tippoo to reflect on the consequences, and finally to sign the treaty.

* Moor, Wilks, Mahratta MSS. and letters.

Without reference to the condition of the former dependents of the Peishwa and Nizam Ally, or to that clause which secured a greater advantage to the party first in the field, the allies received an equal share of the districts ceded by Tippoo, amounting annually to about forty lacks of rupees to each.

The share of the Mahrattas lay principally between the Wurdah and Kistna; it also included the valley of Sondoor near Bellary, which was still in possession of the Ghorepuray family. The portion allotted to Nizam Ally included Gootee and Kurpa, with the districts between the Kistna and Toongbuddra, of which Moodgul, Kannikgeeree and Kopaul, may be considered the western boundary, with the exception of a small district about Anagoondy, which Tippoo retained. Dindigul, Baramahal, Koorg and Malabar were assigned to the English.

We now return to explain the cause of Pureshram Bhow's sudden retreat from Bednore, which was occasioned by his learning that Kummur-uddeen had marched from Seringapatam with a strong force of infantry, for the purpose of entrapping him in the woods, and although success would have more than excused his proceedings at the Poona court, his failure, should he be afterwards hemmed in, would have ruined both himself and his army; for Nana Furnuwees, though he at first took little notice of the Bhow's intention, no sooner found that it was generally understood, than he ordered him to desist, and proceed to Seringapatam. Lord Cornwallis, after he laid siege to that fortress, had pressingly written to Pureshram Bhow, describing the manner in which he had invested it, and pointing out the essential service that might be rendered by his cavalry if posted on the south face of the fortress; but Pureshram Bhow disregarded the application, until he received the information already mentioned. By the time, however, that he reached Seringapatam, the armistice was signed, and although Lord Cornwallis scarcely noticed his faithless conduct, it has been a theme of just censure; nor can Nana Furnuwees be exempted from a share of blame, for when urged by Mr. Malet to expedite the Bhow's advance to the capital, he started difficulties as to the scarcity which his junction would occasion in the grand army, and would no doubt, have been well pleased to effect a conquest which had been a favourite object with his great master, the first Mahdoo Rao.

By the end of March, after the usual interchange of civilities, the commanders of the allied armies had put their troops in motion towards their respective frontiers. Hurry Punt returned by the eastern route to Poona, where he arrived on the 25th May; but Pureshram Bhow remained with the heavy baggage and stores, which together with his own artillery, and seventeen battering guns presented by Lord Cornwallis to the Peishwa, greatly retarded his progress. The devastation committed by his own troops on their advance rendered grain and forage extremely scarce, and the heat and drought of the season, together with the active annoyance which, notwithstanding the peace, he continued to experience from Tippoo's Beruds and Pindharees, combined to render Pureshram Bhow's march from Seringapatam to the Toongbuddra, one of the most distressing the Mahrattas ever experienced. Captain Little's detachment fortunately escaped the severe privations to which Pureshram Bhow's army was subjected, by having been directed to join General Abercromby's army, which marched to Malabar, and embarked at Cannanore for Bombay.*

* Mahratta and English Records. Wilks, Moor, &c, &c.

CHAP. IV.

FROM A. D. 1792, TO A. D. 1794.

An inquiry into the reasons which induced Lord Cornwallis to refrain from subjugating Tippoo's territory, is foreign to the object of this work. — Opinion of the Mahratta ministers on this subject. — Mahadajee Sindia's proposals at the time of forming the confederacy against Tippoo, to which Sindia did not become a party. — Sindia's proceedings in Hindoostan. — Battle of Patun. — Ismael Beg defeated — Rajpoots continue the war — battle of Mairta — peace with the Rajpoots. — The regular infantry of De Boigne. — Holkar entertains the Chevalier Dudrenec and raises some regular corps. — Ali Buhadur assisted by Himmut Buhadur establishes himself in Bundelcund. — Sindia moves towards Poona. — Surmises with regard to his intentions — declares that he is proceeding as bearer of the insignia of office, for the Wukeel-i-Mootluq, from the emperor to the Peishwa. — Grand state ceremony on presenting the insignia. — Sindia endeavours by various ways to gain the confidence of the young Peishwa to the prejudice of Nana Furnuwees. — Discussions respecting the affairs of Hindoostan. — Ismael Beg again raises disturbances, but is taken prisoner and confined for life in the fort of Agra. — The troops of Sindia and Holkar commit hostilities against each other — obstinate battle of Lukhairee. — Sindia's troops victorious. — Consequences at Poona. — Hostilities suspended in Hindoostan, by orders from the Peishwa and Sindia — the latter all powerful in Hindoostan — his attempts to render himself popular in the Deccan — perseveres in his endeavours to supersede Nana Furnuwees in the young Peishwa's favour. — Remarkable explanation betwixt the Peishwa and Nana. — Views of Mahadajee Sindia — his death.

AN enquiry into the reasons which induced Lord Cornwallis to refrain from the entire subjugation of Tippoo's territory, is foreign to the object of this work; it is only necessary to observe, that even Nana Furnuwees and Pureshram Bhow, the parties in the Mahratta state most inimical to Tippoo, were averse to the total overthrow of the Mysore state, and Mahadajee Sindia was decidedly hostile to that course of policy. The Mahrattas, who are not sensible of the effect which may operate on British authorities, from the influence of public opinion in England, attribute the moderation shown by the governor-general to the representations of Hurry Punt Phurkay.*

At the period when Lord Cornwallis was negociating the alliance against Tippoo, he instructed Major Palmer, the resident with Sindia, to request, both of Sindia and Holkar, to use their influence at Poona, in effecting the desired connection between the Peishwa and the British government. Sindia offered to unite in the confederacy against Tippoo, provided two battalions similar to those granted to Nizam Ally, were sent to join the army, with which he proposed to march to the southward; and that the British government should become bound to protect his territory in Hindoostan during his absence. These proposals being considered inadmissible, he refused to become a party to the treaty of Poona.†

We left Mahadajee Sindia in the early part of 1790, endeavouring to conciliate his co-adjutors, intent on humbling the Rajpoots, securing the dependency of Ismael Beg, and preventing the incursions of the Seiks. A temporary adjustment with Holkar and Ali Buhadur, enabled him to prepare for opposing Ismael Beg, whose hostile intentions soon became unequivocal, and the Rajpoot Rajas of Jeypoor and Joudpoor were pouring succours into his camp. Sindia, before risking a battle, endeavoured, with some success, to corrupt the regular troops with Ismael Beg, and at last ordered Gopaul Rao Bhow, Luckwa Dada, and (June 20.)De Boigne, to attack his camp near Patun, at a point which was left undefended, by a body of troops whom Sindia had secured in his interest; but, notwithstanding this advantage, Sindia's officers being disappointed in the promised aid of Holkar, who stood aloof during the engagement, the utmost exertion was necessary to ensure success. Ismael Beg fought with his usual bravery, and a body of his Patans thrice charged through the regular infantry of the Mahrattas, cutting down the artillery-men at their guns. De Boigne displayed great personal energy on this occasion, and to his gallantry, and the discipline of his battalions, was justly attributed the great victory which ensued. Numbers fell on both sides *, but the army of Ismael Beg was completely routed, and that chieftain fled with a small retinue from the field of battle to the gates of Jeypoor. All his guns were taken, and ten battalions of infantry grounded their arms and surrendered.

* Mahratta MSS. Hurry Punt's letters.
† Bengal Records.

* One translation of a native newspaper in the Bengal Records, says 11 or 12,000 of the Mahrattas were killed.

(A. D. 1791.) The Rajpoots, however, still maintained the war, and a second battle took place at Mairta, in the Joudpoor territory, where they allowed themselves to be surprised by (Sept. 12.) De Boigne, at dawn of day, on the 12th September; and although four hundred Rhatore cavalry made desperate efforts to re-animate their friends, and allow them to recover themselves, the general confusion was irretrievable. It was supposed that Sindia would have completely subjugated the Rajpoots, but the opposition and dissensions to which he was exposed from his colleagues, Holkar and Ali Buhadur, induced (A.D. 1792.) him to grant them peace on their promising to pay a moderate tribute annually. *

The force of De Boigne was now gradually augmented to 18000 regular infantry, 6000 irregulars, Nujeebs and Rohillas, 2000 irregular horse, and 600 Persian cavalry. This last body was mounted, clothed, armed, and disciplined by De Boigne, to whom all the horses of it belonged. Districts in the Dooab yielding twenty-two lacks of rupees of net revenue were assigned for the support of this force, and the fortress of Agra was given up as a depôt of small arms and cannon; of the latter De Boigne had upwards of two hundred serviceable pieces. † Sindia affected to consider this force as part of the emperor's establishment, and denominated them the imperial army; but such a flimsy veil was not calculated to deceive the watchful eye of his rivals, and Holkar, in particular, saw the growth of this power with rancorous jealousy. He retired across the Chumbul, and entertained in his service the Chevalier Dudrenec, a Frenchman, who raised and disciplined four battalions, the first troops of that description which the family of Holkar had ever used.

* Mahratta letters and M.S. Palmer's despatches. Indian newspaper and General De Boigne.

† General De Boigne.

Ali Buhadur, at the suggestion of Himmut Buhadur, undertook the conquest of Bundelcund, in which province, after a long struggle, they succeeded in establishing themselves, but found infinite difficulty in reducing the country, and were perpetually involved in warfare and insurrection.

Whilst Sindia was engaged in contentions with his colleagues, he frequently declared his intention of repairing to Poona for the purpose of obtaining their recal; but Nana's policy in supporting Holkar was well known, and Sindia's situation was deemed too insecure to admit of his venturing on an excursion so distant. When he therefore moved towards Ousein, and actually commenced his march for Poona, various were the conjectures which ensued. Some considered that, jealous of the increasing power of the British, and their influence at Poona and Hyderabad, his views were directed to the establishment of his own authority at Poona, for the purpose of preventing the ascendancy which it seemed probable they would obtain, especially if Tippoo's dominions were conquered and partitioned. Others supposed that he had views on the territory of Nizam Ally, and some believed that his sole object was to prevent the interference of Holkar in his late acquisitions in Hindoostan.

It is probable there was some foundation for all these surmises; certain it is that he had in view the control of the Bramins, and the establishment of his own authority at the Peishwa's capital. After the battle of Patun, in June 1790, he obtained from the emperor, for the third time, patents constituting the Peishwa Wukeel-i-Mootluq, but which was now to descend to him as a hereditary office in unalienable enam, on condition, however, of appointing Sindia and his posterity his perpetual deputies. In order, therefore, to exhibit to his countrymen his absolute power over the imperial house of Timour, for which the Mahrattas in the Deccan had long a habitual respect, and to gratify the feelings of all Hindoos, the emperor invested Sindia with the right of selecting his heir from among his sons, and issued an edict forbidding the slaughter of bullocks and cows throughout the Moghul dominions.

Sindia's march to the southward was very slow; and he often appeared as if deliberating whether he might venture so far from his own territory. He gave out that he was proceeding to Poona by the emperor's orders, as bearer of the sunnuds and insignia of the office of Wukeel-i-Mootluq for the Peishwa. On his arrival at Bheer, near the Godavery, charged with such commissions from the emperor, he made some demands on Nizam Ally, the nature of which is not ascertained; but he endeavoured to induce him to make him a present of the fertile district of Bheer, and bestow Aurungabad on the Peishwa. On being refused, he pretended to be much hurt at his want of courtesy.

Nana Furnuwees long doubted whether Sindia would actually come into the Deccan; but on being assured that he was on his route from Burhanpoor, he applied to Lord Cornwallis, through Hurry Punt Phurkay, for the permanent services of Captain Little's detachment, which, in name of the Peishwa, he offered to subsidize; but the governor-general, for various reasons, declined assenting to the proposal.

Sindia was very apprehensive of a connection of that kind; and, to allay Nana's well-founded jealousy of his regular infantry, he only brought with him a small party, under an Englishman of respectable character, named Hessing, and one complete battalion, commanded by Michael Filoze, by birth a Neapolitan, a low, illiterate man, of worthless character, but of considerable address and cunning. Sindia arrived at Poona on the 11th June, and pitched his camp near the Sungum, or junction of the Moota and Moola rivers, the place assigned by the Peishwa for the residence of the British envoy and his suite; and hence the Sungum and the Residency, a spot for many reasons interesting, and well known to most of our countrymen who have visited that quarter, became synonimous.

Nana Furnuwees did every thing in his power to prevent the Peishwa's acceptance of the titles and insignia brought from the emperor; he represented the impropriety of adopting some of the titles, especially that of Maharaj Adeeraj (the greatest of great Rajas) which was inconsistent with the constitution of the existing government of the Mahratta empire. But Sindia persisted; and permission for the Peishwa's acceptance of all the honours, was formally obtained from the Raja of Satara. Nine days after his arrival, Nana Furnuwees visited Sindia, who received him in the most cordial manner, refused to sit on his musnud in the minister's presence, and treated him with the greatest respect. On the ensuing day Sindia paid his respects to the Peishwa, carrying with him numberless rare productions and curiosities of Hindoostan, for the young Prince. The following morning was appointed for the grand ceremony of investing the Peishwa with the title and dignity of Wukeel-i-Mootluq, and Sindia spared no pains to render it as imposing as possible. A grand suite of tents was pitched at a distance from his own camp. The Peishwa proceeded towards them with the most pompous form. At the further end of these splendid apartments, a throne, meant to represent that of the emperor of the Moghuls, was erected, on which was displayed the imperial firman, the khillut, or dresses of investiture, and all the principal insignia. The Peishwa on approaching the throne made his obeisance thrice, placed 101 gold mohurs upon it as a nuzur, or offering, and took his seat on its left. — Sindia's Persian secretary then read the imperial firmans, and amongst others, the edict which prevented the slaughter of bullocks and cows. The Peishwa then received the khillut, consisting of nine articles of dress, five superb ornaments of jewels and feathers, a sword and shield, a pencase, a seal and inkstand, and two royal morchuls, or fans of peacock's tails, accompanied by a nalkee *, a palkee †, a horse and an elephant; besides six elephants bearing the imperial standard, two crescents, two stars, and the orders of the fish and of the sun. The Peishwa retired to an adjoining tent and returned clothed in the imperial khillut, when he resumed his seat; and Sindia, followed by Nana Furnuwees and such of the Peishwa's officers as were present, offered nuzurs of congratulation. When the Peishwa arose to return to his palace he was followed by Sindia and Hurry Punt carrying the Morchuls and fanning him. He entered Poona seated in the Nalkee; the concourse of people assembled to witness the procession was exceedingly great; the pomp and grandeur displayed was beyond any thing that the inhabitants of Poona had ever seen, whilst the clang of thousands of musical instruments, the shouts of the populace, volleys of musquetry, and salvos of cannon, seemed to give all the effect that the projector of this state ceremony could possibly desire.

* A nalkee is a sort of sedan chair without a top, having four poles, two behind and two before, never used but by the emperor or persons of the very highest rank.

† A palkee is totally different from the more useful and convenient, though less splendid conveyance, commonly used by Europeans, and termed by them palanquin. The natives, who call them meynas, also use the same conveyance, but the palkee is a sort of short bed-stead, over which a pole very much curved in the middle, is fastened, and above all, a scarlet cloth stretched on bamboos, as an awning, and sometimes very highly ornamented, is placed. When used by ladies, there are screens affixed to the upper cloth.

The investiture of Sindia by the Peishwa, as deputy to the Wukeel-i-Mootluq, immediately followed on their arrival at the Peishwa's palace; but on this occasion, and on several others, the pretended humility of Sindia gave disgust, when he insisted on being considered as the hereditary servant of the Peishwa, entitled only to carry his slippers, and addressed by no higher title than that of Patell. Though this affectation was meant to be in conformity with Mahratta taste, it failed in its effect. No Bramin of education was pleased or deceived by such coarse self-disparagement, and the old Mahrattas, though Mahadajee Sindia had purchased some hereditary privileges in the Deccan, would much more readily have acknowledged his new imperial titles *, than have assigned to him the appellation of Patell, a distinction which they considered due only to the legitimate Sindia, Patell of Kunneirkheir. The Mankurees, and those cavaliers who considered themselves the old officers of the Rajas of Satara, though some among them could scarcely term the horse he rode his own, refused to enter the imperial tents with the Peishwa, nor would they present nuzurs to him as Wukeel-i-Mootluq. Nuzurs were presented to Sindia by his officers on returning to his own camp, but the feeling among his countrymen, which was too strong to escape his notice, proved to him the necessity of much caution in the prosecution of his designs.

* These were Raja, Maharaj, Mahdoo Rao Sindia, Mudar Ool Muham, Ali Jah Buhadur.

A principal object was to gain the confidence of the young Peishwa, to which, the rarities he had brought from Hindoostan, and the splendid spectacle with which he had been gratified, paved the way. The frank, unreserved manners of Sindia, who talked to the young prince of hunting and hawking, and carried him out on frequent excursions to see those field sports, were things so very different, and so much more agreeable, than the sedate and grave observance of decorum habitual to Nana Furnuwees, that Sindia soon became his constant companion. Parties to the country, in the neighbourhood of Poona, constantly took place, to which the young prince was invited, and Nana thought it advisable to give his assent, although he clearly saw the design of Sindia, and watched his proceedings so vigilantly, that it was difficult for him to find opportunities of conversing with Mahdoo Rao unobserved. When they did occur, Sindia never failed to comment on the manner in which he was treated, and to assure him, that he had both the power and the inclination to render him independent of such tutelage. But although Mahdoo Rao readily entered into every scheme of pleasure suggested by Sindia, his natural good disposition and judgment rendered it by no means easy to shake his confidence in Nana Furnuwees; and at first he combated Sindia's arguments with warmth; but the customary restraints before unfelt began to be irksome, and Sindia's society proportionally more desirable.

Sindia's public affairs at the Durbar seemed principally to refer to Hindoostan; he represented the large sums he had spent in extending the empire, and procuring such honours and dignity for the Peishwa; he petitioned for the payment of his expenses, the entire management of affairs in Hindoostan, and finally for the recal of Holkar and Ali Buhadur. In reply to these, the minister always demanded, in the first instance, an account of the revenue of those districts which he had subdued so easily, and had enjoyed so long. Many discussions on these subjects took place, and many circumstances occurred, tending to strengthen the mutual jealousy of Sindia and Nana; but they for some time maintained every form of civility and respect, whilst their respective parties in Hindoostan, though engaged in service together in the Rajpoot country, were almost in a state of open rupture.

The restless spirit of Ismael Beg, and his enmity to Sindia, rendered him a fit instrument for disturbing the tranquillity of Hindoostan; to which, after Sindia's departure, he was secretly prompted by the intrigues of Tookajee Holkar; but, after assembling a considerable force, his career was stopped sooner than was anticipated.

The widow of Nujeef Khan refused to surrender the fort of Canoond to Sindia's officers. A force marched against her under M. Perron, the officer second in command to De Boigne. Ismael Beg advanced to her assistance, gave Perron battle outside the walls, and being defeated, entered the fort. He there assisted in the defence, which was well maintained, until the widow, having been killed by a stone shell, the garrison became dispirited by the accident, and began to think of betraying Ismael Beg to ensure themselves favourable terms. This treachery, however, the latter prevented by giving himself up to M. Perron, who promised, on the faith of his commanding officer, De Boigne, that he should not be put to death. The terms were observed, but he was ever after confined in the fort of Agra, where he died, in 1799.

Subsequent to the surrender of Canoond, which happened before Sindia reached Poona, Holkar's and Sindia's armies were levying tribute together in the Rajpoot territory; they had also taken two forts, when, quarrelling about the spoils, their jealousy burst forth into open hostilities, which brought on the battle of Lukhairee, near Ajimere, on which occasion Gopaul Rao Bhow, Luckwa Dada, and De Boigne, with twenty thousand horse and nine thousand regular infantry, defeated Holkar's army, consisting of thirty thousand horse and the four battalions of Dudrenec. The attack was planned by De Boigne, and the conflict the most obstinate ever witnessed by that officer. By the explosion of twelve tumbrils of ammunition, his brigades were thrown into great confusion, but being posted in a wood, Holkar's cavalry could not take advantage of the disaster. Dudrenec's battalions fought until they were nearly annihilated. Their guns, thirty-eight in number, were all taken; the shattered remains of the corps retreated precipitately into Malwa, where Holkar, in impotent rage, sacked Oujein the capital of his rival.

When accounts of these proceedings reached Poona, the ostensible cordiality of Sindia and the court, was for a time obstructed, and precautions were adopted by both parties, as if apprehensive of personal violence. Nana Furnuwees called in the aid of Pureshram Bhow, who arrived with 2000 horse. This imprudent reinforcement furA.D. 1793. nished Sindia with a pretext for greatly increasing the parties of Hessing and Filoze who accompanied him, and for bringing down one of his infantry brigades, the command of which was confided by De Boigne to M. Perron. But as neither party was desirous of attaining their end by prosecuting the war, positive instructions were despatched to their respective officers, to refrain from hostilities, and to await the pacific settlement of their disputes by orders from the Peishwa.

The result rendered Sindia all powerful in Hindoostan, but he was conscious of his unpopularity in the Deccan, and strove to overcome it. With this view he had, on his arrival at Poona, espoused the cause of Govind Rao Gaekwar in a manner which will be hereafter explained, and upon one occasion, when Nana Furnuwees, during the minority of the Punt Suchew, assumed charge of his lands, Sindia, who knew that the proceeding met with general disapprobation interposed, conveyed the Suchew to Poona, in opposition to the orders of the minister, re-established him in his possessions, and dismissed Bajee Rao Moreishwur, the agent whom Nana had placed in charge of the Suchew's territory. This daring interference gave rise to a quarrel which was with difficulty appeased by the mediation of Hurry Punt Phurkay; but fresh disputes arose in consequence of Sindia's more undisguised attempts to induce the Peishwa to seek his protection. On one occasion, in particular, a conversation took place in a boat at Lohgaom, which being overheard and repeated, caused an immediate alarm in the mind of Nana, and he took the first opportunity of coming to an explanation with the Peishwa. He addressed himself both to his judgment and feelings, enumerated the services he had performed for him and for the state, described the views of aggrandizement entertained by Sindia, pointed out his foreign troops, his departure from ancient usage, and his want of connection with the Mahratta people, over whom and the Bramin sovereignty, he was bent on establishing an absolute power. —With these observations he contrasted his own situation, his inability to preserve order or to resist the encroachments of Sindia, if unsupported by his prince; and finally, lamenting in tears, the probable effects of the evil counsels by which he had been misled, he tendered his resignation, and declared his resolution to proceed to Benares. Mahdoo Rao was greatly affected. In a transport of grief he begged his forgiveness, entreated his stay, and promised to be for ever guarded in his conduct. But notwithstanding this re-establishment of influence, Sindia by his great power, would probably have ultimately prevailed over his rival, although the unqualified support of Hurry Punt to all the measures of the minister, the friendship of the powerful Bramin families of Rastia and Putwurdhun, together with that of the old Mankurees, some of them great Jagheerdars, formed a strong opposition to the views of Mahadajee Sindia. But in the midst of his ambitious schemes he was suddenly seized with a violent fever which in a few days terminated his existence. He breathed his last at Wunowlee, in the environs of Poona, on the 12th February 1794.

CHAP. V.

A. D. 1794.

Mahadajee Sindia's death, an event of great political importance. — Review of his policy and summary of his character — Is succeeded by his Grand Nephew Doulut Rao. — Sindia's regular infantry. — Opinions of many Mahrattas respecting that force. — Holkar long averse to its introduction. — Rughoojee Bhonslay had no infantry disciplined by European officers. — State of affairs at Nagpoor, and at Baroda. — Govind Rao Gaekwar succeeds as regent. — Piracy on the coast of Maharashtra. — The Peishwa's fleet. — Angria of Kolabah. — Seedees of Jinjeera — Revolutions and events in that State. Malwan and Sawuntwaree. — Various attempts of the English to suppress their piracies, and those of the Raja of Kolapoor — never completely effected until the year 1812.

A. D. 1794. THE death of Mahadajee Sindia was an event of great political importance, both as it affected the Mahratta empire and the other states of India. His views and his character are, perhaps, sufficiently elucidated in the history of the thirty-five years antecedent to the period at which we have arrived; but, that we may hold in mind the state of the different Mahratta powers, and explain the proceedings of the petty princes on the coast of Maharashtra, formerly of so much importance when our establishments in India were in their infancy, we shall devote this chapter to a brief recapitulation of Sindia's policy, a summary of his character, a review of the affairs of some of the other chieftains, and an explanation of minor transactions between the English and the petty princes to whom allusion is made. We shall then be free to enter on the causes which led to a war between the Mahrattas and the Moghuls in the Deccan.

The designs of Sindia, as we have already observed, were early directed to independence, but he was, at the same time, desirous of preserving a coalition, such as would unite the chieftains of the empire against all foreign enemies. He was inimical to the overgrown ascendancy of the Bramins. In his progress he first assisted the one Bramin against the other, and then attempted to overawe and control him whom he had raised. His absence from Poona, his campaign against Goddard in Guzerat, the necessity of his returning to his own Jagheer in Malwa, his defeat by Camac, and the successful result of the campaign directed by the Bramins against Goddard, gave an apparent superiority to his rivals, which seemed to foretel the fall of his fortunes. But the treaty of Salbye, the recognition of his independence by the British government, and the commanding station in which he was placed as the mediator and guarantee of a peace, honourable to the Mahrattas, raised him at once from decline to aggrandizement. In his first attempts to extend his power in Hindoostan, his contemporaries supposed him unequal to such a task, and that he must be ruined by the consequences of his own ambition. When he surmounted his difficulties, and not only rendered himself independent, but held in his hands a force which might control the Mahratta empire, he was very much alarmed lest Nana Furnuwees should call in the aid of a subsidiary, both as it interfered with his own views, and sacrificed so much to the English. The power of that nation, at a time when they were supposed to be weak, and their resources exhausted, had appeared in the late war greater than at any former period, and had attained a height which, in Sindia's opinion, threatened the subjugation of all India. He was declaredly averse to the entire conquest of Tippoo's territory, as he conceived that measure dangerous to the Mahratta state; but whilst the war continued, he does not seem to have seriously meditated hostilities against the English; neither did he take any secondary steps to undermine the influence the latter had acquired with the Bramin ministers at the Poona court, because the revolution he contemplated would confine or enlarge the intercourse as he might desire.

But although nothing decidedly inimical appears on the part of Sindia towards the British government, his power and ambition, his march to Poona, and, above all, the general opinion of the country, led the English to suspect him; and we accordingly find in their records various proofs of watchful jealousy. The Bombay government, in consequence of a slight alteration in the style of address from that which was used in the time of Governor Hornby, attributed the change to studied disrespect, and an attempt to mediate between that government and his relation, the Dessaye of Sawuntwaree, was deemed a very improper interference; but in the one case the style of address was discovered to be the same as permitted by the governor-general, and in the other the proposed mediation was perfectly justified. There appeared, however, soon after Sindia's arrival in the Deccan, in an ukhbar, or native newspaper, from Delhi, a paragraph, which stated that the emperor had written to the Peishwa and Mahadajee Sindia, expressing a hope that, by the exertions of the Wukeel-i-Mootluq and his deputy, he should obtain some tribute from Bengal. As such paragraphs are frequently written for the purpose of ascertaining the effects of the reports which they promulgate, it was properly noticed by Lord Cornwallis, whose spirited remonstrance prevented its repetition.

As to a summary of the character of Mahadjee Sindia, though much of his success is attributable to a combination of circumstances; he was a man of great political sagacity, and of considerable genius; of deep artifice, of restless ambition, and of implacable revenge. With a high opinion of his personal address, he generally failed where he attempted to exercise it; and, in ebullitions of anger, to which he was prone, he frequently exposed what he most wished to conceal. His countenance was expressive of good sense and good humour; but his complexion was dark, his person inclining to corpulency, and he limped from the effects of his wound at Panniput. His habits were simple, his manners kind and frank, but sometimes blustering and coarse. He was beloved by his dependants, liberal to his troops in assignments of land or orders on villages, but quite the reverse in payments from his treasury or in personal donatives; a characteristic, not only of Mahadajee Sindia, but of Mahrattas generally. His disposition was not cruel, although his punishments were severe. He could not only write, but what is rare among the Mahrattas, he was a good accountant, and understood revenue affairs. His districts in Malwa were well managed, a circumstance, however, which must be ascribed to a judicious selection of agents; for Sindia, like most Mahratta chieftains, was too much engaged in politics or war, to bestow the time and attention necessary to a good civil government. * He died without male issue.

Tookajee Sindia, Mahadajee Sindia's full brother, was slain in the fatal field of Panniput: but he left three sons, Kedarjee, Rowlajee, and Anund Rao, all of whom became officers in their uncle's service. Kedarjee died without issue; Rowlajee had two sons; but Mahadajee Sindia had resolved to adopt Doulut Rao, the son of his youngest nephew Anund Rao. The ceremony of adoption had not actually taken place, but Mahadajee had repeatedly declared Doulut Rao his heir; and although Luximee Bye, the widow of Mahadajee, opposed Doulut Rao's succession, her objections were overruled, as even Nana Furnuwees acceded to it. Tookajee Holkar was one of the first to acknowledge Doulut Rao. All the dependants of Sindia's family and the other Mahratta authorities, sent their congratulations; so that this youth, who had scarcely attained his fifteenth year, became undisputed heir to the extensive realms of Mahadajee Sindia.

* Mahratta MSS. and letters; Bombay records. The living testimony of many respectable natives. A good portrait in my possession. General Count De Boigne; Sir John Malcolm, &c.

The great success of Sindia's regular infantry, rendered efficient by the talents and energy of De Boigne, led most of the Mahratta states to introduce regular battalions as a part of their armies. Many Mahrattas, however, were of opinion that this departure from usage would prove their ruin; infantry and guns, as they had once too bitterly experienced, compelled them to fight when flight was more judicious, and some of them predicted, that if they ever attempted to combat Europeans with their own weapons, they would one day experience a defeat still more fatal than that of Panniput. * Tookajee Holkar long resisted the introduction of regular infantry, but he saw that Sindia could have made no progress in reducing the strong forts in Rajpootana without such aid; and although he might have been convinced, that it would have been much better for his army to have wanted the four battalions of Dudrenec at Lukhairee, he was so well satisfied with their conduct, that he immediately afterwards ordered Dudrenec to raise a like number.

Rughoojee Bhonslay, the Raja of Nagpoor, did not, in this respect, follow the example of the generality of the Mahratta chieftains. His father Moodajee died in 1788, and besides Rughoojee, the eldest, he left two other sons Khundoojee, * Mahratta MSS. This was the opinion of Nana Furnuwees, and many Mahrattas of the present day attribute the overthrow of their power, solely to the introduction of regular infantry and artillery.

and Venkajee or Munnya Bappoo. Khundoojee had charge of the northern, and Venkajee of the southern districts, but Rughoojee, as heir of his uncle Janojee, was Sena Sahib Soobeh of the Mahratta empire, although, until his father's death, he was not considered as ruler of Berar. At the time when the confederacy was formed against Tippoo, Rughoojee, in consequence of a peremptory summons from the Peishwa, was constrained to repair to Poona, where he objected to being ordered upon an expedition where the Peishwa was not to command in person, and offered many other ineffectual excuses, until he at length privately explained to Nana Furnuwees, his grounds for apprehending that his brother Khundoojee would usurp the sovereignty in his absence, upon which his presence was dispensed with, on promising to contribute ten lacks of rupees to assist in defraying the expenses of the war. Soon after his return to Nagpoor, his brother Khundoojee died, which relieved him from all apprehension of rivalry, and he soon after conferred on his brother Venkajee the districts of Chandah and Chuteesgurh in Jagheer. These were the only changes of importance, amongst the eastern Mahrattas, up to the period of Mahadajee Sindia's death. In the west, several events in regard to the Gaekwar, or Baroda state, require a summary notice.

Futih Sing Gaekwar, the regent at Baroda, died on the 21st December, 1789, in consequence of a fall from an upper story in his house. His younger brother, Mannajee Rao, who was then at Baroda, immediately assumed charge of the person and government of his brother Syajee. Govind Rao, the elder brother next to Syajee, with whose history the reader is already acquainted, was then residing in obscurity at a village in the neighbourhood of Poona, and presented a petition to the minister, praying to be acknowledged by the Peishwa as regent of the Gaekwar possessions. His claim was just, but Mannajee Rao, by paying a nuzur of rupees, thirty-three lacks, thirteen thousand and one, and agreeing to pay up arrears due by Futih Sing, amounting to upwards of thirty-six lacks, was confirmed in his usurpation. Mahadajee Sindia, however, as already alluded to, espoused the cause of Govind Rao, and procured a repeal of Mannajee's appointment; upon which Mannajee applied to the Bombay government, claiming its protection on the terms of the treaty concluded with General Goddard by Futih Sing. As the treaty in question was superseded by that of Salbye, the English declined all interference on that ground; but by the talent of Mannajee's agent, Goolab Raee, and the supposed imbecility of Govind Rao, they were induced to recommend, through Mr. Malet, that some friendly compromise should be adopted, as being for the benefit of the country [and of all parties concerned. Nana Furnuwees concurred in this opinion, but Mahadajee Sindia and the partizans of Govind Rao, objected to any compromise. The question, however, was at once set at rest by the death of Mannajee, about 1st August 1793. Still, Govind Rao found it difficult to obtain permission to quit the Peishwa's capital. The ministers, without any regard to the exorbitant ex-actions already imposed on himself and his family, obliged Govind Rao to sign an agreement confirming the former stipulations, and ceding to the Peishwa the Gaekwar's share of the districts south of the Taptee, formerly included in the cessions to the Company in 1780, together with his proportion of the customs of Surat; but, there being no service performed by the Peishwa, towards the Gaekwar, beyond the mere confirmation of his rights as regent, the British government objected to the cession, as a dismemberment of the Baroda territory, contrary to the stipulations of the treaty of Salbye. The validity of this objection was immediately admitted by Nana Furnuwees, the instrument of cession was restored, and Govind Rao, at last set out to assume his office, as undisputed regent at Baroda, on the 19th December 1793.

Affairs on the coast of Maharashtra demand notice, chiefly from the system of piracy which continued to prevail between Goa and Bombay.

In 1756, piracy received a considerable check by the subjugation of Toolajee Angria, and had the Peishwa then united his endeavours with those of the English, it might have been exterminated. But like predatory incursions on shore, it was profitable; and so far from being suppressed, it was encouraged by the Poona court. The Peishwa had two fleets, the one under his Sursoobehdar at Bassein, the other commanded by Anund Rao Dhoolup his admiral, who was stationed at Viziadroog. The Peishwa's fleets did not molest vessels under English colours until the war of 1775. After that period, even in times of peace, we find that occasional depredations were committed, and unless speedy detection followed, which was not always the case, the vessels were not restored: when the capture, however, was clearly ascertained, they were released, and the apology offered for their detention was, that they had been mistaken for ships of some other nation. *

Mannajee Angria of Kolabah continued in obedience to the Peishwa's authority until his death, which happened in 1759. His son Rughoojee professed equal submission, but only obeyed when it suited his convenience. His piracies on the trading ships of the English were conducted in the same manner as the aggressions of the Peishwa. In November 1793, Rughoojee died, when, without reference to the Poona court, the sovereignty was assumed in the name of his infant son Mannajee, under the guardianship of Jey Sing Angria. By this usurpation, as it was termed in those who had not power to support their pretensions, Mannajee and Jey Sing incurred the enmity of the Poona minister, of which Sindia's successor, Doulut Rao, at a subsequent period, took advantage, and raised a member of the family of Angria who was nearly allied to himself, to the chiefship of that principality, a change which gave no umbrage to the English, because the reigning party, so far from courting their friendship, had most unjustifiably made prize of some of their ships. †

The Seedees of Jinjeera plundered all nations,

* Bombay Records and Mahratta letters.

† Mahratta MSS. and letters. Bombay Records.

except the English, nor did they always escape. Several revolutions had taken place in this small principality. In 1762, Seedee Yakoot, by the will of the regent, Seedee Ibrahim, succeeded to the government, in prejudice to Seedee Abdool Rahim, who was considered the nearest heir. Abdool Rahim endeavoured to obtain possession by force, and was secretly re-inforced by the Mahrattas. The English took part with the reigning chief, and having failed in an attempt to arbitrate the difference, they assisted to repel Abdool Rahim, who being defeated, fled to Poona. Seedee Yakoot apprehending that the Peishwa might openly espouse Abdool Rahim's cause, offered a compromise, promising him Dhunda Rajepoor, and the succession to Jinjeera at his death; a proposal which was accepted, and Abdool Rahim succeeded accordingly. But Seedee Yakoot had made a will bequeathing the principality to the second son of Abdool Rahim at his father's death, under the guardianship, in case of a minority, of his own friend Seedee Johur, who was commandant of Jinjeera. Abdool Rahim died shortly after, in 1784; but, without paying any regard to the will of Seedee Yakoot, he had bequeathed the principality to his eldest son, Abdool Khureem Khan, commonly called Balloo Meah. * Seedee Johur, however, defended his pretensions, founded on the will of Seedee Yakoot, and endeavoured to arrest Balloo Meah; but he, being apprized of the scheme, fled to Poona, carrying with him his younger brother, whom Seedee Johur wished to set up. Nana Furnuwees, in hopes that it was reserved for him to annex the unconquerable island to the Mahratta possessions, prepared to support the cause of Abdool Khureem Khan; Seedee Johur, however, called on the English for protection, expressing his readiness to comply with any reasonable arbitration satisfactory to the inhabitants, but declaring his determination to resist the Mahrattas and the obnoxious Balloo Meah, "whilst the rock of Jinjeera remained and a man to stand by him." Nana Furnuwees, at the request of the Bombay government, agreed to suspend operations, until a reference could be made to Lord Cornwallis on the subject. It being at that time a great object of the governor-general's policy to gain the friendship of the Poona court, and it being generally believed, that Seedee Johur was only striving to get the younger brother into his power, as a cloak to meditated usurpation, Lord Cornwallis directed the Bombay government not to support him. He also intimated to the Peishwa, that if he would make an adequate provision for the sons of the late Abdool Khureem Khan, in some other part of the country, he might then take possession of the Seedee's territory. The Mahrattas, however, without making the provision stipulated, attempted, clandestinely, to possess themselves of Jinjeera, which no sooner came to the knowledge of the governor-general, than he suspended the permission he had given. At length, when the treaty of alliance against Tippoo was concluded, the Peishwa having granted to Balloo Meah and his brother, a tract of land near Surat, guaranteed by the English, and yielding annually 75,000 rupees; having also given them 40,000 rupees in ready money, the heirs to the Jinjeera principality, relinquished their right and title in favour of the Peishwa. The agreement was signed on the 6th June 1791;—but the castle may fall whilst the cottage stands; the little island was never reduced, and the principality of Jinjeera has survived the empire of the Peishwas.

* Mahratta MS. and letters.

The most active, however, of all the corsairs on the coast, and the most destructive to the English trade, were the pirates of Malwan and Sawuntwaree. We have already cursorily alluded to the expedition sent against them in 1765. It was under the joint command of Major Gordon*, and Captain John Watson of the Bombay marine.† They speedily reduced the fort of Malwan, a much valued possession of the Raja of Kolapoor, and took Yeswuntgurh or Rairee, from the Dessaye of Waree. To the former, the Bombay government gave the name of Fort Augustus, intending to have kept it; but the acquisition being unprofitable, they proposed to destroy the works; that alternative, however, was also abandoned, on account of the expense, and they at last determined to restore it to the Raja, on condition of his promising not to molest their ships or trade, to give security for his future good conduct, and to indemnify them for losses and expences, to the amount of rs. 382.896; the whole of which, except rs. 50.000, was received before

* I am not sure if this name be correct, it is written Gowan and Goreham, as well as Gordon, in the records of the period.

† The same, who as Commodore Watson, was killed at the siege of Tannah.

Malwan was evacuated, in May 1766. This expedition took place during the minority of Sivajee, Raja of Kolapoor. Kem Sawunt, Dessaye of Waree, was then also a minor; and a confusion, greater even than usual, prevailed amongst his turbulent relations. To this confusion, may be ascribed the difficulty, which was experienced in effecting a settlement with the Dessaye of Waree. The Bombay government do not appear to have been aware that there was a distinction between the pirates of Waree and Malwan, until 1765, when, on the 7th April of that year, they concluded a treaty of nineteen articles with the Dessaye, whom they distinguished by his ancient family name of Bhonslay, or, as written in their records, the Bouncello. Of this treaty, not one article was observed by the Mahrattas. Mr. Mostyn was therefore deputed in 1766, to conclude some settlement, and obtained an obligation for two lacks of rupees, with a promise on the part of the Dessaye, to refrain from further aggressions, on condition that the Bombay government should restore Rairee. The money could only be raised by a mortgage on the revenues of the district of Vingorla, for thirteen years; and to induce the mortgagee, Wittoojee Koomptee, to advance the stipulated sum, Mr. Mostyn, in addition to two hostages procured from Waree, was obliged to promise that a small factory should be established, and the English flag hoisted, under the protection of a few Sepoys, to be left in the fort of Vingorla. This arrangement being concluded, Rairee was restored in the end of 1766. A very short time, however, had elapsed, when the hostages made their escape, and the agents of Wittoojee Koomptee were driven from the stations where they were collecting the revenue. Much remonstrance and negotiation followed, but nothing specific was effected. At last, when the thirteen years expired, the Sawunts, although they had prevented the mortgagee from recovering the revenue, demanded restitution of the district, which being refused, they attacked and took Vingorla, on the 4th June 1780, with a considerable quantity of private, and some public property, belonging to the English. The piracies of the Sawunts of Waree were henceforth renewed, and the marriage of Kem Sawunt to Luximee Bye*, the niece of Mahadajee Sindia, although a connection more splendid than honourable, encreased their arrogance, especially whilst the English were too much occupied to send a force against them. The Raja of Kolapoor seeing the depredations of the Sawunts escape with impunity, returned to his former habits; and thus piracy became as prevalent as ever. Complaints on the subject were made by the English to Mahadajee Sindia, who promised to oblige his relations to restore their captures; and the Raja of Kolapoor was also induced to promise a liquidation of all balances, and to abstain from further aggressions on the English. The conditions were not enforced, and, of course, such temporizing measures only encouraged a repetition of robbery and insult. In the end of the year 1789 the English had resolved to adopt more active measures, and had determined to crush those depredators; but in their extreme anxiety at that time, to avoid giving offence to the Poona court, a doubt suddenly arose as to the propriety of attacking the Raja of Kolapoor: for so ignorant were they, at this late period, of the existing relations in the Mahratta state, that they supposed him a dependant of the Peishwa. When the question was referred to Nana Furnuwees, he foresaw, as he conceived, an opportunity of drawing in the Kolapoor state to seek the Peishwa's protection, and, ultimately, to yield obedience to the Poona government. Accordingly, by Nana's address, the Raja was at first induced to accept the Peishwa's mediation; but afterwards suspecting the design, and hearing of the hostilities in which the English were about to be engaged with Tippoo, he suddenly revoked his consent, and piracy was never more frequent on the coast of Malabar, than during the war with Mysore. It was an attempt to mediate between the Bombay government and the Sawunts of Waree, that led the former to accuse Sindia of the improper interference to which we have alluded. However, some compromise, through Sindia, was agreed on with respect to the Sawunts, and an armament was prepared against the Kolapoor Raja in 1792. But the expedition never took place, as in consequence of his offering indemnification to individuals, promising to pay the balance due to the Company on or before January 1795, granting permission to establish factories at Malwan and Kolapoor, and tendering the humblest apologies for his misconduct, the numerous aggressions he had committed were once more overlooked, and a treaty was concluded with him, on the terms he thus proposed. But no benefit resulted from it; on the contrary, in the ensuing year there were complaints not only against the Raja of Kolapoor, but against the Sawunts, Angria, and Dhoolup, for the capture or plunder of British ships; and it is no slight stigma on the British Indian administration, that this system of piracy was not finally suppressed until the year 1812.

* Luximee Bye was the daughter of Tookajee Sindia.

CHAP. VI.

FROM A. D. 1794, TO A. D. 1795.

Reflections on the preceding details, and on the condition of the Mahrattas as a military nation at this period. — Their claims on Nizam Ally occasion a temporary union of the chiefs. — Course of policy adopted by the English, in the negotiation which preceded the war between the Mahrattas and Nizam Ally. — Discussions between the Courts of Poona and Hyderabad — war declared — assembly of the armies respectively — march to oppose each other — skirmish in which the Moghuls obtain some advantage — battle of Kurdla — extraordinary discomfiture of the Moghul army. — Submission of Nizam Ally, who surrenders the person of his minister, cedes large tracts of territory, and promises to pay three krores of rupees. — Anecdote of the young Peishwa. — Nizam Ally offended at the neutrality of the English, whose influence at Hyderabad is likely to be wholly superseded by a French party. — Unexpected rebellion of the prince Ali Jah, occasions the recal of the English battalions. — The rebellion suppressed by the exertions of M. Raymond — Movements of the Mahrattas during the insurrection. — No proof of their having been in any manner accessary to the rebellion. — Nana Furnuwees at the summit of power, when his anxiety to preserve it, brings on an unforeseen catastrophe.

A. D. 1794.

THE details in the last chapter, together with much of the preceding narrative, may tax the patience of the reader, but are, for the most part, absolutely necessary to elucidate our subject, and to afford a just view of the numerous authorities and interests which existed at this period among the Mahrattas. The empire founded by Sivajee now covered a vast space; and had it been possible to combine its powers, to direct advantageously the peculiar genius of its people, and to render its various parts subservient to its general strength, the Mahrattas might still have extended their conquests, and a persevering predatory warfare would probably have arrested the rapid rise of the British nation in India. But the causes which drove the Mahrattas to predatory habits, and the circumstances which allured them to conquest, no longer existed, nor had they any chief whose authority was sufficient to unite them. They now lived under governments of their own, which were generally mild; the executive authorities, even if administered by persons tyrannically disposed, were not so powerful as to become arbitrarily oppressive, but they were at the same time too feeble to call forth all the resources which smaller states, better organized, could have commanded. The Mahrattas were still a military people; some member of every peasant's family, and sometimes the fourth or fifth of a whole village had carried arms. Persons, once employed, were generally ready to return to the service when required, but pitched battles and regular warfare were unsuited to their genius; the Mahratta cavalry when accustomed to depend on regular infantry and cannon, lost their former surprising activity and confidence on distant enterprizes; even their courage, which, as a national virtue was never very conspicuous, had fallen below its ordinary level, and whilst some among them admired the wisdom of Mahadajee Sindia, and extolled the advantages to be attained by disciplined armies and artillery, others, as we have already mentioned, more justly predicted, from the same cause, the certain overthrow of the Hindoo power.

The great object, however, of preserving the supremacy of the Peishwa, and of giving to the Mahratta nation that common excitement to action, founded on the immediate gratification of self-interest, became, for a short period, a point of much less difficulty than might have been anticipated. This tendency to union proceeded from the existing claims on Nizam Ally; in the settlement of which all the Mahratta chiefs were taught to expect a part; the death of Sindia left the entire management to Nana Furnuwees, and the English adopted a neutral policy on the occasion.

We have before noticed the nature of the claims on Nizam Ally. They were outstanding balances for a series of years, on account of Chouth and Surdeshmookhee. Discussions on the subject had been occasionally agitated by the Mahrattas for upwards of ten years; but the alliance in which they had been associated against Tippoo, had enabled Nizam Ally to procrastinate, and prevented the Mahrattas from insisting on a settlement of their affairs. In 1791 Govind chiefly regarding contributions unjustly exacted, and the revenues of different places improperly taken, or withheld by the Mahrattas. He also demanded reparation on account of damage sustained by the inroads of Pindharees residing within the Peishwa's boundary. To all which, full and satisfactory replies, drawn up with remarkable clearness and ability by Nana Furnuwees, were promptly returned, followed by a set of articles, twenty-eight in number, demanding the adjustment of the Mahratta claims, some of which Nana proved to have existed since 1774. Nizam Ally was compelled to acknowledge some of these demands; others he evaded: but he promised in general terms to appoint some persons to settle the whole, as soon as the war with Tippoo had terminated; hoping, by that time, to obtain the interposition of the English.*
(1791.) Rao Kallay and Govind Rao Pingley, the Peishwa's envoys at the court of Hyderabad, formally requested that Nizam Ally would appoint commissioners for investigating and adjusting the claims of their master. After considerable discussion, Nizam Ally delivered to these envoys, a set of demands, under thirty-four separate heads,

(1792.) At the conclusion of the war, Lord Cornwallis did endeavour to effect a treaty of guarantee, founded on that article of the alliance which regarded the assistance to be offered by the contracting parties, in case of an attack upon any one of them by Tippoo, believing, that by such a treaty, he should render a general benefit to all parties, and secure the peace of India. But it was hardly to be supposed that any Indian statesman could appreciate such a design; and accordingly each of the native courts interpreted the proposal as it appeared to affect their own interests. The Nizam saw in it a disposition to assist him, and hoped to realize his meditated scheme of raising a barrier between himself and the Mahrattas, so that he might not only resist their future encroachments, but evade their present demands; at all events he had no doubt of obtaining a settlement, such as Hyder had effected with the Mahrattas, by paying a fixed tribute; and from which Tippoo, by the late treaty, was entirely absolved. The Mahrattas, on the other hand, viewed the proposal as an arrogant assumption of authority on the part of the British government, and it excited their jealousy, both as affecting their political consequence, and interrupting the settlement of their established dues. On the propriety of resisting this interposition both Mahadajee Sindia and Nana Furnuwees concurred; but they differed in their opinions with regard to the supposed designs of the English. Sindia conjectured that they projected an alliance with Nizam Ally for the purpose of obtaining the command of the Nizam's resources, and turning them against the Mahrattas; in consequence of which, for a short time previous to his death, he carried on a friendly correspondence with Tippoo Sultan. Nana Furnuwees, although he did not perceive the benevolent purpose by which Lord Cornwallis was actuated, took a more correct view of the subject, in supposing that the English, though desirous of becoming umpires, would not risk a war unless to save the Hyderabad state from being subverted; such a conquest, however, even in subsequent success, Nana Furnuwees never ventured to contemplate. When the treaty of guarantee was submitted to the court of Poona, Mahadajee Sindia would have rejected it at once, but Nana, being anxious to keep well with the English as a check on Sindia, without giving a direct refusal, prolonged the discussion, although with no intention of assenting to what was proposed.

* Mahratta MS. and original papers.

(1793.) Sir John Shore succeeded to the charge of the government of British India, on the departure of the Marquis Cornwallis in August 1793. Nizam Ally had supposed the latter so intent on effecting the treaty of general guarantee, that he concealed the deep interest he felt in the success of the negotiation of Poona, until he saw the prospect of its failure. He then used every argument, and held forth every inducement in his power, to obtain a separate treaty of guarantee for himself. Sir John Shore, however, did not think it adviseable to compel the Mahrattas to accept the mediation of the British nation, and adhered to a system of neutrality, for a variety of reasons which it is unnecessary to enter upon. We need only remark, that whatever might have been the apparant advantage of the governor-general's interference, if it had enabled Nizam Ally to effect his evasive purposes, it must have been recorded as an injustice to the Mahrattas.

From the period when the demands of the Mahrattas were formally renewed, whilst negotiations for the treaty of guarantee were in progress, Nizam Ally, probably without imagining that actual hostilities would take place, had been increasing his military force. A body of regular infantry which, during the war with Tippoo, had consisted of two battalions under a respectable French officer named Raymond, were increased to twenty-three battalions. His army was much augmented after Mahadajee Sindia's death, and he hoped, in consequence of that event, the Mahrattas might be easily satisfied, or successfully resisted, even if he should not be able to obtain the interposition of the English. * When the envoy Govind Rao Kallay † renewed his master's demands, he produced a detailed statement, showing a balance in his favour of nearly two krores and sixty lacks, or twenty-six millions of rupees. Warm discussions took place between the envoy and Musheer Ool Moolk, when at last the former was told, in public durbar, that Nana Furnuwees must himself attend at the court of Hyderabad, in order to afford an explanation of the different items of their intricate claims. The envoy replied, "Nana Furnuwees is much engaged, how can he come?" "How can he come?" re-echoed Musheer Ool Moolk, "I will soon show how he shall be brought to the presence." This menace was considered a sufficient declaration, and although negotiations continued till the last, both parties prepared to decide their differences by the sword.

The war, whilst still at a distance, was extremely popular amongst the Moghuls; the grand army under Nizam Ally's personal command, was assembled at Beder, and the camp exhibited much bustle and animation. The most vaunting threats were constantly heard from the ill-appointed dis-

* Mahratta MSS. and English records.

† He was still alive when I left India in January 1823.

orderly soldiery. Poona was to be pillaged and burned, the dancing girls already sung the triumphs of their army, and even the prime minister declared, in a public assembly, that "the Moghuls should now be freed from Mahratta encroachments; that they should recover Beejapoor and Candeish, or they would never grant peace, until they had despatched the Peishwa to Benares, with a cloth about his loins, and a pot of water in his hand, to mutter incantations on the banks of the Ganges." *

The minister at Poona was soon enabled to collect a very great army. No events had taken place since Sindia's death, except such as appeared favourable to Nana's power, and the prospect of sharing in the expected advantages brought to his standard all the chiefs whose attendance was important. Doulut Rao Sindia and Tookajee Holkar were already at Poona, and the Raja of Berar had set out to join. Govind Rao Gaekwar sent a detachment of his troops; the great southern Jagheerdars, composing the Bramin families of Putwurdhun and Rastia, the Bramin Jagheerdars of Mallygaom and Vinchoor, the Pritee Needhee, the Punt Suchew, the Mahratta Mankurees, Nimbalkur, Ghatgay, Chowan, Duflay, Powar, Thorat, and Pahtunkur, with many others less conspicuous, attended the summons. But this was the last time the chiefs of the Mahratta nation assembled under the authority of their Peishwa.

(December.) Nizam Ally was first in the field, and slowly advanced from Beder along the banks of the Manjera, toward the Mah-

* Persian and Mahratta MSS.

ratta frontier. The Peishwa quitted Poona
A.D. 1795. in January, and his army marched at the same time, but by different routes, for the convenience of forage. There were upwards of one hundred and thirty thousand horse and foot in the Mahratta army, exclusive of ten thousand Pindharees. Of this force upwards of one half were either paid from the Peishwa's treasury, or were troops of Jagheerdars, under his direct control. Doulut Rao Sindia's force was more numerous and more efficient than that of any other chieftain, although the greater part of his army remained in Hindoostan and Malwa. Jooba Bukhshee commanded immediately under Doulut Rao, and had lately joined him with a reinforcement; — the whole consisted of twenty-five thousand men, of whom ten thousand were regular infantry under De Boigne's second in command, Monsieur Perron. Rughoojee Bhonslay mustered 15,000 horse and foot; Tookajee Holkar had only ten thousand, but of these, two thousand were regulars under Dudrenec, and most of the Pindharees were followers of Holkar. — Pureshram Bhow had seven thousand men.

Nana Furnuwees consulted the chief officers separately.* He appointed Pureshram Bhow to act as commander-in-chief. The Pindharees and some other horse were ordered on to plunder in the neighbourhood of the Moghul camp, and destroy their forage; the heavy baggage, properly protected, remained one march in the rear, and the best of the horse with the regular infantry supported by upwards of one hundred and fifty pieces of cannon, were sent forward to attack Nizam Ally, who with an army amounting in all to one hundred and ten thousand men, advanced towards Kurdla and descended the Mohree Ghaut; a body of the Peishwa's household troops under Baba Rao, son of the deceased Hurry Punt Phurkay, attacked the Moghuls when descending the Ghaut and being driven off with some loss, Nizam Ally on the same evening sat in durbar and received nuzurs (March 11.) of congratulation on his victory. On the ensuing day, when the Moghuls were on their march from Kurdla to Purinda, the Mahrattas appeared on their right, and were soon perceived to be in great force. Nizam Ally halted his own elephant, sent off his baggage to the left, and directed Assud Alee Khan with the cavalry, supported by seventeen thousand regular infantry under Raymond, to attack the Mahratta army. Pureshram Bow prepared to receive them; he took his own station in the centre with the Peishwa's and Holkar's troops; Rughoojee Bhonslay commanded the right wing, and Doulut Rao's army formed the left. Pureshram Bhow rode forward to reconnoitre, supported by Baba Rao Phurkay and Khassee Rao, the son of Tookajee Holkar. He had only advanced a short distance when he was suddenly charged by a body of Patans, under Lal Khan, a native of Baloochistan, who displayed great personal energy, cut down several men, and, with his own hand, unhorsed and wounded Pureshram Bhow. But Hurry Punt Putwurdhun, the Bhow's eldest son, seeing his father fall, instantly attacked the aggressor and killed him on the spot. The Patans, however, did not desist on the loss of their leader: being well supported by Alif Khan, the son of the Nabob of Kurnoul, and Sulabut Khan the son of Ismael Khan, nabob of Elichpoor, they persevered until the advanced party of the Mahrattas gave way, and were driven back in such confusion, that they communicated a panic to a great portion of their army, and thousands fled precipitately from the field. Baba Rao Phurkay, though in charge of the Juree Putka, seemed about to follow the fugitives, but was prevented by Jooba Bukhshee, who rode up, reproached him as a coward, and told him if he sought a place of safety he would find it behind Sindia's troops.

* The memoranda in his own hand-writing of the different opinions, were found in the Poona Records. He seems to have adopted the plans of Jooba Bukhshee and Tookajee Holkar.

By this time the regular battalions on both sides had approached within musket-shot of each other, and the Moghul cavalry were advancing to the support of their infantry with apparent steadiness, when Rughoojee Bhonslay assailed them with a shower of rockets, at the same moment that they received the fire of thirty-five pieces of cannon, judiciously placed on an eminence by Perron. In the course of a very few minutes the whole of the cavalry were put to the rout; but Raymond's infantry stood their ground, and had even obtained some advantage over Perron's battalions, when Raymond, by repeated and peremptory orders, was compelled to follow Nizam Ally, who had already retreated towards Kurdla. By the time the detached portions of the Moghul army had been made acquainted with their leader's intention, the sun had set, and darkness soon augmented the general confusion of the troops. Shots still continued to be exchanged in different directions after the night fell, and few men, except those of the half-disciplined battalions of Raymond, could find their own particular division. At last, the multitude, worn out by fatigue and vociferation, gradually sunk to rest, or lay down to await the return of day. But in the stillness of night, a small patrole of Mahrattas in search of water for their horses, came by chance to a rivulet, where lay a party of Moghuls, who, discovering what they were, instantly fired upon them. Raymond's sentries, being in the neighbourhood, also fired, when their whole line, who lay on their arms, with their muskets loaded as they had retreated, started from their sleep, and instantly fired a sort of irregular volley. The alarm which such a discharge of musketry occasioned, in the state of the Moghul army at that moment, may be conceived. The uproar suddenly became greater than ever, and many of Raymond's Sepoys, seized with the general panic, quitted their ranks and mingled in the confusion. At last the moon rose, and Nizam Ally, in perfect consternation, sought refuge within the walls of Kurdla, a very small fort surrounded by hills. Most of his troops fled, plundering the baggage of their own army as they went off: but they were not allowed to carry away this ill-gotten spoil unmolested; the Mahratta Pindarees overtook them next day, and, without experiencing the slightest opposition, stripped the panic-struck fugitives of every thing.

The Mahrattas advancing in the morning, found guns, stores, and baggage, and all the usual wreck of an army, strewing the ground; but their surprize was still greater on perceiving Nizam Ally shut up in Kurdla, and about one tenth of the original number of his troops lying round the fort. No people are more active and vigilant than Mahrattas on such occasions; their most distant parties soon heard of this joyful intelligence, and came swarming, "to plunder the Moghuls," whom in a short time they had completely enclosed, and on the ensuing day opened batteries, which commanded the fort as well as the position of the troops. Nizam Ally endured this hopeless exposure for two days, but, on the morning of the 15th March, he solicited and obtained a cessation of arms. The preliminary demand made by the Mahrattas was the surrender of the minister, Musheer Ool Moolk, that amends might thus be made for the insult offered to the Peishwa, in threatening to seize Nana Furnuwees. They next exacted territorial cessions, extending along the frontier from the district of Purinda on the south, to the Taptee river on the north, comprehending the fort of Doulutabad, and such part of those districts, formerly conquered by Sewdasheo Rao Bhow, in 1760, as had been restored to Nizam Ally. Three krores of rupees were promised on account of arrears of revenue and expences of the war: besides which, by a separate agreement, Nizam Ally ceded territory yielding three lacks and eighteen thousand rupees, in lieu of Rughoojee Bhonslay's claims for Ghasdana, in Gungthuree, estimated at three and a half lacks annually. Nizam Ally likewise promised to pay up the arrears due to Rughoojee Bhonslay, amounting to twenty-nine lacks, and to collect their respective shares of revenue in Berar, according to ancient usage, for all which the Peishwa afterwards became Rughoojee's guarantee.

It was with extreme reluctance that Nizam Ally agreed to surrender the person of his minister. Musheer Ool Moolk urged him to the measure, especially, as under the circumstances in which they found themselves, they did not consider the other conditions so immoderate as might have been expected. The minister was delivered over to a party of two hundred Mahrattas, by whom he was escorted to their camp. The Peishwa met him at the outskirts, and received him with distinction, but his person was carefully guarded. The Mahrattas were rejoiced to excess by this triumph, and a remark of the young Peishwa, when rallied by Nana Furnuwees on the melancholy which his countenance betrayed at the time of Musheer Ool Moolk's arrival, was as just, as from him it was interesting. "I grieve," said he, "to observe such degeneracy as there must be, on both sides, when such a disgraceful submission has been made by the Moghuls, and our soldiers are vaunting of a victory, obtained without an effort." There were scarcely two hundred men lost by both those two great armies in the battle, though a considerable number of the Moghuls were killed in the subsequent confusion, and during the time they were surrounded; but to this day, it is one of the great boasts of the old Sillidars in the Mahratta villages, that they were present in the glorious field of Kurdla.

During the action, the British envoys at the respective courts of Nizam Ally, and the Peishwa, were in the neighbourhood. Nizam Ally was much incensed against the English for their neutrality, which he considered an abandonment of promised friendship. On his return to Hyderabad, he dismissed their two battalions, and ordered a great increase to the corps of Monsieur Raymond, assigning districts for their maintenance, in the same manner as Sindia had done. The influence of the English was further diminished, by the captivity of Musheer Ool Moolk, a great friend to their nation, and it was likely to be wholly superseded, by the growing power of the French party, when an event occurred which induced Nizam Ally to recal their battalions, and the intercourse formerly subsisting was gradually renewed. The event alluded to, was nothing less than the rebellion of Nizam Ally's eldest son, Ali Jah, who, from the time of the convention at Kurdla, had been actively engaged in a conspiracy, the ring-leaders of which were all of the party most inimical to Musheer Ool Moolk, and the English interests.

On the night of the 28th June, Ali Jah quitted Hyderabad, pretending to be forcibly carried off by a Mahratta, named Sewdasheo Riddey, for the purpose of obtaining the authority of his name in raising an insurrection. He was soon joined by many of his partizans, and took the route of Beder, of which fortress, and several other places of less consequence, he obtained possession. The season of the year was unfavourable to his success; but the vast body of unemployed horsemen in the country (fifty thousand of the Kurdla fugitives having been discharged by Nizam Ally in one day), rendered the insurrection extremely alarming, especially as several officers of rank joined the prince, and Tippoo, as was given out, had promised to support him.

M. Raymond undertook to suppress this rebellion. He followed the prince to Beder, pursued him to Aurungabad, took him prisoner, and was bringing him to Hyderabad; but Ali Jah, unable to face his father, put an end to his existence by poison, before they reached the capital.

On the return of the Peishwa to Poona, Nana Furnuwees was employed in distributing the late acquisitions*, and in settling various affairs with the different chiefs. Pureshram Bhow and Rughoojee Bhonslay remained in the neighbourhood of the capital, but Holkar and Sindia encamped at some distance, the former at Jejoory, and the latter at Jamgaom, until news arrived of Ali Jah's rebellion, when they repaired to Poona, with what view is not ascertained, nor is there any proof that the Mahrattas were instrumental to the rebellion, although it was suspected by Nizam Ally, and has been affirmed by Moghul historians.

* The whole of the particulars of this distribution were found amongst the Poona records; but much confusion having subsequently arisen, the intended arrangements were never entirely completed.

By the middle of September, Doulut Rao had obtained his audience of leave, and proceeded to Jamgaom, on his route to Hindoostan;—Pureshram Bhow had returned to the family Jagheer at Tasgaom;—Holkar continued at Poona, where Rughoojee Bhonslay also remained until the middle of October, when he was dismissed with great honour, receiving new sunnuds for a portion of territory, lying on the south side of the Nerbuddah, which had been originally assigned to his grandfather by Ballajee Bajee Rao, in 1750, but twelve of the districts* had not yet been conquered from the chiefs, who, in the confusion that followed the decline of the Moghul empire, had become independent.†

Nana Furnuwees was now at the summit of prosperity; without the intervention of a foreign power, he had obtained every object of his ambition. Doulut Rao Sindia was favourably disposed towards him, and his ministers and officers were more intent on forwarding their own particular views in the government of their young master, than in schemes for controlling the Poona court. Tookajee Holkar had become imbecile, both in mind and body, and his officers were subservient to Nana. Rughoojee Bhonslay was completely secured in his

* These were 1st. Bachaee. 2d. Beechea. 3d. Burgee. 4th. Bhowangurh. 5th. Sypoor Choureeagurh. 6th. Khooreybharee. 7th. Kuthooteea. 8th. Pullahoo. 9th. Dujwurdha. 10th. Mookundpoor. 11th. Surnalpoor. And 12th. Ramgurh.

† This chapter is on the authority of original Mahratta papers, Persian and Mahratta MSS., and English records.

interests, and the Bramin Jagheerdars were of his party. The Peishwa's government had thus every prospect of regaining the tone and vigour it had possessed under the great Mahdoo Rao, but Nana's fondness of power, and his anxiety to preserve it, brought on a catastrophe which speedily undermined his authority, overturned the labours of his life, and terminated his days in trouble and in misery.

CHAP. VII.

FROM A. D. 1795, TO A. D. 1796.

Nana Furnuwees — his conduct towards Mahdoo Rao — the Raja of Satara — and the family of the deceased Rugonath Rao. — The sons of Rugonath Rao confined in the fort of Sewnerce. — Bajee Rao the particular object of Nana's jealousy. — Bajee Rao's character at this period — his accomplishments. — The young Peishwa desirous of cultivating his friendship. — Nana advises him to beware — Bajee Rao corrupts one of Nana's agents and opens a communication with the Peishwa — his insidious messages. — Discovery — its consequences. — Mahdoo Rao throws himself from the terrace of his palace, and dies. — Nana endeavours to exclude Bajee Rao from the succession. — Bajee Rao gains over Balloba Tattya and Sindia to his interests. — Nana Furnuwees determines on anticipating Sindia, and brings Bajee Rao to Poona — Sindia influenced by his minister marches on the capital — Nana withdraws from Poona. — Balloba Tattya resolves to set aside Bajee Rao, and raise Chimnajee Appa to the Musnud, with Pureshram Bhow as his minister. — Nana Furnuwees being consulted by Pureshram Bhow, assents with seeming cordiality to the proposal. — Nana's proceedings. — Suspicions of Balloba Tattya. — Conspiracy matured, and Bajee Rao confined. — Chimnajee Appa declared Peishwa. — Sindia's pecuniary distress — plan for alleviating it — enlargement of Musheer Ool Moolk. — The new administration pretend a wish that Nana Furnuwees should take a principal share in the government. — Nana discovers their treachery. — Desperate situation of Nana — evinces great ability in extricating himself, and circumventing his enemies. — His interests in unison with those of Bajee Rao. — Rise of Ballajee Koonjur. — Nana discloses a part of his plans to Bajee Rao. — Rise of Shirzee Rao Ghatgay. — Nana Furnuwees gains Sindia to his views. — The imprudent proceedings of Bajee Rao's party bring on a premature discovery of a part of the conspiracy. — Bajee Rao sent off towards Hindoostan — enters into a compact with Shirzee Rao Ghatgay. — Proceedings at Poona. — Schemes of Nana Furnuwees matured — excites the Raja of Kolapoor to fall upon the districts of Pureshram Bhow. — Treaty of Mhar. — Treaty with Rughoojee Bhonslay. — Sindia arrests Balloba Tattya. — Pureshram Bhow accidentally forewarned of his danger — flees from Poona — is overtaken and made prisoner. — Nana Furnuwees obtains the guarantee of Nizam Ally and of Sindia, before trusting himself at Poona. — Bajee Rao proclaimed Peishwa. — The adoption of Chimnajee Appa declared illegal. — Chimnajee Appa appointed to the government of Guzerat, with Aba Sheelookur as his deputy.

A. D. 1795. ALTHOUGH the young Peishwa was now in his twenty-first year, Nana Furnuwees relaxed nothing of the rigid tutelage in which he had reared him; and the old minister became more than ever watchful of all the state prisoners, whose liberty might endanger his own power. He was apprehensive that Mahadajee Sindia had intended to use the Raja of Satara as an instrument in overthrowing the Bramin government, and he now treated the object of his dread with more than ordinary severity, by diminishing his allowances, and prohibiting his relations from visiting him in the fort.

The family of Rugonath Rao were kept at Kopergaom, until the year 1793, when they were removed to Anundwelee, near Nassuck, as a place more agreeable to the widow Anundee Bye, whose health was on the decline. In the month of April of the succeeding year, she died. The sons, Bajee Rao and Chimnajee Appa, with the adopted son of Rugoba, Amrut Rao, remained at Anundwelee; until upon the prospect of hostilities with Nizam

Ally, they were conveyed to the hill fort of Sewneree, where once secured, Nana Furnuwees at the termination of the war, retained them in close custody, under two officers in whom he confided, Rughoo Punt Ghorebulay, and Bulwunt Rao Nagonath.

The condition of these young men excited strong feelings of commiseration, even in the minds of those who judged it necessary; and others, swayed chiefly by their feelings, generally the larger portion of any community, execrated the conduct of the minister as cruel, vindictive, and unjustifiable. Distinct from either of these classes was the old faction of Rugoba, and other persons, wholly discontented, who endeavoured, by every means, to exalt the character of the prisoners, and lower the reputation of Nana Furnuwees. But these indications of the public mind only increased the wary circumspection of the minister, to whom the elder of the legitimate sons of Rugonath Rao early became an object of jealousy. Graceful in his person, with a handsome and youthful countenance which ensured favourable impressions, Bajee Rao had the mildest manner, and an address so insinuating, that he gained the good will of all who approached him. His bodily and mental accomplishments were equally extolled; at the age of nineteen, he was an excellent horseman, skilled in the use of the sword and bow, and allowed to be the most expert spearsman in Gungthuree. He was deeply read in the Shasters, particularly in such parts as regard the observance of cast; and, of his age, no Pundit so learned had been known in Maharashtra.

The young Peishwa, so far from being jealous of the superior accomplishments of his cousin, was pleased at hearing him commended, and frequently expressed a strong desire to procure his enlargement, and cultivate his friendship. In vain did the cautious Nina Furnuwees advise him to beware of the sapling, however comely, which sprung from the weakness of Rugonath Rao, and the wickedness of Anundee Bye, the greater the restraint, the stronger the inclination; but Mahdoo Rao was watched, and Bajee Rao was a close prisoner. The latter, however, having discovered the favourable disposition of the Peishwa towards him, and having at last gained Bulwunt Rao Nagonath, he conveyed a message with assurances of respect and attachment, adding, that "he was in confinement at Sewneree and the Peishwa under the control of his minister;—that their condition as prisoners was nearly similar, but that their minds and affections were free, and should be devoted to each other;—that their ancestors had distinguished themselves, and that the time would arrive, when his cousin and himself might hope to emulate their deeds, and raise for themselves, a lasting and honourable name." This message was the commencement of a correspondence, which began shortly after the return of the army to Poona, and continued for some time, till at length it came to the knowledge of Nana, who betrayed a rage, altogether unusual, at the discovery. He immediately threw Bulwunt Rao Nagonath into a hill fort loaded with irons, severely reproached Mahdoo Rao, and rendered the strictness of Bajee Rao's confinement far more rigid than before. Mahdoo Rao already galled by restraint, and irritated by the insiduous messages of his cousin, was overwhelmed with anger, disappointment, and grief; he refused, absolutely, to quit his apartment, and his absence from his usual place at the Durbar, was imputed to fever. At the Dussera, which happened on the 22d October, and was conducted with great splendour, he appeared amongst his troops, and in the evening, received his chiefs and the ambassadors at his court in his accustomed manner; but his spirit was wounded to desperation, a fixed melancholy seized on his mind, and on the morning of the 25th (Oct. 25.) October, he deliberately threw himself from a terrace in his palace, fractured two of his limbs, and was much wounded by the tube of a fountain on which he fell. He survived for two days, and having particularly desired that Bajee Rao should be placed on the musnud, he expired in the arms of Baba Rao Phurkay, for whom he had entertained a strong affection.

The death of Mahdoo Rao, was an event of such awful importance to the political existence of Nana Furnuwees, that the consideration of its consequences withdrew his mind from the deep affliction, which the untimely end of that amiable young prince would have disposed him to indulge. He carefully suppressed the request of Mahdoo Rao in his cousin's favour, dreading that by such an arrangement, he should not only be deprived of power, but perhaps of liberty and of life. His first care, on ascertaining the nature of the accident, was to send off notice to Pureshram Bhow, requiring his immediate attendance at Poona with every man he could collect; and the day (Oct. 28.) after the Peishwa's death, Rughoojee Bhonslay and Doulut Rao Sindia were recalled for the purpose of deliberating on the succession to the musnud. Tookajee Holkar, being in Poona, immediately visited the minister, who not only made use of all the popular prejudice existing against the name of Rugonath Rao, but described the enmity, which from the first dawning of reason, had been instilled into Bajee Rao by his mother, against the whole of those officers who had now any experience in the affairs of the state; he showed the danger to be apprehended from the connection between his family and the English, dwelt upon the happy state of prosperity and union which then prevailed in the Mahratta empire, and enlarged on the increasing benefits to be expected, if the existing course of policy were carefully preserved. In these sentiments Holkar concurred, and the disposition of the other chiefs being sounded, Nana ventured to disclose his plan; by suggesting that Yessooda Bye, the widow of the deceased prince, who had not yet attained the age of womanhood, should adopt a son, in whose name he proposed to conduct the government as heretofore. Some objections were raised by Balloba Tattya, one of the principal ministers of Sindia, but they were overruled by his colleague in office, Jooba Bukhshee, who observed, that their master was too young to be able to judge for himself, but he thought his safest course was to be guided by the experience of the elder chiefs, and to follow the example of Tookajee Holkar. At length, after some discussion, the consent of the principal chiefs was obtained in writing, and in the month of January they again retired from Poona.

A. D. 1796.

In the preceding November, Mr. Malet, the resident on the part of the British government, had made a formal application to the minister for the purpose of ascertaining on what footing the Mahratta government was to be conducted. Nana Furnuwees replied, that the widow of the late Peishwa was to be considered head of the empire, until the great officers of the nation had deliberated upon the succession, when the result should be communicated. He now therefore intimated their resolution that the widow should adopt a son, to which no objection on the part of Mr. Malet could be offered, and nothing was now apparently wanting, except the selection of a child, and the performance of the ceremony. But Bajee Rao, who had obtained information of the whole proceeding, by which he was thus unjustly to be deprived of his right, gave a further specimen of his talent for intrigue, by immediately taking advantage of the favourable disposition evinced towards him by Balloba Tattya, opening a correspondence with him, and in a few months gaining him to his cause. This union was the more important to Bajee Rao, as the death of Jooba Bukhshee had taken place a short time before, and on his deathbed he sent for Doulut Rao, and expressed his regret for having advised him to accede to the plan of adoption, whilst a lineal descendant of Ballajee Wishwanath remained. Having secured the prime minister, Bajee Rao next addressed himself to Sindia, offering him four lacks of rupees of territory, and whatever might be the expenses of his troops during the time he should require their aid in asserting his lawful succession to the Musnud. This offer was accepted, a formal agreement was drawn up, but it was scarcely concluded, when the whole was divulged to Nana Furnuwees. In the greatest alarm, that minister instantly summoned Pureshram Bhow, who marched from Tasgaom to Poona with a body of horse in forty-eight hours, a distance of upwards of 120 English miles. After some deliberation, it was resolved to anticipate Sindia's design, to release Bajee Rao, and to declare him Peishwa. Pureshram Bhow accordingly proceeded to the fort of Sewneree, and made his proposals. Amrut Rao advised his brother not to accept them, observing that these offers were but certain indications of Sindia's sincerity. Bajee Rao did not rely on the good will of either party, beyond the dictates of their interests, and, if assured of attaining his object, he would not have hesitated; he, however, urged many objections, though only for the purpose of obtaining satisfactory assurances. With this view, amongst other solemn asseverations, he obliged Pureshram Bhow to hold the tail of a cow, and swear by the holy Godavery, that no deception was intended; after which, he descended from the fort, and accompanied by his brother Chimnajee Appa, set out for his future capital. Amrut Rao by Pureshram Bhow's orders was detained in custody at Sewneree.

Immediately on Bajee Rao's arrival at Poona, he had an interview with Nana Furnuwees, when they mutually promised to bury all traces of former enmity in oblivion; and Bajee Rao, on being assured of the succession, promised to retain Nana at the head of his administration. To this agreement both parties exchanged formal declarations * in writing.

Balloba Tattya on hearing of the step which Bajee Rao had taken, was incensed at his conduct, but determined to counteract the schemes of Nana Furnuwees. He therefore persuaded Sindia, then on the banks of the Godavary, to march on Poona with his whole force — Nana Furnuwees was dismayed; Pureshram Bhow advised him to stand

* The following is a translation of that which was given by Bajee Rao to Nana Furnuwees: —

"In the presence of my God, and from the inmost recesses of my heart, have I rooted out every vestige of any former act; let all your future conduct be guided by the principles of good faith. I will never injure you or yours, by word or deed; by any inward thought or outward act; neither will I allow any other person to do so; on this point I will be inflexible, and will pay no attention to the suggestions of others. I will not allow your reputation to be sullied, and should any one attempt to instil any thing of the kind into my breast, I will point him out to you. I will never release any one from confinement without your advice; all state affairs shall be managed by our conjunct counsel. From this day all your acts are mine: suspicion is wholly eradicated from my heart."

firm, to collect the troops, and to give battle; but Nana, deficient in personal courage, was also sensible of the superiority of Sindia's army; he could not trust Bajee Rao, and he was terrified lest he should fall a prisoner into the hands of Balloba Tattya, by whom, he believed, he should be put to death. Having therefore left Pureshram Bhow with Bajee Rao at Poona, he told the latter, that as Sindia was advancing with intentions hostile only towards himself, he thought the best means of averting ruinous civil dissensions, was for him to retire from business, and withdraw from the capital. He accordingly repaired first to Poorundhur, and afterwards to Satara. Sindia arrived in the neighbourhood of Poona, and had a friendly interview with Bajee Rao; but Balloba Tattya, although he affected to meet him with cordiality, could not forget his behaviour, especially after he had seen Amrut Rao, whom he removed from Sewneree to Jamgaom, but did not restore him to liberty. * After considering various plans, Balloba Tattya, at last resolved to set aside Bajee Rao, and to raise both a minister and a Peishwa of his own; for which purpose he proposed to Pureshram Bhow, through Byhroo Punt Mendlee, that Mahdoo Rao's widow should adopt Chimnajee Appa as her son; that Bajee Rao should be placed in confinement, and that Pureshram Bhow should conduct the administration. Pureshram Bhow had begun to despise Nana Furnuwees for his pusillanimous conduct, but he still so far respected his wisdom, as to ask his opinion. Nana advised him to accept what was proposed, but to take care that Bajee Rao came into his own custody. To this last essential part of the advice, no attention was paid by Pureshram Bhow. Balloba Tattya pretended to be partly influenced in the measure he now pursued, by the hope of rendering it, in some degree, acceptable to Nana Furnuwees, lest the latter, in the present state of Doulut Rao's inexperience, should form some confederacy, by means of the other chiefs, against the house of Sindia. Balloba accordingly, as soon as Nana's assent had been obtained made overtures for a reconciliation, to which the latter made no objections.

* There is no reason assigned for his not having done so.

Nana's own proceedings in the mean time deserve notice. When he quitted Poorundhur and repaired to Satara, he entertained some design of emancipating the Raja, and restoring the old form of the government of Sivajee, as a plan calculated to avert the dissensions that had arisen, and which were likely to increase in the state; but a very few days convinced him of the futility of this scheme. The Raja, in consequence of the treatment he had experienced, had no confidence in him. The Raja's name was sufficiently popular to have brought many of the most warlike Mahratta families to his standard, and to have awakened a powerful interest amongst the descendants of the first followers of Sivajee, residing in the wilds of the Mawuls and Khoras. The Raja, though incapable of conducting state affairs himself, was a man of courage, and several of his relations were fit leaders for any desperate enterprize. But Nana's object was to devise some means of establishing a controlling authority over the chiefs of the empire, not to stir up a power subversive of all order. After a few conferences, he desisted, and retired to Waee, a town in the neighbourhood; but his having entertained such a scheme, was so far fortunate for the Raja, that he was indulged in a little more liberty, and was treated with greater kindness and consideration.

When Nana Furnuwees consented to the proposal of Balloba Tattya, for adopting Chimnajee Appa, it became necessary to obtain the Raja's Khillut of investiture for the new Peishwa; on which occasion, Nana came from Waee to Satara, and on receiving the Khillut, promised, that if he ever had an opportunity, he would endeavour to fulfil the agreement made with Ram Raja in the time of Ballajee Bajee Rao, by putting the present Raja Shao in possession of the territory promised by the treaty of Sangola.

Nana would have proceeded to Poona, but on finding that Pureshram Bhow had allowed Sindia's minister to retain the person of Bajee Rao, he suspected, and with good reason, that the whole was a scheme to entice him into the power of Balloba Tattya; and, therefore, although he forwarded the Khillut, he himself remained at Waee.

Bajee Rao was still ignorant of the plot which had been formed against him, and the manner of disclosing it is too characteristic, not only of the period, but of the future ways of the Poona court, to be omitted. Some demands for money on account of Sindia's expences were made on Bajee Rao, and upon his expressing inability to comply with them, they were urged in a tone which produced altercation, and Sindia, pretending to take offence at the manner of Bajee Rao's refusal, begged permission to return to Hindoostan. Bajee Rao, as had been foreseen, immediately repaired to Sindia's camp for the purpose of privately expostulating; he was there detained in argument until late in the evening, when the conference was suddenly interrupted by intelligence of Pureshram Bhow's having carried off Chimnajee Appa; no one, it was pretended, knew whither, but it was supposed, to Satara. Bajee Rao, alarmed and astonished, begged of Sindia to pursue him; but the uncertainty of their route, the strength of their party, and the darkness of the night were urged against this proposal. A request, however, to be allowed to continue under Sindia's protection during the night, was readily granted, and next day he discovered the snare, upon being advised to remain, as any place beyond the precincts of Sindia's camp was unsafe for his Highness.

In the meantime Pureshram Bhow and Baba Rao Phurkay had merely conveyed Chimnajee Appa into the city of Poona; but Chimnajee positively refused to become a party in the unjust usurpation of his brother's rights, and compulsion only induced him to bear his share in it. He was adopted by the name of Chimnajee Mahdoo Rao, and formally invested as Peishwa on the 26th May.

The pecuniary difficulties of Sindia, and the distress of his army, were not fictitious. Pureshram Bhow, on being appointed minister, had promised to raise money, and for this purpose offered to restore the minister of Nizam Ally, Musheer Ool Moolk, to liberty, on condition of receiving a portion of the balance of three krores of rupees, due by the treaty of Kurdla. Musheer Ool Moolk said he could only use his endeavours; but upon this promise he was released from confinement, permitted to encamp in the environs of the city, and, in a short time, was surrounded by a considerable retinue.

The day after the installation of the new Peishwa, Pureshram Bhow proposed that Nana Furnuwees should come to Poona, meet and be reconciled to Balloba Tattya, and afterwards assume the civil administration in the new Peishwa's government; whilst the command of the troops, and all military arrangements, should remain with himself. In reply to this proposal, Nana Furnuwees requested that Pureshram Bhow's eldest son, Hurry Punt, might be sent to Waee for the purpose of clearly settling some preliminaries; but, instead of coming as an envoy, Hurry Punt crossed the Neera, at the head of four or five thousand chosen horse, a circumstance that in itself naturally excited suspicions, which were strengthened by a secret letter from Baba Rao Phurkay, advising him to seek his own safety, without a moment's delay.

The fortunes of Nana Furnuwees were now, in the general opinion, and perhaps in his own, desperate; but on being forced to abandon half measures, into which he was misled by a timid disposition, the vigour of his judgment, the fertility of his expedients, the extent of his influence, and the combination of instruments which he called into action, surprised all India, and, from his European contemporaries, procured for him the name of "the Mahratta Machiavel."

When he saw the danger imminent, he immediately fled from Waee towards the Concan, blocked up the passes in his rear, threw a strong garrison into Pertabgurh, and, on arriving at the village of Mhar, his first care was to put the fort of Raigurh in the best state of defence. Balloba Tattya proposed that he should be followed up without delay, and offered some of Sindia's regular infantry for the purpose; but Pureshram Bhow, influenced by secret well-wishers of Nana's, objected to the employment of coercive measures, although his hostility to Nana Furnuwees was soon after avowed, by his giving up Nana's Jagheer lands to Sindia, and sequestrating his houses and property in Poona for his own use. The ostensible property, however, of Nana Furnuwees bore but an insignificant proportion to the extent of his concealed wealth. It is a common report that he carried with him, when he quitted Poona, hoards of gold, the accumulated treasures of the Peishwas; but, as already stated on the authority of their accounts, the Peishwas, up to the time of the first Mahdoo Rao, were in debt, and were always embarrassed, so that the riches of Nana Furnuwees, which were, without doubt, considerable, must have been saved during his own administration. His funds were secretly deposited in different places, or lodged in the hands of agents in various parts of India, so that he could command them with promptitude, in case of emergency; but the secret of their deposit, and of his management, remains a mystery, a subject of some curiosity, and the theme of many wonders and impositions amongst the Mahratta vulgar.

The revolution which had taken place, naturally tended to unite Bajee Rao and Nana Furnuwees; and a secret intercourse was carried on between them, through the medium of an individual who afterwards became conspicuous. In the service of Nana Poorundhuree, there was a Mahratta Sillidar, the natural son of the Patell of the village of Wangapoor near Poorundhur, who had contrived to attract the notice of Bajee Rao when he was taken from confinement at Sewneree, and who was afterwards permitted by Nana Poorundhuree, to enter Bajee Rao's service. Ballajee Koonjur, for such was the name of this Sillidar, perceiving the situation of affairs, although he had little opportunity of consulting his master, visited Nana Furnuwees at Mhar, and conveyed the most friendly declarations and assurances on the part of Bajee Rao, begging of Nana to exert himself in their mutual behalf. No excitement to exertion was necessary: Nana Furnuwees had every engine at work. Baba Rao Phurkay, in command of the Peishwa's household troops, had engaged to bring them over to him. Tookajee Holkar's whole power and influence were ready at his signal, and he had opened a negotiation with Sindia, through Ryajee Patell, whom he knew to be inimical to Balloba Tattya, offering to Sindia the Jagheer of Pureshram Bhow Putwurdhun, the fort of Ahmednugur, with territory yielding ten lacks of rupees, on condition that he would place Balloba Tattya in confinement, establish Bajee Rao on the musnud, and return with his army to Hindoostan. Thus far of his plans, Nana Furnuwees communicated to Ballajee Koonjur, for Bajee Rao's information.

This period of the revolution brought many persons into notice, although none so obscure as the individual just mentioned. Of these, one of the most conspicuous was the person employed by Nana Furnuwees to negociate with Ryajee Patell in order to bring over Sindia: the name of this man was Sukaram Ghatgay, of the Kagul family, whose antient title, as already mentioned, was Shirzee Rao. Sukaram, having had a quarrel with his relation Yeswunt Rao Ghatgay, the brother-in-law of the Raja of Kolapoor, concerning the hereditary rights in their native village, they took up arms to assert them. Sukaram being defeated was obliged to fly from the Kolapoor territory, and seek shelter with Pureshram Bhow, into whose service he entered, and afterwards exchanged it for that of Nana Furnuwees, who gave him the command of one hundred horse. When Nana quitted Poona, Sukaram Ghatgay entered Sindia's service, where he obtained a similar command. He was of an active, bold, intriguing disposition; and by his address, had gained the good-will of Ryajee Patell. He was also at this time much courted by Sindia, by reason of the reputed beauty of his daughter, whom Sindia wished to espouse; and Sukaram, who regarded his own aggrandizement more than the dignity of his house, which would be tarnished by his giving a genuine daughter of the Kagulkur Ghatgay to the spurious offspring of the Patells of Kunneirkheir, was pleased with the prospect of the alliance; though, to enhance the favour of ultimate compliance, he raised numerous objections to the match.

By the aid of such an agent, Nana Furnuwees was successful in gaining over Sindia to his cause; and this secret having been communicated to Baba Rao Phurkay and others of the party, they became less circumspect in their preparations. Bajee Rao, in the midst of Sindia's camp, assisted by his father's friend, the veteran Manajee Phakray*, used supplies of money furnished by Nana

* Mr. Tone, who was at Poona during the progress of these intrigues, published three letters from the 18th June to the 19th December, giving an account of the extraordinary affairs by which he was surrounded. I depend on better materials, but I have examined attentively all which that intelligent gentleman wrote respecting the Mahrattas. What he saw may be relied upon;—as to what he heard, I am less surprised that he should have fallen into error, than that he should have obtained information so nearly correct. He describes Mannajee Phakray, as "an officer of high military reputation, and so disfigured with wounds, as to have scarcely the appearance of a human creature." "Manajee," say the old Sillidars of the present day, "was the last of the Mahrattas, and was worthy to wear a bangle on his horse's leg, for he never showed his back to a foe."

Mr. Tone's description of Bajee Rao at this period, except that Bajee Rao was not so old as he supposes, coincides with that of his own countrymen. "Bajee Rao," says Mr. Tone, "is about twenty-five years of age, light complexioned, and rather above the middle size, his person is graceful, and his manner strongly impressive; his countenance is manly, sensible, and majestic."

Furnuwees, in levying troops in that situation. These imprudent proceedings were discovered by Balloba Tattya. Baba Rao Phurkay was seized, and imprisoned in the fort of Chakun, but his carcoon, Naroo Punt Chuckùrdeo, a very active officer, escaped by concealing himself in the camp of Musheer Ool Moolk. Neelkunt Rao Purbhoo and Mallojee Ghorepuray, two chiefs of their party, had a few minutes to prepare for defence; they repulsed the troops sent to apprehend them, and at the head of a few followers, made good their retreat from Poona to the strong range of hills south of the Neera.

Bajee Rao's place of encampment, within Sindia's lines, was surrounded, and water was cut off. The troops he had assembled were permitted to disperse, but Mannajee Phakray enjoined them to meet him in the neighbourhood of Waee, where they assembled accordingly, and were promptly joined by Neelkunt Rao, and Mallojee Ghorepuray. Nana Furnuwees supplied them with money, directed them to take up a position at the Salpee Ghaut, where being assisted by Nana's friend Bujaba Seroolkur in raising troops, they soon collected ten thousand men, upon which they declared for Bajee Rao.

Balloba Tattya, unconscious of the inextricable and extensive toils which Nana was weaving around him, attributed the whole plot to Bajee Rao, and therefore determined to send him off a prisoner to Hindoostan. He was despatched, accordingly, under the care of Sukharam Ghatgay, to whom the command of his escort was entrusted.

But Bajee Rao, aware of the most likely means of gaining Sindia, employed all his eloquence to induce Ghatgay to give his daughter to Sindia in marriage, on condition of Bajee Rao's being elevated to the musnud; and of preventing his being carried out of the Deccan, lest Nana Furnuwees, even if successful, should take advantage of his absence to exclude him from the succession. Ghatgay, at first, declared it to be impossible, but, at last, pretending to be won over, he agreed to give his daughter on the following conditions; — that Bajee Rao should authorize him to promise Sindia two krores of rupees, in ready money, on his becoming Peishwa; that, when Peishwa, he should get him (Ghatgay) appointed Sindia's prime minister; and that he should also endeavour to obtain for him the village of Kagul in Enam. Having assented to these conditions, Bajee Rao feigned sickness, and Ghatgay remained with him on the banks of the Paira.

At Poona, great preparations were going forward. Musheer Ool Moolk was permitted by Pureshram Bhow to raise troops, for the purpose, as the former pretended, of assisting to reduce Nana Furnuwees and the force which had declared for Bajee Rao. Holkar's and Sindia's troops were held in readiness apparently for the same purpose, and after the Dussera, which happened on the 11th October, the regular battalions, in the Peishwa's service, under Mr. Boyd, marched to the Neera bridge, and a brigade of Sindia's regulars proceeded towards Raigurh. These movements were made by Pureshram Bhow himself, or artfully suggested by some conspirators, in order to veil the deception about to be practised on him and Balloba Tattya.

The schemes of Nana Furnuwees were now matured. In addition to what has been explained, he had incited the Raja of Kolapoor to attack the districts of Pureshram Bhow; he had obtained Nizam Ally's approbation of the draft of a treaty, afterwards settled on the 8th October with Musheer Ool Moolk, the basis of which was to be, the establishment of Bajee Rao on the musnud, and his own re-establishment as minister; for which, the territory ceded to the Peishwa, by the convention of Kurdla, was to be restored, and the balance of the stipulated money-payment remitted. The entire remission of the Chouth of Beder was also demanded by Nizam Ally, but Nana Furnuwees replied, that he could not yield that point without the previous sanction of Bajee Rao, to whose approval, indeed, the whole was declaredly subject.*

* As this is the treaty of Mhar mentioned in the treaty of Bassein, the stipulations of which were perhaps not fully understood by the Marquis Wellesley, when, in subsequent negotiations with Bajee Rao, he insisted so particularly on their being recognised, I shall here detail them more particularly.

The preliminary of the treaty sets forth, that confusion having arisen in the affairs of the Peishwa, Nana Furnuwees has removed to Mhar, and for the purpose of restoring order, he, as chief director of the affairs of the Peishwa, calls for the interposition of Nizam Ally, through his prime minister Azim Ool Oomrah (Musheer Ool Moolk) with whom he concludes the following agreement. Nizam Ally is to send an army of 15,000 men, with a train of artillery, to unite with those of Nana and Rughoojee Bhonslay, in restoring Bajee Rao. In this alliance, Nana engages for the neutrality, and even for the

A negotiation with Rughoojee Bhonslay had been equally successful. To him Nana promised fifteen lacks of rupees for his immediate expences; the district of Mundelah, and the fort of Chooreeagurh, with its dependancies. Three thousand horse, which, by treaty, he was bound to furnish when required, were now only to be called for on emergencies. Some other advantages were also held out, and Rughoojee had solemnly promised his support.*

The principal powers having been thus secured, the English having also expressed their approbation of Bajee Rao's being elevated to the musnud, Sindia, on the 27th October, arrested Balloba Tattya, and sent a body of his troops, accompanied by some of those of Musheer Ool Moolk, both parties under the direction of Naroo Punt Chuckurdeo, for the purpose probable co-operation of the English. The territory and the bills for the money-payment exacted from Nizam Ally at Kurdla, to be restored. Nizam Ally's right to certain districts near Delhi, was confirmed. All contested points to be mutually relinquished, and the Mahratta claims settled annually. The Chouth of the Soobeh of Beder being considered as the wutun or private hereditary property of the Peishwa, Nana Furnuwees can only recommend its being ceded to Nizam Ally by Bajee Rao. Two lacks of rupees to be advanced to Nizam Ally for expenses. The English, to be engaged, by Nana Furnuwees, to interpose, in case Tippoo should attack the possessions of Nizam Ally, whilst the army of the latter is employed in the Mahratta territories. Fugitives from the dominions of Nizam Ally to be given up, and Bajee Rao's signature to these articles to be obtained.

(Oct. 27.)

* Copy of the original treaty.

of seizing Pureshram Bhow. Naroo Punt, however, being desirous of apprizing one of his associates, named Pureshram Punt Wydh, wrote him a note, which was carried by mistake to Pureshram Bhow Putwurdhun; the latter, on reading it, instantly got ready a body of horse, and having taken with him Chimnajee Appa, fled with precipitation to Sewneree; but he was quickly pursued, and compelled to surrender. Anund Rao Rastia having become security for his safe custody, he was delivered over to his charge.

Bajee Rao was now brought back, and encamped at Korygaom, on the Beema, eighteen miles from Poona. Amrut Rao and Baba Rao Phurkay were released, and Nana Furnuwees having joined his army at the Salpee Ghaut, the infantry under Mr. Boyd having likewise placed themselves under his orders, he commenced his march for the capital. But on the route, having received a note from Bajee Rao which hinted at the tardiness of his proceedings, he immediately took the alarm, and before he would advance, insisted upon receiving a written declaration from Bajee Rao, that he intended no treachery towards him; and, that in case of desiring to resign his situation as minister, he might be permitted to retire where his person and property would be secure. A treaty of guarantee was at the same time entered into by Nizam Ally and Sindia, agreeing to establish Bajee Rao on the musnud, and to re-instate Nana Furnuwees as prime minister; but they also, with a view of securing themselves, agreed to oblige the latter to fulfil the articles of the respective treaties which he had made with them; an extraordinary oversight on the part of Sindia, who does not appear to have known the particulars of the agreement with Nizam Ally, or at all events to have considered how much he should become a loser by the relinquishment of the territory and arrears of tribute, obtained by the treaty of Kurdla. These preliminaries being adjusted, Nana Furnuwees returned to Poona, and resumed the duties of prime minister on the 25th November. The insignia of investiture having been procured from Satara, Bajee Rao was at last seated on the musnud 4th December 1796. It was declared by a council of Shastrees, that the relationship between the late Peishwa, Mahdoo Rao Narrain, and the sons of Rugonath Rao, prevented the widow of the former from adopting the second cousin of his father; the adoption was therefore declared illegal, and annulled. The Shastrees who had performed the ceremony were expelled. Chimnajee Appa, though he had acted on compulsion, was obliged to undergo some penance to atone for the deed, but he was shortly after appointed by his brother to the government of Guzerat, which was however merely nominal, and the active duties of it were performed by his deputy Aba Shelookur.*

(Nov. 25.)

* When not particularly specified, the whole of the foregoing chapter is on the authority of original Mahratta letters and papers; Bombay records; Mahratta MSS.; and from many conversations with actors in the scenes.

CHAP. VIII.

FROM A. D. 1797, TO A. D. 1798.

New administration. — Army in a disorderly state. — Ahmednugur made over to Sindia, and the conditions of the treaty with Roghoojee Bhonslay fulfilled. — Bajee Rao refuses to ratify the treaty with Nizam Ally — Musheer Ool Moolk suddenly quits Poona in consequence — Nana Furnuwees endeavours to soothe him — Bajee Rao's policy. — Death of Tookajee Holkar — dispute amongst his sons — Sindia espouses the cause of Khassee Rao — Mulhar Rao killed, and the house of Holkar rendered for a time subservient to that of Sindia. — Sindia's arbitrary conduct. — Bajee Rao still popular — his real character little known — proposes ridding himself of both Nana Furnuwees and Sindia — employs the latter to seize the former, and Nana, with most of the principal ministers, is thrown into confinement — the property of Nana and his adherents given up to plunder — outrages and alarms at Poona. — Amrut Rao becomes prime minister. — Sindia espouses the daughter of Ghatgay. — Ghatgay becomes Sindia's prime minister — is empowered to raise the money secretly promised by Bajee Rao, by plundering the inhabitants of Poona — dreadful cruelties. — Amrut Rao proposes to seize and confine Sindia — Bajee Rao approves. — Differences with Hyderabad revived. — Bajee Rao summons Sindia to his presence. — Bajee Rao's weakness and treachery. — Affairs of Satara — a force required in that quarter — Bajee Rao's troops mutiny. — Pureshram Bhow enlarged — raises troops — disperses those of the Raja, but afterwards refuses to disband his army. — Bajee Rao grants him a pardon.

A. D. 1797.

NANA Furnuwees was assisted in the ministry by Trimbuck Rao Pursooree. Naroo Punt Chuckurdeo had chief command of the army, which, from the late dissensions, was in a very disorderly state; and one desperate affray took place in the streets of Poona, between a body of Arabs and a party of Mr. Boyd's Sepoys, in which upwards of a hundred persons were killed, and a great part of the shops and warehouses in the bazar plundered during the tumult.

The fort of Ahmednugur, and the dependant districts, were made over to Sindia as promised, and he was left at liberty to reduce the Jagheer of Pureshram Bhow as he might find opportunity. The articles of agreement with Rughoojee Bhonslay were also fulfilled and he departed for Nagpoor; but Bajee Rao refused to ratify the treaty of Mhar concluded with Nizam Ally, unless greatly modified; in consequence of which, Musheer Ool Moolk quitted Poona, without taking leave of the Peishwa, and returned highly incensed to Hyderabad. There was at that time no envoy at the Nizam's court, Govind Rao Pingley being at Poona, but his agent named Sewdasheo Mankesir,* a person whom we shall hereafter have frequent occasion to notice, and whom Pingley kept at the court of Nizam Ally in the humble capacity of a newswriter, was recommended by Pingley to Nana Furnuwees, as a fit agent to soothe Musheer Ool Molk, and prevent the interruption of the amicable intercourse, which it was so important for Nana to preserve.

(July 13.)

The difference, however, which thus arose, Bajee Rao was at no pains to adjust; it weakened the confederacy which Nana Furnuwees had formed, and the great power he so lately combined was still more shaken by the death of Tookajee Holkar. Holkar left two legitimate sons, Khassee Rao and Mulhar Rao; and two by a concubine, Jeswunt Rao and Wittoojee. Khassee Rao was imbecile both in mind and body, but Mulhar Rao was, in every respect, qualified to support the fortunes of the house. Disputes soon arose between the brothers, in which the illegitimate sons took the part of Mulhar Rao, who, in a few days, removed from his late father's camp with a small body of troops, and took up his abode at Bambooree, a village in the suburbs of Poona, where he was secretly favoured by Nana Furnuwees. Sindia, who only watched for such an opportunity, on being solicited by Khassee Rao, readily afforded the aid of a body of troops for the purpose of apprehending Mulhar Rao, who refusing to surrender, was attacked, and maintained a desperate defence until he was killed. His half-brothers made their escape, Jeswunt Rao to Nagpoor, and Wittoojee to Kolapoor; but most of his handful of associates fell with him, and amongst others, Sindia, Ruwee Rao of Lonee, a gallant soldier, whose fate was rendered more memorable from the fatal effects which the communication of the news had on his widow, who, on being told, dropped dead on the instant.

* Generally so written by the English; properly, however, it is Mankeshwur.

(August 15th.)

The assistance thus afforded by Doulut Rao to a person of such a character as Khassee Rao, rendered the house of Holkar, for a time, subservient to that of Sindia, and was a death blow to the power of Nana Furnuwees. Sindia further secured his advantage, by having Khundee Rao, the infant son of the deceased Mulhar Rao, kept in safe custody.

The interference of Sindia in the state affairs of Poona, which Bajee Rao, with a great want of foresight, secretly encouraged, soon extended to acts of sovereignty, some of which, were of a nature more arbitrary, than had ever been practised by the Peishwa's government. The circumstances particularly alluded to, were the capture of the fort of Kolabah, the imprisonment of Mannajee Angria, and the transfer of that principality to Baboo Rao Angria, Sindia's near relation.

The obloquy of such a violent and partial proceeding, did not attach to Bajee Rao; his appearance and misfortunes continued to attract sympathy, and the control by which the supposed goodness of his natural disposition was repressed, became a theme of general regret. Mr. Uhtoff, however, the acting resident at Poona, seems, at this early period, to have discovered much of his real character; and it soon appeared that the opinion entertained of Bajee Rao's goodness and wisdom, was in fact but a proof of his dissimulation and cunning. To trust none, and to deceive all, was the game he invariably played, and like all who have ever done so, he never failed to lose. His attention was naturally directed to become independent of Sindia and of Nana Furnuwees; he imagined he should soon be able to induce or compel the former to return to Hindoostan, but he concluded that the thraldom of the minister would be perpetual. His first object, therefore, was to endeavour to effect the ruin of Nana Furnuwees. Amrut

Rao, Govind Rao Kallay, and some others were privy to the design; but Bajee Rao's chief instrument was Ghatgay, now distinguished by his family title of Shirzee Rao, whose daughter, though promised, was not yet given in marriage to Doulut Rao Sindia. No person had more influence with that chieftain, and Bajee Rao persuaded Shirzee Rao, that his views of becoming minister to his future son-in-law, would always be obstructed, whilst Nana Furnuwees had a vestige of power. It was therefore determined to place him in confine-
(Dec. 31.) ment. On the 31st December, Nana Furnuwees, after some precaution, was induced to return a formal visit of ceremony, which Sindia had paid him a few days before, when he was seized by Michel Filoze, the Neapolitan, who accompanied Mahadajee Sindia to the Deccan in 1792, and who now commanded eight battalions in the service of Doulut Rao. Filoze had, on his word of honour, guaranteed the safe return of the old minister to his home, and his perfidious conduct excited just indignation, particularly amongst the European officers in the service of the native states; a set of men, who, though mere soldiers of fortune, had become as distinguished for good faith as daring enterprize, and their general character, had induced Nana to accept Filoze's word in preference to any other pledge he might have obtained.* Aba She-

* The Mahrattas excuse Filoze's treachery, by saying, that he was entirely ignorant of Sindia's intention to seize Nana; that there was no premeditated deception on his part, and that he was compelled to the act by a sudden order, accompanied by threats and promises, from Shirzee Rao, through a person lookur, Bujaba Seroolkur, Naroo Punt Wydh, and several other persons of distinction, who accompanied Nana Furnuwees, were seized at the same time; the rest of his retinue, amounting to about a thousand persons, were stripped, maimed, some of them killed, and the whole dispersed. Parties of soldiers were immediately sent by Shirzee Rao Ghatgay * to plunder, not only the house of Nana, but the houses of all his adherents; many of whom barricadoed their doors, and defended themselves from the tops and windows. The city of Poona was like a town taken by storm; the firing continued the whole of the night and the ensuing day. The roads in every direction were stopped, all was uproar, plunder, and bloodshed; the alarm was universal, and in the words of a spectator, "friends named Meer-Assud-Alee Wahid. The mere circumstance of their wishing to defend Filoze, is honourable to the European character; had it regarded any of their own countrymen, the story would have been received without investigation, as a matter of course.

Mahrattas wishing to be polite, always disparage themselves, and, in addressing a European, nothing is more common than to speak of themselves, as a treacherous deceitful race of maurauders, on whom no dependance should be placed. One unacquainted with their manners, or who has superficially observed them, would not readily suppose, that they merely intend an indirect compliment, knowing how highly truth and plain dealing are estimated among us.

* Ghatgay, Shirzee Rao, is the proper way of writing the name and title, but he is best known to Europeans as Shirzee Rao Ghatgay.

marched together in groups, with their shields on their arms, and their swords in their hands." *

At the time Nana was seized in Sindia's camp, Bajee Rao, on pretence of business, sent for the other ministers of that party and confined them. The principal persons among them were, Baba Rao Phurkay, Appa Bulwunt, Naroo Punt Chuckurdeo, Naroo Neelkunt Muzzimdar, and Gowind Rao Pingley. Nana Furnuwees was sent into close confinement in the fort of Ahmednugur; and Bajee Rao appointed his brother Amrut Rao prime minister, with Gowind Rao Kallay and Sewram Narrain Thuthay as his colleagues, whilst Ballajee Punt Putwurdhun, a man of no experience, was raised to the command of the army.

Having thus effected, as he supposed, the overthrow of Nana Furnuwees, Bajee Rao began to devise schemes for ridding himself of Sindia, but, in the first instance, he found himself compelled to perform his engagements with Sindia and Ghatgay, though he hoped, that in the progress of their fulfilment, he might find the means of completing his schemes.

1798.

Sindia espoused the daughter of Ghatgay in March; the marriage expences were great; and the monthly pay of Sindia's army at Poona was upwards of twenty lacks of rupees. His pecuniary distress soon became urgent; he pressed Bajee Rao for the payment of the two krores of rupees which he had secretly promised, and was answered, that he had not the means of raising it himself, but if Sindia would create Ghatgay his Dewan, the latter might, assisted by information from Ballajee Koonjur, levy it upon the rich inhabitants of Poona. To this Sindia agreed; and such was the secret means by which Shirzee Rao Ghatgay became minister to his son-in-law, and by which Bajee Rao Rugonath let loose upon his subjects the violence and extortion of a monster, whose name will be remembered, whilst Poona exists, with horror and execration. To obtain the object of his mission, Ghatgay first proceeded to the palace of Bajee Rao, where the ex-ministers, late of the party of Nana Furnuwees, were confined. Those respectable persons were dragged forth, and scourged, until they gave up their property. Merchants, bankers, and all persons in the city supposed to possess wealth, were next seized and tortured. Several of them died of the consequences, and Gungadhur Punt Bhanoo, one of the relations of Nana Furnuwees, expired whilst tied on a heated gun: one of the many modes of torture invented by Shirzee Rao Ghatgay.

* Mahratta MS. Mr. Uhtoff's despatches. Oral information.

It was not supposed at the time, nor is it generally known, that Bajee Rao was the original cause of those excesses; he certainly never contemplated the commission of such barbarous enormities. He was shocked at the cruelties of Ghatgay, and remonstrated with Sindia on the subject; but the latter lent a deaf ear to complaints, which he considered mere hypocrisy, or excuses to the world. Amrut Rao, who knew nothing of the existing compact, or that his brother had devised this mode of raising money, being irritated at the conduct of Ghatgay, and encouraged by the universal cry of abhorrence against Sindia, proposed to his brother, the bold scheme of seizing Sindia when on a visit; in which Bajee Rao immediately acquiesced, and was soon eager to carry it into effect. Previous to this suggestion, Bajee Rao had concerted with Amrut Rao, a plan for raising a body of regular infantry, which in that respect might place him more on an equality with Sindia and Nizam Ally: in cavalry, he could soon become superior to both. Amrut Rao, from his early intercourse with the British troops, during the campaigns of his father Rugoba, had a decided predilection for that nation, over all other Europeans. He selected Mr. W. H. Tone to command the first brigade, of which the whole of the officers were to have been British subjects. To obtain a pretext with Sindia for this meditated augmentation, he referred to the state of their relations with the court of Hyderabad, and proposed that they should undertake a conjunct expedition against Nizam Ally, for the recovery of the balance of the arrears of tribute fixed, and of the districts ceded by the treaty of Kurdla; which had been restored by Nana Furnuwees without the Peishwa's authority or Sindia's knowledge. Sindia having readily acquiesced, the intention of the Poona court was formally announced to the British government on the 9th February; but the brigade of infantry was never raised, and the rest of the Peishwa's army, owing to his secret jealousy of Amrut Rao, his own ignorance of military affairs, and his unfit selection of a commander, became daily less efficient. Bajee Rao's total want of preparation did not, however, deter him from carrying on the scheme against Sindia; strong factions began to prevail in the camp of the latter, which encouraged Rajee Rao to hope, that by fomenting the rising disorders, the ministers and army of Sindia might be brought over to his views, or soon be reconciled to the deposal of their master.

In this state of affairs, Sindia's unpopularity having become extreme, Amrut Rao, with Bajee Rao's cognizance, prepared Abba Kally, the commander of one of the Peishwa's regular battalions, to be ready to rush in, upon an appointed signal, and seize Sindia. Doulut Rao was invited, on business, to the Peishwa's palace; but the invitation being declined, a positive order was sent, by Bajee Rao, desiring his attendance. He obeyed the summons; and soon after he sat down, Bajee Rao told him he had sent for him to desire an explanation of his conduct; and suddenly assuming a tone of authority and decision, for which the other was quite unprepared, he required of him to declare whether he was master or servant. Sindia having answered, with respect and humility, that he was the Peishwa's servant, and ready to show his dependance by his obedience, Bajee Rao reminded him of the insolence, violence, and cruelty which he and his servants had used, in numberless instances, towards the servants and subjects of his government, in the city and even in his own palace; he declared that "the contempt and disrespect thus shown towards his person and authority, he could bear no longer, and therefore ordered Sindia to remove to Jam-gaom." Doulut Rao's reply was couched in the mildest terms; but whilst he expressed his willingness to obey, he declared his inability to move from want of funds to pay his troops; "that he had large debs incurred by placing his Highness on the musnud, which it was incumbent on his Highness to discharge: when that was effected, he would immediately quit Poona." At this moment, Amrut Rao asked his brother if he should give the signal; but Bajee Rao's heart failed him; he had not courage to proceed in the design, and thus gave his friends the first decided proof of that imbecility which swayed most of the actions of his life. Sindia withdrew from the presence in a manner the most respectful, but with a mind filled with suspicion and distrust; and Bajee Rao, had afterwards the baseness, as well as the weakness, to tell him what Amrut Rao had intended, and to advise him to be upon his guard.*

The Peishwa's troops were as much in arrears as the army of Sindia. The state of affairs at Satara, which we shall presently explain, demanded the presence of a military force; but on their services being required, the men demanded their pay, and a tumult arose, which the commander, Ballajee Punt Putwurdhun, could not appease. Ballajee Koonjur, with the presumption of a favourite, made an attempt to restore order; but the soldiery ridiculed his interference, and on his persevering, they grossly insulted him by knocking off his turban, and kicking it in the streets. Govind Rao Pingley, who was still in confinement, sent a confidential message to the Peishwa, advising him to release Naroo Punt Chuckurdeo, as the only person capable of preventing most serious disturbance; a suggestion, to which, in the moment of alarm, Bajee Rao readily acceded. He also restored Pingley to liberty, the more readily, as that person, though one of the late ministry, was no real friend to Nana Furnuwees.

* The despatches of Colonel Palmer detail what publicly took place at the interview, the rest is from living authority.

Naroo Punt Chuckurdeo, with that facility which any officer who has gained the confidence of the natives of India is sure to experience, calmed the tumult in a day; but Bajee Rao could neither spare troops from Poona, nor trust the new commander at a distance; circumstances which led to the enlargement of another state prisoner of consequence, Pureshram Bhow Putwurdhun.

When Bajee Rao laid his plans for the overthrow of Nana Furnuwees, he engaged the Raja of Satara in the plot, and advised him to confine Baboo Rao Kishen, Nana's agent, and to seize the fort; assuring him that it was his determination to re-establish the old form of government, and to serve the head of the state, as faithfully, as the first Bajee Rao had done. The Raja promptly complied with this request, confined Baboo Rao, and seized the fort. But after Nana Furnuwees was imprisoned, when Sewram Narrain Thuthay arrived on the part of the Peishwa to receive charge, the Raja told him he would take care of the fort himself, and expressed a hope that his servant, the Peishwa, would soon fulfil his intentions. Bajee Rao, alarmed at the consequences of his own intrigues, ordered Mahdoo Rao Rastia to proceed to Satara, and endeavour to prevail on the Raja to admit his troops into the fort. A respectable force accompanied Rastia; but the Raja, having his relations about him, would neither yield to promises nor threats. These proceedings at last attracted the notice of Sindia, who suspecting that Bajee Rao's intrigue with the Raja was some scheme for enlarging his own power, secretly advised the Raja to maintain the fort, and to raise troops, promising that he would assist him to throw off the Bramin yoke, for which purpose he solemnly engaged to send him five battalions with their guns.*

The Raja soon began to collect troops; and Mahdoo Rao Rastia, having interfered to prevent it, was attacked and obliged to retire from Satara to Malgaom. This event became the more alarming to the Peishwa, from the disposition and state of his army at Poona, already described.

It so happened that Pureshram Bhow Putwurdhun, hitherto confined by Anund Rao, the brother of Mahdoo Rao Rastia at Mandoogaom, was at the moment removed to Waee, and confident in his own influence, he offered his services in suppressing the disturbances and recovering the fort, on condition that he should be permitted to raise troops for the purpose. Accordingly, having obtained the Peishwa's sanction, and being assisted by Rastia, Pureshram Bhow soon assembled a considerable force, in the neighbourhood of Waee.

* Bappoo Kanhoo's history of his own times. This promise was actually made through Bappoo Kanhoo, the secret agent of the Raja of Satara. Shirzee Rao Ghatgay, and Seedojee Rao Nimbalkur, the present Jagheerdar of Nepanee, were present at the time.

The town of Satara lies immediately under the fort, in a deep hollow, nearly surrounded on three sides by hills; cut off from the west by the Syhadree mountains, and from every other quarter by the Yena, Kistna, and Oormooree rivers.—The Raja's troops lay encamped in the town, and it being then the height of the rains, when the Yena was supposed unfordable, they considered themselves so perfectly secure, that they had not even the precaution to send out patroles. Pureshram Bhow discovered a ford*, and crossed with nearly ten thousand men before intelligence was received of his approach. The force collected by the Raja scarcely amounted to two thousand five hundred men, and were quite unprepared. The Raja had barely time to escape into the fort, and his troops were flying, until rallied by his relations Yellojee and Senajee Mohitey, Kooshaba Raja, and Doorgajee Raja Mahareek: these persons were gallantly seconded by the Raja's brother, Chitoor Sing, who was the main spring of the party. As soon as they had collected a small band, they advanced to the environs of the town to oppose the approaching army; resistance was hopeless, but they pressed forward for a few minutes with impetuosity, until Yellojee Mohitey was killed, and both the Mahareeks wounded, when the party, by Chittoor Sing's advice, retreated. Senajee Mohitey, however, refused to turn his back, and though alone, having tried to single out Mahdoo Rao Rastia, he charged at him, in the midst of his followers, by whom he was soon cut in pieces.

* The ford was known to very few persons, and the Bramins, desirous of improving any circumstance in their own favour, gave out, what is still generally believed, that on this occasion the waters divided to allow Pureshram Bhow to pass.

The plunder of the town of Satara occupied the troops of the victors; and though a party pursued him, Chittoor Sing was enabled, with a small band of faithful followers, to join the Raja of Kolapoor, who, ever since he had been excited by Nana Furnuwees to attack Pureshram Bhow, had spread fire and sword over the whole of the southern Mahratta country.

The fort of Satara being destitute of provisions, the Raja surrendered, and the service being thus accomplished, Pureshram Bhow was desired to disband his troops, but he excused himself, declaring his inability to pay their arrears, and protesting his fidelity to the Peishwa's government. Bajee Rao was therefore recommended to grant him a pardon, on his agreeing to pay a fine of ten lacks of rupees. *

* My authority for the foregoing chapter, is the same as the last.

CHAP. IX.

FROM A. D. 1798, TO A. D. 1800.

Disorders increase at Poona. — The Byes. — Commencement of their insurrection against Sindia — they seek protection in the camp of Amrut Rao — negotiation. — Amrut Rao's troops treacherously attacked. — Rupture between the Peishwa and Sindia. — The Peishwa negociates with other powers. — Sindia releases Nana Furnuwees. — Reconciliation between Sindia and the Peishwa. — Shirzee Rao Ghatgay is seized and confined by Sindia's orders. — The union of Bajee Rao and Sindia, strengthened by the course of policy adopted by the English. — The British government endeavours to negociate a new treaty with Nizam Ally and the Mahrattas. — Nana Furnuwees is solicited to resume charge of the administration. — Nana, deceived by Bajee Rao, assumes charge without the guarantee he had at first demanded. — Treachery of Bajee Rao — Nana's behaviour. — The Peishwa's agents seized and confined. — New treaty between Nizam Ally and the English — regarded by the Mahrattas with much jealousy. — Nana's advice. — Bajee Rao's dissimulation. — Plan of a confederacy against the English, disconcerted by the subversion of Tippoo's government. — Orders sent by the Peishwa for the advance of his troops after the war had terminated. — Dispersion of the followers of Dhoondia Waug. — Dhoondia joins the Raja of Kolapoor. — Remarks on the conquest of Tippoo's territory — partition — discussions with the Poona court. — New treaty between the English and Nizam Ally. — Affairs of Sindia — the insurrection of the Byes becomes extremely formidable — by the reappointment of Balloba Tattya, it is nearly suppressed. — State of the war with Kolapoor — exploits of Chitoor Sing — proposed plan of operations — Pureshram Bhow defeated and killed — Kolapoor besieged — siege raised.

In the meantime disorders increased at Poona, and Sindia's situation was rendered extremely critical. The danger proceeded from a quarter whence he least expected it.

A.D. 1798. Mahadajee Sindia, at his death, left three widows, one of whom, named Bhagirthee Bye, was young and beautiful. Doulut Rao, at the time of his being acknowledged the adopted son and heir of his uncle, promised to make an ample provision for these ladies. They accordingly continued to reside in his camp; but no steps were taken to ensure them a permanent establishment, and in a short time some of their ordinary comforts were circumscribed. No complaint appears to have escaped them; but of a sudden it was discovered, or at all events alleged by the elder widows, that Sindia carried on a criminal intercourse with the youngest, at which they openly expressed their abhorrence, and declared they could no longer consider as a son the incestuous defiler of his father's bed. Shirzee Rao Ghatgay interposed; the ladies denied him admittance to their presence; but this miscreant, having forced the enclosure of their tents, seized, flogged, and barbarously degraded them. The Shenwee Bramins, who had held the principal offices under the government of Mahadajee Sindia, and many of whom were connected by relationship as well as by cast, being already much disgusted by the elevation of Shirzee Rao Ghatgay and the confinement of Balloba Tattya, whom they regarded as their chief, espoused the cause of the two Byes. Much dissension and discussion ensued; but it was at last settled that the ladies should proceed to Burhanpoor, where they were to take up their abode, provided with a suitable establishment and funds for its support.

(May 14.) They accordingly departed from Poona, but, instead of carrying them to Burhanpoor, their escort was directed to place them in confinement at Ahmednugur. This treachery being immediately discovered by their adherents in camp, they had scarcely reached Korygaom, on the Beema, when Muzuffir Khan, a Patan officer in the interest of the Shenwee Bramins, who commanded a choice body of Hindoostan horse in Sindia's service, suddenly assailed the escort, rescued the ladies, and brought them back to the neighbourhood of Sindia's camp. This daring act would have been punished immediately, but Sindia had reason to believe that many chief persons in his army were concerned, and he also hesitated in attacking a party of desperate men, lest either of the females, standing in such relationship to himself, should be killed in the tumult, — an accident which would have entailed upon him the greatest disgrace and odium throughout the Mahratta country. Ghatgay, however, strenuously urged him to crush the conspiracy in the outset, and was at last permitted to act against them; but Muzuffir Khan, who had correct intelligence of their proceedings, withdrew the ladies to the camp of the Peishwa's brother, Amrut Rao, who happened to be near the Beema, on his route to Joonere, and who instantly afforded them protection. Ghatgay had in person pursued Muzuffir Khan, and the latter no sooner deposited his charge than he sallied forth, attacked his pursuers, routed them, and returned in triumph to thc camp of Amrut Rao.

It is alleged, that Bajee Rao was the instigator of this revolt, and it is certain, that he encouraged the partizans of the Byes to persevere. He said, with apparent sincerity, that he considered the protection which his brother had afforded, as humane and proper; but apprehensive lest it should provoke Sindia and Ghatgay to deeds of violence, he solicited the friendly interposition of Colonel Palmer, the British resident at his court, who tendered his mediation to Sindia, by whom it was declined.

(June 7.) On the night of the 7th June, five battalions of regular infantry were sent by Sindia, under a Frenchman, named Du Prat, to endeavour to surprise the camp of Amrut Rao, and seize the Byes; but he failed in the attempt, and being briskly attacked, was compelled to retreat with some loss. Negotiations ensued; a suitable provision, and a place of residence of their own selection, were again promised to the Byes, and Amrut Rao, not doubting Sindia's sincerity, approached his camp, in the neighbourhood of Poona, and took up his ground at the Khirkee bridge. When Amrut Rao had been thrown entirely off his guard, Shirzee Rao Ghatgay taking advantage of the Mahomedan festival, which commemorates the death of the sons of Ali and Fatima*, came to the river side on the 11th of Mohurrum, when the bier is thrown into the water; he was attended by

* This festival, termed the Hoossein Hosyn, should only commemorate the death of Hosyn, whose fall is no where so well related as by Gibbon, volume 9th.

M. Drugeon, a Frenchman, at the head of two brigades of infantry, on pretence of preserving order, and protecting this concluding ceremony; but they suddenly opened a fire from twenty-five guns, upon the unsuspecting troops of Amrut Rao, advanced, charged, and dispersed them with this powerful body of infantry, and afterwards totally pillaged their camp. The Byes were, at the time, residing in the hamlet of Wittulwaree, so that this outrage was a direct attack on the Peishwa's brother, and open war between the Peishwa and Sindia, was supposed to be declared. Khassee Rao Holkar joined Amrut Rao, the Mankurees repaired to his standard, and the Peishwa negociated an offensive and defensive alliance with Nizam Ally, through his resident envoys, then at Poona. The articles agreed to, between Nizam Ally and Nana Furnuwees, by the treaty of Mhar, were to be confirmed by the Peishwa, the Chouth of Beder was to be remitted, and an additional tract of territory, yielding eight lacks of rupees, was to be ceded to Nizam Ally in perpetuity, as the price of his assistance against Sindia. Nizam Ally also agreed to support the Peishwa against any future encroachment of the ex-minister, Nana Furnuwees; but in case of his being liberated by Sindia, it was stipulated that Bajee Rao should allow him an annual pension of one lack of rupees. Rughoojee Bhonslay, if he chose to accede to it, was to be considered a party to this treaty, and was to receive the whole of Gurrah Mundelah from Bajee Rao.

Sindia, now alarmed, became very desirous of obtaining that mediation which he had before refused from the British government. Colonel Palmer recommended the dismissal of his present ministers, the settlement of a Jagheer upon the Byes, and reparation to the Peishwa, by submitting to his authority. Sindia appeared much disposed to follow this advice; but the Byes became so extravagant in their demands, that it was impossible to accede to them; and although he was now really desirous of returning to Hindoostan, he had no means of discharging any part of the great arrears due to his army.

In order to intimidate Bajee Rao, and to establish an alliance as a counterpoise to that which was just formed between the Nizam and the Peishwa, Sindia sent envoys to Tippoo; but Bajee Rao, by the advice of Govind Rao Kallay, did the same. A more efficacious mode of alarming Bajee Rao, was the release of Nana Furnuwees, by which Sindia also hoped to obtain a sufficient sum to free him from the most urgent of his embarrassments.

Nana Furnuwees was accordingly brought from Ahmednugur, and two krores of rupees demanded as the price of his liberty. After some delay, during which Nana attempted to throw himself on the protection of the British government, he at last agreed to pay Sindia ten lacks of rupees, provided he were previously set at liberty; as otherwise, whilst under restraint, his agents would comply with no order, even if furnished with a private token from himself. He accordingly obtained his liberty, and the money was promptly paid.

The enlargement of Nana, though a source of great concern to Bajee Rao, was not unlooked for; but when it was almost immediately followed by the revocation of the treaty with Nizam Ally, from causes not sufficiently explained, but chiefly owing to the unsteady and fluctuating policy of the minister Musheer Ool Moolk, the Peishwa lost no time in commencing negotiations with Nana Furnuwees and with Sindia. The latter, not yet apprized of the revocation of the treaty, apprehensive of an attack from the confederated Mahrattas and Moghuls, and alarmed by reports of disaffection among his troops in Hindoostan, received these overtures with complacency, but insisted on the reinstatement of Nana Furnuwees as preliminary to an accommodation. Ghatgay, in the meantime, assisted by an agent worthy of himself, a Mahratta named Fukeerjee Garway, continued to commit every species of extortion and excess: he even disregarded the remonstrances of Sindia, and his cruelty, increased by indulgence, was almost unparalleled. He seized four officers in Sindia's army, on mere suspicion of their being concerned in the Byes' insurrection; he blew three of them from guns, and the fourth, Yeswunt Rao Sivajee, had a tent peg driven into his brain by a mallet.

Sindia, aroused at length by the contempt shown to his authority, and the universal cry of execration excited by such conduct, listened to the representations of Ramjee Patell and Aba Chitnees, and directed two young men the sons of Filoze and Hessing * by native mothers, to arrest Ghatgay and Garway, which they effected with great dexterity.

* Hessing, the father, was an Englishman, and held the rank of Colonel in Sindia's service. He bore an excellent character.

The confinement of these persons was a further step to a reconciliation between Sindia and Bajee Rao, and the new course of policy adopted about this period by the English, tended to a species of union between them.

The system of neutrality, followed by the British government in India, during the administration of Sir John Shore, was entirely reversed soon after the arrival of Lord Mornington, afterwards Marquis Wellesley, in India, on the 26th April 1798. The revisal of the political relations of the English with the courts of Hyderabad and Poona, was the first object to which the residents were instructed to direct their attention, for the purpose of securing the alliance of those states, so as, at all events, to prevent their resources from being employed against the British government, in the same manner as appeared to be meditated by the Sultan of Mysore, in his recent connections with the French.

The principal danger to the English, in a war with Tippoo supported by their European rival, was the fear of his being joined by the other native powers, whose governments were not only becoming gradually weaker, and therefore more likely to be guided by petty intrigue than by sound policy; but a great change had taken place in their military strength, especially that of Sindia and Nizam Ally, which now in a great measure lay in their numerous corps of regular infantry, and these chiefly commanded by French officers.

It was, therefore, of importance to the British government to secure the alliance of Nizam Ally and the Mahrattas, and it became a primary object to induce Sindia to return to Hindoostan, both from the centrical situation his brigades occupied in the Deccan, and from his known desire to obstruct the influence of the British with the Peishwa, over whom it was his policy to perpetuate his own ascendancy.

The reported designs of Zuman Shah, King of Cabul, and grandson of Ahmed Shah Abdallee, a name terrible to Mahrattas, were strongly set forth by the British agents, in order to induce Sindia to return for the protection of his dominions in Hindoostan; whilst to the Peishwa was offered, a body of the Company's troops, for the protection of his person and authority, and the revival of the energies of his government. Bajee Rao had, shortly before, made an application to the British of a nature similar to this arrangement, but at that period, both their policy and the operation of the act of parliament prevented their complying with his request. The sudden desire now evinced by the English, to grant him a subsidiary force, their frequent recommendations to reinstate Nana Furnuwees in the ministry, and to remove Sindia from Poona, led Bajee Rao, whose views and information were bounded by very narrow limits, to suppose that the whole was a scheme of the detested Nana, the object most dreaded, and therefore uppermost in his mind.

Accordingly, although Sindia had declared his intention of endeavouring to return to Hindoostan, and a public visit of ceremony announced the reconciliation which had taken place between Sindia and Nana Furnuwees on the one part, and Bajee Rao on the other, the Peishwa shortly afterwards, in a secret conference with Sindia, urged his stay at Poona for the purpose of preventing the introduction of the English by Nana Furnuwees; but he was at the same moment, doing all in his power to conciliate Nana, and was pressing him to quit Sindia's camp for the purpose of resuming the duties of administration. Nana accordingly returned once more to the city of Poona, but declined interfering with the Peishwa's affairs, until the safety of his person and property should be guaranteed by the British government and Nizam Ally, and until he could effect a reconciliation in Sindia's family to enable him to return to Hindoostan. To forward the latter object he laboured to bring about an accommodation, and in hopes of expediting Sindia's march, advanced him fifteen lacks of rupees from his private treasury, in addition to the ten lacks before paid at the time of his liberation.

Perceiving that Sindia was really serious in his proposal of returning to Hindoostan, Bajee Rao intimated his intention of paying Nana Furnuwees a secret visit, and in disguise, so that it might not come to Sindia's knowledge. In the middle of the night, attended by a single domestic, he repaired to Nana's house, and for the time succeeded in deceiving the old minister into a belief of his being wholly unconcerned in his seizure and disgrace, and that he confined the other ministers, in the vain hope of affording them protection from the violence and rapacity of Sindia's agents. — Colonel Palmer the British resident was of opinion that Nana Furnuwees was never deceived by him, but the fact is proved by the result; and, indeed, the eloquence and manner of Bajee Rao are so powerful and insinuating that he has deceived most men even when on their guard against him. On this occasion, perceiving the effect his language produced, he laid his head at the feet of Nana Furnuwees, swore by those feet*, to consider him as his father, to abide by his counsel in all his future measures, and finally, in a burst of tears, conjured and entreated that he would not abandon the Bramin sovereignty, assailed as it then was, by the factions of the Mahrattas and the ambition of the English.

In consequence of this appeal Nana Furnuwees resumed the duties of minister, without (15th Oct.) those securities for which he had at first so prudently stipulated; but scarcely had he begun the transaction of public business, when he was informed by Jeswunt Rao A. D. 1799 Ghorepuray† that Bajee Rao was again endeavouring to persuade Sindia to confine

* To swear by the feet of a Bramin, is one of the most sacred and solemn of Hindoo oaths.

† This person, who came into Sindia's confidence, whose name has already appeared, and whom we shall have occasion to notice repeatedly, was of the family of the great Suntajee Ghorepuray, so conspicuous in the days of Aurungzebe, and a descendant of Moorar Rao Ghorepuray of Gootee, so often mentioned by Orme.

him,—intelligence which was confirmed by Sindia himself. Nana instantly repaired to the palace; taxed the Peishwa with his unparalleled duplicity; begged that he would no longer plot against the life and freedom of an old man, borne down by years, infirmity and misfortune, but permit him to retire to some spot, far from courts and camps, where his being suffered to exist could never interfere with any plans his highness might form. He abjured the desire of now possessing power on his own account, and declared, that he had only accepted it, in hopes of being still useful. Bajee Rao positively denied having been accessary to a proceeding so treacherous, and begged that those who had used his name might be apprehended. Sindia immediately seized the Peishwa's minister Govind Rao Kallay, and Sewram Narrain Thuthay, the agents employed, but as it is a point of honour amongst Mahrattas never to divulge the name of their principal on such occasions, they bore the loss of their liberty and property without impeaching the veracity of their master, and Sewram Narrain Thuthay soon after died.

Satisfaction being thus afforded, Nana Furnuwees resumed the office of prime minister; but his suspicions were not removed, and he avoided all interference in business, not absolutely necessary.

The period, however, was extremely important; Nizam Ally had concluded a new treaty with the English on the 1st September 1798, by which he agreed to receive no Frenchman into his service, to dismiss his French officers, and disband the whole of the infantry lately commanded by Raymond, * receiving in their stead six battalions of English Sepoys, each battalion one thousand strong, with a proportion of European artillery, for which he agreed to pay an annual subsidy of twenty-four lacks seventeen thousand and one hundred rupees. The English government also became bound, by an article cautiously expressed, to mediate between Nizam Ally and the Peishwa, and in case of differences arising between them, to use every endeavour to induce the Peishwa to accede to a friendly arbitration.

The Mahrattas naturally viewed this treaty with much jealousy, and the Peishwa, on being urged by the British agent to conclude a similar one, evaded the subject, by an assurance, that he would faithfully execute the conditions of subsisting engagements, and on the prospect of a war with Tippoo, promised to afford his aid. In these replies, Bajee Rao had followed the opinion and advice of Nana Furnuwees, but had neither sincerity nor steadiness to fulfil the engagements alluded to, though assured by Nana, that any departure from good faith must equally affect the honour and security of his government. Nana Furnuwees recommended, that Appa Sahib, the son of Pureshram Bhow, should be appointed to command the contingent intended to co-operate with the English; and in the present exigency proposed to assemble it, by collecting the force under Dhondoo Punt Gokla, Sur-Soobehdar of the Carnatic, the troops of Rastia and the Vinchorkur, and all the horse which the Bramin Jagheerdars could raise. The necessities of the state, and the presence of Sindia, precluded the Peishwa from recruiting his own army or detaching any part of it from Poona.

* Raymond died March 25th, 1798.

Appa Sahib refused the command, but the offer having led to a reconciliation between Pureshram Bhow and Nana, the Bhow agreed to head the contingent himself, on condition of having his fine remitted, and receiving Dharwar, with several places in the Carnatic, in Jagheer. An English detachment, similar to that formerly employed, and under the command of the same officer, was held in readiness to join Pureshram Bhow; but these endeavours, on the part of Nana Furnuwees, were frustrated by Bajee Rao, who acted under the influence of Doulut Rao Sindia. After the English had commenced hostilities against Tippoo, his envoys were publicly received at Poona, although repeated remonstrances were made on the subject by the British resident. Even after their formal dismissal was intimated to Colonel Palmer, on the 19th March, they only retired to Kikwee, a village twenty-five miles south of Poona. Colonel Palmer at first supposed, that the detention of the wukeels was a mere repetition of the former plan of obtaining a sum of money, on a false pretence of neutrality or aid. The British resident knew that Bajee Rao had received thirteen lacks of rupees from Tippoo, to which Sindia was privy, but it was not known at that time to Nana Furnuwees; and when the governor-general noticed the conduct of the court of Poona, by simply countermanding the detachment which had been prepared to accompany Pureshram Bhow, Nana Furnuwees could not comprehend the reason.

Bajee Rao imagined, that by the concessions made to Pureshram Bhow on the one hand, and the encouragement given to Tippoo on the other, he should deceive both parties, and postpone his ultimate decision, until circumstances enabled him to judge on which side it would be most advantageous to range himself. As far, however, as he was capable of following any plan, his resolution was taken in favour of Tippoo. In concert with Sindia, a scheme was laid to attack Nizam Ally, in which they hoped to engage Rughoogee Bhonslay, and as the English would, as a matter of course, defend the Moghul territory, in consequence of their late treaty, the Peishwa was then to declare the Mahrattas the allies of Tippoo Sultan. The Marquis Wellesley, apprized of those views, was, on the other hand, endeavouring to engage Rughoojee Bhonslay as a party to the treaty concluded with Nizam Ally.

But before the Peishwa or Sindia had the slightest conception that Tippoo's downfal was so near, they were astonished by intelligence of the capture of Seringapatam, the death of Tippoo, and the subversion of his government.

Bajee Rao affected the utmost joy, and soon after endeavoured to persuade Colonel Palmer, that the failure of his engagement was entirely attributable to Nana Furnuwees. Immediate orders were sent to Dhondoo Punt Gokla, Sur-Soobehdar of the Carnatic to advance into Tippoo's country with what force he could collect. The consequence was, that many villages were plundered after the country had submitted to the British government; and the only merit which Dhondoo Punt's party could claim, was that of intercepting Dhoondia Waug, a marauding fugitive from Seringapatam, whom Dhondoo Punt attacked by surprise, and dispersed his followers; after which, Dhoondia entered the service of the Raja of Kolapoor who was actively engaged in hostilities against the Peishwa, and who readily received him into his army.

Sindia, on the news of Tippoo's overthrow, despatched emissaries to Seringapatam for the purpose of encouraging resistance among the partizans of the late Sultan who might yet remain; but he also sent abundant congratulations to the English resident at Poona, expressive of his happiness at the glorious termination of the war.

The judgment and energy by which the power of Tippoo was so speedily reduced, may be considered one of the first examples of that energetic policy, by which Great Britain, in her subsequent mighty struggles in Europe, has been distinguished.

The resources of Nizam Ally's government had been placed at the disposal of the Marquis Wellesley, and the services of his contingent had been directed with far greater efficiency than in the former war; an improvement justly ascribed to the ability and exertion of the governor-general's political agent Captain Malcolm.*

The mode of dividing the conquered provinces was dictated by a wise and liberal spirit. Nizam Ally, with judicious confidence, had left the arrangements to the Marquis Wellesley who effected them in the following manner.

* Now Sir John Malcolm.

As it was deemed incompatible with the future tranquillity of the country, and the security of the Company's possessions, to establish a son of Tippoo in sovereignty, the descendant of those Rajas of Mysore, from whom Hyder Ally usurped the government, was released from captivity, and raised to the musnud of his ancestors. A partition treaty was then concluded by the British (June 22.) government, Nizam Ally, and the restored Raja.

The whole of Tippoo's revenue being estimated at 30.40.000 pagodas, to the Raja was assigned,

pagodas - -	13.60.000
To Nizam Ally - -	5.30 000
To the Company -	5.37.000
For the maintenance of the families of Hyder and Tippoo, in charge of the British government - -	2.40.000
For the maintenance of Kummur-ud-deen Khan and his family, in charge of Nizam Ally - -	70.000
Pagodas	27.37.000

Notwithstanding the Peishwa's total failure in his engagements, the governor-general deemed it politic to allow him some share in the conquered territory, provided he could be brought to accede to an alliance corresponding to that formed with Nizam Ally. With this view, the balance in the territory adjoining the Peishwa's southern boundary, yielding an annual revenue of pagados 2.63.000 was reserved, and was offered on the above conditions to the Peishwa.

Much discussion took place in consequence: the court of Poona was unwilling by a distinct refusal to afford the allies a pretext for at once appropriating the territory reserved; in which case, two-thirds of it were to be given to Nizam Ally, and the rest retained by the Company.

In a great part of the negotiation which took place, it is easy to perceive the ability of Nana Furnuwees. In extenuation of the circumstances which had caused the disappointment and dissatisfaction of the allies, the Peishwa represented the unfortunate distractions of the empire which had prevented him from assembling an army, and the usage of native states, in permitting wukeels to reside in their courts in time of war. To the preliminary conditions requiring the Mahrattas to abstain from all aggressions on the territory of the Raja of Mysore; the Peishwa replied, that upon obtaining the proposed cession, it should be considered an equivalent for the Chouth, to which the Mahrattas were entitled from the whole of the territories of the late Sultan. In case the French invaded India, the Peishwa engaged to unite with the English in repelling them; but he would not agree to exclude individuals of that nation from his service. He offered to subsidize two battalions, provided they might be employed to assist in reducing refractory tributaries, and the Seedee of Jinjeera; but he absolutely refused the Company's mediation in the existing differences between the Mahrattas and Nizam Ally respecting the Chouth. To an application for exchanging the Chouth of Surat for an equivalent revenue, a measure in itself calculated to obviate vexatious disputes and loss, a like peremptory refusal was given; and a proposal for including Rughoojee Bhonslay as a principal in the intended alliance, the Peishwa treated as absurd. Finally, after protracted discussion, the reserved territory was shared by Nizam Ally and the British government, as stipulated in the treaty; and on the 12th of October 1800, a new treaty was concluded between them, by which the British government engaged to protect the territories of Nizam Ally from unprovoked aggression; two battalions of native infantry were added to the former six battalions, together with a regiment of native cavalry; and for the payment of the whole force, the territories acquired by Nizam Ally, on the partition of the provinces of Mysore, both in 1792 and 1799, were ceded in perpetuity to the British government.

The affairs of Sindia, during this period, continued in a very distracted state. After the treacherous attack made by Shirzee Rao Ghatgay on Amrut Rao's camp, the Byes fled to the Raja of Kolapoor, who was still at war with the Peishwa. The Byes were soon joined by Narrain Rao Bukhshee, and the principal Shenwee Bramins from Sindia's camp. Large bodies of horse flocked to their standard, and when sufficiently strong, they returned to the northward, plundering every village from the Kistna to the Godavery which acknowledged the authority of Doulut Rao Sindia *, and not only insulted Sindia in his lines, but (Feb.) stopped the roads in the vicinity of Poona.

Sindia's horse at first attempted to oppose them, but their numbers were so inferior, that after a few skirmishes, in which they suffered severely, they would not advance unsupported by the regular battalions, before which the troops of the Byes retired, but as soon as the battalions returned towards their own camp, the insurgents also faced about, and followed them. There is, perhaps, no parallel example of such an extraordinary state of affairs, as that which the Peishwa's territory presented at this period, where a rebellion against one prince was maintained within the territory of another, whom both parties acknowledged as their sovereign. The anarchy which it engendered may be conceived; the whole country suddenly swarmed with horsemen, and although plunder was not indiscriminate, great devastations were committed. The flame spread in Hindoostan; Lukwa Dada, a Shenwee Bramin already mentioned, second in importance to the confined minister Balloba Tattya, by whom Lukwa Dada had been first raised, having been suspected of disaffection in consequence of his attachment to Balloba, was deprived of power, and dismissed from his employments. Being thus driven into the ranks of the insurgents, he soon raised a powerful army, repeatedly defeated the troops sent against him, and reduced the country from Oojein to Seronje.

* Numerous villages belonging to one chief, are frequently found intermixed with those of another in the Mahratta country, the reason of which has been already explained and accounted for.

To add to these troubles, Jeswunt Rao Holkar, who, after his brother fell at Poona, had fled to Nagpoor, and was there confined through the influence of Sindia, having effected his escape, repaired to Malwa, collected followers, and plundered the country. M. Perron had succeeded to the command of Sindia's regular infantry on the departure of M. de Boigne, who was compelled from ill-health to return to Europe in 1796; but Perron, at the period we have arrived, was so fully occupied in the siege of Agra, held by the adherents of Lukwa Dada, and in which he was assisted by Ambajee Inglia, that he found it impossible to stop the disorders in Malwa without additional troops, for which he sent repeated and earnest applications to his master in the Deccan.

Under these circumstances, Sindia had again recourse to negotiation; but the demands of the Byes extended to nothing less than complete sovereignty, which they required Sindia to hold under their authority; and before even these conditions could be admitted, they insisted on the release of Balloba Tattya.

Sindia's new ministers, Abba Chitnees and Ryajee Patell, with a judgment and a disinterestedness which do them honour, recommended their master to reinstate Balloba as prime minister, to which Sindia agreed; and no sooner was the arrangement accomplished, than it produced an immediate effect in detaching the principal leaders from the insurrection. The Byes agreed to an adjustment through Balloba's mediation; and the fort of Asseergurh with the city of Burhanpoor, and a Jagheer of eleven lacks of rupees were to be assigned to them. Lukwa Dada, in consequence of the restoration of Balloba, had an interview with the brother of Ambajee Inglia, who had been opposed to him in Malwa, and agreed to a cessation of arms. Every difference was on the point of being settled; the Byes had received their clothes, jewels, and other private property from Sindia's camp, and had come as far as Rajawaree, near Jejoory, on their way to Poona, when one of their partizans, having been attacked and cut off, they immediately returned towards Punderpoor, and recommenced their system of depredation.

The whole of the southern Mahratta country was in great disorder. The Raja of Kolapoor still waged war with the Peishwa, and the reinforcement brought by Chitoor Sing, after the defeat of the Raja of Satara, gave a new spirit to his efforts. Chitoor Sing had been closely pursued into the territory of the Raja Kolapoor, by a body of Rastia's troops, joined by some others on the part of the Priteee Needhee, the whole of whom encamped near the Warna river. Five hundred horse of the troops who had been dispersed at Satara, having got together, apprized Chitoor Sing of their situation, and by his direction concealed themselves for some days in the hills, until he had got a reinforcement from Kolapoor, when by a well concerted attack upon the troops who had pursued him, he cut them off almost to a man. A body of Pureshram Bhow's troops were shortly afterwards in a like manner surprised and routed; and Chitoor Sing having learnt, that after Pureshram Bhow's departure from Satara, two or three thousand of Rastia's troops with some guns were encamped in the neighbourhood of the fort, he vowed to avenge the disgrace sustained by the first defeat. Accordingly he led six hundred infantry through the hills and valleys, until opposite to the village of Pal, where he remained concealed until night, when, repairing to a celebrated temple in the village, he performed the usual worship, and the whole party having solemnly invoked the deity, stained their clothes with yellow dye, rubbed their hands and faces with turmeric, and issued forth, thus fortified with the implied vow of conquest or death, to attack their enemy. They did not find Rastia's troops unprepared; but the latter had only time to fire a few rounds, when they were furiously charged sword in hand, their guns taken and destroyed, and the whole body dispersed in a few minutes. A rapid march to the banks of the Warna, before his retreat could be intercepted, marked a prudence, as well as enterprise, which gained Chitoor Sing considerable credit with the Mahratta soldiery, and his numbers were in a few months considerably increased. At the head of a very inferior force, and with no funds to support it, he kept seven thousand of Rastia's troops in perpetual motion between the Neera and Warna. He was, however, frequently defeated; and on one occasion, when accompanied by only five hundred men*, he was surrounded by five thousand of Rastia's troops, but cut his way through them, although with the loss of more than half his party. His enterprise, his remarkable escapes, his conciliatory manners, the popularity of his cause amongst Mahrattas, and his confidence in the peasantry, rendered him every where a favourite, notwithstanding his having repeatedly laid the whole of the villages under contribution.

Chitoor Sing's insurrection was considered at Poona as a part of the Kolapoor war, and both the Peishwa and Nana Furnuwees had their share of blame in exciting it.

During the insurrection of Satara, and afterwards, whilst Chitoor Sing kept Rastia in check to the north of the Warna, the Raja of Kolapoor was actively employed against the Putwurdhuns and Dhondoo Punt Gokla. Tasgaom, the capital of Pureshram Bhow's Jagheer, was pillaged, and his palace, which had been erected at great expence, was burnt to the ground. The Carnatic was laid under contribution, and Dhondoo Punt Gokla, though a brave and active officer, was repeatedly defeated. Such was the state of the Kolapoor warfare up to the period at which we have arrived.

In the month of August after Balloba Tattya's release, a reconciliation having taken place between him and Nana Furnuwees, they deliberated, with the knowledge and approbation of their superiors, on the course of policy necessary to be pursued with regard to Nizam Ally and the English; but both concurred in the necessity of suppressing the formidable disturbance to the southward, as a preliminary to any other arrangement. It was accordingly resolved that the force, previously intended by Nana Furnuwees to have co-operated with the allies against Tippoo, should be sent, under Pureshram Bhow, considerably reinforced, for the present service. The whole, to be furnished in proportions by the Peishwa, and by Sindia and other Jagheerdars, was to consist of thirty thousand horse, and six thousand infantry; but, as it was impracticable to prepare this force, until the Dussera, Pureshram Bhow was directed to watch the Raja of Kolapoor, and restrain him as much as possible. Pureshram Bhow, whose military spirit was on this occasion excited by personal injury and personal pique, although his health was in a declining state, kept the field all the rains, and recovered the garrisons between the rivers Gutpurba and Malpurba. In the month of September he advanced from Gokauk towards Kolapoor, not without hopes of finishing the war himself, but near the village of Putunkoondee he encountered the Raja of Kolapoor, and Chitoor Sing, when he experienced a total defeat, and was himself mortally wounded, and made prisoner.* Nana

* It is not mentioned whether horse or foot.

* Wiswas Rao, the brother of Shirzee Rao Ghatgay, took up the dying man, and laying him across his horse, threw him down before the Raja of Kolapoor, who ordered him, it is said, when in this state, to be cut in pieces. Dajeeba Limmay, who was Furnuwees and Balloba sent the troops of the Vinchorkur, the Pritee Needhee, and five of Sindia's regular battalions, under Major Brownrigg, to support Appa Sahib, Pureshram's Bhow's son, and reduce the Raja to submission.

This accession of force was too great for the Raja of Kolapoor to withstand, and he therefore retired under protection of the fort of Panalla. But, in that situation, his troops were surprised by Appa Sahib, who drove some of them into the fort whilst the greater part sought refuge in Kolapoor, which the Peishwa's troops invested, and after a siege of considerable duration had A. D. 1800. nearly reduced it, when events and revolutions at Poona interfered to save the Kolapoor state, which would otherwise, in all probability, have been subverted, or at least held in future as a dependancy on the Peishwa's government.

in the action, states this circumstance; and Bajee Rao in a particular conversation with Mr. Elphinstone, at Punderpoor, in 1812, mentioned it as a well known fact, but it is not generally believed at Kolapoor; nor at Satara, where the Raja of Kolapoor had many enemies.

Dajeeba Limmay, whose name I have mentioned above, was a confidential agent of Pureshram Bhow; he was employed in several high situations, during the administration of Nana Furnuwees, and was a sharer in many of the revolutions and events which I am now recording. At my request, he had the goodness to write the history of his own times, and I take this opportunity of expressing my acknowledgments.

CHAP. X.

FROM A. D. 1800, TO A. D. 1802.

Death and character of Nana Furnuwees—fresh dispute between Sindia and the Peishwa. — Balloba Tattya's confinement and death — dreadful executions of Dhondeba, and Narrain Rao Bukhshee. — Peishwa's plans for ruining the adherents of Nana Furnuwees and the family of Pureshram Bhow. — Sindia, on being promised the Jagheer of the Putwurdhuns, sends a force into their districts. — Great disorders — insurrection of Dhoondia Waug —suppresed by a detachment of British troops. — State of affairs at Poona. — Bajee Rao's situation and views — critical state of Sindia's affairs in Malwa. — Rise and progress of Jeswunt Rao Holkar — Umeer Khan joins him — Jeswunt Rao recognised in Malwa, as the representative of his nephew Khundee Rao — imbecility of Sindia's proceedings — Sindia induces Holkar to attack the Byes. — Marches towards Hindoostan. — Holkar cuts off two of Sindia's detachments — is repulsed by Major Brownrigg. — Events at Poona — execution of Wittoojee Holkar. — Shirzee Rao Ghatgay defeats a plot against him in a singular manner — he is ordered to join Sindia — defeats Jeswunt Rao Holkar at Indore, which he plunders — Sindia injudiciously gives Holkar time to recover himself — Jeswunt Rao carries the war into the Deccan — his successes there — Sewdasheo Bhow Bhaskur sent to oppose him. Peishwa's conduct. — Battle of Poona — Holkar is victorious. — The Peishwa flees to Singurh — and sends to the British resident a preliminary engagement, binding himself to receive a subsidiary force. — Resident's interview with Holkar. — The Peishwa proceeds to Bassein. — Affairs in Guzerat.

A.D. 1800. THE first of the events alluded to, in point of time and importance, was the death of Nana Furnuwees. His health had long been in a declining state; but he continued to transact business, almost to the last, with his accustomed order and punctuality. He died on the 13th March, "and with him," says Colonel Palmer, "has departed all the wisdom and moderation of the Mahratta government." Nana Furnuwees was certainly a great statesman. His principal defects originated in the want of personal courage, and in an ambition not always restrained by principle. In the latter unhappy years of his life, on the testimony of English as well as Mahratta authority, he is entitled to the high praise of having acted with the feelings and sincerity of a patriot. He honourably advised Bajee Rao to such measures as he believed advantageous, unmindful of any consequences. He was decidedly averse to the admission of a body of foreign troops, in the manner proposed by the Marquis Wellesley, if the energies of the government could possibly be restored without their aid. He respected the English, admired their sincerity and the vigour of their government; but, as political enemies, no one regarded them with more jealousy and alarm. The life of Nana may be said to have been entirely public; and its events have been so fully recorded, as well as the motives for his conduct, that it is unnecessary to enlarge on his character. In private life he was a man of strict veracity, humane, frugal, and charitable. His whole time was regulated with the strictest order, and the business personally transacted by him almost exceeds credibility.

In regard to civil government, whilst he continued in power he endeavoured to preserve the system of Mahdoo Roa Bullal; but overwhelming business, and the frequent distractions that prevailed, produced great laxity in the superintendance.

No instance of greater neglect on the part of an administration, or of more extraordinary criminality in a subordinate officer, is recorded in the annals of any state than the case of Gassee Ram, Kotwal, or police superintendant, of the city of Poona. This man, a Bramin native of Hindoostan, employed the power with which he was vested in perpetrating the most dreadful murders. People disappeared, and no trace of them could be found. Gassee Ram was suspected, but Nana Furnuwees refused to listen to complaints, apparently absurd from their unexampled atrocity. At last, it being suspected that Gassee Ram was starving a respectable Bramin to death, Mannajee Phakray headed a party of the people, broke open the prison, and rescued the unfortunate Bramin, which led to the detection of the monster's crimes; and he fell a victim to the vengeance of the exasperated populace, by whom he was stoned to death.

In his person Nana was tall and thin, his complexion was rather dark and his demeanour grave; but his look intelligent, quick, and penetrating; he left a young widow, and died without issue.

The death of Nana Furnuwees was the origin of a new dispute between the Peishwa and Sindia, each being desirous to obtain the treasures of which he was supposed to have died possessed. Sindia immediately seized Nana's Jagheer, on pretext of his having owed him a krore of rupees; he also supported his widow in her desire to adopt a son;

both because it was in opposition to Bajee Rao's wish, and because it afforded the easiest means of getting the family and treasures into his own power. But these disputes did not prevent their plotting against others; and Sindia, whose re-establishment of Balloba Tattya to power, had disarmed the insurrection of Lukwa Dada, now determined on Balloba's destruction. To this measure he was advised by his father-in-law, who had been set at liberty in the month of January at the recommendation of Balloba, and had regained entire influence over Sindia's mind, of which the first use he made was to stir up a faction against the minister, and then to excite Sindia to his destruction, and that of his immediate adherents. He was accordingly seized, and imprisoned at Ahmednugur, where a natural death interposed to save him from a cruel execution. But his brother Dhondeba, and Narrain Rao Bukhshee, confined at the same time, were both condemned to suffer; the former, in a manner comparatively humane, was blown from a cannon; but the latter, was barbarously destroyed, by being tied round with rockets, which being fired, carried him along, mangling his body dreadfully,—the invention and sport of the execrable Ghatgay.

One of the ruling passions of the Peishwa was implacable revenge; and he having connived at the destruction of the Shenwee Bramins, Sindia, in return, agreed to assist him in the ruin of the friends and adherents of Nana, and the family of the late Pureshram Bhow Putwurdhun. To accomplish the former object, the Peishwa, pretending to renounce the objection to the adoption of a son by the widow of Nana, indirectly encouraged the proceeding; and at last, in order to ensnare Nana's friends, invited them to a meeting at his palace for the express purpose of deliberating on the subject. When assembled, he suddenly accused them of treasonable practices, of plotting against him, and of intending to place the adopted son of Nana's widow on the musnud. He concluded by seizing and sending them off prisoners to hill-forts. In regard to the latter object, of crushing the Putwurdhun family, Sindia the more readily acquiesced in it, as he had long wished to possess himself of their extensive and fertile Jagheer. It was this plot which prevented the capture of Kolapoor; as Appa Sahib, having received timely intelligence of their plan, quitted the siege, and with his own followers, accompanied by Dhondoo Punt Gokla, retired into the Carnatic. The Raja of Kolapoor, through the influence of Shirzee Rao Ghatgay, to whom he was reconciled, became the immediate ally of Sindia, whose battalions, under the orders of Seedojee Rao Nimbalkur, the Dessaye of Nepanee, proceeded to attack the Jagheer of the late Pureshram Bhow; Major Brownrigg, with the battalions, were soon recalled: but Seedojee Rao, at the head of a body of horse, plundered and devastated the country from Merich to Bejapoor.

Disorders were every where prevalent. — Doondia Waug, whom we have already mentioned as having entered the service of the Raja of Kolapoor, separated from him, returned into the Carnatic, and plundered in the Company's lately acquired districts; taking advantage also of the absence of Gokla's troops, he laid the Peishwa's districts in the Carnatic under contribution, and committed great ravages. The British government made application to the Peishwa, and obtained permission to pursue and destroy the marauder; but in the mean time, on the return of Dhondoo Punt Gokla to the Carnatic, Dhoondia Waug, who burned with revenge, vowed, with singular ferocity, to sacrifice his life, or dye his mustachios in the heart's-blood of Dhondoo Punt. On hearing, therefore, of his approach, he laid an ambush in a wood, and watching an opportunity, when Dhondoo Punt was separated from the main body of his followers, attacked and killed him, when he literally fulfilled his vow. Several persons fell with Dhondoo Punt; among whom was his elder nephew: his younger nephew, Bappoo Gokla, whom we shall hereafter have frequent occasion to mention, lost an eye; Chintamun Rao Putwurdhun was also wounded, and the whole of their party were driven to seek refuge at Hullyhal, where they were kindly welcomed and protected by a British detachment then in that garrison.*

The British troops sent in pursuit of Dhoondia Waug, were under the command of Major-General the Honourable Arthur Wellesley, who, on entering the Carnatic, was joined by Gunput Rao Phansay, Bappoo Gokla, and the Putwurdhuns. These Mahratta auxiliaries were of little service;

* Mahratta MSS.

but the British detachment, after a persevering pursuit, had at last the satisfaction of coming 10th Sep. up with Dhoondia at the village of Kondagul. His party, consisting of about 5000 horse, was immediately attacked, routed, and dispersed. Dhoondia exerted himself with spirit, at the head of such men as stood by him, until he was cut down in a charge by the 19th Dragoons.

Sindia was much dissatisfied at the permission granted to the British government of sending troops into the Mahratta territory. His control over the Peishwa was now complete, and fearing that Bajee Rao intended to fly, he for some time kept a guard over his palace. The Peishwa found that his condition was by no means improved by the death of Nana Furnuwees, and from the situation in which he was so long placed, we cannot be surprised that his natural disposition to intrigue should have become incurably habitual. He had much confidence even at this period, in his own wisdom, for extricating himself from the thraldom of Sindia. To that chieftain, even when experiencing indignity from him, Bajee Rao was profuse in his acknowledgments, and pretended to entertain for him the most unbounded gratitude and affection. When it appeared probable that Sindia would be compelled to retire to Hindoostan for the protection of his dominions, the Peishwa entreated his stay, and even threw obstacles in the way of his departure; but he saw, with secret joy, the increasing predatory power of Jeswunt Rao Holkar, as affording a prospect by which he hoped to be enabled to establish his own authority, without the interposition of a foreign power. He was, however, conscious of his own unpopularity as a son of Rugoba; he was anxious to keep well with the British government, and really had a partiality for the English, though he rather chose to depend on Sindia, than to adopt, by calling in their aid, a course which he could not retrace. The establishment of an English subsidiary force, was, it is true, in many respects consonant to his disposition: protection and support against his own subjects, could such have been obtained unfettered by control, being the end at which he aimed; and, if the proposal had been met in the first instance, or afterwards allowed to come from himself, he would have had recourse to that plan at an earlier period. But the haste with which the Marquis Wellesley expected his agents to push on his system, evinced an anxiety which retarded his object at Poona, where the resident prognosticated, that it would never be accomplished, until Bajee Rao had found that all his own schemes were fallacious.

Sindia's affairs in Malwa at length became in the highest degree critical. Jeswunt Rao Holkar's energy and success threatened the entire subjugation of that province, a great part of which he had already pillaged and laid waste. The rise of this predatory chieftain was singularly rapid. After his escape from Nagpoor, he fled to Dhar, where he was kindly received by Anund Rao Powar; but as soon as Sindia heard of his retreat, Anund Rao being unable to shelter him from the power of that chief, he furnished him with a few horses and a little money; with which slender commencement, by enterprise and pillage, he soon collected a band of marauders, and united to his fortunes Umeer Khan, a Patan adventurer at the head of a well-mounted body of his countrymen, and who, by his abilities and predatory habits, was a fit auxiliary for the schemes which Holkar meditated.

Khassee Rao Holkar, according to the first declaration of the party who opposed him, was set aside from incapacity. Jeswunt Rao being illegitimate gave himself out as the subordinate agent of his nephew, Khundee Rao, in custody at Poona, and invited all adherents of the house of Holkar, to unite with him in upholding the name, and rescuing the territories and family from the power of Doulut Rao Sindia. Proceeding to the banks of the Nerbuddah he levied contributions, and plundered Sindia's villages. A detachment of Khassee Rao's regular infantry, sent against him by the Chevalier Dudrenec, was defeated, which greatly raised Jeswunt Rao's reputation, and brought on a negotiation which ended in Dudrenec's joining him with his battalions and guns, and in Jeswunt Rao's being recognised and obeyed as the representative of his nephew, which, shortly after, enabled him to commence regular payments to his troops. But the predatory system, being the mode of warfare he followed, the work of pillage and destruction went forward, and Sindia's territory in Malwa was half ruined, before he had taken any steps to stop the formidable progress of Jeswunt Rao. *

* Sir John Malcolm.

The cause of this military imbecility, on the part of Sindia, was the state of parties at his Durbar. To impede Holkar's career, threats and conciliation were successively resorted to by Doulut Rao's ministers, and Jeswunt Rao, on promise of being supported by Sindia against Khassee Rao, agreed to seize the Byes, to whom he had before proffered friendship. He accordingly attacked their troops, forced the ladies into Burhanpoor, where he besieged them, but they were so fortunate as to escape towards Meywar, through the aid of Juggoo Bappoo, the colleague of Lukwa Dada. Sindia supposed, that in permitting them to get off, Holkar had acted with double treachery, so that, whether the supposition was well or ill-founded, this action was deservedly of no advantage to Jeswunt Rao. Sindia now became convinced that his presence was absolutely necessary to the northward, and in the end of November, quitted the Peishwa's territory, where he left five battalions of regular infantry, and 10,000 horse under Shirzee Rao Ghatgay, having, before he set out, exacted from the Peishwa, bills to the amount of forty-seven lacks of rupees.*

A. D. 1801. Sindia's progress was tardy, and Jeswunt Rao continued to plunder and levy contributions throughout Malwa. Hearing of Sindia's great army, Holkar called in his detachments, and concentrated his force in the neighbourhood of Oojein, with an intention of plundering it.

* Twenty-five by bills on Poona bankers; ten by a bill on the Gaekwar; and twelve by an assignment on Bundelcund. Mahratta MS. Col. Palmer's despatches.

During this period, there was a pause in their hostilities, and Sindia, in hopes of ensuring the protection of his capital, detached for that purpose, four battalions from his own camp at Burhanpoor, under Colonel John Hessing. Two battalions and six companies, under Captain M'Intyre, were ordered on to support Hessing; but Holkar, who saw that it was impossible to avoid extremities, and of the highest importance to strike a successful blow at the outset, first made a show of opposing Hessing, and drew him under the walls of Oojein, where, leaving some troops to amuse him, he pushed on to cut off the detachment under M'Intyre, in which he succeeded, having compelled them to lay down their arms at Newree. With his troops (June.) thus encouraged, he returned to the more arduous attack of Hessing, and a most obstinate contest was maintained by that officer, until his men were completely overpowered. Of eleven European officers in Hessings four battalions, most of whom were British, seven were killed, and three were made prisoners. Hessing alone escaped, and four-fifths of his corps are said to have been killed and wounded.*

Having exacted a very heavy contribution from Oojein, Holkar next proceeded to attack Sindia's grand park of artillery, which had passed the Nerbuddah, and under the protection of (July.) the four battalions of Captain Brownrigg, and a body of horse, was awaiting the junction of the army from Burhanpoor. Brownrigg, on hearing of Holkar's approach, chose a very strong position, which he defended with such judgment and intrepidity, that Holkar's utmost efforts were unavailing.*

* Ferdinand Lewis Smith.

This defence, as it checked Holkar's career, was of the greatest importance to Sindia, who had all this time remained inactive at Burhanpoor; but he now used every exertion to get his army sent across the Nerbuddah, in which he was much assisted by Rughoojee Bhonslay.†

Events were in the meantime occurring at Poona which require notice, as some of them were a good deal influenced by news from the northward. Bajee Rao, on Sindia's departure, instead of endeavouring to conciliate parties, evinced a malignant spirit of revenge towards all the great families whom he suspected of ever having been the political opponents of himself or his father. To distress and pillage all such of them as fell into his power, was, from first to last, a favourite object of his policy. The respectable family of Rastia was among the earliest who experienced his malevolence. Mahdoo Rao Rastia was invited on a friendly visit to the Peishwa's palace, seized, and hurried off as a prisoner to Raigurh. The unpopularity of this deed was proportionate to its treachery and injustice; many instances though of a less conspicuous nature, occurred; the minds of his subjects were alienated, and distrust, and disaffection, towards Bajee Rao's power and government, became almost universal. Anarchy was spreading in the country. Bodies of insurgent horse were plundering in various directions. One party under Bal Kishen Gungadhur was defeated by Gunput Rao Phansay; and Wittoojee Holkar, the brother of Jeswunt Rao, who was concerned with him, and taken prisoner, was barbarously and ignominously executed at Poona. That the Peishwa (April 1.) had a right to inflict the punishment of death, on subjects so taken in arms, cannot be doubted, but insurrection and plundering are not rigidly viewed among Mahrattas, and in public opinion a more lenient sentence than loss of life, ought to have been passed upon the son of Tookajee Holkar; that circumstance, however, operated differently on the mind of the Peishwa, who could not forget that he was the son of the friend of Nana Furnuwees. Having seated himself with his favourite Ballajee Koonjur at a window which overlooked the exterior court of his palace, Wittoojee Holkar was brought before the Peishwa, and there tied to the foot of an elephant; in vain did he offer up the humblest supplications for life and mercy; the execution went forward; Bajee Rao sat a composed spectator and heard the yells of the unhappy malefactor as the animal dragged him forth from the palace yard, to a lingering death, as in his case it happened to be, in the public street. *

* In this action, Dewajee Gokla, an officer of rank, Lieut. Rowbotham, and three hundred men were killed, on the part of Sindia; Holkar's loss was three times that number.

† Ferdinand Lewis Smith; Bombay Records, and Sir John Malcolm.

* Mahratta MSS. Oral information; and Palmer's despatches.

Bajee Rao, by this cruel proceeding, at once glutted his revenge, and performed an acceptable piece of courtesy to Sindia; but Jeswunt Rao, who loved his brother, vowed vengeance on those whom he considered his murderers; and his threats, being soon followed by news of his success against Hessing, communicated an alarm to the conscious and cowardly mind of the Peishwa, which towards Holkar, he could never afterwards conquer. He now, however, opened a negotiation with him, offering to recognise him as the heir of Tookajee Holkar, on condition of his giving up the territories of the family in the Deccan, estimated at twenty-five lacks of rupees of annual revenue. He was also encouraged, by the prospect of Sindia's being long occupied in the north, to devise means of ridding his country of the presence of Shirzee Rao Ghatgay, who only increased the trouble and disorders, to prevent which was the pretext for his being left in the Deccan. After plundering to the southward, he repaired to Poona with a small party, where he became importunate in his demands for money, sat in dhurna on the favourite Ballajee Koonjur, and insulted the whole of the Peishwa's court. At last Koonjur, on pretence of giving him some orders on bankers, invited him to his house, received him graciously, and shortly after got up as if to bring the bills agreed upon. His quitting the room was to be, in reality, the signal for seizing or murdering Ghatgay, but the latter, guessing his intention, instantly grasped his throat with one hand, drew his sword with the other, and in this manner dragged him to the street, where springing on his horse he galloped off to join his party, pursued his route to his army, brought the whole to Poona, and encamped within a mile of the city, which he threatened to plunder and burn. Messages full of conciliatory explanation were sent by Bajee Rao, but the mediation of the British resident became necessary to prevent extremities. The accounts, however, of Sindia's reverses in Malwa, and his express desire that Shirzee Rao should join him immediately to assume command of the army against Holkar, effectually rid the Peishwa of this turbulent and audacious man.

Having joined the army after it had crossed the Nerbuddah, Shizee Rao was sent forward with ten thousand horse, and fourteen battalions under Colonel Sutherland, to avenge the plunder of Oojein by retaliating on Indore, the capital of Holkar. Jesunt Rao advanced to its protection with some regular battalions, but without European officers, five thousand irregular infantry and about 25,000 horse. Skirmishes of some days (Oct. 14.) duration, terminated, in a well concerted, but ill-executed attack, on the part of Holkar, and a signal defeat was the consequence. He lost ninety-eight pieces of cannon, and his capital was completely plundered. The remorseless Ghatgay had here a full opportunity of indulging his disposition to violence, which he fully gratified in dreadful acts of wanton and barbarous cruelty.

Had Sindia followed up the blow, the power of Jeswunt Rao was, by this victory, annihilated; but supposing him to be completely humbled, and being advised to recognise him as guardian to the head of the Holkar family, Sindia made proposals to that effect, and even sent Khassee Rao from his camp, who was thus compelled to seek an asylum in that of his half-brother. But Jeswunt Rao, whether suspicious of Sindia, encouraged by the Peishwa, or led on by an enterprising confidence in his own fortune, was immoderate in his demands; and although become, since his defeat, dependant entirely on plunder, his adventurous spirit was attractive to the soldiery, amongst whom he had a very high reputation, and many of Sindia's troops deserted to him, even at this stage of his career.

A. D. 1802. But Dudrenec, conceiving it prudent to withdraw from a falling cause, listened to overtures from Sindia, which his battalions, more faithful than their commander, having discovered, went off in a body, and joined Jeswunt Rao at Jowud. Holkar now adopted a new plan, and determined on carrying the war into the Deccan. With this view Futih Sing Manay was detached with a body of horse, to ravage the Peishwa's districts; the regular infantry took up a position at Mohesir, whilst Jeswunt Rao in person, in order to veil his intentions, went off to the northward with the remainder of his followers, to plunder in Malwa and Rajpootana, in hopes of drawing Sindia's forces after him, and thus facilitating his future design. He acquired very considerable booty, but Sindia did not pursue him as he expected, a detachment only having been sent after him. Holkar might therefore have been induced to reap a larger harvest in pillage, but the Peishwa, having seized his districts in Candeish, he was hurried into the Deccan for their recovery. Previous, however, to his arrival, an advanced body of his troops attacked the Peishwa's general, Dhondoo Punt Ghorebulay, defeated him, and retook the districts.

As soon as Jeswunt Rao was joined by his infantry from Mohesir, he assailed Sindia's possessions in Candeish, which he plundered and devastated without mercy, declaring at the same time, that he was about to proceed to Poona, to claim the interference of the Peishwa in protecting him, as the agent of the head of the Holkar family, against the tyrannical usurpation of Doulut Rao.

Notwithstanding this appeal to the Peishwa, Futih Sing Manay showed no respect to his territory, but swept the villages on the banks of the Godavery, by contribution and plunder; whilst Shah Amed Khan, another officer detached by Jeswunt Rao, carried his ravages still nearer the Peishwa's capital, and being opposed by Nursing Khundee Rao, the Jagheerdar of Vinchoor, at the head of fifteen hundred horse, the latter were cut off almost to a man.

The consternation at Poona was great in consequence, and Bajee Rao renewed his negotiations with the British government, desiring the aid of a force, but objecting to its being stationed within his own territory; neither would he consent to the articles of the treaty of Mhar, nor the arbitration of the British government in the Mahratta claims on Nizam Ally.

Sindia, supported by Rughoojee Bhonslay, exerted his utmost influence to obstruct the conclusion of any arrangement with the British government, with which he was himself negociating, not with any intention of becoming a party to the defensive alliance, against which both the Raja of Berar and Sindia always maintained a strenuous opposition, but merely to gain a certain degree of consequence, which the presence of the British envoy in his camp was at that time likely to create in the mind of the Peishwa.

It is difficult to account for the inactivity of Sindia in the prosecution of the war against Holkar. Doulut Rao became, about this period, suspicious of Perron, but the death of Lukwa Dada, and a final arrangement concluded with the Byes by Ambajee Inglia, one of Sindia's principal officers, left him nothing to apprehend in Hindoostan, which should have prevented his following up Holkar. After much delay he at last ordered Sewdasheo Bhow Bhaskur to march against Jeswunt Rao with a large body of cavalry, and ten battalions of infantry under Captain Dawes. This force forded the Nerbuddah without impediment; but on their arrival at Burhanpoor the troops refused to advance without payment of all their arrears, and before these could be settled, the Taptee was so swoln that they could not cross. Jeswunt Rao at first moved as if to give them battle on the southern bank; but if such was his intention, he soon abandoned it, and again moved towards Poona. The Peishwa tried by every means to prevent his advance, desired him to state his demands, and promised to arbitrate all differences if he would remain to the northward of the Godavery. "My brother Wittoojee," replied Jeswunt Rao, "is dead, —he cannot be restored to me; but let Khundee Rao, my nephew, be released, and let the family possessions be given up." To these conditions Bajee Rao appeared to assent, and assured Holkar he had sent an order for the release of Khundee Rao; but instead of which, he begged of Sewdasheo Bhow Bhaskur to take advantage of the negotiation, and advance with all speed, while Khundee Rao was thrown into prison in the fort of Asseergurh.

Shortly afterwards, a body of the Peishwa's troops, under Pandoojee Koonjur, attempted to oppose Futih Sing Manay at Gardoon, but were defeated with loss; Manay followed up his victory by attacking the Peishwa's camp at Baramuttee, where he routed Nana Poorundhuree and Gunput Rao Phansay, taking the whole of the artillery. The southern Jagheerdars, particularly the Putwurdhuns, who had evinced considerable discontent towards the Peishwa since the treacherous seizure of Rastia, might have prevented or avenged this loss, but except Chintamun Rao, none of the Putwurdhuns joined the Peishwa's standard at this period, and that chief took the first opportunity of quitting it.

Sewdasheo Bhow Bhaskur at the head of Sindia's forces, having passed Holkar's army, advanced by Jaulna and Bheer towards Poona, and having formed a junction with the Peishwa's troops, the united armies prepared to oppose Holkar at the Ally Beylah pass, on which he was marching;

but Holkar, aware of the strength of their position, made a circuit to the eastward, passed Ahmednugur, proceeded towards Jejoory, formed a junction with Futih Sing Manay, de-
(Oct. 23.) scended the Rajwaree pass, and on the 23d October encamped in the neighbourhood of Poona, between Lonee and Harupseer. The opposing army had returned from Ally Beylah about eight days before, and occupied a position nearer the city, and in the vicinity of the present cantonment of the British troops. Two days were spent in negotiation. The Peishwa demanded Holkar's reason for thus advancing in a hostile manner to his capital, and ordered him to retire. The latter professed his readiness to obey every order from the Peishwa when he was not under the control of Sindia, but that Sindia had disobeyed the Peishwa's orders, had rendered the confinement of Khundee Rao doubly severe, and had sent his army to prevent that mediation which the Peishwa had promised; that Sindia therefore was the real rebel, and he would soon oblige him to submit to the sovereign authority of the Peishwa.

The armies drew out for battle on the (Oct. 25.) morning of the 25th October. Holkar had fourteen battalions; six under Colonel Vickers, four under Major Harding, and four under Major Armstrong: 5000 irregular infantry, and 25,000 horse. Although Sindia's infantry was in every respect much inferior to that of Holkar, Sewdasheo Bhow Bhaskur did not decline the contest, to which he was strongly urged by Captain Dawes. His cavalry and irregular infantry, including those belonging to the Peishwa, were, in point of numbers, at least equal to those of Holkar. The action began, at half past nine o'clock, by a brisk cannonade, which continued with little interruption for two hours and a half. A body of Holkar's Patan cavalry made a successful charge on the horse of the Jagheerdar of Vinchoor, but Futih Sing Manay, in a like attempt on the Peishwa's Hoojrat Pagah, (or horse on the personal establishment,) was repulsed, with very considerable loss. Sindia's cavalry followed up the advantage, and those of Holkar were on the point of discomfiture, when Holkar himself, who had taken his station in the rear, sprang on his horse, and calling to those near him, "now or never to follow Jeswunt Rao," rallied the fugitives, and collected a compact body of his best horse, with which he met and repulsed those of Sindia.

In the meantime, six of Sindia's battalions, which were without European officers, and opposed to those of Holkar under Vickers, had given way. The remaining four, however, being of the old battalions of De Boigne, though with only four European officers to head them, behaved with great intrepidity. They stood their ground with remarkable firmness and discipline; but Holkar, having driven off the cavalry, charged the infantry, cut down the artillery-men at their guns, killed three of the European officers of the battalions, and took the fourth prisoner: still these battalions fought on, till they were completely overpowered by the persevering and desperate efforts of Holkar, who headed his cavalry, in charge after charge, and at length bore all before him. A complete victory was the reward of the uncommon energy displayed by Jeswunt Rao on this memorable occasion. The whole of Sindia's guns, baggage, and stores, fell into his hands, and the army of his rival was driven off the field. Holkar's troops were ordered to fall back, and not to enter the town, but many of them showing no inclination to obey, he compelled them to desist, by turning his own guns upon them.

The Peishwa, not doubting of success, had quitted his palace, with an idea of joining in the action; but the noise of the firing frightened him, and he turned off to the southward of the town, to await the result. On ascertaining the fate of the battle, he fled, with about seven thousand followers, to the fort of Singurh, and despatched to Colonel Close, the British resident, a preliminary engagement, binding himself to subsidize six battalions of Sepoys, and to cede twenty-five lacks of rupees of annual revenue for their support. In the course of the previous negotiation he had conceded that point which regarded their being stationed within his own dominions.

Towards the close of the action, the cavalry of the contending armies were very near the British residency. Colonel Close had taken the precaution of hoisting the British flag, in the most conspicuous parts about the Sungum, which had the effect of ensuring the respect of both parties.

Holkar sent an invitation to the resident to come and see him on the following day, which Colonel Close did not think it prudent to decline. He found the conqueror in a small tent, ankle deep in mud, wounded by a spear, and with a sabre cut in the head, which last he received from an artillery-man, in one of the charges. In his conversation he was polite and frank, spoke lightly of his wounds, and expressed himself in the most friendly manner towards the resident and the British government. He seemed extremely desirous of obtaining the mediation of the resident in settling with Sindia and the Peishwa, and solicited Colonel Close, whom he detained about a month at Poona, to arbitrate in the existing differences.

For a short time after his victory, Holkar assumed an appearance of great moderation; he placed guards for the protection of the city, treated all the dependants of the Peishwa with kindness, and used many vain endeavours to induce him to return to his palace. Bajee Rao remained for three days at Singurh, and then hastily retired to Raigurh, where he released Mahdoo Rao Rastia, till then confined in that fortress, restored his Jagheer, and gave him a commission to raise men for his service.

Quitting Raigurh the Peishwa proceeded to Mhar, whence he despatched letters to the Bombay government, requesting that ships might be sent to convey him and his followers to that island. Before a reply was sent to that communication, Khundee Rao Rastia, the Sur-Soobehdar of Bassein, had joined Bajee Rao at Mhar; but on hearing of the approach of Holkar's troops, who were sent in pursuit of him, the Peishwa repaired to Severndroog, where he resided for some time, under protection of that fort, until again alarmed by accounts of Umeer Khan's being in the neighbourhood, he crossed over to Rewadunda, and thence embarking in an English ship, provided for his reception, he proceeded, accompanied by Khundee Rao Rastia, to Bassein, where he landed 6th December.

Previous to entering on the events at Poona, and the articles of provision of the treaty of Bassein, or its important consequences, it is necessary to explain the state of affairs in Guzerat, and the immediate causes which led to the connection, still subsisting, between the Gaekwar and the English; leaving their definitive treaty of 1805, and all subsequent settlements, to be explained in their natural order.

CHAP. XI.

FROM A. D. 1793, TO A. D. 1803.

Affairs of Baroda. — War between Govind Rao Gaekwar and Aba Shelookur. — The English depose the Nabob of Surat — they are promised the Gaekwar's share of the Chouth and the district of Chourassy. — Gaekwar reduces Shelookur and obtains the Peishwa's share of Guzerat in farm. — Death of Govind Rao Gaekwar — his eldest son Anund Rao succeeds him — two parties in the Government, the one under Rowjee Appajee, the other under Kanhojee Rao Gaekwar — both apply to the British Government for aid — the Governor of Bombay supports the party of Rowjee Appajee, by sending a small detachment into Guzerat under Major Walker. — Mulhar Rao Gaekwar attacks the British troops — reinforcements sent into Guzerat — Mulhar Rao is reduced. — A British subsidiary force established at Baroda — embarrassed state of the finances — Sunkhera reduced. — The Arab mercenaries oppose the projected reforms. — Siege and surrender of Baroda. — Kanhojee Rao Gaekwar maintains an insurrection against the Government. — Affair of Sawree — gallant conduct of Major Holmes.

(A. D. 1793.) THE reader may recollect that Govind Rao Gaekwar assumed charge of the Baroda government in December 1793, and also that Aba Shelookur, the deputy-governor of the Peishwa's share of Guzerat, was one of the principal persons who accompanied Nana Furnuwees to Sindia's camp, the day on which that minister was treacherously seized by Michel Filoze. Aba Shelookur, gave Doulut Rao Sindia a bond for ten lacks of rupees, as the price of his liberty, and for permission to return to Guzerat, where on his arrival he immediately assumed charge of the government at Ahmedabad. Being one of the partizans of Nana, Govind Rao Gaekwar was secretly incited against him by Bajee Rao, and Shelookur, being pressed for the payment of his ransom, levied more than his own proportion of revenue, and exacted money from some of Gaekwar's villages. Hostilities soon followed, and for a time, Aba Shelookur was successful in the war of plunder and extortion which he pursued against the subjects of Govind Rao.

(A. D. 1798.)

(A. D 1799.) In 1799 the nabob of Surat died, and the year following, during the prevalence of the disturbances to which we have now alluded, Mr. Jonathan Duncan, governor of Bombay, proceeded to Surat, commissioned by the governor-general to assume charge of the government of that city, granting to the nabob's brother, who was the heir apparent to the naib-ship, an annual pension, on condition of his resigning all pretensions to the exercise of authority. Mr. Duncan was at the same time directed to endeavour to obtain the Gaekwar's share of the Chouth of Surat, without reference to the negotiations with the Peishwa for his portion of it. Two wukeels having been sent by Govind Rao to congratulate Mr. Duncan on his arrival, the latter conceived the opportunity favourable for making the application in question, to which he added a request, that Chourassy, the district immediately surrounding Surat, might be added to the grant. Govind Rao readily promised to bestow both the one and the other on the East India Company, without requiring any condition on their part, merely observing, that it was incumbent on the Company to obtain the Peishwa's sanction to the measure, which, had the Peishwa been able to maintain his authority independent of the English, would have been tantamount to a refusal; both because the Poona court was particularly anxious to perpetuate the Mahratta claims on Surat, owing to an extravagant idea of its consequence which they derived from the Moghuls; and because, in regard to the cession of Chourassy, the same objections urged by the British government, and admitted by Nana Furnuwees, at the time of Govind Rao's accession, were precisely applicable on this occasion.* The reason of Govind Rao's extreme complaisance was soon apparent, by his making an application for aid against Shelookur, which was evaded; but shortly afterwards Ahmedabad was taken, Shelookur was made prisoner, and the Peishwa granted his share of the revenue of Guze-rat, in farm to the Baroda government, for a period of five years, at five lacks of rupees annually. This agreement was concluded in October 1800; but the death of Govind Rao, which happened during the preceding month, occasioned fresh disturbances in the province.

* On this transaction of the governor of Bombay, the Court of Directors make the following observation: — "How desirable soever it might have been to obtain a territory contiguous to Surat, in consequence of the late arrangement with the nabob of that city, it ought not to have been accepted at the risk of incurring the imputation of a breach of faith, and the consequent resentment of the Peishwa, with whom we were reciprocally bound to preserve the integrity of the Brodera principality, and with whom our interference has, at a former period, been successful in preventing the execution of a similar design on his part. We have, however, the satisfaction to observe by the 14th article of the treaty of Bassein, that the Peishwa has formally recognized the treaty with the Raja Anund Rao Gaekwar, otherwise we should have thought it incumbent on us to desire that the before-mentioned cessions be restored to the Gaekwar government."

Govind Rao Gaekwar left a large family; four legitimate, and seven illegitimate sons, besides daughters. His eldest son Anund Rao was acknowledged by the principal officers as successor; but being a prince of weak intellect, different parties attempted to take the lead in the administration. Kanhojee Rao, the eldest illegitimate son of Govind Rao, a bold ambitious young man, was, in consequence of his turbulent behaviour, placed in confinement previous to his father's death, but having afterwards contrived to effect his release, by professions of attachment to his brother, and his influence with some of the soldiery, he soon usurped, not only the office of minister, but the entire powers of the state, and continued to rule for some months. At the end of that time, he was deposed by a party headed by Rowjee Appajee, a Purvoe, who had been the principal minister of the late Govind Rao; and both these persons, Rowjee the minister in power, and Kanhojee the deposed authority, made offers to the Bombay government, in order to engage its support. Rowjee promised to confirm the cessions of the late Govind Rao, and Kanhojee offered to add the district of Chickly to the grant. Rowjee was supported by his brother Babajee, who commanded the cavalry of the state, and by the greater part of a large body of Arab mercenaries, who composed the garrison of the town. The Arabs, whose numbers amounted to about seven thousand, though in some respects bound by unity of interests, were with their chiefs, divided among themselves into parties, under the influence of two Soucars or Bankers , the one named Mungul Parikh, the other Samul Becher, both men of great wealth acquired by exorbitant interest on loans, and who were the means by which the needy government of the Gaekwar was at once supplied and impoverished. Both these persons had acceded to the deposition of Kanhojee, so that Rowjee's party was the strongest at Baroda; but the cause of Kanhojee was espoused by Mulhar Rao Gaekwar, the first cousin of the late Govind Rao, and son and successor to Khundee Rao, the Jagheerdar of Kurree, a man of considerable talent and enterprize. On promise of a remission of arrears and exemption from future tribute on the part of Kanhojee, Mulhar Rao, although he had at first acquiesced in the propriety of deposing and confining him, took the field at the head of a considerable army, in aid of his cause, and began to reduce the garrisons held for Anund Rao under the administration of Rowjee. The minister immediately proposed to the Bombay government to subsidize five battalions, on condition of being supported against Mulhar Rao, an offer too tempting to be resisted; but the governor-general having sent no reply to Mr. Duncan's numerous applications for instructions, it was determined, with that injudicious caution which characterizes half measures, to send a small auxiliary force of about 1600 men to Rowjee's support. Major Alexander Walker, the officer in command of the detachment, was instructed to settle the disturbance, by amicable mediation, if possible; otherwise, he was to act with Babajee, the brother of Rowjee, in suppressing the rebellion of Mulhar Rao. Major Walker's detachment joined the Gaekwar's army in the end of February 1802, and advanced with it towards Kurree. Mulhar Rao, affecting regret for what he had done, offered to restore the places he had taken, and seemed sincerely desirous of making his peace: it was, however, soon discovered that he was insincere in his professions: the army advanced, Mulhar Rao continued to negociate, but suddenly, and in a most treacherous manner, attacked the troops, (March 17.) and was repulsed by the British detachment, though they lost on the occasion about fifty men. It being, however, afterwards discovered that Mulhar Rao had seduced many of the Gaekwar's troops, Major Walker's situation became critical, and all the disposable troops at Bombay and Goa were immediately embarked under command of Colonel Sir William Clarke, who landed at Cambay on the 12th of April, marched on the 14th, and joined Major Walker at Kurree, who had acted chiefly on the defensive since the action of the 17th of March. Colonel Clarke found Mulhar Rao's army strongly entrenched under the walls of the town, and it was determined to storm their position without delay. The attack was made at break of day, on the morn-(April 30.) ing of the 30th April, and the entrenchments carried in the most gallant style, with the loss on the part of the British of a hundred and sixty-three men in killed and wounded. Mulhar Rao shortly afterwards surrendered at discretion; Kurree was evacuated, and made over to the Gaekwar's government, but two companies of Sepoys remained under a British officer to garrison the citadel. A small part of the army returned with Sir William Clarke to Bombay; the rest remained under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Woodington, subject to the requisitions of Major Walker, who was appointed political resident at the Gaekwar Court.

(A.D. 1801.)

* The soldiery in the service of native states in India, owing to the irregular manner in which they are paid, have generally a shroff, or money changer, the agent of some soucar, attached to each division, who advances them money at a high interest, and recovers it as he best can.

A place of residence was assigned to Mulhar Rao in the town of Neriad, and 1.25.000 rupees, of the revenue of that district, were set aside for his support, with a promise, in the event of his conducting himself peaceably, to enlarge his income as the necessities of the state were diminished.

* An extraordinary anecdote is related of Lieut. M'Cole of the 75th regt. in this attack, which deserves to be recorded — Just as Lieut. M. at the head of the grenadiers, had got into the entrenchment, he observed a Patan in the act of levelling his matchlock at him, when snatching up a cannon shot which happened to be at his foot, he threw it with such instantaneous effect, as to prevent his purpose by killing him on the spot. Lieut. M.'s strength and agility, as may be conceived from this fact, were very remarkable; but shortly afterwards, having caught the Guzerat fever, he died at Baroda after a few hours illness.

The finances of the Baroda government were in such a deplorable state of confusion and embarassment, that without foreign aid, it would have been quite impossible to extricate it from total ruin. The prudence and ability of the British resident were a powerful means of introducing reform; for although Rowjee Appajee was anxious for power, and jealous of authority, he gladly solicited support when insurrections were to be suppressed, the government to be strengthened, its expences to be reduced, money to be raised, and debt to be redeemed.

The object requiring immediate attention was Gunput Row, a relation of the Gaekwar family, and Mamlitdar of Sunkhera near Baroda, who had declared for Mulhar Rao, and held the fort of Sunkhera in his name: he had also been joined by Moorar Rao, one of the illegitimate sons of the late Gaekwar. A detachment of the subsidiary force was sent to reduce Sunkhera, and soon succeeded in obtaining its surrender; but Gunput Rao and Moorar Rao made their escape, and found a refuge with the Powars of Dhar.

A. D. 1802. The next difficulty originated in the first essential reform, the reduction of the military force. The Arab mercenaries, who had for some time ruled at Baroda, became alarmed at the prospect of a diminution in their body, and after some discussion, in the course of which they advanced extravagant demands for arrears, taking advantage of their situation in the town, they confined the Gaekwar, and refused to release him until their claims were satisfied. They also permitted Kanhojee to escape. Mulhar Rao disappeared about the same time from Neriad, and from the number of men already discharged, the late dispersion of Mulhar Rao's army, and the unemployed soldiery at all times numerous in Guzerat, great apprehensions of serious disorders were naturally entertained. Major Walker, anxiously endeavoured to bring them to terms, and to restore order without the necessity of resorting to force; but finding every reasonable inducement ineffectual, he called in the aid of a European regiment from Bombay, which having joined the subsidiary force, Colonel Woodington in-

(Dec. 18.) vested the town of Baroda, and after a siege of ten days, during which the Arabs from the cover of the walls and houses killed a number of the assailants, and picked off a large proportion of officers, the breach being practicable, the garrison surrendered. The terms of capitulation were, the payment of such arrears as might be found justly their due, and a promise on their part, to quit the country. The arrears amounted to seventeen and a half lacks, and were duly discharged. Most of the Arab chiefs honourably adhered to the conditions, but some of them, especially Abood Jemadar, forfeited the pledge he had given, went off at the head of a large party in a contrary direction to that which had been prescribed, and with a view to join Kanhojee. Col. Woodington having been sent in pursuit of them, surprised their camp, and dispersed them, but the fugitives prosecuted their route and ultimately most of them joined Kanhojee. That person, after his escape from Baroda, fled to Rajpeeplee, a hilly tract on the northern boundary of Maharashtra, where having collected a body of men, he returned to Guzerat, during the siege of Baroda, attacked and routed a body of Babajee's troops, and prosecuted his march to the vicinity of the town.

1803. Jan. 1st. Five days after its surrender, a detachment consisting of His Majesty's seventy-fifth regiment and a battalion of Sepoys, was sent under Major Holmes in pursuit of Kanhojee, who continued moving about, collecting troops, levying contributions, and endeavouring to stir up a party in his favour at Baroda. After a vain pursuit of one month, it was thought advisable to reinforce Major Holmes with 250 Europeans, and 800 Sepoys, and at length Kanhojee took (Feb. 6th.) post in a strong ravine within four or five miles of the village of Sauree, where his troops concealing themselves, allowed the advanced guard to enter before they gave their fire. It fell with such effect that the troops were thrown into some disorder. The Arabs immediately charged sword in hand, overpowered the advanced guard, and pressed forward in a most animated and daring manner. Major Holmes instantly dismounted, and placing himself at the head of the grenadiers of the 75th, followed by those of the second battalion, 1st regiment, he rushed forward supported by his whole line, and soon drove the enemy from the field. The loss of the British in this affair was considerable, upwards of one hundred men having been killed and wounded, of whom five were officers. Major Holmes displayed great energy on the occasion, particularly in a personal rencounter with an Arab of great size, whom he laid dead at his feet, having by one cut, nearly severed the body of his antagonist. *

Kanhojee continued in Guzerat for about a month after this defeat, till having near Kupperwunj made a last attempt to stand, his camp was stormed by Major Holmes, and his force dispersed. He himself fled to Oojein. †

* I give this anecdote on the authority of my friend and brother officer, the late Major Edward Tandy, who saw the combat between them. The late Major-General Sir George Holmes, K.C.B., Major at the time the above affair took place, was a man of great stature and strength. He is said to have been frequently engaged hand to hand, and to have been always equally successful. He carried a stout stick in action, which, when he condescended to draw his sword, he used as a shield.

† Major Tandy's private journal. Bombay records. Oral information.

CHAP. XII.

FROM A.D. 1802, TO A.D. 1803.

Events at Poona.—Winaek Rao, the son of Amrut Rao, is placed on the musnud by Holkar. — Treaty of Bassein. — Sindia and Rughoojee Bhonslay unite to obstruct the objects of the treaty. — Advance of the British troops — return of the Peishwa to Poona — Negotiation with the confederates — preparations for war — war declared — capture of Ahmednugur — battle of Assaye — Burhanpoor — Asseergurh — Baroach, and Pawungurh taken. — Of the war in Hindoostan. — Revert to General de Boigne — his opinions and those of his successor — advance of the Bengal army — affair of Coel — storm of Aligurh — successful attack on Shekoabad by M. Fleury — battle of Delhi — battle of Agra — battle of Laswaree — conquest of Kuttack, and of Bundelcund — supplemental articles to the treaty of Bassein — prosecution of the war in the Deccan — Captain Baynes' defence — negotiations — battle of Argaom — siege and storm of Gawelgurh — negotiations — treaty of Deogaom — treaty of Surjee Anjengaom, and of Burhanpoor — partition treaties — treaties with the Rajpoots, Jhats, and Ambajee Inglia.

A.D. 1802. THE natural order of events now carries us back to affairs at Poona, before entering on the history of the important transactions which succeeded the Peishwa's arrival at Bassein.

The moderation at first shown by Holkar after his victory, was a mere cloak to allure Bajee Rao to return to his capital. Being in distress for funds to pay his troops, Holkar, in order to satisfy the most urgent of their demands, was obliged to levy a contribution from the city of Poona, but for that purpose he employed two of Bajee Rao's ministers, Chintoo Punt Deshmookh and Wyjunath Punt Mama, who, without being apprized of their master's intention, had been sent by him to negociate with Holkar, a few hours previous to his retreat from Singhur to the Concan. Such was their influence with the inhabitants, that a very considerable cess was promptly raised, in the vain hope of buying exemption from future pillage, by their readiness to comply with a measure, which, sanctioned by these men, had something of the character of regular authority.

When Holkar found that the Peishwa had no intention of returning, he sent a body of his troops to Amrut Rao at Joonere, inviting him to take charge of the government at Poona; but Amrut Rao, on various pretences, declined the invitation for several days. At last he arrived on (Nov. 12.) the 12th November, and was prevailed upon to assume the government, in which he was assisted by Moraba Furnuwees, Baba Rao Phurkay, and several others of the adherents of Nana Furnuwees. He held his court in tents pitched at the village of Bambooree on the outskirts of the city. He refused to ascend the musnud himself, and for some time opposed a plan of elevating his son, Winaek Rao, to that dignity, as desired by Holkar; but when Bajee Rao quitted Mhar, and threw himself entirely on the protection of the English, Amrut Rao pretended to consider it an abdication of the Peishwa-ship, and assented to the proposal of Holkar. The Raja of Satara at first obstinately refused to grant the usual form of investiture till prevailed upon by his brother Chitoor Sing, who had been for some time of Holkar's party, serving with the division of Futih Sing Manay.

Holkar now laid aside the mask of moderation, and began to extort and to plunder with all the violence of his habits and character. Chintoo Punt, and Wyjunath Punt, who by their exertions in levying the contribution might have been at least entitled to his forbearance, were delivered over as prisoners to Huree Punt Bhawey, and Hureenath, two Bramins, equally cruel, and more systematically wicked, than Shirzee Rao Ghatgay. They tortured both the persons thus made over to them, in order to extort money; and every respectable householder of Poona, possessed of property, was seized and forced, by any means, to give up his wealth. Several men died under the tortures they underwent. Amrut Rao was not less blameable than Holkar in the enormities thus inflicted on the unhappy inhabitants of Poona, whose sufferings at this time were particularly severe, owing to Bajee Rao's having stationed guards to prevent their flight previous to the battle of the 25th October; and Holkar, though with a different motive, took care to observe a similar precaution, as soon as the issue of the contest had established his control.

These excesses were begun even before Colonel Close quitted Poona. Both Amrut Rao and Holkar were very desirous of prolonging his stay, in hopes of his being prevailed upon to mediate in their differences with Sindia and the Peishwa, and of gaining by his presence the apparent sanction of the British government to their usurpation; but finding that no persuasion could alter his purpose, he was at last permitted to depart on the 20th November, and he arrived at Bombay on the 3d of the following month. Colonel Close met Bajee Rao on the evening of the day on which the latter landed at Bassein; and the preliminary of the proposed treaty, already tendered by an agent on the day of his flight from his capital, was immediately alluded to and acknowledged by the Peishwa himself. The 18th December was the day appointed for the discussion of the various articles of this treaty, and on the 31st it was finally completed. It was declaredly, for the purpose of general defensive alliance, and the reciprocal protection of the territories of the Peishwa and the English East India Company, and their allies respectively. For this purpose a subsidiary force, of not less than six thousand regular infantry, with the usual proportion of field-artillery and European artillery-men, were to be permanently stationed in the Peishwa's dominions. In the event of war, two battalions of the infantry, not less than one thousand each, were to remain near the Peishwa's person: the rest, joined by six thousand infantry and ten thousand horse of the Peishwa's own troops, were to act as circumstances might require. No European, of a nation hostile to the English, was to be entertained by the Peishwa. Districts yielding twenty-six lacks of rupees were assigned for the payment of the subsidiary force; and all articles intended for the consumption of these troops, were to be allowed to pass duty free. The Peishwa relinquished his claims on Surat, and submitted to the British arbitration in the adjustment of his differences and claims on the Nizam and the Gaekwar: with respect to the former, he bound himself to conform to the treaty of Mhar; and in regard to the latter, he recognised the engagement lately concluded between Anund Rao Gaekwar and the British. The Peishwa likewise bound himself to engage in no hostilities with other states, neither to commence nor pursue, in future, any negotiations with any power whatever, without previous consultation with the British government.

Such was the substance of the important treaty of Bassein, by which the Peishwa sacrificed his independence as the price of protection, but it was the only course he could pursue to save himself from becoming, more than ever, a pageant in the hands of one or other of the contending chiefs. He had scarcely ratified the treaty when he began to waver in his plans, and to regret the decided line of policy, so contrary to his disposition, into which he had been hurried by the exigency of his circumstances. Motives of policy probably dictated the expression of his regret that Sindia had not been consulted, but there was no insincerity in his strenuous objections to those articles which tended to control his political freedom and influence, nor to the arbitration of his claims on the Gaekwar and the Nizam: a sacrifice on his part greater than the English authorities seem ever to have fully understood, or at all events appreciated. A. D. 1803. He despatched Ballajee Koonjur to Sindia, and Narrain Rao Wydh to Rughoojee Bhonslay, ostensibly with the view of explaining the nature of the alliance into which he had entered, but in fact, as he knew they were both averse to it, rather to excuse his conduct, in having been obliged, owing to their absence, to flee from Holkar and seek safety with Europeans. He sent no copy of the treaty, and in his letter, invites Sindia and Rughoojee Bhonslay to march to Poona with all speed; not expressly to act against the English, of whom he takes no notice, but to punish the rebel Holkar.* He seems to have expected, that Sindia and Rughoojee Bhonslay would unite to oppose the objects of the treaty; to have been doubtful of the issue of the contest that might ensue between them and the English; and to have been anxious, as usual, to deceive all parties, whilst he at the same time endeavoured to keep on terms with them.

The governor-general hoped that Sindia might be deterred from any hostile attempts to obstruct the operation of the treaty. After the battle of Poona, an effort was made to induce him to enter upon the defensive alliance, and upon the conclusion of the treaty of Bassein, he was again invited, in the manner hereafter detailed, to enter on similar engagements; but Sindia, though he would have been pleased in the first moment of alarm, after the defeat of his army by Holkar, to have seen a

* Copies of his secret letters found in his palace at Poona.

British force co-operating with his own for the temporary purpose of re-establishing the Peishwa in his capital, and suppressing the power of his rival, was mortified and incensed on finding that his own and his uncle's plans for controlling the Peishwa's government were at once frustrated and overturned. Nor were these the only evils resulting from the Peishwa's engagements. He saw his own independence might be soon affected by the support which the Peishwa derived from a foreign nation, whose power, by a novel system of encroachment, threatened the subversion of the Mahrattas; as effectually, as their establishment of Chouth and Surdeshmookee had overwhelmed the empire of the Moghuls.

The aversion with which Rughoojee Bhonslay had always regarded the Peishwa's connecting himself with the English was well known, and his sentiments on the present occasion were in entire unison with those of Sindia. Yadow Rao Bhaskur, Sindia's prime minister, was deputed by his master to consult with Rughoojee on the best means of cementing a general confederacy of the Mahrattas against the common enemy; and Sindia, who had been preparing troops to oppose Holkar, crossed the Nerbuddah on the 4th February with a large army, with which he encamped at Burhanpoor on the 23d of that month. It was a few days after this period when Colonel Collins, an envoy on the part of the governor-general, arrived for the purpose of again inviting him to enter upon the alliance, and engaging his co-operation in the arrangements required by the treaty with the Peishwa. To gain time, Sindia at first evaded discussion; but when pressed by Colonel Collins, he declined becoming a party to the defensive alliance, declaring, that he had no intention of obstructing the treaty; he added, that as guarantee to the treaty of Salbye he expected to have been consulted before these new engagements were made, but that his intentions were, in every respect, friendly to the British government. These professions were from the first deceitful; both Rughoojee Bhonslay and himself were actively preparing for war, and Bajee Rao continued in constant correspondence with them, secretly encouraging their views. *

The governor-general, in the mean time, had taken his measures for the re-establishment of Bajee Rao on his musnud at Poona. For this purpose the subsidiary force at Hyderabad, consisting of six battalions of infantry, each upwards of one thousand strong, with two regiments of native cavalry under Colonel Stevenson, took up a position at Purinda near the Peishwa's eastern frontier, accompanied by fifteen thousand of the Nizam's troops. The Honourable Major-General Wellesley was detached from the main army of Madras, assembled on the northern frontier of Mysore, with eight thousand infantry, and one thousand seven hundred cavalry; being directed to march towards Poona for the purpose of co-operating with Colonel Stevenson in the Peishwa's restoration. General Wellesley was joined on the banks of the Kistna by the Southern Mahratta Jagheerdars: Appa Sahib and Chintamun Rao Putwurdhun, Bappoo Gunnesh Gokla, Appa Dessaye Nepankur, and the family of the Patunkurs. The Jagheerdar of Vinchoor, grandson of Wittul Sewdeo, likewise attended the British army. The southern Jagheerdars had orders from the Peishwa to co-operate with the English; and all of them, on this occasion, especially the family of Putwurdhun, evinced a very friendly disposition to the British government. Straggling bodies of Holkar's horse, belonging to the division of Umeer Khan, and Futih Sing Manay, were plundering the country between the Beema and Kistna; but on being called upon to desist they retired. They had scarcely crossed the Beema, when Umeer Khan suspecting that Manay intended to join the Peishwa, contrived to seize him, and disperse his troops.

(March 25th.)

* Copies of secret letters found in the palace at Poona.

General Wellesley, on approaching Poona, made a march of sixty miles in thirty-two hours, and reached that city with his cavalry on the 20th April. Colonel Stevenson in the meantime arrived from Purinda at Gardoon on the Beema. General Wellesley's object in advancing so rapidly was to save the city of Poona, which it was supposed Amrut Rao intended to burn; but he had retired many hours before the arrival of the British troops. Holkar was already on his retreat towards Malwa; but intelligence having reached Colonel Stevenson that he had levied a contribution on Aurungabad, and plundered some of the Nizam's villages, that officer advanced towards the Godavery for the protection of the country.

Amrut Rao, accompanied by Huree Punt Bhawee, after leaving Poona, marched to Sungumnere, plundering the towns and villages on his route; then turning on Nassuck, he attacked and defeated a body of troops in the interests of Bajee Rao, commanded by Raja Buhadur, and pillaged the town in the same barbarous manner as had been already done at Poona. Amrut Rao remained in the neighbourhood of Nassuck for some time; and, as we shall have little occasion to introduce his name in the subsequent pages of this history, we may here briefly mention, that all overtures of reconciliation between him and Bajee Rao having been obstinately rejected by the latter, he entered into an engagement with General Wellesley, and, during the progress of the war which followed, joined the British troops with a body of horse. His services were on no occasion conspicuous, but a most liberal pension of eight lacks of rupees was assigned to him by the British government, on which he retired to Benares, where he still resides.

The Peishwa, escorted by a body of 2300 infantry, of whom 1200 were Europeans, arrived from Bassein, and resumed his seat on the musnud the 13th May. Sindia still occupied his position at Burhanpoor, and Rughoojee Bhonslay was preparing to join him. Every endeavour was used to induce Holkar to take a part in the confederacy. Rughoojee Bhonslay was employed as mediator between him and Sindia; and Holkar, who was at the same time carrying on a negotiation with the Peishwa, through Colonel Close, listened and appeared to favour the overtures of the confederates, from whom he obtained the release of his nephew, Khundee Rao, the restoration of his family territory in Malwa, and a promise that all his rights in Hindoostan should be recognised.

It was the interest of the British government to conciliate Holkar; and, in order to prevent his joining the confederacy, they wished to overlook any cause of complaint they had against him; but the Peishwa could not be prevailed upon to listen to any mediation in his favour. The confederates wished Holkar to unite his army with theirs in the Deccan, but he excused himself by asking who was to take care of Hindoostan; and immediately retired to Malwa, with the real design of being guided by the issue of events.

Although the plans of the confederates were conducted with considerable secrecy, rumours of their hostile designs were universally prevalent. The governor-general deemed it expedient to call upon Sindia for an explicit declaration of his intentions, and to make efficient preparations in every part of British India to repel the hostilities apparently meditated. In reply to the demands for explanation, sent by the resident, Sindia declared that it was impossible to afford any satisfaction until he had met the Raja of Berar, after which the resident should be informed whether it would be peace or war.

Their armies advanced to the frontier of the Nizam's boundary, and encamped in the neighbourhood of each other. The force under Colonel Stevenson, crossed to the northward of the Godavery, and General Wellesley occupied a position in the neighbourhood of Ahmednugur. A long train of evasion and delay followed the meeting between the chieftains. They declared they had no designs hostile to the British government, nor any intention of obstructing the articles of the treaty of Bassein; but they alluded to their having received no official copy of it from the Peishwa, and mentioned that there were many points of it to be discussed, which the Peishwa was bound to have consulted them upon, before he signed its stipulations. Their professions of friendly intentions were only made with the view of gaining time, in the hope of Holkar's being induced to embrace their cause. Their whole conduct, in other respects, indicated their hostile determination; and the menacing position which they occupied, justified the warlike preparations of the British government. General Wellesley having been vested with full powers, as political agent of the governor-general, as well as military commander of the British troops in the Deccan, proposed, as the test of the friendly declarations of the chiefs, that they should withdraw their armies, Sindia to Hindoostan, and Rughoojee Bhonslay to Berar, whilst he should also direct the British troops to retire within their own territories. This plain and distinct proposal, so characteristic of its author, perplexed the Mahratta chiefs, as there was no evading compliance, except by a subterfuge too palpable to be overlooked or justified; after much discussion, it was finally rejected; the resident withdrew from their camp on the 3d August, which was considered a declaration of war.

The governor-general, when he saw that war was inevitable, had resolved to strike a decisive blow, and, by a grand effort, to attack the territories of the confederates in every quarter at once. For this purpose, the preparations of the British government were necessarily very extensive. Its recources were called forth on a scale of magnitude and efficiency before unknown, and the governor-general, by his liberality, his judicious selection of agents and commanders, and his confidence in the whole service, roused that ardour and spirit of enterprise which have been handed down in the Indian army, from the first struggles of the British nation in the East.

The British forces assembled in different quarters of India, amounted to nearly fifty thousand men.

The army in the Deccan and Guzerat amounted to 35,596 men, of whom 3595 were left for the protection of Hyderabad and Poona, and 7826 formed the covering army under General Stuart, between the Kistna and Toongbuddra.* The advanced force with General Wellesley, consisted of 8930 men under his personal command, and 7920 under Colonel Stevenson. There were 7352 men in Guzerat, of whom, after providing for the garrisons, 4281 were available for field service, and placed under the orders of Colonel Murray, subject to the control of General Wellesley.

* In this part of the force there was subsequently some alteration made, of no importance to the Mahratta history.

In Hindoostan 10,500 men were collecting under General Lake. Three thousand five hundred men were assembled at Allahabad, to act on the side of Bundelcund, and 5216 men were destined for the invasion of Rughoojee Bhonslay's districts in Kuttack.

The armies of Doulut Rao Sindia and Rughoojee Bhonslay were estimated at about one hundred thousand men, of whom, about 50,000 were horse, and upwards of 30,000 were regular infantry and artillery, commanded by Europeans; of the rest, some were half disciplined corps under the command of natives belonging to Rughoojee Bhonslay, some were matchlockmen and rocketmen; they had many hundred pieces of cannon, and Sindia's train of field artillery was excellent. Of the regular infantry, ten or twelve thousand were with Sindia in the Deccan, and four or five thousand were on their march from the Deccan, conducted by the Chevalier Dudrenec, for the purpose of reinforcing the army in Hindoostan. Sindia's army in the latter quarter was commanded by Monsieur Perron, the successor of De Boigne. His whole force, including those not yet joined, under Dudrenec, amounted to sixteen or seventeen thousand regular infantry, and from fifteen to twenty thousand horse, of which four or five thousand were regular cavalry. This estimate does not include the forces of Shumsher Buhadur in Bundelcund, who was a party in the confederacy. Shumsher Buhadur was the son of Ali Buhadur, who, as the reader may remember, attempted, in conjunction with the Gosaeen Himmut Buhadur, to conquer Bundelcund. They so far succeeded, as to possess themselves of several districts, all of which they held in the Peishwa's name; partly as belonging to him from a remote period, and the rest as their own Jagheer. But being constantly engaged in warfare with the petty chiefs of the country, it furnished an excuse for remitting no part of the revenue to the Peishwa, although they acknowledged his authority. Ali Buhadur died in 1802, and his Jagheer was formally resumed by the Peishwa; but, as the latter had no means of enforcing the resumption, Shumsher, the son of the deceased, retained charge of the territory, took part against the English on the present occasion, and mustered, of all descriptions, about ten or twelve thousand men.

General Wellesley received accounts of the unsuccessful termination of the resident's negotiation with the confederates on the 6th Au-
(Aug. 6.) gust, the same day on which Nizam Ally died at Hyderabad, an event long expected, and which was attended by no commotion or change, except the accession of his son Mirza Secundur Jah, to the Soobehship of the Deccan.

General Wellesley, who was encamped at the village of Walkee, eight miles south of Ahmednugur, was prevented by heavy rain from marching against that fortress until the 8th, when he
(Aug. 8.) commenced hostilities by detaching three divisions from his line of march to attack the Pettah by escalade. The Pettah is surrounded by a mud wall, and was obstinately defended by a body of Arabs and one of Sindia's regular battalions, supported by a party of horse stationed between the Pettah and the fort; but the perseverance and spirit of the assailants surmounted every obstacle; and this prompt manner of proceeding gave a character to the commander and troops, in the opinion of the enemy, which made amends for the loss sustained in the attack. Of the British detachments, twenty-eight were killed, and twenty-two wounded; of which number six were European officers. A battery was opened upon the fortress, on the 10th, and on the 12th (Aug. 12.) this important garrison, once the capital of the Nizam Shahee kingdom, which, ever since the days of Chaund Beebee, had the reputation in the Deccan of being almost impregnable, was surrendered by its Killidar, who marched out with private property and arms, at the head of his garrison fifteen hundred strong; a conduct for which he was much censured by the confederates.

The acquisition of Ahmednugur, as a point of support to all future operations to the northward, was of great consequence to the British army. A respectable garrison was left in the fort, and the revenues of the district were temporarily collected by an agent of the British government, and appropriated to assist in the expenses of the war. General Wellesley moved forward, crossed the Godavery, and arrived at Aurungabad on the 29th August. The Mahrattas had ascended the Ajunta Ghaut on the 24th, with a large body of horse, and, avoiding Colonel Stevenson, who was some miles to the eastward, they encamped at Jaulna. On hearing of General Wellesley's arrival at Aurungabad, they moved off in a south-easterly direction, intending, it was said, to proceed to Hyderabad. General Wellesley immediately moved down to the left bank of the Godavery, to check their probable design of plundering the country, and to protect his own convoys of grain, which were forwarded by General Stuart, from the covering army, south of the Kistna. Neither Rughoojee Bhonslay nor Sindia were possessed of military enterprise or experience, and they were quite undecided as to their plan of operations; sometimes Sindia proposed to depend on his battalions and artillery, at other times, Rughoojee persuaded him to act on the predatory plan; their operations were of course feeble in the extreme. When General Wellesley moved down the Godavery, they counter-marched in a northerly direction; and whilst the General awaited the junction of his convoys, Colonel Stevenson made several unavailing attempts to bring them to action, but only succeeded in partially surprising their camp, on the night of the 9th September. He had also made himself master of the fort of Jaulna. On the 21st September, the whole of the Mahratta army, joined by their infantry, of which there were sixteen battalions of regulars, was encamped about the village of Bokerdun, and between that place and Jaffeirabad. On the same day, General Wellesley and Colonel Stevenson met at Budnapoor, when it was agreed that the two divisions, then in the neighbourhood of each other, should move separately, and attack the enemy on the morning of the 24th. They accordingly marched on the 22d; Colonel Stevenson by the western, and

(Sept. 9.)

(Sept. 21.)

General Wellesley by the eastern route. On the 23d, on reaching the village of Naulnye, where he was about to encamp, General Wellesley learnt from his spies that the confederate armies were encamped on the Kailna river, within six miles of him. With great prudence and decision, founded on a remarkable discernment of the character of his enemy *, he instantly resolved on attacking them without waiting for Colonel Stevenson. Had General Wellesley hesitated, the enemy's infantry would have moved off, their horse would probably have been encouraged to attack his baggage and annoy his camp, the service must have been prolonged, and by one day's delay, or hesitation, a new character might have been given to the war.

Having directed his deputy adjutant-general Captain Barclay, to place the baggage in the village of Naulnye under the protection of a battalion and some details from the native corps, and to bring on the rest of the line with all convenient despatch, General Wellesley moved out in person at the head of the picquets to reconnoitre, and in a short time,

* I have had occasion to observe how well the Duke of Wellington must have known the Mahrattas, from having read his private letters to Sir Barry Close, during the war of 1803. Without being acquainted with their language, and one would have supposed, with little opportunity of knowing the people or their history, his correct views of the Mahratta character and policy are very remarkable. As the letters in question were shown to me confidentially in 1817, in the course of my official duties, I may be only authorized to mention, that in some instances, his opinion of individuals, particularly of Bajee Rao, was correctly prophetic.

on ascending a rising ground, the host of the confederates was seen extending in a vast line along the opposite bank of the Kailna river, near its junction with the Juah. Their army amounted to upwards of 50,000 men, of whom more than 30,000 were horse, and 10,500 were regular infantry supported by upwards of one hundred guns. The handful of British troops, which now moved straight down upon this formidable array, did not exceed four thousand five hundred men*, but the general sentiment was that of their commander, "they cannot escape us." As General Wellesley drew nearer the enemy's line, he found their right composed entirely of cavalry, and that their cannon and infantry, which it was his object to take and destroy, were on their left, near the village of Assaye. He, therefore, moved round and passed the Kailna river at a ford beyond the enemy's left flank, forming his infantry into two lines, and his cavalry as a reserve in a third, with his right towards the Juah, and his left on the Kailna. The horse belonging to the Peishwa and Raja of Mysore, accompanying General Wellesley, formed at a distance across the Kailna but had little or no share in the conflict.† The position

* The corps which had the honour to serve on this occasion, were, the 19th light dragoons, the 4th, 5th, and 7th Madras Native cavalry, a detachment of Madras, and a small detail of Bombay artillery, the 74th, and 78th highlanders, 1 batt. 2d, 1 batt. 4th, 1 batt. 8th, 1 batt. 10th, and 2 batt. 12th regiments of Madras Sepoys.

† Just before the battle of Assaye commenced, intelligence was brought to General Wellesley, that the Peishwa's troops thus occupied by the British, between the two rivers and near their junction, not only brought them upon their object, but was of importance in diminishing the front of the enemy, who changed their position as the British turned the flank of their old ground, and were now drawn up in two lines, one of them fronting the British troops, the other running at a right angle to their first line, with the left of both resting on the fortified village of Assaye. In this situation as the British lines were forming, the Mahrattas opened a heavy cannonade, the execution of which is described as terrible. The picquets of the infantry and the 74th regiment which were on the right suffered particularly; the picquets were for a time halted, and the officer in command of them when urged to advance, sent word, that the guns were disabled, and the bullocks killed. General Wellesley received the message with the utmost composure, and coolly replied, "well, tell him to get on without them." The whole line without artillery was exposed to a dreadful fire of round and grape; the ranks of the 74th were completely thinned, and a large body of the Mahratta horse charged them: the order was given for the advance of the British cavalry:—the 19th light dragoons, who only drew 360 swords, received the intimation with one loud huzza! Accompanied by the 4th native cavalry who emulated their conduct throughout this arduous intended to join Sindia in attacking him. That they would have done so, in the event of a reverse, is not improbable, but I have not met with any confirmation of the circumstance.

day *, the 19th passed through the broken but invincible 74th, whose very wounded joined in cheering them as they went on, cut in and routed the horse, and dashed on at the infantry and guns. Never did cavalry perform better service or contribute more to the success of a battle. The British infantry likewise pressed forward, the enemy's first line gave way, fell back on their second, and the whole were forced into the Juah at the point of the bayonet; the fugitives on gaining the opposite bank were followed, charged and broken by the

* Nothing could exceed the zeal of some of the cavalry, particularly the 19th dragoons; every officer and man fought as if on his arm depended the victory. As instances may be mentioned, Lieut. Nathan Wilson, who, with his arm shattered by a grape shot, and dangling by his side, charged on at the head of his troop. Lieut. Alex. Grant of the Madras Native infantry, major of brigade to Colonel Maxwell, observing a gun pointed ready to discharge on the flank of the 19th dragoons, the match suspended on the touch-hole, with a noble impulse, in hopes of preventing it, darted forward almost on its muzzle, and with such force, that his horse stuck between the cannon and its wheel; in this situation the gun went off, as he was in the act of endeavouring to prevent it, by cutting down the artillery man. Captain George Sale was attacking a man who defended himself with a pike or short spear, a weapon with which all Sindia's artillery-men were armed; the man's comrade standing on a gun, made a thrust from above at Captain Sale, but it was turned by the breast bone, and glanced off diagonally across his chest; his covering serjeant, named Strange, laid the man dead who wounded his officer, but in the act, was himself speared through the lungs, by another man from below the gun. Captain Sale went on, but begged the serjeant to fall in the rear, this, however, he gallantly refused, and rode out the day. — Captain Sale and others, afterwards saw him when in hospital, blow out a candle from his lungs: — the reader will be pleased to learn that the gallant serjeant recovered.

cavalry; but some of their corps formed again and went off in good order. One large body of this description was pursued and routed by the British cavalry, on which occasion Colonel Maxwell who commanded them was killed. As the British line advanced they passed many individuals of the enemy who either appeared to have submitted, or lay apparently dead. These persons rising up turned their guns on the rear of the British line, and after the more important points of the victory were secured, it was some time before the firing thus occasioned could be silenced. The enemy's horse hovered round for some time, but when the last body of infantry was broken, the battle was completely decided, and ninety-eight pieces of cannon remained in the hands of the victors. The loss was severe; upwards of one-third of the British troops lay dead or wounded, but they had, considering the circumstances, achieved a triumph more splendid than any recorded in Deccan history.

Of the enemy, twelve hundred were killed, and the whole neighbourhood was covered with their wounded. Yadow Rao Bhaskur, Sindia's minister, was amongst the slain. Rughoojee Bhonslay fled from the field in the commencement of the action, and Sindia soon followed his example. The whole of the horse behaved in the most dastardly manner; Sindia's infantry, although defeated by such a disparity of troops, did not altogether sully their high reputation. The artillery men stood to the last, and eight of the old battalions of De Boigne fought with ardour and firmness. Most of Sindia's battalions laboured under disadvantages by the secession of the British part of their European officers, who, in consequence of a proclamation by the British government, quitted the Mahrattas at the breaking out of the war. This proclamation was addressed to all British subjects, native as well as European, offering them the same pay which they enjoyed with Sindia. It was judiciously extended to all Europeans, and in regard to the British officers was equally humane and politic.

Colonel Stevenson, owing to various impediments, did not join General Wellesley until the evening of the 24th, when he was immediately detached in pursuit of the enemy, whose regular infantry retired before him and crossed the Nerbuddah, towards which Colonel Stevenson followed them. But the main army of the confederates moved to the westward, with an intention, as was supposed, of marching by the Kassarbharee Ghaut towards Poona. Under this supposition General Wellesley remained on the south-side of the Ajunta Ghaut, and directed Colonel Stevenson to take possession of the city of Burhanpoor, and to reduce the strong fort of Asseergurh, both of which objects he had (Oct. 21.) accomplished by the 21st of October, with inconsiderable loss. The dependant districts in Candeish, which fell in consequence to the British disposal, were placed under the temporary management of revenue officers of the Hyderabad state.

In regard to the operations of the Guzerat troops under the orders of General Wellesley, a detachment of the field force was sent by Colonel Murray, under Lieutenant-Colonel Woodington for the purpose of reducing Sindia's possessions in that quarter. The fortified town of Baroach was (August 29th.) stormed and taken on the 29th August. Colonel Woodington next marched against the strong hill fort of Pawungurh, took by assault the town of Champaneer which is attached (Sept. 17th.) to it, and the fort surrendered on the 17th September.*

Whilst those successes attended the British arms on the west, affairs of not less consequence were passing in the north and east of India. The important possessions which had been acquired by Mahadajee Sindia in Hindoostan, were a primary object of attention with the British government. These provinces, independent of their value and their situation, were the nursery of the regular infantry of Sindia, which, although in itself less formidable to the British power than other descriptions of the Mahratta force, was in one respect dangerous, from its introduction of French officers, whose patriotism might induce them to encourage and support their countrymen in a favourite scheme of conquest in the East.

General De Boigne having been compelled, as already mentioned, to return to Europe in 1796 from bad health, was succeeded by M. Perron, who had particularly recommended himself to Sindia by his conduct at the battle of Kurdla, and who had been sent from the Deccan to Hindoostan to assume the command of the army, the charge of the emperor's person, and the management of the Jagheer from whence his brigades were paid. De Boigne with much of military enterprize and enthusiasm, was, at the same time, a man of sense and prudence; a decided enemy to French revolutionary principles, and though friendly and kind to Frenchmen who sought his service, the ideas of conquest in India, entertained by many of his nation, he regarded, even at that period, as chimerical. He knew the power and the watchful jealousy of the English, and he foresaw, that any object which might be attempted by the states of India, through a connection with France, would certainly be anticipated by their subjugation. His last counsel to Sindia, "never to excite the jealousy of the British government by increasing his battalions, and rather to discharge them than risk a war," was a sound advice; but his supposed partiality for the English, and the sentiments of his successor, Perron*, which were precisely the reverse, was one cause which drove Sindia, more confident and ignorant than Perron himself, to attempt projects, which brought on ruin and disaster, before he and his coadjutors had fixed the mode of warfare they intended to pursue. Perron is said to have laid down a scheme of operations†, but jealousy and distrust on the part of Sindia, the neutrality of Holkar, and the intrigues of Sindia's officers, for the purpose of superseding Perron in the government in Hindoostan, seem to have combined in preventing its adoption.

* Public Records. Mahratta MSS. Ferdinand Lewis Smith; and Oral information.

* He appears to have imbibed some of his opinions, after the departure of De Boigne, who represented him to me as a man of plain sense, of no talent, but a brave soldier.

† Ferdinand Lewis Smith.

The main body of the British force in Hindoostan, already mentioned in the general preparations of the governor-general, was assembled at Cawnpore; and General Lake, the commander-in-chief, was vested with the same powers, civil and military, which had been delegated by the supreme government to General Wellesley in the Deccan. As soon as General Lake understood that the confederates had refused to withdraw their armies on the terms proposed by General Wellesley, he considered them in a state of war with the British government, and immediately put his troops in motion.

On the 29th August General Lake's army first came in sight of Perron's cavalry, fifteen thousand of whom were encamped at Coel, near the fort of Aligurh. After a trifling skirmish they retired, as the British troops advanced; the town of Coel was taken possession of, and Aligurh was summoned; but every endeavour, on the part of General Lake, failed in inducing M. Pedron, its governor, to surrender. Much dependance was placed on this fortress. It is very strong, situated on a plain, surrounded by swamps, having a good glacis, with a ditch thirty-two feet deep, and two hundred feet wide. It was well garrisoned, fully provided with cannon, ammunition, and provisions; and the Mahrattas expected, as they had a right to expect, that it would sustain a long siege. The only passage into the fort was by a narrow causeway across the ditch, for which the French commandant, by gross neglect, had omitted to substitute a drawbridge. General Lake, apprized of this circumstance, determined to hazard an attack by the gateway; and Mr. Lucan, a British subject, one of the officers who had come over from Sindia's service, offered to conduct the storming party. Break of day, on the morning of the 4th September, was the time appointed for the enterprise. On the firing of the morning gun, the party, who had been lying for some time within four hundred yards of the gate, waiting for this signal, immediately advanced; and Colonel Monson pushed forward at the head of the flank companies of the 76th, in hopes of being able to enter the fort with a party of the enemy, supposed to have been stationed outside, behind a breast-work. The work in question, however, was found abandoned, and the gate closed. Scaling-ladders were applied, but such a formidable row of pikemen presented themselves above, that it was impossible to mount. A six-pounder was brought up to blow open the gate, but it had no effect. Much time and many lives were lost before a twelve-pounder could be substituted; and when it did come, four or five discharges were necessary to force an entrance. Advancing round a bastion, the party came upon the second gate, which was easily forced, and the third was taken by entering it with the fugitives: but the fourth and last gate, which led to the body of the place, could not be blown open, even by the application of the twelve-pounder, though great delay was experienced before the gun could be brought in. Thus disappointed, in a most trying situation, Major M'Leod, of the 76th regiment, attempted the wicket, and most fortunately gained an entrance. He was followed by the grenadiers; the rampart was mounted, opposition soon ceased, and the British troops, by extraordinary bravery and good fortune, found themselves masters of the fortress of Aligurh with the loss of two hundred and seventy-eight men in killed and wounded, of whom seventeen were European officers, M. Pedron the commandant was taken prisoner, and two thousand of his garrison are said to have perished, including those who were drowned in the ditch.

In the meantime five thousand of the Mahratta cavalry, which retired from Coel, prosecuted a successful enterprise under the direction of a Frenchman named Fleury, by attacking the cantonment of Shekoabad, where there was a detachment of five companies of Sepoys and one gun. The assailants were repulsed on the first attempt, (Sept. 2.) but having renewed the attack after the in- (Sept. 4.) tervention of a day, the detachment, when nearly destitute of ammunition, capitulated, and were permitted to retire with their arms, on a promise of not serving against Sindia during the war. This attack obliged General Lake to send off a strong detachment, which arrived too late to save the cantonment, but was of importance to the security of an expected convoy.

Perron, who had for some time been conscious of a decline in Sindia's favour, and had even made some overtures to General Lake before the commencement of the war, proceeded, after the affair at Coel, to Muttra, where he received certain accounts of his being superseded in the government of Sindia's districts, and that his successor and personal enemy Ambajee Inglia was intriguing with the French officers under him, to deprive him of his Jagheer, and of course of his command. Under these circumstances, to secure his private fortune, and avoid a crisis in which he had nothing to gain, he addressed a letter to General Lake on the 5th September, requesting permission to pass with his effects, his family, and the officers of his suite, through the Company's territories, to Lucknow; with which General Lake, under instructions from the governor-general, yielded a ready compliance.

(Sep. 7.) On the 7th September General Lake's army marched from Aligurh towards (Sep. 11.) Delhi, and on the 11th, encamped within six miles of that city; but scarcely were the tents pitched, when the enemy unexpectedly appeared in front. The picquets immediately turned out, and General Lake with the cavalry proceeded to reconnoitre.

M. Louis Bourquin, the officer next in rank to Perron, hearing of the advance of the British force towards Delhi, and that a part of the army was detached in pursuit of Fleury, crossed the Jumna with twelve battalions of regular infantry, amounting to eight or nine thousand men, besides five thousand cavalry and seventy pieces of cannon, for the purpose of attacking General Lake; whose force, after providing for the safety of his baggage, amounted to about four thousand five hundred men. Bourquin took up a strong position with his guns concealed by high grass, and General

Lake, in advancing to reconnoitre, became exposed to a very heavy and destructive fire. The line of British infantry were ordered on, but it was a considerable time before they came up, and General Lake in the interim practised a successful feint, by retiring with the cavalry, which the enemy mistaking for a retreat, followed them shouting as if secure of victory. The cavalry, however, opening from the centre, permitted the British infantry, advancing in perfect order, to pass to the front. The fire of grape, round, and cannister from the Mahratta guns, was for some minutes tremendous, but the British troops moved on steadily, without returning a shot, until they were within one hundred yards. They were then ordered to fire a volley and charge bayonets. Sindia's infantry could not withstand the fury of their onset, but abandoning their guns, fled with precipitation. The line of infantry then broke into open columns of companies, and the cavalry which formed the second line, charging through the intervals, committed great slaughter among the fugitives, many of whom escaped from the sabre but to perish in the Jumna. The total loss of the Mahrattas was estimated at three thousand, that of the British army was five hundred and eighty five, of whom fifteen were European officers. Louis Bourquin the commander of the Mahratta infantry, and five other French officers surrendered themselves prisoners three days afterwards. The other results of the victory were, the possession of the capital of the Moghul empire, and of the family and person of the descendant of Timour. Though the change was but change of masters, it was a happy event for the aged and unfortunate Shah Alum, to find himself once more under the protection of the British nation, of whose honour and liberality he had experienced many proofs.

General Lake next marched against Agra, which he summoned, but no answer was returned. This garrison had been under the command of English officers, who, on the breaking out of the war, were confined by their own troops; this circumstance, combined with other causes, occasioned the greatest anarchy and confusion in the fort. Seven battalions of Sindia's regular infantry were encamped on the glacis; but the garrison were afraid to admit them, lest they should plunder a rich treasury which they wished to reserve for themselves. General Lake resolved to beat up the quarters of the seven battalions outside, in the first in-(Oct.10.) stance, in which he completely succeeded taking twenty-six of their guns. Three days afterwards, two thousand five hundred of those who remained, came over in a body, and were admitted into the British service. A few days after this event, the progress of the siege being considerable, the garrison applied to their European officers, whom they had kept (Oct.18.) prisoners to make terms for them; on the 18th October they evacuated the fort with their private property; but the treasury and arsenal, with one hundred and sixty-two pieces of cannon, fell into the hands of the victors.

General Lake's next object was the infantry which had been sent under Dudrenec, by Sindia, to reinforce his army in Hindoostan. It consisted of seven battalions, and arrived from the Deccan about the beginning of October. This body had been joined by three of Bourquin's battalions, not engaged at the battle of Delhi, and by some of the fugitives from Delhi and Agra, who were formed into two battalions; the whole consisting of twelve strong battalions, and amounting to about nine thousand men. They had a very superior equipment of artillery; were accompanied by twelve or fifteen hundred good horse, and during the siege of Agra, had occupied a position about thirty miles distant from the British army. The commander was a Mahratta officer*, Dudrenec having surrendered to the English, on the 30th October. It was understood that they intended to march on Delhi, for the recovery of the capital.

(Oct. 27.) General Lake with a strong force proceeded in quest of them on the 27th of October, but as he advanced, they re-

(Oct. 31.) tired towards the hills of Mewat. On the 31st of October General Lake, on arriving at the ground which they had occupied the preceding day, determined, in order to prevent their escape, to pursue them with his cavalry, now consisting of eight regiments, three of which were European dragoons. He accordingly moved off at eleven o'clock that night, directing the infantry to follow at three o'clock next morning. After a march of twenty-five miles he came up with them at sunrise of the 1st Nov. On descrying (Nov. 1st.) the Mahratta infantry, they appeared in motion, and supposing them to be on full retreat, Lake ordered on the cavalry to impede them by an immediate attack. The Mahrattas however had time to form, and instead of being found on the retreat, they had taken up a strong position, their right on the village of Laswaree, partially protected by a deep ravine, and their left, resting on the village of Mohaulpore. To their rear was a deep rivulet, and their front was lined with seventy-five pieces of cannon, chained together, the more effectually to resist the charge of horse. The whole were concealed by very high grass. The different brigades of cavalry, particularly that under Colonel Macan, executed the orders they had received in the most spirited manner; but the opposition with which they had to contend was formidable in the extreme, and their loss was very great; in so much, that General Lake was compelled to desist from this hazardous attack, and await the arrival of the infantry. The Mahratta troops, in the meantime, changed their position, and drew up in two lines, the one in front, the other in rear of the village of Mohaulpore. Their commander, on seeing the approach of the British infantry, offered to surrender his guns on certain conditions, which were accepted, and one hour was allowed to fulfil the terms; but, at the end of that time, General Lake prepared to renew the attack. The British infantry consisted of the seventy-sixth regiment and six battalions of Bengal Sepoys. Of three brigades of cavalry, one was directed to support the infantry; another was detached to the right to watch the enemy, and take advantage of any confusion that might appear among them; and a third brigade formed the reserve. The whole of the artillery was thrown into four batteries to support the attack of the infantry. General Lake's object was to turn the right of the enemy's position, for which purpose he moved off with the infantry in open column of companies, along the bank of the rivulet which was nearly at right angles to the enemy's new position. For a time the march of the British troops was concealed by the high grass, but the Mahrattas no sooner discerned them, than they perceived the general's intention, which they immediately frustrated by throwing back their left wing, covering the movement with a heavy cannonade, which did severe execution on the front of the British column. The British artillery returned the fire with good effect; but the enemy's cannon were far superior in number and weight of metal, and equally well served. The ground was much broken, the advance greatly impeded by that circumstance, and the ranks of the seventy-sixth were so much thinned, that General Lake, who now, as on every occasion, was foremost in the battle, deemed it advisable to hasten on the attack with that regiment, and one battalion and five companies of Sepoys who had closed to the front. When they arrived within reach of the cannister shot, the fire and the execution became so extremely severe, that it prevented a regular advance, and the Mahratta horse were encouraged to charge. They came on, but were repulsed most heroically; again they rallied, and assumed so menacing a position, that General Lake ordered the British cavalry to charge in turn. This service was gallantly performed by the 29th dragoons * who dashed through both lines of the enemy's infantry, wheeled round upon their cavalry, killed many of the latter, drove them from the field, and turning round, fell upon the rear of their second line. That line was by this time hotly engaged with the British infantry, which having taken advantage of the gallant charge of their cavalry had rushed forward on the guns, taken possession of them, and driven the first line back on the second. The whole of the British troops had now come up and joined in the attack; but the hardy veterans of De Boigne, determined to die where they could not conquer, fought on with brave though unavailing obstinacy; and excepting about two thousand who were broken, surrounded and made prisoners, they fell with their arms in their hands! Few if any of those men were natives of Maharashtra, they were chiefly from Oude, Rohilcund and the Dooab, for except Sivajee's Mawulees, and men trained in the ranks of the Bombay

* I have not ascertained who this officer was, he is called Abajee by Major Thorn, but I regret not having obtained more satisfactory information respecting him. It was perhaps one of Ambajee Inglia's Carcoons.

* When forming for the charge on the flank of the infantry, the 76th with the same spirit which distinguished the 74th at the battle of Assaye, gave them three cheers.

Sepoys *, the native Mahrattas have never made good infantry.

The victory of Laswaree cost the English army 824 men in killed and wounded, but it completed the overthrow of the brigades of De Boigne and Perron, and placed Agra and Delhi, with all Sindia's districts north of the Chumbul, in the power of the British government.

While success thus attended the British arms in Maharashtra and in Hindoostan, a force commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Harcourt invaded Kuttack. Manikpatam was taken possession of without resistance on the 14th September. The Bramins of the temple of Jaggernaut placed it under the protection of the British government, and the town of Kuttack was surrendered on the 10th October. A detachment under Captain Morgan occupied Ballasore on the 21st September, and took Soorrung on the 3d October. The storm of the fort of Barabuttee on the 14th October, by the troops under Colonel Harcourt, completed the conquest of the province of Kuttack.

The conquest of Bundelcund was effected with equal celerity. In regard to this province, a new arrangement had been made with the Peishwa in the month of August, by which the greater part of his rights in it, was ceded to the English Company in lieu of Savanoor and Benkapoor, in the southern

* The men of this description are remarkably quiet and sober, patient under privation, and good soldiers; they used to be more apt to desert than any other men, but that was probably owing to circumstances no longer in existence.

Mahratta country, and Oolpar in the neighbourhood of Surat; all of which were included in the cessions made by the treaty of Bassein, and yielded an annual revenue of rupees 19 lacks and 16 thousand. The nominal revenue of Bundelcund was 36.16.000 rupees, but the state of the country rendered the first-mentioned cessions of much greater value to the Peishwa; whilst to the British, Bundelcund from its situation in the neighbourhood of their position on the Jumna, and their means of rendering its revenues available, was extremely important. The British government, in consideration of the advantages thus derived, agreed to maintain a body of 5000 Mahratta horse during the continuance of the war, and to keep a regiment of cavalry in addition to the 6000 infantry, on the permanent establishment of the Poona subsidiary force; whilst from the Peishwa, instead of 6000 infantry and 10,000 horse, only half of that number was to be required. This arrangement was afterwards regularly recognised, and the treaty drawn up in consequence of it, under date 16th December 1803, was termed, supplemental articles to the treaty of Bassein.

The Gosaeen Himmut Buhadur had tendered his services to the British government, to assist them in the conquest of Bundelcund; and his offer being now accepted, he joined the British detachment under Lieutenant-Colonel Powell, on the 16th September, with a large body of troops. Colonel Powell had crossed the Jumna ten days before. The united forces, after reducing various forts, crossed the river Cane on the 10th October. On the 13th they found the army of Shumsher Buhadur drawn up to oppose them; but after a feeble resistance they gave way, fled across the river Betwah, and evacuated the province.

We now return to the contending armies in the Deccan.

As soon as the confederates found that General Wellesley had not passed the Ghaut, but was moving south towards Aurungabad, and that Colonel Stephenson had marched against Burhanpoor, they made preparations for following and interrupting him in that object. General Wellesley learning their design immediately returned north, (Oct. 19.) and descended the Ajunta Ghaut. Sindia, on finding that General Wellesley had returned, halted, but Rughoojee Bhonslay, who had separated from his confederate, marched to the southward by the Unkye Tunkye pass. General Wellesley, therefore, in order to protect the territory of the Nizam, reascended the Ajunta, and continued his route beyond Aurungabad, until he arrived in the neighbourhood of the camp of Rughoojee, who was so apprehensive of a night attack, that he moved his camp five times in less (Oct. 31.) than forty-eight hours. On the 31st, Rughoojee detached 5000 horse to cut off a convoy of 14,000 bullock loads of grain, escorted by three companies of Sepoys and a party of Mysore horse, under Captain Baynes, who made a judicious and spirited defence at the village of Amber, and brought in the whole of his convoy safe, with the exception of about two hundred bullocks. After this event, General Wellesley finding that Rughoojee was moving towards his own territories, once more returned to the northward, and descended the Ghauts at Rajoora, for the purpose of supporting and covering Colonel Stevenson, whom he had ordered to form the siege of Gawelgurh.

Previously to this period, several propositions for peace had been made to General Wellesley in Sindia's name. Ballajee Koonjur, the Peishwa's most confidential agent, who, notwithstanding the war, continued in Sindia's camp, sent a letter fifteen days after the battle of Assaye, requesting that one of the British, and one of the Nizam's officers should be sent to Sindia's camp to settle terms of pacification; but as he was not an accredited agent, and as the appearance of a British officer in Sindia's camp would have enabled the Mahrattas to represent the British nation as supplicants for peace, General Wellesley refused compliance, but expressed his readiness to receive any envoy the confederates might depute. Another communication was opened through Appa Dessaye Nepankur, who was serving with the Peishwa's contingent, and the result was, that Jeswunt Rao Ghorepuray, accompanied by a Bramin, named Naroo Punt, arrived in General Wellesley's camp, on the part of Sindia, for the purpose of negociating, but as they also were unprovided with credentials, General Wellesley refused to treat until they should obtain them from Sindia. That chief, in the meantime, sent a letter, disavowing Jeswunt Rao Ghorepuray's mission; but, notwithstanding this disavowal, General Wellesley was convinced, from a letter addressed by Sindia to Appa Dessaye, that Ghorepuray had been deputed, and therefore permitted him to remain in his camp until a reply to his first reference should be received. A few hours after the interview in question, powers arrived for constituting Ghorepuray and his companion the envoys of Sindia, but they were essentially defective, as they did not enable the envoys to cede any portion of territory as compensation to the British government and its allies, which was required as the basis of the pacification. Until this authority could be obtained, Ghorepuray solicited a cessation of arms for both the confederates. It was granted to Sindia on the 23d November, on condition that he should occupy a position twenty kos east of Elichpoor, and forage still further to the eastward; but it was refused to Rughoojee Bhonslay, because he had sent no envoy, nor expressed any desire for peace.

The conditions, however, on which General Wellesley agreed to a suspension of hostilities, were not observed by Sindia; Rughoojee Bhonslay's army was encamped at Argaom, near Gawelgurh, under his brother Venkajee Munya Bappoo, and Sindia's cavalry were at Sersowly, within about five miles of him. Venkajee, besides cavalry, had the whole of his brother's infantry, and a considerable number of guns. The wukeels of Sindia urgently dissuaded the British commander from attacking Venkajee. General Wellesley told them repeatedly that there was no armistice with Rughoojee Bhonslay, and none with Sindia, until he complied with the terms of the agreement. Colonel Stevenson was by this time within a short distance of the confederates, and on the 28th November halted, to enable General Wellesley to co-operate in the expected battle. The confederates decamped from the position they had occupied, when the united British divisions moved towards them, on the ensuing day. As General Wellesley approached his intended ground of encampment, a few of the enemy's

(Nov. 29.) skirmishers appeared in front, and were opposed by the Mysore horse. General Wellesley, not intending to pursue them, was, after a long march, about to pitch his tents, when the Mahratta cavalry appeared in greater force, and it became necessary to support the Mysore horse with the picquets. General Wellesley moving out at the head of the latter, descried the army of the confederates drawn up in line, on an extensive plain, in front of the village of Argaom. Though late in the day, he immediately advanced to the attack, and marched on in column until near the enemy, when he formed his army into two lines, the infantry in the first, and the cavalry in the second. Some confusion ensued in forming the lines, when the Mahratta guns first opened upon them, but when formed, the whole moved on with steadiness and order. A body of about five hundred infantry, supposed to have been Persians, in the service of the confederates, rushed upon the 74th and 78th with desperation, and were destroyed to a man. Sindia's cavalry under Gopaul Rao Bhow, charged the 1st battalion, 6th regiment of Madras Sepoys; but they were repulsed, and their commander was wounded; on which the whole army retired in confusion, pursued by the British cavalry, and by the Mysore and Moghul horse. In this action, the loss of the British was 346 men in killed, wounded, and missing; that of the Mahrattas is no where stated, but was very considerable.

(Dec. 5.) The British army next invested Gawelgurh. The principal operations were carried on by Colonel Stevenson's division on the north face, where the troops went through uncommon labour and fatigue in carrying the guns and stores to the point of attack. The

(Dec. 15.) outer fort having been breached by the 14th, was stormed on the ensuing morning; the inner fort was escaladed by the light company of the 94th headed by Captain Campbell, who immediately opened the gate and admitted the rest of the troops.

In the meanwhile, negotiations had been going forward at intervals for upwards of a fortnight. Yeswunt Rao Ramchundur the wukeel of Rughoojee Bhonslay, endeavoured to prove, that his master was not the aggressor in the war; that the Peishwa had concluded a treaty contrary to the usage of the Mahratta state, without consulting the chiefs of the empire; that his master had not quitted his own territory, nor moved towards Sindia's with any hostile design against the British government, but had gone with his army to mediate between Sindia and Holkar; that Holkar was strong and Sindia was weak, and that the latter would have been overpowered without his master's assistance. General Wellesley represented the fact of his having assembled an army on the frontier of an ally of Britain, and having, in conjunction with Sindia, refused to withdraw; he denied the right of the Mahratta chiefs to be consulted by the Peishwa before he could make a treaty; and in regard to interfering between Sindia and Holkar on account of the weakness of the former, admitting the fact to have been so, it was, General Wellesley observed, an extraordinary mode of strengthening Sindia and weakening Holkar, to transfer to the latter all the territories of the Holkar family. In short, after a long argument as to the merits of the war, and a still longer discussion respecting the terms of the pacification, it was finally (Dec. 17.) agreed on the 17th Dec. that Rughoojee Bhonslay, Sena Sahib Soobeh, should cede to the British government and its allies, the province of Kuttack, including Ballasore; and the whole of his territory and shares of revenue to the westward of the river Wurda, and south of the hills on which stand Nurnalla and Gawelgurh. The forts of Nurnalla and Gawelgurh remained in Rughoojee Bhonslay's possession, together with districts lying south of those forts, valued at four lacks of rupees. All claims on the Nizam, including of course Chouth, Ghasdana, &c. were renounced; all differences between the Nizam, the Peishwa, and the Sena Sahib Soobeh were to be arbitrated by the British government; and no European or American of a nation at war with the English, or any British subject, was to be entertained, without the consent of the British government. Such was the substance of the principal articles of the treaty of Deogaom. Accredited ministers, from each of the contracting parties, were to reside at the court of the other; and the Honourable M. Elphinstone, at that time Persian interpreter on the staff of General Wellesley's army, was appointed to act as resident at Nagpoor.

The negotiations with Sindia were not so promptly terminated. Doulut Rao endeavoured by every means to avoid making the cessions, which the British government demanded as the basis of a pacification; and it was not until assured that his compliance was the only means of averting the entire conquest of his territories, that (Dec.30.) he at length assented. The treaty was concluded at Surjee Anjengaom, on the 30th December, and Sindia ceded to the British government and its allies, his territory between the Jumna and Ganges, and all situated to the northward of the Rajpoot principalities of Jeypoor, Joudpoor, and Gohud; but the territory lying between Jeypoor and Joudpoor, and to the southward of the former place was reserved. The forts of Ahmednugur and Baroach, with their districts; his possessions between the Ajunta Ghaut and the Godavery, and all claims on the emperor of the Moghuls, the British government, or its allies, the Peishwa, the Nizam, and the Gaekwar, were renounced by Sindia: he also gave up all claims upon such Rajas or Jagheerdars as might have become allies of the British government during the war, and declared them independent of his authority. Sindia entered into the same agreement in regard to Europeans and Americans, and to residents at the courts, as had been admitted by Rughoojee Bhonslay: Major Malcolm was appointed to act as resident in his camp. The city of Burhanpoor, the forts of Asseerghur, Pawungurh, and Dohud, with their dependant districts, conquered by the British government during the war, were restored to Sindia. The enams granted to Mahadajee Sindia by the emperor, namely, the districts of Dholpoor-Baree and Raj-kerrah, situated to the northward of the prescribed limits, and certain Jagheers belonging to the family, or to immediate dependants of Sindia, were restored; and the British government likewise promised Jagheers, or pensions in lieu of them, amounting to fifteen lacks of rupees annually, to some other persons in Sindia's service. All enam villages, lands, or Wutun, obtained by Sindia and his predecessors, within the territories ceded, were to be restored to him and to the respective owners; but no troops were permitted to be kept in such places, either to the north or south of Sindia's own territory. Finally, the British government left it in the option of Sindia to become a party to the defensive alliance, offering him a subsidiary force, payable from the revenues of the territories already ceded, whether furnished or not. In conformity with this article in the treaty of Surjee Anjengaom, a new treaty was afterwards concluded with Sindia at Burhanpoor, on the 27th February 1804, by Major Malcolm, empowered for that purpose by General Wellesley. Sindia then agreed to become a party to the defensive alliance, and a subsidiary force of six thousand infantry, with their artillery, was to be stationed near his boundary, but within the British territory.

Of the conquests thus gained from the confederates, by subsequent partition treaties between the British government, and its allies the Nizam and the Peishwa, the province of Kuttack including Balasore, the pergunna and fort of Baroach, the districts conquered from Sindia, north of the Rajpoot states, the territory along the bank of the Jumna, and between that river and the Ganges, were assigned to the British government. The whole tract west of the Wurda, eastward of the Peishwa's frontier, and southward of the range of hills on which stand Nurnalla and Gawelgurh, down as far the Godavery, was made over to the Nizam. The Peishwa having failed to afford the aid which was in his power, and having in other respects profited largely by the war, the fort and district of Ahmednugur was the only portion reserved as his share of the conquests.

The princes and chiefs who, by treaties with General Lake, had become the allies of the British government, were the Rajas of Jeypoor, Joudpoor, Boondee, and Macherry; the Jhat Raja of Bhurtpoor, the Rana of Gohud, and the Mahratta officer Ambajee Inglia. The agreements with the Rajpoots and the Raja of Bhurtpoor specify the guarantee of their territory against external enemies, an exemption from tribute, and the aid of their forces in the event of any invasion of the country lately conquered by the British; Europeans not to be received into their service without the consent of the British government. With respect to the Rana of Gohud and Ambajee Inglia, with whom treaties were also made, it will be recollected, that Mahadajee Sindia conquered the Gohud territory in 1784, and since that period it had been held by that chieftain and his successor. Ambajee Inglia, whom we have seen appointed successor to Perron, was Mamlitdar of the province of Gohud, and after seeing the rapid conquest of Hindoostan, revolted, or pretended to revolt, against his master, and joined the English, from whom he obtained by treaty a share of the province of Gohud, which was divided between him and the Rana, with the exception of the fort of Gwalior, ceded by the Rana to the English. The treaties with the Rana of Gohud and Ambajee Inglia were similar to those concluded with the Rajpoots; excepting that the Rana of Gohud agreed to subsidize three battalions of Sepoys, paying for them at the rate of 75,000 rupees a month. But these two treaties last mentioned, afterwards became null and void, for reasons which the progress of our narrative will explain. *

* The above chapter is on the authority of English Records. The Marquis Wellesley's Narrative. Oral information. Mahratta Letters and MSS.; and Major Thorn's Memoir.

CHAP. XIII.

A. D. 1804.

Reflections on the late war. — Views of Jeswunt Rao Holkar. — Negotiations. — Lord Lake advances against Holkar, preceded by a detachment under Col. Monson. — Holkar retires across the Chumbul. — Tonk-Rampoorah taken. — Umeer Khan cuts off part of a detachment in Bundelcund. — Lord Lake reinforces Monson and cantons the main army for the rains. — Monson advances — escalades Hinglaisgurh — Holkar crosses the Chumbul — Monson hesitates — Holkar attacks him — Monson retreats — bravery — privations — distresses — disasters — and discomfiture of his detachment. — Holkar invades Hindoostan — Muttra evacuated — is repulsed at Delhi. — Defence of Col. Burn at Shamlee — Holkar carries his depredations into the Dooab — is pursued by Lord Lake — battle of Deeg — surprise at Furruckabad — storm of Deeg. — Holkar's possessions in the Deccan reduced — Indore evacuated. — Lord Lake determines on besieging Bhurtpoor — Raja's resolve.

A. D. 1804. THE rapidity of the conquests, and the speedy termination of the war surprised all India, and it was naturally supposed, that the astonishing success of the British arms, would have deterred any power, however inimically disposed, from evincing a spirit of hostility at such a moment; but the conduct of Asiatics is frequently so capricious that it cannot be foreseen by any reasonable estimate of their real interests.

Family rivalry, next to disputes concerning hereditary rights, are always uppermost in the mind of a Mahratta. Jeswunt Rao Holkar, notwithstanding the great sacrifices made by Sindia to induce him to join the confederacy, could not believe that his rival would forget the defeat and disgrace he had so lately suffered; and he concluded, that in the event of success against the British power, that Sindia's first object, after re-establishing his influence at Poona, would be a war of extermination against himself. On the other hand, if the tide should turn against the confederates, he imagined, after the power of Sindia had been reduced to the level of his own, he might not only interpose with safety, but attain a consequence, so much the greater, as it would be manifest, in the event of ultimate success, that it had mainly depended on his exertions. Like all the Holkar family, he was a great advocate for the predatory system of warfare, and conceived that it would have been better for the confederates, if they had carefully reserved their infantry and guns, under the protection of forts, avoided an action, devastated the Company's provinces, and acted with vigour upon General Wellesley's supplies.

Holkar, during the progress of hostilities, remained in Malwa, levying enormous contributions* from friend and foe, and could scarcely credit the accounts he received of the rapid victories of the English. When too late, he began to carry his designs into execution, and moved up towards the Jeypoor territory, for the purpose of negociating for aid from the Rajpoots, the Raja of Bhurtpoor, the Rohillas, and the Seiks. He likewise despatched an envoy to Sindia, recommending him to break the treaty, and renew the war; but that chieftain was, or pretended to be at the moment, so exasperated against him, that he immediately communicated the fact to the British authority. Some of his ministers, especially his father-in-law, Shirzee Rao Ghatgay, had more confidence in Holkar, and advised Sindia, notwithstanding the communication to the British resident, to despatch a wukeel to the camp of Jeswunt Rao, for the purpose, as they gave out, of ascertaining his designs; but in reality to leave open the door of reconciliation, in case the project of Holkar, in whose wisdom and fortune all the Mahrattas began to have great confidence, should prove worthy of regard.

* Sir John Malcolm mentions his having exacted a krore of rupees from the city of Mundissore alone.

The principal part of the British armies in the Deccan, after the termination of hostilities, retired to the southward, and two considerable divisions were stationed, the one at Jaffeirabad, to ensure the tranquillity of the country and its occupation by the Nizam, and the other at Poona, with the Peishwa, whose territory was a good deal molested by plundering insurgents and freebooters, which is usually the case in India after the close of a war.

The army in Hindoostan under General Lake was still in the field to watch the motions of Holkar, whose menacing position, as well as the tone of his language, the general report of his hostile intentions, and his having put to death three officers, British subjects, who wished, in consequence of these reports, to take advantage of the governor-general's proclamation and retire from his service, afforded strong indications of an approaching rupture. Superadded to these, were the machinations already mentioned, which were ascertained from his intercepted correspondence; but it was scarcely credible that he could intend risking a war; and General Lake believed, to the last, that affairs with Holkar would be amicably adjusted. In Holkar's letters to General Lake, as is frequently the case, when insolence is designed on the part of a Mahratta, it is difficult to discover whether friendly profession, arrogance, or humility, predominate. In his first letter, professing that he had no intention of saying any thing improper, he requested General Lake to retire towards Agra, "as his near approach to his victorious army appeared likely to produce unpleasant circumstances." In his next, he declares, that from him the general shall never have any other language than that of friendship; "but if any thing contrary to friendship shall appear from you, then I am helpless." At length it became absolutely necessary to ascertain the designs of Holkar, and the governor-general directed General Lake to intimate to him the necessity of withdrawing his troops from the frontier of the allies of the British government. Whatever claims might be urged by the Holkar family against the Rajpoots, and others, such claims, he was told, could not be considered to rest in him; but the British government was willing, with the consent of the Peishwa, to arbitrate the existing difference between him and his brother Khassee Rao, on principles of equity and justice: Jeswunt Rao was also invited to send wukeels to the British camp. To these proposals Holkar replied by promising to withdraw his troops; and in the middle of March sent wukeels to General Lake's camp at Ramgurh. These persons produced a letter from Holkar, in which, after many friendly professions, he recommends the general to consent to the propositions they would offer, otherwise, "his country and his property were on the saddle of his horse, to whatever side the reins of his brave warriors should be turned, the whole of the country in that direction should (March 18.) come into his possession." The wukeels submitted the following propositions: 1st. "That Holkar should be permitted to collect Chouth, agreeably to the custom of his ancestors. 2d. That the ancient possessions formerly held by the family, such as Etaweh, &c; twelve districts between the Ganges and Jumna, and a district in Bundelcund should be ceded to him. 3d. That the country of Hurriana, which was formerly in the possession of the family, should be given to him. 4th. That the country then in his possession should be guaranteed, and a treaty should be concluded with him on the same terms as that with Sindia." These demands were altogether extravagant, and were treated as such by General Lake. Most of these countries, mentioned in the second and third propositions, had been conquered from Sindia; Etaweh had not been in the possession of the Mahrattas since their garrisons were driven out by Shujah-ud-doulah, after the recal of the Peishwa's general, Visajee Kishen, in 1773, and had been ceded in 1801, by the nabob of Oude, to the East India Company. The wukeels proceeded, in a high strain of menace, to exaggerate the power of Holkar, and the value of the connections, hostile to the British government, which he had formed. General Lake replied, "that it was not customary with the English to boast of their power, but that Holkar would find, in the event of a rupture, that he had much overvalued his own." General Lake also took occasion to mention to the wukeels, that their propositions and their language were so much at variance with the tenor of Holkar's letters, that no judgment could be formed of his real wishes and intentions. On the ensuing day the wukeels attended to receive a reply to the letter they had brought from Holkar, when they solicited a grant of some country, or an annual sum in lieu of an increase of country, and asked whether or not Holkar was to be allowed to collect the customary tribute from the states of Oudepoor and Kotah. To all which General Lake merely replied, that Holkar must first evince his friendly intentions by returning into his own country, before the British government could be enabled to enter upon a discussion of any claims.

Five or six weeks before the despatch of these wukeels to General Lake, Jeswunt Rao Holkar had addressed a letter to General Wellesley, in which he demanded from him certain districts claimed by his family in the Deccan, as the condition of peace, and concluded in a strain of the most vaunting menace, in case, by non-compliance, it should be rendered necessary to resort to war.

In the beginning of April Holkar repaired, on pretence of devotion, to Ajimere, belonging to Sindia, where he levied contributions, and made an unsuccessful attempt to possess himself of the fort; but he justified these acts to Sindia's wukeel as necessary to enable him to prosecute a war, involving the independence of the Mahrattas. A great portion of his army remained on the frontier of the Jeypoor territory, where they commenced plundering.

In the meanwhile the governor-general having been made acquainted with Holkar's demands, and apprehending many evils from continuing to temporize, issued orders to General Lake and General Wellesley to attack Holkar's troops and possessions in every direction, declaring at the same time, that it was not his intention to retain Holkar's territories for the British government, but to divide them amongst its allies. (April 16.)

General Wellesley was at this period at Bombay, and, in consequence of a famine in the Deccan, from a deficiency of rain, superadded to the devastations occasioned by the moving armies and plundering bands, by which that country had been for years infested, it was apprehended that it would be impracticable to act against Holkar's possessions in that quarter, until the fall of the rains; but General Wellesley directed Colonel Murray to assail them from Guzerat, and to advance upon his capital in Malwa. Sindia, who was informed of these particulars, professed his readiness to act in cordial co-operation for the reduction of Jeswunt Rao.

(April 18.) On the 18th April General Lake sent forward a detachment of three native battalions, under Colonel Monson to Jeypoor, on which Holkar began to retire rapidly (April 23.) to the southward. Parties of irregular horse, under European officers, followed his march to watch his motions and harass his troops. Holkar having halted for two days, General Lake advanced upon him preceded by Lieutenant-Colonel Monson's detachment, but Holkar renewed his flight and continued his route until he had gained his own frontier, and crossed the Chumbul. During his retreat he made an attempt to renew the negotiation which was declared inadmissible. He was followed by the irregular horse and Lieutenant-Colonel Monson, covered by General Lake's army, from which a detachment under Lieutenant Colonel Don gallantly stormed and took the fort of (May 16.) Tonk-Rampoorah by blowing open the gate.

The news of this first success in the war against Holkar, was shortly afterwards followed by intelligence of a different description from the province of Bundelcund, where the refractory chiefs in that strong country occupied the troops for a considerable period, after its transfer to the British Government. Lieutenant-Colonel Fawcett, the officer in command, had detached seven companies of Sepoys, with some artillery, for the purpose of reducing a small fort. Whilst operations against it were in progress, the Killidar sent out an offer to surrender on the ensuing morning on condition that the firing should cease. The proposal being accepted, the Killidar apprized Holkar's General Umeer Khan, of the circumstances, and invited him to send a detachment, and fall by surprise on the British troops. In this scheme they were partially successful; the horse approached the battery before they were discovered, and two companies of Sepoys with fifty artillery men, their officers and guns were completely cut off. The remaining five companies, under Captain Smith, supported by their only remaining gun, effected their retreat to the head quarters of Lieutenant-Colonel Fawcett. Umeer Khan, encouraged by this success, made an attack on Kalpee and attempted to pass the Jumna, for the purpose of plundering the Dooab, but he was checked by two companies of Sepoys stationed on the bank, and was shortly afterwards attacked and routed by a party of horse, and a battalion of infantry which had been received into the British pay from the service of Ambajee Inglia. Umeer Khan, however, continued to act for some time on the side of Bundelcund, where the numerous refractory Zumeendars facilitated the means of predatory warfare.

In the mean time, as the rains approached, and the troops in Guzerat, in concert with those of Sindia, were supposed best capable of acting with advantage against Holkar's possessions, during that season, General Lake, after the capture of Tonk-Rampoorah, returned with the main army into cantonment, leaving Lieutenant-Colonel Monson to keep Holkar in check, with five battalions of Sepoys, and about three thousand irregular horse; the latter divided into two bodies, the one under Bappoojee Sindia, in the service of Doulut Rao, and the other under Lieutenant Lucan. After the return of General Lake, Monson, intending to co-operate with Colonel Murray from Guzerat, entered Holkar's territory by the Mokundra pass, and a detachment from his division took the hill fort of Hinglaisgurh by escalade. Without efficient means of supply, he continued his route towards the Chumbul, until the 7th July, when he received information that Holkar was crossing that river to attack him, with the whole of his army, including his infantry and guns. Monson, who shortly after his appointment to his present command was nominated to the temporary rank of brigadier-general, by the British commander-in-chief, at first advanced with the intention of meeting the enemy, and of taking advantage of their probable confusion in crossing the river. But staggered by a report that Colonel Murray intended to fall back on Guzerat, he began to reflect, that he had only two days grain for the supply of his camp, and that several detachments might be expected to join him; he therefore determined to retire to the Mokundra pass. A prompt and spirited attack on Mahrattas has always succeeded: indecision on the part of their enemy encourages them to fight when they would otherwise only think of escape, and a prolonged retreat before them, except in the single instance of the British detachment under Lieutenant-Colonel Jacob Camac, has invariably ended in disaster.

Having adopted the unfortunate alternative we have mentioned, Brigadier-general Monson, (July 8.) on the 8th July, began his retreat, by sending off his baggage and stores at four o'clock in the morning. No enemy having appeared, the line of infantry followed at nine, and the irregular horse were left on the ground, with orders to follow in half an hour, and to send the earliest intelligence of Holkar's motions. The division had retired about six kos, when intelligence was brought that the irregular horse had been attacked and defeated, and that Lieutenant Lucan * was taken prisoner. This information, it may be here observed, was brought by Doulut Rao's officer, Bappoojee Sindia, who in a few days afterwards deserted to (July 9.) Holkar. On the ensuing morning, however, Monson took post in front of the Mokundra pass. On the 10th, the Mah-

(July 10.) ratta cavalry appeared, and next morning, their numbers having greatly increased, Holkar sent a letter requiring the surrender of the arms of the British detachment. The de-
(July 11.) mand was of course rejected; when Holkar, dividing his cavalry into three bodies, attacked the division in front and flanks, but after various unsuccessful attempts, he withdrew his troops in the evening, and encamped at the distance of two kos, where, being joined by his

* Lieut. Lucan's fate was never positively known. He was supposed to have been poisoned, but this I have heard contradicted on tolerably good native authority, which stated that he died of a bowel complaint. The authority alluded to was Mohummud Khan Bungush, one of Holkar's officers, taken in rebellion by Colonel Wallace, in 1808.

infantry and guns, he intended, as was supposed, to renew the attack on the following morning. Monson not deeming his post tenable, and being apprehensive of having his retreat cut off, quitted his position, and in two marches, though harassed by the enemy and exposed to very heavy (July 12.) rain, reached Kotah. The Raj-Rana of Kotah, when the British troops appeared as fugitives, would neither admit them into the town nor supply them with food *; Brigadier General Monson was therefore obliged to continue his route towards the Gaumuch ford on the Chumbul. Although its distance from Kotah was only seven miles, the obstructions occasioned by the incessant rain, and the deep nature of the soil, (July 13.) prevented his reaching the expected ford until next morning, when it was found impassable until the ensuing day. On the (July 14.) 14th Monson was obliged to halt to enable the troops to procure some grain: heavy rain continued throughout the night. On the 15th he resumed his march, but the guns sank so deep in the mud, that they could not be extricated. The grain in the adjoining villages was exhausted, —retreat was now necessary to procure subsistence; the ammunition was therefore destroyed, and

* Monson's narrative as published by government. The Raj Rana, Zalim Sing, afterwards denied his having refused them food, and said he had offered them an asylum outside the walls; but allowing this last to have been true, Colonel Monson, by accepting such an equivocal support, might have exposed his detachment to certain destruction between two fires. It is however certain, that Zalim Sing was fined ten lacks of rupees by Holkar, whilst the latter lay in the neighbourhood of Kotah.

the guns were spiked and abandoned; but they were recommended to the care of the Raja of Boondee, who, although he could not save the guns, had the courage to maintain his engagements with the English, in the face of the host (July 17.) of Holkar. On the 17th the troops reached the Chumbelee rivulet which was not fordable, but Monson, on the ensuing day, sent his artillery men across on elephants, with orders to proceed to the fort of Rampoorah. Nearly ten days elapsed before the whole of the troops, some on elephants, some on rafts, and some by being sent to a ford farther down, could cross this rivulet, so greatly was it swoln. During that time they sustained much privation; in different situations, they repulsed several persevering attacks which were made upon them by Holkar's cavalry, and a detachment of flank companies under Captain O'Donell beat up the camp of a large body of the enemy, on the evening (July 21.) of the 21st July, with great spirit and success.

Many of the men were drowned in crossing the Chumbelee; but the most trying to the poor Sepoys of all that they endured, was the loss of many of their wives and children, who being in some instances necessarily left on the opposite bank till the last, were, in this helpless and unprotected state, in view and within hearing of their husbands, barbarously massacred by Bheels, from the neighbouring hills, who were in the interests of Holkar.

By the 29th July the whole of the corps of the division reached Rampoorah, and here Brigadier General Monson was joined by two battalions of Sepoys with four field pieces, two howitzers, and a body of irregular horse, bringing with them a supply of grain. This reinforcement had been ordered forward by General Lake as soon as he was apprized of the situation of the detachment at the Mokundra pass; but Brigadier General Monson, not judging his supplies sufficient, after a long and apparently unnecessary halt, determined to continue his retreat to Kooshalgurh, where he expected to find supplies and to be joined by six of Sindia's battalions with twenty-one guns, under Sewdasheo Bhow Bhaskur, the officer defeated by Holkar at Poona, in October 1802. After throwing a strong garrison with his field-pieces into Rampoorah, the division, consisting of five battalions and six companies of Bengal Sepoys , with two howitzers, on the morning of the 22d August, reached the Bunass, which was so much swoln as to be scarcely fordable for the largest elephants. Three boats were found with which the treasure of the detachment, protected by the six companies of the 21st Regiment under Captain Nicholl, were sent across and forwarded (Aug. 23.) to Kooshalgurh. On the 23d August Holkar's cavalry again made their ap- (Aug. 24.) pearance in force, and on the 24th the river being fordable, Brigadier General Monson began to send over his baggage, and one battalion. Holkar, at the same time, took possession of a village on Monson's right, but was promptly dislodged from it. The river having decreased considerably, the Mahrattas were enabled to pass it to the right and left, and most of Monson's baggage having got across, his main body, consisting of three battalions with one of the howitzers, followed. Major James Sinclair was left with one battalion, the 2d battalion 2d regiment, and the picquets of the four corps which had crossed, to protect the passage of the remaining baggage and camp followers. At 4 P. M., however, Holkar's infantry and guns came up, and opened a heavy cannonade. Major Sinclair desperately charged the guns with the small party that remained, took several of them, and for a moment was victorious; but the enemy, rallied by Jeswunt Rao Holkar in person, charged in turn with overpowering numbers, and the gallant handful of Sepoys was nearly annihilated. Of the brave European officers who led them on, twelve fell with their commander, and the wreck of the party escaped under cover of the fire of their comrades, who lined the opposite bank. The Mahrattas, as usual in success, were now active and energetic; they prosecuted the advantage which they had obtained, and compelled Monson to abandon his baggage, which, with their usual avidity, they seized as trophies of a decisive victory. But the British detachment could yet show they were far from being subdued; every attack was repulsed, and Colonel Monson reached Kooshalgurh on the night of the 25th August. Here (Aug. 25.) a most unexpected state of affairs presented itself; — instead of finding an ally in Sewdasheo Bhow, that officer had attacked Captain Nicholl, who had, with much judgment and spirit, maintained his post, and protected Kooshalgurh, a town belonging to the Raja of Jeypoor. On the 26th August, the Mahratta cavalry encamped in separate bodies, surrounding the British detachment; and two companies of Sepoys, belonging to the 1st battalion 14th regiment, with a large proportion of the irregular horse, seduced by Holkar, deserted. Of the cause of this partial disaffection, there is no account afforded, but for the treachery of the few, the general fidelity and steadiness of the detachment, most amply made amends. Unfortunately, Brigadier General Monson did not know the Sepoys, they had no confidence in him, nor he in them. At seven o'clock, on the evening of the 26th August, having previously spiked his remaining howitzer, the other having been taken by the enemy on the bank of the Bunass, Brigadier General Monson moved out of Kooshalgurh, and prosecuted his retreat towards Agra, in an oblong square. During that night, and the ensuing day, the Mahratta horse, supported by guns, repeatedly attempted to penetrate, but could make no impression. On the night of the (Aug. 27.) 27th, under the protection of the ruined fort of Hindoun, Monson halted a few hours to refresh his weary men, but one hour after midnight, his retreat was resumed. As soon as he had cleared the ravines near Hindoun, the horse, in three different bodies, made a desperate charge; but the Sepoys, reserving their fire until they were almost within reach of their bayonets, then gave it with such signal effect, that the enemy retired in every direction. The troops almost exhausted with fatigue and hunger, reached the Biana pass about sunset; here Brigadier General Monson intended to halt during the night; but the ardent and persevering enemy, once more brought up their guns, and opened so heavy and severe a fire on the exhausted troops, as to oblige them to go on as they best could. But weary, and harassed beyond endurance, the baggage having become entangled with the line of march, and the night being excessively dark, no order could be restored, and the whole were thrown into inextricable confusion. In this state, the troops fairly broke, and fled towards Agra. The enemy, though they attacked in straggling parties, fortunately were not in sufficient force to reap the full advantage they might have done, and by the 31st August, the greater part of the fugitives, who escaped the enemy, found an asylum at Agra.

* * 2-2d, 1-9th, 1-14th, both battalions of the 12th, and six companies of the 21st Bengal Native infantry.

* During the most harassing days, many of the old Sepoys and Native officers, were often heard encouraging the younger European officers, when sinking under their fatigues, telling them "to cheer up, for that they would carry them safely to Agra."

(Aug. 31.)

Holkar, at the head of sixty thousand horse*, fifteen thousand infantry and artillery, with 192 guns, advanced triumphantly to Muttra, which, at

* So stated by Sir John Malcolm, who, in regard to Jeswunt Rao Holkar, is our best authority. To account for this vast body, it must be recollected, that he was recruited by the wreck of the armies of Sindia and Rughoojee Bhonslay; and a part, no doubt, were Pindharees.

his approach, was abandoned by the British troops; and parties of the Mahratta horse pushed across the Jumna. But General Lake, with his accustomed energy, had already taken measures for repairing these disasters. The Mahrattas who crossed the Jumna, were driven back, troops were ordered on to Agra with all expedition, and the British army, in the course of a month, again advanced on the Mahrattas. In a few days, the Mahratta horse began, in their usual manner, to show themselves in small parties, gradually encreasing in numbers, flying before the British cavalry when sent to pursue them, evading every attempt to bring them to action, turning as their pursuers turned, firing their matchlocks, and brandishing their spears; whilst others, stole in upon the flanks and rear, where they at first cut off stragglers and baggage with considerable success. The cruelties committed by Holkar, on all who fell into his hands, were barbarous in the extreme. It is probable, that General Lake, instead of making fruitless attempts from a standing camp to bring Holkar's cavalry to action, would have pushed at his infantry and guns, but he seems to have remained at Muttra for the purpose of collecting supplies, which afforded Holkar an opportunity of attempting an important enterprise, being no less than that of endeavouring to possess himself of the emperor's person. The plan was well conceived, but it was completely frustrated by the precaution and gallantry of Lieutenant-Colonel Ochterlony, the resident at Delhi, assisted by Lieutenant-Colonel Burn the commandant. The whole of the enemy's infantry and artillery attacked Delhi (October 8—14.) on the 8th, and continued the siege until the 14th, during which, though deserted by a party of irregulars attached to the garrison, a a small body of British Sepoys, ably commanded*, made a successful sortie, repelled an assault, and, under incessant fatigue, defended a city ten miles in circumference.

(October 4—12.)

General Lake, on hearing of this attack,
(Oct. 18.) marched to the relief of the capital, and arrived there on the 18th October; but it was Holkar's plan to keep his infantry out of reach, and they were already five days on their march towards the territory of his ally the Raja of Bhurtpoor; who, in favour of his old friends the Mahrattas, particularly the family of Holkar, had seceded from his engagements with the English, notwithstanding the great advantage which he derived from their alliance. Holkar's cavalry, except a few thousands who accompanied the march of his infantry, continued to hover round Delhi for some days; but on the 29th of October suddenly crossed the Jumna below Panniput, for the purpose of cutting off a detach-

* In regard to Sepoys, it cannot be too well understood, that much depends on their European officers; no officers in the British service can be placed in situations where more address, suavity, and firmness, are necessary; consequently, none are more deserving of consideration from their country; but officers must also remember that it is generally their own fault when confidence is not mutual. To encourage the Sepoys on this occasion, Colonel Ochterlony served out sweetmeats, and promised them half a month's pay, as soon as the enemy was repulsed. He knew them.

ment under Lieutenant-Colonel Burn, who, after being called in for the defence of Delhi, was on his return to his station at Sehraunpoor, with one battalion of Sepoys and some matchlockmen, when he was overtaken by Holkar at Shamlee. He formed his camp into a square which, towards evening, the enemy surrounded; but drew off in the night to the high road leading to Sehraunpoor, which enabled Colonel Burn to throw his party into a small gurhee near the town, where he resolved to defend himself if he could procure supplies, and if not, to fight his way back to Delhi. In consequence of the hostility evinced towards him by the inhabitants of Shamlee, who joined Holkar in attacking him, he had determined to adopt the latter alternative, when he heard that General Lake with three regiments of dragoons, three regiments of native cavalry, the horse artillery, and a brigade of infantry, under Colonel Don, was marching to his relief. General Lake arrived at Shamlee 3d November; Holkar retired on his approach, and now prepared to execute his long meditated threat, of wasting the Company's provinces with fire and sword. To leave him no time for the purpose was now the object of the British general; and on the 5th November the pursuit of Holkar commenced; his route lay in a southerly direction, straight down the Dooab, in which he pillaged and burned the defenceless villages as he passed along.

The British infantry, excepting the Brigade under Lieutenant-Colonel Don, was sent with two regiments of cavalry by General Lake, when he crossed the Jumna, to follow Holkar's infantry and guns, which had taken post near Deeg, a fort belonging to the Raja of Bhurtpoor. Major-General Frazer, who commanded, arrived in the neighbourhood of Deeg on the 12th November. Hol-

(Nov. 12.) kar's infantry was encamped behind an extensive morass and a deep tank; with their left on a fortified village, and their right on the fort of Deeg supported by ranges of batteries, which they deemed impregnable. On the morning of the 13th the British troops, in two lines,
(Nov. 13.) moved on to the attack; the gallant 76th first carried the fortified village with their bayonets, and finding a range of guns immediately under it, charged on through a tremendous fire of round, grape, and chain shot: the 1st Bengal European regiment rushed on to support the 76th, followed by the Sepoys. Holkar's infantry abandoned the first range of guns, and retired to the next; but this was as instantly charged by General Frazer, who fell mortally wounded in the operation, deeply regretted by his troops. The command devolved on Colonel Monson, under whom the victory was completed; the enemy being compelled to abandon battery after battery, until they were forced into the fort of Deeg, the garrison of which immediately fired upon the British troops. During the battle the Mahratta horse retook the first range, and for a short time turned the guns on the rear of the British line, but they were again retaken by twenty-eight men of the 76th regiment, headed by Captain Norford, who lost his life in the performance of this remarkable exploit. The loss of the British was severe; no less than six hundred and forty-three were killed and wounded, and of these twenty-two were European officers. The loss of the enemy was estimated at about two thousand. Eighty-seven pieces of ordnance were taken, and among them Colonel Monson had the satisfaction of finding fourteen of those lost during his retreat.

Four days after the victory at Deeg, on the morning of the 17th November, General (Nov. 17.) Lake, after a most persevering pursuit, came up with Holkar's cavalry at Furruckabad, and falling upon them by surprise, put three thousand of them to the sword. General Lake from the 31st October estimated, that he had marched at the rate of twenty-three miles daily, and that during the night and day preceding the attack, including the space gone over in the pursuit, his cavalry went upwards of seventy miles in less than twenty-four hours.

The explosion of a tumbril, as the British troops approached the Mahratta camp, gave the alarm to Holkar, and, on the first discharge from the gallopers, Jeswunt Rao fled with such of his followers as were ready on the instant, taking the direction of Deeg to join the remains of his army, of whose defeat he received intelligence the night before he was surprised. General Lake continuing the pursuit, arrived at Deeg on the first December, when the siege of that fortress having been determined upon, the battering train was brought from Agra, and the trenches opened on the thirteenth. In ten days a breach was made in an outwork, strongly fortified, at one of the angles of the city, which was stormed and taken at midnight, with the loss of 227 men killed and wounded. On the ensuing day and night the town and citadel of Deeg were evacuated, the garrison, including the remains of Holkar's infantry, betaking themselves to Bhurtpoor. (Dec. 23.)

The capture of Deeg, involving the loss of the greater part of the territory of the Raja of Bhurtpoor, was a severe blow to Holkar. His territory in the Deccan was already reduced by the capture of all his forts, including Chandore and Galna, which after a slight resistance, surrendered to a division under Colonel Wallace by the end of October. His principal forts in Malwa were also occupied by British troops, and in the month of August, Indore, his capital, had been taken possession of without resistance by the detachment of the Bombay army from Guzerat. That division had been ordered to advance into Hindoostan for the purpose of endeavouring to intercept Holkar in his expected flight to Malwa, and it had reached Kotah by the end of December. The reduction of Bhurtpoor, however, was deemed necessary in order to cut off Holkar's only asylum, after which he might, it was supposed, be followed up as a fugitive, and either taken prisoner or rendered insignificant.

But the fortunes of Jeswunt Rao, though in a few weeks they had undergone a signal reverse, were not yet destined to close. The situation of his ally the Raja of Bhurtpoor was still more desperate than his own, for as a Mahratta freebooter

"he had still his country and his property on the saddle of his horse," but the Jhat Raja, as he himself declared from the first, "must stand or fall with his fort." *

* The above chapter, where the authority is not expressly mentioned, is from English Records. Major Thorn's memoir and Oral information.

CHAP. XIV.

FROM A. D. 1805, TO A. D. 1806.

The siege of Bhurtpoor commences. — Holkar and Umeer Khan attempt to obstruct the operations. — Umeer Khan proceeds to Rohilcund — is pursued by General Smith — defeated and compelled to return to Bhurtpoor. — The Jhats repulse the British army in four assaults. — The Raja sues for peace — terms granted — principal reason for admitting him to terms. Disputes with Sindia. — The Marquis Cornwallis returns to India as Governor-General — his views — death — is succeeded by Sir George Barlow — Holkar takes the route of the Punjab — is pursued by Lord Lake. — Peace with Sindia — and with Holkar. — System of policy pursued by Sir George Barlow — remonstrances of Lord Lake — declaratory articles annexed to the treaties — policy of the British Government towards the Rajpoots — particularly ungenerous towards the Raja of Boondee. — Treaty with the Gaekwar.

A. D. 1805. THE Bengal army arrived before Bhurtpoor on the second day of the new year. General Lake being accustomed only to success, without properly reconnoitring the place, and with a very inefficient battering train, commenced (Jan. 4.) the siege, by taking possession of a grove which afforded a partial cover to his operations. Bhurtpoor is a fortified town, six or eight miles in circumference, every where surrounded by a very high strong mud wall, and bastions planted with a numerous artillery, having a wide and deep ditch, capable of being rendered unfordable. It was strongly garrisoned by the whole of the Raja's troops, and the remainder of Holkar's infantry. The Raja pressed a great proportion of the neighbouring villagers, many of whom were of his own cast, to assist in repairing the works; and having a very large treasury, nothing to obstruct his supplies on three sides of the town and Holkar's cavalry to act upon those of the besiegers, his means of defence were proportionate to his resolution to use them. In addition to Holkar's cavalry, Umeer Khan was summoned from Bundelcund, and, during the progress of the siege, after making on one occasion a considerable but unsuccessful effort on an important convoy, where a number of his men were killed, he went off to effect a diversion, (Feb. 7.) crossed the Jumna and the Ganges, and invaded the Company's districts in Rohilcund. He was, however, so closely pursued by the British cavalry, detached by General Lake, under General Smith, that he had not time to effect extensive mischief. He was at last overtaken on the 1st March, and, after a sharp skirmish, routed with considerable loss. This defeat encouraged the people of the country to resist him, and his followers began to desert. Tired at length by a campaign less profitable, and more hazardous than he expected, Umeer Khan, about the (March 20.) 20th March, returned to Bhurtpoor, which still defied every effort of the British general, who had by that time come to the resolution of suspending operations, until the arrival of stores, and the junction of a more powerful artillery. The army had been repulsed in four assaults; the first, led by Colonel Maitland, who lost his life on the occasion, was made on the night of the 9th of January. Several causes were assigned for its failure; — owing to the irregularity of the ground, and the extreme darkness, a confusion took place at the outset, from which many of the men lost their way; the ditch was very deep, and the breach was not only imperfect, but defended with determined courage. A better breach induced General Lake to try the second assault on the 21st of the same month: it failed from the depth of water in the ditch. Means had been taken to ascertain the extent of this impediment by a stratagem of three of the Bengal native cavalry, who, pretending to go over to the enemy, and being fired upon with blank cartridges from the trenches, had thus an opportunity of making their observations, and returned with a favourable report. The enemy, however, dammed up the ditch in front of the breach, which, on the part of the beseigers, rendered valour unavailing, and perseve-

(Feb. 10.) rance destruction. On the 10th February, the Bombay division, under Major-General Jones, joined the Bengal army, to assist in the siege, which was now going on by regular approaches. On the 20th of that month, (Feb. 20.) another assault was made with no better success than the former. Two European regiments, one of them the hitherto brave 76th, refused to follow their officers, and thus gave the 12th regiment of Bengal Sepoys an opportunity of immortalizing themselves. Following the gallant remains of the flank companies of the 22d regiment of foot, the Sepoys advanced with the greatest ala-city, planted their colours on the top of a bastion, and it was supposed that an equal degree of ardour on the part of the 75th and 76th regiments, would have made them masters of the place. Next day, the men of these regiments, when addressed by General Lake, were overpowered by shame and remorse; they voluntéered to a man; and a fourth and last attempt was made on the 21st (Feb. 21.) February. The men, marching over the dead bodies of their companions, which crowded the ditch and glacis, rushed on with a desperate resolution, which would have overcome any practicable obstacles. On this, as on every former occasion, none of the troops relaxed in their efforts; and, for two hours, until ordered to desist, they persevered at the breach, or in climbing up a high bastion, which adjoined it. But as fast as the leaders got up, they were knocked down with logs of wood, or speared by rows of pikemen who crowded the tops of the parapets. The besieged took every precaution, and used every effort of prudence and resolution; the damage done to the mud wall by the shot was generally repaired during the night, their guns were drawn within the embrazures, to prevent their being dismounted, and during the assaults, particularly in the last, pots filled with combustibles, burning cotton bales steeped in oil, with incessant discharges of grape from the cannon, and a destructive fire of small arms were poured upon the British troops, whose casualties were very great, and in the four assaults, 3203 men were killed and wounded, of whom 103 were European officers. The most afflicting circumstance attending these failures was the necessity of leaving many of the wounded behind, who were almost invariably put to death by a sally of the garrison.

The Mahratta horse made their appearance daily, endeavouring to obstruct the operations of the siege, and during the assaults afforded considerable assistance, particularly when the British cavalry was in pursuit of Umeer Khan. They occasionally cut off cattle, foragers and stragglers, and the foraging parties of the besiegers were necessarily so strong, and obliged to march to such a distance, that very considerable impediment was the consequence. Besides the attempt made by Umeer Khan, already adverted to, there was another serious but unavailing attack upon a convoy, which was made by both Holkar and Umeer Khan, assisted by some of the Jhat horse. On both occasions the convoys were saved by seasonable reinforcements from the British camp. Upon the return of the cavalry from the pursuit of Umeer Khan in Rohilcund, General Lake made two attempts to surprise Holkar, in the second of which he was particularly successful *; a thousand of the Mahrattas were killed; and great numbers of the horsemen, their spirit being now completely broken, quitted their leader after this chastisement. To such a pitch of alarm had they now arrived, and so completely disheartened were these active tormenters of Mon-son's detachment, that they had not courage to fight for their lives; not one of the British cavalry was killed on the occasion. A few days after this event, three thousand of the remains of Holkar's regular infantry, were intercepted by a detachment of British troops under Captain Royal, and defeated with severe loss.

* In the first attempt the clattering of the steel scabbards worn by the cavalry, gave the Mahrattas intimation of his approach; in the second, by leaving them behind he got nearer to their camp, before being discovered.

To complete Holkar's misfortunes, his ally, the Raja of Bhurtpoor, hoping to save himself, took advantage of the intermission of the siege, to testify his desire of reconciliation; offering terms, which, even after every thing was prepared to renew the attack, many concurring reasons induced (April 10.) the British authorities to accept, although at the prodigious sacrifice of leaving a lasting impression of their failure. The Raja of Bhurtpoor paid twenty lacks of rupees, renounced his alliance with the enemies of the British government, and his claims to advantages secured by the former treaty with the General, now Lord Lake. The fortress of Deeg was to be restored, when the British government had reason to be assured of his fidelity.

The principal cause which actuated the British authorities, in accommodating matters with the Raja of Bhurtpoor, was an apprehended rupture with Sindia. Doulut Rao, several days even before he signed the treaty of defensive alliance, had made strong objections to the restorations granted by the British government to the Rana of Gohud, whom, as being long dispossessed of all territory, he affected to consider as a private individual, possessing neither rights nor independence, and therefore incapable of engaging in any treaty; consequently, it was unjust, he argued, to set up his antiquated claims, as one of the independent Rajas or Jagheerdars, and absurd to pretend, that this elected Rana could cede Gwalior to the Company. These arguments, though easily combated, were sufficiently ingenious for the immediate purpose of Sindia's ministers, whose chief aim was to seek cause of present dispute, trusting to events for widening or repairing the breach, as they saw occasion.

Ambajee Inglia, who was insincere from the first in his treaty with the English, and who claimed and obtained merit with his master for what he had done, by retaining possession of some of the districts in Jagheer, is said to have been the deviser of this scheme in regard to Gohud*, and to have been the active abettor of Shirzee Rao Ghatgay, in endeavouring to excite Doulut Rao to a union with Holkar. No Mahratta doubts, and the governor-general must have known, that Bappoojee Sindia and Sewdasheo Bhow Bhaskur joined Holkar with Doulut Rao's consent. Whilst disavowed, it was not expedient to charge him with such an act of treacherous hostility, and therefore, in the event of their being apprehended by General Lake, he had instructions to try them by a court-martial, for their treason and desertion, and to carry into execution whatever sentence might be passed. Sindia, in a long letter, of frivolous and unjust complaint, which he addressed to the governor-general, on the 18th October, 1804, had the assurance to adduce the desertion of those officers as one of his grievances, originating in his not having received pecuniary aid from the English, to enable him to co-operate against Holkar; and that they had only feigned to join the enemy for the purpose of obtaining subsistence for their troops.

* Oral information from Ambajee's son-in-law, and others.

At the period of the date of this letter, Sindia was on his march from Burhanpoor towards Malwa, professing an intention of proceeding to his own capital Oojein, agreeably to frequent recommendations from the British government. But under the influence of Shirzee Rao, who from the first earnestly promoted the union with Holkar, Sindia was fully bent on joining that chief, and in addition to various acts of a hostile nature against the allies of the British government, committed a gross outrage by attacking, plundering, and detaining Mr. Jenkins, the acting resident, in his camp.

A division of the British army, under Colonel Martindell in Bundelcund, had been directed to reinforce the army at Bhurtpoor, and had advanced for that purpose as far as Gwalior; but on receiving intelligence of this outrage, Colonel Martindell fell back on Jhansee to frustrate any scheme which Sindia might have formed of invading the Company's provinces, which from Kalpee to Calcutta were completely exposed; but Sindia moved on gradually to the northward, until his approach to the Chumbul produced a strong remonstrance from the British resident, to whom Sindia declared, that he was unable to proceed to settle his own country from the state of his finances, and that he was only marching towards Bhurtpoor to mediate a peace. He agreed, however, if assisted by the British government in the removal of his pecuniary embarrassments, to return to the southward, and act as they might desire; he also promised to make reparation for the plunder of the British resident. At the interview where these assurances were given, the demeanour of Sindia and his ministers was much more conciliatory than it had been for some time before, and it being of great importance to prevent Sindia from joining the confederacy at Bhurtpoor, the governor-general accepted this promise as an atonement for the outrage on his representative, and agreed to advance some pecuniary aid, provided Sindia would return and employ himself in taking possession of Holkar's unoccupied districts in Malwa. Sindia pretended to acquiesce, and retired eight miles towards Subbulgurh; but still, on pretence of mediating, sent on a part of his cavalry and all his Pindharees towards Bhurtpoor. The treaty, however, was concluded previous to their arrival; the Raja declined an interview with Sindia's wukeel, and the troops, joined by Holkar with the remains of his cavalry, returned to Sindia's camp, where Holkar met with a cordial reception, as did Bappoojee Sindia and Umeer Khan. Sindia, in regard to Holkar, endeavoured to justify himself to the British government, by telling the resident that Holkar, who had intended to plunder the British territories, had, at his request, abandoned that design, and consented to his mediation for the attainment of peace.*

Lord Lake, in consequence of this junction, moved from Bhurtpoor with his whole army towards the camp of Sindia and Holkar, desiring the resident to quit Sindia's camp. The resident, however, was still detained on various pretexts, whilst the two chieftains, on Lord Lake's approach, retreated in a south-westerly direction towards Kotah, with great precipitation. Their whole force consisted of five thousand infantry with one hundred and forty guns, twelve thousand Sillidar horse, and twelve thousand Pindharees. From the advanced state of the season, Lord Lake did not deem it advisable to pursue them, and therefore directed the army to take up positions during the monsoon. The Bombay troops, under General Jones, occupied a centrical situation at Tonk-Rampoorah. Colonel Martindell's division returned to Bundelcund; a detachment was placed at Gohud; and the main body of the Bengal army was stationed at Agra and Muttra.

Sindia and Holkar repaired to Kotah, and afterwards moved towards Ajimere. Holkar was a decided advocate for continuing the war; Shirzee Rao was strenuous in support of this proposal, and whilst he continued to sway the councils of his son-in-law, Holkar had entire influence in Sindia's administration. But the violence of Shirzee Rao defeated his own purposes, and Holkar was instrumental in removing him from power, and placing

* Mill's History of British India.

Ambajee Inglia at the head of Sindia's administration. Holkar, with Sindia's connivance, had at first confined Ambajee, and after exacting from him a large sum of money, on which the troops subsisted for some time, he was released, and appointed as has been just mentioned. Holkar expected to find in him a willing coadjutor, and from the reputation of his wisdom, much more was hoped, than from the rash violence of Shirzee Rao; but the temporizing policy of Ambajee, the rekindling rivalry of the two chieftains, the separation of their camps, and above all, Sindia's conviction of their impotency to contend with the British government, paved the way to a pacification which had by that time, owing to a change in the government, become the primary object of the British cabinet.

Peace was no doubt of the greatest importance to British India at this period, but the power of the Mahratta chiefs was completely broken: the Peishwa, however inimically disposed, had as yet acquired no authority, and the Marquis Wellesley, without renouncing any advantages, would have soon been enabled to effect every arrangement for securing a long if not a permanent tranquillity; but the protracted warfare, and the popular clamour in England against his administration, arising chiefly from temporary embarrassments and a sudden accumulation of debt, began to influence the opinions, not only of the proprietors and directors of the East India Company, but of the British ministry. The return of the venerable Marquis Cornwallis to India was solicited by the highest authorities, as if the salvation of that country depended on his presence. He arrived in Calcutta on the 30th July, and on the same day assumed charge of the government. He showed, almost from the first act of his administration, that he disapproved of the system of defensive alliance conjoined with a subsidiary force, and evinced so great an eagerness to put an end to the war with Holkar, and to accommodate the differences with Sindia, that, had the power of these chiefs and of Rughoojee, not been completely broken, it would probably have ensured a prolongation of hostilities, conducted with all the energy and activity of Mahrattas in success. Lord Cornwallis was willing to overlook the outrage committed by Sindia on the British resident, to give up Gwalior and its dependancies, and to make some provision for the Rana of Gohud from the disposable territories on the Jumna. To Holkar, he proposed to restore the whole of the territories conquered from him during the war. He greatly disapproved of the treaties of defence and guarantee entered into with the petty Rajas of Joudpoor, Jeypoor, Bhurtpoor, Macherry and Boondee. As to the first, the Raja of Joudpoor having refused to ratify the treaty which his wukeel had made with General Lake, of course no agreement with that state existed. With regard to the second, the Raja of Jeypoor had not fulfilled the conditions of his agreement, and the Marquis Cornwallis, at an early period, had directed him to be informed that it was considered as dissolved; but the Raja's subsequent conduct had in a great degree retrieved his previous neglect. With respect to the other three, the governor-general proposed, as an inducement to their renouncing the alliance, to make over portions of the territory conquered from Sindia south of Delhi, and on the west of the Jumna, which river he intended should form the south-western boundary of the Company's possessions in that quarter, and by this means exempt the British government from all obligation, to guarantee or defend the territory so assigned, from the attack of Sindia, or any other potentate. In conformity with these sentiments, instructions were forwarded to Lord Lake on the 19th September; but, before their official transmission, Lord Lake, apprized of the pacific course of policy which the new governor-general had determined to pursue, seized an opportunity, consequent to Ambajee's appointment to the administration, and to the dismissal of Shirzee Rao, to draw proposals from Sindia, — an important advantage in most negotiations, but particularly so in the present case. To the overtures made Lord Lake replied, that he could listen to no proposition until the resident was released, a preliminary to which Sindia now readily consented; and Lord Lake, in anticipation of the wishes of the governor-general, had submitted, previously to the receipt of his instructions, a plan for the adjustment of differences with Sindia. In consequence of this favourable state of affairs, and the evils he conceived likely to result from abandoning the connection with the petty states, and permitting the Mahrattas to regain a footing in the northern provinces, he delayed acting upon the instructions, and represented the reasons by which he was guided.

Before this representation was received, the mortal illness of the Marquis Cornwallis had rendered him incapable of attending to public business; and at his death, which happened (Oct. 5.) on the 5th October, the charge of the British government in India devolved on the senior member of the Bengal council, Sir George Barlow.

In the meantime Holkar, perceiving the change of politics on the part of Sindia, and that he had nothing to hope from him whilst his own fortunes were so low, quitted Ajimere early in the month of September, and, with about twelve thousand horse, two or three thousand infantry, and thirty guns, took the rout of the Punjab, giving out, that he expected to be joined by the Seiks, and the Afghans. Two divisions of the British army, the one under General Jones from Rampoorah, and the other under Colonel Ball, in the Rewaree hills, made ineffectual attempts to intercept him; on which Lord Lake, having posted divisions to prevent his getting back, set out in pursuit of him, with five regiments of cavalry, and four battalions of infantry.

These operations did not obstruct the arrangements with Sindia, which, under the immediate direction of Lord Lake, were concluded by a new treaty on the 22d November; Lieutenant Colonel Malcolm being the agent on the part of the Company, and Moonshee Kavil Nyne on that of Sindia.

The treaty of Surjee Anjengaom was to remain in full force, excepting in such parts as might be altered by the present arrangement. The subsisting engagement between the British government and the Rana of Gohud being inconvenient, or, as was declared, the Rana being found totally unfit for the exercise of sovereign authority, the agreement was dissolved, and the fortress of Gwalior with the Gohud territory were restored to Sindia. It was, however, stipulated, that an establishment should be provided for the Rana by the British government; and in order to remunerate them for the expense of supporting it, Sindia, on his part, agreed to relinquish the pensions of fifteen lacks of rupees, granted to certain officers in his service, and to resign his enam districts of Dholpoor-Baree and Raj-Kerrah, which were reserved to him by the treaty of Surjee Anjengaom. The river Chumbul, from Kotah on the west, to the extremity of the Gohud territory on the east, was declared the boundary of the two states, and in consideration of the benefits derived by the Company from this line of demarcation, it was agreed to allow Sindia, personally, an annual pension of four lacks of rupees, and to assign Jagheers to his wife and daughter; the former to have two lacks, and the latter one lack of rupees annually, within the territory of the Company. The two small districts of Bhadek and Sooseporarah, on the right bank of the Jumna, and south of the Chumbul, being necessary to the greater security of the Company's frontier, were made over to them. Sindia renounced all claim to tribute from the Raja of Boondee, or from any other state north of the Chumbul, and to the eastward of Kotah. The British government engaged to enter into no treaties with the Rana of Oudepoor, the Rajas of Joudpoor, Kotah, and other chiefs, the tributaries of Sindia in Malwa, Marwar, and Mewar; nor to interfere with the arrangements Sindia might make with them. In the event of peace with Holkar, the British government engaged that they should not desire the restoration of such of the districts of Holkar, between the Taptee and Chumbul, as Sindia had taken, or interfere in any manner, with their arrangements, wars, or disputes. The losses, public and private, sustained by the British residency, were to be made good; and as it was notorious, that Shirzee Rao Ghatgay was the instigator of this outrage, and that he had always acted with the most virulent hostility to the British government, Sindia agreed never to admit him into his councils. The negotiation of this treaty did not obstruct the active pursuit of Holkar; Lord Lake, joined by reinforcements as he advanced, followed him into the Punjab with unremitting perseverance. Jeswunt Rao, if he entered the territory of the Seiks in any expectation of assistance from them, was totally disappointed; but, whilst they preserved a strict neutrality, they were also anxious to become mediators for Holkar, whose hopes of resisting the British power were now completely crushed. Driven at length to extreme distress, he sent agents to Lord Lake's camp, on the banks of the Beah, to sue for peace; and as the instructions of the late governor-general remained in force, under the authority of Sir George Barlow, it may be imagined that the negotiation of a treaty which restored conquered territories, to which Holkar had forfeited his right, even had he been the legitimate representative of his family, was very soon concluded. Holkar renounced all right to Tonk-Rampoorah, Boondee and all other places north of the Boondee hills, all claims on the province of Bundelcund, and on the British government and its allies: he engaged never to entertain Europeans in his service, and never to admit Shirzee Rao Ghatgay into his councils or employment; he also became bound to return to Malwa by a prescribed route. The British government engaged to have no interference with the possessions of Holkar south of the Chumbul; to restore the forts and districts of the family in the Deccan, excepting Chandore and its dependancies, and the districts of Amber and Sewgaom; but, in case of Holkar's evincing amicable and peaceful intentions towards the British government, Chandore, Amber, and Sewgaom were to be restored, and the district of Koonch, in Bundelcund, was to be given in Jagheer to his daughter; the former in eighteen months, and the latter in two years, from (Dec. 24.) the 24th December 1805, the day on which the treaty was dated.

A. D. 1806. Sir George Barlow, in whom the power of confirming treaties, on the part of the British government now rested, made an alteration in this treaty, as well as in that concluded with Sindia. Sir George Barlow conceived, that the reasons adduced by Lord Lake for continuing the connections with the petty states north of the Chumbul, were outweighed by the political advantage of their dissolution. Lord Lake maintained, that the alliance of these petty states, interposed a strong barrier against the future encroachments of the Mahrattas; and that, at all events, the honour of the British government was pledged to respect its engagements, until the treaties were infringed or renounced by the states in question. Sir George Barlow contended, that the security of the British government depended either on its controlling all the states of India, or on leaving them to the wars and disputes which were sure to arise if left to themselves; and that if the British government renounced its claim to the territory in which any such petty state was situated, all obligation to protect it was dissolved. It is not clear, in the circumstances then existing, in what manner Sir George Barlow meant to apply this latter argument, excepting to the Raja of Boondee; but with respect to the former observation, as far as regarded the contentions of those states, Lord Lake had before expressed his opinion, that, if left to themselves, they would quarrel with each other, call in the aid of the native powers in their vicinity, and large armies of irregulars would be contending upon the frontier of the most fertile provinces of the British government, against whose eventual excesses there would be no well-grounded security, but a military force in a constant state of preparation.—Had his Lordship's life been extended to the term which might have been reasonably hoped, he would not only have seen his prediction verified, but that a military force, acting on the defensive, afforded no certain security against the incursions of swarms of brigands which were thus nourished.

Agreeably to the system of policy he had determined upon, Sir George Barlow annexed declaratory articles to the treaties concluded with Sindia and Holkar, explaining away any obligation which, by the treaty with the former, might be inferred, of protecting the petty states north of the Chumbul, from Kotah to the Jumna, and restoring to the latter, Tonk-Rampoorah, and all the territory north of the Boondee hills; thus abandoning to his fate the Raja of Boondee, who, on his part, had maintained the alliance with honour and generosity.

Lord Cornwallis, disapproving of the system of alliances, had, as already mentioned, taken advantage of a failure in his engagement on the part of the Raja of Jeypoor, to direct that alliance to be considered as dissolved; but Lord Lake had prevailed upon Lord Cornwallis to suspend this dissolution; because, at that period, the Raja had it greatly in his power to assist or incommode the British army; and from that time, he had performed such essential service, as to render himself obnoxious both to Sindia and Holkar; to whose vengeance he became exposed, should the British government withdraw its protection. Notwithstanding these claims, and the earnest recommend- of Lord Lake, Sir George Barlow obstinately adhered to his determination, and declared the alliance at an end. This declaration, it may be observed, did not take place until subsequent to the treaties with Holkar and Sindia; so that without infringing its engagements with them, the British govern[illegible]t was still at liberty to extend its protection to Jeypoor if it should see fit.

The engagements with the Rajas of Bhurtpoor and Macherry, though their dissolution was much desired by the governor-general, remained in force.

The treaty of Deogaom concluded with Rughoojee Bhonslay, 17th December 1803, also continued in force; but by an engagement dated 24th August 1806, Patwa and Sumbulpore were restored to him.

By the definitive treaty with Sindia, it became necessary to provide for the Rana of Gohud; and the districts of Dholpoor-Baree, and Raj-kerrah, were assigned for that purpose.

A definitive treaty, of general defensive alliance, had been concluded with the Gaekwar 21st April 1805, for the purpose of consolidating the stipulations contained in three preceding agreements, drawn up in March, June, and July, 1802, and making some additions and alterations which were deemed expedient. The Gaekwar had previously received a subsidiary force of two thousand men, and he now engaged to maintain three thousand infantry and a company of artillery, which were to be stationed within his territory, but only employed on occasions of some importance. Districts yielding rupees 11.70.000 * were assigned for their

* Viz. Dholka, . .	R.4.50.000
Neriad, . .	1.75.000
Beejapoor, .	1.30.000
Mahtur, . .	1.30.000
Carry forward,	8.85.000

support. The districts of Chowrassy, Chickly, and Kaira, together with the Gaekwar's share of the Chouth of Surat, were ceded to the Company. The British government having advanced, or become security on account of the Gaekwar's government, to the amount of nearly forty-one and a-half lacks of rupees; the revenue of districts yielding nearly fourteen lacks annually, was appropriated for liquidating this debt. The Gaekwar agreed to submit the examination and adjustment of the outstanding accounts and debts, between him and the Peishwa, to the British government; to receive no European into his service, and to commit no act of aggression against any other power without the acquiescence of the British government.

Such was the substance of the principal articles of the treaty of Baroda, concluded by Major Walker on the part of the Company, and intended to render the engagements with the Gaekwar state consonant to those of the treaty of Bassein. *

Brought forward, . . .	8.85.000
Moondah, . .	1.10.000
Tuppa of Kurree,	25,000
Kheemkatodra, .	50,000
Wurat on Kattywar,	1.00,000
R.	11,70,000

* Authorities as in the preceding.

CHAP. XV.

FROM A. D. 1806, TO A. D. 1814.

Review of the condition of the Mahratta states — and of the British policy in regard to them. — Holkar's proceedings — insanity — confinement — death and character. — Regency under the control of Umeer Khan — factions — embarrassments and anarchy. — State of Sindia's territory. — Death of Shirzee Rao Ghatgay. — Affairs of Rughoojee Bhonslay. — Rise of the Pindharees — their mode of assembling and conducting an expedition — their progress — general anarchy in central India — alarming increase of predatory power.

A.D. 1806. In the preceding chapter we have brought to a close the detail of those important events in Mahratta history, which immediately followed the treaty of Bassein. It now becomes requisite to survey the condition of the Mahratta states, before and at the conclusion of those arrangements with the British government, to review briefly the policy which actuated that government, and to explain the effects resulting from it on the various Mahratta states. It will then only remain to detail the principal causes which led to the last great revolution, and entirely subverted the dominion of the Peishwas.

The treaty of Salbye, by which Mahadajee Sindia was acknowledged by the British government as head of an independent state, and the policy of Warren Hastings, which permitted him to extend his power on the side of Hindoostan, had a great effect in weakening the power of the Peishwa, and in hastening the decline of the Mahrattas, by dissolving that community of interests which was the main-spring of their union. Previously, however, to the treaty of Bassein, if we except the engagements entered into by the Gaekwar with the English, the visible changes in the Mahratta government were wrought by domestic feuds, originating in the intrigues of some of its principal members: first, of Nana Furnuwees and Sindia to supplant each other; next, of Bajee Rao to overturn the power of both; and finally, of the Mahratta chiefs, Sindia and Holkar, to obtain by force, a control over the Bramin court, similar to that, which the Peshwa's had established by policy, over the head of the empire.

By the treaty of Bassein, and the subsequent treaties on the part of Rughoojee Bhonslay, Sindia and Holkar, with the British government, a still greater and far more obvious change had taken place in the condition of the Mahrattas, than that which resulted from the treaty of Salbye. The Peishwa had ceded a large tract of country; he was controlled in his foreign relations, and upheld in his musnud by a British force. The territories of the other Mahratta chiefs had been dismembered; the Moghul emperor had fallen into the hands of their great rival; and they sat down exhausted and dismayed, sensible of some of their errors when too late; but with no plan, or even sentiment of union, except hatred to that nation by which they had been subdued.

The inconsistencies observable in the British policy, were produced by the different views entertained by successive governors-general, each influenced in a greater or less degree by opinions in England. Lord Cornwallis, before the close of his first administration, perceived the necessity of some measures of precaution to secure the territories of the Company, and to preserve the peace of India. He hoped that the native powers would become sensible of the integrity and advantage of the plan he suggested, for ensuring a common alliance, and that they would embrace it with the same candour with which it was proposed; but he failed in completing the treaties of general guarantee, which he had contemplated as a remedy for the evils with which the country was threatened.

The Marquis Wellesley, looking equally to the security of British India from foreign invasion, and from wars with the native powers, believed that such security was only attainable by establishing an ascendancy in the councils of the native states, so as to be able to direct their resources to their own advantage, and to that of the British nation; hence, his policy tended to the control of all the native powers, from Cape Comorin to the gulf of Kutch, and from Kutch to the Sewalick mountains. How far, and with what success he carried his measures into effect, has been detailed. His extensive plans, the effect which their prosecution had upon the commercial interests of the East India Company, and the obstacles he encountered, alarmed the authorities at home; some of whom, doubting the justice of the measures pursued, and dreading a rapid extension of dominion, were desirous of at least impeding the conquest of all India; and others, whose views extended little further than the obvious increase of debt, and the irregularity of furnishing the Company's investments, sought a change of policy, as essential to prevent or repair these apparent evils. The Marquis Cornwallis was accordingly, as we have seen, again sent out, and an instant stop was put to the system of defensive alliances. His successor, Sir George Barlow, inflexibly pursued the same line of policy, without regard to various circumstances, which he considered unimportant in attaining a general end; but his measures were as short-sighted and contracted as they were selfish and indiscriminating.

The Nizam, the Peishwa, and the Gaekwar, were already bound by the defensive and subsidiary alliances of the Marquis Wellesley; but British protection was withdrawn from the petty states in Hindoostan, excepting the Rajas of Bhurtpoor and Macherry. Rughoojee Bhonslay, Sindia, and Holkar, were each left in possession of considerable tracts of territory; but under their management, the net revenues of each state, after deducting enams and Jagheers, did not exceed sixty lacks of rupees; that of Rughoojee Bhonslay was considerably less, but his military followers were fewer, and of an inferior description. The treaties with these three states were mere instruments of general amity; their intercourse was completely unrestrained, and no control, except in relation to the allies of the British government, was to be exercised over them. Plausible reasons were not wanting, for supposing that the whole pacification was wise and politic. The progress of conquest was at least impeded; a considerable territory, pretty equally balanced, remained to each of the chiefs; and it was expected that their domestic wars, the plunder of their neighbours, and the fear of losing what they possessed, would deter them from hostile proceedings against the British government. In the armies which they maintained, a portion of the unemployed soldiery, numbers of whom were entertained in the British service during the war, and discharged from it immediately afterwards, would still obtain a livelihood; and it was even hoped, that these chiefs would find it their interest to establish order in their revenue collections, gradually to reduce their military establishments, and turn their attention to cultivate the arts of peace. Until these desirable reforms could be effected, the vigilance of the British government, and the power of its allies, would, it was supposed, be quite sufficient to quell disorders or inroads occasioned by the plundering hordes, which, after every war in India, disturb the general tranquillity.

It is not the object of this work to enlarge on this subject, it is sufficient to state the policy embraced, and the ends expected by the British government; but the consequences, as they tended to hasten the decline of the Mahrattas, and the leading events antecedent to their fall, it is our province to explain.

When Jeswunt Rao Holkar returned from Hindoostan, he intimated to his army his intention of discharging about twenty thousand of his horse, chiefly Decannees*; but large arrears being due to them, which Holkar could not immediately pay, they placed him in Dhurna, when he gave them his nephew, Khundee Rao, as a pledge that their demands should be satisfied. The advantage of having the admitted head of the Holkar family in their custody, was not overlooked by a turbulent soldiery, already disaffected and mutinous; they immediately hoisted the standard of Khundee Rao, declared him the only legal representative, and refused obedience to Jeswunt Rao. But the overawing power of the infantry, and the payment of their arrears, to defray which, Holkar exacted a large sum from the Raja of Jeypoor†, had an immediate effect in quashing the sedition.

But the innocent instrument of the mutineers fell a sacrifice to his enraged uncle, who secretly put him to death; and the ferocious jealousy of Jeswunt Rao, once roused, could not be allayed until he had also decreed the death of his brother, Khassee Rao, who was in like manner privately murdered.

* Sir John Malcolm. Bappoo Kanhoo, one of my authorities, who was with Holkar at the time, says, "there were no words with the Mahrattas," and that the subsequent mutiny was occasioned entirely by the Patans. Bappoo Kanhoo, to whose authority I have here referred for the second time, is a respectable old Bramin soldier, who was the staunch adherent, and devoted friend of Chitoor Sing. He was employed in all his negotiations, and shared in most of the vicissitudes of his remarkable life. Bappoo Kanhoo was found imprisoned in one of the hill forts, taken by the British troops in 1818, and, on being rescued, joined the Raja of Satara, at whose court he now resides. The history of his own times, written at my request, is lodged with the Literary Society of Bombay.

† Bappoo Kanhoo.

A. D. 1807. Those atrocious deeds were the fore-runner of a state of insanity, which was further evinced by extraordinary military preparations, carried on with an ardour and violence proportionate to the derangement of his intellects; until at last, in 1808, his extravagant conduct led to his being put under restraint; in which state he continued in his camp for the space of three years, until the 20th October 1811, when his miserable existence terminated.

The chief feature of Jeswunt Rao Holkar's character was that hardy spirit of energy and enterprise, which, though like that of his countrymen, boundless in success, was also not to be discouraged by trying reverses. He was likewise better educated than Mahrattas in general, and could write both the Persian language and his own: his manner was frank and could be courteous, and he was distinguished by a species of coarse wit very attractive to the Indian soldiery. He had few other commendable qualities; for although sometimes capriciously lavish, he was rapacious, unfeeling, and cruel, and his disposition was overbearing, jealous, and violent. In person, his stature was low, but he was of a very active strong make; though his complexion was dark, and he had lost an eye by the accidental bursting of a matchlock, the expression of his countenance was not disagreeable, and bespoke something of droll humour, as well as of manly boldness.

When Holkar returned from the Punjab, after signing the treaty with Lord Lake, the Rajas of Jeypoor and Joudpoor were at war on account of a princess of Oudepoor, for whose hand both were pretenders. Each party solicited aid from A.D. 1808. Sindia and Holkar; Sindia sent them Shirzee Rao Ghatgay and Bappoo Sindia, with 15,000 horse; and Holkar allowed Umeer Khan to join the Raja of Jeypoor with his Patans. This Raja was for a time successful, until Umeer Khan left him, commenced plundering the Jeypoor and Joudpoor districts indiscriminately; then changing sides, reversed the probable issue of the contest by joining the Raja of Joudpoor. At last, interposing between them, he put an end to the contest by horrible deeds of treacherous assassination. *

When Holkar's state of mind rendered it necessary to place him under restraint, Umeer Khanwas just disengaged from his Rajpoot warfare, and proceeded with all speed to Rampoorah. It was there settled that the government should be administered by a regency controlled by Umeer Khan, but under the nominal authority of Toolsee Bye, the favourite mistress of Jeswunt Rao, a woman of profligate habits, and of most vindictive disposition, totally unfit for high station, or the exercise of the power with which she was vested. On the death of Jeswunt Rao, she adopted Mulhar Rao Holkar, a boy of four years old, the son of Jeswunt Rao by another concubine, and in his name continued to govern. Umeer Khan was soon recalled to Rajpootana in the prosecution of his own views, which were solely bent upon the extension of predatory power, for the interest of himself and his ferocious band of Patans; over whom he maintained an authority by superior art, but in whose hands he was sometimes a mere instrument. When it suited his views of plunder, Umeer Khan sometimes advanced claims in Holkar's name, but those claims were not pressed, where the consequences might involve the state of Holkar with the British government. At his departure from Rampoorah, he caused a Jagheer to be conferred on his relation Ghuffoor Khan, whom he left as his agent and director with Toolsee Bye.

* See Malcolm's Central India.

The conduct of the administration was worthy of such a regency; there was no regular collection of revenue, the government had not the power of reducing its army, and the finances of the state, even under the most skilful management, were inadequate to the support of the establishments. Bodies of troops, under various commanders, were therefore sent to collect or extort subsistence from the provinces, without much regard to the rights of neighbouring states: many of them became disobedient; one body of Holkar's troops under Mohummud Ally Khan Bungush went into rebellion at a very early period, plundered the districts in Candeish, and would have forced their way through the Nizam's territory into Holkar's district of Amber, but the subsidiary forces of Poona and Hyderabad were called out to oppose them, when the rebels were dispersed, and Bungush was sent as a state prisoner to the fort of Bombay.

The government, if such it may be designated, of Holkar, was alternately swayed by two factions, the Mahrattas and the Patans, who were constantly intriguing against each other, and nothing could exceed the state of anarchy which prevailed throughout the country. At the court, bribery, executions, and murders; in the provinces, violence, rapine, and bloodshed.

Sindia's territory was nearly as much disturbed as that of Holkar. His military establishment far exceeded his financial means, and to rid himself of the clamours of his troops he was obliged to send them out to subsist upon the districts in the manner which was adopted by Holkar; but some found employment in reducing several refractory Zumeendars and Rajas, who were Sindia's tributaries. Armies accustomed to rapine and violence in extensive regions, were now confined to tracts comparatively small; the burden of their exactions became, in many places, intolerable, and districts before cultivated and populous, were fast running to waste and wretchedness. For the supply of personal exigencies, Sindia was obliged to have recourse to a banker, who, at large rates of interest, furnished him with occasional advances of money; and of all his pecuniary recources the pensions which he and his family derived from the British government were the security most acceptable. On the death of Ambajee Inglia, Sindia proceeded to reduce the territory in Gohud, held by Ambajee's family, and having established his camp at Gwalior in 1810, though he frequently went on pilgrimages and expeditions, he never moved his head-quarters from that spot; hence Sin-

A. D. 1809.

A. D. 1810.

dia's camp, as it is called, has become a great city. His authority was considerably strengthened by the reduction of Inglia's Jagheer; and the death of his father-in-law, Shirzee Rao Ghatgay, having happened during the preceding season, was important both in tranquillizing the domestic feuds and public dissensions, which that turbulent man was perpetually exciting. The articles of the treaties with Sindia and Holkar respecting Shirzee Rao were subsequently annulled by the British government. He afterwards exercised considerable power, and frequently dictated to his son-in-law in the most audacious manner: the circumstances which led to his death originated in a violent altercation respecting a Jagheer, which Shirzee Rao, in opposition to Sindia, wished to confer on some rich Sillidars *, the Nimbalkurs of Watar. Sindia unable longer to endure his violent and contumacious behaviour, ordered him to be arrested, when Shirzee Rao having refused to obey the mandate, Anund Rao Sindia, the son of Mannajee Phakray, transfixed him with his spear, and thus rid the world of a being, than whom, few worse have ever disgraced humanity. Doulut Rao, if he did not order, approved of the deed, and it is said that he has all his life been a prey to remorse for the atrocious actions to which he was induced to lend his sanction, when under the influence of the monster Ghatgay. *

* Poor soldiers, are at least as common in Maharashtra, as in other parts of the world. The Nimbalkurs of Watar are the only rich Sillidars with whom I am acquainted. Watar is a village between Phultun and the Mahdeo hills, where the different members of this inferior branch of the Nimbalkur family have expended vast sums of money in the erection of palaces, which are more remarkable for their solidity, than their elegance. They have at least the merit of being the most substantial dwellings in the west of India.

The state of affairs at Nagpoor, under the government of Rughoojee Bhonslay, partook of the weakness and confusion prevalent in the territory of Sindia and Holkar; with this difference, that the troops of Rughoojee were inferior, and the country became, in consequence, more exposed to the attack of freebooters from without. Invited by these circumstances Umeer Khan, in 1809, after establishing himself in Rajpootana, made a pretext of some alleged claim of the Holkar family, to carry his ravages into Berar, and to let loose the Pindharees, as well as his own followers, to plunder the territory of Rughoojee; but the British government, glad, at the moment, of an opportunity to employ its troops, gratuitously interposed, and forced these predatory bands, which no state acknowledged, to recross the Nerbuddah.

The Pindharees, a class of the lowest freebooters, whom we have already had frequent occasion to mention, were early known in the Deccan. Great numbers of them followed the army of the first Bajee Rao; and it probably was an object of that great man's policy to draw them out of the Mahratta country. It is certain, that he left his Pindharees in Malwa, with his officers Sindia and Holkar, that they always attended their armies when they invaded the Moghul provinces, and that the Pindharees of each of these leaders distinguished themselves, as Sindia Shahee, and Holkar Shahee, or the respective followers of Sindia and Holkar.

* Malcolm. Prinsep. Mahratta MSS., and Oral information.

In 1794, Sindia assigned some lands to the Pindharees near the banks of the Nerbuddah, which they soon extended by conquests from the Grassias, or original independent landholders in their neighbourhood. Their principal leaders, at that time, were two brothers named Heeroo and Burrun, who are said to have been put to death for their aggressions on the territory of Sindia and Rughoojee Bhonslay. The sons of Heeroo and Burrun became Pindharee chiefs; but Khureem Khan, a Pindhara, who had acquired great booty in the plunder of the Nizam's troops after the battle of Kurdla, and was distinguished by superior cunning and enterprise, became the principal leader of this refuse of the Mahratta armies.

Khureem got the district of Shujahalpoor from Umeer Khan, which, with some additions, was afterwards confirmed to him by Sindia, through the interest of Shirzee Rao Ghatgay. During the war of 1803, and the subsequent disturbed state of the country, Khureem contrived to obtain possession of several districts in Malwa, belonging to Sindia's Jagheerdars; and his land revenue, at one time, is said to have amounted to fifteen lacks of rupees a-year. He also wrested some territory from the Nabob of Bhopaul, on which he built a fort, as a place of security for his family, and of deposit for his plunder. Khureem was originally a Sindia Shahee *, but like most of the Pindharees, except about five thousand of the Holkar Shahees, who remained faithful, he changed sides, or plundered his master whenever it suited his convenience, which was as often as he found an opportunity. Sindia, jealous of his encroachments, on pretence of lending him some guns, inveigled him to an interview, made him prisoner, plundered his camp, recovered the usurped districts, and lodged Khureem in the fort of Gwalior. †

A number of leaders started up after the confinement of Khureem, of whom Cheetoo, Dost Mohummud, Namdar Khan, and Shaikh Dulloo, became the most conspicuous. They associated themselves with Umeer Khan, in 1809, during his expedition to Berar; and in 1810, when Khureem Khan purchased his release from Gwalior, they assembled under that leader, a body of twenty-five thousand horse, and some battalions of newly raised infantry, with which they again proposed to invade Berar; but Cheetoo, always jealous of Khureem's ascendancy, was detached by Rughoojee Bhonslay from the alliance, and afterwards cooperated with Sindia in attacking him; Khureem was in consequence driven to seek an asylum with his old patron Umeer Khan, but by the influence of Sindia, Umeer Khan kept him in a state of confinement until the year 1816. ‡

When the Mahrattas ceased to spread themselves, the Pindharees, who had attended their armies,

* Sir John Malcolm. † Prinsep.

‡ Public Records. Prinsep. Sir John Malcolm.

were obliged to plunder the territories of their former protectors for subsistence, and on being suffered to exist at all, their numbers were very soon augmented. To the unemployed soldiery of India, particularly to the Mahomedans, the life of a Pindhara had many allurements; but the Mahratta horsemen who possessed hereditary rights, or had any pretensions to respectability, did not readily join them.

In every thousand Pindharees, about four hundred were tolerably well mounted and armed; of that number, about every fifteenth man carried a matchlock, but their favourite weapon was the ordinary Mahratta spear, which is from twelve to eighteen feet long. The remaining six hundred were common plunderers and followers, armed like the Bazar retainers of every army in India, with all sorts of weapons.

Before the Pindharees set out on an expedition, a leader sent notice to the inferior chiefs, and hoisted his standard on a particular day after the cessation of the rains, generally about the Dussera. As soon as the rivers were fordable, and a sufficient number had assembled, they moved off by the most unfrequented routes towards their destination. Commencing with short marches of about ten miles they gradually extended them to thirty or forty miles a-day, until they reached some peaceful region against which their expedition was intended. Terror and dismay burst at once on the helpless population: villages were seen in flames, wounded and houseless peasants flying in all directions, fortified places shutting their gates, and keeping up a perpetual firing from their walls. The plunderers dispersed in small parties, and spread themselves over the whole face of the country; all acting on a concerted plan, they swept round in a half circle, committing every sort of violence and excess, — torturing to extort money, ravishing, murdering, and burning in the defenceless villages; but seldom venturing on danger, unless the prospect of booty was very certain. When they approached a point on the frontier, very distant from where they had entered, they united and went off in a body to their homes. Whilst they continued their excesses, marauders of all descriptions sallied out to join them, or to profit by their presence, and whole districts became a scene of rapine and conflagration.

The ordinary modes of torture, inflicted by these miscreants, were heavy stones placed on the head or chest; red hot irons applied to the soles of the feet; tying the head of a person into a tobra or bag for feeding horses, filled with hot ashes; throwing oil on the clothes and setting fire to them; besides many others equally horrible. The awful consequences of a visitation from the Pindharees can scarcely be imagined by those who have not witnessed them. For some time, until the districts in Malwa, Marwar, Mewar, and the whole of Rajpootana were exhausted, and the Pindharees were encouraged and excited to venture on more fertile fields, their ravages were chiefly confined to those countries, and Berar; a few of them, however, ventured, almost every year, into the dominions of the Nizam and the Peishwa, though little notice was taken of them by the British government, whilst they refrained from molesting its own subjects * and territory. But even had no other causes arisen to excite the Pindharees to extend their depredations, it was impossible, in the state in which India was left, by the half measures and selfish policy adopted by the British government, that any part of it could long remain exempt from predatory inroad. The Rajpoot states were overrun by Umeer Khan, Sindia, Holkar, and the Pindharees; and the territories of Sindia and Holkar, intermixed as they were in Malwa, and in the hands of a powerful and lawless soldiery, soon became, like Rajpootana, common prey. The aggressions of Sindia and Holkar on each other, gave rise to disputes, and even to battles; but to no political warfare. Had Sindia been able to pay up the arrears due to his troops, and to command the services of those who owed him allegiance, he might, at Jeswunt Rao's death, have made himself complete master of Holkar's dominions; but intrigues were substitued for military force, and these were counteracted. Although the chiefs were not at war, the troops of the Rajpoots and of Umeer Khan, and those of Sindia, Holkar, the Powars of Dhar, and the Pindharees, fought frequent battles amongst each other, when

A.D. 1812.

* For a long time they respected the persons of the British subjects, to which the author can himself bear testimony, having accidentally passed through a body of Pindharees in the middle of a night when they had committed great excesses; and to him, though unarmed and unattended, they offered neither molestation nor insult.

plunder was in dispute; all which had no other effect, than that of rendering yet more miserable, the already unhappy country, and stirring up materials for predatory power, on which Umeer Khan and Sindia began to found higher hopes, when they foresaw a prospect of support from the head of the empire.

To him, therefore, we now return, in order to detail the events preceding that revolution in Maharashtra, with which this history closes.

CHAP. XVI.

FROM A. D. 1803, TO A. D. 1817.

The Peishwa's proceedings, after being re-established on his musnud. — Appoints Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir to conduct affairs with the British residency. — Ingratitude to Khundee Rao Rastia — and total disregard of the claims of the former servants of the state. — Appoints Ballajee Luximon, Sur-Soobehdar of Candeish and Buglana. — Treacherous seizure and murder of the Bheels at Kopergaom. — Rebellion of the Pritee Needhee — Suppressed by Bappoo Gokla, who is enriched in consequence. — Appa Dessaye Nepankur — called to interfere in the wars of Kolapoor and Sawuntwaree. — Affairs of these petty states. — Revert to affairs at Poona. — Collusion of Sewdasheo Mankesir and Khoosroojee Moodhee. — Mr. Elphinstone is appointed Resident. — Settlement with the southern Jagheerdars, who are compelled to submit to the Peishwa. — Suppression of piracy in the Concan. — Treaties with Kolapoor and Sawuntwaree. — Exultation of the Peishwa — he raises a brigade of regular troops. — Accusations against Khoosroojee Moodhee, by Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir. — Rise of Trimbukjee Dainglia. — Bajee Rao extends his views of policy — recruits his army. — Conduct of Bappojee Sindia in regard to the surrender of Dharwar. — Trimbukjee Dainglia becomes prime minister. — Mode of letting the districts in farm. — Bajee Rao's neglect of civil government — amasses considerable wealth — perseveres in sequestrating Jagheers. — Case of Mahdoo Rao Rastia. — Plan of an extensive confederacy. — Endeavours to establish an ascendancy in Guzerat. — Affairs of the Baroda government. — Able management of Lieutenant-Colonel Walker. — Claims of the Peishwa. — Counter claims of the Gaekwar. — Attempt at adjustment — fails. — Gungadhur Shastree is deputed to Poona — progress of his mission — he is murdered by Trimbukjee. — Trimbukjee delivered up to the British Government — effects his escape from confinement. — The Peishwa raises troops through Trimbukjee, for the purpose of maintaining war secretly against the British government. — Conduct of the resident for defeating this design. — The troops assembled are declared insurgents — pursued, and attacked. — Intercourse suspended. — Proposed preliminary to an adjustment. — Bajee Rao denies all knowledge of Trimbukjee or his adherents. — Refuses to comply with the proposed terms. — Poona surrounded. — The Peishwa submits. — New treaty.

A.D. 1803. BAJEE Rao was scarcely re-established on his musnud, when he evinced the distrust and duplicity of his character towards his new allies; and openly avowed, in regard to many persons subject to his authority, that in entering on the alliance with the English a principal inducement was a motive of revenge.

He kept up a correspondence with the chiefs confederated against the British power *, and ascribed his connexion with that government, which to them he reprobated and deplored, to necessity, occasioned by their absence, and to the treachery of the southern Jagheerdars. He withheld the services of his troops, as much as possible, and prevented the Putwurdhuns from accompanying General Wellesley, by secretly inciting the Raja of Kolapoor to invade their Jagheer; thereby hoping to make a merit with Sindia, and afford to himself an opportunity of wreaking his vengeance on the family of Pureshram Bhow, by making it appear that they were enemies to the alliance with the

* After Bajee Rao's deposal, it was found, that Sindia's villages, within the Peishwa's boundary, ceded by the treaty of Surjee Angengaom, were all secretly continued to Sindia by Bajee Rao.

British government, and had forfeited their Jagheer by disobedience to him.

These indications spoke very unfavourably to his new allies, of what might be expected from the Peishwa in case any reverse should attend the British arms. Bajee Rao, as the reader has had ample occasion to observe, was not deficient in a species of ability, but he had little talent for government; intrigue was with him a passion; profound in the arts of deceit, he believed all his plans infallible, and at this period no person shared his entire confidence. He aimed at conducting the administration himself; but as his chief business for some time lay with the British resident, with whom it was his plan to avoid all personal discussion where difference of opinion might arise, he found it expedient to intrust the management of that important branch to Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir, whom we have already mentioned as the agent of Govind Rao Pingley, the Peishwa's envoy at Hyderabad. Sewdasheo Bhow was subsequently employed, on the part of Sindia and Bajee Rao, to endeavour to engage the Nizam in the proposed confederacy against the British government, during the last war with Tippoo, at the moment when the speedy reduction of Seringapatam, and the fall of the Sultan crushed their machinations.

Sewdasheo Mankesir, was a Deshist Bramin, one of the family of the Deshpandya of the village of Taimboornee, and at one time gained a livelihood, by reciting Kuthas * in Poona, before he entered

* Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir was a great musician and composer; all the airs of which he is the author, are distinguished the service of Pingley; but notwithstanding his humble origin, he was dignified in his manner, polite and affable in conversation, and, as a statesman, possessed of considerable ability. His avowed enmity to the alliance with the English was Bajee Rao's chief motive for selecting him as minister for their affairs; and during several months, the Peishwa was at pains to show, that circumstances alone had forced him to sign the articles of the treaty; but the success of the war, the protection which the presence of the British troops afforded, and the power, the security, and the comforts, to which he had hitherto been a stranger, and which he soon experienced in the connection, not only reconciled him to it, but induced him to declare, and probably for a time with sincerity, that he considered the alliance as the most fortunate of events. The forts hitherto in possession of Amrut Rao, or Nana Furnuwees, were reduced and given up to the Peishwa; his country, which for a time after his re-establishment, was overrun by free-booters and exhausted from the effects of war and famine, even under the disadvantage of a pernicious revenue system, gradually recovered itself in most places; and his authority, at first scarcely acknowledged beyond the environs of Poona, soon became respected throughout his dominions.

---

by a peculiar plaintiveness, and several of them are well worthy of being preserved. Some of our countrymen at Poona, who have leisure, may be induced to do so, before they are forgotten, or corrupted by the general bad taste of the Deccan, which, according to a saying of the natives of Hindoostan, is the grave of music.

The British force, although seldom required to be put in motion, was the chief cause of strengthening his authority by its presence, and gave a power and stability to his government, which he had never known since his first accession to the musnud. Adherents were not long wanting, and a few had been faithful even in his adversity. Khundee Rao Rastia, Sur Soobehdar of the Concan, from the time of Bajee Rao's flight to his restoration, had shown great fidelity to his cause, and his respectable support was at first of much consequence to the Peishwa; but his influence was undermined by Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir, who unjustly represented his being in league with the British resident in every measure proposed; and in a few years, on an accusation, never attempted to be proved, of corrupt practices in his government in the Concan, he was removed from office, and his Jagheer was sequestrated. The year after the re-establishment of the Peishwa, Khundee Rao Rastia had an opportunity of performing a service of some importance. When Amrut Rao and Moraba Furnuwees joined General Wellesley, Baba Rao Phurkay went off with the Hoojrat Pagah *, and acted during the war with Rughoojee Bhonslay against the British government. After the peace, Baba Rao returned from Nagpoor, gave his followers the slip, and retired to Merich, where he was protected by Appa Sahib

A. D. 1804.

* The Hoojrats, or household troops, were originally the Raja's, and afterwards the Peishwa's personal cavalry. Many of them were, to the last, composed of the immediate dependants of the Raja of Satara.

Putwurdhun, the son of Pureshram Bhow. His troops, thus left to themselves, plundered the country and erected the standard of insurrection; Bajee Rao had no disposable force, and the British troops could not at that time be spared to hunt down horse. Khundee Rao Rastia, having formerly served with the men exciting these disturbances, had the address to effect an arrangement with the whole body, and brought them under the Peishwa's authority, at a critical time, when they might have committed infinite mischief. But Bajee Rao made no permanent provision for the commanders of the army, the soldiery of the country, nor the civil servants of the government. They had served the state under Nana Furnuwees, which was of itself a strong reason with him for excluding them from employment. His total disregard of their claims and their necessities, must inevitably have encreased the disorders prevalent on his restoration, and under ordinary circumstances, had he persevered in such a line of conduct, it probably would have required the whole power of the British government to keep him on his musnud; but the severe famine of 1804 destroyed vast numbers of men and horses; a provision was thus opened to many of the remaining Sillidars by the quantity of land and wutun to which they succeeded by deaths amongst their relations and fellow villagers; and as Sindia was then exchanging his Rajpoots and Mahomedans for Mahrattas, a great part of those persons who would have joined an insurrection became interested in the tranquillity of the country, or were withdrawn to another scene.

Ballajee Luximon, the Dewan of Wittul Nursing Vinchorkur, who, during his master's minority, managed the affairs of the Jagheer, was a staunch adherent of the family of Rugoba; and one of the very few respectable men who to the last preserved a large share of Bajee Rao's confidence. He was appointed with the fullest powers Sur Soobehdar, of Candeish and Buglana; and a body of the Peishwa's infantry, under Munohurgeer Gosaeen, was sent to support him. But such was the state of those provinces, that they were never restored to order under the Peishwa's government. Holkar's ravages had been followed by various plunderers; and the Bheels, who until 1802, had lived intermixed with the rest of the population, betook themselves to the mountains, and carried on precisely the same system of plunder as is now practised by the brigands of Italy and Spain.

One of the first acts of Ballajee, instigated by the Gosaeen, has left a stain on his memory which cannot be effaced. Finding it impracticable to reduce the Bheels by force, he inveigled a whole tribe of them, with their wives and families, to an interview at Kopergaom, on pretence of affording them a settlement, when they were treacherously seized, and most barbarously precipitated into wells, where the whole perished. This inhuman action had the effect, in some degree, of checking the Bheels about Chandore, and the southern part of Buglana; but to the northward, and along the Sautpoora mountains, it drove them to desperation, and they continued to molest the country.

A.D. 1805. During the war between Holkar and the British government, Futih Sing Manay returned to the Peishwa's territory, and recommenced his ravages to the south of the Neera with an army of nearly ten thousand men. But Bulwunt Rao Furnuwees, the Mootaliq of the Pritee Needhee, assisted by the troops of Chintamun Rao Putwurdhun, planned a judicious attack on his camp, routed his troops, killed Futih Sing Manay, together with a great number of his followers, and completely dispersed them; after which, he formally addressed a despatch, stating the particulars to the Peishwa, who approved of the service performed, and was much gratified by this act of courtesy from the Mootaliq of the Pritee Needhee. Bulwunt Rao was at this time chief director of his master's affairs. Pureshram Sree Newass, the son of the deceased Bowan Rao, Pritee Needhee, was a young man of some spirit, but of weak intellect and of dissolute morals. He was born on the day of his father's death, and during his minority, had been kept in a state of tutelage by Nana Furnuwees, and reared with hereditary enmity to the house of Rugonath Rao. Bajee Rao, before his connection with the British government, had, with Sindia's assistance, laid a plan for seizing the Pritee Needhee in his own house at Poona; but it was frustrated by his bravery, and the exertions of one of his adherents, named Doulut Rao Ghatgay, by whose assistance he cut down the persons who laid hold of him, and immediately fled from Poona to his own Jagheer at Kurar.

The management of his Jagheer was in the hands of his mother, who was assisted by Bulwunt Rao Furnuwees, the Mootaliq already mentioned. The Pritee Needhee wished to assume the control himself, and he was assured by his mother that he should be placed in authority; but being deceived by false hopes for a period of years, he at last determined on asserting his rights by force. Bajee Rao saw their differences with satisfaction, as he wished for a favourable opportunity of stripping the Pritee Needhee of his possessions; but this extreme measure he at first would not ven-
A. D. 1806. ture upon, as he apprehended that the Pritee Needhee might be supported by the Putwurdhuns. Pretending, therefore, to be anxious to mediate between the parties, he decided in favour of Bulwunt Rao Furnuwees; in which he was supposed to have been influenced by the good conduct of the Mootaliq, in suppressing the depredations of Futih Sing Manay. In order to support Bulwunt Rao, he sent a body of his troops, under Bappoo Gokla, to enforce submission, and the Pritee Needhee was placed in confinement by his mother, in the Gurhee of Mussoor. Gokla returned to Poona, the country was tranquillized, the adherents of Pureshram sought safety in concealment, and it was generally supposed that the Pritee Needhee would remain a prisoner for life. But Pureshram Sree Newass had a friend from whom no one expected his succour. His wife, one of the most respectable ladies in the country, perceiving the weakness and violence of her husband's character, had several years before endeavoured to bring him into his mother's views, which so exasperated the Pritee Needhee, that he never afterwards would live with her. He chose as his mistress, a Telin, or wife of an oil-seller, with whom he cohabited, and to the great scandal of his cast as a Bramin, made no secret of the connection. The Telin, after the Pritee Needhee was confined, had the address to obtain possession of the fort of Wassota, situated in a most inaccessible part of the Syhadree mountains, where having collected some followers, she headed a party, attacked Mussoor, and rescued the prisoner.

A. D. 1807. As soon as the Pritee Needhee found himself at liberty, he hoisted his standard, declared himself the servant of the Raja of Satara, and bound by no tie to obey the Punt Purdhan. The inhabitants of the tract between the Neera and Warna, in which the Pritee Needhee's districts were situated, being prone to insurrection, the standard of rebellion soon found supporters, and some of the old retainers of the Pritee Needhee's family joined him. The temporary power thus obtained, by the assemblage of a body of troops, was, however, exceedingly abused. He committed great cruelties on such of the adherents of his mother and of Bulwunt Rao, as fell into his hands; and he rendered himself odious to the peasantry by a system of plunder and extortion, worthy of the lowest Pindhara. Had the Pritee Needhee possessed moderation and ability, equal to his spirit, there were materials for a rebellion in that quarter, which Bajee Rao, unassisted by British troops, could never have suppressed; but, before he had made adequate preparations for resistance, Gokla once more came against him; the few faithful Sillidars who accompanied him, recommended his retiring to the hills, and raising the Ramoosees, until like Chitoor Sing, he could attack with effect. Regardless, however, of this advice, he waited for Gokla, near Wussuntgurh, a few of his men stood by him, but most of them fled at the first charge.

The Pritee Needhee was supposed to have been killed; he was taken up by his enemies for dead; but, although he had lost his hand, and was severely wounded in the head, he recovered, and was ever after, during the reign of Bajee Rao, confined in the city of Poona, where a small portion of his late extensive Jagheer was assigned for his support; the remainder, without any separate provision for the opposite party, was sequestrated. Bulwunt Rao Furnuwees regretted the opportunity thus afforded to Bajee Bao by their differences, when too late; the country was soon reduced, all the garrisons having surrendered excepting the fort of Wassota, which held out for eight months, when the Telin, after a spirited defence, surrendered, in consequence of a fire which destroyed her granary. The jewels and private property of the Pritee Needhee's family were seized by Bappoo Gokla, and never accounted for to the Peishwa. In order to prevent the odium likely to arise from having thus reduced the Pritee Needhee, Bajee Rao allowed Bappoo Gokla to retain possession of the conquered districts, as if they were kept more as a punishment to the Pritee Needhee, than as an advantage to himself. During the period Gokla retained possession of the conquered territory, his exactions were most severe; and being supported by a large force, they were irresistible. By these means Bappoo Gokla became the wealthiest of the Peishwa's Surdars. He succeeded to the command of his uncle's troops, when the latter was killed by Dhoondia Waug, as already mentioned; but he owed his elevation chiefly to General Wellesley, whom he accompanied in the war of 1803, and, excepting Appa Dessaye Nepankur, was the only good officer in the immediate service of Bajee Rao.

A. D. 1808.

Appa Dessaye's name is Seedojee Rao Nimbalkur; we have already had occasion to mention this person on more than one occasion, but about this period he became more conspicuous from the following circumstances.

About the year 1785, the petty states of Kolapoor and Sawuntwaree, always jealous of each other, went to war, because Luximee Bye, the wife of Kem Sawunt, Dessaye of Waree, and niece of Mahadajee Sindia, had obtained some privileges of royalty for her husband, from the Moghul emperor, through her uncle's all-powerful influence at the court of Delhi. With a few intermissions, and with various success, this warfare had continued for twenty-three years; when at last, the troops of Kolapoor gained a victory over those of Sawuntwaree in a pitched battle, fought at the village of Chowkul, and the fort of Waree was immediately besieged; Kem Sawunt had been dead some years; he had left four widows, the eldest of whom Luximee Bye, became regent, on account of the minority of Kem Sawunt's only son, by Dawee Bye his third wife. Luximee Bye, when her capital was besieged, called in the aid of Wiswas Rao Ghatgay, and Appa Dessaye. Wiswas Rao Ghatgay had been put in possession of two districts called Chickooree and Menowlee, belonging to Kolapoor, by Shirzee Rao Ghatgay. His pretended right to dispose of them originated in their having been conquered by the first Mahdoo Rao, and bestowed on the family of Putwurdhun; and Sindia, having authority for possessing himself of the sequestrated Jagheer of the Putwurdhuns, Shirzee Rao who had seized those two districts, made them over to his brother, Wiswas Rao, when he was ordered by his son-in-law to join him in Malwa. Wiswas Rao would have been driven out of them by the Raja of Kolapoor, but he was supported by Appa Dessaye, who afterwards took them for himself. The Peishwa, on the plea of wishing to avoid disputes with Sindia, pretended to take no concern in those districts *, but it was on the authority of his secret orders that Appa Dessaye seized them, and Bajee Rao at a subsequent period, in 1812, asserted his own claim to them, on grounds which were admitted by the British government.

On the present occasion, when Luximee Bye applied for aid, Appa Dessaye with the Peishwa's secret concurrence, readily afforded it; the siege of Waree was raised, and the territory of the Kolapoor Raja, above the Ghauts, was invaded; so that the

* Colonel Close's despatches, 5th May 1808.

Kolapoor troops were recalled from the Concan to defend their own capital. Application was made to the British government for its mediation, but Lord Minto, then governor-general, declined all interference; and the Peishwa who was the principal cause of the disturbance, began to hint at his rights of supremacy over all parties; a disposition to encroachment, which if checked by the British authorities on its very first indication, would have been of essential importance to the stability of Bajee Rao's government.

Appa Dessaye, however, made himself complete master of Chickooree and Menowlee, and endeavoured to establish his authority over Sawuntwaree. The son of Kem Sawunt was strangled at the instigation of Appa Dessaye's carcoon, with the concurrence of Luximee Bye, and of Poond Sawunt, the next heir to the principality. But Appa Dessaye did not profit by this atrocious deed. Poond Sawunt, taking advantage of the weak state of Appa Dessaye's troops, the greater part being withdrawn to maintain the war above the Ghauts, drove them from the country, and possessed himself of the government.

A.D. 1809.

Luximee Bye died soon after, when Poond Sawunt found a rival, rather than a coadjutor in the person of Doorga Bye, the second widow of Kem Sawunt, and the daughter of a Mahratta officer named Khanwelkur.

In the meantime the utmost apparent cordiality subsisted between the British resident and the Peishwa's court. Bajee Rao, as often as he could find a pretext, was prosecuting with inflexible perseverance, his favourite plan of sequestrating the Jagheers of all whom he considered the political opponents of his family, and appropriating their revenues to his own use. Whilst thus engaged, Bajee Rao was happy. On every occasion he enlarged on the blessings he enjoyed through his alliance with the British government; he professed the warmest affection and friendship for the resident, Colonel Close; and it is probable that Bajee Rao, in all he thus expressed, was in a great measure sincere.

Colonel Close was in the habit of receiving al' native visitors through an agent, a Parsee, named Khoosroojee, familiarly styled the Moodhee: a person of comprehensive judgment, and of great address, who soon attained considerable influence with his master. Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir and the Moodhee soon formed a compact, and having united with them Byajee Naik, a Hoojra, or personal servant of the Peishwa by whom Byajee was much trusted as a spy, they contrived to persuade Bajee Rao, that by gaining Koosroojee to his interests he might command the services of the British residency: a proposal well suited to the mind of Bajee Rao, by whom no means were spared to attain an end so desirable.

The triumvirate, in all probability, participated in the spoils, and all intercourse, public, as well as private, went on so agreeably by the agency of those persons, that there was no cause of dissatisfaction. Any subject likely to occasion unpleasant discussion, was either postponed, or so arranged, that before being brought forward on either side, it was smoothed of its asperities, so that little difficulty remained in the adjustment.

The services of Colonel Close during this year were called for, on a very important occasion, to Hyderabad, and he never returned to his situation at Poona. Mr. Henry Russell succeeded to the temporary charge of that residency, until the return of Mr. Elphinstone from a mission to Cabul, and the same harmony continued to prevail.

A.D. 1810. Khoosroojee, though a servant of the British residency, had been permitted to accept the high office of Sursoobehdar of the Carnatic under the Peishwa's government, and he appointed as his deputy, a bramin named Bappoo Sawney.

Mr. Elphinstone had been an assistant to Colonel Close at Poona, before he was attached to General Wellesley's staff, in the war of 1803, so that he took charge of his appointment as resident, with considerable local information. Being in the

A.D. 1811. habit of communicating with the natives direct, he saw all persons who had business, and discontinued the form of introduction through any one agent. This alteration, superadded to a quarrel, which had taken place between Khoosroojee and Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir, was a source of secret vexation and discontent to the former, as it so greatly tended to lessen his importance and his gains; but Khoosroojee had much personal influence with the Peishwa, which he unfortunately exercised in prejudicing his mind against the resident, by representing him as one who entertained the same sentiments as General Wellesley, whom Bajee Rao hated, because he had opposed his schemes of vengeance against Amrut Rao, and the family of Pureshram Bhow Putwurdhun. Several instances might be adduced of the effect which the Moodhee's insinuations produced on the mind of the Peishwa; but although many subjects hitherto kept back, were now brought into discussion in hopes of creating a necessity of again interposing the agency of the Moodhee, Bajee Rao had soon reason to acknowledge the impartiality of the resident on the subject from which his chief prejudice against him had arisen.

As soon as he had resumed the lands of the inferior Jagheerdars who had ever been disobedient to himself, or who had taken an active part against his father, the Peishwa desired Bappoo Gokla to make over the Pritee Needhee's district to the state, and again brought forward his complaints and claims against other great Jagheerdars, particularly the Putwurdhuns, Rastia, and the Dessaye of Kittoor.

These persons, presuming on the protection already afforded to them by the British government, neglected to obey the orders of the Peishwa, and omitted to send their troops, which were now much wanted to defend the country from the Pindharees, whose inroads were every year becoming more powerful and destructive. When Bajee Rao embraced the British alliance, he wrote to the Jagheerdars in question, to assist the British troops. Most of them being personally acquainted with General Wellesley, readily obeyed Bajee Rao's orders, co-operated in his re-establishment, and were disposed to forget past injuries, until the rancorous revenge and studied aggressions of Bajee Rao completely alienated their minds. They were only deterred from supporting the Pritee Needhee's rebellion by the fear of the subsidiary force, and had the interposition of the British government been withheld, they would, when joined to the Pritee Needee have probably effected another revolution, as it was estimated they could at that time bring into the field nearly twenty thousand horse. In considering a plan of settlement between these Jagheerdars and the Peishwa, several modes were discussed at a very early period by the British authorities. To have avowedly withheld support, from both parties, would have involved the country in war and confusion; to have assisted in the destruction of families in whose favour so much might be urged, would have been unjust; and it would have been still more so, to raise them into independent principalities under the guarantee of the British government. It therefore appeared advisable to steer a middle course; and it was determined to enforce the service of their troops as due to the Peishwa, and to cause them to restore all usurped lands; but to guarantee their territory as long as they chose to abide by the tenor of their original engagement to the Poona state.

With this arrangement of the southern Mahratta country, it was resolved to combine the effectual suppression of piracy in the states of Kolapoor and Sawuntwaree, which it was foreseen, could never be rooted out, until some harbours and fortresses, on the coast of Malwan, were placed in the hands of the British government.

The Putwurdhuns were very averse to acknowledge fealty to Bajee Rao, but they at last submitted, and complied with the conditions imposed by the British government. The Raja of Kolapoor nearly lost his capital by the intrigues of the Peishwa, who secretly encouraged him to resist the demands of the English; hoping that his General Appa Dessaye, then besieging Kolapoor as if in his own quarrel, might be able to reduce it before the terms were accepted; whilst, on the other hand, in order to cause delay, he declared to the resident, that the British government had no right to enter into a treaty with the Raja of Kolapoor, who was his subject: an assertion as bold as it was false. Before any of the objects could be effected, Mr. Elphinstone found it necessary to assemble an army at Punderpoor, and move it down to the neighbourhood of the Kistna. In regard to the Jagheerdars, besides what has been already stated in the general plan of settlement, Appa Sahib Putwurdhun was obliged to surrender the person of Baba Rao Phurkay a concession to the Peishwa, on the part of the British government, which was very unpopular in the Mahratta country; and although it may have been strictly just, the policy of the measure is questionable. Baba Rao was confined by the Peishwa in the fort of Bassein, where he shortly after died. By the terms tendered and accepted by the Raja of Kolapoor, he renounced all right to Chickooree and Menowlee, which were ceded to the Peishwa; but all other places taken from the Raja in consequence of the disputed right to these districts, were restored. To the British government; the Raja ceded the harbour of Malwan, which included the forts and island of Malwan or Sindidroog and its dependancies; he also agreed to renounce piracy, to permit no armed vessels to be fitted out, or to enter his ports, on pain of becoming lawful prize to the British government, and to restore wrecks, as well as to assist vessels in distress. He also became bound for himself and his successors to pursue no manner of hostility against any other state, without the consent of the British government. The British government renounced its long existing claims against the Raja, and became bound to guarantee his possessions against the aggressions of all foreign powers and states.

(Oct. 3.) Poond Sawunt, Dessaye of Sawuntwaree, was at the same time bound down to suppress piracy, to make over the fort of Vingorla and the battery of Gunaramo Tembe, with its port and limits; and in case of being guilty of further piratical acts, the forts of Newtee and Rairee were likewise to be required of him. British merchants were to be allowed free ingress and egress to and from the Dessaye's territory, on paying the customary duties; but all articles of consumption required for the British troops, stationed within the territory, were to pass duty free.

Soon after the conclusion of the agreement, Poond Sawunt died, and Doorga Bye became regent. This old lady, regardless of the guarantee of the British government, attacked the possessions of the Raja of Kolapoor, took the fort of Burratgurh, which had formerly belonged to Sa-wuntwaree, and refused to evacuate it. A British detachment from the Madras establishment was brought down to protect the Kolapoor territory, when she withdrew the garrison of Burratgurh, but continued to brave the threats and despise the arguments, which were offered to deter or induce her to refrain from aggression. No retaliation was permitted against Doorga Bye, till every reasonable proposal had failed; when the British troops were ordered to occupy some of the districts, with a view of forcing her into terms. No opposition was actually made, but the British troops were kept perpetually on the alert by threatened attacks, and thus was engendered a state of affairs, neither of peace nor of war, but which occasioned all the expence and inconvenience of the latter. Doulut Rao Sindia, though unconnected with the Waree state after the death of Luximee Bye, interested himself in behalf of Doorga Bye, and much discussion and correspondence resulted from her contumelious behaviour; nor did she desist from her vexatious opposition, until, in consequence of many hostile acts against the British government, her territory was reduced in the beginning of 1819 by a British force; but after exacting the necessary securities, the principality of Sawuntwaree was left in its original independence.

In the mean time, although Bajee Rao was disappointed in the hope of being able to ruin the southern Jagheerdars, they were compelled to bow before him. He could scarcely refrain from insulting the Putwurdhuns when they came to pay their respects, and his exultation at getting Baba

Rao Phurkay into his power knew no bounds. He was profuse in his acknowledgments and expressions of gratitude to the governor-general and the resident; but he at the same time declared, that he should wish not to have a single Surinjamee horseman * in his service, and proposed raising a brigade of infantry, to be disciplined entirely by European officers, and paid like the British Sepoys, direct from the treasury. To this proposal A. D. 1813. the governor-general readily acceded, and Captain John Ford, of the Madras establishment, who had been long attached to the escort of Colonel Close, was, at the recommendation of Khoosroojee, selected by the Peishwa as commandant of the brigade, and able officers from the line, chosen by Captain Ford, were lent from the Bombay establishment to assist in its formation and discipline. The men, excepting a small proportion of Mahrattas, were chiefly raised in the Company's provinces in Hindoostan, and on entering their battalions, swore fidelity to the Peishwa, whilst he continued in alliance with the British government. †

The cantonment allotted for this brigade was about four miles to the northwest of Poona. One brigade of British troops was stationed on a spot originally selected for the protection of the city, in its immediate vicinity; and the rest of the

* That is horse furnished by Jagheerdars.

† Oral information.

If I am not mistaken, this condition was proposed and insisted upon, by the Hindoostan Sepoys themselves, without its being suggested by their officers.

British subsidiary force, occupied a position about half-way between Poona and Ahmednugur, near the village of Seroor, on the river Ghore.

The Peishwa had soon a fresh instance of the utility of the British force by finding it necessary to call in a part of it, against Appa Dessaye, who, although he came to Poona on being ordered, refused to comply with certain claims devolving on the Peishwa by the late settlement, or to give up some territory belonging to the Raja of Kolapoor. The British authorities interposed, but Bajee Rao, artfully contrived by his intrigues, to induce Appa Dessaye to trust to his lenity, and to resist the demands; by which insidious conduct, the Dessaye was led on to forfeit one fourth of his Jagheer to the Peishwa.

We have already alluded to the quarrel between Khoosroojee Moodhee and Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir. Their differences likewise originated in the intrigues of the Peishwa, who, having been informed of their collusion, concluded with some justice, that such a cabal might as often act against him as for him, and he therefore determined on creating a division between them. It was with this view that he conferred the appointment of Sur Soobehdar of the Carnatic on the Moodhee, in preference to Sewdasheo Bhow, who would have been much gratified by it. The Moodhee was thus secured in Bajee Rao's interests, but the envy of Mankesir was excited, and he in a short time informed the Peishwa of the corrupt practices of the Moodhee in the affairs of his government. These charges Bajee Rao secretly advised his minister to prefer to the resident, which was accordingly done, and as the Moodhee was a servant of the British government they would have been immediately investigated, but the Peishwa's object being answered, by the accusation from Mankesir *, he interfered to prevent the inquiry, and, as it related to an affair connected with his government, the proceedings were quashed at his request. † This intrigue answered its purpose, by incensing Khoosroojee against the minister; and as friendship, according to the interpretation of the court of Bajee Rao, was to aid, and to conceal the acquisition of corrupt emolument, the Peishwa secured the good will of Khoosroojee, but the nature of the Moodhee's confidential situation at the residency, being incompatible with his appointment as governor of a Mahratta province, he was afterwards required by Mr. Elphinstone, to resign the one or the other, and he accordingly relinquished the latter. ‡ Trimbukjee Dainglia was immediately appointed to the vacant office. Trimbukjee was originally a jasoos or spy, and brought himself to the Peishwa's notice, when he fled to Mhar from the power of Holkar, by carrying a letter to Poona, and bringing back a reply, in a very short space of time. Being afterwards entertained on the personal establishment of the Peishwa, his activity, intelligence and vigour, soon became conspicuous; and by unceasing diligence, and, above all, by being pander to his vices, never hesitating to fulfil his wishes whatever they might be*, he gradually gained the confidence of his master, and was the only man who ever obtained it. When Gunput Rao Phansay, the respectable commandant of the Peishwa's artillery, was deprived of his Jagheer, Trimbukjee was appointed commandant in his stead. He at first courted Mankesir and Khoosroojee; but having discovered their collusion, he disclosed it to the Peishwa, and though it did not, for some time, become apparent, he entirely supplanted Mankesir in his master's councils, and retained Khoosroojee in the manner already described.

* The accusation was not made by Mankesir himself, but by three persons employed by him and the Peishwa.

† The above is from native information of respectability; but I am not certain of the date, or whether Mr. Russell, or Mr. Elphinstone was resident at the time. I think the former.

‡ Native information.

Bajee Rao's success in bringing his Jagheerdars under his authority encouraged him in more extensive plans for aggrandizing his power. He occasionally mentioned his claims on the Nizam, but as often as the resident prepared for entering on the investigation, Bajee Rao found some excuse for delay. He likewise spoke, at first distantly, of his claims on Sindia and Holkar, although sensible that they were dissolved by treaties, to which he was himself a party; and he pressed, with seeming earnestness, an early settlement of the debts due to him by the Gaekwar: a subject which had already for several years occupied attention, and to which we shall presently advert.

Unfortunately for Bajee Rao, the low favourite

* Trimbukjee once told Mr. Elphinstone, in conversation. "If my master order me, I will kill a cow,"—a declaration of servile devotedness, equally strong and impious.

whom he had chosen, and who had much of the character of Shirzee Rao Ghatgay, entertained a strong prejudice against Europeans; and his arrogant presumption, and unprincipled mind were equal to any attempt. Bajee Rao, at first, in wishing to extend his power, entertained no hostile designs against the British government; but, elated by his encreasing consequence, without reflecting from whence it was derived, and flattered by the suggestions of Trimbukjee, who tried to persuade him that he would recover by the force of his wisdom all that his ancestors had gained by their swords, he became irritated by opposition to his wishes, and was hurried forward, until he was overwhelmed in the intrigues and crimes which Dainglia led him on to perpetrate. In A. D. 1814. frequent consultations with the Moodhee and Trimbukjee, they advised him, before entering on the more important discussions with the British government, to encrease his military establishment, which without any design or appearance of hostility, would, they represented, tend to render him more respectable in the eyes of all India, and give weight to arguments with his allies. Of the benefit derived by the British government from the treaty of Bassein the Moodhee, perhaps from conviction, impressed Bajee Rao with the most exaggerated opinion; and he may have thought, from the evident desire of conciliation which existed in the councils of the British government, that much would be conceded to avert a war. The annual inroads of the Pindharees and a pilgrimage undertaken by Bajee Rao, for the second time, to a celebrated temple in the Carnatic, furnished ample excuse for raising troops had a pretext been wanting, but the fact was, the resident had been constantly pressing on the attention of the minister, the inadequate force maintained by the Peishwa for the protection of his country. Up to 1812, exclusive of the troops maintained by the Jagheerdars, and the Sebundees, or irregular infantry employed in collecting the revenue, his army amounted to no more than 2500 horse and 3000 infantry. Four thousand horse were that year added to the establishment, and several hundreds each year subsequently; but instead of continuing to encrease the levies of horse so useful to check the Pindharees, a large body of Gosaeen infantry was now entertained at Trimbukjee's suggestion; and Arabs, whose enlistment Bajee Rao, had at one time, not only prohibited, but had begged of the Bombay government to arrest on their route from the coast to his dominions, now met with every encouragement. An opportunity of exercising the new levies soon occured, by the refusal of Bappoo Sindia, Killidar of Dharwar to surrender that fortress. Having come to pay his respects to the Peishwa on his route to the Carnatic, Bajee Rao desired him to give up the fort to Trimbukjee, "If your highness," replied the Killidar, "will send a gentleman to relieve me in the command, or if you will send a Carcoon, in your own name, to whom I can commit my charge, your servant will present the keys to him, but I will never give over the fort of Dharwar to such a person as Trimbukjee Dainglia." In consequence of this speech, as soon as he had reached the door of the Peishwa's tent, he was arrested, bound, and tortured by Trimbukjee, until a promise of surrender was extorted. His carcoon, a Bramin on whom the Killidar could rely, was despatched with Trimbukjee, who, accompanied by a body of troops, proceeded to take possession; but, on approaching the gate, the carcoon begged permission to go on a few minutes in advance of the party, that he might speak to the garrison, and make some arrangements; when, no sooner had he got inside, than he shut the gate, and on pretence of being detained by the garrison, opened a fire on Trimbukjee and his followers, who were obliged to retire with precipitation. This insult could not be resented at the time, nor until the Peishwa's return to Poona, when Dharwar was invested; but the faithful Carcoon did not surrender until an order was obtained from his imprisoned master, through the interposition of Bappoo Gokla.

About this period the conduct of Khoosroojee Moodhee, which from the first had not escaped the resident's observation, became such as to render it necessary to remove him from Poona, in order to prevent, as far as possible, the bad effects of the dangerous opinions which he inculcated. His past services entitled him to all due consideration from the British government; and it would have been both difficult and ill-judged to have proved the circumstances by which he had forfeited his claim to its reward. A liberal provision was therefore made for him in his native province, Guzerat;

but, about the eve of his intended departure, he died by poison. Whether it was administered by others, or taken wilfully or accidentally by himself, could never be discovered, although the case underwent a long and strict investigation. If he knew more secrets, with respect to foreign intrigues, than Bajee Rao and Trimbukjee Dainglia thought fit to trust to any third person beyond their own power, his death may be imputed to their machinations; but it was the general opinion of the people at Poona, that he had poisoned himself through a fear of the loss of reputation, when, by removal from power and office, his corrupt practices might become public. It is, however, remarkable, that in succession to this general report, the Peishwa, who had before quashed the proceedings against him, now became his accuser; and Bappoo Sawney, the deputy of the deceased, was called upon by Bajee Rao to account for the defalcation, bribery, and corruption of his master. During the proceedings, Bappoo Sawney died suddenly; of fright it was said, at what he might expect if proved delinquincy threw him into the power of Trimbukjee Dainglia. This person, who had been for some time the chief director of the Peishwa's councils, was at last appointed his minister in the transaction of affairs with the British government. He studied his master's humours, and attained entire ascendancy over his mind; his measures were vigorous, though marked by ignorance, violence, and treachery. His punishments were at once lenient and severe; robbery and murder might be compensated by a small fine, but a failure in a revenue contract was an unpardonable offence.

A. D. 1815.

The Peishwa farmed his districts to the highest bidder; and those who failed in their contracts, were compelled to surrender their whole property with that of their securities; and should all be insufficient, they were thrown into hill-forts, and treated with the greatest rigour. On one occasion, Trimbukjee, before his power was completely established, being enraged at some delay on the part of a banker who had become security for a revenue contractor, used him in the harshest manner, and at last ordered the banker to be dragged before him, when he struck him a violent blow on the head, which, owing to a heavy ring on his finger, proved instantly fatal; but, although the person thus deprived of life was a Bramin of respectability*, no notice was taken of the circumstance.

These severities to the contractors did not deter others from adventuring on the same course; for Bajee Rao, who let the districts himself, was an adept in the art of flattery, and his manner, plausible to a degree which few could resist. His court, which was gay and licentious beyond that of any other Peishwa, soon became agreeable to the generality of Bramins in Poona, and a high offer for a district was a sure way to the temporary notice of the prince. All his expenditure was regulated by contract. The net revenue of the state was about one hundred and twenty lacks of rupees, of which

* The banker's name was Sukharam Naik Loondee.

Bajee Rao saved annually about fifty lacks, and had, at this period, collected treasure exceeding fifty millions of rupees. Whilst thus intent on amassing wealth, his time was divided in the encouragement of the grossest debauchery, and the practice of the most absurd superstitions. He aspired to a character for sanctity; was rigid in the observance of every form required by the rules of cast; and the murder of Narrain Rao, attributed to his parents, was a subject of inquietude and remorse. To atone for their crime, he planted several hundred thousand mango trees about Poona; gave largesses to Bramins and religious establishments, and was particularly generous to the temple at Punderpoor. As an instance of his superstition may be mentioned, a dream of one of his religious attendants, who declared he saw the ghost of Narrain Rao, and that it had ordered a dinner for one hundred thousand Bramins; an entertainment which was immediately provided.

To the complaints of his subjects he never listened; and if the villagers endeavoured to approach his presence, they were driven away by the attendants. The farmers of the districts had generally the superintendance of civil and criminal justice, and their powers in this respect enabled them to increase their collections by fines and exactions. There was a nominal court of justice at Poona, under a Shastree, who had a very large establishment. It was supported entirely by the corrupt emoluments which power enabled its members to draw from the public, and was so notoriously corrupt, that the poorer suitor, unless he had interest, or could bribe some great man of whom the Shastree stood in awe, was certain to lose his cause.

Defective as the system was under Mahdoo Rao Bullal, the Shastree who then superintended and directed the Punchayets was a person of strict integrity, and that Peishwa's reign was always referred to as the times when a poor man had justice: even the administration of Nana Furnuwees was spoken of with applause; but Bajee Rao, the only Peishwa who had full leisure to amend the civil government, had neither ability nor inclination for the task.

He persevered in his plan of sequestrating Jagheers, and Mahdoo Rao Rastia having failed to produce his quota of horse for muster, the Peishwa represented to the British resident this departure from what was stipulated, as wilful disobedience to his authority. The agreement in question being one of those concluded through the interposition of the British government, Rastia was called upon by the resident to fulfil his engagement with the Peishwa, otherwise he must abide by the consequences. Rastia hesitated, declared his inability to furnish so many horse, owing to the disobedience of the Duflays, who were Jagheerdars under him, and by the Peishwa's usual artifice, was secretly encouraged to believe, that by trusting to his lenity more favourable terms might be obtained. It was in vain that the resident represented his situation in its true colours, and warned him of his ruin; he steadfastly refused compliance, and was stripped by the Peishwa of all his possessions.

Every day made it more evident that the Peishwa's government was now aiming at the revival of the old Mahratta policy, and was running a course equally incompatible with the Peishwa's alliance and his political existence, unless it were expected that he could overturn the British government. By Trimbukjee's advice, he had sent agents in the preceding year* to the courts of Sindia and Rughoojee Bhonslay; he also despatched an envoy† to Holkar, with whose court Bajee Rao had never before held any friendly communication; but, what was still more extraordinary, he sent an agent‡ to reside with the Pindharees, and had a secret interview at Kopergaom, with some of their chiefs. The object of his missions to the Mahratta courts above named, was to negociate a secret treaty of general confederacy and support, which was actually concluded. The declared intention seems to have been for the purpose of strengthening themselves, and uniting together in case the British government should meditate further encroachment on any of the states concerned, or to act offensively against the British should an opportunity arise, either in consequence of their expected failure in the Nepaul war, then going forward, or on any future occasion; but those of his countrymen, who know Bajee Rao best, are of opinion, that notwithstanding these extensive and apparently well-ordered intrigues, he had neither a fixed plan, nor any serious intention of making war upon the English at this period; certain it is, however, that his measures were such as would have subjected him to the loss of his musnud, had the facts been formally substantiated and strict justice enforced.

* Trimbukjee is supposed to have held communication with Sindia and Rughoojee Bhonslay, as far back as 1811, no doubt with his master's approbation.

† The envoy was a Bramin, named Gunnesh Punt.

‡ This agent was a Mahratta, his name Kistnajee Gaekwar.

His next scheme was to establish his ascendancy in Guzerat. Like his claims on the Nizam, he frequently expressed a wish to have his affairs with the Gaekwar settled; but as often as the wish was met by the British govèrnment, he contrived to delay the adjustment. There had been no settlement between the Gaekwar and the Peishwa, since the accession of Govind Rao. On the suppression of the rebellion of Aba Shelookur, the Baroda government agreed, as already mentioned, to hold Ahmedabad in farm from the Peishwa, including the tribute of Kattywar, with Pitlaud, Nappar, Chura-Ranpoor, Dhundooka, Gogo, and some rights in Cambay, for the annual sum of five lacks of rupees. When the Bombay government sent the detachment into Guzerat, to support the party of Rowjee Appajee, at Baroda, the government was fast approaching to that state of anarchy and confusion, in which the dominions of Sindia and Holkar were afterwards involved. This fine province was in a great degree preserved from similar misery, by the active interference of the British government, under the able arrangements of Lieutenant-Colonel Walker, the resident. The revenues of the state amounted to fifty-five lacks of rupees, and its expenditure to eighty-two. The power of the government was, as we have seen, in the hands of a body of Arab mercenaries, and the divisions in the family of Gaekwar, afforded a wide field of hope and of profit to military adventurers of all descriptions, who abound in that quarter. The Arabs were driven out: the debts, exclusive of the heavy balance due to the Peishwa, were compromised for a sum less than forty-two lacks; and money was raised on the security, or advanced from the treasury of the British government for its liquidation. Mulhar Rao Gaekwar, whose rebellion brought the English permanently to Baroda, went off from Neriad, as the reader may recollect, about the time when the Arabs were besieged in Baroda. He was afterwards, when nearly famished, taken prisoner by Babajee, commander of the Gaekwar's troops, delivered over to the charge of the British government, and long kept a prisoner at large in the fort of Bombay, or its environs, where he ended his days. Kanhojee surrendered himself in 1808, and at first was allowed his liberty, and an ample pension; but his natural turbulence and love of intrigue could ill brook the undisturbed calm of such a life. In a short time he forfeited the advantages he enjoyed, engaged in plots against the existing government, and was finally conveyed to Madras as a state prisoner.

The collection of the tribute in Kattywar, required a considerable force every year from Baroda. The Mahrattas give the name of Kattywar to the whole western Peninsula of Guzerat, although strictly applicable to one district only of that extensive tract, which derives its name from the Kattees, a very peculiar race, who worship the sun. The whole region is inhabited by a warlike people, chiefly Jarejah Rajpoots, who are under separate chiefs, and whose internal divisions had early made them an easy prey to the plundering bands of Kantajee Kudum Banday, and Dummajee Gaekwar. The resident, attended by a British force, repeatedly accompanied the Gaekwar's army, and contributed much to tranquillize the province, and to improve its revenues. He also humanely exerted himself, though in the end with little success, to suppress the barbarous practice of female infanticide, to which the Jarejah Rajpoots are prone. From all these circumstances, the Baroda government fell much under the control of the British resident; but as Lieutenant-Colonel Walker was enabled to direct its principal acts, without paralyzing its internal authority, much benefit resulted to the country from his superintendency.

The ministry was chiefly composed of a set of Purvoes, a cast frequently remarkable for great fidelity and bravery, and when poor, they are often frugal to parsimony; but it may be observed of the Purvoes, that wherever they attain power, and can command wealth, they are lavish and improvident. The head of this ministry was Rowjee Appajee who died in July 1803, but having previously adopted his nephew Seetaram Rowjee as his son, he was, with the consent of the resident, appointed his successor. After a patient trial of his ability and resources, Seetaram was found incompetent to the duty, and his uncle Babajee, hitherto at the head of the army, was invited to assist him.

Futih Sing, the brother of the Gaekwar, and the heir apparent, whose liberty had been purchased from one of Holkar's commanders who carried him off from Poona in 1803, was also at the same time brought into the administration. Futih Sing chose as his secretary, Gungadhur Shastree, originally in the service of the Phurkay family at Poona, and a man of considerable activity and address, who had been very useful to the resident in the important measures he had effected. Lieutenant-Colonel Walker placed the highest confidence in the integrity and fidelity of the Shastree, and upon the death of Babajee, and great misconduct on the part of Seetaram, Gungadhur Shastree supported as he was, both by Futih Sing and the resident, soon became prime minister, in all but the name.

The first arrangement of any importance which took place between the government of Poona and that of Baroda, after the treaty of Bassein, was the settlement of the farm of Ahmedabad, and its dependencies.

The former agreement was made in October 1800, and the term of its duration was to have been five years, but as Ranpoor, Gogo, Dhundooka, and the Peishwa's rights in Cambay were ceded to the British government, by the treaty of Bassein, the Gaekwar was anxious to obtain a perpetual lease of the remainder; as the evils of divided authority would be avoided, and his own districts become more valuable in consequence. The British government was equally desirous of having the farm continued, both for the reasons mentioned, and because much confusion and oppression were likely to be averted by the arrangement. The Peishwa, on these representations, and upon condition of receiving five and a half lacks of rupees for the remaining districts, consented, without difficulty, to allow the Gaekwar to retain them for ten years from June 1804, and a new agreement was concluded accordingly. But at the expiration of the period, the Peishwa's views were entirely altered, and five times the amount of the sum realized from the districts, could not compensate, in his estimation, for the advantages of an increased political influence on the side of Guzerat:—nothing could induce him to renew the lease. Long, however, before the period of renewal, the question of his claims upon the Gaekwar had become a subject of attention with the British authorities.

The governor-general deemed it advisable to allow the two states, to settle their affairs by direct negotiation, and to desire that the arbitration of the British government should not be resorted to, except in the event of a failure on their part to effect an accommodation. At an early stage of the discussions, an agent of the Gaekwar government, named Bappoo Myraul, was sent to Poona. The debts of the Gaekwar to the Peishwa, according to the statements of the latter, which appear to have been correct, amounted to nearly a krore of rupees; but, as the chief cause of the embarrassments of the Baroda government originated in the attachment of the family to the cause of his father, Bajee Rao generously acceded to the relinquishment of sixty lacks of rupees of this demand. The Baroda government, without claiming exemption as matter of favour, advanced counter claims on the following grounds.

When Dummajee gave up half of Guzerat to Ballajee Bajee Rao, in 1751, he retained his rights in Baroach undivided, and the Peishwa got Jumbooseer, and some other districts, as an equivalent for his share. By the treaty of Baroda, in 1775, Rugonath Rao obtained, from Futih Sing Gaekwar, the cession of his rights in Baroach for the East India Company; and by the treaty of Poorundhur, although the Poona ministry had no power to alienate Baroach from the Gaekwar, it was wholly ceded to the British government. It was in vain that Futih Sing demanded his rights in Baroach, from the English who kept them, or from the Peishwa who had given them away; and although, when the war was renewed, General Goddard put Futih Sing in possession of several of the Peishwa's districts, he was compelled to relinquish them by the treaty of Salbye. Mahadajee Sindia, on the conclusion of that pacification, obtained Baroach from the British government:—with Sindia's successor it remained until it fell, by right of conquest, to the English, in 1803; and the Gaekwar now advanced a demand on the Peishwa for the amount of his share of its revenue since the treaty of Poorundhur.

His other counter-claims were on account of expenses incurred in reducing the rebellion of Aba Shelookur, and in maintaining an extraordinary number of troops for the defence of the Peishwa's, as well as of his own possessions in Guze-rat. These intricate claims occasioned infinite discussion; and when Bajee Rao adopted the plans of Trimbukjee, he threw every obstacle in the way of a settlement, because the outstanding demands on Baroda and Hyderabad were reserved as a means of communicating with these courts; from which, owing to the nature of their engagements with the British government, his intrigues might otherwise have been excluded. Bappoo Myraul, the Gaekwar's agent at Poona, a sensible, upright man, and of a cautious observant disposition, was soon found unfit for the Peishwa's purpose. Some other agent must be sent, with whom the settlement could be conducted. The Gaekwar's government, therefore, resolved on sending Gungadhur Shastree, both for the adjustment of the accounts, and for obtaining a renewal of the lease of the Peishwa's share of Guzerat.

(A.D. 1814.) Accordingly, the Shastre proceeded to Poona; but such was the general dread of the violent and unprincipled conduct of the powerful Trimbukjee, towards all who opposed his wishes, that the Gaekwar asked and obtained the formal guarantee of his minister's safety, from the British government. As early as September, 1811, it had been proposed to send Gungadhur Shastree to Poona: the proposal was at that time readily and distinctly acceded to by the Peishwa; but on the Shastree's arrival, in 1814, Bajee Rao objected to him, and even refused to see him, on the plea of his having been insolent to him when a carcoon in the service of Phurkay. The fact was, the Baroda minister, Seetaram Rowjee, jealous of the Shastree, and already seduced by the Peishwa, represented the Shastree as a person wholly in the interests of the English.

It must be explained, that Bajee Rao, on the decline of Seetaram Rowjee's influence at Baroda, attempted, with success, to gain him to his views; and on the resident's discovering the intrigue, and protesting against it, the Peishwa first denied and afterwards justified the correspondence, by endeavouring to prove his right to appoint the Dewan at Baroda, according to the ancient practice, in the plenitude of the Peishwa's power. Such a right, in regard to the Senaputtee or his Mootaliq, Gaekwar, never did exist on the part of the Peishwa; but, without reference to the alleged right, or the object of the intrigue, the reasons urged did not appear sufficient, in Mr. Elphinstone's opinion, for the Peishwa's refusing to transact business with the accredited agent of a government in alliance with the nation which he represented, especially after having once assented to his mission: the Peishwa's objections were therefore overruled.

The proposed renewal of the lease of Ahmedabad, for reasons already explained, was positively rejected by the Peishwa; and Trimbukjee having obtained the appointment of Sur Soobehdar, prepared his troops and agents, who, in the Peishwa's name, took possession of the districts in Guzerat, and very soon commenced a systematic plan of insurrection and intrigue, which threatened to throw the whole country into confusion and disorder. * No better success attended the other objects of the mission to Poona; and the Shastree, at last, with the concurrence of the resident, determined to return to Baroda, and leave the questions to the arbitration of the British government.

1815. This determination produced a marked change towards the Shastree, in the conduct and demeanour of the Peishwa and Trimbukjee, who, foreseeing that they should thus be shut out from Baroda, resolved to spare no pains in gaining the Shastree to their interests. It was just at this period that Trimbukjee was appointed to carry on the communications between his master and the British government.

The Shastree was induced to postpone his departure, and every means was employed to conciliate his regard and confidence. Trimbukjee assailed him on the side of his vanity, which was the weak point of the Shastree's character, and persuaded him that the Peishwa, in admiration of his talents both throughout the negotiation in which he was then opposed to his government, and in regard to what he had effected at Baroda, had resolved to appoint him his own minister. As a proof of the sincerity of this proposal, the Peishwa offered his sister-in-law in marriage to the Shastree's son, and acceded to an adjustment of the

* In the rains of 1815, the British troops in the cantonment at Kaira, their usual strength being much reduced at the time, were for several nights in expectation of being attacked in their lines, by the Koolees, who are very numerous in that quarter, and were excited against the British government, by Trimbukjee's agents.

Gaekwar's affairs for a territorial cession, on a plan suggested by the Shastree, though without consulting his own court or obtaining the sanction of the British authority. Every arrangement was made for the intended nuptials; when the Shastree, having received no reply from the Gaekwar respecting the territorial cession, became apprehensive that it might be supposed he was neglecting his master's interests in forwarding his own, hesitated and suspended the solemnization of the marriage, after great expense had been incurred by preparations. This conduct was deeply resented; and the refusal of the Shastree to permit his wife to visit the Peishwa's palace, or to witness the scenes of gross debauchery to which every lady who entered it was subjected, was an offence which Bajee Rao never forgave, in him or in any other person. Trimbukjee, however, affected to treat the Shastree with more cordiality and friendship than ever.

The Peishwa proceeded on a pilgrimage to Punderpoor, and the Shastree accompanied him, although his colleague Bappoo Myraul warned him of his danger, and begged that he might at least be permitted to attend him; but the infatuated man would neither listen to his advice, nor allow him to be of the party. At Punderpoor, on the night of the 14th July, Gungadhur Shastree, who had that day dined with the Peishwa, was invited by Trimbukjee to repair to the temple for the purpose of paying his devotions on an occasion of particular solemnity. The Shastree, being a little indisposed, excused himself, but upon earnest and reiterated entreaties, he at last complied.

With a few unarmed attendants, he proceeded to the temple, where he performed his devotions, conversed with Trimbukjee, and payed his respects to the Peishwa, who was seated in the upper veranda of the temple, and on that occasion treated him with particular condescension.

The unfortunate Shastree, who like many others, could never resist the agreeable manners of Bajee Rao, quitted his presence in the highest spirits, and set out on his return ; but he had scarcely proceeded three hundred yards, when he was attacked in the street, and almost literally cut in pieces. Trimbukjee Dainglia hired the assassins, two agents of Seetaram Rowjee from Baroda assisted in pointing out the Shastree, and the Peishwa, if he did not instigate approved of the murder, which was rendered peculiarly atrocious in a Hindoo, by being not only perpetrated on a Bramin, but upon the consecrated ground of Punderpoor, a place of extraordinary sanctity. As Bajee Rao and Trimbuckjee denied all knowledge or participation in the deed, the resident, who at the Peishwa's request had not accompanied him to Punderpoor, called for an immediate inquiry into the circumstances, for the satisfaction of the British government: but no investigation took place. The general voice of the country pronounced Trimbukjee the perpetrator of the murder; Bappoo Myraul openly accused him of it, and the resident instituted a very minute and strict inquiry, which clearly established his guilt. The Peishwa was called upon to place him under restraint, and afterwards to deliver him up to the British government; but he refused compliance, evaded the demand, and for a time seemed resolved to stand or fall with his favourite. Being however unprepared for extremities, and the British troops being assembled at Poona, his natural timidity prevailed over every other sentiment, and on the 25th September, he delivered up Trimbukjee whom he had previously sent into confinement in the fort of Wussuntgurh. The two agents of Seetaram being deeply implicated, were seized at the same time and delivered to the Gaekwar, by whom they were confined in hill-forts. Seetaram, who in conjunction with the agents of Trimbukjee, had been levying troops, whilst the Peishwa hesitated to deliver up his favourite, was removed from the administration at Baroda, and taken into custody by the British government. This measure was much against the inclination of the regent Futih Sing, who on this occasion betrayed symptoms of being himself swayed by the intrigues of the court of Poona.

A. D. 1816. Trimbukjee was confined by the British government in the fort of Tannah, on Salsette, whence he effected his escape over the wall between seven and eight o'clock of the evening of the 12th September. * The guard over Trimbukjee, owing probably to excessive precaution, had no mixture of Sepoys upon it, but was composed entirely of Europeans. From this circumstance, the Peishwa was able to communicate with Trimbukjee, and for some days previous to his making the attempt several of his friends and servants were waiting in the neighbourhood with full expectation of his joining them. The principal agent of communication was a Mahratta horsekeeper, in the service of one of the officers in the garrison, who passing and repassing the window of Trimbukjee's place of confinement, when in the act of airing his master's horse, sung the information he wished to convey, in an apparently careless manner, which the Europeans, from want of sufficient knowledge of the language, could not detect. The difficulties of this escape were exaggerated into an exploit worthy of Sivajee, and greatly contributed to raise the fame of Trimbukjee amongst his countrymen, with whom it gained him a degree of popularity which he had never enjoyed while in power. He confided his safety to the Bheels, Ramoosees and Mangs, and resided chiefly in the hills about Nassuck and Sungumnere, sometimes in Candeish and Buglana, and frequently amongst the Mahdeo hills towards Satara, but never in the original haunts of Sivajee, where he would not have been safe. This circumstance is to be accounted for, in his having treacherously seized Chitoor Sing, who was extremely popular in that part of the Mahratta country.

* Trimbukjee, in conversation with different officers on his guard at Tannah, before he had any hopes of escape, admitted the murder, but said he had merely obeyed his master's orders.

Chitoor Sing, since we had last occasion to mention him, after the battle of Poona in 1802, had served in most parts of India. He was conspicuous in the charge made upon the 74th regiment, at the battle of Assaye*, and was afterwards in the armies of Holkar, Umeer Khan, and the Rajpoots. In 1812, he was returning home through Candeish, when Trimbukjee seduced him to a conference, took him prisoner, loaded him with irons, and threw him into the fort of Kangooree in the Concan. Many vain attempts were made by his partizans to effect his rescue; till at last, a Gosaeen of the same name, aided by some of the Ramoosee chiefs, taking advantage of the interest felt for him in the country, gave out that Chitoor Sing had escaped, and obtained possession of the fort of Prucheetgurh, by a daring and well-planned enterprise, suggested, it is said, by a traditionary account of one of Sivajee's exploits.* They afterwards took many other forts, and raised a formidable insurrection, which, though generally kept in check by the troops of Bappoo Gokla, was never reduced by the Peishwa's government. Their real object was plunder, but their avowed purpose was the re-establishment of the Mahratta sovereignty, and the release of the Raja of Satara; and had Trimbukjee Dainglia fallen into their hands, they would have put him to death; Chitoor Sing lingered in prison at Kangooree, where he died in the end of April 1818. His brother Shao died at Satara, 3d May 1808, and was succeeded by his son, Pertab Siew, or Sing, the present Raja, then in his sixteenth year.

* I know this circumstance from Jeswunt Rao Ghorepuray, who was himself in that charge, and with Chitoor Sing.

However strong the suspicion of the Peishwa's connivance at the escape and concealment of Trimbukjee, there was no proof of the fact; and as it was thought, he would rest satisfied in having effected his freedom, little notice was taken of the circumstance. Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir was again called into the Peishwa's councils; Moro Dixit, a student of Bassein, and Chimnajee Narrain, both Concanist Bramins, who, like most of Bajee Rao's courtiers, had gained the favour of their prince by the dishonour of their families, were likewise employed in the administration; and Captain Ford, the commandant of the regular brigade, in whom the Peishwa placed considerable confidence because his prosperity depended on the stability of his government, was frequently the channel of communication between the British residency and the Peishwa's ministers. The utmost cordiality seemed to prevail between the court and the residency at Poona; but nothing could be more deceitful on the part of Bajee Rao. He was now engaged in the most active negotiations with Sindia, Holkar, the Raja of Nagpoor, Umeer Khan, and the Pindharees, against the British government; he made great additions to his army, and supplied Trimbukjee with large sums of money, directing him to raise troops at different places, in his own territory, which, even if discovered by the British government, might appear to be plundering Pindharees or insurgents. The resident, who had early and exact information of Trimbukjee's secret proceedings, applied to the minister, to ascertain whether the assembly of such troops was authorized or not by the Peishwa; and he was assured, not only that it was not authorized, but that no such assembly existed. Mr. Elphin-

* The manner of it has already been explained in a note on Sivajee's life.—Chapter 4th, Volume 1st, page 141.

A. D. 1817.

stone was therefore bound to consider it an insurrection; he told the minister that such levies were going forward; that the principal body was assembling near Nattapoota, a village south of the Neera, within fifty miles of Poona; and he begged that immediate steps might be taken for its dispersion. Although the minister continued to deny the existence of any assembly of troops, a part of Bappoo Gokla's horse, was sent down, as was pretended, for the resident's satisfaction. They quietly occupied a position in the very district where the insurgents were collecting, but declared they could hear nothing of them. The Peishwa also persisted in denying all knowledge of Trimbukjee, or of an insurrection, and called on the resident, if he really did believe such an absurd report, to take his own measures for suppressing it. It was by this time known to the resident, that the Peishwa, during a visit to the country, had invited, and positively given Trimbukjee an audience at Phoolshuhur, within 17 miles of Poona; but what made this meeting the more remarkable, is the fact, afterwards ascertained, that Trimbukjee came there attended by a large body of horse, who surrounded the village during the interview. The subsidiary force was then in an advanced position, near Jaffeirabad, for the purpose of protecting the country from the ravages of the Pindharees, and of assisting in giving effect to political measures to the northward; but it was now with the consent of the governor general, ordered to act against the insurgents. Whilst two detachments of the Madras army advanced to the frontiers of the Nizam's territory, the one to Tooljapoor, the other to Beder, Colonel Lionel Smith, who commanded the Poona subsidiary, marched to the Neera with a light division, leaving his reserve to follow at leisure. The insurgents had moved from Nattapoota to Jhutt; but, on Colonel Smith's approach, they countermarched, and passed, by a rugged and unfrequented route, through the Mahdeo hills; Colonel Smith followed them, but they had gained many hours march before the division got into their tract; the pursuit, however, was taken up by a party of infantry from the reserve, under Major Smith of the Madras native infantry, who, after a persevering march, surprised and killed several of them; but they had previously marked their course by several acts of atrocity, particularly by the murder of Leiutenant Warre of the Madras artillery. The object of this body in moving to the northward, was to join another party, assembled in Candeish, under Trimbukjee's relation, Godajee Dainglia; but before their arrival, Lieutenant Evan Davies, f the Bombay establishment, at the head of a body of the Nizam's horse, had attacked and dispersed the troops of Godajee.

The existence of the insurrection could be no longer denied by the Peishwa; orders were therefore issued to the Jagheerdar of Vinchoor to act against them, and some time after, a letter from the Vinchoorkur, with a fictitious account of their attack and dispersion, was sent for the perusal of the resident, and the officer commanding the subsidiary force.

In the meantime the Peishwa continued to levy troops, both cavalry and infantry; every endeavour was used to induce him to desist, — he was warned of the consequences of such proceedings, and of the dangerous course he had followed in abetting the insurgents, and thus evincing intentions decidedly hostile to the British government. But he still persevered; the language of his ministers assumed a peremptory tone, and they demanded from the resident whether he intended war or peace. Mr. Elphinstone, in order that nothing might be wanting to bring the Peishwa to a sense of his situation, had suspended the intercourse between the residency and the Poona court about the time when Colonel Smith proceeded against the insurgents; he now in expectation of receiving instructions from the governor-general, directed Colonel Smith to move towards Poona with the light division, acquainting the Peishwa with his having done so; the plan he pursued was to proceed gradually, giving the Peishwa time to correct his errors, if so disposed, at the same time relaxing nothing of the steadiness and dignity which became the representative of the British nation. Many reasons, however, combined to render it advisable to bring matters to an issue. The insurgents gained ground in Candeish: a fort fell into their hands; the Peishwa's levies, and the repairs of his forts, which had been going on for some time, proceeded with great activity, and as the rainy season approached, it was apprehended the Peishwa might betake himself to a hill-fort, inaccessible at that season, and commence a war which must be protracted, and would probably encourage all the Mah-ratta powers to unite in his cause. At this important crisis the communication between Calcutta and Poona was interrupted by disturbances in Kuttack; but in the absence of the expected instructions, Mr. Elphinstone had fortunately received a private letter from the secretary to the governor-general, which mentioned the surrender of Trimbukjee Dainglia as an indispensable preliminary to any new settlement whatever. On this information he determined to act without delay. Having intimated a desire to communicate with the minister, the Peishwa requested to see him, and throughout a long conference displayed an unusual degree of coolness and self-possession. He entered into a warm and most eloquent defence of himself; reverted, as usual, to his obligations to the British government, and spoke with so much apparent reason and candour of his own situation, and of the consequences of the conduct and views imputed to him, that any person who had not considered the weight of the evidence, and fully understood the character of Bajee Rao, must have felt disposed to give credit to the soundness of his arguments, even if he had been inclined to doubt the sincerity of his protestations. But whilst his actions contradicted his words, Mr. Elphinstone was not to be deceived; he tried, however, by every means, both during the conference and subsequently, to induce the Peishwa to prove the sincerity of his professions and avert the danger by which he was threatened; he distinctly told him that Trimbukjee Dainglia must be delivered up, or not suffered to remain in his territory, and that the consequences of a refusal must involve the states in immediate hostilities. At last, after several days had passed in this manner, the resident formally demanded the seizure of Trimbukjee in the space of one month, and the immediate delivery of three principal forts Singurh, Poorundhur, and Raigurh, as a pledge for the fulfilment of the demand. Bajee Rao, still under an impression of the high importance of his alliance to the British government, believed that the resident would not proceed to extremities; and he hoped that without making such a humiliating concession, or surrendering pledges so important, he should be able to temporize until the season was advanced, and should find time to call into operation, with full effect, the extensive confederacy planned by himself and his favourite. Even when Mr. Elphinstone, on the 7th of May, intimated his determination to surround the city of Poona, Bajee Rao still refused compliance with the terms required. At last, at one o'clock in the morning, the Peishwa sent a messenger in hopes that the resident might be induced to postpone or to relinquish his intention; and it was only on finding him (May 8.) steady to his purpose, that the messenger told him he was instructed to comply with his demands. During the discussion the day had dawned; the troops were moving round the city, and had completely surrounded it before the resident could reach the head of the line. They were withdrawn as soon as the order for the surrender of the forts was sent out; and the Peishwa, as if at length sensible to his situation, and resolved to give up his favourite, issued a proclamation, offering rewards for the seizure of some of Trimbukjee's adherents, and a sum of two lacks of rupees and an enam village of 1000 rupees a year to any person who should bring in Trimbukjee Dainglia dead or alive. He likewise seized some of Trimbukjee's adherents, sequestrated the property of others concerned in the insurrection, and manifested an apparently strong desire to comply with the recommendation of his allies. Although these proceedings did not deceive his own subjects, and the proclamation, without the Peishwa's cordial concurrence, was of little importance to the apprehension of Trimbukjee, still it seemed reasonable to admit these acts as a concession of that preliminary, without which no proposals for present satisfaction or future security would have been received by the British authorities.

The instructions of the governor-general, which reached Poona on the 10th May, were framed for the purpose of circumscribing the Peishwa's power, of imposing such restrictions as should prevent the evils apprehended from the course of policy pursued by the court of Poona for several years, and of obviating inconveniences found to exist, in the performance of the articles of the treaty of Bassein.

A new treaty was therefore drawn up, by which, in order to mark the foundation of the whole proceedings, the Peishwa was compelled to admit the guilt of Trimbukjee Dainglia, as the murderer of Gungadhur Shastree, the accredited agent of the Gaekwar state residing under the guarantee of the British government within the Peishwa's territory, and his consequent obligation to seize and deliver him up to the British government; until the accomplishment of which, the family of Trimbukjee Dainglia were to be given over as

The Peishwa engaged to have no communication with any foreign power whatever, neither to send nor to receive wukeels, and as head of the Mahratta empire, renounced all rights beyond the boundary of his own dominions between the Toongbuddra and Nerbuddah; he relinquished all future demands on the Gaekwar, and agreed to compromise all past claims on him for the annual sum of four lacks of rupees. He also agreed to let the farm of Ahmedabad to the Gaekwar for four and a half lacks of rupees a year, exclusive of the tribute of Kattywar and his other rights in Guzerat which were dismembered by another article. Instead of furnishing the contingent of five thousand horse and three thousand infantry required by the treaty of Bassein, he agreed to cede territory, yielding thirty-four lacks of rupees for that purpose. This cession included Dharwar and Kooshgul with some undefined districts in the Carnatic, the Concan north of Bombay, and the Peishwa's revenue in Guzerat except Ahmedabad and Oolpar; but Ahmedabad was subsequently included. The Peishwa also ceded the fort of Ahmednugur, together with all his rights north of the Nerbuddah; he recognised the settlement with the Jagheerdars concluded in 1812; and at the recommendation of the British government, restored the Jagheer of the unfortunate Mahdoo Rao Rastia; finally he renounced Mailghaut, a possession on the Nizam's frontier which the Peishwa's troops had occupied in 1811.

In consequence of this treaty, by which important advantages were secured to the Gaekwar's government, a new arrangement was concluded with him, which had for its object, the consolidation of the territories of the respective governments, and also to impose on the Gaekwar a more adequate proportion of the military charges of the province of Guzerat, than he had been hitherto called upon to bear; for although his irregular troops were maintained at a great expence, they were found wanting in efficiency, and the duty, as well as extra charges of field service, fell upon the British government. It was therefore proposed, that a part of the irregulars should be discharged, that the subsidiary force maintained by the Gaekwar should receive an addition of one thousand regular infantry, and two regiments of cavalry; and that districts lying conveniently for the meditated consolidation should be assigned to the British government for defraying the additional expense. To this plan the Baroda government acceded, and a treaty to that effect was concluded on the 6th November.*

* The above chapter is on the authority of English Records and Oral information—Mahratta MSS. and personal observation.

CHAP. XVII.

FROM A. D. 1814, TO A. D. 1817.

The Marquis of Hastings assumes charge of the Government of British India. — State of India from the increase of predatory power. — Patans and Pindharees. — Plan for improving the defensive military positions — failure of the negotiations with Bhopaul and Jeypoor — defensive alliance embraced by Appa Sahib, the regent at Nagpoor — Appa Sahib falls into the views of the Poona Court — murders Pursajee. — Progress of the Pindharees. — Plans of the Marquis of Hastings, for the suppression of the predatory system — political and military arrangements. — Sindia is forced into the governor-general's views — progress of the negotiations with the Rajpoots, Umeer Khan, the chiefs in Bundelcund, and the Nabob of Bhopaul.

In October 1813, the Marquis of Hastings, then Earl of Moira, assumed charge of the government of British India, as successor to Lord Minto.

(A. D. 1814.) In addition to affairs immediately pressed upon his notice, the new governor-general instituted inquiries into every department of the state; extending his interrogatories to the public character and services of individuals; by which he not only collected a mass of information, but awakened a lively attention in the minds of the officers throughout the vast army of British India, and inspired them, by this obvious desire to ascertain real merit, with the hope of honour and reward both for past and future exertions.

The defective nature of the political arrangements concluded by the British authorities in 1805-6, had become very evident, from the state of anarchy existing in Malwa and Rajpootana; and the necessity of suppressing the spreading hordes of Patans and Pindharees was universally acknowledged. The numbers of these marauders had augmented to about fifty thousand men, of whom, about one half were Pindharee horse. Both the one and the other were systematic plunderers; but the Patans were associated, under Umeer Khan, for the purpose of invading and plundering such states as they could overpower or intimidate; whilst the object of the Pindharees was universal rapine.

The Patans, therefore, required infantry and guns, and in this respect, no native army in India was more efficient: their artillery was excellent; and they had some of the oldest of Holkar's battalions as the foundation of their infantry, which was estimated at about ten thousand, and their cavalry at fifteen thousand men. They were also distinguished from Pindharees by having a fixed rate of monthly pay, though it was seldom punctually received.

These plunderers, especially the Pindharees, were always gaining an accession of strength as the countries around them became exhausted; for not only did every lawless man who could command a horse and a spear join them, but the more peaceable part of the community were driven for subsistence into the same course of life; so that additional wants and accumulating strength, tended of themselves, to enlarge the sphere of Pindharee operations, without other less apparent sources of augmentation, derived from the secret support and encouragement of various principal chiefs of the Mahratta empire.

Representations of the growth and formidable nature of this predatory power, were early made to the Court of Directors, but as the question seemed to involve a revision of their political relations with several of the native states, years had elapsed before any latitude was granted for departing from the defensive system of policy pursued since the settlement of 1805-6.

The authorities at home, however, regretting the manner in which some of the Rajpoot's states had been thrown off, were desirous of repairing what was still in their power, by taking the Raja of Jeypoor under British protection, and orders to that effect were received at Bengal, in 1814; but as the measure was part of a plan which the Marquis of Hastings had in view, for effecting a complete arrangement, he postponed attempting it, until a more favourable season.

As a prelude to the great object contemplated, it being supposed that Rughoojee Bhonslay, from his dread of the Pindarees, and from a sense of the gratuitous aid which had been more than once afforded when Nagpoor was threatened, might now be induced to enter on a defensive alliance with the British government; proposals to that effect were made to him, but a long negotiation, through the resident, Mr. Jenkins, ended in a positive rejection of the terms.

The chief end of these overtures, in the present instance, was with a view of connecting the chain of military posts between the frontier of the British possessions in Bundelcund, and the territory of their ally the Nizam. The same object was attainable, by taking Govind Rao Nana, the chief of Sagur, and Wuzeer Mohummud, Nabob of Bhopaul, under British protection; but being by this time involved in hostility with the Goorkhas of Nepaul, Lord Hastings intended to postpone the offer of protection to the principalities in question, when he obtained information, that a negotiation for a treaty offensive and defensive, was in progress betwixt Sindia and Rughoojee Bhonslay, and also between Sindia and the ministers of Toolsee Bye Holkar*: he further learnt, that Sindia, who had made great efforts against Bhopaul, the preceding year, was determined to renew the siege; that in its exhausted state even the heroism of Wuzeer Mohummud† must prove unavailing; and finally, that this chief earnestly solicited to be taken under British protection.

From these circumstances, Lord Hastings determined on adopting the proposed measure, and directed certain terms to be offered, which comprehended the free ingress, egress, and residence of British troops within the nabob's territory; and the surrender from Bhopaul of a fort as a present

* These negotiations, of which the governor-general had obtained intelligence, were the prelude to the treaty of confederacy, of which the first article, expressed the determination of these princes, to serve and obey the Peishwa.

† See Sir John Malcolm's central India, for an interesting and animated account of the defence of Bhopaul.

depôt. To support the negotiations, the troops in Bundelcund were reinforced, the Hyderabad subsidiary moved from Jaulna to Elichpoor, the Poona subsidiary from Seroor to Jaffeirabad, a large reserve was formed in the Deccan, and the army of Guzerat occupied a position at Soneepoor, on the right bank of the Myhie.

Wuzeer Mohummud appeared most ready to embrace the terms, and it was in consequence intimated to Sindia, by the resident in his camp, that the principality of Bhopaul was under British protection. Sindia protested most vehemently against the measure; declared the nabob to be his dependant, and in defiance of the assemblied armies, threatened an immediate attack upon him. His battalions advanced, and although under a certain assurance, that an attack on Bhopaul would occasion an immediate rupture with the English, Sindia, for a time, seemed quite determined to risk the event; but his actions fell short of his words; and ultimately, his army was withdrawn. His conduct was to be accounted for in the unfavourable commencement, and brilliant termination of the Nepaul war; but the first impressions throughout India, respecting that warfare, inspired hopes in all who wished the overthrow of the British power. Of that number, the Peishwa, from the time he was guided by the councils of Trimbukjee Dainglia, and especially after having instigated and participated in his crimes, may be considered the chief; it was, however, at one time supposed, that the plan of the general confederacy already mentioned, did not originate with the Mah-rattas, but was suggested through Sindia by the Nepaulese.

(A.D. 1815.)

The Peishwa and Rughoojee Bhonslay assented, with seeming cordiality, to the proposed connection of the British government with Bhopaul, but no agreement ever took place with Wuzeer Mohummud. As long as he was threatened by Sindia, he not only appeared to accede to the terms, but gave out that he was under the protection of the British; but when the danger subsided, he objected to the surrender of a fort, and the negotiation terminated. The descendant, however, of the Nabob of Bhopaul, who in 1779 dared, in defiance of Mahratta hostility, to befriend the English detachment under General Goddard, could be forgiven for an evasion, by which, if he refused protection, he also preserved independence. The failure of this arrangement, prevented the prosecution of any plan of settlement with Govind Rao Nana at this period.

(A.D. 1816.) In the ensuing year, after the termination of the war in Nepaul, the Raja of Jeypoor being much pressed by Umeer Khan, applied for protection from the British government, which Lord Hastings, with a view to the general plan of settlement, was willing to afford; but the Raja broke off the negotiation as soon as he had induced Umeer Khan to withdraw, and like Wuzeer Mohummud, showed that necessity alone prompted his application.

(March 17.) The nabob of Bhopaul, however, died on the 17th March 1816, and Rughoojee (22d.) Bhonslay on the 22d of the same month. Wuzeer Mohummud was succeeded as nabob of Bhopaul by his son Wuzeer Mohummud; and Rughoojee Bhonslay was succeeded by his only son Pursajee. But Pursajee, whose intellects were always weak, fell into a state of idiotism immediately afterwards, and his cousin Moodajee, usually styled Appa Sahib, the son of Venkajee Munnya Bappoo, who commanded at the battle of Argaom, was chosen regent, although not without considerable opposition. To secure an ascendancy, by no means fully established, Appa Sahib applied to the British resident to be admitted to the defensive alliance, before proposed to Rughoojee, which was promptly acceded to, and a treaty was signed 27th May 1816. A stipulated money payment *, calculated to defray the additional expense of field charges for one regiment of cavalry and six thousand infantry, was to be paid by the Nagpoor government, and a contingent of three thousand horse, and two thousand foot was to be maintained by the terms of the alliance. A subsidiary force was immediately formed, and until Appa Sahib was secured in the government, the whole continued in the neighbourhood of the capital; it being agreed, that when the troops were required in advance, or even on ordinary occasions, two battalions only should remain at Nagpoor. By the end of October 1816, Appa Sahib had completely established his authority, but being immediately assailed by the intrigues of the Peishwa, he very soon came into the views of the Poona Court; being A.D. 1817. however, apprehensive that if he threw off the support of the British government during the life-time of Pursajee, a party might endanger his power, he one night caused Pursajee to be secretly strangled, and on the following (Feb. 1.) morning, it was announced and believed, that he had been found dead in his bed.

* Of seven and a half lacks of rupees annually.

In the mean time the aggressions of the Pindharees increased, nor could the British government defend its territory from their ravages, although large armies, at a vast expense, were annually called into the field. During the season of 1815-16, or from October till May inclusive of those years, the Pindharees pushed their depredations to a great extent, and were very successful in eluding the parties sent in pursuit of them. In the ensuing seasons they were less fortunate in their escapes: the British detachments performing extraordinary marches, frequently came up with them, sometimes fell upon them accidentally, and cut off many of their parties. The Pindharees never fought, and seldom defended themselves against British troops; but these successes, though in many instances highly creditable to the zeal and perseverance of the army, were but a mere palliative to this growing and deep-seated evil. It was observable, that for several years, the territory of the Mahrattas was in general respected, and their ravages directed principally against that of the Nizam and the British government.

To prevent suspicion from this circumstance, the Peishwa sent a party of horse to plunder in his own country, who gave themselves out as Pindharees*,

* The fact here recorded is stated on good authority, but it was not suspected or known till after the war; the party was and Sindia professed the greatest desire to suppress them; but his commanders openly countenanced them, and it was manifest, that both Sindia and Holkar, were not only unwilling but unable to restrain their dependants.

The subsidiary treaty with Nagpoor, and the acquisition of the Peishwa's rights, by the treaty of 1817, over his remaining tributaries in Bundelcund, greatly improved the defensive means hitherto adopted by the British government; but the governor-general, before receiving authority from England, had come to the resolution, as early as December 1816, of effectually suppressing the Pindharees; various reasons however induced him to defer carrying his plan into effect, until the close of the ensuing rains; and in the mean time, the Court of Directors had sanctioned offensive operations to the extent of driving the Pindharees from their haunts on the banks of the Nerbuddah and from Malwa.

The views of the Marquis of Hastings were more enlarged; he aimed at their complete suppression by eradicating the predatory system from central India, so as to carry peace to those desolated provinces, and security to the rest of the country.

sent by Trimbukjee in the end of 1816, or very early in 1817, into the southern Concan, where they plundered and committed very great excesses. Having dispersed, they afterwards reassembled in the neighbourhood of Nattapoota. They halted one night in Satara, on their way down, of which place some of them I believe were natives, at all events, they were afterwards well known there.

Berar was supposed to be settled by the late subsidiary alliance; and the Peishwa, crippled by the treaty of Poona, might, it was hoped, see the necessity of refraining from hostilities, secret or avowed, if he wished to retain the territory still left to him. The plan, therefore, of the governor general, embraced principally the possessions of Sindia, Holkar, the Rajpoots, the nabob of Bhopaul, and the principalities of Bundelcund. The former treaties with Sindia and Holkar became virtually annulled, from the period when their dependants began to ravage the territory of the British government. Many proofs of secret hostilities, particularly on the part of Sindia, had come to the knowledge of the governor-general, besides the treaty of confederacy, by which all the Mahrattas engaged to serve and obey the Peishwa; he therefore determined on submitting a plan of a treaty of concert and alliance to those two states,—to declare the treaties of 1805 annulled, so that he might be at liberty to admit the claims of every state, tributary or otherwise, that had any pretensions to independence; and to guarantee rights and possessions in all instances, where the state or principality agreed to make common cause against the predatory system; but he resolved to admit of no neutrality. He adopted as a principle, not to disturb occupancy; but to treat with the existing government, or chiefs, who might be in possession of the country at the time. Thus Umeer Khan, though an undeserving instance of the operation of this general benefit, if he agreed to the proposals, and dismissed his Patans, was to be guaranteed in the Jagheer which he held from Holkar. On these principles, and to the above effect, as soon as the military preparations were in sufficient progress, orders were despatched to the various political agents.

The military plan was equally simple and comprehensive. Armies were to be assembled around the territories described, to close in by simultaneous movements to a common centre, so as to hem in the Pindharees and their abettors at all points; taking care to provide efficient means, for resisting or following up any bodies of the enemy, who might pass through the advancing divisions. For this purpose five divisions were prepared in the Deccan, and placed under the orders of Sir Thomas Hislop, commander-in-chief of the Madras army. One division was held ready in Guzerat, and four divisions with two in reserve, were to co-operate from Bengal under the personal command of the Marquis of Hastings, who took the field that he might be on the scene of operations, and superintend the execution of his arrangements. Sir John Malcolm was appointed political agent of the governor-general with the army of the Deccan, and had also command of one of the divisions destined for active operations in the field. The preparations in the south, as the troops had so far to march, were necessarily public; but those to the northward of Bundelcund, were managed with secrecy, so as not to give the alarm to Sindia, until he should find himself compelled to submit to the intended propositions, or obliged to commence war under great disadvantage.

The forces of the Deccan, including, a sixth or reserve division formed at Adonee under Brigadier-General Pritzler, the Guzerat division under Brigadier-General Grant Keir, and the troops left for the protection of Poona, Hyderabad, and Nagpoor, amounted to upwards of 57,000 regulars, of which number 5255 were cavalry. The army which took the field in Bengal, consisted of about 34,000 regulars, of which the cavalry amounted to nearly 5000. Besides these, there were 13,000 irregular horse on the strength of the Deccan army, and nearly 10,000 with the army of Bengal, many of them good troops.

The 1st divison of the army of the Deccan, under the command of Sir Thomas Hislop, preceded by the 3d division under Sir John Malcolm, was destined to advance into Malwa, and cross the Nerbuddah at Hindia. The 5th division, consisting of the Nagpoor subsidiary force, under Colonel Adams, was to advance by Hooshingabad. The 2d division under Brigadier-General Doveton, and the 4th division under Brigadier-General Smith were to occupy positions, the former in Berar, and the latter in Candeish, and to act according to circumstances. The army of Guzerat was to advance by Dohud into Malwa.

The four principal Bengal divisions were to be assembled at Rewaree, Agra, Sikundra near Kalpee, and at Kalinjer in Bundelcund. The two divisions in reserve were intended as detachments of observation; the one was stationed under Brigadier-General Toone on the upper Saone, the other, under Brigadier-General Hardyman in Rewah, on the upper Nerbuddah. The division from Bundelcund, under the command of General Marshall, was to advance with the Deccan army against the Pindharees. The division from Rewaree, the most northern point, was under the command of Major-General Ochterlony, and was intended to expedite the arrangements with the Rajpoots, and to co-operate in overawing the Patans or attacking the Pindharees. The main body, to be assembled at Sikundra, was under the personal command of the Marquis of Hastings, and was prepared with considerable celerity and secrecy by the middle of October. It was destined to cross the Jumna by a bridge of boats a little above Kalpee, to march due west, and to occupy, in the first instance, a position south of Gwalior, whilst the division from Agra, under Major General Donkin, took up its station at Dholpoor, immediately to the northward. This judicious manœuvre, which gave the command of Sindia's camp with the best part of his artillery, was executed with great success; it disarmed one important member of a hostile confederacy formed against the British government, and compelled Sindia to sign a treaty, which, however unpalatable at the moment, was really ensuring his safety.

In September, it was intimated to Sindia through Captain Close, the resident in his camp, that the army of the Deccan was about to advance for the extirpation of the Pindharees, and as matter of form, passports were requested for the free ingress and egress of the British troops through his territory. At this period Sindia's army at Gwalior was more than usually turbulent, a circumstance principally attributable to a strong excitement, caused by reports of the Peishwa's determination to break with the English, and a general hope that their master was about to join him. Sindia, in reply to the applications for passports, stated that he had not given up his intention of punishing the Pindharees, and requested that the troops might be stopped; but this being declared impossible after what had happened in the last two years, the passports were granted. Before the middle of October, the views of the governor-general were completely unfolded to Sindia, by a paper prepared and sent from the camp at Sikundra. It contained remonstrances on his evasive conduct, for having harboured freebooters, who had plundered the British territory at the very time when he was pledging himself to punish their depredations, and it combated the plea he had advanced of inability to suppress them; if, however, that plea were admitted, as personal exoneration, it constituted a virtual dissolution of the treaty, and more especially annulled those stipulations in regard to his dependants in Rajpootana; because, if unable to restrain such dependants, when they committed aggressions on the British government, the treaties which bound that government to regard them as the subjects of Sindia, could no longer be considered in force. The paper in question further declared, that the British government had no other view than the effectual extinction of all predatory associations; and Captain Close was authorized to communicate the mode, in which

Sindia's aid was solicited for that purpose. He was required to place his troops at the disposal of the British government, to be stationary or employed at its option, with a British officer superintending each of the principal divisions; and any of Sindia's officers, supporting or harbouring freebooters were to be dealt with as rebels. A contingent of five thousand horse, to be employed under the direction of British officers against the Pindharees, and funds allotted for its expenses for three years, from the pension payable by the British government and the tribute demandable from Boondee and Joudpour. The lands recovered from the Pindharees, belonging to Sindia, to be restored to him; and to the rightful owners, in all cases where they co-operated for their suppression; where they did not, the whole to be given up to Sindia. As a security for the fulfilment of the proposed terms, the forts of Hindia and Asseergurh were demanded, but Sindia's flag was to be allowed to fly, and a few of his troops permitted to remain in each of them. The tribute due to Sindia by the Rajpoot principalities was not to be affected by any agreements which the British government might make with them; on the contrary, its due receipt was to be guaranteed to him. A treaty to this effect was signed by Sindia on the 5th November, and ratified by the governor-general on the following day. Hindia was given up according to the terms of the treaty; but Jeswunt Rao Lar, the Killidar of Asseergurh, refused to obey the order of surrender. The three principal divisions of Sindia's army were thus stationed; the first at Ajimere under Bappoojee Sindia, the same person who treacherously deserted on Monson's retreat; the second at Jawud under Jeswunt Rao Bhow; and the third, at Bhadurgurh under Colonel Jean Baptiste. The British officers chosen to superintend those divisions, were, in their respective order, Major Ludlow, Captain Caulfield, and Major Bunce.

Soon after Sindia had signed the treaty, General Donkin's division proceeded to the westward, for the purpose of co-operating in the general plan, but the Marquis of Hastings continued to move about to the southward of Gwalior, to observe the motions of Sindia, who, though compelled to accept the terms imposed, was watching the progress of events in the Deccan, intriguing with the Peishwa, and endeavouring to stir up the Goorkhas of Nepaul to make common cause with the Mahrattas.

In the meantime the political agents of the British government were actively engaged in negotiations with the petty states. The Raja of Kerowlee, a dependant of the Peishwa, to whom the Raja had paid a small tribute of 25.000 rupees a-year, was the first to accept the proffered protection. He acknowledged the supremacy of the British government, was guaranteed in his possessions, and in his particular case the tribute was remitted. He agreed to furnish troops to the extent of his means. This agreement was signed on the ninth November, and on the same day Umeer Khan's agent at Delhi accepted the terms offered for his master. His Jagheer was guaranteed and taken under British protection, on condition of disbanding his followers, except a small number for the internal management of his Jagheer, which were to attend on the requisition of the British government; he was also to relinquish all connection with freebooters, and to give up his artillery for an equitable pecuniary compensation. After the conclusion of the treaty with Sindia, Captain Tod, assistant to the resident in Sindia's camp, was sent on a political mission to the Rajpoot states. The Raj Rana, Zalim Sing of Kotah, who governed the principality in the name of his imprisoned sovereign, with all the prudence and vigour of the ablest of the Mahratta Peishwas, immediately acceded to the terms proposed; blocked up the passes in his country, and furnished a contingent to act with the British troops. A treaty was afterwards concluded with him on the 26th December.

In Bundelcund, Govind Rao Nana had signed a treaty on the first November, by which his tribute and military service, transferred from the Peishwa to the British government by the treaty of Poona, was commuted for the cession of a part of the district of Mahabuk, which lay within the British frontier in Bundelcund. Winaek Rao, the chief who had possession of Sagur, refused the proffered terms. The Raja of Simpthur and the Soobehdar of Jhansee, readily accepted the terms of protection and guarantee, and the nabob of Bhopaul not only accepted them, but entered most heartily into the cause. The political arrangements in Bundelcund were conducted by Mr.

Wauchope; those already mentioned as concluded with the Rajas of Kerowlee, Kotah, and Umeer Khan, were framed by Mr. Metcalfe the resident at Delhi; but that of Umeer Khan, though signed by his agent on the ninth November, was not ratified by himself for some time, as the crafty Patan was then engaged in other negotiations with the Peishwa's agent in his camp, and, like Sindia, was watching the important events which were passing at Poona and Nagpoor. *

* In addition to the authorities quoted for the preceding chapter, I have to acknowledge my obligations to Mr. Prinseps' narrative.

CHAP. XVIII.

FROM A. D. 1817, TO A. D. 1818.

The Peishwa proceeds to Punderpoor — pretended reduction of his military establishment. — Poona auxiliary force. — Sir John Malcolm political agent of the governor-general, arrives at Poona — interview with the Peishwa at Maholy — is deceived by Bajee Rao — system recommended in consequence. — Advance of the divisions of the Deccan army. — Peishwa's proceedings at Maholy — invests Bappoo Gokla with full powers — plan for corrupting the troops — fidelity of the Sepoys — murder of the resident prevented by Gokla. — Festival of the Dussera — alarming appearances at Poona — Peishwa hesitates — arrival of the European regiment. — British troops take up a new position — are suddenly attacked by the Peishwa's army — battle of Khirkee — residency plundered and burnt — violent proceedings of the Peishwa — remonstrances. — Interview between the resident's moonshee and Gokla. — General Smith returns to Poona — flight of the Peishwa. — Poona is occupied — pursuit of the Peishwa — defence of Korygaom. — The Peishwa continues his flight — pursuit taken up by General Pritzler — resumed by General Smith. — Mr. Elphinstone is appointed commissioner, and two divisions of the army of the Deccan placed at his disposal. — Capture of Satara. — The Satara proclamation — new distribution of the force. — General Smith surprises the Peishwa's army at Ashtah — death of Gokla — rescue of the Raja of Satara. — Affairs of Nagpoor — treacherous attack on the British troops. — Battle of Seetabuldee — arrival of General Doveton — Appa Sahib surrenders himself — his guns are stormed and taken — attack on Nagpoor repulsed — Arabs capitulate — operations of General Hardyman and reduction of the northern districts. — Appa Sahib is reinstated. — Revert to affairs in Malwa and Hindoostan.

In the month of July, as soon as the
A. D. arrangements resulting from the treaty of 1817. Poona, were put in a train of adjustment, the Peishwa left his capital, and proceeded on his annual pilgrimage to the temples of Punderpoor, unaccompanied by the resident; which promised to have a good effect, in marking the restoration of confidence on the part of the British government. He immediately reduced his military establishment, chiefly his cavalry; but it was subsequently discovered, that he had given every Sillidar seven months' pay, with orders to remain at his village, and to hold himself in readiness to return when called upon, with as many of his friends as he could collect.

The regular battalions raised by the Peishwa, were transferred as part of the contingent, which was placed under the direction of the British government, and now termed the Poona auxiliary force; but at Bajee Rao's particular request, that he might be able to confer the command on Captain Ford, one of the battalions was to be retained in his own pay, and in lieu of it, a new corps was to be recruited. Every exertion was made to raise the stipulated number of horse; but the Peishwa's emissaries opposed the recruiting by every means they could devise. From Punderpoor, the Peishwa, instead of returning to Poona, proceeded to Maholy, a village near Satara, and a sacred place, at the junction of the Yena and Kistna. During his stay there, Sir John Malcolm arrived at Poona, having, on his appointment as political agent to the governor-general, with his usual great activity, visited all the native courts in the Deccan, for the purpose of consulting with the residents, previously to entering on the scene of operations in Malwa; and the Peishwa, on hearing of his arrival, invited him to a conference at Maholy.

In the course of conversation, the Peishwa complained much of the degraded state in which he was left by the late treaty, lamented the loss of that friendship which had hitherto been only productive of benefit; but enlarged on the gratitude which he felt, and must ever feel, for the protection and support he had experienced from the British government. Sir John Malcolm endeavoured to soothe him, explained in a general manner the plans of the Marquis of Hastings for the suppression of the Pindharees, and strongly recommended him to adopt a line of policy calculated to assure the British government of his sincere desire to promote the alliance, and secure its friendship: — that the restoration of what was already forfeited, he must not expect, but by pursuing the course now recommended, and aiding the operations with his utmost means, he might rely on the justice and liberality of the governor-general, for obtaining considerable acquisitions as a recompence for the fidelity of which he boasted, and which he might now display. The Peishwa's professions were most cordial, and communicated, as usual, with so great an appearance of candour and good sense, that Sir John Malcolm was completely deceived, and returned to Poona, in the full conviction that Bajee Rao would now heartily engage in the British cause; and that by encouraging him to raise troops, and treating him with perfect confidence, he would prove a faithful ally. Mr. Elphinstone, though he expressed his opinions, would not oppose the liberal system recommended by Sir John Malcolm; but he contemplated and foretold a different result, especially on considering the tempting opportunity which would be afforded, by the advance of General Smith's division to the frontier, and the exposed state of the handful of troops at Poona.

The forts of Singurh, Raigurh, and Poorundhur, were restored to the Peishwa during the month of August. The excessive heavy rains of this season, prolonged to an unusually late date, delayed the advance of the whole Deccan army. Brigadier-General Smith had transported his division across the Ghore by the 9th October, and by the 20th, occupied convenient positions close to the Chandore range of hills, with a view of advancing into Candeish, as soon as it should appear requisite. A battalion of light infantry, with some auxiliary horse were left between Seroor and Ahmednugur; one auxiliary battalion was stationed for the protection of the Seroor cantonment, and the Peishwa's own corps, consisting of from four to five hundred men, remained at Dhapooree, in its first cantonment, a few miles to the north-west of Poona. The Company's European regiment from Bombay was to be held in readiness to join the brigade at Poona about the end of October.

The Peishwa did not return to his capital until the end of September. During his stay at Maholy, he was most actively engaged in those schemes he had long meditated against the British government; but by the advice of Bappoo Gokla, he had determined on changing his plans of covert hostility to an open attack, as soon as he should be prepared. The recommendation of Sir John Malcolm to recruit his army, for the purpose of aiding in the Pindharee war, afforded an excellent cloak to his designs. Gokla was now the leader of all his measures, and Bajee Rao was induced to give him a formal writing under his own seal, which he confirmed on oath, binding himself to be implicitly directed by his counsel, and investing him with the the full powers of his government. This measure seems to have been adopted, not merely as a security to Gokla, but as a means of allaying the mistrust which the sillidars entertained towards Bajee Rao, and was the condition on which several of the Jagheerdars pledged themselves to stand by him. This circumstance, though reported in the country, was not fully ascertained until after the commencement of hostilities. Bappoo Gokla received ten millions of rupees, nearly a million sterling, to assist in the expence of preparation. From the time of his first determination to break with the English, Bajee Rao restored the lands of many of his Jagheerdars, and, for several years, had been endeavouring to render himself more popular with all classes of his subjects. He unfolded his intention, of going to war with the English, to the Raja of Satara, and, whilst he exacted from him and his mother an oath of secrecy and support, he sent them and all their family into strict confinement in Wassota. His recruiting went forward with remarkable activity; — his forts also were garrisoned, stored, and repaired; and orders were issued to prepare his fleet. Many Bheels and Ramoosees were engaged in his interest by Trimbukjee Dainglia; and special missions were despatched to Nagpoor, and the camps of Sindia, Holkar, and Umeer Khan; but the schemes which he personally directed were the seduction of the native troops, and the assassination of the resident. His plan of corrupting the troops extended even to the European officers; and the agent employed for the latter purpose, was Jeswunt Rao Ghorepuray, who, for many years, had resided at Poona, was intimately acquainted with many of the officers, and since the treaty of Surjee Angengaom, had received a pension of 1000 rupees a month from the British government.* Jeswunt Rao had experienced much kindness from Mr. Elphinstone; but, at this period, in consequence of some petty intrigues, in which he had made an improper use of his name, the resident was obliged to treat him with unusual reserve. Bajee Rao, therefore, judging the opportunity favourable, sent for Jeswunt Rao, and after many promises, exacted an oath of secrecy, and communicated the plan for corrupting the European officers; a commission which Jeswunt Rao, although he well knew its futility, like a true Mahratta, readily undertook, upon receiving an advance of 50.000 rupees. So far he kept his oath, as to say nothing of these circumstances*; but Jeswunt Rao had a great personal regard for Mr. Elphinstone, and throughout the rise and progress of the Peishwa's preparations, gave early and constant warning of what might be expected. Jeswunt Rao Ghorepuray was the only man of family, who, at the rupture, openly espoused the British cause; but of all its adherents, none was of so much importance, or rendered himself so eminently useful, as a Bramin named Ballajee Punt Nathoo†, whose vigilance, judgment, fidelity, and firmness, at that trying period, entitle him to be mentioned in this place.

* It may be here mentioned, that Jeswunt Rao Ghorepuray had a just claim to the fort and valley of Sondoor, held by his brother Khundee Rao Ghorepuray, but which Jeswunt Rao had made over to the Peishwa, in exchange for other villages. The British government approved of the transaction, and promised at the time the transfer was made, to put the Peishwa in possession of Sondoor, but various causes prevented the fulfilment of this promise, until the end of October of this year, when Sondoor surrendered to a part of the reserve under Colonel Thomas Munro, detached from the force of Brigadier-General Pritzler for the express purpose.

* Independently of its having been found in the Peishwa's accounts, I became acquainted with the circumstances from an individual then high in Bajee Rao's confidence, whose name it would be improper to publish.

† At my particular request, he wrote a very correct and voluminous history of his own times, in which he quotes his authorities. It was translated for me by my friend Mr. William Richard Morris, of the Bombay Civil Service, whose valuable assistance I have already acknowledged, but the original MS. is in possession of its author, who, for various prudential reasons, was desirous of retaining it. Ballajee Punt Nathoo was the carcoon of the ill-requited Khundee Rao Rastia, who at his death appointed him guardian to his children. He endeavoured to interest Colonel Close in their behalf, was in the habit of coming much to the residency, and at last attached himself to Mr. Elphinstone, openly embraced the British cause, and proved himself well entitled to the munificent reward which was conferred upon him, before Mr. Elphinstone assumed the government of Bombay.

The reports of corrupting the troops were brought from all quarters; some of the Sepoys indignantly refused what to them were splendid offers; and others, pretending to acquiesce, communicated the circumstances to their officers; but the extent of the intrigues could not be ascertained, and they at last became alarming, even to those who knew the fidelity of the Bombay Sepoys, from the circumstance of the Peishwa's having many of their families and relations in his power, against whom he commenced a system of persecution, which he threatened to perpetuate if the Sepoys refused to desert the British service.

It was the Peishwa's wish, previous to the commencement of hostilities, to invite Mr. Elphinstone to a conference, and murder him; but this plan was opposed by Gokla, who, though he concurred in that of corrupting the Sepoys, and was most sanguine in his belief of its complete success, disdained to perpetrate so base a crime, especially as Mr. Elphinstone had, more than once, proved himself his friend. But Bajee Rao was unwilling to relinquish a favourite scheme of personal revenge, and proposed to assassinate the resident as he rode out; or, should that fail, to get Trimbukjee, with a body of Bheels, to endeavour to surprise the residency by night, whilst a simultaneous attack should be made on the cantonment.

The last interview which took place between

Mr. Elphinstone and the Peishwa was on
(Oct. 14.) the 14th of October, when, although the latter adverted to the loss of territory and reputation he had suffered by the late treaty, he continued to express grateful acknowledgments for the former friendship of the British government. On Mr. Elphinstone's mentioning how anxiously the advance of the troops was desired, Bajee Rao repeated the assurances which he had of late frequently made through his ministers, that his troops should be sent to the frontier, to co-operate against the Pindharees immediately after the Dussera.

The festival of the Dussera took place on (Oct. 19.) the 19th October, and was the most splendid military spectacle ever witnessed since the accession of Bajee Rao. Two circumstances were particularly observable on this occasion; a marked degree of slight towards the resident, and, at the moment of the Peishwa's quitting the ground, a large compact mass of horse, under an officer named Naroo Punt Aptey, galloped down, as if they had intended to charge the flank of the British troops, but wheeled off as they came close up. The intention of this manoeuvre was to show the Sepoys their insignificance, when compared to this host of Mahratta spears, and might be supposed to have its effect in aiding the Peishwa's intrigues. It would have been difficult to convince the Mahrattas, in that vaunting moment, that of the three weak battalions, then peaceably and unsuspectingly standing before them, one should, in less than three months, repulse their whole army.

(Oct. 25.) After the Dussera every day became more interesting, and by the 25th parties of troops were coming into Poona from all quarters, by day and by night. General Smith's force was now at a distance, and the European regiment from Bombay could hardly be expected in less than ten days. The position occupied by the brigade almost joined the northern environs of Poona: it had been originally taken up by Sir Arthur Wellesley for the protection of the city, but circumstances were now reversed. Gardens and inclosures, with high prickly pear hedges, ran in many places within half musket shot of the lines, affording not only every advantage for the attack of the Arabs and irregulars, but, in case of disaffection amongst the Sepoys, every facility to desert. Small parties of horse came out, and encamped round the British cantonment, and in a few days were augmented to large bodies, whilst a strong corps of Gosaeen infantry occupied a position on one of the flanks. The Sungum being at some distance from the cantonment, the Vinchorkur's horse, with some infantry and guns, encamped between the residency and the village of Bambooree: but, besides these preparations, all reports concurred in representing that an immediate attack was meditated.

For several nights the Peishwa and his advisers had deliberated on the advantage of surprising the troops before the arrival of the European regiment; and for this purpose, on the 28th October, their guns were yoked, their horses saddled, and their infantry in readiness. This intelligence was brought to Mr. Elphinstone a little before midnight of the 28th, and for a moment it became a question, whether self-defence, under all circumstances, did not require that the attack should be anticipated. It was an hour of anxiety:—the British cantonment and the residency were perfectly still, and the inhabitants slept in the complete repose inspired by confidence in that profound peace to which they had been long accustomed; but in the Peishwa's camp, south of the town, all was noise and uproar. Mr. Elphinstone had as yet betrayed no suspicion of the Peishwa's treachery, and, as he now stood listening on the terrace *, he probably thought that, in thus exposing the troops to be cut off without even the satisfaction of dying with their arms in their hands, he had followed the system of confidence, so strongly recommended, to a culpable extremity: but other motives influenced his conduct at this important moment. He was aware how little faith the other Mahratta princes placed in Bajee Rao, and that Sindia, who knew him well, would hesitate to engage in hostilities, until the Peishwa had fairly committed himself. Apprized of the governor-general's secret plans and his intended movements on Gwalior, which many circumstances might have concurred to postpone, Mr. Elphinstone had studiously avoided every appearance

* As I was the only person with Mr. Elphinstone during that night, though I here narrate simply what I saw and heard, some apology to him may be necessary, for publishing without his sanction, what relates to him personally, but I trust that the occasion is sufficiently interesting to the public, and honourable to him, to authorize my having done so.

which might affect the negotiations in Hindoostan, or by any preparation and apparent alarm on his part, give Sindia's secret emissaries at Poona reason to believe that war was inevitable. To have sent to the cantonment at that hour would have occasioned considerable stir; and in the meantime, by the reports of the spies, the Peishwa was evidently deliberating; the din in the city was dying away; the night was passing; and the motives which had hitherto prevented preparation, determined Mr. Elphinstone to defer it some hours longer. Major J. A. Wilson, the officer in command of the European regiment, on its march from Bombay, had already been made acquainted with the critical state of affairs, and was hastening forward.

(Oct. 29.) Next morning, however, the officer in command of the brigade at Poona was requested to keep the men ready in their lines, but with as little appearance of bustle as possible. At three o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Elphinstone sent a message to the Peishwa, mentioning that his Highness's horsemen were crowding in upon the position of the brigade; that such a mode of encamping had never been practised or permitted by British troops, and therefore the commanding officer confined his men to their cantonment until those of his Highness should be withdrawn, lest, by their contiguity, disputes might arise between them. This message was delivered by Captain Ford, and created a great sensation. Gokla recommended that the attack should not be delayed, the Peishwa hesitated, stating that he wished a little more time to make sure of corrupting the Sepoys; the European regiment was still, as he believed, at a great distance, and every hour was adding to his army; another night was thus wasted in consultation, and at four o'clock of the following afternoon, the European regiment, by great exertions, marched into the cantonment. (Oct. 30.)

Mr. Elphinstone now determined on removing the troops from their present very bad position, to another in many respects more eligible, at the village of Khirkee, four miles distant, which had been early pointed out by General Smith, as the proper one to be occupied in case of an apprehended rupture. The troops accordingly took up their ground at Khirkee on the 1st November, and the residency being close to the town, two hundred and fifty men were sent for its protection. (Nov. 1.)

The Peishwa was apprized of the intended movement; but his army supposed that the British troops had withdrawn from fear, and was much encouraged in consequence. The cantonment was plundered; an officer*, on his route to Bombay, was attacked, wounded, and robbed, in open day; the language of the Peishwa's ministers was that of perfect slight; his troops every where began to insult individuals as they passed; and they continued to push forward their parties as if in defiance. They proposed forming a camp betwixt the old cantonment and the new position, and a party of horse moved down for the purpose. — A second message was therefore sent to the Peishwa, begging that the motives of the movement might not be misconstrued; for, if the British troops were pressed upon, as in the old position, those of his Highness must be treated as enemies. The Peishwa now believed, from the reports of his emissaries, that the Sepoys (Nov. 4.) were completely seduced.* On the 4th November, Moro Dixit, the minister, who had formed an attachment to Major Ford and was anxious to save him, communicated this circumstance, and that his master was determined to cut off the British detachment without sparing a man.† He advised him to stand neuter, when his property should be spared and his family protected; but on Captain Ford's telling him he would immediately join his countrymen, he took an affectionate leave of him, promising, at all events, that he would do his best to befriend his family; but as there was, he observed, no saying what turn the war might ulti-

* Lieutenant Shaw. — Veesram Sing, a horseman of Bajee Rao's personal retinue, was the individual who speared him.

* Many of the Sepoys behaved with admirable fidelity; one native officer, Jemadar Shaik Hoossein, of the 2d battalion 6th regiment, on being tampered with, encouraged the overtures, by the advice of his Adjutant, Lieut. Robert Billamore, who was instructed on the subject. The Peishwa sent for the Jemadar, made him great promises, and desired a carcoon to give him 10,000 rupees, but the latter gave the Jemadar one-half and kept the other himself. The Jemadar brought the money to his officer in a bag of rice, just before hostilities commenced.

† Dr. Coats and Captain Ford, the latter only if he stood neutral, were to be the sole exceptions. Dr. Coats had attended the Peishwa in an illness, had gratuitously performed many cures amongst the people of the country, and had spread vaccination for many miles around; the anecdote proves that Bajee Rao was not wholly devoid of gratitude.

mately take, he exacted a like promise from Captain Ford, which was readily granted. Until this communication was made, Captain Ford, though in daily intercourse with the city, and made acquainted with the circumstances by Mr. Elphinstone, was perfectly confident that the Peishwa had no intention of going to war, and his astonishment and alarm were proportionally great. The Peishwa's reason for still wishing to procrastinate, was the expected arrival of the Putwurdhuns, and Appa Dessaye Nepankur; matters, however, were brought to a crisis before they could join his army. General Smith, who continued in the position already described, on hearing what had taken place, was prepared to expect a rupture; and therefore, without waiting for orders from Sir Thomas Hislop, concentrated his force at Phooltamba, on the Godavery, and ordered the light battalion to fall back to Seroor; it was also settled between him and the resident, that in case the communication were interrupted, the general might conclude that the troops at Poona were attacked. On the 3d (Nov. 3.) November, Mr. Elphinstone directed the light battalion and a party of auxiliary horse, stationed at Seroor, to move to Poona. As soon as the news of these arrangements reached the Peishwa, he determined to delay the attack no longer. His preparations began about seven (Nov. 5.) o'clock on the morning of the 5th; but in the early part of the day, he sent out several messages calculated to lull the resident's suspicions; such as, that his troops were alarmed by hearing that those at Khirkee were under arms; that he was about to perform a religious ceremony, at the temple of Parbuttee, and that the troops were drawn out, in honour of the occasion, to form a street as he passed. In the afternoon, when all was in readiness, the whole of his principal officers having assembled at his palace, Wittoojee Gaekwar, a personal servant of the Peishwa, was despatched to Mr. Elphinstone, by Gokla's advice, to inform him that the assembly of troops at Poona was very offensive to the Peishwa; to desire him to send away the European regiment, to reduce the native brigade to its usual strength, when it must occupy a position which the Peishwa would point out, and that if these demands were not complied with, he would withdraw from Poona and never return. Mr. Elphinstone denied the Peishwa's right to require the removal of the European regiment, explained the reason of his having called in the light battalion, and recommended that the Peishwa should send his troops to the frontier as he had promised, in which case all cause of complaint would be removed: — there was a good deal more passed, as the conversation, on the part of the messenger, was intended to engage as much attention as possible; but he at last withdrew, warning the resident of the bad consequence of his refusal. In the meantime the Peishwa's officers at the palace were despatched to their troops; Bajee Rao, in person, proceeded to the Parbuttee*, and Wittoojee Gaekwar had scarcely quitted the residency, when intelligence was brought that the army was moving out on the west side of the city. There was a momentary consultation about defending the residency, but it was instantly abandoned as impracticable, and it was determined to retire to Khirkee, for which purpose the nature of the ground afforded great facility. The river Moola betwixt the Sungum and the village of Khirkee forms two curves like the letter S inverted. The residency and the village were both on the same side of the river, but at the former there was a ford, and near the latter, a bridge; so that the party, by crossing at the ford, had the river between them and the Peishwa's troops the greater part of the way. From the residency no part of the Mahratta army was visible, excepting bodies of infantry which were assembling along the tops of the adjoining heights, with the intention of cutting off the residency from the camp, and having this object in view, they did not molest individuals. On ascending one of the eminences on which they were forming, the plain beneath presented at that moment a most imposing spectacle. This plain, then covered with grain, terminates on the west, by a range of small hills, while on the east it is bounded by the city of Poona, and the small hills already partially occupied by the infantry. A mass of cavalry covered nearly the whole extent of it, and towards the city, endless streams of horsemen were pouring from every avenue.*

* Situated on a hill on the south side of Poona, and already mentioned.

* Those only who have witnessed the Bore in the Gulf of Cambay, and have seen in perfection the approach of that roar-

Mr. Elphinstone had personally reconnoitred the ground in front of the village of Khirkee, and ascertained that there was a ford between that village and Dhapooree, which, although difficult, was practicable for six pounders, three of which, manned by native artillery-men, belonged to the auxiliary force, and was attached to Captain Ford's corps. It had been arranged, in case of an attack, that Captain Ford was to join the brigade under Lieutenant-Colonel Burr; and Mr. Elphinstone had been at pains to explain, to all concerned, the advantage of always acting on the offensive against Mahrattas. When the party was fording at the residency, a messenger was despatched to warn the troops of the approach of the enemy. Lieutenant-colonel Burr the officer in command wished to have acted on the defensive, but as the message required him to move down and attack the Peishwa's army, he immediately sent the battalion companies of the 2d battalion 6th regiment to protect the stores, ammunition, and followers in the village of Khirkee, left his camp standing, and instantly ing tide, can form the exact idea presented to the author at sight of the Peishwa's army. It was towards the afternoon of a very sultry day; there was a dead calm, and no sound was heard, except the rushing, the trampling and neighing of the horses, and the rumbling of the gun wheels. The effect was heightened, by seeing the peaceful peasantry flying from their work in the fields, the bullocks breaking from their yokes, the wild antelopes startled from sleep, bounding off, and then turning for a moment to gaze on this tremendous inundation, which swept all before it, levelled the hedges and standing corn, and completely overwhelmed every ordinary barrier as it moved.

marched down by the high road for about a mile;—then wheeling to the right, he moved in the direction of Dhapooree, to facilitate the junction of Captain Ford's corps, and bring his front parallel to that of the enemy. In a few minutes the expected corps was seen approaching; the resident's party had joined, and Colonel Burr advanced to the attack. The Mahrattas, who had sent on their skirmishers, some of whom had already suffered from the fire of the light infantry, were surprised by this forward movement in troops whom they had been encouraged to believe, were already spiritless; and a damp, which had been spreading over the whole army by the accidental breaking of the staff of the Juree Putka before they left the city, was now much increased. Gokla, with the true spirit of a soldier, was riding from rank to rank animating, encouraging, and taunting as he thought most effectual, but the Peishwa's heart failed him; and after the troops had advanced he sent a message to Gokla desiring him "to be sure not to fire the first gun." At this moment the British troops were halted, their guns were unlimbering,—it was the pause of preparation, and of anxiety on both sides; but Gokla, observing the messenger from the Peishwa, and suspecting the nature of his errand, instantly commenced the attack by opening a battery of nine guns, detaching a strong corps of rocket-camels to the right, and pushing forward his cavalry to the right and left. The British troops were soon nearly surrounded by horse; but the Mahratta infantry, owing to this rapid advance, were left considerably in the rear, except a regular battalion under a Portuguese, named De Pento, which had marched by a shorter route concealed for a time under cover of the enclosures, and were now forming with apparent steadiness, immediately in front of the 1st battalion 7th regiment, and the grenadiers of the 2d battalion 6th:—no sooner, however, were their red coats and colours exposed to view of the English Sepoys, than the latter with one accord pushed forward to close, and in their eagerness got detached from the rest of the line. Gokla, hoping that they might either be disposed to come over, or that he might be able to take advantage of their impetuosity, prepared a select body of 6000 horse, which, accompanied by the Juree Putka, and headed by several persons of distinction, had been held in reserve near his left, and were now ordered to charge.* The Mahratta guns ceased firing to let them pass; and they came down at speed, in a diagonal direction across the British front. Giving their fire, and receiving that of the line, they rode right at the 7th. Colonel Burr took his post with the colours of that corps; it had long been his own battalion, he had "formed and led" it for many years, he was then suffering under a severe and incurable malady†, but he showed his wonted cool-

* Naroo Punt Apty, Mahdoo Rao Rastia, and Aba Poorundhuree, were all in this charge. Gokla advanced a considerable distance with them, until his horse was wounded: he told Naroo Punt that most of the Sepoys were friendly, and would fire over his head.

† Colonel Burr had lost the use of his side from a paralytic stroke, and both mind and body were impaired, but he was ness and firmness in this moment of peril. He was the first to perceive the moving mass: he had just time to stop the pursuit of De Pento's battalion, already routed, and to call to the men, who could not be dressed in line, to reserve their fire, and prove themselves worthy of all his care. Fortunately there was a deep slough, of which neither party were aware, immediately in front of the British left. The foremost of the horses rolled over, and many, before they could be pulled up, tumbled over those in front; the fire, hitherto reserved, was now given with great effect, numbers fell, the confusion became extreme, and the force of the charge was completely checked: a very small proportion came in contact with the bayonets, a few continued the attack in the rear, but many turned back; some galloped round the left as if to plunder the camp, but they were driven off by a few shots from two iron guns at Khirkee, and the Sepoys had nearly repulsed the attack before a company of Europeans could arrive to their support. This failure completely disconcerted the Mahrattas; they began to drive off their guns; their infrantry retired from the distant position they occupied, and upon the advance of the British line, the whole field was cleared. The brigade returned to its position at Khirkee after night-fall, and the light battalion and auxiliary horse joined it next morning. The report of their arrival, and the effect of foremost in the post of honour. On this occasion, two of his attendants were shot by his side, his horse's head was grazed by a ball, and another went through his hat.

the forward movement, deterred Gokla from renewing the attack. The Mahrattas in Captain Ford's battalion deserted, and a part of the newly raised auxiliary horse were, at their own desire, permitted to quit the British camp; but not one Sepoy of the regular service left his colours. The number of the British troops engaged at the affair of Khirkee, including Captain Ford's battalion, was 2,800 rank and file, of whom about 800 were Europeans. Their loss was comparatively trifling, amounting only to eighty-six men in killed and wounded, fifty of whom were of the Sepoys on the left. The Mahratta army consisted of 18,000 horse and 8000 foot, with 14 guns. * They suffered considerably, having lost five hundred men in killed and wounded; and though the proportion of horses killed on the spot was inconsiderable, a very great number were disabled. Amongst the sufferers was the minister Moro Dixit, who by rather a strange fatality, was mortally wounded by a grape shot, from one of the guns attached to the battalion of his friend Captain Ford.

Hostilities were no sooner commenced, than the ferocious and vindictive character of Bajee Rao's previous orders became apparent, from the proceedings in every direction; probably before he had time to stop them. The residency was plundered and burnt, and of the resident's library and private apartment, not one stone was left upon another; the families and followers of the troops who fell into the hands of the Mahrattas, were robbed, beaten, and frequently mutilated; the gardens were destroyed, the trees were torn from the roots, and the graves were dug up. An engineer officer, on survey, was attacked and killed; two brothers, of the name of Vaughan, one of them a Captain in the Madras army, were taken while travelling between Bombay and Poona, near the village of Tullygaom, and though they made no resistance, were most barbarously hanged under the superintendence of a Bramin, named Babjee Punt Gokla.* These atrocities, excepting the plunder of the adherents and servants of the British government, were not perpetrated under Bappoo Gokla's sanction; but as he had been intrusted with the entire powers of the state, Mr. Elphinstone took the first opportunity of intimating to him, that any individual, however exalted his rank, who might order the death of a British prisoner, should answer for it in his own person.

* This number is given from the actual returns, and does not include 5000 horse and 2000 foot stationed with the Peishwa at Parbuttee, so that Bajee Rao had already collected thirty-three thousand men at Poona.

Two officers, cornets Hunter and Morrison of the Madras establishment, on the route from Hyderabad to Poona with a small escort, were attacked when they approached the latter place, and after a manful resistance, being compelled to surrender, they were confined in a hill-fort; some small parties who stood on the defensive in various situations, and surrendered on terms, were permitted to join the British camp. Amongst this number was the resident's moonshee, who having a party of Arabs in his pay, defended his house in the city for several days, until Gokla interposed, and sent for him. During their interview, at which several persons were present, Gokla showed him the Peishwa's paper investing him with the full powers of his government, and after some conversation observed, "I have given you protection because your master was an old friend of mine, we are now enemies; the trial we have already had" (alluding to the action of the 5th,) "has not turned out as I expected, but tell him we shall persevere: we may have taken our shrouds about our heads, but we are determined to die with our swords in our hands."

* This person is now a prisoner, in a wooden cage, in the fort of Singurh. Bajee Rao disavowed the murder of the Vaughans, but acknowledged that the residency was destroyed by his orders.

As soon as General Smith found the communication cut off, he advanced on Poona. From the time his division quitted Seroor, he was followed by flying parties of Mahrattas, who, owing to his want of cavalry, harassed his march. He (Nov. 13.) arrived on the evening of the 13th, and pre- (Nov. 15.) parations were made to attack the Peishwa before daylight of the 15th. His army having obtained a considerable addition by the junction of most of the southern Jagheerdars, had come out a few days before, and encamped (Nov. 10.) with its left on the late cantonment of the British troops, and its right stretching along the Hyderabad road for several miles. The intended attack, however, on the morning of the 15th, was postponed by General Smith, in consequence of unforeseen difficulties at the ford. About sunset on the evening of the 16th, an advanced brigade was ordered to cross the ford, and take up a position to the east of the Peishwa's army, at the village of Ghorepuray, for the purpose of co-operating in an intended attack on the ensuing morning: it was opposed by a body of the Peishwa's infantry, supported by parties of horse and two guns, but having succeded in getting to its station, though with the loss of eighty-four men, in killed and wounded, it was no longer molested during the night. In the morning, when General Smith moved towards the camp, he found it abandoned, and that the Peishwa had fled towards Satara. During the day the city was surrendered, and the greatest care being taken on this, as on every occasion, by General Smith for the protection of the peaceable part of the community, order and tranquillity were soon re-established. General Smith remained at Poona for five days, during which time the communication with Bombay was opened, and a party being detached for the purpose, succeeded in capturing several guns in the neighbourhood of the fort of Singurh. Some of the inhabitants of Poona, who fled as usual with their property towards the hill-forts, were sufferers on this occasion, as a great quantity of baggage was taken at the same time with the guns, and became the booty of the army.

On the 22d November, General Smith, having been joined by a regiment of native cavalry, commenced pursuing the Peishwa, who remained at Maholy, and during his stay there, sent a party to Wassota, for the purpose of bringing the Raja of Satara, his mother and brothers to his camp, but he had quitted Maholy prior to the Raja's arrival, owing to the approach of General Smith, before whom he fled to Punderpoor, and thence, turning up the bank of the Beema, he continued his flight until he ascended the Lag Ghaut, north of Joonere, where he occupied a position at Bamunwaree. This part of the country is exceedingly strong, with mountains on all sides, and the passes were stockaded by Trimbukjee Dainglia, who here joined the Peishwa with a reinforcement. The Raja and his family were brought into his camp whilst on the route from Punderpoor. General Smith followed the Peishwa until he was past Poona, when he proceeded to Seroor: he there deposited his battering train, and heavy baggage, and left a battalion of native infantry, and a body of auxiliary horse, to reinforce the station; he then proceeded by Ahmednugur down the Nimbadewra Ghaut, and up the bank of the Paira to Sungumnere. Finding he had got to the northward of the Peishwa, he ascended the Wursura Ghaut, and here he divided his force, sending back a part by Ahmednugur, and, with a light division, continuing the pursuit of the Peishwa, who fled to the southward as soon as he heard of General Smith's arrival at Sungumnere, giving out that he intended to attack Poona. Great exertions were, therefore, made to come up with him; but, in the meantime, the most remarkable event of the war took place from the following circumstances. General Pritzler, it must be premised, was, at this time, advancing with the reserve division of the Deccan army from Adonee towards Punderpoor for the purpose of co-operating in the pursuit of the Peishwa; and Smith, deeming it probable that he should get to the northward of the Peishwa, as in fact he did, and that the Mahratta army, afraid of being driven back upon Pritzler, might descend into the Concan, where there was a small force fitted out by the Bombay government, under Lieutenant-Colonel Prother, employed in reducing the country, and which might thus be exposed to be cut off, it became necessary to provide against such an event. Accordingly Lieutenant-Colonel Burr, who was stationed at Poona, was directed, in case he should have positive information that the Peishwa had descended into the Concan, to detach the 2d battalion 6th regiment from his own immediate command, to reinforce Lieutenant-Colonel Prother; and in that case, he was authorized to call in to Poona the 2d battalion 1st regiment, lately left by General Smith to reinforce the cantonment at Seroor. But when the Peishwa commenced his flight to the southward, Colonel Burr, hearing that he meditated an attack on Poona, sent off an express for the 2d battalion 1st regiment, to reinforce himself.

(Dec. 31.) The battalion, on receipt of this application, commenced its march from Seroor on the last day of the year, at eight o'clock in the evening. It consisted of little more than 500 rank and file, and was supported by two six pounders, well manned by twenty-four Europeans of the Madras artillery, under a serjeant and a lieutenant. It was also accompanied by 300 of the newly raised irregular horse, and the whole were under the command of Captain Francis Staunton. Having marched all night, by ten o'clock on the morning of new year's day, Captain Staunton reached the high ground above the village of Korygaom, on the Beema, where he beheld the whole of the Mahratta horse, consisting of about 25,000, on the opposite side of the river. He continued his march towards the bank, and the Peishwa's troops believed that he intended to ford, but as soon as he had gained the neighbourhood of the village, he immediately took post in it. Korygaom is a moderate sized village, immediately overhanging the steep bank of the Beema, but owing to the immense beds of the Indian rivers, which are never filled except during the rains, the channel occupied but a small part of the space between the banks, so that the village was fifty or sixty yards from the water. There is a mud wall which, at one time, probably surrounded the village, but is now full of large breaches on the side next the river, and on the east it is completely open. * Most of the Peishwa's infantry, in number about 5000, had gone on in advance towards the Bhore Ghaut, east of Poona; but on first descrying the battalion, immediate orders were sent to recal them. As soon as they arrived, three bodies, of six hundred choice men in each, consisting of Arabs, Gosaeens, and

A. D. 1818. (Jan. 1.)

* I write this description of the village from recollection; I have not seen it for seven or eight years: not indeed since the morning after Captain Staunton evacuated it, when, though I carefully examined that scene of recent and desperate conflict, I at that time had no intention of publishing an account of it.

regular infantry, mixed together, advanced on three different points, under cover of the bank of the river, and supported by two guns, to storm the village. A continued shower of rockets was at the same time poured into it, and many of the houses were set on fire. Captain Staunton had selected a commanding position for the guns; but unfortunately the interior of the village was not sufficiently reconnoitred, as there was a strong square enclosure commanding most of the streets, of which the enemy obtained possession, and whence they could not be dislodged. The village was immediately surrounded by horse and foot, and the storming party was supported by fresh troops. All access to the river was speedily cut off, Captain Staunton was destitute of provisions, and this detachment, already fatigued from want of rest and a long night march, now, under a burning sun, without food or water, began a struggle as trying as ever was maintained by the British in India. Every foot of ground was disputed, several streets were taken and retaken, but more than half the European officers being wounded, the Arabs made themselves masters of a small temple, towards the east side of the village, generally used as a choultry, where three of the officers were lying wounded. Assistant-Surgeon Wingate, one of their number, got up, and went out, but was immediately stabbed by the Arabs, and his body cruelly mangled. Lieutenant Swanston, who had two severe wounds, had the presence of mind to advise his remaining companion to suffer the Arabs to rifle them unresistingly, which they did, but committed no further violence; and in the meantime, a party of the battalion under Lieutenant Jones and Assistant-Surgeon Wyllie, arrived to their rescue, retook the choultry, avenged the death of Mr. Wingate, and carried their companions to a place of greater safety. The sufferings of the wounded became extreme from thirst; and the men who continued the conflict were fainting, or nearly frantic, from the dreadful privation of water. Some of the artillery men, all of whom bore a very conspicuous part in this glorious defence, proposed to Captain Staunton that they should surrender if terms could be obtained. His determined refusal did not satisfy them, but Lieutenant Chisholm their officer being killed, the enemy encouraged by this circumstance, rushed upon one of the guns and took it. Lieutenant Thomas Pattinson adjutant of the battalion, lying mortally wounded, being shot through the body, no sooner heard that the gun was taken, than getting up he called to the grenadiers, "once more to follow him," and seizing a musket by the muzzle, rushed into the middle of the Arabs striking them down right and left *, until a second ball through his body completely disabled him. Lieutenant Pattinson had been nobly seconded; the Sepoys, thus led, were irresistible, the gun was retaken, and the dead Arabs, literally lying above

* Lieut. Pattinson was a very powerful man, being 6 feet 7 inches in height; nothing could exceed his heroic conduct on the memorable occasion where he received his wounds; he did not expire until the regiment reached Seroor, but unfortunately, in his last moments, he laboured under an impression that his corps had been defeated, which caused him great distress.

each other, proved how desperately it had been defended. The body of Lieutenant Chisholm was found by his gun with the head cut off; Captain Staunton judiciously took advantage of the circumstance, by pointing it out to the men, and telling them "such was the way all would be served, who fell dead or alive into the hands of the Mahrattas," on which they declared "they would die to a man," and the conflict was resumed, by all, with the most determined valour. Captain Staunton, Lieutenant Jones, and Assistant-Surgeon Wyllie were the only officers who remained fit for duty, and manfully persevered in continuing the defence. Their situation towards evening was very hopeless; Captain Staunton had apprized Colonel Burr of the difficulties he laboured under, and an unavailing attempt from Poona had been made for his relief. As the night fell, however, the vigour of the attack relaxed, and the men were able to procure a supply of water. By nine o'clock at night the firing ceased, and the village was evacuated by the Peishwa's troops.* Next morning (Jan. 2.) the Mahratta army was still hovering round the village, and Captain Staunton opened his guns upon them as soon as he could see. They appeared to draw off in the direction of Poona; but they had heard of General Smith's approach, who was hastening forward with a very small force

* To commemorate this glorious defence, a monument was erected by government, recording the names of those who fell; the corps was made grenadiers, as their 1st battalion had been, for the defence of Mangalore, and "Mangalore and Korygaom" became the animating motto of the regiment.

in hopes that the Peishwa might be encouraged to make a stand; but Captain Staunton, not knowing of General Smith's advance, and having reason to believe the enemy was in wait for him on the route to Poona, gave out that it was his intention to proceed thither. As soon as it was dark, however, taking as many of the wounded with him as he could carry, he moved out of the village at first in the direction of Poona; then changing his route, he retreated to Seroor, where he arrived next morning, with the loss of one hundred and seventy-five men in killed and wounded, of whom twenty were of the small detachment of artillery. Besides these, about one third of the auxiliary horse were killed, wounded, and missing.* The Mahrattas lost five or six hundred men, and have the generosity, on all occasions, to do justice to the heroic defenders of Korygaom. During the conflict, the Peishwa sat on a rising ground, on the opposite side of the river, about two miles distant. Gokla, Appa Dessaye, and Trimbukjee

* There were eight European officers on this memorable defence.

2D BATTALION 1ST REGIMENT.

Captain Staunton.
Lieutenant and Adjutant Pattinson, died of his wounds.
Lieutenant Conellan, wounded.
Lieutenant Jones.
Assistant-Surgeon Wingate, killed.

ARTILLERY.

Lieut. Chisholm, killed.
Assistant-Surgeon Wyllie.

AUXILIARY HORSE.

Lieutenant Swanston, wounded.

directed the attacks, and at one time, Timbukjee entered the village. Bajee Rao frequently expressed his impatience, and asked his commanders "where were now their boasts of defeating the English when they could not overcome one battalion." The Raja of Satara was with the Peishwa, and having put up an aftabgeer, or skreen from the sun, the latter begged he would put it down, "otherwise the English would send a cannon ball through it."

After leaving Korygaom the Peishwa fled towards the Carnatic, followed by General Pritzler, who took up the pursuit near the Salpee Ghaut. On Bajee Rao's arrival on the Gutpurba he was surprized to find a part of the country already in possession of the British government. It appeared that Brigadier General-Munro, who had been originally sent up by the Madras government as commissioner to receive charge of the districts in the Carnatic, ceded by the treaty of Poona in June 1817, had collected a few regulars in addition to his own escort, and by his personal influence and experience had raised the native population, who were averse to the Mahrattas, as they had been to Tippoo, and eagerly desired a change of government.

The Peishwa, in pursuing the southern route, was supposed to have some hope of being joined by the Raja of Mysore; but disappointed in this respect, and alarmed at the progress of General Munro, he turned suddenly round, passed General Pritzler, and re-crossed the Kistna, where General Smith having arrived with the light division, pressed him very hard, until he got down the

(Jan. 29.) Salpee Ghaut, and went off in the direction of Sholapoor. General Smith's division was then halted, for the purpose of allowing General Pritzler to join, in order to form a new distribution of the force, according to a plan proposed by Mr. Elphinstone, who now took upon him the direction of affairs, by authority received from the governor-general.

When the Marquis of Hastings heard of the Peishwa's treachery, superadded to the numerous proofs of his insidious and persevering intrigues against the British government, he determined to put an end to the dynasty of his family, and to annex his dominions to the Company's territory; merely reserving a small tract, sufficient for the comfort and dignity of the imprisoned Raja of Satara, which might serve as a counterpoise to the remaining influence of the Bramins, conciliate the Mahratta nation, and leave an opening for the employment of many persons, in their own way, whom it would have been expensive to subsist, and who could not obtain a livelihood under the English administration. Instructions to this effect, were transmitted to Mr. Elphinstone, vesting him with full powers, as sole commissioner for the settlement of the territory to be conquered. The 4th and 6th divisions of the Deccan army, under Generals Smith and Pritzler, were withdrawn from Sir Thomas Hislop's control, and placed at the disposal of the commissioner. These instructions were received by Mr. Elphinstone early in January, but various reasons induced him to reserve their promulgation for a short period, until it could be done under impressions more favourable to the British cause, than existed at the moment; and be then followed up, in a manner which should convince the Mahratta nation of the advantages of submission, and the hopelessness of resistance. Hitherto, the pursuit of the Peishwa had been productive of nothing important, excepting the political effect of holding him up as a fugitive. Whenever Bajee Rao was pressed, Gokla, with all the light troops, hovered round the pursuing divisions, firing long shots with their matchlocks, throwing rockets in favourable situations, and cutting off cattle and baggage. Some skirmishes took place in consequence, and the Mahrattas frequently suffered, from the shrapnell shells of the horse artillery; but these affairs were attended with no advantageous result to either party.

(Feb. 7.) The two divisions having united at Rehmutpoor, the whole force, under the command of General Smith, proceeded to Satara, which it was thought advisable to reduce, on account of the importance attached to the possession of that fortress in the minds of the Mahratta people. It scarcely made any resistance,

(Feb. 10.) and was surrendered in the evening of the 10th February, when the British colours were hoisted; but next day, they were hauled down, and the Bhugwa Jenda, or standard of Sivajee and his descendants, was, with due forms, hoisted in its place. A manifesto was at the same time published by the commissioner, in the name of the British government, succinctly representing the whole conduct of Bajee Rao, and stating the reasons of its being deemed incumbent on the British to deprive him of public authority; to exclude him and his family from all concern in Deccan affairs; to take possession of his territory, and to govern the whole under the authority of the Company, excepting a small tract to be reserved for the Raja of Satara. It was declared, that there should be no interference with the tenets of any religious sect; that all wutun, enam lands, established pensions, and annual allowances should be respected and continued, provided the owners withdrew from the service of Bajee Rao, and retired to their habitations in two months from that date. Farming of revenue was to be abolished, and the hereditary district and village officers were called upon to reserve the revenue, otherwise they would be compelled to make good the payments; and should they or any other wutundars afford aid or pay money to the deposed Peishwa, their wutuns were declared liable to confiscation. No notice was taken of Jagheers, as it was soon understood they would be kept or restored, according to the readiness with which the holders under the Peishwa should tender their allegiance to the new government, and whilst retained, they became a powerful security for the fidelity of the claimants.

The reader who has perused the foregoing pages with attention, will be able to judge of the merits of this proclamation, and how well it was calculated to the end in view; especially when seconded by strenuous and persevering exertions on the part of the military.

A new distribution of the two divisions of the army was immediately formed, one for the purpose of pursuing Bajee Rao, the other for besieging his forts. General Smith chose the former, as promising the most active service, and marched with two regiments of cavalry, a squadron of the 22d dragoons, 1200 auxiliary horse, and 2500 infantry, in quest of the Peishwa. General Pritzler, in the meantime, attacked the strong hill forts immediately south of Poona, whilst a small force, originally sent back by Sir Thomas Hislop, under Lieutenant-Colonel Deacon, to occupy the intended position of the 4th division in Candeish, had moved down at Mr. Elphinstone's request, and laid siege to Chakun. Other divisions were likewise occupying the country; General Munro, in the Carnatic, was eminently successful; the small force of Lieutenant Colonel Prother, already mentioned, had taken many forts in the Concan, and another small detachment under Lieutenant-Colonel Kennedy, likewise fitted out by the exertions of Sir Evan Nepean, governor of Bombay, had commenced operations in the Concan, south of Bancoote.

Whilst the new arrangement of the divisions, and the reduction of Satara were in progress, Bajee Rao remained in the neighbourhood of Sholapoor where he exacted large sums of money from the carcoon of the late Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir. That minister died at Poona a short time before the breaking out of the war, and with the general respect of all parties. During the short time he was employed after the surrender of Trimbukjee, he honourably endeavoured to convince Bajee Rao of the futility and wickedness of the course he meditated; and that there now was neither honour nor safety to the Mahratta nation, excepting by a faithful adherence to that alliance, which, when contracted, might, in his opinion, have been avoided. The Peishwa deceived him respecting the secret insurrection; and though so well acquainted with Bajee Rao's character, when the facts were forced upon his conviction, he gave vent to expressions of indignation and disgust at the unparalleled deceit and treachery of his master.

At Sholapoor, Bajee Rao was joined by a body of horse from Nagpoor under Gunput Rao, to whom we shall hereafter revert. In the mean time General Smith was marching towards the Mahratta army; the Peishwa decamped and moved to the westward, as Gokla conceived he should have no difficulty in passing the British detachment, and avoiding them or not as he thought proper.

(Feb. 19.) On the 19th General Smith arrived at Yellapoor; he heard that the Peishwa was on the route from Sholapoor towards Punderpoor. He therefore marched all that night in hopes of coming upon him; but, before morning, he learnt that he had gone to the northward and was encamped at Ashtah. Taking, therefore, the cavalry and horse artillery, desiring the remainder to follow as expeditiously as they could, General Smith pushed forward, and came in sight of the Mahrattas about half-past eight, just as they were moving off the ground. The Peishwa sent Gokla a taunting message for having thus allowed the army to be surprised, to which the latter replied, that he might rest assured his rear should be guarded. Gokla, having desired Appa Dessaye Nepankur, who was at the head of about four thousand men to support him; waited with five hundred horse for the approach of the cavalry, who were then advancing in three columns, the dragoons being in the centre the 7th on the right, and the 2d regiment on the left. Gokla's friends advised him to retire for support, and return better prepared to meet them, but to this he objected, and merely replied "whatever is to be done, must be done here." As the British troops came near, the Mahrattas fired a volley, with little effect; and three hundred of them, with Gokla at their head, came galloping down diagonally across the front, wheeled suddenly round on the flank of the 7th regiment of cavalry, as they were forming after crossing a ravine, and driving upon them with their spears, occasioned considerable confusion; but Captain Dawes of the 22d dragoons, instantly throwing back a troop of his men, charged along the rear of the 7th and dashing into the middle of the Mahrattas, in a few minutes dispersed them in flight. Gokla fell on this occasion, by the hand of a dragoon; and, though supposed to have been wounded before he came in contact with his antagonist, fought bravely to the last, literally dying, as he had pledged himself, with his sword in his hand. Govind Rao Ghorepuray and Anund Rao Babur, both persons of distinction, were killed with him. The Mahrattas were pursued for some miles; several elephants, a quantity of baggage, and a few horses were taken; but the most important result was the capture of the Raja of Satara, with his mother and brothers, who, on this occasion, to their great joy, were rescued from the power of Bajee Rao, and the thraldom of the Concanee Bramins. Prior to this event the Mahrattas had resolved to stand a general action, as soon as Ramdeen, a partizan of Holkar's, should arrive. For this purpose, the Peishwa's infantry and guns, before left at Nepanee had arrived at Kurar, but the unexpected attack of General Smith, and the death of Gokla completely disconcerted their arrangements. The affair of Ashtah, trifling as it was, had a very material effect in hastening the termination of the war, and these advantages were purchased with the loss of only one man killed, and eighteen or twenty wounded; amongst the latter was General Smith. The Mahrattas, in the charge and during the pursuit, lost about one hundred men. The Raja of Satara, having (March 4.) been made over to the care of Mr. Elphinstone, General Smith proceeded to Seroor, and thence resumed the pursuit. Bajee Rao remained for a time at Kopergaom, where he was joined by the expected Ramdeen, and deserted by his luke-warm friends the Putwurd- (March 12.) huns. He next continued his route towards Chandore, intending ultimately to proceed to Nagpoor, where events, as interesting as those already detailed, had taken place before this period.

We left Appa Sahib in February 1817, established in the regency. It was not discovered, at the time, that he had been accessory to the death of the Raja Pursajee; and he was therefore proclaimed his successor by the name of Moodajee Bhonslay. The emissaries of the Peishwa were so successful at Nagpoor, that until the feigned insurrection, set up by Bajee Rao under Trimbukjee, was checked, Appa Sahib had pledged himself to take part in the warfare begun in that insidious manner; but on hearing of the Peishwa's submission he completely changed his conduct, and, although he continued in constant correspondence with Poona, the resident did not anticipate any more serious departure from the terms of his alliance, until it was known that the Peishwa had attacked the British troops. Upon this intelligence Appa Sahib secretly determined to make common cause with him, and immediately exerted himself, by every means in his power, to augment his military establishment. Mr. Jenkins, on perceiving these preparations, sent to Colonel Adams, requesting that a brigade of his division might be left to the southward of the Nerbuddah, and that a part of it should be held ready to march on Nagpoor. This application, however, was merely precautionary; Appa Sahib betrayed no other indication of hostile designs; on the contrary, he was profuse in his professions of friendship, and inveighed bitterly against the conduct of Bajee Rao, in treacherously attacking the English: but on the night (Nov. 24.) of the 24th November he sent to inform Mr. Jenkins that a Khillut had arrived for him from the Peishwa, who had also sent him a Juree Putka, and conferred on him the title of Senaputtee; that he intended to go in state to his camp to receive these honours next day, and invited the resident to be present at the ceremony. Mr. Jenkins's remonstrances against such a proceeding were, of course, of no avail; the insignia were received, and Appa Sahib's troops immediately took up positions in the vicinity of the residency, so threatening, that Mr. Jenkins was induced to call in the brigade from its cantonment, about three miles westward of the city.

(Nov. 26.) Next day appearances were so hostile, that preparations for defending the residency became necessary, and an express was despatched to call in the 2d division of the Deccan army, under General Doveton. The whole force at Nagpoor consisted of a brigade of two battalions of Madras native infantry, the 1st battalion 20th regiment, and 1st battalion 24th regiment, both considerably reduced by sickness; the resident's escort of two companies of native infantry, three troops of the 6th regiment of Bengal native cavalry, and four six-pounders, manned by Europeans of the Madras artillery. Lieutenant-Colonel Hopeton Scott was the senior officer.

The residency lies to the west of the city of Nagpoor, and is separated from it by a rocky hill, running north and south, called Seetabuldee. At each extremity of this hill, and distant about thirty yards from each other, are two eminences; that to the north, which is close to the residency, is considerably larger and a little higher than that to the south; but the base of the latter, being close to the huts of a village, communicating with the suburbs, and affording facility to the approach of irregulars, was a most important point, and was occupied by 300 men of the 24th regiment, under Captain Sadler, supported by a six-pounder. The three troops of cavalry, under Captain Fitzgerald, occupied the enclosures surrounding the residency, being behind and partly to the right of the larger hill, upon which the remainder of the force was posted. In the evening, as the British picquets were about to be placed, a party was fired upon from the village, at the bottom of the lower hill; but, under the possibility of a mistake, they forbore returning it, until, upon a continuance of the aggression, they gave their fire, and retired upon the smaller hill, under a heavy discharge of matchlocks, which became the general signal for an attack on the British position. A smart fire was maintained, on both sides, till two o'clock in the morning, when it slackened on the part of the Mahrattas, but was renewed with great fury with cannon and musketry at daylight. The heaviest loss which the British had hitherto sustained was at the smaller hill. Frequent attempts had been made by the Arabs to carry it, and that post had been, in consequence of the slaughter, repeatedly reinforced. At last, by the accidental explosion of a tumbril, some confusion was created, of which the Arabs took immediate advantage, charged up the hill sword in hand, carried it, and immediately turned the gun against the larger hill, where the casualties became distressingly severe. Emboldened by their success, the enemy's horse and foot closed in from every direction, and prepared for a general assault. To add to this appalling crisis, the Arabs got into the huts of the British troops, and the shrieks of the women and children reached the ears of the Sepoys. The residency grounds, where Captain Fitzgerald was posted, were also attacked; guns were brought up, and bodies of horse threatened to break in. Captain Fitzgerald had repeatedly applied for permission to charge, and was as often prevented by orders from the commanding officer; but seeing the impending destruction, he made a last attempt to obtain leave. Colonel Scott's reply was, "Tell him to charge at his peril"—"at my peril be it," said the gallant Fitzgerald on receiving this answer, and immediately gave the word to advance. As soon as he could form clear of the enclosures, he charged the principal body of horse, drove them from two guns by which they were supported, pursued them to some distance, cut a body of infantry accompanying them to pieces, and brought back with him the captured guns. The infantry posted on the hill witnessed this exploit with loud huzzas; the greatest animation was kindled amongst them: it was proposed to storm the smaller hill as soon as the cavalry returned, but another explosion of ammunition having taken place amongst the Arabs on the south hill, the same accident by which it had been lost, men and officers mingling together rushed forward:—irresistible, under such an impulse, they carried every thing before them, pursued the Arabs down the hill, took two of their guns, spiked them, and returned to their posts. The Arabs again assembled, and evinced a determination to recover their ground; but as they were preparing to advance, a troop of cavalry, under Cornet Smith, charged round the base of the hill, took them in flank, and dispersed them. The British troops now advanced from the hills, drove the infantry from the adjoining huts, and by noon this trying conflict, only equalled during the war by the defence of Korygaom, had wholly ceased. Instances of heroism equal to that of Pattinson are adducible, particularly that of Lieutenant John Grant, adjutant of the 24th regiment, who, though impeded by two severe wounds, was foremost in the storm of the smaller hill, and received a third and mortal wound as the post was carried.

The British had not fourteen hundred men fit for duty in the defence of Seetabuldee, whereas the army of Appa Sahib amounted to eighteen thousand men, half of whom were infantry, and of these three or four thousand were Arabs, who fought with much resolution. The British lost three hundred and thirty-three in killed and wounded; amongst whom twelve were European officers.* The Mahrattas lost about an equal number. The disproportion at Nagpoor was not much greater than at Poona; but the presence of an European regiment, and the advantage of acting offensively, gave a very different character to the contest.

Appa Sahib being foiled in his treacherous attempt, sent wukeels to express his sorrow, and to disavow his having authorized the attack; but Mr. Jenkins refused to treat with him under present circumstances, until he disbanded his troops, though he agreed to a suspension of hostilities. Reinforcements poured into Nagpoor from all quarters. Lieutenant-Colonel Gahan with a brigade from Colonel Adam's division appeared (Nov. 29.) on the 29th, Major Pitman arrived with (Dec. 5.) a detachment on the 5th December, and General Doveton, with the whole second division, had reached Nagpoor before the (Dec. 14.) middle of that month. On the morning (Dec. 15.) of the 15th, Mr. Jenkins demanded the absolute submission of Appa Sahib, requiring of him to disband his troops, to place his territory at the disposal of the British government, and to surrender himself as a hostage for the performance of these conditions; but he was at the same time given to understand, that upon compliance, no harder terms should be enforced, than a cession of territory equal to meet the expenses of the subsidiary force, and as much control in his internal government as should prevent similar treachery in future. Till four o'clock on the following morning was the time allowed for his acceptance of the terms. At six o'clock it was intimated, that the troops would not permit Appa Sahib to come to the residency as he wished; a respite of three days was requested, but three hours only were granted. When the time expired the troops advanced; Appa Sahib then came in, and the army was halted, in hopes that his force would be disbanded, and his guns given up. Such of the latter as were in the arsenal were surrendered, but on advancing to take possession of the others, a cannonade was opened upon the British troops. The line was in consequence immediately formed, and the guns were stormed and taken, but with the loss of one hundred and forty-one men in killed and wounded. Two of Appa Sahib's officers, Gunput Rao and Mun Bhut, were the persons who maintained this resistance; and it was supposed, without their master's orders. Gunput Rao afterwards went off towards the Peishwa's territory, and joined Bajee Rao, as already mentioned, near Sholapoor; but Mun Bhut, with the Arabs, retired to the fort of Nagpoor, where an attempt was made to storm one of the (Dec. 24.) gates on the 24th December, and repulsed, with the loss of two hundred and sixty-nine men in killed and wounded. The Arabs afterwards offered to surrender, on being permitted to march out with their property, families, and arms; terms which were admitted, because time was of importance, and there was no efficient battering train on the spot.

* Including Mr. Sotheby of the civil service, 1st assistant to the resident, who was killed.

The reserve division of the Bengal army stationed at Rewah, under Brigadier-General Hardyman, was ordered down to Nagpoor, when the Marquis of Hastings was first apprized of the defection of Appa Sahib; but the order was not received until the 6th December, so that General Hardyman did not reach the neighbourhood until the whole was settled by General Doveton; but on the 19th December, he routed a body of the enemy assembled at Jubbulpoor, reduced that place and co-operated with Lieutenant-Colonel M'Morine in occupying the whole of Appa Sahib's northern territory, excepting Choureeagurh and Mundelah.

Hostilities at the capital were brought to a conclusion by the capitulation of the Arabs and the surrender of Mun Bhut; Mr. Jenkins, owing to the interruption of the communication, had received no instructions relative to Appa Sahib in case of submission; and therefore in consequence of what had been already proposed, although the terms had not been complied with, Mr. Jenkins, on a consideration of all circumstances, conceived it incumbent on the British government to reinstate Appa Sahib, but deemed it necessary that his government should be most effectually controlled. For this purpose, to secure the subordination of the capital, the Seetabuldee hill was to be fortified; the British troops to have complete military occupation of the whole country; and a territorial cession, amounting to about twenty-four lacks of rupees, equal to the full charge of the subsidiary force, was demanded. A treaty to this effect was drawn out and about to be submitted for the Raja's acceptance, when, on the 2d January, Mr. Jenkins received instructions from the Marquis of Hastings, issued on first hearing of the Raja's defection, before being informed of what had passed subsequent to the arrival of General Doveton. These instructions forbade any reconciliation with Appa Sahib himself, and directed, that the son of the daughter of the late Pursajee, a minor, should be placed on the musnud, and affairs confided to a regency, selected by the British government. Afterwards, however, upon considering the motives which swayed the resident, respect for the moral obligation implied by the terms of his personal surrender, induced the governor-general to confirm the treaty * on the terms proposed by Mr. Jenkins.

At this point, therefore, we shall for the present leave the detail of Deccan affairs, and return to the operations which were about to be commenced by the British armies in central India, when their Mahratta allies at Poona, and Nagpoor, taking advantage of the removal of the British troops, treacherously attempted, as we have seen, to annihilate the detachments at their capitals.†

* The treaty was dated 6th January.

† Authorities as for the preceding Chapter.

CHAP. XIX.

FROM A. D. 1817, TO A. D. 1818.

Pindharees. — Divisions close in upon the Durras of Khureem Khan and Wasil Mohummud — pursuit of Cheetoo by Sir J. Malcolm. — Cheetoo is protected in Holkar's camp — hostile appearances. — General Malcolm forms a junction with Sir Thomas Hislop — battle of Mehidpoor — treaty with Holkar. — Cheetoo is protected by Jeswunt Rao Bhow one of Sindia's generals.—Jeswunt Rao is in consequence treated as an enemy — Camp attacked and Jawud stormed by General Browne — destruction of the Durras of Wasil Mohummud and Khureem Khan — and of Cheetoo — dispersion of the Pindharees — and dismemberment of the Patan association. — Treaties with the Rajpoots. — Recompence to the Raja of Boondee and Nabob of Bhopaul. — Sir John Malcolm appointed to the government of central India. — Operations in Bundelcund. — Storm of Talneir. — Operations against the Peishwa. — Affair of Sewnee. — Bajee Rao reduced to great distress — writes to Sir J. Malcolm, who negociates with him — interview — surrender — terms — remarks. — Seizure of Trimbukjee. — Escape of Appa Sahib. — Siege and capture of Aseergurh.

A. D. 1817.

DURING the rains of 1817, the Pindharees, in three separate bodies, or durras, under their leaders Cheetoo, Khureem Khan, and Wasil Mohummud, occupied positions between Indore and Sagur. Khureem Khan was particularly active in recruiting his durra, and was anxious to concert some general plan for eluding the coming storm; but the enmity between him and Cheetoo was too rancorous to admit of cordial co-operation, even in self-defence. They were promised assistance by all the native princes, according to their hopes or fears, but none stood forth openly in their favour. The left division of the Bengal army assembled, on the 10th October, at Kalinjer in Bundelcund, under Major-General Marshall, and reached Sagur by the 28th. Whilst on its march, a party of Pindharees from the durra of Wasil Mohummud, got in its rear and began to ravage the territory in Bundelcund; but their progress was arrested by a detachment from the governor-general's division, which obliged them to return to Malwa; and this was the only enterprise attempted by the Pindharees. General Marshall, without noticing this attempted diversion, marched on, according to his instructions, and ar-

(Nov. 10.) rived at Rylee on the 10th November, where he opened a communication with Colonel Adams, whose division was already in its prescribed position at Hooshingabad. Sir Thomas Hislop by the same time had reached Hurda, and assumed command of the first division of the Deccan army. Sir John Malcolm, with the third division, composed of the Nizam's battalions, and the Mysore irregular horse, had arrived in that neighbourhood some time before; and the Guzerat division, having advanced from Baroda, was in its position at Dohud. Every thing was now ready for the combined movement, when news of the breaking out of hostilities at Poona reached Sir Thomas Hislop. Conceiving, from this intelligence, and from recent accounts of apprehended treachery in the court of Nagpoor, that it would be necessary to support Brigadier-generals Smith and Doveton, General Hislop, departing from his instructions, immediately reinforced General Malcolm's division with a brigade of the regular troops, and sent him forward to co-operate against the Pindharees, (Nov.19.) ilst he himself, with the first division, began to retrace his steps towards Burhanpoor. Sir John Malcolm crossed the Nerbuddah on the 16th November, and Colonel Adams on the 14th. By a concerted movement with General Marshall, the three divisions respectively reached Ashta, Rassein, and Ratgurh on the (Nov.22.)22d, and thence, in the same manner, reached Tullain, Bairsea, and Gunj Basouda (Nov.26.)by the 26th. They thus drove the Pindharees from their accustomed haunts, and their lands were either taken possession of, or restored to the agents of Sindia, and the nabob of Bhopaul. The durras of Wasil Mohummud, and Khureem Khan, united about Seronje, and thence, invited by Sindia, took the route of Gwalior; but Cheetoo went off to the north-west, in hopes of support from Holkar, and from Jeswunt Rao Bhow, one of Sindia's officers stationed as already noticed at Jawud. Lord Hastings's camp, at this period, was at Erich; and he had placed detachments, connecting his own with General Marshall's division. Upon ascertaining that Khureem and Wasil Mohummud had come to the northward, one of the detachments moved from Burwa Sagur through Dutteea, across the Sindh, so as to cut them off from Gwalior; and Lord Hastings brought his division within thirty miles of Sindia's camp, which had the effect of completely overawing that chieftain. The Pindharees, unable to advance to Gwalior, or to return to the southward, whence General Marshall and Colonel Adams were closing in upon them, remained at Shahabad until General Marshall, though he advanced tardily, was close upon them. They then forced the Lodwana Ghaut, leading into Huraotee, which they were enabled to effect, owing to the misconduct of a party of Zalim Sing's troops posted there; but General Marshall succeeded in destroying a few of them. They then intended to cross the Chumbul by the Loharee ford; but they were intercepted by General Donkin; and Khureem, with Wasil Mohummud, after having burnt their baggage, went off to the southward, at the head of four thousand of the best mounted of their followers, with whom they succeeded in passing Colonel Adam's division, and directed their flight westward into Meywar. Of those who were left behind, some were cut off by the troops, and some by the exasperated villagers; one considerable body, however, got clear off to the southward, and after traversing the whole Deccan, entered the Company's provinces in the Carnatic, where they were annihilated, or completely dispersed before the end of the ensuing January.

The scene of operations was now changed; General Marshall was posted at Seronje, Colonel Adams moved down upon Gungraur, and General Browne, detached with a part of the Marquis of Hastings' division, also proceeded westward, in a parallel direction to the northward of Colonel Adams; General Donkin, recrossing the Chumbul, took post at Shapoora, west of the Bunass. But whilst such was the progress of the Pindharee warfare in the east of Malwa, more important events were passing to the westward.

When Cheetoo went off towards Holkar's camp, he was pursued by General Malcolm with the 3d division, but there being reason to apprehend that hostility was meditated by Holkar's army, Colonel Adams for a time inclined his march to the west, in order to be able to support Sir John Malcolm; on its being understood, however, that the governor-general disapproved of Sir Thomas Hislop's retrograde movement, and had ordered him on as first directed, Colonel Adams co-operated as before, against Khureem, and Wasil Mohummud. Sir John Malcolm continued to pursue Cheetoo, until the latter found refuge in Holkar's camp, in (Dec.4.) the vicinity of Mehidpoor, when the 3d division halted at Agur on the 4th December.

It has hitherto been quite unnecessary to refer to the everlasting turmoil of Holkar's durbar. The Mahratta faction, which Toolsee Bye the regent joined, had, in a moment of superiority over their Patan rivals, put the minister Ballaram Seit to death, which threw the principal power into the hands of Tattya Jogh, and Holkar's hereditary Dewan, Gunput Rao, a man of weak intellect, under the guidance of Tattya Jogh; he was also the paramour of Toolsee Bye, over whom her passion gave him entire ascendancy. When the Peishwa's emissaries were negociating the confederacy against the British government, one of their objects was to reconcile the Patan and Mahratta factions; but at the crisis when the British army crossed the Nerbuddah, there was a division amongst all parties and factions in Holkar's camp. Gunput Rao had been for a time gained over to the Peishwa's cause, and Toolsee Bye had no will but his: Tattya Jogh suspected of being favourable to a negotiation opened by Mr. Metcalfe on the part of the British government, was placed under restraint, and the war faction, or in other words, Bajee Rao's influence predominated. The negotiation alluded to, as opened by Mr. Metcalfe, was part of the governor-general's plan, who, as will be recollected, intended to form a treaty with Holkar, nearly similar to that which was concluded with Sindia. The proposals were made to Holkar at the same time that the terms were offered to Umeer Khan; but no reply was received, until the middle of November, when a secret communication from Toolsee Bye, offering to place the young Mulhar Rao and herself under the protection of the British government, was, by the advice of Tattya Jogh, transmitted to Mr. Metcalfe. The regency, however, being under the control of their own soldiery, were obliged to yield to the popular cry in the camp, and to move towards the Deccan, trusting to some favourable opportunity of effecting their purpose, though now obliged to join in the general demonstrations of loyalty in favour of the sovereign Peishwa. But Gunput Rao having, as already mentioned, been gained over, Toolsee Bye likewise seceded from the plan of seeking protection from the British; and Tattya Jogh, the original proposer of that measure, was placed in confinement. The soldiery were averse to the admission of terms from the British government, because the chiefs knew they must lose the power and consequence which the existing state of anarchy conferred, and the troops apprehended the loss of their bread. Before Holkar's army quitted Rampoorah, some advances were made by the Peishwa's agent, and larger sums were promised as soon as they should cross the Nerbuddah. They were joined by Roshun Beg, one of Holkar's commanders, with fourteen battalions before they reached Mehidpoor, and all were apparently enthusiastic in the Peishwa's cause. The arrival of General Malcolm's division, in their neighbourhood, caused some alteration in the minds of the regency; but the general indications of hostility were so strong, that Sir John Malcolm retired upon the 1st division advancing to Oojein. The division from Guzerat ought to have been by that time about the same point, but Sir William Grant Keir had fallen back a considerable distance, at the requisition of the Bombay government, as in consequence of the Peishwa's defection, disturbances were apprehended in Guzerat; but of this movement the governor-general disapproved, and the division was ordered to return, for the purpose of co-operating as at first directed.

In the mean time, the first and third divisions having united, advanced towards Holkar's (Dec. 14.) camp. Terms agreeably to Lord Hastings's instructions were offered, and a show of negotiation was kept up by Ghuffoor Khan and the Patan commanders, in the name of Mulhar Rao Holkar; but their horse committed hostilities, molested the foragers, carried off cattle, and at last made a direct attack on a body of the (Dec.20.)Mysore horse. So determined were the Patans to cut off all chance of pacification, that, suspecting the regency of an intention to accept the terms, they confined Gunput (Dec.21.)Rao, and put Toolsee Bye to death. When Sir Thomas Hislop found his parties attacked, he immediately determined on bringing affairs to a crisis. Holkar's troops, estimated at nearly twenty thousand men, of whom about one-half were infantry, were posted on the left bank of the Seeprah, and on the opposite side from that on which the British army was advancing. Sir Thomas Hislop had four regiments of native cavalry, two squadrons of dragoons, a battalion of Europeans, and, including the Nizam's corps, seven battalions of native infantry, besides a considerable body of irregular horse. The position of Holkar's troops, at the point attacked, was exceedingly strong. The ford, by which it was determined to cross, was about eight hundred yards from the enemy's line of infantry; which was drawn up at an angle of the Seeprah, with its left flank protected by the steep bank of that river, and its right covered by a deep ravine; its front was lined with a formidable artillery, consisting of about seventy pieces, many of them heavy guns, which, being well served, overpowered the light English field pieces, and occasioned a heavy loss before the British troops, after crossing the ford, had time to form and advance, which they did with all their characteristic bravery. The first and second brigades, gallantly led on by Sir John Malcolm, had the principal duty to perform; the Madras rifle corps bore a very conspicuous part in the battle, but earned the honour at a high price, having suffered most severely. Holkar's artillerymen stood bravely to their guns, even after their battalions had retired; but all the cannon were taken, excepting five or six of the lighter pieces, which were carried off by the flying troops. Holkar's horse showed considerable spirit in skirmishing, before the British army crossed the river, but fled as soon as the action became general. This victory cost the British troops a loss of seven hundred and seventy-eight men, in killed and wounded, of whom thirty-eight were European officers. Holkar's army lost three thousand men, principally in the pursuit; but it is creditable to his battalions, that two bodies of the infantry effected their retreat, when the British general was so strong in cavalry. One of these bodies, under Roshun Beg, reached Rampoorah, where it was attacked and dispersed on the 10th January, by the division under General Browne, detached, as already mentioned, from the force under the personal command of Lord Hastings. The other body was under Ramdeen, a person notorious in the intrigues and anarchy of the period, who made good his way to the Deccan and joined Bajee Rao, as already mentioned, at Kopergaom. After the battle, Sir John Malcolm, with a light force, followed up the main body of the fugitives, on the route towards Mundisore; whilst Sir Thomas Hislop, joined by the Guzerat division, followed in the same direction a few days afterwards. At Mundisore the submission of the young Holkar was tendered, and a treaty was concluded (Jan. 6.) on the 6th of January. By this treaty, Holkar confirmed the agreement with Umeer Khan; ceded several districts in perpetuity to the Rana of Kotah, which Zalim Sing had before only rented; transferred his tribute on the Rajpoots to the British government; and also ceded to it his territory north of the Boondee hills, and south of the Sautpoora mountains. He agreed to commit no hostilities, to have no communication with other states, and to entertain in his service no native of Europe or America, without the sanction of the British government; to discharge his superfluous troops, but to maintain a contingent of three thousand horse, which were to co-operate with the English troops when required. The Jagheer of Ghuffoor Khan was to be continued under the guarantee of the British government. A wukeel from Holkar was to reside at Calcutta, and a resident envoy was to be appointed to Holkar's court. The British government became bound to protect the territories of Holkar, and to maintain a field force for that purpose.

A.D. 1818. (Jan. 10.

Sindia's Durbar, after the conclusion of the treaty with Holkar, became perfectly tractable; but some of his officers still showed a determination to support the Pindharees. After the battle of Mehidpoor, Cheetoo proceeded to Jawud, and was admitted into the camp of Jeswunt Rao Bhow, who at first refused to receive Captain Caulfield, the superintending officer appointed to his division.

But afterwards, pretending to comply with whatever was required, he desired Cheetoo to withdraw, and allowed Captain Caulfield to join him. It was found, however, that he harboured and protected the Pindharees, whom he would neither arrest nor expel from his camp; and the Marquis of Hastings at last gave orders that he should be treated as a public enemy. The division under General Browne was sent against him; and here, as at Rampoorah, this division was distinguished by the prompt and efficient manner it performed the required service; the camp of Jeswunt Rao was beat in, his guns were captured, one of the gates of Jawud was blown open and the town (Jan.28.) taken, on the 28th January. The districts occupied by Jeswunt Rao Bhow, had been usurped from the Rana of Oudepoor, with whom an agreement, similar in principle to those with the other Rajpoot states, had been concluded by the British government, on the 13th January. Kumulnere, Rypoor, and Ramnagur, three forts of some consequence, particularly Kumulnere, being situated in the usurped districts, General Donkin was ordered to reduce them, which was effected with little trouble by the middle of February. When General Donkin's division was broken up, the service in this quarter being by that time completed, a part of it joined Sir David Ochterlony, then engaged in negociating with the Patans, and aiding in the settlement with the Rajpoots.

In the mean time Cheetoo, with his durra of Pindharees, had gone off in a north-westerly direction, when the pursuit was taken up by the Guzerat division with considerable effect. A part of the durra was destroyed, and several of their parties were overtaken in villages. Cheetoo, finding himself harassed, turned suddenly to the southward, and by passing through a very difficult country, where Sir William Grant Keir found it impossible to follow him, he effected his escape; he re-appeared near Dhar, whither he was followed by the Guzerat division by another route. The broken remains of the durras of Wasil Mohummud, and Khureem, at a time when they thought themselves secure from pursuit, were completely surprised in the middle of January, by a detachment from Colonel Adams's division, which destroyed a great number of them. Khureem was not with his followers at the time, having been left in a jungle as they were flying through Huraotee; but he was in Jawud when the town was stormed by General Browne, and escaped on foot with great difficulty. After a variety of adventures, Khureem surrendered himself to Sir John Malcolm, on the 15th February; Namdar Khan came in on the 3d February, with such of his followers as remained, and many of the principal chiefs followed his example. The only terms required by Namdar Khan were an assurance that he should not be sent to Europe or Calcutta. Many persons belonging to the durras of Wasil Mohummud and Khureem, gave themselves up to Zalim Sing of Kotah, and the small parties dispersed. Wasil Mohummud, in person, took refuge in Sindia's camp at Gwalior, where the British authorities would not seize him, but caused Sindia to do so, that it might be manifest to all India that an enemy of the British government could no where find an asylum. He was not imprisoned, but kept at Ghazeepoor under a strict watch; and at last, being intercepted in an attempt to escape, he destroyed himself by poison.

Of the Pindharees, Cheetoo's durra alone remains to be accounted for. The main body had hitherto escaped; but on the 25th January (Jan. 25.) it was completely surprised and dispersed by a detachment from the garrison of Hindia; and the Bheels and Grassias in the neighbourhood, from whom it may be recollected the Pindharees took several districts, being encouraged to attack the fugitives, spared none who fell into their hands. Cheetoo with two hundred followers escaped: he endeavoured to make terms for himself through the nabob of Bhopaul, but his demands were extravagant, and being again pursued, his followers dropped off daily. He afterwards went through a variety of adventures, and we shall again have occasion to mention him; but at length, hunted from his last asylum, and still bearing up with a spirit and perseverance worthy of the leader of a better band, Cheetoo, when singly pursuing his flight, was devoured by a tiger in the jungles adjoining the fortress of Aseergurh. The Pindharees thus dispersed, without leaders, and without a home or a rendezvous, were afterwards little heard of, though flying parties were seen in the Deccan until the termination of the war with the Peishwa: they mingled with the rest of the population, but the real Pindharees still retain their name, though some of them have become active improving farmers. *

With regard to the Patans, Umeer Khan, after he had made the agreement with Mr. Metcalfe for himself, did not ratify it until he heard of the defence at Seetabuldee, when, considering the Mahratta game as completely lost, he immediately dismissed the Peishwa's agents, ratified the engagement with the British government, and endeavoured by every means in his power to fulfil its stipulations.

The advance of Sir David Ochterlony, who judiciously interposed his division between the two principal Patan camps, would soon have compelled Umeer Khan to submission, had coercion become necessary; but his presence in that situation was afterwards very important, in enabling Umeer Khan to obtain the promised guns, and to satisfy the turbulent soldiery. The Patans were prevented from trying their strength, by the fate of Holkar's troops at Mehidpoor, by the influence and cunning of Umeer Khan, and by the address and firmness of Sir David Ochterlony. Some of them were dismissed with a part of their arrears, some of them were taken into the service, and the whole were overawed or conciliated without bloodshed.

The presence of Sir David Ochterlony likewise facilitated the negotiations with the Rajpoots, and enabled the Marquis of Hastings to complete his plans, or put the whole into a train of adjustment by the middle of February. A treaty with Joudpoor was signed on the 6th January, but the negotiation with Jeypoor did not terminate until the 2d April, when a treaty was concluded. All the other states and principalities, excepting Sagur, of which the British government took possession, accepted the terms offered by the governor-general; and Sindia, having given up the district of Ajimere, and relinquished his tribute on the Raja of Boondee, in exchange for part of the lands of the Jagheerdar of Vinchoor, situated in Malwa, and forfeited by his adherence to the cause of Bajee Rao, the British government was thus enabled to recompense the hitherto ill-requited Raja of Boondee, who behaved so well to the English when retreating under Colonel Monson. Not only was the tribute thus obtained from Sindia relinquished by the British government, but all the possesions usurped from the Raja by Holkar were restored, and Sindia's encroachments, within his frontier, were also recovered for him by negotiation. The record of this instance of national gratitude, will be read by every Briton with satisfaction, and the Marquis of Hastings also had it in his power to confer on the nabob of Bhopaul a reward equally suitable; not only for the friendship of his ancestor towards General Goddard's army, but for the zeal he had himself displayed in the British cause* during the present war, since he acceded to the proffered terms in the month of November. A treaty was concluded with him on the 26th February, by which a small contingent of six hundred horse, and four hundred infantry, was all that was required to be furnished for the service of the British government, and five districts * were ceded to him in perpetuity for their support. Some forfeited lands of the Vinchorkur, and a part of the district of Shujawulpoor were afterwards added; the fort of Islamnugur, a much valued possession, was likewise obtained for him from Sindia by negotiation. These cessions placed the principality of Bhopaul on a very respectable footing, and amongst the natives of India, where the recollections of benefits and injuries are treasured up for generations, nothing in the whole administration of the Marquis of Hastings conveyed so deep an impression of the value of British friendship, as the conduct of its government to Boondee and Bhopaul.

* I know personally some of this description settled in the Deccan, and, I dare say, many may be found cultivating the fields in Malwa.

* He sold his jewels to support troops.

The military operations in central India being completed, Sir John Malcolm remained there as agent for the governor-general; and by the active exertions, and conciliatory methods, which during a long career have characterized his services, and which, on the whole, have been surpassed by those of no living servant of the East India Company, that officer introduced order and peace in an extensive tract, where those blessings had been long unknown.

The division under General Marshall was ordered from Seronje into Bundelcund; and after reducing Sagur, took Dhamounee and Mundelah belonging to the territory of Nagpoor, the Killidars of which had refused to surrender, in consequence of secret orders from Appa Sahib. At the same time that General Marshall was sent into Bundelcund, the greater part of the first, third, and fifth divisions were placed at the disposal of Mr. Elphinstone, to assist in the more important revolution going forward in the Deccan.

* Ashtah, Ichawur, Sehar, Dowaha, and Dewapana.

Sir Thomas Hislop, as commander-in-chief at Madras, proceeded to Fort St. George; but on his way to the southward, he took possession of those places in his immediate route which were ceded to the British government by Holkar. The Killidar of Talneir, from a pertinacity common to governors of forts in India, resisted the order of surrender; and although warned from the first that he should be treated as a rebel, if he refused to obey the orders of his government, he continued to fire upon the British troops. A storming party was therefore sent to force the entrance of the fort, which is by five successive gates; of these the first and second were passed without difficulty, and at the third, the Killidar came out and surrendered himself. He also returned with the party through the third and fourth gates which were opened, but at the fifth gate there was some demur made by the Arabs, when told they must surrender at discretion; the wicket, however, was at last opened, and a few officers and men had entered, when the Arabs, from some misapprehension, rushed upon them, cut most of them down, and amongst the number killed Major Gordon and Captain Macgregor. Their companions behind, hearing of what had been perpetrated, with the exasperated feelings of British troops where they suspect treachery, rushed in as fast as they could gain admittance, and of a garrison of about three hundred men, one only, by leaping the wall, escaped with life. Sir Thomas Hislop, under the same impulse by which the troops were actuated, ordered the Killidar to be hanged as the cause of all the bloodshed, without reflecting on the probability of his not being, even in the first instance, wholly to blame for this lamentable catastrophe, and that his subsequent conduct entitled him to clemency.

In taking possession of the forts in the territory ceded by Holkar, Sir Thomas Hislop was aided by the second division under General Doveton, who, shortly after the surrender of Nagpoor, had proceeded to the westward, believing that every thing in the quarter he had just quitted was finally arranged; but no sooner was Appa Sahib re-instated on his musnud, than he renewed his intrigues, encouraged the savage Goands to revolt, sent secret orders to his Killidars to resist the orders of surrender, which he had granted in favour of the British government, and applied to Bajee Rao for assistance. An application to this effect had arrived, at the time Gunput Rao joined the Peishwa near Sholapoor, and frequent messengers followed, subsequent to the affair of Ashtah, imploring succour.

We left Bajee Rao on the route to Chandore. Before he reached that place, hearing of the approach of the divisions under Sir Thomas Hislop and General Doveton, he returned to Kopergaom; but there having learnt that General Smith was advancing, he pursued his route to Bheer, and thence, turning off to the eastward, hastened towards Chandah in the territory of Nagpoor, sending Gunput Rao forward to the assistance of his master by a different route.

Sir Thomas Hislop endeavoured to intercept or overtake the Peishwa's army, but finding they were beyond the reach of pursuit, he continued his march to Poona, and left the conduct of operations to Generals Doveton and Smith. The former took the route by Basum and Kurinja, the latter moved eastward along the line of the Godavery.

In the meantime Mr. Jenkins having discovered Appa Sahib's extraordinary treachery, ar-
(Mar. 15.) rested him; and preparations being made to oppose the advancing succour, Gunput Rao's party was met on the banks of the Wurda, and driven back by a detachment under (April 5.) Colonel Scott. Colonel Adams, with his division also arrived on the banks of the (April 6.) Wurda in a few days; and Bajee Rao, uncertain how to proceed, halted at Pander Koura to the west of the Wurda. There he was hemmed in by the divisions of Doveton and Adams, and, in endeavouring to avoid the former, was (April 18.) driven upon the latter near Sewnee, where a considerable number of his followers were killed. Many of his Jagheerdars had quitted his standard before this event, and most of them took advantage of the opportunity to disperse to their homes. The Peishwa's brother Chimnajee Appa fled to the southward with Appa Dessaye, Nepankur and Naroo Punt Apty, and surrendered himself to a party, detached to intercept him by General Smith. Colonel Adams, as soon as the pursuit ceased, proceeded against Chandah, which was held by the partizans of Appa Sahib, and after a short siege carried the place by assault. Bajee Rao, followed by General Doveton, fled in great consternation to the northward, and for six days his army suffered severely from fatigue and privation. He had faint hopes of aid from Sindia; but all he now desired was a good opportunity of throwing himself in the way of the British general. He had made many overtures to Mr. Elphinstone, but as they always implied an ability to treat, he was distinctly told his submission only could be accepted. He again despatched agents to Mr. Elphinstone and to the resident at Nagpoor, but continued his route, forded the Taptee on the 5th May, and advanced towards Sindwa, where he intended to cross the Nerbuddah; but finding that point guarded, and that Sir John Malcolm had made every preparation to intercept him, he sent forward an agent, Anund Rao Chundawurkur, with a letter to that officer, and retired to wait the result, at Dholkote, in the neighbourhood of Aseergurh. That fortress, though stipulated to be given up by Sindia, in the treaty of the 5th November, was still held by his Killidar, Jeswunt Rao Lar, who had always refused to surrender. Here Bajee Rao, with about eight thousand men, remained in a state of the utmost disquietude and alarm; he was unacquainted with the country, and excepting the Vinchorkur and Aba Poorundhuree, abandoned by almost every person of consequence in the Mahratta country; the fords and passes to the northward were guarded, and troops were closing in upon him on every side. His agent reached General Malcolm's camp at Mhow, near Indore, on the 16th May. On receiving the Peishwa's overtures, Sir John Malcolm, who had been furnished with a copy of the governor-general's instructions to the commissioner in the Deccan, resolved to make the Peishwa's letter the basis of a negotiation for his surrender. Accordingly, two of his political assistants, Lieutenants Low and M'Donald, were despatched towards the camp of Bajee Rao, instructed to open a negotiation, requiring him to renounce all sovereignty for himself and family for ever in the Deccan, to which he was never to return; and to surrender Trimbukjee, and the murderers of the Vaughans. After these preliminaries, Lieutenant Low was to insist upon his immediately separating himself from Ramdeen, and all proscribed rebels and Pindharees, and advance to meet Sir John Malcolm, who in such case, promised to become the medium of an adjustment with the British government, and obtain for him a liberal maintenance at such holy city as he might select for his future residence. The governor-general did not approve of any deputation to Bajee Rao, both because it had a tendency to cramp the military operations against him, and conveyed an impression of the Peishwa's being in a condition to treat, when he was, in fact, eager to submit. Some circumstances proved the justness of these opinions; and, in several respects, there was an inconsiderate zeal evinced in the proceedings on this occasion, which has not escaped censure. The Marquis of Hastings, although he had given the outline of the conduct to be observed towards the Peishwa, reserved to himself the particular terms to be granted to him, after obtaining his submission to a justly offended nation; but before his sentiments, in regard to the first steps taken by Sir John Malcolm, could be received, Bajee Rao, on the 3d June, after a protracted negotiation, surrendered himself*, on condition, that the stipulated maintenance should not be less than eight lacks of rupees a year; which was promised to him by Sir John Malcolm, from an idea that it should not be less than the pension of his brother Amrut Rao. The Marquis of Hastings deemed the amount too great, and seeing that his deposal was declared, and his country almost entirely reduced, knowing also the intriguing disposition of Bajee Rao, and the amassed treasure which he and his adherents might secrete for purposes hostile to the British government, it was generally considered the extreme of liberality. But there was a conditional promise to Bajee Rao, in favour of Jagheerdars who had adhered to his cause, and of Bramins and religious establishments supported by his family, which was quite unnecessary, and certainly should have been avoided; because it implied, that Bajee Rao was in a condition to treat, not only for himself, but for others; it detracted in some degree from the liberality of the British government in the settlement of the conquered territories; and it obtained for Bajee Rao, amongst such of the Mahrattas as were disposed to advocate his cause, praise which he did not merit, and honour which it never could have been the intention of Sir J. Malcolm to confer. Whilst commenting, however, in this instance, on the supposed failings of the politician, justice is due to the generous feelings of the man: Sir J. Malcolm saw the prince whom he had visited nine months before in the midst of a gay court, and in a newly erected palace on the banks of the Kistna, now a harassed and houseless fugitive; he forgot the manner in which he had been so grossly deceived; he thought only of the contrast in the Peishwa's situation, and of the benefits which the British government had derived from its connection with that misguided and unfortunate individual; and he pitied those faithful adherents, who still followed their sovereign in hopeless adversity, and forfeited their all, when, by personal submission, they might have secured their possessions. The Marquis of Hastings ratified the terms; and Beithoor, a place of sanctity near Cawnpore, was appointed for Bajee Rao's future residence, to which he was immediately conducted.

* Before surrendering himself, he had an interview with Sir J. Malcolm; and in a private conference, displayed his usual address and eloquence; appealing to Sir John as the last of his three earliest and best friends. Colonel Close being dead, and General Wellesley (the Duke of Wellington) in a distant land.

Ramdeen surrendered on being promised pardon, but Bajee Rao evaded compliance with that part of the stipulated terms which required the surrender of Trimbukjee; he escaped to the southward, and for a time attempted to collect adherents, and conceal himself as before; but Captain Briggs, Mr. Elphinstone's agent in Candeish, discovered the place of his retreat, and by a well concerted plan, sent a party of irregular horse under Lieutenant Swanston *, who seized him in the village of Aheergaom. He was afterwards conveyed to the fort of Chunargurh, in Bengal, where he remains a prisoner. The surrender of Bajee Rao was an important event, and was rendered more so by the escape of Appa Sahib, a circumstance which partly actuated Sir John Malcolm during the negotiation.

After the arrest of Appa Sahib by Mr. Jenkins, the governor-general directed that he should be sent to Allahabad, and there confined. He was accordingly sent off from Nagpoor for that purpose, but having corrupted some of the Sepoys of a Bengal corps on his guard, and being furnished with a suit of their regimentals, he got off in that disguise on the morning of the 13th May, and fled to the Mahdeo hills between Nagpoor and the Nerbuddah, whence it was impossible to dislodge him during the monsoon. Here he was joined by Cheetoo Pindharee; and the person of Appa Sahib became a rallying point for all the disbanded and broken troops of the country. The unfortunate negligence which occasioned his escape, was productive of much harassing service owing to insurrections in various quarters.

* The same officer who assisted in the defence, and was severely wounded at Korygaom.

The grandson of the late Rughoojee Bhonslay, a minor named Goozur, was, in the mean time, adopted by the widow of the late Rughoojee, and, assuming the name of his grandfather, was seated on the musnud. The widow was considered regent; but for the present, and during the minority, the whole administration was committed to the charge of the resident, who, in the Raja's name, directed every department under the immediate superintendence of officers appointed by himself.

The season was considerably advanced before troops could be spared to co-operate in a combined attack upon the position of Appa Sahib; it was hoped he might be taken; but being assisted by the skill and intelligence of Cheetoo, he passed one of the parties which was hemming him in, and though subsequently exposed to imminent danger from a guard of British troops, he succeeded in gaining the fort or neighbourhood of Aseergurh.

That celebrated fortress was besieged by General Doveton: Sir John Malcolm co-operating with a force from Malwa. After a respectable defence during about twenty days, it surrendered on the 9th of April, 1819. Appa Sahib, if he ever had been in the fort, made his escape. He afterwards sought refuge amongst the Seiks, where he still is; and no desire being evinced by the British government to receive his submission, he has sunk into the insignificance to be expected from a person of his weak and treacherous character. The dreadful fate of Cheetoo, as he attempted to fly from Aseergurh, has been already told. *

* Authorities as in the preceding.

CHAP. XX.

FROM A.D. 1818, TO A.D. 1819.

The final reduction and settlement of the Peishwa's territory — Capture of the principal forts by General Pritzler. — The Raja of Satara placed on his throne. — Successes of General Munro — attack and dispersion of the remaining infantry at Sholapoor. — Reduction of the Concan accomplished by the Bombay government — Appointment of officers to the civil government of the country — instructions — procedure. — The capture of Mallygaom and Prucheetgurh completes the reduction of the Peishwa's territory — mode of preventing insurrection — of settling the Bheels — detection of a conspiracy. — Claims — the Nizam — Jagheerdars. — Judicial and revenue administration — Punchayets — rewards — charitable donations. — Hindoo college. — Remarks on the settlement.

A.D. 1818. In the preceding chapter we were drawn forward to mention the last event of the war, whilst the reduction and settlement of the Peishwa's territory remains to be briefly explained. By the 10th of April, the strong forts of Singurh, Poorundhur and Wassota, with many others, had been taken by the besieging force, under General Pritzler. Though places of that remarkable strength, which has been already described, none of them made a good defence, none stood the assault, and as their previous history was scarcely known, their capture excited less interest, even among the besiegers, than it otherwise was calculated to produce. An exception must be made in regard to Wassota; the wild country through which the troops advanced for about twenty miles, far exceeded in sublimity and grandeur any pre-conceived ideas the British officers might have formed of those vast mountains, dells, and forests, which they were told existed in the Ghaut-Mahta. The necessary artillery was transported with extraordinary labour, through thick jungles and deep vallies, where natural barriers presented themselves in every succeeding hill, at which a handful of men might have arrested a host; and when at last brought to the point of bombardment, intense interest was excited for the two officers, Cornets Hunter and Morrison, who, the reader may recollect, were taken prisoners at the commencement of the war, and were now in confinement in this fortress. The wives and families of the Raja of Satara and his brothers, were also in Wassota, and these princes were present in the British camp. The obstinacy of the Killidar, who at first would listen to no terms of surrender, was, in this instance, a cause of general regret. At (April 5.) length the mortars opened; and though the peal of every salvo as it reverberated from the surrounding rocks, carried with it an anxiety for the fate of the prisoners, the bombardment was kept up for about twenty hours, with such effect, that the Killidar capitulated, and fortunately none of the captives suffered. The two British officers were found in a dress of coarse unbleached cotton, made into a form neither European nor Indian, but partaking of the nature of both; their beards had grown, and their appearance was, as may be imagined, extraordinary; but their health was perfectly good. They had been kept in ignorance of the advance of their countrymen, or the state of the war; the firing, in driving in the outposts, was represented by their guard as the attack of some insurgents in the neighbourhood; the bursting of the shells over their heads was the first intimation of approaching deliverance, and the most joyful sound that had reached their ears for five dreary months. They had been at first used very harshly in the fort of Kangooree; but they were removed to Wassota by Gokla's orders, and a letter, in his own hand-writing to the Killidar, desiring him to treat the two poor Europeans well, was one of several instances of a like generous character, tending to prove, that Gokla had no participation in the cruelties of his master; and at that moment excited some feeling of pity for his fate. On most occasions, the captive officers had been humanely treated by the native soldiery; and they met with some remarkable acts of disinterested kindness and sympathy.

Shortly after the reduction of Wassota, the (April 11.) Raja of Satara was, with great pomp, seated on his throne by the commissioner, when he published two proclamations, the one, announcing his connexion with the British government, the other making over entire powers for the arrangement and government of his country to the author of this work, who was the agent selected by Mr. Elphinstone for that purpose. In the first proclamation, the Raja dwelt on the injuries received from Bajee Rao; amongst these, was an order, the existence of which was confirmed by the Killidar of Wassota, to put the whole family to death, rather than suffer them to fall into the hands of the British government. The Raja Pertab Siew (or Sing) was in his 27th year, naturally intelligent, and well disposed; but bred amongst intrigues, surrounded by men of profligate character, and ignorant of every thing except the etiquette and parade of a court. His whole family entertained the most extravagant ideas of their own consequence, and their expectations were proportionate, so that, for a time, the bounty which they experienced was not duly appreciated.

As it was inconvenient to reduce the whole of that strong country at this period, a battalion of Sepoys and five hundred auxiliary horse were left for the protection of the Raja, and the defence of the fort. After these arrangements, a part (April 13.) of the besieging division was detached to assist in the capture of the forts to the northward of Poona, and General Pritzler proceeded to the Carnatic, to place himself under the orders of General Munro. That gallant officer, with a mere handful of men, had taken a number of very strong forts, amongst others, Badamee, which he carried by assault. Having added to his limited means, by raising a great body of irregulars, he had already possessed himself of the country in that quarter. On being reinforced, he immediately marched to the northward, against the remainder of Bajee Rao's infantry, which, in number about four thousand five hundred, with thirteen guns, were levying contributions, under Gunput Rao

Phansay, in the Nizam's districts, near Beejapoor. On hearing of General Munro's approach, they retreated under the walls of the strong fort of Sholapoor, where they were followed up, attacked, routed, and pursued with great slaughter. The pettah of Sholapoor had been previously carried by escalade; and the fort, after a short siege, surrendered. As General Munro advanced from the Carnatic, he sent his irregulars to the right and left of his column of march, who occupied the villages, fought with spirit on several occasions, stormed fortified places, and took possession in name of "Thomas Munro Buhadur."

The Bombay government having conquered the Concan, by its own exertions, Mr. Elphinstone did not interfere in its settlement, especially as few of the difficulties to be apprehended above the Ghauts, existed in the low country. Mr. Pelly and Mr. Marriott were appointed to the charge of the civil duties; the former in the southern, the latter in the northern Concan, or to the territory south and north of the river Penn. Raigurh, famous as the capital of Sivajee, and a place as impregnable as Gibraltar, surrendered to Colonel Prother, on the 7th May: it contained the Peishwa's elder wife, Waranussee Bye; a fortunate shell having set fire to her habitation and destroyed it, she prevailed on the Arab Killidar to capitulate. Waranussee Bye, was allowed to retire to Waee, near Satara, where she resided for nine or ten months, until it was discovered, that her being there, facilitated Bajee Rao's persevering intrigues, when with a suitable escort she was despatched to join her husband at Beithoor.

In regard to the settlement above the Ghauts, General Munro, as we have seen, took possession of the Carnatic, which he subsequently made over to Mr. Chaplin, an experienced civil servant of the Madras establishment, who was appointed, under Mr. Elphinstone, principal collector of the Mahratta country south of the Kistna, and political agent with the Raja of Kolapoor and the southern Jagheerdars.

To the management of the provinces extending from the Kistna to the Nerbuddah, Mr. Elphinstone, at different periods, during the progress of the conquest, appointed four subordinate agents. The territory reserved for the Raja of Satara was the tract between the Warna and the Neera, extending from the base of the Syhadree mountains on the west to Punderpoor on the east, or nearly to the Nizam's boundary. Until reduced, and some progress made in its settlement, the Satara country was managed entirely as a British province. Captain Henry Dundas Robertson had charge of the city and district of Poona, of which he was collector of the revenue, judge, and magistrate. His district lay between the Neera and Beema. From the Beema to the Chandore hills was intrusted to Captain Henry Pottinger, with the same authority as was delegated to Captain Robertson; and Captain John Briggs, in the province of Candeish, in addition to the duties of those officers, was agent for effecting a settlement with the Bheels.

With each of those officers, whose authority nearly resembled that of the great Sur-Soobehdars under the Peishwa's government, experienced natives were appointed to conduct the numerous subordinate situations, with permanent salaries, on a scale of liberality which rendered their offices both in regard to power and emolument exceedingly respectable.

To get possession of the country; to prevent the revenue of the current year, or the treasures of the Peishwa from being made applicable to purposes of hostility; to protect and conciliate the inhabitants; to attempt no innovations, and to endeavour to show the people that they were to expect no change but the better administration of their own laws, were the primary objects to which the commissioner directed the attention of his agents. As the country was drained of British troops, the greater part of which had proceeded in pursuit of the flying Peishwa, the means of those agents were, at first, limited; but by raising irregulars, taking such places as they could reduce, destroying or executing straggling plunderers, especially when they were found torturing or murdering the villagers, opening negotiations with the Killidars of the stronger forts, and representing the hopelessness of resistance, the country with the assistance of such regulars as could be spared, fell almost as fast as men could be collected to keep possession. It not unfrequently happened that irregulars who had left Bajee Rao's service a few days or hours before, entered that of the British government; and instances are adducible, where, having quitted the Peishwa, they were enlisted, subsisted, supplied with ammunition, and fighting for the new government, within little more than twenty-four hours; so readily do the irregular troops of India transfer their allegiance to the prevailing power. To these men the new conquests were frequently of necessity intrusted, and they proved, in no instance, treacherous or disobedient.

By the month of May a small detachment of regulars from Poona, under Major Eldridge, had obtained possession of the numerous hill-forts between that city and the Ahmednugur hills, some of which are as strong as any in the world. The defences are entirely composed of solid rock, in which caves are hewn that render the garrison safe from the effect of shells, and a very few resolute men could maintain an assault against any numbers.

Another small detachment under Lieutenant-Colonel M'Dowell was equally successful in reducing the forts in the Chandore range; and by the end of May the Arabs in Candeish, and the insurgents under the pretended Chitoor Sing in the Satara territory, were the only opponents of the British government, within the dominions of the late Peishwa.

(June 13.) On the 13th June the Arab garrison of the strong fort of Mallygaom surrendered to Colonel M'Dowell, after a very obstinate defence; during which they repulsed an assault and occasioned a loss to the besiegers of upwards of two hundred men in killed and wounded. In the opposite quarter of the country, and on the ensuing day, the fort of Prucheetgurh and the pretended Chitoor Sing were taken by a detachment under Lieutenant-Colonel Cunningham.* These events, except a few detached expeditions in the ensuing season, and the siege of Aseergurh already mentioned, put an end to military operations in the Mahratta territory.

* Prucheetgurh, in a most inaccessible situation, was taken by an enterprise, successful from its apparent impracticability.

A. D. 1819. The progress of the settlement went forward as rapidly as the conquest. After the first instructions were in train, the next object was to obtain full information respecting individuals, that their claims to consideration might be fully understood. Inquiries were also circulated by the commissioner to his agents and by them to their subordinate agents, on the usages and laws of the country, in which all the intelligent part of the community were called upon for their opinions. A mass of valuable information was thus speedily collected, and from the judicious nature of the queries, so far from alarming the inhabitants, an inconvenience to which such interrogatories are particularly liable in India, these, on the contrary, being committed to men who knew the natives, tended to gain their confidence, and were in this respect useful to the new government. To keep down insurrection; to settle claims and rewards consequent upon such a revolution; to make some provision for all who suffered, and to better the condition of those whom the voice of the community pointed out as fit objects of bounty, were a part of the duties which devolved upon the commissioner.

The fort was commanded by an adjoining hill. from which a brisk fire soon drove the besieged from the gate, to seek shelter behind some stone houses in the fort; upon which Captain Spiller suggested the possibility of blowing a hole in the gate with musquetry. This strange breach was effected under a heavy fire from his companions, which prevented the besieged from suspecting what was going forward at the gate. Captain Spiller went in first, but a grienadier Sepoy who attempted to follow, could not get through owing to his cartridge box; Captain Spiller was therefore obliged to return until he had made the entrance sufficiently large, by which time he was joined by Col. Cunningham, and Assistant-Surgeon Radford, when they got in, one by one, concealing themselves in the gateway until their party had entered. They then rushed upon the garrison, completely surprised them, and carried the place without the loss of a man.

In regard to insurrection, vigilance was enjoined and strictly maintained by a system of private intelligence which the Mahrattas consider necessary to good government, and which the state of the country as well as the usage of the people rendered necessary; armed men travelling without passports were required to deposit their weapons; and the hoarded resources of the late government were seized wherever found; but as it was not intended to disarm the Mahrattas, still less to create a vexatious search, which might in the slightest degree interfere with private property, or even to exact from inoffensive individuals all that they were known to possess belonging to Bajee Rao, great relaxation, in these respects, soon took place. After the first year, no passport was required from any body of armed men, not exceeding twenty-five, and no search for treasure was authorized without previously obtaining satisfactory testimony in regard to the information concerning it. A strong military force occupied positions at Belgaom, Kuladgee, Kurar, Satara, Sholapoor, Poona, Seroor, Joonere, Ahmednugur and Mallygaom; and numbers of the enemy's irregular infantry were employed in the British service. The ranks of the auxiliary horse were already filled by men enlisted beyond the borders of the Mahratta country, but more than half the horses which returned from Bajee Rao's army died in the course of six months from the fatigue they had undergone.

The Bheels in the mountains adjoining Candeish, continued to disturb the country for some time after the new government was established. The plan adopted for settling them was to appropriate waste lands for such as chose to cultivate them; and to grant to every chief an allowance for a certain number of men, for which they became bound to restrain the excesses of the rest. To force them to accept of these terms, their supplies which were drawn from the plains were stopped, parties issuing out to plunder were cut off, and vigorous attacks were made on the points in the hills occupied by the refractory chiefs. These measures at length reduced them to submission, but it must be the work of many years to reform their habits.

There were few attempts at insurrection; one conspiracy was detected, which had for its object the release of the pretended Chitoor Sing, the murder of all the Europeans at Poona and Satara, the surprise of some of the principal forts, and the possession of the person of the Raja of Satara. The persons concerned were men of desperate fortunes among the unemployed soldiery; many of them were apprehended and tried; and the ringleaders, some of whom were Bramins, were blown from guns; an example which, though severe, had a great effect in restraining that intriguing race, and preventing similar attempts in the country.

As to claims, the most important upon the British government were those which regarded the settlement with its ally the Nizam; but no arrangement of their mutual affairs could be made, until it had been fully ascertained what surplus revenue the British government should derive from the conquest. The advantages immediately gained by the Nizam were exemption from debts amounting to about sixty millions of rupees; and which on the most moderate estimate, he could not have settled with the Peishwa without making a cession of territory equal to ten lacks of rupees a-year. The shares of revenue, within the boundary of the Soobehdar of the Deccan, which the Peishwa or his subjects had enjoyed up to the breaking out of the war, and of which the Nizam now retained the collections, were more than equal to twelve lacks of rupees a-year, and the cessions which fell to him from the governments of Holkar and the Raja of Nagpoor, amounted to nearly six more; so that the Nizam obtained an addition of at least twenty-eight lacks of rupees of annual revenue.

Though the British government gained much by additional strength and security, it was doubtful how far its income was benefited by the conquest. The provision for the Raja of Satara was completed by a treaty dated 25th September 1819, by which he agreed to hold his territory in subordinate co-operation to the British government; neither to increase nor diminish his military force without its sanction; and as a fundamental condition, he was positively prohibited from holding any intercourse with persons not his own subjects, except through the resident at his court. The Company charged itself with the defence of his territory, which, for a time, was to be governed under an agent of that government, until the Raja and his people were made acquainted with business. *

Next to the provision for the Raja of Satara was a reward to the Raja of Kolapoor; who, on the first declaration of hostilities, espoused the British cause. The much desired districts of Chickooree and Menowlee, with the history of which the reader is already acquainted, were therefore restored to him; a recompence equal to his highest expectation.

The next claims were those of the Jagheerdars; but it may be first proper to mention, that every species of hereditary right not Jagheer, all other rent-free lands, all established pensions, charitable and religious assignments and endow-

* The plan followed in the Raja's country, was simply to amend the native system, and to place the routine of business in that train, which it was possible might be preserved after the interference of the British government was withdrawn. The Raja himself was taught to expect power according to his ability to exercise it, and in a short time laboured as assiduously as any carcoon under his government. The entire powers of the state were formally delivered over to him on the 5th April, 1822, at which period, the boon thus conferred by the British nation on the descendant of Sivajee was certainly appreciated by the country generally, as well as by his relations and himself; but time must prove whether this liberal experiment on the part of the authorities of the East India Company will be attended with any lasting good effect, to the governors or the governed.

ments were restored; and that every promise held out by the proclamation of Satara, was fulfilled without reserve or modification, excepting with respect to the Dukshina which will be subsequently explained. In regard to Jagheers, there were various points for consideration. In the first instance, unless specially exempted, every Jagheer was taken possession of like the territory in the immediate occupation of the Peishwa's agents; and all Jagheers falling within the Nizam's boundary, were declared to be irrecoverably lost to their late owners. Jagheers also, which had been sequestrated by the former government, were not restored. Certain Jaghcedars, whom we shall designate of the first class, were the old Mankurees or native chiefs of the country, whom the reader has it in his power to trace from the earliest history of Maharashtra; such as, the Nimbalkurs of Phultun, the Duflays of Jhutt; the Ghorepurays of Mudhole, &c. &c. Others, in the second class, were the old aristocracy of Sivajee and his descendants, such as the Purdhans, the Pritee Needhee, Angria, and the Raja of Akulkote. A third class was that which was raised by the Peishwas; some of whom had established claims by their early submission or former services to the British government; but even of those dependants of the Peishwa, who had adhered to him to the last, it was, as remarked, "politic and humane to allow them a liberal maintenance, but it was neither required by humanity nor policy, to give such persons the command of troops, paid from the revenue which had fallen into the hands of their conquerors." *

The various claims of each of these classes being considered, the first, or old hereditary Jagheerdars, had the whole of their lands restored. Of the second class, the Punt Suchew was the only one of the Purdhans to whom the Peishwa had left a vestige of power: he was one of the first who joined the British cause after the proclamation of Satara, and his territory, valued at three lacks of rupees, of annual revenue, and which includes the spot where Sivajee first established himself, was immediately placed in his own hands. The Pritee Needhee took the first opportunity of escaping from the Peishwa's camp, and the lands, held in his name, which were assigned for his maintenance, but never committed to his own management, were given up. The Raja of Akulkote was one of those Jagheerdars who, from the first, would have resisted Bajee Rao's authority, had he not been overawed by the subsidiary force; he joined in the war with reluctance, quitted the Peishwa early, and his Jagheer was immediately relinquished. Of the third class of the Jagheerdars, the Putwurdhuns were the most conspicuous; Gunput Rao Putwurdhun of Tasgaom, one of the surviving sons of Pureshram Bhow, never joined the Peishwa, and took an early opportunity, before the Satara proclamation, of assuring Mr. Elphinstone of his determination not to do so; — his lands were confirmed to him. The other members of this powerful family left Bajee Rao about the end of February: a like favourable consideration was shown to them. Appa Dessaye Nepankur did not join the Peishwa till late; he never acted with vigour against the British troops, and, on one occasion, behaved remarkably well to some prisoners. He, as well as the Putwurdhuns and Rastia, maintained a communication with Mr. Elphinstone throughout the war; but as he did not quit the Peishwa's standard until a late period, he lost a part of his Jagheer by the restoration of Chickooree and Menowlee to Kolapoor; and he likewise lost considerably, by revenues within the territory of the Nizam; but for these last he was at a subsequent period partly compensated, and the rest of his Jagheer was restored. Mahdoo Rao Rastia had less reason than any other Jagheerdar for those ideas of honour which induced many of them to adhere to the falling fortunes of him whom they considered the chief of the Hindoos. He quitted Bajee Rao after the affair of Sewnee, and thus lost the claim of fidelity to the Peishwa, or of gratitude to the British government. All Jagheers granted under the Mahratta governments, are for personal support, or the maintenance of troops; and each chief has a certain portion of his Jagheer allotted for the former purpose. To such persons as had forfeited all claim, like Rastia, and even to those who rather feared persecution than expected favour, their personal estates were, in every instance, restored. The Pritee Needhee, the Punt Suchew, the Raja of Akulkote, the Duflays, and the Nimbalkurs, were, at their own request, placed under the Raja's government, and their lands guaranteed to them. To all the great Jagheerdars, the same powers were permitted, within their own territory, as had always existed; and even towards those chiefs who had lost their lands, great delicacy, and as little interference as possible, were enjoined. The equitable and enlightened law, which levels all distinctions, would have been intolerable to men's minds in the existing state of the Mahratta country, and would have been as little relished by the lower as by the higher classes of society.

* Elphinstone's despatches.

The Punchayet was the ordinary tribunal for the decision of civil suits, and it is that which gives, and, if judiciously administered, probably always will give, more satisfaction, and be, in their own opinion, of greater benefit to the natives of Maharashtra, than any other mode of trial. The English officers of government, who had been accustomed to the courts of Udalut, could not reconcile themselves to the corruption, delay, and apparent injustice of some of their decisions; but in commenting on the evils of the Mahratta system, it is to be feared they forgot the many defects of their own. Although Punchayets are continued under the provisional government which is still maintained in the conquered territory, it is to be apprehended they can neither exist, nor have a fair trial, where, whilst some are prejudiced, others, overwhelmed by business of various kinds, are discouraged by the difficulties they find in the system; and a few, (though I do believe such selfishness, in the present state of feeling, to be rare,) considering it at variance with the interests of the civil service, only strive to discover objections, which in some shape may be found to every form of administration, but which time and vigilance would, in this instance, in a great measure remove. On the temper, zeal, and perseverance of the government officers, much must depend: Punchayets, where neglected or merely tolerated, cannot prosper; they require a pure and steady superintendance, with all the weight of authority to correct and amend the faults of the people which are confounded with the defects of the system. A very active able agency would at first be necessary, after a plan of reform had been digested; but once instituted, carefully watched and encouraged at the outset, and carried on for a time, much less interference would become requisite on the part of government, and not only would the natives be called upon to administer justice in the form most popular among them, but, leaving advantages to policy out of the question, the Punchayet might be made a powerful instrument for improving the minds and amending the morals of the natives of India. At present, even in the Mahratta country, those who have a suit will frequently solicit the decision of an English judge; but the same persons, if intelligent men, when exempt from the impulse which influences their opinions under such circumstances, will invariably declare, that the Punchayet, in civil cases, is far better suited to the country at large, than any mode of decision by individuals.

The criminal law, in the conquered territory, was administered as it usually had been, by the decision of individual judges, assisted by Hindoo authority in regulating the measure of punishment; but the evidence and sentences, in all important cases, were subject to the approval of the commissioner before being carried into execution. Punchayets, in criminal cases, had been known in the Satara country, constituted of the servants of government. The same mode was revived in that territory, but Punchayets in criminal cases, might be chosen from the body of the people, although the advantages of a trial by jury would not be at first appreciated, and would require to be introduced by persons thoroughly acquainted with the natives.

The revenue system, of settling with the people through the agents of government, instead of renting the districts, was the means of abolishing many grievances; but in the Peishwa's country, especially in the villages, where a portion of the inhabitants were composed of the soldiery, there was not so much oppression as might have been expected.

The mode of settlement for the Jagheerdars has led to a brief notice of the revenue and judicial system, and in regard to the latter, has called forth reflections which have been seldom intruded on the reader in the plain narrative now about to be concluded.

Mr. Elphinstone took charge of the government of Bombay on the 1st November, 1819, and Mr. Chaplin succeeded him as commissioner for the conquered territory; but liberal pensions in land or money were previously granted to those adherents of the British government whose services, during the revolution, had merited such rewards. The ministers of the late government, wholly unprovided for, and those of the times of Nana Furnuwees, who were pining in want, had also pecuniary assignments for their maintenance during life. Chiefs, not Jagheerdars, who were reduced to absolute indigence, had also a provision according to circumstances.

The Dukshina, as the reader may remember, was a charitable institution, originally established by Dhabary Senaputtee, and perpetuated by the first Bajee Rao and his successors. The great Mahdoo Rao confined the donations principally to poor Bramins, whose proficiency in science and mythology entitled them to distinction; and the rewards were conferred in proportion to their acquirements, moral conduct, and sanctity. During the reign of the second Bajee Rao, though a portion was always reserved as the reward of learning, it degenerated into an indiscriminate distribution, dictated by the superstitious idea of feeding and bestowing on Bramins, as an atonement for sin. Many poor Bramins, however, had become greatly dependant on this charity, and therefore to have stopped it at once, would have been inconsistent with the humane munificence which pervaded every act of the British government in the conquered territory; but to have continued that promiscuous alms to all Bramins, who chose to collect at Poona for the purpose, would have been a wasteful, and in many respects, a useless and pernicious expenditure. It was at first, therefore, bestowed under certain limitations; the portion assigned to men of learning was duly distributed; and, that the benefit to the country might be rendered more essentially important, as the donations at the Dukshina were circumscribed, a Hindoo college was instituted at Poona, where the minds of the youth might acquire such instruction in their own way, as they are disposed to receive in mathematics, astronomy, medicine, &c.; and pains were taken to erase from their elementary books of ethics such principles of morality as have a dangerous or a doubtful tendency. Though the institution of the college, which was committed to Mr. Chaplin, was at first regarded with some signs of distrust, before the end of 1822, there were one hundred and forty-three Bramins, students or candidates for admission, even before fit teachers for all the branches had been found.

The saving to the British government, from the revenues of the Peishwa's territory, after all these arrangements were completed, became very inconsiderable; but by lapses of lives of the pensioners, effectual protection to the country, fortunate seasons, and progressive improvement of agriculture, the revenue in three years increased upwards of seventeen lacks of rupees.

Thus was completed, under the direction of the Honourable Mountstuart Elphinstone, this important change in the government of the Mahratta country. The liberality of the settlement authorized by the Marquis of Hastings, far exceeded the expectations of the people, and more was in consequence done for the tranquillity of the Deccan in eighteen months, than had ever followed a revolution in that disturbed country, after a period of many years. The name of Elphinstone was deservedly associated with the acts of the British government, and the memory of benefits conferred by him on the inhabitants of Maharashtra will probably survive future revolutions; and will do much, in the mean time, to preserve the existence of British India.*

* Authorities as in the preceding.

INDEX.

The following Index is also frequently a glossary. In regard to such words as may not be translated, the reader will always find their explanation in the text or note of the page in which the word is first mentioned.

 The Roman numerals refer to the Volume, and the Arabic figures to the Page.

Abajee, iii. 253.
Aba Chitnees, iii. 167. 181.
Abbajee Poorundhuree, i. 418. 456.
Aba Shelookur, iii. 145. 150. 211.
Abajee Sonedeo, i. 141. 179. 190. Invested with particular authority, 212. Real name of, 235. Death of, 263.
Abdallee, ii. 27. iii. 52. 169.
Abdoolah Khan, Syud, i. 429. 469. Poisoned, 491.
Abdool Khureem Bahlole Khan, i. 256. 260. Appointed regent, 268. 277. Death of, 282.
Abdoolah Kootub Shah, i. 72. 114. 152. 274.
Abdool Mohummud, i. 189. His secret compact with Sivajee, 222. Character, 250.

Abercromby, Sir Robert, iii. 45. 54. 66.
Abdool, Rehman, ii. 46. See Hyder Jung.
Abhee Sing, i. 511. 527.
Abington, Captain, fails in an attempt to surprise Mullungurh, ii. 421.
Abishik, i. 263.
Abou Hoossein, the last of the kings of Golcondah, i. 274. 319. 338. Anecdote of, 344. Confined in Doulutabad.
Adams, Colonel, iii. 399. 456. 466. 473.
Adina Beg, ii. 28. 130.
Adonee, i. 78. 282. 345. Defended by Mohubbut Jung, against Tippoo, iii. 13. Relieved, ibid.
Afrasiab Khan, adopted son of Nujeef Khan, is obliged to relinquish the succession to Mirza Shuffee, ii. 462. Resumes his office on the murder of Mirza Shuffee, 462. Negociates with the English, and with Mahadajee Sindia, 476. Murdered, 480.
Afzool Khan, i. 168. Murder of, 173.
Agra, Battle of, i. 419. Battle of, iii. 29. Battle of, 252. Fort surrenders, ibid.
Ahmedabad, taken by the Mahrattas, ii. 72. Taken by General Goddard, 406.
Ahmednugur, hills of, i. 8. Mention of 72, 73, 74. Kingdom of, 78. 83. Distracted by two factions, 93. Part of, reduced by Akber, ibid. Fort of, betrayed into the hands of the Mahrattas, ii. 122. Made over to Sindia, iii. 147. Taken by General Wellesley, 237. District of, in charge of Captain Pottinger, 485.
Ahmed Shah, Emperor of Delhi, ii. 29. 78.
Ahmed Shah Abdallee invades India, ii. 27. 56., 129, 130. 135. 143. Arrangements after the battle of Panniput, 219.
Ajahut Surdeshmookh, ii. 41.
Ajeet Sing, i. 470.
Ajimere, i. 20.
Akber, i. 93.
Akulkote, i. 78. Origin of the Raja of, i. 417. (See Futih Sing Bhonslay,) Raja of, iii. 494, 495.
Ali Adil Shah I. i. 72. 77. 85. The II., 155. 182. Death of, 256.
Ali Buhadur, iii. 26. Undertakes the conquest of Bundelcund, 75. 235.
Aligurh, iii. 247. Storm of, 248.
Ali Jah, rebellion of suppressed, iii. 119.
Aliverdy Khan. One of Shah Jehan's Generals, i. 114. The usurper of Bengal, 564. ii. 8. 10, 11. 13. 23. 55.
Allahabad, ii. 14.
Alla-ud-deen Khiljee invades the Deccan, i. 45. Usurps the throne, 46.
Alowtay, i. 31. Particular enumeration of, 33.
Alumgeer II. ii. 129. 136.
Amat, one of the eight Purdhans, i. 265.
Ambajee Inglia, iii. 182. 204. 250. 267. 299. Appointed Sindia's minister, 303. Death, 325.
Ameen, i. 227.
Amrut Rao, ii. 199. iii. 123. 129. 144. Becomes prime-minister, 152. Proposes to seize Sindia, 154. Protects the Byes, 163. takes charge of the administration at Poona, 223. And his son Wenaek Rao invested as Peishwa, 224. Quits Poona, 230. Pensioned by the British government, 231.
Anderson, Mr. David, sent as an agent to Kuttack, ii. 449. Deputed to the camp of Sindia to conclude a treaty with the Mahrattas, 456.
Andur or Telingana, i. 1.
Angria, see Kanhojee Angria, i. 368. &c. Mannajee, 521. Sumbhajee, 535. 559. Toolajee, 560. ii. 82. iii. 95, 96. 149.
Annajee Dutto, i. 176. Invested with particular authority, 212. Plunders Hooblee, 258. Left in charge of the Concan, 276. 301.

305. Put to death by Sumbhajee, 308.
Anund Rao Powar, ii. 9. 40.
Anundee Bye, wife of Rugonath Rao, ii. 168. Instigator of Narrain Rao's murder, 249.
Anwar-ud-deen Khan, ii. 22. 30.
Appa Bulwunt, ii. 214. iii. 152.
Appa Dessaye Nepankur, (or Seedojee Rao Nimbalkur,) iii. 191. 343. 345. 354. 437. 495.
Appa Khunde Rao, iii. 27.
Appa Sahib. The son of Pureshram Bhow, iii. 49. 62. 173, 174. 186. 336. 350.
Appa Sahib Bhonslay, the son of Venkajee Munnya Bappoo, iii. 394. Murders Pursajee, 395. 445. Comes in, 451. Arrested, 473. Escapes, 478. 479.
Arass, battle of, ii. 297.
Arcot, ii. 6.
Argaom, iii. 261. Battle of, 262.
Arnee, i. 199. 281.
Arun, i. 16.
Ashrim, i. 16.
Ashtah affair of, iii. 444.
Asif Khan, i. 106.
Assaye, battle of, iii. 239.
Asseer, i. 26.
Asseergurh, iii. 244. 478.
Assud Khan, i. 377.
Attock, i. 45.
Aumil, (or Aumildar,) an agent of government, i. 79, 80.
Augier, Mr., i. 258, 259.
Aurungabad, i. 78. Battle at, ii. 20. 175.
Aurungzebe, i. 111. 125. 151. Attacks Golcondah, 153. Views of conquest in the Deccan, 154. Attacks Bejapoor, 155. Raises the siege and marches for Hindoostan, 159. Usurps the throne, 160. Policy in regard to Sivajee, 164. Grants exemption from customs to the English at Surat, 199. Reasons for not prosecuting the war against Sivajee, 202. Policy in regard to the Deccan, 203, 272, 274. Judicious reasons for not supporting Sumbhajee, 291. Advances with a great army to Burhanpoor. Description of his camp, 329, 330, 331. 336. Reduces Beejapoor, 340. And Golcondah, 343. His means and ability, 352. A remarkable disease in his camp, 357. Seizes several of the English factories, 358 Indecision of, 376. Attacks the forts, whilst an army pursues the Mahrattas, 391. Consents to the Surdeshmookhee, 404. Inconsistency of, 408. Nearly taken by the Mahrattas, 409. Death and character, 410.
Aylah Bye, widow of Khundee Rao Holkar, ii. 196.
Azimabad, ii. 13.
Azim Khan, i. 66. 101. 105.
Azim Oolah Khan, ii. 6.

Baba Rao Phurkay, iii. 114. 139. 140. 152. 223. 333. Given up to Bajee Rao, 350. Death of, ibid.
Baboo Rao Sewdasheo, ii. 9.
Babtee, a revenue term, i. 455.
Badamee, capture of, iii. 11.
Bahminee dynasty, i. 42. Commencement of, 52. List of princes, 53. Immediate causes of decline, 64.
Bahlole Khan, i. 103. 185, 186. 256.
Baillie, Colonel, his detachment destroyed, ii. 433.
Bajee Ghorepuray, i. 142, 143. Is killed by Sivajee, 186.
Bajee Mohitey, i. 134.
Bajee Purvoe, Deshpandya of Hurdus Mawul, i. 149. 181. Heroic death of, 182. Deshpandya of Mhar, 205. Defence of Poorundhur, ibid. Slain by Dilere Khan, 206.
Bajee Rao Bullal, son of Ballajee Wishwanath, i. 427. Appointed Peishwa, 472. 479. Character of, 482. Eloquence, 485. Carries his arms into Malwa, 493. His able generalship, 501. Operations in the Concan, 524. Pecuniary distress of, 528. Negotiations with the Emperor, 529. Appears at the gates of Delhi, 532. Retires, 534. Surrounds Nizam Ool Moolk, and compels him to sign a convention, 541. Treaty with the Rajas of Bundelcund, 552. Plans of, 553. Attacks Nasir Jung without success, 557. Death of, 569. Character, 569.

Bajee Rao Rugonath, i. 11. Birth of, ii. 279. 473. iii. 123. Appearance of, and supposed character, 124. His insidious messages to his cousin, 125. Gains Balleba Tattya, 128. And Doulut Rao Sindia, 129. Exacts an oath from Pureshram Bhow, ibid. Is brought to Poona, 130. Declaration to Nana, ibid. Plot against, 133. Sent off a prisoner, 140. Compact with Ghatgay, 141. brought back to Poona, 144. Invested as Peishwa, 145. Refuses to confirm the treaty of Mhar, 147. Character of 149. Plots against Nana Furnuwees, 150. Seizes the ministers, 152. Fulfils his compact with Ghatgay, ibid. Intends seizing Sindia, 155. Heart fails him, 156. Intrigues with the Raja of Satara, 157. His first idea of the Marquis Wellesley's policy, 169. Deceives Nana Furnuwees, 171. Declines entering on a treaty with the English, 173. Conduct in regard to the alliance against Tippoo, 175. Negotiation respecting the partition of territory, 178. Plans of revenge, 190. Seizure of the Friends of Nana Furnuwees, 191. Conduct to Sindia, 195. Treatment of Rastia, 198. Puts Wittoojee Holkar to death, 199. Renews his negotiation with the English, 203. Negociates with Holkar, 204. Flees from Poona, sending a preliminary engagement to the British resident, 208. Arrival at Bassein, 210. Concludes a treaty there, 225. Conduct immediately subsequent thereto, 226. Invites Sindia and Rughoojee Bhonslay to Poona, 227. Reinstated at Poona 251. Subsequent conduct, 252. Reasons which prevented insurrection against his government, 337. Conduct towards the Prince Needhee, 339. 342. His happiness in the British alliance, 346. His exultation, 353. Raises a brigade of regular infantry, ibid. Extends his views of aggrandizement, 356 Adopts the suggestions of the Moodhee and Trimbukjee, 357. Accusations against the deputy of the late Moodhee, 360. Court of, 361. Revenue, ibid. Superstition, 362. Government, ibid. Conduct to Rastia, 363. Negociates a confederacy, 364. Claims on the Gaekwar, 365. Attempts to justify his intrigues with Seetaram, 372. Conduct towards the Shastree, 375. Raises a secret insurrection, 379. Continues his hostile proceedings with activity, 382. Interview with Mr. Elphinstone, 383. Submits, 384. Concludes a new treaty, 385. The chief enemy of the British, 392. Plunders his own country to prevent suspicion of his being leagued with the Pindharees, 395. Proceeds to Punderpoor, 307. Interview with Sir J. Malcolm at Poona, 408. Vests Gokla with full powers, 410. Restores Jagheer lands, ibid. Endeavours to corrupt the troops, 411, and to murder the resident, 413. Last interview with Mr. Elphinstone, 414. Hesitates, 417. Sends a messenger to Mr. Elphinstone previous to attacking the troops, 421. Appearance of his army, 422. Strength of, 427. Flees from Poona, 430. Conduct of, at Korygaom, 437. Pursuit of resumed, 442. Proceeds towards Chandore, 445. Return of, 472. Hemmed in, 473. Perplexity of, 474. Surrender of, 475.
Bajee Phasalkur, one of Sivajee's earliest followers, i. 130. 179. Killed, 180.
Balapoor (in the Carnatic), i. 121. 281. (In the Deccan), battle of, 467.

Bajee Shamraje attempts to seize Sivajee, i. 145.
Ballajee Aujee, Sivajee's secretary, in whose hand-writing many papers are preserved, which form authorities for this work; put to death, 308.
—— ijee Bajee Rao, i. 559. ii. 3. Succeeds as Peishwa, 4. 13. 14, 15, 16, 17. Marches into Malwa, 25. 32. 44. 47, &c. &c. Death and character, 157.
Ballajee Jenardin, ii. 157. 167. See Nana Furnuwees.
Ballajee Koonjur, iii. 137. 200. 260.
Ballajee Luximon, iii. 338. Barbarously destroys a number of Bheels at Kopergaom, ibid.
Ballajee Punt Nathoo, iii. 410. 414.
Ballajee Wishwanath Bhutt, i. 11. 419. 423. Curious circumstance which led to his rise, 426. Appointed Sena-kurt, 431. Becomes Peishwa, 436. Obtains possession of Poorundhur, 437. Death, 472.
Ballasore, ii. 13. iii. 257.
Balloba Tattya, iii. 127. 128. 150. Determines on setting aside Bajee Rao, 131. Arrested by Sindia, 143. 180. Reinstated, 181. Imprisonment and death, 190.
Bancoote, i. 4. 76. 78. ii. 85. Given over to the English, 87.
Balowtay, account of, i. 31.
Bandal, i. 137.
Bangalore, i. 121. 281. 349. Capture of, iii. 52.
Banians, the representatives of the third grand division or caste of Hindoos, composing the mercantile community, and originally termed Weysh.
Bappoojee Myraul, iii. 369. Openly accuses Trimbukjee Dainglia as the Shastree's murderer, 375.
Bappoojee Naik, ii. 3.
Bappoojee Sindia, iii. 279. 299. 321. 403.
Baptiste, Colonel Jean, iii. 403.
Baramuttee, i. 124. 134.
Barcelore, i. 201. Plundered by Sivajee, ibid.
Barclay, Captain, iii. 259.
Bargeers, horsemen whose horses are not their own property, but supplied by the state, or by individuals, i. 75.
Baroach, i. 3. 267. Taken by the Mahrattas, 335. Taken by General Wedderburn, ii. 272. Bestowed on Mahadajee Sindia, 457. Taken by Colonel Woodington, iii. 245.
Baroda, taken by Mahadajee Gaekwar, i. 514. iii. 210. Siege and capitulation, ibid. Definitive treaty of, 313. New treaty of, 387.
Bassein, i. 4. 75. 78. Siege and assault of, by the Mahrattas, 548. Taken by Goddard, ii. 429. Treaty of, iii. 225. Supplemental articles to treaty of, 258.
Barlow, Sir George, iii. 306. 309. Views in opposition to those of Lord Lake, 310, 311. 317.
Baruh Bhaee, explanation of, i. 82.
Baynes, Captain, iii. 259.
Beder, the capital of the kings of the Bahminee dynasty, i. 41. 60. 71. 77, 78. Reduced by Aurungzebe, 156.
Bednore, i. 257, 259, 567.
Beechwa, a scorpion, a crooked dagger so called, i. 172.
Beega, a measure of land, i. 60.
Beejanugur, i. 47.
Beejapoor, i. 65. 77. Kingdom of, 78. 83. Ruins of, 97. MSS. found at, 98. Moghuls advance against, 115. Peace with, 117. Attacked by Aurungzebe, 157. Affairs of, 165. Truce with Sivajee, 189. Attacked by Jey Sing, assisted by Sivajee, 211. Besieged and siege raised, 216. Treaty with Aurungzebe, 222. State of, ibid. Affairs of, 256. 273. 283. State of, 320. Operations against, 336. Siege of, 339. Reduced, 340. Present state of its ruins, 341.
Bengal Presidency protect the Emperor of Delhi, who afterwards joins the Mahrattas, ii. 324. Supreme council established, 309. Disapprove of the proceedings of the Bombay government, 311. Send an envoy plenipotentiary to Poona, 312. Derive their knowledge of Mahratta affairs from Sabajee Bhonslay, 315. Proceedings on the supposed failure of their mission, 320. Treaty signed, ibid. Terms of the treaty, 321. Determine to support the Bombay government in the Mahratta war, 350. Causes of their conduct, 355. Alliance with Moodajee Bhonslay, 385. Proceedings on receiving intelligence of the defeat of the Bombay army, 390. Subsequent instructions, 393. Projected alliance with Moodajee Bhonslay, 393. And with Sindia, 394. Enter into an alliance with the Rana of Gohud, 405. Signify their intention of making peace with the Mahrattas, 450. Carry hostilities into Sindia's territory, 445. Prepare a detachment to aid in the war against Hyder, 448. Send an agent to Kuttack to facilitate the march of the troops, 449. Negotiation with Chimnajee, son of Moodajee Bhonslay, 450.

Bellary, i. 284. taken by Sivajee, ibid.

Berar, i. 9. 57. 77, 78.

Bergee, a name of the Mahrattas, i. 82, 83.

Bernier, i. 155.

Berud, a class of people resembling the Ramoosees, i. 345. iii. 12.

Bethune, Lieutenant, iii. 63.

Bhagwut, a popular Hindoo poem, i. 21. 128.

Bhaskur Punt, ii. 8. Invades Bahar, 10. 14. 23.

Bhaskur Rao, ii. 170.

Bheds or Vedas, i. 23.

Bheer, i. 8. 25. 103.

Bheels, a predatory tribe, who in their wildest state inhabit the forests and mountains, subsisting by hunting and plundering, i. 7. 33.

Bhewndy, or Bheemree, i. 139.

Bhoje, i. 29.

Bhonslay, i. 44. 88. See Pursojee, Kanhojee, Rughoojee, &c.

Bhoodurgurh, i. 28.

Bhoorup, i. p. 140.

Bhopaul, Nabob of, ii. 384. iii. 391. 393. 467. 470.

Bhopaulgurh, i. 292.

Bhowanee, i. 91.

Bhowanee Bye, ii. 33.

Bhugwa Jenda, the national flag of the Mahrattas, i. 253. 368.

Bhurtpoor, how built, i. 563. Battle near, iii. 28. Raja of, 267. Raja of, joins Holkar, 287. Reduction of, deemed necessary, 291. Siege of, 293. British troops repulsed at, four times, 294. Raja of, sues for peace, 298. Engagement with, continues in force, 312.

Billamore, Lieut. Robert, iii. 419.

Boddam, Mr., iii. 5.

Boglipoor, ii. 14.

Bolts, Mr., ii. 344.

Bombay, i. 28. 76. 253. Revolution at, 323. Attacked by the Seedee, 358. 543. Ceded to the English, 544.

Bombay Presidency, ii. 82. 85. 91. 97. 115. 163. Negociate with Rugonath Rao, 164. Send an envoy to Poona, 201. Disposed to assist Hyder, 216. Their views, 271, 272. Their deliberations on the murder of Narrain Rao, 273. Terms proposed to Rugoba, 275. Proposals from the officer at Tannah, 277. Attack that fortress, 278, and take possession of the whole island of Salsette, 279. Preparations to support Rugoba, 286. Dissent of Mr. Draper, 288. Instructions to the commanding officer of their forces, 289. His limited control, 290. — Prosecute the war against the Mahrattas by sea, 304. Cessions obtained during the war, 305. Reply to the letters from Bengal, 309, and 312. Belief of Rugoba's innocence in the murder of his nephew, 313., and that Mahdoo Rao Narrain was supposititious, 314. Effect produced by the interference of the Bengal Presidency, 316. Treaty signed, and the terms, 320, 321. Dissatisfied, 322. Their conduct, 325. Listen to the overtures of an impostor, Suddaba, ibid. Alarm excited by the arrival of a French agent, 334. Their conduct respecting the treaty of Porrundhur attributable to a letter from the Court of Directors, 348. Preparations to support Rugoba's cause, 349. Require a written invitation from Sukaram Bappoo, 350. Further proceedings, 351. Instructions to their envoy, 356. Their final determination, 358. Subsequent proceedings, 360. New agreement with Rugonath Rao, 363. Dilatory preparations, 364. Strength of their field army, ibid. Issue a proclamation, 365. Proceedings after the convention of Wurgaom, 377. Their distress, 379. Their policy, 380. Urge Colonel Goddard's advance, 387. Offer him a seat in their council, 388. Become acquainted with the intentions of the Bengal government, ibid. Remonstrate against General Goddard's being made independent of their authority, 392. Apprehensive of a confederacy of the Mahrattas, Hyder, and Nizam Ally, 401. Distress from want of funds, 421. Measures proposed, 422. Are pleased at the prospect of peace, 434. The negotiation being broken off, the plan determined on, 440. Remarkable scheme proposed to them, 455.

Boondee, Raja of, iii. 267. 281. 310. Abandoned, 311. Recompensed, 469.

Booshengurh, i, 269.

Bourchier, Mr. Richard, ii. 82. 115.

Bourquin, M., iii. 250. 251.

Boyd, Mr., iii. 141. 144.

Brahma, i. 20.

Bramins, the first of the four grand divisions or castes of Hindoos, i. 9. Account of, 10.

Briggs, Captain, iii. 478. 485.

Brimh, the Divine nature, or Great Spirit, i. 20.

Brimhapooree, long a cantonment of the Moghuls, i. 378. Evacuated, 391.

Brimhacharee, a Hindoo devotee, i. 14. A Bramin boy, 14.

British, policy of, iii. 303. 315.

Browne, Lieut. Col., commands the escort to a convoy of grain and stores, ii. 440. Attacked by the Mahrattas, 441. Joins the army, 442.

Browne, General, iii. 458. 465.

Brownrigg, Major, iii. 191. 197.

Bruce, Captain, the person who suggested Camac's night-attack on Sindia's camp, ii. 447.

Buchanan, Captain Andrew, anecdote of, ii. 90.

Budr-ul-Zeman Khan, iii. 48. Contrary to terms of capitulation made prisoner, 51.

Buhadurgurh, i. 255.

Buglana, i. 2. Raja of, 28. Raja of, joins in an insurrection, 57. 101. 125.

Bukers, Mahratta legends.

Bullee, according to the Mahrattas, is the chief of the dyts, or evil spirits, i. 20.

Bulwunt Rao Mendlee, ii. 103. 140.

Bun, one of the divisions of Gosaeen, i. 16.

Bunce, Major, iii. 403.

Bundelcund, Bajee Rao obtains part of, i. 515. 552. Rajas of, treaty concluded with, ii. 27. iii. 75. Conquest of, by the British, 257. 470.

Burbur, i. 4.

Burdwan, ii. 14.

Bureed Shahee dynasty, i. 71.

Burhanpoor, i. 77. Plundered, 335. Battle of, 465. Treaty of, iii. 266.
Burn, Lieutenant Colonel, iii. 288.
Burr, Lieutenant Colonel, iii. 422. 425.
Burtinneeas, i. 34.
Busalut Jung, ii. 106. Alliance with Hyder Ally, 177.
Bussy, Monsieur, ii. 51. 65. 94. 106. 110.
Buttees Serala, i. 177.
Byes. Insurrection of, against Sindia, 162. Progress of, 179. Agree to an adjustment, 182. Recommence their system of depredation, ibid.
Bythereedynasty, list of the princes of, i. 72.
Bythroo, a Hindoo deity, i. 22.
Byragees, Hindoo devotees, i. 16, 17.

Camac, Lieutenant Colonel Jacob, ii. 446. Retreat of, ib. Surprises Sindia's camp, 449.
Candeish, i. 2. 77, 111. 249. iii. 495.
Canoond, siege of, iii. 82.
Carnac, Mr. John, ii. 360. 361. 365, 366. Proposes a retreat, 369. 376. 378.
Carnatic, one of the five great Hindoo divisions of the Deccan, i. 1. Definition, 2. 4. 79. 83. 124. 274. Beejapoor and Hyderabad Carnatic, 346. Detachment sent to, 349. People of, 405. Plan of expedition against, under Rughoojee Bhonslay, 553. 555. Commission for invading, 556.
Carcoon, for a particular explanation of this word, see, i. 123.
Carwar, i. 201.
Catrou, i. 195. 204.
Caulfield, Captain, iii. 405. 464.
Cavalry, of Sivajee, i. 226.
Chakun, description of, i. 61. Mention of, 92. 131. Siege of, 193. Restored to Sivajee, 221. Taken by Delere Khan, 284, iii. 442.
Chandah taken, iii. 474.
Chandore, i. 2. 115. Taken by Colonel Wallace, iii. 291.
Chaplin, Mr. iii. 485. 500.
Chaund Beebee, i. 93.
Cheetoo, iii. 329. 455. 465. 467. 478.
Chela, or disciple, i. 15.
Chickooree and Menowlee, iii. 344, 345. 350. 492.
Child, Sir John, i. 324.
Chimnajee Appa, i. 427. 503. Death of, ii. 7. iii. 123. Invested as Peishwa, 134 Investiture annulled, 145. Surrenders himself, 474.
Chintamun Rao Putwurdhun, iii. 192.
Chisholm, Lieut., iii. 435.
Chitnees, secretary, or clerk of correspondence.
Chitoor Sing, iii. 159. 182. 185. 377. 487.
Cholera Morbus, iii. 17.
Chougula, the Patell's assistant, i. 31.
Chouth, origin of, i. 210. First imposed on a Moghul province, 249. Mention of, 266. 281. Negotiation for obtaining, 446. The imperial grant for, 450.
Chowan, i. 87.
Chunda Sahib, ii. 3. Brought a prisoner to Satara, 5. 29.
Chunder Rao Moray, i. 84, 85. 138. 145. 147. Murder of, 148.
Chunder Seyn Jadow, i. 423. 426. Joins the Moghuls, 428.
Clarke, Sir William, iii. 216. Storms the entrenchments at Kurree, 217.
Clive, Colonel, ii. 87. Assumes the government of Bengal, as Lord Clive, 190. Proposes an alliance with the Nizam, against Hyder and the Mahrattas, 192.
Close, Colonel, iii. 208. His interview with Holkar, after the battle of Poona, 209. Quits Poona and repairs to Bassein, 225. 346. Leaves Poona, 347. Captain, 400.
College, Hindoo, instituted, iii. 500.
Concan, i. 4. description of, 5.
Concanee Bramins, i. 11.

Concan Ghaut Malsta, vol. i. 5. Description of, 7. 50.
Concanist, or inhabitant of the Concan, peculiarly applicable to a class of Bramins, i. 11.
Conflans, M., ii. 118.
Coote, Sir Eyre, assumes the command of the Madras army, ii. 437.
Cornwallis, Marquis of, iii. 41. Assumes command of the field army, 52. Resolves to undertake the siege of Seringapatam, 55. Obliged to raise the siege, 56. Unexpectedly joined by the Mahrattas, ibid. Reduces the Baramahal, 59. 66. Concludes a treaty with Tippoo, 67. Endeavours to effect a general treaty of guarantee, 107. Returns to India, 304. Policy pursued by, ibid. Death of, 306.
Court of Directors, approve of the Bombay measures, ii. 328.
Cunningham, Lieut. Colonel, iii. 488.
Cutwa, ii. 11, 12. 14.
Customs, 37. Mode of levying, ibid.

Dabul, i. 56. Plundered and burnt by the Portuguese, 74. Mention of, 138. Taken by Sivajee, 178.
Dadajee Konedeo, i. 123. His revenue system, 126. Mention of, 132. Death of, 133.
Dadoo Nursoo Kallay, i. 59.
Dajeeba Limmay, iii. 186.
Damaun, i. 3. Taken by the Portuguese, 76.
Daood Khan Punnee, i. 373. 384. 423. Removed to Guzerat, 426. Killed, 442.
Daood Khan, i. 247. Defeated by Sivajee, 248.
Dara Shekoh, eldest son of Shah Jehan, i. 154. 158. Put to death, 159.
Dass (or servant), i. 16.
Dates. Account of the eras now used in the Mahratta country, i. 55.
Davies, Lieutenant Evan, iii. 581.
Dawes, Captain, iii. 204.
Deacon, Lieut. Col., iii. 442.
De Boigne, memoir of, ii. 476. iii. 27, 28, 29. Regular infantry of, 35. Personal energy of, at Patun, 73. Augmentation of his force, 74 Plans the attack at Lukhairee, 83. 181. 235. Last advice to Sindia, 246.
Deccan, ancient definition of, according to Hindoo geographers, i. 1. Modern definition, 75. 83. State of, 273. 319. 351. 400. Operations of General Wellesley in, from 236 to 245., and from 259 to 267.
Deeg, battle of, iii. 289. Fort stormed, 291.
Delhi, plundered by Nadir Shah, i. 547. Battle of, iii. 250. Defence of, 286.
Deogaom, treaty of, iii. 263. Alteration in, 312.
Deogurh, i. 4. 28. Mahomedans appear before it, 45, 46. Its name changed to Doulutabad.
Deos (or good spirits), i. 20.
Desh (or open country above the Ghauts), also a country, or a subdivision of a country.
Deshist (Bramin inhabitants of the Mahratta country above the Ghauts), i. 11.
Deshmooks, i. 38, 39. 50. 77. 131 233. Remarkable scheme proposed by them to the Bombay government, ii. 453.
Deshpandya, i. 38. Remarks concerning, 39, &c. See Deshmookh.
Dessaee, i. 38.
Dewee Bhowanee, i. 22. 89. 184.
Dewan. The chief minister, or agent, subordinate to the Purdhans, i. 237. Under the Moghuls, the officer in charge of the revenue administration of a district, 347.
Dhabaray. See Khundee Rao, Trimbuck Rao, and Yeswunt Rao.
Dhar, i. 481. ii. 9.
Dharoor, i. 103, 104.
Dharwar, i. 257. iii. 48. Description of, ibid. Siege of, 49. Capture of, 51. Conduct of the Killidar of, 358. Invested by the troops of Bajee Rao, 359.

Dher (a very low class of Hindoos), i. 14. Duties on the village establishment, 33.
Dhoolup Anund Rao, the Peishwa's admiral, iii. 95.
Dhoondia Waug, iii. 176. 191. Vengeance on Dhondoo Punt Gokla, 192. Killed, 193.
Dhunda Rajepoor, 73. 139. 255.
Dhund Karinya, i. 25.
Dhunnajee Jadow, i. 262. 365. 375. 380. Anecdote respecting, 406. Joins Shao, 417. Death of, 423.
Dilawur Khan, i. 61.
Dilere Khan, i. 202, 203. Besieges Poorundhur, 204. 206. Soothed by Sivajee, 208. Removed for a short time to Malwa. 217. Besieges Chakun, 251. 254. Mention of, 267. 275. 282. 291.
Directors, Court of, i. 324. See English East India Company.
Diu, built, i. 76.
Dodairee, battle of, i. 383.
Don, Lieut. Col., iii. 276. 288.
Donkin, Major General, iii. 400 458. 465.
Doolan, lieutenant, iii. 63.
Doorga Bye, regent of Sawuntwaree, iii. 345. Extraordinary behaviour of, 352.
Doorga Dewee, a dreadful famine so called, i. 59.
Dost Ally, i. 565. ii. 3.
Doulutabad, i. 28. 48. Besieged by Mohummud Tughluk Shah, 50. Siege raised, ibid. 66. 73. Besieged, 107. Capitulates, 109.
Doulut Rao Sindia, succeeds his grand uncle, Mahadajee, iii. 91. Marches to Poona, 130. Obtains a temporary ascendancy over the house of Holkar, 148. Arbitrary interference in regard to Angria, 149. Espouses the daughter of Ghatgay, 152. Conduct on the fall of Seringapatam, 176. Distracted state of his affairs, 179. Conduct of, upon the death of Nana Furnuwees, 189. 193. Cause of his military imbecility, 196. Sets out for Hindoostan, ibid. Sends his army across the Nerbuddah, 198. Refuses to become a party to the defensive alliance, 227. His views of English policy, 228. Unites with Rughoojee Bhonslay, to obstruct the operations of the treaty of Bassein, 229. Negotiations, 232. Army of, 235. Misconduct of, at Assaye, 243. Treaty with, 265, 266. Agree to assist against Holkar, 275. Apprehended rupture with, 298. Holkar joins him, 301. Concludes a treaty with the British, 306. Declaratory articles to, 311. Situation of, 317. 323. Establishes his camp at Gwalior, 324. 330. 400. Terms dictated to, by Lord Hastings, 401. 405. 464.
Doveton, Brigadier General, iii. 399. 451. 472.
Drawed, one of the great divisions of the ancient Deccan, i. 1. 4.
Dubbers, iii. 10. How made, ibid.
Dubeer, or minister for foreign affairs, i. 236
Dubhoy, battle of, i. 507. Capture of, ii. 404.
Dudrenec, Chevalier, iii. 75. 83. 92. 195. 235. Surrenders himself, 253.
Duflay, i. 84. 87. 353.
Dukshina, origin of, i. 510. iii. 499.
Dulwey, i. 138. 185. 188.
Dummajee Gaekwar, i. 472. See Gaekwar.
Dummajee Gaekwar, ii. 9. 17, 18. 32. 38. 48. 67. 172. Assists Rugonath Rao, 199.
Dummajee Thorat, i. 433. Anecdote of, ibid. Taken, 437.
Duncan, Mr. Jonathan, iii. 212.
Dupleix, M., ii. 45.
Dureea Sagur, i. 188.
Durruk, an office. Durrukdar, the holder of an office. A list of eight offices, to which the term Durruk is especially applied, will be found, i. 237.
Durya Bye, widow of Janojee Bhonslay, ii. 244.
Dyts (or evil spirits), i. 20, 21.

Edil, Shahee dynasty. List of, 72.
Eedgeer, i. 78.
Egerton, Colonel Charles, commanding officer of the Bombay forces, ii. 362. Appointed to the command of the army against the Mahrattas, ibid. His mode of warfare, 366. Indisposition, 368. Advances to Tullygaom, ibid.
Eldridge, Major, iii. 487.
Elichpoor, i. 46.
Ellora, i. 88.
Elphinstone, Honourable M., iii. 265. Appointed resident at Poona, 347. 350. 379. 382, 383, 384. 409. 416. Receives instructions as commissioner from the governor-general, 459. Arrangement and settlement of the country, from 484—501.
Enam, a gift; also land free from all rent to government. Enamdar, the possessor of rent free lands.
English, i. 253. Their treaty with Sivajee, 264. State of, A. D. 1740. 566. First campaign against Tippoo, iii. 45. Neutral policy of, 109. System of policy reversed, 168. Policy of, 303. 317.
English East India Company, i. 323. Territorial views, ii. 164. Their situation described, 184. Their instructions and designs, 191. Appointed Dewan to the nabob of Bengal, Bahar, and Orissa, 221. Direct an envoy to be sent to the Court of Poona, 270. Despatch respecting the treaty of Surat, 328. Confirmed in a subsequent letter, 348. Despatch respecting the Mahratta expedition and Wurgaom convention, 378. iii. 213. 390.
Eras, a particular account of those now in use in the Deccan, i. 55.
Eroor Manjera, i. 2.
Eusoof, Adil Khan, i. 66. Founds the Edil Shahee dynasty, 70.

Factors, English, several of them seized and confined by Sivajee, i. 183.
Farmer, Mr., his letter to the Governor of Bombay respecting St. Lubin, ii. 346.
Fawcett, Lieutenant Colonel, iii. 276.
Fazil, Mohummud Khan, i. 178. 181.
Ferishta, i. 28. 83. 97.
Ferokhsere, i. 441. Put to death, 448.
Filoze, Michael, iii. 77. 84. Seizes Nana Furnuwees, 150.
Firman, a royal order, an edict, a commission.
Fitzgerald, Captain, iii. 448. Charge of, 449.
Fleury, iii. 249.
Ford, Captain, iii. 353. 407. 417. Interview with Moro Dixit, 419, 427.
Forde, Colonel, ii. 119.
Foujdar, the Moghul military governor of a district, i. 342. 347.
Francisco de Almeyda, i. 74.
Frazer, Major General, iii. 289. Killed, ibid.
Frederick, Colonel, iii. 50. Death of, 51.
French, i. 247. 263. State of, 566.
Fryer, i. 155.
Fukhir Ool Moolk, i. 66.
Fuqeer, a Mahomedan beggar, i. 15.
Furnuwees, or Furnees, deputy auditor, and accountant, i. 237.
Fusslee era, i. 32.
Futih Sing Gaekwar, alliance concluded with, and the terms, ii. 404.
Futih Hyder, iii 61.
Futih Khan, the Seedee, i. 246.
Futih Khan, the son of Mullik Umber, i. 100. Strangles Mortiza Nizam Shah, 105. Death of, 109.
Futih Oolla Ummad Ool Moolk, founder of the Ummad Shahee dynasty, i. 71.
Futih Sing Bhonslay, ii. 5. 41.
Futih Sing Manay, iii. 202. 205. Killed, 339.
Futih Yab Khan, ii. 19.

Gadee, the cushion of state on which the Peishwa sat as the delegate of the Rajas of Satara: It is similar to the musnud, inferior to the throne, and assumed by all the independent Hindoo chiefs, 571.

Gaekwar, Dummajee, i. 472. Peelajee, 473. 489. 509. Appointed Sena Khas Kheyl, 510. Assassinated, 514. Dummajee, 527. Family dispute explained, ii. 280. Futih Sing supported by the ministerial party, Govind Rao by Rugoba, 283. Treaty concluded with Futih Sing, 303. Dissatisfied with the treaty made by Colonel Upton, 334. Pays arrears of tribute, and is appointed Sena Khas Kheyl, 340. Govind Rao, cause espoused by Sindia, iii. 84. Futih Sing, death of, 98. Disputed regency, 94. Death of Mannajee, final succession of Govind Rao, ibid. Attempt to dismember the territory prevented by the interference of the English, 95. Govind Rao, 211. Death of, 214. Mulhar Rao, 215. Kanhojee, 214. Mulhar Rao surrenders, 217. Disappears from Neriad, and Kanhojee escapes, 219. Kanhojee surprises the advanced guard at Sauree, 220. Force dispersed, 221. Definitive treaty with the Gaekwar, 312. Peishwa's claims upon, 365. Kanhojee and Mulhar Rao, 366. Peishwa's claims, 369. Counter-claims, 370. New treaty, 387.
Gahan, Lieutenant Colonel, iii. 451.
Galna, i. 78. 111. Taken by Colonel Walker, iii. 291.
Gaolees, or milksellers, i. 15.
Gaom, a village in the Deccan is so termed, i. 30.
Gassee Ram Kotwal, horrid cruelties of, iii. 189. Stoned to death, ibid.
Gawel, i. 66.
Gawelgurh, taken by Colonel Stevenson, iii. 263.
Gayetri, a mystical verse, i. 15.
Geerdhur Buhadur, i. 488. Killed, 513.
Ghas-dana, or forage money, origin of, i. 375.
Ghauts, i. 2. Explanation of, 5.
Ghazee-ud-deen Khan, (formerly Shahabodeen Khan), i. 327. Relieves Azim Shah, 337.
Gheriah, i, 188. ii. 86.
Ghatgay, Joojar Rao, i. 84. Ram Raja, 86. Joojhar Rao, 174. Ghatgay, 267. 276. 285. 555. Shirzee Rao, 428. 430. ii. 212.
Ghazee-ud-deen, ii, 29. 44. 56.
Gholam Kawdir, iii. 26. 28. Cruelties of 30. Death of, 31.
Ghorepuray, i. 84. 87. ii. 2.
Ghuffoor Khan, iii. 322. 463.
Ginjee, Sivajee obtains possession of, i. 279. Mention of, 349. Siege of, 377. 381. Capture of, 385.
Ghutka, a mode of reckoning time: each Ghutka equal to about 24 minutes, i. 55.
Goa, i. 3. 63. 66. Taken by the Portuguese, 74. Retaken by Eusoof Adil Khan, ibid. Finally conquered by Albuquerque, 75. 190.
Gocurn, i. 201.
Goddard, Lieutenant Colonel, succeeds to Colonel Leslie's command, ii. 383. His march, 384. Empowered to treat with the Raja of Nagpoor, 386. Urged to advance by the Bombay government, 387. His march to the Western coast, 388. Reaches Surat, and repairs to Bombay, ibid. Appointed Brigadier General, 392. Endeavours to negociate peace, ibid. Receives Rugoba. Grants him an allowance, 400. Termination of his negotiations with Nana Furnuwees, 401. Visits Bombay, 402. Intercepts a correspondence between Nana Furnuwees and the Dutch governor at Surat, 403. Negociates with Futih Sing Gaekwar, 403. Captures Dubhoy, 404. Concludes a treaty with Futih Sing, ibid. Takes Ahmedabad by storm, 405. Advances against Sindia and Holkar, 408. Terminates the negotiation with Sindia, 410. Partially surprises Sindia's camp, 412. Marches to the Nerbuddah, 415. Operations in the Concan, 422. Invests Bassein, 425. Takes the part of Arnaul, 434. Appointed Commander-in-chief, 435. Advances towards the Ghauts, ibid. Encamps at Campoly, 436. Failure of this movement in the results expected, 439. Attack made on a convoy of grain and stores, 440. Prepares for his retreat, 442. Harassed by the Mahrattas during his march, 443. Reaches Panwell, 444. Extensive plans proposed for active operations against the Mahrattas, 452. Proceeds to Guzerat, and returns, 453.

Gohud, Rana of, ii. 196. 403. iii. 267, 268. 307. 312.

Gokla, iii. 47. 173. Dondhoo Punt killed, 192. Bappoo Gokla loses an eye, ibid. Reduces the Pritee Needhee, 340. 342. Acquires wealth, 343. Invested with full powers, 410. Conduct at the battle of Khirkee, 424. Interview with the resident's Moonshee, 429. 437. Killed, 444. 482.

Golcondah, i. 78. 84. 150. 153. 255. 273, 274. 282. 335. Reduced, 345.

Gondwaneh, one of the great divisions of the Deccan, i. 1. Situation of, 2.

Goojurs, Banians or Bramins of Guzerat, i. 10, 11, 12.

Gooroo, the chosen instructor and intercessor of an individual, i. 22.

Goorow, the person who washes the idol in the village temple, i. 52.

Goozur, i. 84.

Gopaul Hurry, ii. 116.

Gopika Bye Rastia, ii. 120. 168.

Gopaul Rao Bhow, iii. 83.

Gopaul Rao Govind Putwurdhun, Jagheerdar of Merich, ii. 167.

Gosaeens. Hindoo devotees followers of Mahdeo, i. 16. Account of, 17. Sindia employs large bodies of, iii. 53, 54.

Govind Punt Boondelay, ii. 135. 145.

Govind Rao Chitnees, ii. 48.

Govind Rao Kallay, iii. 106. 110. 172.

Govind Rao Pingley, iii. 106. 152 157. 212.

Grant, Keir, Brigadier General, iii 399. 466.

Grant, Lieutenant Alex. anecdote of, at the battle of Assaye, iii. 242. Lieutenant John, heroic death of, at Seetabuldee, 450.

Grantham, Sir Thomas, i. 323.

Grehusth, or Bramin householders, i. 15.

Gunga Bye, widow of Narrain Rao, ii. 259. Her death, 344.

Gung-thuree, or track adjoining the banks of the Godavery, i. 9.

Gungadhur Yeswunt, ii. 196. Hatred to Mahdoo Rao and its cause, 200.

Gungadhur Shastree, iii. 368. Proceeds to Poona, 371. Murdered, 375.

Gunput Rao Phansay, iii. 356.

Gunput Rao of Nagpoor, iii. 443. 452. Holkar's Dewan, 459.

Gunputtee, a Hindoo deity, i. 22.

Guntoor, district of, surrendered, iii. 40.

Gurhkurees. Persons attached to Sivajee's forts, having lands in its immediate neighbourhood appropriated for their subsistence, i. 232.

Gurrah, ii. 9.

Gursee, or pipers, i. 25. 35.

Gurumcondah, ii. 60. Masking party at surprised, 61.

Guzerat, i. 10. 400. 477. 488. Appearance of, 493. Chouth of, obtained, 503. Mention of, 527. ii. 66. iii. 211. State of, when the English are called in, 214. Continuation of its history, 365.

Gwalior, i. 94. Taken by surprise, ii. 420. iii. 323. Sindia establishes his camp at, 324.

Hafiz Fureed-ud-deen Khan, iii. 41. Killed, 61.

Harcourt, Lieutenant-Colonel, iii. 257.
Hardyman, iii. 399. 452.
Hartley, Captain, ii. 370. His gallant conduct, 372. Raised to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, 379. Sent down from Guzerat to assist the troops in the Concan, 415. Opens the campaign in the Concan, 423. Attacked by the whole Mahratta army at Doogaur, 427. Which he defeats, 428. Appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of His Majesty's 73d regiment, 450. Colonel, iii. 45.
Hastings, Marquis of, ii. 388. 390, 391. His plans for suppressing the predatory system, 397. Determines to put an end to the dynasty of the Peishwas, 439. Operations, 457.
Hastings, Warren, ii. 311. His opinion of the conduct of the Bombay government, 317. Disapproves the treaty of Poorundhur, 328. Sends a detachment of troops across the Peninsula of India, 354. His conduct on hearing of the defeat of the Bombay army, 390. Proposes peace to the Peishwa through Moodajee Bhonslay, 432. Returns to England, 482.
Havildar, the commandant of a fortress, i. 231. A civil officer, 233. In the British native infantry, a non-commissioned officer, the same as a serjeant in European regiments.
Hessing, iii. 77. 84. 167. 197.
Hetkurees, the Concan infantry, i. 224.
Heedayet Moideen Khan, ii. 20. Dignified with the title of Muzuffir Jung, 23.
Hill forts, i. 59. Generally much neglected, 129. Reason why seldom garrisoned by Mahomedans, 130.
Himadh Punt, i. 42.
Himmut Buhadur, iii. 33. Suggests the conquest of Bundelcund, 75. 235. 258.
Hindoo village, divisions of, i. 30.
Hindoostan, operations in, iii. from 245. to 257.
Hirpal Deo, i. 47. Flayed alive, ib.
Hislop, Sir Thomas, iii. 398. 442. 456. 462. 471. 473.
Holmes, Major, gallant conduct of at Sauree, iii. 220.
Holkar Mulhar Rao, origin of, i. 478. 495. 526. 533. 559. His Jagheer in Malwa, ii. 40. Death of 196. Tookajee, ibid. iii. 14. Raises regular infantry, 75. In the interests of Nana, 137. Death of, 148. Dispute amongst his sons, ibid. Mulhar Rao killed, ibid., and his infant son confined, 149. See Jeswunt Rao and Khassee Rao Wittoojee Holkar executed, 199. State of Holkar after Jeswunt Rao's death, 321, 522. Holkar's durbar, 459.
Home, a particular Hindoo ceremony, i. 16.
Hooblee, plundered by Sivajee, i. 258.
Hooghly, ii. 12.
Hoojrats, personal cavalry, iii. 336.
Hoolee festival, i. 89.
Hooly Onore, iii. 62.
Hoossein Ally Khan, i. 428. 441. Yields the Chouth, Surdeshmookhee and Swuraje to the Mahrattas, 446. Assassinated, 468.
Horses, where reared, i. 9. How subsisted, 229. 316.
Hornby, Mr., his minute in council on Mahratta affairs, ii. 345. His fortitude, ability and vigour, 381. His minute regarding Mahratta politics, 382. His plan of operations against the Mahrattas, 389.
Hudeequ-i-alum, a Persian history frequently quoted, i. 428.
Hullal, i. 33. Lawful.
Humaioon, i. 76.
Humbeer Rao Mohitey, i. 262. 267. 283. 286. 292. 501. Declares for Sumbhajee 502. Plunders Burhanpoor, 333. Killed, 348.

Hunter, Cornet, iii. 428. 481.
Hurdus Mawul, i. 137.
Huree, a name of Vishnoo, i. 16.
Hurjee Raja Mahareek, i. 309, 310. 349.
Hurnak Pohl, i. 56.
Hurnkassee, i. 29. 56.
Hurry Punt Phurkay, ii. 167. 258. Advances against Rugonath Rao, 263. Returns to Poorundhur, 267. Renews the pursuit of Rugoba, 280. Enters Guzerat, 286. Defeated at Arass, 297. And at Bowpeer, 300. Returns to the Deccan, 305. Marches into the Carnatic, 336. Proceeds to Merrich, 338. Retires from the Concan to Poona, 435. Commands the army which advances against General Goddard, 437. iii. 12. Conference with Nizam Ally, 53. 61.
Hurry Punt Putwurdhun, iii. 114. Kills Lal Khan, ibid.
Hybut Rao Nimbalkur. Ancestor of the Nimbalkurs of Barsee under the Nizam's government, i. 379. 428.
Hyder Ally, ii. 104. 117. His rise, 177. Plan of operations against Mahdoo Rao, 213. Defeated by the Mahrattas, 215. Treaty with the Mahrattas, 217. 253. Takes advantage of the division amongst the Mahrattas, 268. His conquests during the civil war amongst the Mahrattas. 335. Outwitted by Hurry Punt Phurkay, 338. Conquers the territory south of the Kistna, 399. Jealous of the English; connects himself with the French, 400. Invades Arcot, 421. His death, 466.
Hyderabad, i. 153. 319. 338. Becomes the capital of Nizam Ool-Moolk, 496. Chouth and Surdeshmookhee relinquished, 497.
Hyder Jung, the Dewan of M. Bussy, ii. 47. 110. Murdered, 114.
Hyder Koolee Khan, i. 468. 470.

Ibrahim Adil Shah, i. 72. 75, 76. 83. 86. 95, 96.
Ibrahim Khan Gardee, ii. 119. 121. 139. 144. Put to death, 155.
Ikhlass Khan, a Moghul officer, 252. A Patan officer, 361. Afterwards received the title of Khan Alum, 409. Killed in the battle of Agra, 419.
Indapoor, i. 124. 134.
Indore, battle of, iii. 201. Plundered by Shirzee Rao Ghatgay, ibid. Taken by the Bombay detachment, 291.
Indra, according to the Mahrattas, is chief of the Deos or good spirits, i. 20. 21.
Infantry of Sivajee, i. 224. Regular, iii. 35. 92. Opinions respecting, 105.
Iradut Khan, i. 101.
Ismael, i. 49. 50.
Ismael Beg, iii. 22. 26. 28. Defeated at Agra, 29. Defeated at Patun, 73. Taken and sent into perpetual confinement, 83.
Jadow Ramdeo Rao, i. 28. 45. Jadow, chief of the Naiks, incites insurrection, 57. Family of, 84. 88. Lookjee Jadow Rao, ibid. Jugdeo Rao, 100. 121. Jadow Rao co-operates against Sivajee, 162. See Dhunajee and Chunderseyn Jadow.
Jagheer. Of Jagheers, which are lands or assignments of revenue, there are two kinds. The one is military, the other personal; the former is for the purpose of maintaining a body of troops for the service of the state, the latter is for the support of an individual or family. A Jagheer is never, like an Enam, entirely freehold; some service can, by the original tenure, be required.
Jagheerdars, southern, mode of settlement, iii. 349. Final settlement with, iii. 492.
Jain, a remarkable sect in India, whose worship nearly resembles that of the Boodhists, i. 12.
Jamdar, treasurer in charge of all valuables, except cash.

James, Commodore, ii. 85.
Janojee Bhonslay, ii. 38. 45. 55. 75. 118. 156. 168. 171. 183. 202. Adopts his nephew, and dies, 244.
Janojee Nimbalkur, ii. 95.
Janwa, a distinguishing mark of cast, consisting of a few threads worn next the skin, and passing diagonally across the right shoulder, i. 15.
Jee, an adjunct of respect, i. 89.
Jeejee, the mother of Sivajee, i. 90. 92. 121.
Jeejee Bye, widow of Sumbhajee of Kolapoor. Adopts a son, ii. 337.
Jehanjeer, i. 101.
Jenardin Punt, i. 266. 286. Defeats Dilere Khan, 293. Taken by Sumbhajee, 302. Released, 310. Death, 387.
Jenkins, Mr., iii. 466. 475.
Jeswunt Rao Bhow, iii. 403. 464.
Jeswunt Rao Ghorepuray, i. 389. iii. 260. 411.
Jeswunt Rao Holkar, iii. 148. 195. Rise of 194. Defeats Hessing and M'Intyre, 197. Repulsed by Brownrigg, ibid. Threatens the murderers of his brother, 200. Defeated at Indore, 201. Carries the war into the Deccan, 203. Advances on Poona, 204. His reply to Bajee Rao, 205. Defeats Sindia's army at Poona, 207. Apparent moderation of, 209. Levies a contribution from Poona, 223. Plunder and extortions of, 224. Retires towards Malwa, 231. Excuses himself from joining in the confederacy, 232. Motives, 270. Negotiations with General Lake, 272. Menacing letter to General Wellesley, 274. War declared against, by the British Government, 275. Advances against Monson, 278. Advances triumphantly to Muttra, 285. Is surprised at Furruckabad, 290. And in the neighbourhood of Bhurtpoor, 297. Joins Sindia, 301. Takes the route of the Punjab, 306. Sues for peace, 308. Granted, 309. Terms, ibid. Declaratory articles, 311. Condition of, 317. Murders his nephew, 319. And brother, 320. Insanity; death and character, ibid.
Jeswunt Sing, Raja of Joudpoor, i. 194. 197. Recalled, 204. Sent back, 217. Character of, 219. Mention of, 240. 250.
Jey Sing, Raja of Jeypoor, i. 202. Attacks Sivajee's possessions, 204. Death of, 217. The friend of Bajee Rao, 516. ii. 6. 10. 15. 16. iii. 267, 321, 390. 393. 469.
Jhats, origin of, i. 563. iii. 27.
Jhep, ii. 209.
Jinjeera, i. 139, 184, 244. Fleet transferred to the Moghuls, 246. 311. Assault on, repulsed, 312. 525. iii. 96.
Jones, Lieut., iii. 435.
Jooba Bukshee, iii. 112. 114. 127, 128.
Jooghar Rao Ghatgay, i. 84. 174. 186.
Joonere, i. 8. 61. 73. Plundered by Sivajee, 162.
Joshee, or astrologer, one of the village establishment, i. 32.
Joudpoor, Raja of, (see Jeswunt Sing,) ii. 133. iii. 267. 321. 469.
Jowlee, i. 138. Taken by Sivajee, 149.
Joteba, a Hindoo deity, i. 22.
Juggut Sett Alumchund, ii. 12.
Jug Jeewun, ii. 32. 41.
Jummabundee, i. 37.
Jugpal, i. 86. 89. 91. 97.
Jungum, i. 12. 33.
Junkojee Sindia put to death, ii. 155.
Juree Putka, the golden pennon. A Mahratta standard, carried only by the most distinguished officers of the Empire. It is always followed and surrounded by choice troops. It was first used by Suntajee Ghorepuray, having been confided to his charge by Raja Ram, i. 370.
Jatra, ii. 117.
Juwan Murd Khan Babey, ii. 71.
Jyapa Sindia, succeeds his father, ii. 40. 78. 133. Murdered, 134.

Kalhee Yoog. The iron age of the Hindoos.
Kallian. There are two places and provinces of that name; the one is on the frontier of the Nizam's dominions, the other is in the Concan. When there is any doubt of the one being mistaken for the other, the author has followed the example of the natives, terming the former Kallian simply, and distinguishing the other as the province of Kalliannee, and the town of Kallian Bheemree (or Bhewndy).
Kallian, i. 78. Fort taken, 156.
Kallian (Bheemree, or Bhewndy), i. 159. Taken 141. Mention of, 189. 276. Capture and defence of, ii. 414. and 415.
Kalliannee, i. 78. 138. 244.
Kam Raje Ghatgay, i. 56.
Kandahar, i. 151. See letter C.
Kanhojee Angria, i. 368. Succeeds to the command of the fleet, 388. Opposed to Shao on the side of Tara Bye, 417. Alarming progress of, 435. Brought over by Ballajee Wishwanath, 436. 458. Letter to the Governor of Bombay, ibid. Death of, 520.
Kanhojee Bhonslay, i. 518, 519.
Kanhojee Gaekwar. See Gaekwar.
Kanhojee Mohitey, ii. 170.
Kantajee Kudum Bhanday, i. 481. 489. 527.
Kapsee, i. 87.
Karbaree, i. 257.
Karkanees, Commissary of grain and stores, i. 231.
Kartojee Goozur, i. 196. 204. See Pertab Rao, 220.
Kasim Khan, i. 342. 350. Defeated, poisons himself, 383.
Kattywar, iii. 366.
Kaum Bukhsh, i. 333. 377. 419. Killed, 420.
Kawerseen, the first Bramin Peishwa, i. 75.
Keating, Lieut.-Col. Thomas, ii. 279. His proceedings, and operations of his detachment, from 286 to 303. 316.
Keigwin, Captain, i. 323.
Kellajee Bhonslay, i. 102.
Kelneh, i. 28.
Kennaway, Captain, iii. 39.
Kennedy, Lieut.-Col., iii. 442.
Kerala, or Malabar, i. 4.
Kerowlee, Raja of, iii. 403.
Khillut, a dress with presents corresponding, i. 551. A dress of investiture was always granted by the Rajas of the Mahrattas upon the appointment of any of the Purdhans, and without which the dignity was not confirmed.
Khirkee, battle of, 423.
Kistnajee Bhaskur, i. 165. 170.
Khafee Khan, the historian, account of, i. 97.
Khajeh Jehan Gawan, i. 63. Takes Goa, &c., ibid. His plans, 65. Put to death, 66.
Khan Dowran, i. 109. 112. 113. 115. 469. 526. 529.
Khan Jehan Buhadur, i. 254. 259. 272.
Khan Mohummud, i. 157. Put to death, 166. Account of, ibid.
Khassee Rao Holkar, iii. 148. 165. 195.
Khoras, valleys on the eastern side of the Syhadree mountains.
Khoosroojee Moodhee, iii. 346, 347. 354. Is poisoned, 360.
Khotes, i. 33. 233.
Khowans Khan, i. 166. 256. Appointed regent at Beejapoor, 257. Murdered, 268.
Khundee Rao Holkar, ii. 72. See Holkar.
Khundee Rao Rastia, iii. 209. 336.
Khundee Rao Dhabaray, i. 365. 369. 443.
Khundoo Bullal, i. 365. 369.
Khureem Khan Pindhara, iii. 326. 455. 466.
Khuzaneh Amirah, i. 429.
Kolabah, i. 188.
Kolapoor, i. 138.
Kolapoor, Raja of, i. 425. (See Sumbhajee.)
———, ii. 171. Mahdoo Rao Peishwa takes possession of part of the territory belonging to, 337. Conduct of the ministerial party towards this state, 338.

Kolapoor, Raja of, iii. 99. Is excited to attack Pureshram Bhow, 142. Progress, 182. 184, 185. Town of, besieged, 186. Siege raised, ib. Reason of its being raised, 191. Wars with Sawuntwaree, 343. A treaty with the British government, 550.
Kolee. The water carrier on the village establishment, i. 33.
Kolhar, i. 121. 281.
Komtee. A class of Banians, i. 12.
Kondaneh, now Singurh, i. 62. 75. 109. 117. 130.
Koolkurnee, Registrar of a village, i. 31. Duties of, 36. Under Sivajee, 233.
Koneir Trimbuck Yekbootee, ii. 53.
Koolees, a predatory tribe chiefly inhabiting Guzerat, i. 7. Pirates, 138.
Kool Swamy, the auspicious deity supposed to preside over the destinies of a family, i. 22. 89.
Koonbee. The Mahratta cultivator, i. 13.
Kooruns, or pasture lands, important arrangements respecting, i. 229.
Kootub Ool Moolk, 71. Becomes king of Golcondah, and founds the Kootub Shahee dynasty, 71.
Kootub Shahee dynasty. List of Princes, i. 72.
Kootub-ud-deen, iii. 48.
Kopaul, i. 284. iii. 48. Taken by the Moghuls, 52.
Korygaom, Defence of, iii. 432.
Koshul Desh, the modern Oude, i. 27.
Kotah, iii. 280. 404.
Kshittree. The second of the original four grand divisions of Hindoo castes, forming the military body, i. 9. 12.
Kubheer, i. 14.
Kulburga, i. 65. Carried by assault, 157. Mention of, 257.
Kuloosha. The favourite of Sumbhajee, i. 309. 317. Titles of, ib. Administration of, 319. 348. Executed, 361.
Kummur-ud-deen Khan, i. 469. ii. 28.
Kumpun, i. 4.
Kundoba. A Hindoo deity, i. 22.
Kundojee Mankur, ii. 7.
Kurara, i. 11.
Kurdla, battle of, 113. Convention of, 116.
Kurgoota. The string worn by Shooders round the loins, i. 16.
Kurinja, i. 249.
Kurnalla, i. 244.
Kurnoul, i. 566. Nabob of, ii. 30.
Kurpa or Kuddapah, i. 278. 346. 566. Nabob of, ii. 30. 45.
Kurree, entrenchments at, stormed, iii. 217.
Kuryat. A subdivision of a country, i. 79.
Kusba. A market town, i. 30. 37. ii. 8. 10.
Kutha, a popular amusement in the Mahratta country, i. 21. 128.
Kuttack, conquest of, iii. 257.
Kuttulugh Khan, i. 49.
Kye Sawunt, i. 180. 186.

Lake, General, iii. 247. On every occasion foremost in the battle, 255. Advances against Holkar, 276. Returns to cantonment, 277. Advances against Holkar, 286. Surprises Holkar at Furruckabad, 290. Negotiation with Sindia, 303. Pursues Holkar to the Punjab, 306. Concludes a treaty with Sindia, 306. And with Holkar, 309. Prediction of, 310. Views with regard to the Rajpoots, 311.
Laswaree, battle of, iii. 254.
Leslie, Colonel. Appointed to the command of the Bengal detachment, ii. 350. Crosses the Jumna and subsequent proceedings which led to his recal, 383. Death, 384.
Lindsay, Sir John, ii. 217.
Lingaet, a particular sect, i. 12.
Linganah, i. 142.
Listeneaux, M., iii. 28.
Little, Captain, his detachment, iii. 46. Admirable conduct of, 64.

Lodi, Khan Jehan, i. 101. Death of, 103.
Logúrh, i. 73. 140. 217. 244.
Lookhjee Jadow Rao, i. 88, 89. 97.
Lorenzo de Almeyda, i. 74.
Lucan, Lieutenant, iii. 248. 279.
Ludlow, Major, iii. 403.
Lukhairee, battle of, iii. 83.
Lukwa Dada, iii. 26. 29. 83. 180. Death of, 204.
Luis Ferara de Andrada, i. 77.
Luximee. A Hindoo Deity, i. 20.

M'Dowell, Colonel, iii. 487.
Macherry, Raja of, iii. 267.
Mackay, Captain, march of his detachment from Pannell to Canpoly, ii. 438.
Macpherson, Mr., succeeds Warren Hastings as Governor-general, and endeavours to check Mahadajee Sindia's ambitious views, ii. 482. iii. 6.
Madras government take possession of Rajamundree, ii. 192. Treaty with the Nizam 193. Anxious to assist Hyder, 217. Letter addressed by them to the Peishwa, 455.
Mahabharut. The grand popular poem of the Hindoos, i. 21. 128.
Mahal. A sub-division of a country, i. 79.
Maharasht, i. 57.
Maharashtra, i. 1. Definition of M ii. Early history, 25.
Mahareek, i. 84.
Mahadajee Punt Poorundhuree, ii. 4. 42. 44. 53. 73.
Mahduna Punt, prime-minister of Golcondah, i. 274. 277. 319. 335. Assassinated, 338.
Mahadajee Sindia, ii. 133. 206. Succeeds to the jagheer, being supported by Mahdoo Rao, 207. Joins the expedition into Hindoostan, 218. Urges an attack upon the Rohillas, 225. Collects tribute from the Jhats and Rajpoots, 251. Meets Rugoba at Indore, 265. Arrears demanded from, by Sukaram Bappoor, 291. Favourable to Rugoba, 324. Sent against the Kolapoor Raja, 338. Aids Nana Furnuwees, 353. Operations against the English, 367. His plans at the court of Poona, 394. Advantage derived from the escape of Rugoba, 395. Advances against General Goddard in Guzerat, 407. Crosses the Nerbuddah, and proceeds to Baroda, 408. His policy and negotiation, 409. Marches against the division of English troops under Colonel Camsac, 446. Concludes a treaty with Colonel Muir, 454. His views at the period of the treaty of Salbye, 463. Recovers the fortress of Gwalior, 476. Sends a force into Bundelcund, ibid. Accepts the invitation of Afrasiab Khan, and sets out for Agra, 479. Gains complete ascendancy at Delhi from the murder of Afrasiab Khan, 480. Obtains the office of Wukeel-i-Mootlooq for the Peishwa, and is appointed his deputy, 480. The command of the emperor's army, &c. conferred on him, 481. Demands the Chouth of Bengal, 482. Objects to the appointment of a resident, 483. iii. 20. Claims for tribute on the Rajpoots, iii. 21. Is compelled, in consequence of the desertion of his troops, to retreat, 23. Rajpoots do not act against him vigorously, 23. Application to Nana for aid, 24. Recovers his power at Delhi; changes in the constitution of his army, 32. Refuses to become a party in the treaty of Poona, 72. Progress in Hindoostan, ibid. Peace with the Rajpoots, 74. Repairs to Poona, 77. Presents the insignia of Wukeel-i-Motlooq, 78. Endeavours to supplant Nana in the favour of the young Peishwa, 81. Endeavours to overcome his unpopularity in the Deccan, 84. Death of, 86. Policy and character, 88. Views respecting Lord Cornwallis's policy, 108.
Mahapoorush, the spiritual guide and intercessor, i. 15. Explanation of, 23.

Mahdeo, one of the principal Hindoo deities, and particularly worshipped throughout the Mahratta country, i. 16. 20. 89. 91.
Mahdoo Rao succeeds as Peishwa, ii. 161. Makes an excursion into the southern provinces, 166. His dissension with his uncle, 167. And decided conduct, 168. Reproves Janojee Bhonslay for his treachery, 176. Marches into the Carnatic against Hyder Ally, 178. Besieges Dharwar, 180. Perplexed by the intrigues of the court, 182. Enters into a secret compact with Nizam Ally, 183. Visits the Carnatic again, 193. Interview with his uncle, 198. Anecdote of, 200. Defeats and imprisons Rugonath Rao, ibid. Plans at the termination of the year, 1768, ibid. joins the Nizam in an attack upon Janojee Bhonslay, 202. Plunders Nagpoor, ibid. Concludes an agreement with Janojee, 204. Terms of agreement, 205. Sends an army into Malwa, 206. Anecdote of in regard to Mahadaje Sindia, 207. Improves the civil government, 208. Anecdote connected with Ram Shastree, 209. Abolishes the system of pressing villagers to carry baggage. Marches into the Carnatic for the third time, 211. Returns to Poona, leaving a force in the Carnatic, 214. Prevented by ill health from joining his army, ibid. His disease considered incurable, 217. Improves, 218. Army sent into Hindoostan, 218. His death, character, and a general view of his administration, 227 to 240.
Mahdoo Rao Narrain born, ii. 264. iii. 81. 85. Anecdote of, 117. Throws himself from the top of his palace, and dies, 126.
Mahé, fort of, reduced by the English, ii. 400.
Maholy, i. 244.
Mahratta, particular definition of, i. 18.
Mahrattas, i. state of, A.D. 1688. 351. A.D. 1705. 401. A.D. 1715. iii. State of A.D. 1794. 104. Last general assembly of the chiefs, 111. Condition of A.D. 1806. 314. And of the Nizam, 317.
Mahratta freebooters, description of a body, i. 397. Mahratta acquisitions how divided, 457.
Mahratta munsubdars (or chiefs), i. 348.
Mairta, battle of, 74.
Malcolm, Captain, i. 176. Major, 266. Lieutenant Colonel, 306. Sir John, 398, 399. 407. Interview with the Peishwa at Maholy, 408. 456. 459. 466. 470. 474.
Malet, Mr., appointed resident at Poona, ii. 483. iii. 19. 43. 128.
Mallee Rao Holkar, ii. 190.
Mallojee Bhonslay, the grandfather of Sivajee, i. 89.
Mallojee Ghorepuray, iii. 140.
Mallygaom, ii. 71. Defence of, iii. 487.
Malwa, i. 27. 481. 495. 513. 528. Not ceded as promised to Bajee Rao, 532. ii. 6. Operations in, iii. 455.
Malwan (or Sindeedroog), built by Sivajee, i. 188. iii. 99. Taken by the English, ibid.
Mamlitdar. The civil officer in charge of a district under the Mahratta government, i. 233. ii. 233.
Mamoolkur, i. 84.
Manay, i. 84. 87.
Mang, duty of on the village establishment, habits, &c. i. 32.
Mangalore, treaty of, ii. 469.
Mankurees, i. 353.
Mannajee Phakray, ii. 287. iii. 139.
Man-pan, rights and privileges, i. 354.
Marriott, Mr., iii. 484.
Marshall, General, iii. 340. 456. 470.
Masters, Mr. Streingham, defends Surat factory, i. 247.
Maun-desh, or country adjoining the Maun river, i. 9. 86.

Mawulees, inhabitants of the Mawuls and Concan Ghaut Mahta, i. 127. 182. 195. Arms, dress, &c. 224.
Mawuls, valleys on the eastern side of the Syhadree mountains, i. 7. 124.
Maxwell, Colonel, iii. 243.
M'Cole, Lieutenant, anecdote of, 217.
M'Intyre, Captain, iii. 197.
M'Leod, Major, iii. 248.
M'Morine, Lieut. Col., iii. 453.
Meamun oolla Decannee, i. 61. 63.
Medows, General, iii. 45.
Meer, Jaffeir, ii. 136.
Meer Joomleh, i. 151.
Meer Moghul, youngest son of Nizam Ool Moolk, ii. 169. 171.
Merich, i. 257. 321. 367.
Meerasdar, i. 31.
Meer Abdool Kassim, afterwards Meer Alum, iii. 40.
Meer Assud, ii. 3.
Meer Gholam Ally, ii. 46.
Meer Hubeeb, ii. 7. 11.
Meer Munnoo, ii. 28. 129.
Mehidpoor, battle of, iii. 462.
Metcalfe, Mr., iii. 405. 468.
Meer Shahabodeen, ii. 77. 128. 136.
Mhar Dher, or Purwaree, a very low class of Hindoos, i. 14. Duties on the village establishment, 31.
Mhar, treaty of, iii. 142. Not ratified by Bajee Rao, 147. Proposes to confirm, 165. Treaty revoked by Nizam Ally, 167. Confirmed by the treaty of Bassein, 226.
Midnapoor, ii. 12.
Minto, Lord, iii. 345.
Mirat Ahmudee, a Persian history of Guzerat, i. 478.
Mirza Jewan Bukht, son of the emperor, flees from Delhi, and seeks protection of the English, ii. 474.
Mirg, or cultivator's year, explanation of, i. 55.
Mirza Secundur Jah, iii. 236. (See Nizam.)
Moghuls, i. 18. Their retreat purchased from Delhi, 47. Invade the Deccan, 92. Account of, from A. D. 1636, 151. Provincial government of, 347.
Mohabet Khan, i. 106, 107. 251.
Mohitey, i. 84. 121.
Mohummud Amin Khan, i. 469. Death of, 470.
Mohummud Amin, the son of Meer Joomleh, i. 153.
Mohummud Adil Shah, i. 99. 104. 115. Character of, 124. Mention of, 136. 142. Death of, 154.
Mohummud Ally, son of Anwar-ud-deen, ii. 30. Inimical to Hyder, 217.
Mohummud Beg Humadanee, opposes Mirza Shuffee and Afrasiab Khan, ii. 462. Acknowledges Sindia's authority, 481. iii. 21. Deserts to the Rajpoots, 23. Killed, ibid.
Mohummud Shah raised to the throne, i. 448. Becomes master of the empire by the battle of Shahpoor, 468. 562. ii. 15. Dies, 29.
Mohummud Shah Bahminee, i. 58.
Mohummud Tughluk Shah, i. 47. His character, ibid. Death of, 52.
Mokassa, a revenue term, i. 455. Mokassadar, i. 80. 220.
Molheir, i. 325.
Momin Khan, i. 527.
Monson, Colonel, iii. 248. 276. Enters Holkar's territory, 278. Takes Hinglaisgurk, ibid. Retires, 279. Retreat, 279 to 285. 289.
Moodajee Bhonslay, ii. 244. 253. Prevails over his brother Sabajee, 305. Surrenders several forts to Nizam Ally, who again restores them, 339. Confirmed in his regency, 340. His negotiations with the Bengal government, 386. Mediator between the British Government and the Peishwa, 433. Sends an army towards Kuttack, 448. Agreement with the British government, 451. iii. 11. Death mentioned, 92.
Moodhole, i. 87. 142. 146. 185, 186.

Mookh Purdhan, the chief of the eight Purdhans, the Peishwa.
Moolana, duty of on the village establishment, i. 32.
Moolana Ahmed, i. 140, 141, 142.
Moolkgeeree, ii. 65.
Moonj, a particular Hindoo ceremony, i. 15.
Moor, Lieutenant, iii. 65.
Moorar Rao Ghorepuray of Gootee, i. 432. ii. 2. 5. Evacuates the Carnatic, 22. Joins Nasir Jung's army, 30. 93. 104. Restored to the rank of Senaputtee, 180.
Mooras, valleys on the eastern side of the Syhadree mountains, i. 7.
Moorshedabad, ii. 14.
Moorshed Khoolee Khan, i. 126.
Mootaliq, the chief minister or agent, with power to use the seal of his superior, i. 237. The Mootaliq or Dewan was one of the eight permanent officers of a complete establishment.
Morar Punt, i. 107. 112. 120. 144.
Moraud Bukhsh, fourth son of Shah Jehan, i. 159, 160.
Moray, i. 84, 85. 138.
Morchul, a kind of fan formed of a bundle of feathers from the peacock's tail, 3. 79.
Morh, the running hand generally used throughout the Mahratta country, i. 42.
Morgan, Captain, iii. 257.
Moro Dixit, iii. 379. 419. Killed, 427.
Moro Trimmul Pingley, i. 150. Appointed Peishwa, 166. Mention of, 171, 192. Invested with partienlar authority, 212. Recaptures a great portion of Kalianee, 217. 251. 265. 276. 292. Imprisoned, 309.
Morrison, Cornet, iii. 428. 481.
Mortiza, Nizam Shah, i. 72. 77. 100. 104. Strangled, 105.
Mostyn, Mr., sent to Poona as envoy, ii. 199. Returns to Poona, 332. Goes to Bombay, 317. His death, 365.
Mount Dilly, i. 4.
Mouza, a village, not a market town, i. 30. 37. A hereditary occupant of land.
Mruttyoo, a Hindoo Deity, i. 21.
Muasir Ool Oomrah, ii. 21.
Muchindergurh, i. 269.
Mujd-ud-dowlah, Dewan of Nujeef Khan. Intrigues against his master, ii. 460.
Mukrib Khan, i. 104.
Mulhar Rao Holkar, ii. 16. 58. 78. 101. 131. 137. 172. Dies, 196.
Mulhar Rao Gaekwar. (See Gaekwar.)
Mulkair, i. 78. 338.
Mullik Ahmed, i. 67. Becomes king of Ahmednugur, and founds the Nizam Shahee or Byheree dynasty, 71, 75.
Mullik Kafoor, i. 28. 46.
Mullik-i-Mydan, a large cannon so called, i. 112.
Mullik Moogh, i. 50.
Mullik-ool-Tijar, i. 59. Expedition of, 60. Second expedition, 61. Builds a fort near Joonere, ibid. Reduces the Raja Sirkay, 62. Is treacherously murdered, with nearly 7000 of his men, 63.
Mullik Umber, i. 94. Origin and progress of, ibid. Founds Khirkee, 93. Revenue system of, ib. Death of, 96. Wars of, 97.
Mun Bhut, iii. 452.
Mundelah, ii. 9. 470.
Mungy Pyetun, i. 26.
Munro, Brigadier General Thomas, iii. 438. 483.
Munsub, a certain rank, depending on the number of horse under an individual's command, was so termed by the Mahomedans, i. 56. 81.
Muntree, one of the eight Purdhans, i. 266.
Munturs, mystical verses, i. 16.
Muqudum, the Patell for the time being, i. 55.
Murray, Colonel, iii. 275. 278.
Mussood Khan, i. 282. Appointed regent, ibid. Calls in the aid of Sivajee, 288. Forced to retire to Adonee, 320. Surrenders Adonee, 345.

Musheer Ool Moolk, iii. 110. Surrendered to the Mahrattas, 117. Release of, 135. 141. Quits Poona, 147. 167.
Mutuwusil Khan, ii. 19.
Muzuffir Khan, i. 257. ii. 81. 121.
Musuffir Jung, ii. 25. 29. Assumes the viceroyalty of the Deccan, 46. Killed, 47.
Muzzimdar, i. 227. The auditor of accounts, ibid. One of the chief ministers of Sivajee, 235. 265.

Nadir Shah plunders Delhi, 547. Departure of, 550.
Nana Furnuwees, ii. 177. His plans on the death of Narrain Rao, 257. Receives the clothes and investiture for Mahdoo Rao Narrain, 265. His conduct in the ministry, 266. Disheartened by the bad success in Guzerat, 305. His policy in countenancing St. Lubin, 345. State of parties described, 349. Makes a premature attempt to seize his cousin, Moraba, 550. His jealousy of Europeans, 552. His plans for obtaining the ascendancy, 853. Passports demanded for the troops marching from Bengal, 354. Fears excited by the measures of the English, 357. His replies to the questions of the British envoy, 358. His preparations and plans, 359. and 367. Endeavours to recover the Concan, and raise the siege of Bassein, 425. His vigorous preparations on Goddard's advance towards Poona, 436. Amuses General Goddard with offers of negotiation, ibid. Sends the Peishwa to Poorundhur, 437. His views at the period of the treaty of Salbye, 465. Demands arrears of tribute from Tippoo, 470; and outstanding claims to Chouth, &c. from Nizam Ally, ibid. Interview with Nizam Ally at Eedgeer, ibid. Conspiracy in favour of Bajee Rao discovered, 473. Intention of forming an alliance with the English against Tippoo, iii. 5. Negotiations, 6. Applies to the Portuguese, 7. Proceeds with the army, 9. Returns from Badamee, 11. Policy in regard to Sindia, 25. 77. 84. Mode of preserving his influence, 85. Views of English policy, 108. Consults the officers previous to the war with Nizam Ally, 112. At the summit of prosperity, 120. Great anxiety to preserve his power, 123. Conduct on the death of Mahdoo Rao, 126. Flees from Poona, 131. Proceedings, 132. 135. Plans matured, 142. Imprisonment of, 150. Release of, 166. Deceived by Bajee Rao, and resumes his office, 171. Death of, 187. Character, 188.
Nagojee Ghatgay, i. 86. Killed, 110.
Nagotna, or Nagathana, i. 139.
Nagpoor, affairs of, iii. 394. 445. 473. 479.
Naik, i. 43. A title. A subordinate officer in the service of Sivajee, 225. In the English native infantry, similar to the corporal in European regiments.
Nalkee, a sort of sedan chair, iii. 79.
Nana Poorundhuree, ii. 49.
Naroo Shunkur, ii. 140. 170.
Narrain Rao, brother of Mahdoo Rao, Peishwa, wounded, ii. 215. Invested as Peishwa, 243. Obtains possession of Raigurh, 243. Confines his uncle, 244. His favourites and views, ibid. Endeavours to settle the disagreement between the Bhonslay family, on the death of Janojee, 245. Murdered, 216. His character, 250.
Naroo Punt Chuckurdeo, iii. 140. 143. 146. 152. 157.
Naroo Punt Wydh, iii. 151.
Nargounda, a revenue term, i. 455.
Nasir Jung, i. 540. Attacked by Bajee Rao, 557. ii. 7. 19. Assumes the government of Hyderabad, 29. Death and character, 45, 46.
Neeloo Punt Morcishwur, i. 310. Appointed Peishwa, 367.

Nertajee, Palkur, i. 163. 167. 171. 176. 192. Escapes wounded, 194. Mahomedan account of, 221.
Newayeteh Nabobs, ii. 23.
Nicholl, Captain, iii. 282. 284.
Nilkunt, Mahdeo Poorundhuree, ii. 169.
Nimbajee Naik Nimbalkur, ii. 41.
Nimbalkur, Rao Naik of Phultun, i. 84, 85, 86. 89. 91. 97. Jan Rao, 199. Nimbalkur of Phultun, 267. 276. 285. 354. iii. 497.
Nimbalkurs of Watar, iii. 324.
Nizam Ally, ii. 107. 118. 123. 162. 165. Returns to Beder, and imprisons Sulabut Jung, 167. Supports Rugonath Rao, 168. Reduces his brother, Busalut Jung, 183. Connection with the English, 192, and treachery to them, 194. Subsequent treaty with the English, 195. Joins Mahdoo Rao against Janojee Bhonslay, 202. And receives three lacks of revenue, 206. 253. 262. 265. Opens a negotiation with Rugoba, 306. 336. Contrives a confederacy against the English, with Hyder and the Mahrattas, 432. Meets Nana Furnuwees at Eedgeer, 470. iii. 9. 40, 41. Motives for procrastinating in concluding the treaty of alliance against Tippoo, 44. Mahratta claims upon, 106. Raises regular infantry, 110. War with, 111. His cessions at Kurdla, 116. New treaty with the English, 172. Another new treaty with the English, 179. Death of, 236.
Nizam, the, iii. 236. Claims after the conquest, 491.
Nizam Ool Moolk, i. 428. Origin of, 429, 448. Assumes independence, 464. Defeats Dilawur Ally at Burhanpoor, and Alum Ally Khan at Balapoor, 467. 471. His policy, 473. 475. Proceeds to Delhi, 476. Proceeds as Soobehdar of Guzerat, 477. Appoints his uncle deputy, 478. Returns to the Deccan, 487. Defeats Mubariz Khan, ibid. Schemes of, 495. Obtains the relinquishment of the Hyderabad Chouth, 497. War with, 499. His plan of a balance of power, 512. Returns to Delhi for the purpose of opposing the Mahrattas, 537. Is surrounded at Bhopaul, 538. Signs a convention at Dooraee Suraee, 541. ii. 6, 7. 10. 19. 29.
Nizam Ool Moolk Byheree, i. 66. Origin of, 67.
Nizam Shahee, or Byheree dynasty, i. 72.
Norford, Captain, iii. 289.
Nujeef Khan, his proceedings at Delhi, ii. 459. His military expeditions, 460. Establishes a paramount authority, 462. His death, ibid.
Nujeeb-ud-dowlah, ii. 131. 219.
Nuldroog, i. 65. 78. 114.
Nundidroog, iii. 59.
Nurgoond, iii. 2. Treacherously seized by Tippoo, 5.
Nusserut, a poet of Beejapoor, i. 99. 298.
Nuzur, a present or offering, i. 213.
Nyadeish, court of justice, also superintendant of judicial affairs, i. 236. 266.
Nyashastree, expounder of Hindoo law, i. 236.

Ochterlony, Lieutenant Colonel, iii. 286. Major General, 400. 465. 468.
O'Donell, Captain, iii. 281.
Ooday Bawn, i. 241.
Oopadheea, the hereditary domestic teacher of a family, i. 22.
Orissa, i. 63. 78.
Oude, i. 27. Nabob of, 563.
Oudepoor, i. 27.
Oundha, i. 250. 267.
Ouscotta, i. 121. 281.
Outars (or Avatars), incarnations, i. 20.
Oxenden, Sir George, defence of Surat factory, 198. Mr. Henry, mission to Sivajee, i. 264.

Pachaet, ii. 11.
Padshah Beebee, the last princess of Beejapoor, i. 256. 268. 285. 288.

Pagah, a body of cavalry, the horses of which are the property of the prince or chief, i. 225.
Pairgaom, i. 255. Treaty of, ii.169.
Paithana, i. 26. 28.
Palkee, i. 79.
Panalla, i. 28. 138. 175. Besieged by Seedee Johur, 176. Mention of, 257. 367.
Panniput, ii. 144. Battle of, 147.
Parbuttee, a Hindoo deity, i. 20.
Parker, Colonel, forces the Bhore Ghaut, ii. 435. Killed, 443.
Partition treaties. Of Tippoo's territory, iii. 67. 177. Of the Mahratta territory, 267.
Patans, iii. 389.
Patell, the chief magistrate of a village, i. 31. Duties of, 35. Under Sivajee, 253.
Patrowlee, leaves which the Hindoos substitute for plates, 32.
Patun, battle of, iii. 73.
Pattinson, Lieutenant Thomas, iii. 435.
Pawungurh, i. 28., a fort close to Panalla in the Deccan, also a strong hill-fort in Guzerat.
Peelajee Jadow, i. 427. ii. 16.
Peer, a Mahomedan saint, i. 89.
Peishwa, a prime-minister, a Bramin appointed to that dignity by Boorahan Nizam Shah, A. D. 1529, 75. First Mahratta Peishwa, 150. Office of, 235, 265.
Pelly, M., iii. 484.
Pergunna, a subdivision of a country, i. 79.
Perron, Monsieur, iii. 82. 112. 181. 235. 246. Retires from Sindia's service, 249.
Pertabgurh built, i. 150. 184.
Pertab Rao, (formerly Kartojee,) Goozur, i. 220. 240. Expedition to Candeish, where he first imposes the chouth, i. 249. 251. 261. Killed, 262.
Peshkush, a tribute, a premium paid to the state upon receiving grants or honours.
Pilcondah, i. 66.
Pindharees, i. 354. Rise of, iii. 325. Mode of proceeding, and conducting an expedition, 329. 357. 389. 395. Operations against them, 455 to 459. 467.
Piracy on the Mahratta and Malabar coast, iii. 95. 100. Suppressed, 351.
Pirates, English, i. 379.
Pitt, Mr., ii. 420.
Phar Ghaut. A pass into the Concan, which is commanded by the fort of Pertabgurh, i. 145, 150.
Phirungajee Nursalla, i. 133. His defence of Chakun, 193.
Phultun, i. 81. 84, 85. 89. 97. 186.
Polygar. One who has assumed independent authority, i. 29. 43. 85.
Ponda, i. 261. 263. Surrenders to Sivajee, 268.
Poona, i. 92. 119. 194. 221. 333. The capital of the Mahrattas, ii. 39. Plundered and destroyed by Nizam Ally, 173. Affray in the streets of, iii. 147. State of, at the time of the imprisonment of Nana Furnuwees, 151. Battle of, 207. Surrounded by the British troops, 384. Treaty of, 385. Alarming state of affairs at, 415. District of, in charge of Capt. Robertson, 485.
Poonamalee, i. 346.
Poond Sawunt, i. 417, 424.
Poorans, i. 4. 23. Written by Veas, 23.
Poorundhur, i. 130. 135. Besieged by Dilere Khan, 205. Surrendered, 209. Retaken, 244. Given up to Ballajee Wishwanath, 437. Treaty of, ii. 320. Taken, iii. 480.
Popham, Capt. William, crosses the Jumna with a detachment, ii. 418. Takes Lahar by storm, 419. Surprises Gwalior, 420.
Porto Novo, i. 199.
Portuguese, i. 74. Conquest of Goa, 75. Make a descent upon the coast, ibid. Mention of, 76, 77. 188. 249. 252. 266. Attack Sumbhajee, 314. Retreat with loss, 315. Assist Mannajee Angria, 521. Assist Sumbhajee Angria, 535. Are in consequence attacked by the Peishwa, ibid.

War prosecuted against, 542. War continued, 547. State of, 567.
Potnees. Cashkeeper, i. 237.
Pottinger, Captain, iii. 485.
Powar, i. 85. Of Dhar, origin of, i. 481. 493. 509.
Powell, Lieut.-Colonel, iii. 258.
Prakritee, a Hindoo deity, i. 20.
Praunt, a subdivision of a country, i. 79.
Prillhad Neerajee, i. 277. 365. Created Pritee Needhee, 369. 372. Death, 386. Character, 396.
Pritee Needhee, originally created by Raja Ram, i. 370. ii. 2. 4. 17.
Pritzler, Brigadier General, iii. 399. 431. 438. 442. 480. 483.
Prophecy, i. 91.
Prother, Lieut.-Colonel, iii. 432. 442. 484.
Prucheetgurh, i. 141. iii. 487.
Punchayet, i. 35. Appeal from, 40. Disputes relating to hereditary rights, settled by, 79, 80. Invariably obtained in the country, 255. Remarks respecting, iii. 497.
Punch-huzaree. A commander of 5000 horse, i. 227.
Pundit. A Bramin, learned in both Shasters and Vedas.
Pundit Rao, one of the eight Purdhans, i. 266.
Puntojee Gopinat, the wukeel of Afzool Khan, 169. Betrays his master, 170.
Punt Raj Adnya, ii. 170.
Purdhans. The ministers of Sivajee, of whom there were eight so called. Institution of, i. 235. Their names changed, 265.
Pureshram, fable respecting, i. 4.
Pureshram Bhow Putwurdhun, sent down into the Concan against General Goddard, ii. 437. iii. 45. 47. 55. Conduct of, 61. Advances towards Bednore, 65. Retreats, 66. Reasons, 68. Conduct censured, 69. Distressing march upon his return, ib. Commands the Mahrattas at Kurdla, 113. Wounded by Lal Khan, 114. Extraordinary march of, 129. Brings Bajee Rao to Poona, 130. Flees from Poona, but is taken prisoner, 144. Release of, 158. Attacks Satara, 159. Pardoned, 160. Reconciled to Nana, 174. Killed, 185.
Pureshram Sree Newass, succeeds his father as Pritee Needhee, ii. 339. iii. 339. is confined, 340. released by the Telin, 341. Rebels, ibid. Wounded, taken, and confined, 342. 494, 495.
Pureshram Trimbuck, i. 375. 393. Appointed Pritee Needhee, 396. 426. Death, 471.
Purinda, besieged without success by the Moghuls, i. 110.
Purlee surprised, i. 260.
Pursajee Bhonslay, iii. 394. Murdered, 395.
Pursojee Bhonslay, ancestor of the Rajas of Nagpoor, i. 379.
Purwuttum, i. 278.
Putta, i. 250. 267. 290.
Putwurdhun, family of, 333. 352. 494.

Qanoongo, i. 38.
Quyna, i. 150.

Raichore, i. 64, 65, 78. 186.
Raigurh, becomes Sivajee's capital, i. 190. Consultation at, 205. Council held at, upon the murder of Sumbhajee, 365. Taken by the Moghuls, 367. Taken by the English, iii. 484.
Rairee, i. 140. Given up to Sivajee, 141. Name changed to Raigurh, 190.
Rairee, in Malwan, i. 188. Built by Sivajee, ibid.
Ragoo Bullal, i. 148. 165.
Raja, a Hindoo prince.
Raja Ram, i. 301. Declared regent, 365. Flees to Ginjee, 369. List of his ministers, 370. Ascends the throne, 371. Escapes from Ginjee, 385. Proceeds with a great army, 389. Death and character of, 395.
Rajamundroe, i. 76. ii. 63. 192.
Rajapoor, i. 138. 178. Contribution levied from, ibid.
Raja Rugonath Dass, ii. 51. 54.

Rajpoots, i. 11. Rajpoot States, 563. Treaties with, iii. 267. 311. 321. 330. 390. 468.
Rajgurh, built, i. 132. Retaken, 375.
Rajis Bye, ii. 33.
Rajmachee, i. 141.
Rakisbone, battle of, ii. 174.
Rakshush, or demons, i. 42.
Ram, a Hindoo deity, i. 22.
Ramajee Punt, ii. 89. 163.
Ramayun, a popular Hindoo poem, i. 21. 128.
Ramchundur Punt Boureekur, i. 263. 265. 275. 365. 374. 387. 425.
Ramchundur Gunnesh, ii. 206. Killed, 428.
Ramchundur Baba Shenwee, ii. 42. 74. 119.
Ramchundur Jadow, ii. 106. 166. 170.
Ramdass, ii. 46.
Ramdass, Swamy, i. 16. 184. 309.
Ramdeo Rao Jadow, i. 45. 57.
Ramdeen, iii. 445. 463. 477.
Ramgurh, ii. 11.
Ramjee Patell, iii. 167.
Rammajee Punt Bhanoo, appointed Furnuwees to Ballajee Wishwanath, i. 436.
Ramoosee, i. 34. 232.
Ram Raja of Beejanugur, i. 77.
Ram Raja, 2. 31. 75. Dies, 338.
Ram Shastree, ii. 208. Conduct on the death of Narrain Rao, 249.
Rangna, i. 28. 177. 181.
Rannay Khan, iii. 27.
Ranoojee Sindia, ii. 16. Dies, 40. His family, 133. (See Sindia.)
Rao Naik Nimbalkur, i. 84.
Raojee Somnath, i. 220.
Rastia, iii. 198. 363. 495.
Rawun, i. 25.
Raymond, M., iii. 110. 119. Death of, 173.
Religion of the Mahratta country, i. 19.
Rendoollah Khan, i. 105. 144.
Revenue of the Mahratta country, i. 37. ii. 237.
Revenue distribution, i. 453. Effect of, 567.
Rewadundu, reduced, ii. 7.
Rhoura, i. 8.
Robertson, Cap. H. D., iii. 485.
Rohira, i. 137. Escalade of, 149.
Rohillas, i. 564. ii. 56. War against them by the Mahrattas, 226.
Roostum Zuman, i. 177. Defeated by Sivajee, ibid. Favours the escape of Netajee, 194.
Rowjee Appajee, the minister at Baroda, iii. 214. Calls in the aid of the English, 215. Death of, 367.
Rughoojee Bhonslay, origin of, 518. Appointed Sena Sahib Soobeh, ibid. Incursion to Allahabad, 546. Commission for the conquest of the Carnatic, 556. ii. 3. 5. 9. 14. 17. His agreement with Ballajee Bajee Rao, 18. 23. Invades Orissa, 24. 30. 38. 40. 54. Dies, 74. iii. 92. 145. 198. Unites with Sindia to oppose the views of the English, 229. Dastardly conduct at Assaye, 243. Apprehensive of a night attack, 259. Treaty with, 263. Condition of, 317. 325. 390. Death of, 393.
Rughoojee Gaekwar, ii. 24.
Rugonath Narrain Hunwuntay, i. 274. Left in the Carnatic, 283. Arrival at Raigurh, 309.
Rugonath Punt Nya Shastree, one of Sivajee's confidential agents, i. 163. 166. 207.
Rugonath Rao, i. 571. ii. 66. 101. 121. 131. 162. Attacks his nephew, and defeats him, 168. Takes the fort of Merich, 170. Hostilities with the Nizam, 172 Retires in anger to Anundwelee, 178. Joins the Carnatic army, 181. Makes a treaty with Hyder, ibid. Marches into Hindoostan, 195. Raises troops, 199. Adopts a son, ibid. His intrigues at the time of Mahdoo Rao's illness, 241. Released from confinement, 242. Confined in the Peishwa's palace, 244. Suspected of the murder of his nephew, 248. Proclaimed Peishwa, 250. Determines upon hostilities against Nizam, 254. Want of popularity, 255 Treats with the Nizam, 256. Result of a conference, ibid. Advances towards the Carnatic, 257. Concludes a treaty with Hyder, 260. His conduct on hearing of the intrigues at Poona, ibid. Returns towards Poona, 261. Attacks and defeats Trimbuck Rao Nana, 262. Retreats to the northward, 264. Advances to the banks of the Taptee, 269. His negotiations with the Bombay government, 274. Objects to the terms proposed, 276. Deserted by Holkar and Sindia, retires to Guzerat, 279. Renews his negotiation with the English, 285. Treaty finally agreed on, ibid. Attacked and defeated by the ministerial army at Wassud, 287. Flees to Cambay, 288. Proceeds to Surat, and joins the English forces, 289. Advances with his army, 292. His troops dispirited by a trifling loss, 295. 297. Treaty with Futih Sing Gaekwar, 592. Cedes some districts to the English, 305. Effect produced on the ministerial party by his success, 305. General feeling towards him, 306. Included in the treaty signed by the Envoy of the Bengal government, 321. His conduct on the interference of the Bengal government, 323. Dissatisfied with the terms of the treaty, 324. Obtains an asylum in Surat, 326. Repairs to Bombay, 332. His cause again espoused by the English, and a treaty made at Bombay, 363. Endeavours to animate his allies, but fails, 369. Surrenders himself to Mahadajee Sindia, 375. Jagheer in Bundelcund settled on him, 394. He effects his escape on his march to the northward, 395. Received by General Goddard, 400. Remains in Surat, 408. Retires to Kopergaom, and dies, 473.

Runjeet Sing, iii. 28.

Runmust Khan, i. 289. 292. 314.

Russell, Mr. Henry, iii. 347.

Rutnaguiry, i. 138.

Ryajee Patell, sent by Sindia to besiege Agra, ii. 481. Appointed governor of the fortress, ibid. iii. 21. 137.

Sabajee Bhonslay, ii. 245. 262. Confirmed as Sena Sahib Soobeh, 265. Killed, 310.

Sadhoo, i. 14. 20.

Sadut Khan, i. 468, 469. Ancestor of the present King of Oude, 470. Drives the Mahrattas across the Jumna, ii. 531.

Sadut Oolla Khan, i. 407. Ancestor of the Nabob of Arcot, 565.

Sagoona Bye Mohitey, ii. 30.

Sagur, iii. 391.

Sahotra, a revenue term, i. 455.

Salbye, negotiations between Mahadajee Sindia and Mr. D. Anderson, with the terms of the treaty finally agreed on, ii. 456. Ratified and exchanged, 467.

Sale, Captain George, anecdote of, and his covering serjeant at the battle of Assaye, iii. 242.

Salheir, i. 250. Battle of, 251. Given up, 525.

Salsette invaded by the Mahrattas, i. 535. Conquered, 547.

Sangster, Mr., iii. 35.

Satara, i. 8. 29. 260. Becomes the seat of government, 387. Siege of, 392. Retaken, 407. ii. 5. 16, 17. Raja of, iii. 132. 157. Attacks the Peishwa's troops under Mahdoo Rao Rastia, 158. Defeated by Pureshram Bhow, 159. Town plundered, 160. Raja of, 410. 438, 439. Capture of, 440. Proclamation of, ibid. Raja of, rescued, 445. Reinstated on his throne, 482. Territory of, 485. 492.

Sautpoora, i. 3.

Savanoor, i. 432. Nabob of, ibid. Nabob of, ii. 30. iii. 14. Abandoned to Tippoo, 16.

Sawunt, i. 84. 88. 138. Concludes a treaty with Sivajee, which they break, i. 167. Proposals of, 185. 187. Reduced by Sivajee, 188. Mention of, 388.

Sawuntwaree, iii. 99, 100. 343.—Treaty with, 351, 352.
Scott, Lieutenant-Colonel Hopeton, iii. 447. 473.
Sebundees, irregular infantry employed both in garrisoning forts and in assisting in the police and other civil duties of the provinces.
Seedee Johur, i. 178. Plans disconcerted, 182. Rebellion of, 185. Death of, 187.
Seedee of Jinjeera, i. 139. 167. 179, 180. 246. 286. Naval action with, 313. Makes a descent upon Bombay, 358. 522. iii. 96.
Seedee Musaood, ii. 83.
Seedojee Goojur, i. 368.
Seedojee Rao Nimbalkur (see Appa Dessaye Nepankur), iii. 191.
Seetabuldee, battle of, iii. 449.
Seetaram Rowjee, iii. 367. 371.
Senaputtee, commander-in-chief of the Mahratta armies, and one of the eight Purdhans, i. 266. ii. 2.
Sera, i. 121. 281. iii. 53. Surrenders to Hurry Punt, 54.
Seringapatam, iii. 54, 55. 175. ii. 101.
Seshao Naik Poonday, i. 91. 238.
Severndroog, i. 188. ii. 85.
Sewdasheo Bhow Bhaskur, iii. 204. Defeated by Holkar, 207, 282. 299.
Sewdasheo Bhow Mankesir, iii. 147. 354. 346. 354. 379. 442.
Sewdasheo Chimnajee Bhow, ii. 8. Sent into the Carnatic, 26. 42. 53. 80. 119. 138. 155. An impostor of this name, 325. Supported by the English, takes the field, 330.
Sewdasheogurh, i. 269.
Sewnee, affair of, iii. 473.
Sewneree, i. 92. 121. 244. 267.
Shahabodeen, 327. Father of Nizam Ool-Moolk receives the title of Ghazee-ud-deen, ibid.
Shah Alum, deprived of sight, iii. 30. Reseated on his throne, 31. 252.
Shahjee, i. 89, 90. 92. 97. 101.—Enters the Moghul service, 102. Quits the Moghuls, and enters the service of Beejapoor, 107. Progress, 109. Regency of, 111. Operations against, 115. Submission of, and is permitted to enter the service of Beejapoor, 117. Subsequent progress, 119. Mention of, 132. Treacherously seized, 143. Is released, 146. Injunction to vengeance, 148. Visits Sivajee, 189. Death of, 199. Possessions of, ibid.
Shah Nuwaz Khan, ii. 21. 59. 81. 95. 106. Put to death, 114.
Shah Jehan, i. 96. Succeeds his father Jehangeer, 101. Mention of, 104. 125. 144.
Shaisteh Khan, i. 101. 113, 114. Appointed viceroy of the Deccan, 192. Besieges Chakun, 193. Surprised by Sivajee, 196. Appointed to Bengal, 197.
Shalivahan, i. 26. 28. Era, 55.
Shamraje Punt, the first Mahratta Peishwa, i. 150. Defeated by the Seedee, 166. Removed from the office of Peishwa, ibid.
Shao, i. 367. 404. 415. Origin of the name, ibid. Released by Azim Shah, i. 416. Opposed by Tara Bye, ibid. Obtains possession of Satara, and is seated on the throne, 418. Character of, 440. Afflicted with madness, ii. 30. Death, and immediate consequences, 35.
Shao Maharaj, the adopted son of Ram Raja, ii. 340.
Shasters, i. 23. 36.
Shastree, a Bramin learned in the Shasters, i. 23.
Shenwee, i. 11.
Shirzee Rao Ghatgay, iii. 138. Rise of, as Sukaram, ibid. 140. Compact with Bajee Rao, 141. Becomes Sindia's prime minister, 153. Cruelties and extortions of, ibid. Attack on Amrut Rao, 164. Dreadful executions by, 167. Is arrested, ibid. Released, 190. Horrible execution of Narrain Rao Bukhshee, ibid. Is left by Sindia in the Deccan, 196. Defeats the plot of Ballajee Koonjur, 200. Defeats Holkar at Indore, 201. Endeavours to persuade Sindia to unite with Holkar against the British, 302. Excluded from the councils of Sindia, 308. Re-admitted, 324. Death of, ibid.

Sholapoor, i. 65. 78. 104. iii. 484.
Shooder, the fourth of the four grand divisions of Hindoo castes, i. 9.
Shore, Sir John, neutral policy of, iii. 109.
Shuja, the second son of the emperor Shah Jehan, 110.
Shujah-ud-doulah, ii. 79. 95. 134. 219. Supports Meer Cassim, and is defeated by the English, 220. His death, 459.
Shukurkhera, i. 487.
Shumsher Buhadur, i. 571. ii. 140. iii. 235.
Shunkerjatee, account of, i. 13.
Shunkrajee Narrain Suchew, performs the Jul Sumadh, or voluntary death by water, 424.
Shunkrajee Punt, ii. 115. ii. 49.
Sillidars, horsemen who provide a horse at their own expense, i. 75.
Silwunt, i. 12.
Simoga, battle of, iii. 62.
Sindey, i. 14.
Sindia, origin of, i. 479. Progress, 493. 533. 538. (See Ranojee, Mahadajee, Doulut Rao, &c.)
Sinclair, Major James, iii. 283.
Sindkheir, i. 88. 100. 121.
Singin, i. 29.
Singur, i. 62.
Singurh, i. 62. Given up to Sivajee, 154. Given up to Jey Sing, 209. Description of, 241. Retaken by Tannajee Maloosray, 242. Reduced, 399. Retaken, 408. Taken by the English, iii. 480.
Sirkar, the Government. A division of a country under the Mahomedans (by Europeans this word is sometimes written Circar,) i. 79.
Sirkay, i. 29.
Sissoday or Sissodia, i. 26.
Sivajee, i. 7. 16. 44. Birth of, 122. Marriage of, ibid. Education, 127. First designs, 128. Earliest followers of, 13. Obtains possession of Torna, 131. Builds Rajgurh, 132. Daring robbery by, 140. Correspondence with Shah Jehan, 144. Prefers a claim as Deshmookh, ibid. Attacks the Moghul possessions, 162. Negociates with Aurungzebe, 161. Entertains a body of Patans, 165. Conduct in regard to Afzool Khan, 168. Escapes from Panalla, 181. Takes Rajapoor, 183. Sringarpoor, ibid. Kills Ghorepuray, 186. Behaviour to his father, 189. Territory of, in A. D. 1661, 190. Surprises Shaisteh Khan, 196. Assumes the title of Raja, and strikes coins, 200. Maritime expedition, 201. His indecision, 205. Submits, 208. Assists against Beejapoor, 211. Repairs to Delhi, 212. Escapes from Delhi, 215. Obtains many favours from Aurungzebe, 220. Sivajee's institutions, 223. Army, 224. Forts, 231. Revenue, 232. Justice, 235. Chief officers, ib. Anecdote of, 243. Plunders Surat a second time, 247. Achieves a victory, and secures his retreat, 249. Treatment of his prisoners, 252. Expedition to Golcondah, 255. Presses the war with Beejapoor, 259. Ascends the throne, 263. Treaty with the English, 264. Confined by illness at Satara, 269. His expedition to the Carnatic, 274. His arrival at Golcondah, 277. Performs many penances, 278. Progress in the Carnatic, ib. Sets out on his return, 283. Assists Beejapoor against the Moghuls, 288. Plunders Jaulna, 289. Heads a desperate charge, ibid. Cessions from Beejapoor, 293. Letter to Venkajee, 294. Death of, 295. Character, 296. Possessions at the time of his death, 299.
Sivajee II. i. 396. Death of, 425.
———, son of Shahjee Bhonslay

Patell. Adopted by Jeejee Bye of Kolapoor, ii. 337.
Smith, Colonel Lionel, iii. 381, 382. 392. Brigadier-general, 399. 409. 420. 429. 438. 440. 442. Surprises the Peishwa at Ashtah, 443. 472.
———, Major, iii. 381.
Somunt, one of the eight Purdhans, i. 266.
Somwoushee, ii. 41.
Sondoor, i. 432. iii. 411.
Soobeh, a province. Also the officer in charge of a great province, i. 80. A division of horse, under Sivajee's regulations, composed of 625 men, 227.
Soobehdar. The civil governor of a province or district. According to Sivajee's regulations, he was commandant of 625 horsemen, 227. In the English service, he is the senior native officer in a company of Sepoys.
Soonda, i. 187. 257. 268. 567.
Soornees, or record keeper, one of Sivajee's principal officers, i. 236.
Soorsun, (or Arabic year,) i. 55. Introduction into the Deccan, ibid.
Sooruj Mull, ii. 137. 221.
Sooryajee Maloosray, i. 243.
Soorway, i. 184.
Sopa, i. 92. 119. Taken by Sivajee, 134.
Soyera Bye, i. 300. Put to death by Sumbhajee, 305.
Spencer, Mr., ii. 98.
Spiller, Captain, 488.
Sreenewass Gungadhur, ii. 169.
Sreeput Rao. Appointed Pritee Needhee, i. 471. The rival of Bajee Rao, 483. Defeats the Raja of Kolapoor, 505. 523. ii. 5.
Sringarpoor, i. 138, not marked in the map, is situated in the Concan, S. W. of Satara.
Staunton, Captain, iii. 433.
Stevenson, Colonel, iii. 229. 237, 238. 244.
Stewart, Captain, takes possession of the Bhore Ghaut, ii. 364. Killed, 367. His high character, ibid.
St. Lubin, a French adventurer, His proceedings at the court of Poona, ii. 344.
Stulls, i. 33.
Stundeel, i. 16.
Subnees, i. 231. The head clerk, or Dufturdar, 237.
Suchew, one of the eight Purdhans, i. 266. iii. 84. 494, 495.
Suckwar Bye Sirkay, ii. 32. Immolates herself, 36.
Suddaba, ii. 225. 230.
Sufdur Ali, ii. 3. Murdered, 22.
Sufdur Jung, ii. 12. Made vizier, 29. 56. Dies, 79.
Sugger, i. 65. 345.
Suhyee Bye, Nimbalkur, the elder wife of Sivajee, and mother of Sumbhajee, i. 122. 300.
Sukaram Bapoo, ii. 26. 167. 169. 265. 314. 353. 396, 397.
Sukaram Hurry, ii. 175. 254. 287. His enthusiastic devotedness, 353.
Sulabut Jung, ii. 47. 59. 62. 81. 106. 123. 162.
Sultan Buhadur of Guzerat, i. 76.
Sultan Sikundur Adil Shah, i. 256.
Sultan Azim, i. 325. 415. Killed, 419.
Sultan Mohummud Akber, i. 307. 335, 336. Retires to Persia, 351.
Sultan Mauzum, appointed viceroy of the Deccan, i. 197. Recalled, 204. Reappointed, 217. Character of, 219. Feigned rebellion disbelieved, 221. Mention of, 240. 250. Re-appointed to the Deccan, 287. 313. Dignified with the title of Shah Alum, proceeds into the Concan, 325. Progress of, 326. 332. 334. 338. 419, 420.
Sumbhajee, i. 209. 220. Flees to the Moghuls, 291. Returns, 293. Vigorous measures, 302. Ascends the throne, 306. Cruelties of, 308. Sends an ambassador to Bombay, 313. Signalizes himself against the Portuguese, 315. Misconduct of, 317. 348. Is taken, 359. Executed, 361.
———— son of Raja Ram, Raja of Kolapoor, i. 425. 432. Anecdote of, 502. Treaty with, 506. ii. 31. Dies, 337.

Sumbhajee Angria, ii. 83.
Sumroo, ii. 461.
Sunkhera taken, iii. 215.
Sunneashee, i. 14.
Sunnud, a warrant, a commission.
Suntajee, (Sivajee's brother,) i. 279. 283. 351. 370.
Suntajee Ghorepuray, i. 262. 289. 349, 365, 374. 380. Attacked by his own troops, 386. Murder of, 388. Eulogy, 389.
Surat, i. 3. Plundered by Sivajee, 198. Brick walls built, 199. ii. 70. Taken by the English, 116. Nabob of deposed, iii. 212.
Sur Boolund Khan, i. 491. Concedes the Chouth and Surdeshmookhee of Guzerat, 503. 511.
Sur Deshmookh, HeadDeshmookh, an office granted by the king of Beejapoor, i. 85.
Surdeshmookhee, a term for one of those exactions imposed by the Mahrattas upon the revenues of the Mahomedan territories, which was formally recognized as a right of 10 per cent. upon the whole revenue of the six soobehs of the Deccan by Mohummud Shah, A. D. 1719., origin of, i. 210. 281. Imperial grant of, 450.
Surnobut, chief commander of cavalry or infantry, i. 226. Also the officer under the governor of a fortress, or commanding one face of a fortress, 227.
Surjee Anjengaom, treaty of, iii. 265.
Surusutee, one of the divisions of Gosaeens, i. 16.
Sur Rao Kakray, i. 252.
Suwassay, i. 11.
Swanston, Lieutenant, iii. 434. 478.
Swuraje, grant of, i. 451.
Syhadree mountains, i. 5. Syhadree kind, i. 11.
Sur Lushkur Khan, ii. 20. 47. 59.
Syud Bundoo, i. 173.
Tagara, i. 25.
Taindulsa, battle of, ii. 175.
Tala, i. 140, 141.
Talneir stormed, iii. 471.
Talooka, a subdivision of a district.
Tambhut, a double kettle-drum, i. 33.
Tannajee Maloosray, the particular friend of Sivajee, i. 130. 172. 195. 215. 241. Escalades Singurh, 243. Killed, ibid.
Tanjore, ii. 5.
——— i. 199. 281. 382. 566.
Tannah, a fort on Salsette, i. 28. 76. Taken by the Mahrattas, 536.
Tara Bye, widow of Raja Ram, becomes regent, i. 396. 423. Confined, 425. Taken prisoner, 505.
———, ii. 31. Visits the fort of Singurh, 29. 45. 47. 64. 75. Dies, 162.
Tarrapoor, i. 545. Stormed by the Mahrattas, ibid.
Tattora, i. 260.
Tattya Jogh, iii. 459.
Tavernier, i. 155.
Tayler, Mr. William, member of council at Bombay, sent round to Bengal, ii. 312. Protests against the proceedings of the Bengal government, 313.
Telikotta, i. 76. Battle of, ibid.
Telingana, i. 1. Limits defined, 2.
Thanna, particular explanation of, i. 176.
Thul Concan, or Concan below the Ghauts, i. 6.
Thuree, the vale adjoining the bank of a river, i. 9.
Tikona, i. 140.
Timour, i. 68.
Tippoo Sultan succeeds his father, and continues the war against the English, ii. 468. Treaty concluded with, by the Madras government, ibid. Claims the sovereignty of Beejapoor, 472. Gross deception practised by, iii. 4. Negotiation of an alliance against him, 7. War with, 9. Crosses the Toongbuddra with his army, in basket-boats, 15. Treaty with, 17. Motives, 18. Conduct of, 38. Attacks the lines of Travancore, 43. Alliance against him, ibid. Negociates, 66. Treaty with, 67. Partition of the conquests from, 68. Death of, 175. Partition of his territories, 177.

Titles, i. 81.
Tobra, a horse's feeding bag, made of leather, i. 60. 227.
Tod, Captain, iii. 404.
Todur Mull, i. 125. Revenue system of, ibid.
Tone, Mr., iii. 159. 154.
Tonk Rampoora, taken, iii. 276.
Tooka Bye Mohitey, Shahjee's 2d wife, and mother of Venkajee, i. 123.
Tookajee Holkar, ii. 196. 206. 265. Favourable to Rugoba, 349. Detached from that party, 353. Joins Sindia against the English, 407. Commands the army against General Goddard, 437. Joins Pureshram Bhow in the Concan, 441.
Toolajee Angria, ii. 88.
Toolava, or Canara, i. 4.
Tooljapoor, i. 89. 184.
Toolsee Bye, the mistress of Jeswunt Rao Holkar, becomes regent, 321. 459.
Toone, Brigadier-General, iii. 399.
Toong, i. 140.
Toongbuddra, ii. 2.
Toorgul, i. 186.
Torna, the first fort of which Sivajee obtained possession, i. 130, 131.
Trichinopoly, ii. 3. 5, 6.
Trimbukjee Dainglia, i. 141.
————————, iii. 355. Origin of, ibid. Gains the confidence of Bajee Rao, 356. His mode of flattering the Peishwa, 357. Appointed to transact affairs with the British residency, 360. Kills a Bramin, 361. Appointed Sur-Soobehdar of Ahmedabad, 372. Murders Gungadhur Shastree, 375. Is delivered up, and escapes, 376. 411. 431. 437.
Trimbuck Punt, ii. 48. 140.
Trimbuck Rao Dhabaray, i. 473. 506. Killed, 508.
Trimbuck Rao Mama, ii. 166. Left in the Carnatic, 214. Defeats Hyder, and invests Seringapatam, ii. 215. Concludes a treaty with Hyder, 217.
Tughluk, i. 47.
Tukka, i. 126.
Tukurrib Khan, i. 104.
Tullygaom, village of, English army advance to, ii. 368., and retreat from, 370.
Tunkha, i. 126.
Tuqazu, explanation of, ii. 4.
Tuqseemu, a portion, i. 34.
Tural, i. 33.
Turbeeut Khan, the chief artillery and engineer officer under Aurungzebe, i. 339. 394. Death, 419.
Turuf, under the Bahminee dynasty, a great division of the empire, i. 64. Now a subdivision of a district.
Tutwa, one of the books of Hindoo astronomy, i. 2.

Ukhbars, native newspapers, ii. 251.
Umeer Khan, iii. 195. Cuts off a party of British troops, 277. Pursued by General Smith, 294. Assumes control of Holkar's durbar, 231. Attacks the territory of Rughoojee Bhonslay, 325. Confines Khureem, 327. Mention of, 389. 403. 405.
Upton, Colonel, appointed envoy-plenipotentiary to Poona, ii. 312. Arrives at Poorundhur, 316. Menacing tone assumed towards, by the ministers, 318. His negotiations, 319. Signs the treaty of Poorundhur, 320. Recalled, 332.

Vasco de Gama, i. 74.
Vaughans, murder of, iii. 428.
Vedas, i. 10. 23.
Vendhia, i. 10.
Vendhiadree, i. 2.
Vellore, i. 280. Surrenders to Sivajee's troops, 281. Given up to Daood Khan, 406.
Venkajee, the half brother of Sivajee, i. 123. Visits Sivajee, 189. 280, 281. Attacks his brother's troops, and is repulsed, 284.

Agrees to a compromise, 285. Letter to, 294. Mention of, 349.
Venkajee Munnya Bappoo, iii. 93. 261.
Verole, i. 88.
Vikramajeet, i. 27.
Vinchoor, Jagheerdar of, iii. 203. 415.
Vingorla, i. 200.
Visajee Kishen Beeneewala, ii. 206. Restores the emperor to his throne, 225. His conduct at Delhi, 227. Returns from Hindoostan, 257.
Vishalgurh, i. 28. 62. 177. 186.
Vishnoo, one of the great Hindoo deities, i. 16. 20.
Viziadroog, or Gheriah, i. 188. ii. 85.

Wace, i. 138. 168.
Waeedeek, a Bramin learned in the Vedas, i. 23.
Wagnuck, or tiger's claws, i. 172.
Waite, Sir Nicholas, i. 422.
Wakinkerah, i. 345. Siege of, 405.
Walker, Major Alexander, sent with a detachment to join the Gaekwar's army, 216. Is attacked by Mulhar Rao, 217. Appointed president, ibid. Prudence and ability of, 218. 365.
Wallace, Colonel, iii. 291.
Walmeek, i. 23.
Wankanees, i. 256. One of Sivajee's principal officers.
Wanprist, Hindoo devotees, i. 14.
Waree, i. 138. 187.
Warungole, the ancient capital of Telingana, i. 47. 66.
Wasil Mohummud, iii. 455.
Wassota, i. 149. iii. 341. Besieged and reduced by Gokla, 342. Taken by the British, 481.
Watson, Admiral, ii. 88.
Wauchope, Mr., iii. 405.
Wellesley, Marquis, iii. 168. 176. Major-General, the Honourable Arthur, 192. Marquis, 194. — Major-General, directed to march towards Poona, 229. Joined by the Jagheerdars, 230. Reaches Poona, ibid. Negotiation with the confederates, 233. Marquis Wellesley's preparations, 234. General Wellesley attacks Ahmednugur, 236. Prudence and decision of, 239. Attacks and defeats the confederates, 241. Proceedings of, 259. Marquis Wellesley issues orders to attack Holkar, 275. Popular clamour against his administration, 303.
Welsh, Lieutenant, ii. 416.
Weysh, the third of the four grand divisions of Hindoo casts, i. 9. 12.
Wilks, Colonel, i. 1, &c.
Wilson, Lieut. Nathan. Anecdote of, at the battle of Assaye, iii. 242.
———, Major J. A., 415.
Wingate, Assistant-Surgeon, iii. 434.
Wiswas Rao, ii. 120, 142, 155.
Wittojee Bhonslay, the grand uncle of Sivajee, i. 89.
Wittul Sewdeo, (Jagheerdar of Vinchoor,) ii. 71. 140. 170.
Wittul Soondur, ii. 171.
Women of the Mahratta country, i. 18.
Woodington, Lieut.-Colonel, iii. 217. 219. Takes Baroach and Pawungurh, 245.
Wukeel-i-Mootluq, Supreme Deputy-Governor of the Moghul empire, a dignity conferred on Nizam Ool Moolk, i. 478. iii. 32. Insignia of, presented to the Peishwa.
Wurgaom, battle of, ii. 371. Negotiation at, 378., and convention of, 377.
Wurn shunkur, i. 14.
Wussuntgurh, i. 28. Taken by Aurungzebe, 392.
Wutun, i. 41. 43.
Wyllie, Assistant-Surgeon, iii. 435.

Yajurwedee, i. 11.
Yemajee Sewdeo, ii. 17. 32. 42.
Yem Dhurm, the Hindoo judge after death, i. 22.
Yessjee Kunk, one of three persons who were Sivajee's earliest followers, i. 130, 195.
Yeswunt Rao Dhabaray, i. 510. ii. 38. 40.

Yoon, Mr., iii 5

Zalim Sing, Raj Rana of Kotah, iii 280. 404.

Zeafut, a feast or entertainment, i. 503

Zoolfikar Khan, i 367. 372. 382. 406 419, 420.

Zuffir Khan, i. 50. Defeats the imperial army, and is elected King, 51. History of his rise, ib. Assumes the title of Sultan Alla-ud-Deen Hoossein Kangoh Bahmnee, 52

Zumeendar, i. 38 77.

