THE CROWN LANDS.

The Land Revenues of the Crown in the United Kingdom have been collected on the public account since 1760, when George III. surrendered them in return for a fixed annual payment or Civil List. At the time of the surrender the gross revenues amounted to about £80,000, and the net return to about £11,000.

In the year ended March 31, 1919, the total Receipts by the Commissioners were £1,115,286, of which amount £753,942 was derived from Crown Rents, and £44,026 from the Mines. The Expenditure was £367,562, of which £333,664 represented the expenses of the Woods, Forests and Land Revenue, and £13,898 the Mines. The sum of £760,000 was paid to the Exchequer in 1918–1919, being a net sum from which no deductions have to be made for administration.

LIFE ASSURANCE

THE list on the following two pages contains the names of all the more important British Life offices, of eight Colonial companies (marked C), and of three American offices (marked A), all of which transact business in this country

CLASS OF BUSINESS.—The second column shows whether the company is conducted on the Mutual system whereby the whole of the divisible profit is allotted to participating policy holders (M), or whether the company has proprietors by whom part (usually a very small proportion) of such profit is received (P) Life offices transacting other insurance business are indicated by letters in this column In such cases the Life funds are kept separately and are not liable for the claims of other departments The Share Capital is usually liable for the claims of all branches

FIGURES.—These are taken from the latest annual accounts available at date of going to press, and in the majority of cases refer to annual reports for the financial year ended 31 December, 1919

LIFE FUNDS.—The amounts of these funds, though interesting, are not in themselves a sufficient indication of the financial stability of a company, which cannot be judged unless liabilities are actuarially compared with assets

PREMIUM INCOME.—The annual premium income is in all cases stated after deduction of the amount paid to other companies for reassuring parts of the risks

EXPENSES.—The expenses of a Life office include, in all cases where paid commission to agents The amount of expenses is less important in itself than in relation to premium income, consequently the percentage of the premium income absorbed in expenses is shown The average percentage of British offices is about 12½%, of which about 5% is expended on commission and $7\frac{1}{2}$% on other expenses This ratio taken by itself is frequently misleading because, if the proportion of new business is large, the percentage of the total premiums absorbed in expenses may legitimately be higher than where the new business is small Moreover where rates of premium are below the average any comparisons of percentage should be considered, with due regard to this feature, a gain to the policyholder through reduced premium being equivalent to an immediate cash bonus

INTEREST.—The rate of interest earned is important for comparison with the rate assumed in valuing liabilities since the greater the margin between these rates the greater is the surplus available from this source for bonus Owing to the unprecedentedly high rate of income tax now leviable, a reduction in the net yield may be anticipated in nearly every case in the immediate future

VALUATIONS.—The last two columns of the table are derived from the valuation returns made by the companies to the Board of Trade A valuation indicates liability under existing policies after making allowance for the amounts to be paid and received It is assumed that deaths will occur in accordance with a mortality table, and that interest will be earned at a certain rate Various mortality tables are employed those most usual being known as the H and O^m and the corresponding tables $H^m(5)$ and $O^m(5)$ which exclude mortality in the first five years of assurance If a company assumes that it will earn a high rate of interest in the future the net liability will appear less than if it assumes a low rate while the liability on account of mortality appears greater by some tables than by others The position of an office is most satisfactory when a stringent basis of valuation is adopted because the margin between the calculated and experienced liability is larger and the surplus available for bonuses is greater The O^m and $O^m(5)$ tables in conjunction are more stringent than the O table alone the H^m is more stringent than the American and with every table the lower the rate of interest assumed the more stringent is the valuation

FIRE INSURANCE RATES

MOST large fire offices belong to the tariff association, charging identical rates of premium There are, however, a number of non tariff offices which claim to assess individual risks independently on merits Tariff rates of premium per £100 insured against fire for the more common classes of risk are as follows –

Private Dwelling Houses built of brick or stone and tiled or slated and in no hazardous proximity, 1s 6d

Household goods therein usually 2s

Policies are issued by some companies embracing all risks incidental to private houses in one amount.

Shops and Warehouses, similarly built and circumstanced, in which no hazardous goods are deposited nor hazardous trades carried on, from 2s

Stock and Utensils in trade, fixtures and household furniture in such shops and warehouses, from 2s

Private Dwelling Houses, brick and timber built and tiled or slated, in no hazardous proximity, from 2s 6d

Most fire insurance companies transact accident and miscellaneous business and if a strong company be selected with a reputation for liberal dealing it will probably be found to the advantage of a householder that he should effect with it all such policies as he may require in place of dividing them amongst several companies A number of fire offices are prepared to issue policies of an inclusive character for household purposes, combining in one contract protection against damage by fire to the contents of a house, or from burglary, housebreaking, larceny, theft &c, and insurance against domestic servants employers liability, damage from storm or tempest, third party risks and other hazards This can usually be arranged for an annual premium of 5s per £100 of the full value of the contents of the house Fire insurance of the house itself is not included, however in this estimate The advantage of a policy of this description is that it obviates the inconvenience of payments of small amounts in insurance premiums at different dates, and that in one comprehensive form it supplies protection at a moderate cost for all a householder's ordinary insurance requirements

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR WHOLE LIFE ASSURANCE

Life assurance may be effected either with or without participation in profits If without participation both sum assured and premium remain unchanged If with participation, a higher premium is charged, and bonuses may usually be applied either to increase sum assured or to reduce premium if not discounted for cash An alternative plan is available in some offices whereby future bonuses are anticipated and used to reduce premiums from the outset This is called the "Discounted Bonus or 'Cost Price system If the bonuses actually declared exceed those anticipated, the difference is credited to the policyholder, if, however the anticipated bonuses exceed those declared the balance has to be liquidated by the policyholder or remains as a debt Policies should only be effected on this system in companies which can point to good and consistent bonus records, and whose valuation reserves are particularly strong

The ages applicable to the life and endowment assurance (but not the annuity) rates as hereafter given are next birthday unless otherwise stated

The next table shows the annual premiums payable throughout life for assurance of £100 at death with participation in profit Premium rates alone are not sufficient for judging the relative attractions of life offices An office charging a high premium may give higher bonuses than one charging a low premium and therefore bonus results and prospects as well as premiums have to be considered Some offices only allow bonuses to be taken in reduction of premium and on this plan the rates are usually high to commence with but are greatly reduced after a few years Some reserve bonuses for the older classes of policyholders, and in these cases lower premiums than the average are usually charged Most offices grant interim bonuses between valuation periods and it is important to ascertain if this is the case before an assurance is effected and how such interim bonuses compare with valuation bonuses especially in cases of endowment assurance

ENDOWMENT ASSURANCES.

Endowment Assurances are very popular, and are extremely attractive to persons who desire to combine a provision for their dependants, in event of premature death, with the investment of savings for the realisation of a fund for their own personal enjoyment in later life. For the investment of small annual sums there is no medium promising more satisfactory results than an Endowment assurance participating in profits in a good bonus-paying life office. The selection of such an office is all-important, as so much depends upon profit-earning capacity—see first page of Life Assurance section.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR ENDOWMENT ASSURANCE OF £100. WITH PROFITS.

Under endowment assurances the sum assured is paid after a given number of years, or on the attainment of a fixed age. Should the life assured, however, die during the endowment period, the sum assured is paid at death. The annual premiums payable throughout the endowment period, or till death if previous, for the assurance of £100 at various ages of entry and maturity, participating in profits, are given in this table.

ADVICE REGARDING LIFE ASSURANCE AND ANNUITIES

Apart from the immediate protection thereby given, a life or endowment assurance policy, if effected in a first class bonus-paying company, provides exceptional opportunity for the remunerative investment of savings Policyholders can claim relief from assessment to this duty in respect of life assurance premiums not exceeding in amount one sixth of their income in most cases

The selection of the office best suited to requirements and likely to produce the best results should be carefully made, but the study of any tables or suggestions is not sufficient to enable persons without technical knowledge to gauge the respective merits of the various companies There are many good offices and in the most select class some are better adapted than others for particular purposes, and large sums may be saved or earned by intending proposers through obtaining reliable advice before a proposal is le.

edical examinations are sometimes dispensed in the case of new proposals, but policies in these instances are usually subject to certain restrictive conditions of a temporary character

INQUIRIES —On receipt of an inquiry containing particulars of requirements (accompanied by 5s) addressed to "The Insurance Editor, Warwick lane, E C 4," advice will be given as to the system and policies best adapted to the special requirements Inquiries should state the age at and date of next birthday The following are suggested as the policies most likely to be required —

(a) Life, uniform premium for whole life
(b) ,, half ,, ,, first 5 years
(c) ,, limited ,, ,, 20 or 25 years
(d) ,, without profits
(e) Endowment, decreasing premium ("net cost")
(f) ,, uniform ,,
(g) ,, half ,, for first 5 years.
(h) ,, without profits
(i) ,, Educational Policy
(j) ,, to mature at age 55, 60 or 65 (combined with sickness and accident benefits up to age selected)
(k) Non-Medical Examination policies

General Regulations Foreign and Colonial Post

INSURANCE.—Insurance may be effected on parcels to almost all countries up to £400, according to destination, at the following rates.—4*d* for £12, and 2*d* for every additional £12 up to 5*s* 10*d* for £400. Parcels sent to the U S by the semi official service are insurable at 6*d* per £12 up to £120. Compensation up to £1 is also given on uninsured parcels to or from Egypt Newfoundland, India and the smaller colonies with the larger foreign countries including the semi official U S A service, if certificate of posting is produced. Only securities bank notes, etc, properly packed, and sealed everywhere with a private mark, can be insured by letter post.

INSURED BOX POST.—Jewellery and similar articles (not money securities letters or commercial papers) may be sent in strong boxes by letter mails to Austria Belgium Denmark Egypt France Germany Holland Italy Norway Portugal Luxembourg Switzerland. Postage 1*s* to 3*s* maximum weight 2 lb size 12×4×4 in Customs declarations must be filled in. Insurance rates as for parcels, limit £400.

CASH ON DELIVERY.—A reciprocal service of 'cash on delivery' of parcels has been established between the U K and the following: Aden Algeria Barbados Bermuda Brit Guiana Brit Honduras Brit Somaliland Ceylon Corsica China (Shanghai and Weihaiwei only) Cyprus Denmark Egypt Gibraltar Grenada Hong Kong Jamaica, Leeward Is Malay States Malta, Mauritius Morocco (Tangier only) New Zealand N Borneo Nyasaland (£20) N Rhodesia (Broken Hill, Livingstone Lusakas Mazabuca only) S Rhodesia, Sudan (£20) Falkland Is (Port Stanley only) Fiji Is France Gambia (£20) St Lucia Sarawak (£30) Seychelles Str Settlements Tobago Trinidad Zanzibar. Fees for collection 4½*d* for Trade Charge (amount to be collected) not exceeding £1 with 2½*d* extra for each additional £1 of Trade Charge up to the maximum which is £40 (fee 1*s* 8*d*) where not otherwise shown in above list. Addressee has generally also to pay besides Customs if any 4*d* (as in U K) or 6*d* fee (not prepayable) on delivery. If Trade Charge cannot be collected at first or one alternative address parcel is returned at sender's expense unless abandonment is definitely requested.

* The parcel post with the United States is carried on by means of two distinct services namely an official service (United States Post Office) and a semi-official service (American Express Company). Customs charges cannot be prepaid by sender in the official service. A parcel forwarded by the semi official service may, without extra charge be sent through New York in Bond for Customs examination at any one of the United States Ports of Entry or Inland Custom Houses. The address must, however make arrangements for the delivery after clearance. Such parcels must be plainly marked by the sender 'In bond to ——' naming the Inland Port chosen, and the same words must also be written in the same handwriting on the Customs declaration and dispatch note. (Mails twice weekly.)

INTERNATIONAL EXPRESS SERVICE.—Delivery by special messenger of correspondence to or from certain colonies and foreign countries, or certain towns in the same, has now been arranged. 3*d* extra 1*s* paid by the sender on parcels 3*d*. on other matter. The rest of the charge is collected from the addressee.

AIR MAIL SERVICES convey registered and unregistered, but not insured correspondence (except parcels) to Paris and Brussels, and thence to most parts of central and eastern Europe (saving sometimes 24 hours) and to India and the East (leaving London Fri morning instead of Th evening). There are at present every weekday a morning mail to Paris and afternoon to Paris and Brussels. Packets may be posted in the usual manner, but must have By Air Mail prominently marked in top left hand corner (preferably on special blue labels obtained gratis from Head Post Offices or by writing to Secretary G P O London E C 2). Fee 2*d* per oz extra paid by postage stamps in top right-hand corner. Express delivery is obtained by further stamps (6*d* per packet) the word Express being written just below By Air Mail. (There is also a service at different rates from Toulouse to Rabat Morocco.)

POST OFFICE TELEPHONES.

London Telephone Area.—The office of the Controller of the London Telephone Service is at 144A Queen Victoria St., E.C. 4; Tel. City 2000.

The Rates are under revision and may be altered. On Nov. 30, 1919, they were: Annual Subscription for an unlimited number of calls (unlimited or flat rate), £20; £17 for second and subsequent connexions for same subscriber, premises more than 2 miles from exchange charged £1 15*s.* every additional furlong (220 yards). Extension lines connecting parts of same premises, from £1 10*s.*; connecting separate premises, from £4 10*s.* (special rate for measured services), with surcharge of £1 where it is necessary to fit a new switchboard.

Message Rate, within the County of London, £5 annual subscription and for each call to a subscriber on an exchange within the County of London 1*d.* (outside the County 2*d.*). For connexion to an exchange outside the County of London the annual subscription is £4, and for each call to a subscriber on the same exchange 1*d.* (to a subscriber on another exchange within the London Telephone area 2*d.*). A minimum amount is payable annually in advance on account of calls (both inside and outside the County of London) of £1 10*s.*

Trunk Calls, Telegrams, etc.—Private subscribers may use their lines for trunk messages, or for sending telegrams, on paying a deposit to cover the credit given; also for receiving telegrams addressed to their exchange and number; and letters arriving at G.P.O., London, early Sunday Morning can be delivered on Sunday by telephone to subscribers (3*d.* every 20 words, exclusive of postage). Call Office Fee, for subscribers or others, 3*d.* each 3 (night, 6) minutes. The public may dictate telegrams from many call offices by paying usual fee besides telegram charges.

New Subscribers.—A surcharge of £4 (in addition to the above rates) is made for each new subscriber, and also where existing lines are taken over by other parties.

Outside London Telephone Area.—Tariff rates on application to the District Manager.

Telephone Trunk Lines.—These connect Exchanges in different towns. Rates in day-time: —4*d.* for every 25 miles up to 100; 8*d.* for every further 40 miles. Special rates are charged over submarine lines. 3 minutes are allowed; on their expiry the option of another 3 minutes is given. At Call Offices, double fee should be previously deposited; or the line may be engaged outright for the maximum of 6 minutes. The charge for a 6 minutes' conversation during the night period from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. is the same as for a 3 minutes' conversation during the day. During the night period also a 3 minutes' conversation may be had for half the day fee when that amounts to 1*s.* 4*d.* or more. When the day fee is 1*s.* the night fee is 8*d.*

STOCK EXCHANGE COMMISSIONS.

COMMISSIONS for buying and selling stocks and shares have risen since 1914. The new rates are three-sixteenths per cent. for Consols and Annuities, and one-quarter per cent. for all other Government Stocks. Railway stocks are charged at the rate of 10*s.* per cent. on the actual money. For bargains involving sums up to £100 the minimum charge is 10*s.*, and those above £100 the minimum is £1. These are Stock Exchange charges. For stock in the register of the Post Office Savings Bank, the brokerage varies from 9*d.* for amounts up to £25 to 2*s.* 3*d.* per £100 of stock. For Stock Exchange transactions there are also stamping fees as well as those charged by companies for registering transfers.

Legal Notes.

BIRTHS.

WHEN a birth takes place, personal information of it must be given to the Registrar, and the register signed in his presence, by one of the following persons:—1. The father or mother of the child. If they fail, 2. The occupier of the house in which the birth happened; 3. A person present at the birth; or, 4. The person having charge of the child. The duty of attending to the registration therefore rests firstly on the parents. One of them must, within 42 days of the birth, give to the Registrar by word of mouth the information needed to enable him to register, and must sign the register in his presence. If they fail to do this without reasonable cause, they will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings. In case of their failure, one of the other persons above named must give personal information and sign the register within the same period. If at the end of 42 days no one has given information and signed the register, the Registrar may write to any one of the above-mentioned persons, requiring him or her to come to him for that purpose, at a stated time and place. Any person who fails to comply with this requisition will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings. Not only will liability to a penalty be avoided, but the registration of a birth will be free when it takes place within 42 days (but in Scotland the period is 21 days), unless either of the persons above named sends to the Registrar a written request to come and register at his or her residence or at the house where the child was born, when the Registrar on so attending may claim a fee of one shilling. After three months a birth cannot be registered except in the presence of the Superintendent Registrar, and on payment of fees, amounting to five shillings, to him and the Registrar. After twelve months a birth can be registered only on the Registrar-General's express authority, and on payment of further fees, amounting to ten shillings. In Scotland, after the lapse of three months, it can only be registered on the authority of the Sheriff of the County. No birth occurring in England and Wales can be registered after the lapse of seven years from the date thereof. The only legal proof of age and place of birth is afforded by the civil registers, which the law now requires to be made as above described. In districts where the Notification of Births Act, 1907, has been adopted by the local authority, notice of every birth must (subject to a penalty in case of default) be given by the father, or person in attendance on the mother, to the district medical officer of health. The notice must be sent by post within 36 hours of the birth, and is to be in addition to, and not in substitution for the notices above mentioned.

BRITISH NATIONALITY,

The following is an abstract of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, which consolidated and amended the common law and the statute law previously existing on the subject of British Nationality and Naturalization:—

BRITISH NATIONALITY.—The following are British subjects:—

1. Every person born, of whatever parentage, within His Majesty's Dominions and allegiance.

2. Every person born out of His Majesty's Dominions whose father was born within His Majesty's Dominions, and had not, at the time of the child's birth, lost the British nationality so acquired. As to the children of naturalized British subjects, see below at (7).

3. Every person born out of His Majesty's Dominions, before Jan. 1, 1915, whose father's father was born within His Majesty's Dominions, provided that the grandfather was, at the time of the father's birth, a British subject.

4. Every person born on board a British ship.

5.* Every person to whom a Certificate of Naturalization under the Naturalization Act, 1870, or the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, or of Re-Admission to British Nationality has been granted, or who has acquired British nationality by special Act of Parliament or by conquest or annexation.

6. The wives (whatever their nationality of origin) of British subjects, save in certain cases where the man changes his nationality after marriage.

7. The children of naturalized British subjects born out of His Majesty's Dominions, provided that they comply with one of the following conditions:—

(a) in the case of a child born before January 1st, 1915,

(i) if a Certificate of Naturalization has been granted to his father or his mother (being a widow) before January 1, 1915, and he has become resident with such father or mother (being a widow) in the United Kingdom before that date while under age, or

(ii) if a Certificate of Naturalization is granted to his father or his mother (being a widow) after January 1, 1915, and his name is included therein.

(b) in the case of a child born after January 1, 1915,

(i) if before his birth a Certificate of Naturalization had been granted to his father or his mother, or

(ii) if a Certificate of Naturalization is granted to his father or his mother (being a widow) after January 1, 1915, and his name is included therein.

LOSS OF BRITISH NATIONALITY.—A British subject loses his British nationality:—

(a) if by any voluntary or formal act he becomes naturalized in a foreign country;

(b) if, in certain cases, he makes a declaration of alienage. These cases are:—

(i) where a person is a British subject by reason of birth in His Majesty's Dominions and allegiance or on board a British ship and is also by birth or becomes during minority a subject of any foreign State,

(ii) where a person is a British subject, but was born out of His Majesty's Dominions, and

(iii) where a Convention has been made between this country and any foreign State, to the effect that any subject of that State who has been naturalized as a British subject may divest himself of that status;

(c) if during his minority his father loses British nationality in circumstances which involve the acquisition by the child of a new nationality;

* See "Acquisition of British Nationality" below.

(d) in the case of a woman, if she marries an alien;

(N.B. A woman who was originally a British subject and loses British nationality by marriage with an alien does not regain British nationality on the death of husband or the dissolution of her marriage. If in such a case she desires to resume British nationality she must apply for a Certificate of Naturalization.)

(e) in the case of a person to whom a Certificate of Naturalization is granted after January 1, 1915, if the Secretary of State revokes the Certificate;

(f) if the territory of which he is an inhabitant is severed from the Crown; cf., e.g., the cases of the inhabitants of Hanover and Heligoland.

ACQUISITION OF BRITISH NATIONALITY.—An alien may acquire British nationality:—

(a) by special Act of Parliament;

(b) by the conquest, annexation, or cession of the territory of which he is an inhabitant;

(c) in the case of a woman, by marriage with a British subject, and

(d) by naturalization.

Naturalization.—All Certificates of Naturalization granted in the United Kingdom between May 13, 1870, and December 31, 1914, were granted in accordance with the provisions of the Naturalization Act, 1870. And this Act did not secure that a Certificate granted in any part of the Empire should be valid throughout the Empire.

Under the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, every person to whom a Certificate of Naturalization is granted in accordance with its provisions after Jan. 1, 1915, is a British subject, not only in that part of the British Empire where the Certificate is granted, but also in the United Kingdom and in any Dominion which has adopted the Act, and in any other British Possession.

Persons naturalized prior to January 1, 1915, may, after that date, apply for a fresh Certificate of Naturalization under the new conditions.

In order to be eligible for the grant of such a Certificate in the United Kingdom, an alien must:—

(a) during the eight years preceding his application have resided for not less than five years in His Majesty's Dominions (of which not less than one year immediately preceding the application must have been spent in the United Kingdom) or have been for not less than five years in the service of the Crown;

(b) be of good character and have an adequate knowledge of the English language; and

(c) intend to reside in His Majesty's Dominions or to enter or continue in the service of the Crown.

Instructions for the guidance of persons desiring to apply for a Certificate of Naturalization may be obtained free on application to the Home Office, Whitehall, London, S.W.

The fee payable to the Home Office in respect of the grant of a Certificate of Naturalization is fixed by the Government of the day, and is at present £3, of which £1 is payable on submission of the application and the remainder on the grant of the Certificate. The £1 payable on submission of the application is not returnable, whether or not a Certificate is granted.

N.B.—In the case of a woman who was a British subject previously to her marriage to an alien, and whose husband has died or whose marriage has been dissolved, the above requirements, both as to residence and as to fee, are relaxed.

STATUS OF ALIENS.—Property may be held by an alien in the same manner as by a natural-born British subject, but the title to such property does not confer any right on an alien to hold real property out of the United Kingdom, or qualify him for any franchise.

Aliens are not entitled to be tried by a jury de medietate linguæ, but are triable in the same manner as if they were natural-born subjects.

UNDESIRABLE ALIENS.—An undesirable alien —e.g., one who is without means, or who is a lunatic, or an idiot, or who has been guilty in another country of an extraditable offence—may be prevented landing in the United Kingdom. An alien may also be expelled from this country if he prove to be "undesirable" within the meaning of the Aliens Act, 1905. His Majesty may by Order in Council impose further restrictions on aliens (see Aliens Restriction Act, 1914 as extended and amended 1919)

BUSINESS NAMES REGISTRATION.

REGISTRATION OF BUSINESS NAMES ACT, 1916.

This Act received the Royal Assent on 22 Dec., 1916. Section 1 requires registration, irrespective of nationality, by—

(a) Every firm in the United Kingdom carrying on business under a business name entirely different from the names of the partners, or one which contains any addition to the surnames of the partners other than their Christian names or the initials thereof;

(b) Every individual in the United Kingdom carrying on business under a business name entirely different from the name of the individual, or one which contains any addition to his surname other than his Christian names or the initials thereof;

(c) Every individual or firm who, or a member of which, has changed his name, except in the case of a woman in consequence of marriage.

The exception in (c) is inserted in order to exempt from registration a married woman trading in her married surname. A married woman trading in her maiden surname is required to register under Section 1 (b).

Section 2 requires registration by a firm, individual, or corporation carrying on business wholly or mainly as nominee or trustee for other persons, or acting as general agent for a foreign firm.

Provisos to these sections make registration unnecessary (1) where the addition to the surname indicates succession to a former owner; (2) where an "s" is added to the surname in a case where the partners bear the same surname; and (3) where the business is carried on by an official appointed by any court.

Addresses of Registrars.

England and Wales—39, Russell Square, W.C. 1.
Scotland—Exchequer Chambers, Parliament Square, Edinburgh.
Ireland—Coleraine House, Dublin.

Forms of application for registration can be obtained at these addresses. The fee for registration is 5*s*, which is paid by affixing a 5*s* stamp (to be obtained at a post office) to the form of application.

Section 18 states that any individual or firm required to register by the Act must show, on trade catalogues, trade circulars, show cards, and business letters,

(a) in the case of an individual, his present Christian name or the initials thereof and present surname, any former Christian name or surname his nationality if not British, and if his nationality is not his nationality of origin, his nationality of origin, and

(b) in the case of a firm the present Christian name or the initials thereof and present surnames, any former Christian names and surnames and the nationality if not British and, if the nationality is not the nationality of origin, the nationality of origin of all the partners in the firm, or in the case of a corporation being a partner the corporate name

In order to keep the Register up to date Section 6 requires that any change that may occur in the particulars registered shall be notified to the Registrar within 14 days of the occurrence of such change The Board of Trade have power, however, to extend the period in which the notification should be made

Section 13 provides that if any registered individual or firm ceases to carry on business, the individual (or if he is dead his personal representative) or the remaining partners, must notify the Registrar of such cessation within three months

After an application for registration, or a notification of change has been registered, a certificate is issued which by Section 11 must be exhibited in a conspicuous position at the principal place of business

The forms registered are filed and can be inspected or certified copies thereof can be obtained on payment of the prescribed fees

The fees payable under the Act are—

(a) on registration 5*s*
(b) on statement of change 2*s* 6*d*
(c) for inspection of a registered form 6*d*
(d) for certificate of registration other than the first, 2*s*
(e) for a certified copy of a registered form 6*d* for a folio of 72 words

The Act imposes severe penalties for failure to comply with its provisions, and puts defaulters under serious disabilities as regards enforcing their rights under any contracts made during the default

Among other matters in the Interpretation Clause (Section 22) the following are important —

"Business includes profession

Reference to a change of name does not apply in the case of a British born subject if the change was made before the attainment of the age of 18

A "foreign firm" is one whose principal place of business is situated outside His Majesty's Dominions

Preliminary—The law of copyright is contained in the Copyright Act, 1911, which repeals all the earlier acts It should be stated that no registration of copyright at Stationers Hall is now necessary, copyright arises from mere authorship

Copyright defined—"Copyright means the sole right to produce or reproduce the work or any substantial part thereof in any material form whatsoever, to perform a drama or deliver a lecture in public, if the work is unpublished, to publish it or in any substantial part It includes the right to produce, publish, etc, translations, to dramatise a novel, or turn a drama into a novel to make any record or film by means of which the work may be mechanically performed or delivered

For the purposes of the Act, publication means the issue of copies of the work to the public, and does not include the public performance of a drama, or delivery of a lecture or exhibition of an artistic work, or the construction of an architectural work of art. The issue of a photo or engraving of a work of sculpture is not a publication of such work

Who owns the copyright—The author of a work is the first owner of the copyright, but in the case of a ... consideration, the person by whom the work was ordered primâ facie owns the copyright. In the case of a servant employed to draw or write, his employer owns the copyright.

Extent and duration of copyright.—The right exists throughout those of his Majesty's Dominions to which the Act extends if the work was published within them, or if, the work not being published, the author was at the date of the making of the work a British subject resident in those dominions. It may be stated, broadly, that the act extends to all the Dominions of the Crown, but subject to this—that the Legislature of any self-governing dominion may repeal it so far as it relates to them. The right subsists for the life of the author and for 50 years after his death; but after he has been dead 25 years, anyone else may reproduce the work on certain terms, which are prescribed in S. 3 of the Act. Special provision is made (by S. 16) for the duration of copyright in the case of joint authorship.

In the case of a work published for or under the control of his Majesty, or any Government department, copyright vests in the Crown, and endures for 50 years from date of publication. In the case of a photograph copyright subsists for 50 years from the making of the negative. He who owns the negative primâ facie owns the copyright.

Assignment of Copyright.—The owner of a copyright may assign it either wholly or partially, and either generally or subject to territorial ... for all or any part of the period ... h it subsists. Such an assignment ... writing signed by the owner. But ... ct to the proviso that no assignment ... by an author who is part owner (otherwise by will) operates to give the assignee any rights beyond the expiration of 25 years after the author's death. The remaining rights then vest in the legal personal representative, notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary. This proviso, however, does not apply to "collective" works, i.e., an encyclopedia.

Deliveries of Books to certain Libraries.—A copy of every book must be sent by the publisher at his own expense to the British Museum within a month of publication. The publisher may also be required, by demand made in writing within twelve months, to send copies of any book he publishes to each of the following libraries: the Bodleian, Oxford, the University Libraries at Cambridge and Dublin, and that of the Faculty of Advocates at Edinburgh. With certain exceptions copies of all books must also be sent (if required) to the National Library of Wales.

Posthumous Works.—If an author dies before publication of his work (i.e., in the case of a drama, performance, and in the case of a lecture delivery, in public), copyright exists until publication and for a term of 50 years thereafter. The owner of an author's manuscript, where such ownership has been acquired under the will, primâ facie owns the copyright. If the person who owns the copyright of a deceased author refuses to publish or republish the work, which is consequently withheld from the public, the Privy Council may order him to grant licences on certain terms.

International Copyright.—The Act ... der in Council be applied to works pu... a foreign country, or to works whose authors were subjects of any of the countries to which the order relates. Generally speaking, no country is included in such an order, unless its government concedes similar privileges to British subjects.

Infringement.—Anyone who does anything the sole right to do which is conferred on the owner of a copyright is an infringer. The following acts, however, do not constitute infringement:—(i) Any fair dealing with a work by way of criticism, private study, or newspaper summary; (ii) where an author of an artistic work does not own copyright, his own use of models, sketches, etc.; (iii) making drawings or photographs of (a) a work of sculpture or artistic craftsmanship, if permanently situated in a public place or building, or (b) of an architectural work of art; (iv) the publication of passages from works in school books (subject to certain limitations); (v) the publication of a lecture in a newspaper, unless the author has taken the proper steps to make it known that the lecture is copyright. Copyright is infringed by anyone who (a) sells or lets for hire or by way of trade exposes for sale or hire; (b) distributes for the purposes of trade; (c) exhibits in public by way of trade; or (d) imports any work which to his knowledge infringes copyright. To permit a theatre to be used, knowingly and without consent, for the performance of a copyright drama is also an infringement, unless the person so permitting it was not aware and had no reasonable ground to suspect that the performance would be an infringement.

Remedies for infringement.—The owner of a copyright may bring a suit for damages for and/or obtain an injunction to restrain infringement. If a defendant to such proceedings can show that he was not aware of and had no reasonable ground to suspect that there was any copyright, he will not have to pay damages. Proceedings must be commenced within three years next after the infringement. Articles which infringe copyright are the property of the owner of the copyright, and he may sue to recover them. The Act also imposes penalties recoverable in a Court of Summary Jurisdiction on persons who sell or deal in infringing articles (see s. 11)

Importation of infringing copies.—An author may take steps in accordance with the Act to prevent infringing copies of his work being imported from abroad; and the Commissioners of Customs may make regulations as to the forfeiture and detention of such infringing copies.

DAYS OF GRACE.

Bills of Exchange or Promissory Notes, payable at any time after date, have three days of grace allowed; thus, a bill dated 1 Jan. at two months' date is not due until March 4. There is, however, no such extension in the case of bills drawn at sight, or on demand, and these must be paid on presentation. In the United Kingdom, bills falling due on Sunday are payable the previous Saturday, and in England and Wales and in Ireland bills falling due on Good Friday or Christmas Day are similarly payable on the previous day. Bills falling due on Bank Holidays are payable the day after.

DEATHS.

In England and Wales.—When a death takes place, personal information of it must be given to the Registrar, and the register signed in his presence, by one of the following persons:—1. A relative of the deceased present at the death, or in attendance during the last illness. If they fail, 2 Some other relative of the deceased. In default of any relatives, 3. A person present at the death, or, the occupier of the house in which the death happened If all the above named fail, 4 An inmate of the house, or, the person causing the body to be buried Relatives present or in attendance are first required to attend to the registration One of them must, within five days of the death, give to the Registrar by word of mouth the information needed, and must sign the register, or must within the same time send him written notice of the death, accompanied by a certificate of the cause of death, signed by a registered medical practitioner, if any such attended the deceased during his last illness The written notice will be useless without a legal medical certificate If notice is sent, information must nevertheless be given and the register signed within fourteen days from the death If relatives present or in attendance fail without reasonable cause to carry out these provisions, they will become liable to a penalty of forty shillings In case of their failure one of the other persons above named must give personal information and sign the register in their stead It is important that every death should be registered and a certificate of registry be obtained from the Registrar before the funeral This certificate should be delivered to the clergyman or other person who performs the funeral or religious service Failure to obtain this certificate need not however, delay the funeral, as it is the duty of the clergyman, if the certificate is not produced to him at the burial, to notify the Registrar thereof within seven days If at the end of fourteen days one of the persons above mentioned has not attended to the registration, the Registrar may by written application require any one of them to come to him and do so at a stated time and place Any person failing to attend on this application will be liable to a penalty of forty shillings Whenever the deceased has been attended during his last illness by a registered medical practitioner a certificate of the cause of death signed by him must be delivered to the Registrar Any person receiving such a certificate from the practitioner and not so delivering it will incur a penalty of forty shillings The registration of a death is free of charge when it takes place within the above mentioned periods unless on request it is effected at an informant's house or at the house where the death happened when a fee of one shilling will be payable to the Registrar After twelve months a death can be registered only on the Registrar General's express authority and on payment of fees amounting to ten shillings

In Scotland, the rules of registration are similar, but (1) the death must be registered within 8 days (2) the medical man concerned must give a certificate of death to the Registrar in terms of the Registration of Births etc (Scotland) Act 1854 within 7 days (3) the informant of a death receives from the Registrar a certificate that the death has been registered This is given to the undertaker who delivers it to the keeper of the cemetery Failure to comply is under penalty in all cases

CORONERS' INQUESTS.—Sudden deaths are supposed by the law to demand inquiry, and Coroners' inquests are held in cases of violent and unnatural deaths such as the case of a person slain or drowned, or dying suddenly, and of any person dying in prison. Coroners do not obtrude into the houses of persons for the purpose of holding inquests, but are sent for by the peace officers, to whom it is the duty of those in whose houses violent or unnatural deaths occur to make immediate communication, whilst the body remains in the same situation as when the death occurred Inquests are not to be held on Sunday When the Coroner receives due notice of a violent death, casualty, or misadventure, he issues his warrant or precept to summon a jury to appear at a particular time and place for the purpose of instituting the inquiry, when, how, and by what means the deceased came by his death The jury must consist of at least twelve lawful and honest men, "probi et legales homines," and the number is immaterial provided twelve agree The jury is usually summoned from the householders residing in the neighbourhood in which the death took place Any person summoned as a witness is bound to attend, or renders himself liable to be fined in any sum not exceeding 40*s*, the fine for defaulting jurymen being £5.

In Scotland there is no Coroner In ordinary cases of sudden death a private inquiry is held by the Procurator Fiscal (a Crown official who is the Public Prosecutor in criminal cases in every County, see p 530) The result of such inquiry is reported to the Lord Advocate In the case of a death occuring in the course of an industrial employment, and in every case in which the Lord Advocate may so order, a public enquiry is held before the Sheriff and a jury

DIVORCE.

Preliminary.—Matrimonial suits may be conveniently divided into three classes, viz (1) those in which a declaration against marriage is sought, (2) those in which the marriage is sought to be upheld, and (3) those in which, the marriage being admitted, partial or complete divorce is sought

(1) Nullity of Marriage.—Marriage is void ab initio if the parties were in the prohibited degrees of affinity, if it was bigamous, if there was no consent, or if one of the parties was insane, but it is only voidable if one of the parties was under the age of consent (14 in the case of males and 12 in the case of females) Inability to consummate a marriage may also be a ground for avoiding it In such a case a decree of nullity may be obtained

(2) Restitution of Conjugal Rights.—This is a form of relief generally sought by a spouse who has been deserted Disobedience to a decree of restitution of conjugal rights, although two years have not elapsed, at once constitutes desertion (as to the significance of which see paragraph (6) infra) and such desertion, if coupled with the husband's adultery, whether committed before or after the decree of restitution, is a ground for granting to the wife a decree of dissolution of marriage

(3) Judicial Separation and Divorce.—The third class of suit mentioned in paragraph (1) supra includes the suit for judicial separation (which does not dissolve a marriage), and the suit for divorce proper (which, if successful, dissolves the marriage contract altogether and leaves the parties at liberty to marry again) Either spouse may petition for judicial separation on the ground of adultery, or cruelty, or of desertion without cause for two years or upwards In such a petition a husband may claim damages from the co-respondent A decree of judicial separation is often made the ground of a petition for divorce. A petitioner who has committed adultery which has not been condoned cannot obtain a judicial separation or a decree of restitution of conjugal rights unless there has been condonation. The fact that a petitioner has been guilty of cruelty or desertion does not, however, debar him from a decree of judicial separation on the ground of adultery unless his conduct has conduced to the adultery.

Divorce.—Where partial or complete divorce is sought, relief can only be obtained upon proof of certain offences which fall under two heads, namely (1) those which are offences under ecclesiastical law, e.g., cruelty, adultery, and unnatural offences; (2) those which are offences by statute, e.g., incestuous adultery, bigamy with adultery, rape, and desertion.

If a husband seeks divorce, it is sufficient for him to prove the wife's adultery, in which case he may obtain damages from the adulterer. If a wife seeks divorce it is not sufficient that she prove mere adultery. It must be coupled with desertion or cruelty. But a wife can obtain divorce if the husband has been guilty merely of incestuous adultery, or bigamy with adultery, or of rape or certain other criminal offences. "Cruelty" is conduct of such a character as to have caused damage to life, limb, or health (bodily or mental), or as to give rise to a reasonable apprehension of such danger. It is cruelty to wilfully and recklessly communicate a venereal disease; and a course of conduct calculated to break the spirit of the sufferer (generally the wife), continued until health breaks down or is likely to break down under the strain, is also a ground for relief. To prove a charge of adultery the evidence of the wife or husband must be corroborated either by a witness or at least by strong surrounding circumstances, especially where a respondent has made admissions. Even if the co-respondent has confessed, the Court will have to be satisfied that there is no ground for suspicion.

If a wife gives birth to a child of which her husband could not possibly be the father, that is sufficient proof of adultery.

It is desertion in the legal sense if one party to a marriage, without the consent or against the will of the other, wilfully without cause or reasonable excuse makes the other live apart for two years or more. Formerly the only remedy for desertion was a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights; but now desertion without cause may enable the deserted spouse to obtain a degree of judicial separation. If coupled with adultery, it enables a wife to obtain a divorce.

When the decree will be refused.—A decree must be refused, even if the suit is undefended, if the allegations in the petition for divorce are not proved. There is no such thing in the Divorce Court as judgment by default. Other absolute bars to relief are (i) connivance at the adultery of the respondent; (ii) collusion, as where the initiation of the suit is procured by pact or bargain (but this does not prevent a suit being brought free from collusion); condonation, i.e. complete forgiveness restores the status quo. There are also discretionary bars, as, e.g. where the petitioner has been guilty of unreasonable delay, or has been guilty of such wilful neglect or misconduct as has conduced to the adultery.

Intervention by King's Proctor.—At any time during the progress of a suit for dissolution or nullity of marriage, and before the decree nisi is made absolute, the King's Proctor may intervene to show cause against making a decree absolute.

Decree Absolute.—Every decree of dissolution or nullity is in the first instance a decree nisi, and is not made absolute until the expiration of six calendar months. The marriage subsists until the decree is made absolute. After that date either spouse may marry again; but a man may not marry the sister of his divorced wife whilst the divorced wife is alive. A divorced wife may call herself by her late husband's name. Persons who have been divorced may re-marry.

Children.—When a suit has been commenced, the children should not be removed from the person in whose custody they are de facto. Until a suit for judicial separation, nullity, or dissolution of marriage has been dismissed, the Court may make orders for the custody, maintenance, and education of children. Either spouse may make applications for access to the children.

Alimony.—A wife may in any cause file a petition for alimony (i.e., means of support) pending suit, provided prima facie evidence of the marriage is adduced. The right to alimony continues until there is a decision against the wife in the court of first instance. The amount may be agreed between the parties, otherwise one-fifth of the joint incomes is generally allowed. An order for permanent alimony may be obtained by a wife who has obtained a final decree of judicial separation.

Protection Orders.—A deserted wife may apply to a court of petty sessions or to the Divorce Division for an order to protect any money which has come to her after such desertion against her husband and his creditors. Disobedience to the order renders a party retaining the property liable to restore it and to pay twice the value thereof.

Costs.—Where a suit is about to be set down for hearing, the wife, if she has not sufficient separate estate, may obtain payment from her husband of a sum sufficient to cover her costs to date; and where a decree has been obtained against her for judicial separation on the ground of adultery, she may defend herself at his expense should he afterwards bring a suit for dissolution of marriage. If a suit be decided against a wife who has separate estate, she may be condemned in costs. A co-respondent may be ordered to pay the whole or any part of the costs of the proceedings.

SEPARATION BY AGREEMENT.

Husband and wife may agree, with or without consideration, to separate and live apart, but the agreement, to be valid, must be followed by an immediate separation. Although usually made by deed, a mere oral agreement is binding. If made, however, with a view to facilitating divorce proceedings it is void. A wife is not bound by a separation agreement if she was forced to make it by threats of violence. A clause which binds the husband to give up the custody of the children will be enforced, unless the Court is of opinion that it is not for their benefit. The agreement usually contains mutual covenants not to sue for the restitution of conjugal rights—a covenant by the husband not to molest the wife, and a covenant by the wife or her trustee to indemnify the husband against debts contracted by her during the separation. The remedy for a breach of the agreement is specific performance.

SUMMARY JURISDICTION.

When a husband has been guilty of assault or has deserted his wife, or has been guilty of persistent cruelty, or of wilful neglect to maintain her or her infant children, and by such cruelty or neglect has caused her to leave him, or where he is an habitual drunkard, the wife may obtain relief from a Court of Summary Jurisdiction. Relief may also be obtained by a husband whose wife is an habitual drunkard. The Court may declare that the applicant is no longer bound to cohabit with the other spouse. Where a wife is the applicant, the legal custody of children under sixteen may be given to her, and the husband may be ordered to pay a weekly sum not exceeding £2. Where the husband applies, the custody of all the children of the marriage may be given to him, and the wife may be committed to an inebriates home. If the wife has been guilty of adultery, no order will be made on her application unless there was condonation; and if, having obtained an order, she commits adultery, the order may be discharged. An order may be altered, varied or discharged at any time on cause being shown. All applications for relief must be made within six months of the ground of complaint.

DIVORCE STATISTICS.

DIVORCE FOR THE POOR.

England and Wales.—A special department in the High Court of Justice for the assistance of poor persons in litigation, including divorce, was established in 1914. The official name of the department is "London Prescribed Officers (Poor Persons)."

Under the procedure of this department, Solicitor and Counsel are provided for a litigant who is not possessed of the means to employ legal assistance.

Although no fees are payable for the help given by the department, the applicants must find the solicitor's out-of-pocket expenses, and those incidental to witnesses—a point which has been criticised by the adherents of divorce law reform. However, if witnesses are not brought from a long distance, the whole proceedings need not cost more than £10, and can in some cases be completed for less, compared with from £30 to £60 necessitated by the normal procedure. Before a case is taken up, the applicant has to satisfy the department that he or she is really poor—not possessed of more than £50, exclusive of wearing apparel and trade tools. If this condition is fulfilled, and if he has reasonable grounds for bringing or defending a suit in the Divorce Court, he may apply to the Court for leave to do so. An application for leave is submitted to and is reported on by counsel and solicitor, who give their services voluntarily. If the report is favourable the Court may give the necessary leave, and thereupon another solicitor and counsel are assigned to the poor person to act for him. Such a litigant is not liable for Court fees, nor (generally) is he liable to pay costs to any other party. Counsel acting for him must charge him no fee, while the solicitor assigned to him generally gets nothing but his out-of-pocket expenses. Where, however, property of value is recovered for such litigant, the solicitor may (under the rules) get his usual costs. Numbers of persons take advantage of this procedure in forma pauperis. This explains the very large number of cases in the Divorce Court.

Scotland.—In every town there are Solicitors for the Poor, and in the Court of Session there are Counsel for the Poor, all of whom act gratuitously. Any class of litigation may be undertaken for poor persons, but the operation of the "Poor's Roll" is chiefly important in matrimonial and bastardy cases. Legal services are rendered free of charge, and no Court dues are payable. In cases of divorce application must be made to the Court of Session. In cases of separation simply, application may be made to the Sheriff Court. The means that preclude a person from the benefit of the Poor's Roll are not fixed, and each application depends on its own circumstances. The Poor's Roll was established in 1424.

ILLEGITIMACY.

England and Wales.—A man may be summoned to petty sessions on the application of the mother of a bastard child, or by the Guardians of the Poor where the child becomes chargeable to the Union or Parish; and the Justices, on his being proved to be the father of the child, may make an order requiring him to pay for its maintenance and education a sum not exceeding 5s. a week. By the Act which came into force on Jan. 1, 1919, the putative father may be ordered to pay 10s. a week, instead of 5s as hitherto The mother has the custody of her bastard children No person is required as father of an illegitimate child to give information concerning the birth of such child, and the registrar is forbidden to enter in the register the name of any person as father of the child unless at the joint request of the mother and father Such person is in that case required to sign the register, together with the mother A domestic servant found to be enceinte may be peremptorily dismissed without notice, but any attempt to examine without her consent a servant supposed to be enceinte renders the employer liable to an action

Scotland —The mother of an illegitimate child may obtain a decree of affiliation and aliment against the father The process may be raised either in the Court of Session or the Sheriff Court, but usually is in the Sheriff Court The father pays half of the inlying expenses, the amount usually decreed being £2 2s The rate of aliment varies, but in 1919 it was settled by a decision of the Court of Session that £11 14s per annum was a proper amount The mother has the custody of the child until the age of 7 if a male and 10 if a female

An illegitimate child is legitimated by the subsequent marriage of its parents provided there was no impediment to the marriage of the parents at the time of the conception of the child Such legitimation is recognised by International Law so far as the laws of particular countries allow it It is valid in England except that such a child cannot succeed to real estate in England on intestacy After the marriage of the parents such a child may be registered as legitimate by warrant of the Sheriff

INFECTIOUS DISEASES

PRECAUTIONS NECESSARY TO BE OBSERVED — By the Public Health Act, 1875 (as amended by the Public Health Act, 1907), it is provided that any person who—(1) While suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder wilfully exposes himself without proper precautions against spreading the said disorder in any street public place, shop, inn, or public conveyance or enters any public conveyance without previously notifying to the owner, conductor or driver thereof that he is so suffering, or, (2) Being in charge of any person so suffering, so exposes such sufferer, or causes or permits such sufferer to be so exposed, or, (3) Gives, lends, sells, transmits, or exposes, without previous disinfection, any bedding, clothing, rags, or other things which have been exposed to infection from any such disorder, shall be liable to a penalty of £5 A person suffering from such disorder who enters a public conveyance is liable to a fine of 40s, and if he so enters without notifying to the owner or driver that he is so suffering, shall be ordered by the Court to pay the owner and driver the amount of any loss and expense they may incur in respect of the disinfection of the conveyance Every owner or driver of a public conveyance must provide for the disinfection of such conveyance after it has conveyed any person suffering from dangerous infection, but he cannot be required to convey any person so suffering until he has been paid a sum sufficient to cover any loss or expense incurred in disinfecting the conveyance. No person may knowingly let for hire any house, &c., in which any person has been suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder without having the same disinfected to the satisfaction of a medical practitioner, as testified by a certificate signed by him—penalty not exceeding £20, or imprisonment with or without hard labour, not exceeding one month By the Public Health Act, 1907, the Local Government Board (i e the Ministry of Health, since the passage of the Ministry of Health Act, 1919 has power to declare that this Act shall be in force in any specified district Under this Act, a person suffering from an infectious disease must not engage in any trade unless he can do so without spreading the disease, nor may he take any book from a public or circulating library, or allow any such book to be returned after it has been exposed to infection Clothes exposed to infection must not be sent to a public laundry unless they have been disinfected A child who has been suffering from an infectious disease must not attend school without a medical certificate Dairymen must notify infectious diseases existing among their servants and the owner or driver of a public vehicle which has conveyed an infectious person must notify the same to the district medical officer No wake may be held over the body of a person who died of an infectious disease Where the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890 is in force, where any suitable hospital is provided, any person who is suffering from any dangerous infectious disorder, and is without proper lodging or accommodation, or is lodged in a room occupied by more than one family, or cannot be effectually isolated may, on a certificate signed by a medical practitioner, and with the consent of the hospital, be removed by order of any justice to such hospital Similar provisions apply to the Metropolis The occupier of a house in which there has been infectious disease within six weeks before he ceases to occupy it, must have the premises disinfected and inform the owner of the disease Where it appears to any District Council that any house is in such a condition that the health of any person is affected or endangered thereby, or that whitewashing, &c, would tend to prevent or check infectious disease they may give notice in writing to the owner or occupier of such house to whitewash, &c, the same

NOTIFICATION OF INFECTIOUS DISEASES

By the Infectious Disease (Notification) Extension Act, 1899, the provisions of the Infectious Disease (Notification) Act of 1889 were extended to the whole of England and Wales on the January 1, 1899 Every case of infectious disease, as defined by the Act, is to be notified to the Medical Officer of Health of the district in which it occurs The notice may be by letter or even verbal, and must be given by the head of the family, or by the nearest relatives present in the building or in attendance on the patient, or any other person in attendance, or by the occupier of the building In addition to this, the medical man in attendance is required to send a certificate to the Medical Officer of Health Failure to send the notice or certificate renders the defaulter liable to 40s fine No payment is made for the notices required to be given by persons in the house, but the medical man gets 2s 6d for every case in his private practice and 1s for every case in a public institution of which he is officer croup, erysipelas, scarlatina or scarlet fever, and the following fevers: typhus, typhoid, enteric, relapsing, continued, or puerperal. Plague must also be notified, in consequence of an Order issued in 1900. The local authority may order that the Act shall apply to any infectious disease other than those just mentioned, but such an order must be approved by the Local Government Board. In some districts the following have been declared infectious: measles, rotheln or German measles, whooping cough, chickenpox, mumps, and yellow fever. In the case of London the provisions of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, are similar to those now extended to the rest of the country.

MARRIAGES.

BY BANNS OR LICENCE.

BANNS OF MARRIAGE.—"Banns" formerly applied to any public kind of proclamation, and now refer only to marriages, so that the word signifies the public announcement in the parish church, the object being to ensure notoriety, and exclude clandestine marriages. The Marriage Act, 26 Geo. II. c. 33, prescribes audible publication according to the rubric, on three Sundays preceding the ceremony, after the Second Lesson. The law is now chiefly contained in the Marriage Act, 4 Geo. IV. c. 76, which repealed most of the laws then in force (see also 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 85, and 1 Vict. c. 22). Where the parties reside in different parishes, the banns must be published in both, the minister giving his certificate of the same to be handed to the minister of the parish where the marriage takes place. The law provides specially for the case where one of the parties resides in Scotland, the publication being then in the parish church. In like manner in Scotland the publication takes place in the parish church, in whatever church the parties are married. It may be noted that, by Scottish law only, omission to publish the banns does not invalidate the marriage, because it would still stand as an irregular marriage carried out by consent before witnesses (see sub-tit., "Marriages in Scotland," post). The names by which the parties are known are sufficient for publication of banns, so that a variance from the strict baptismal name is not important. But where wrong names are designedly given, for the purpose of concealment or otherwise, the case is different, and the marriage may be null and void (Midgeley v. Wood, 4 Sw. & Tr. 267). Where a wrong and fraudulent name is given by one party only, and the other party is innocent, the validity of the marriage is not affected.

The Bishop may license a Chapel of Ease for the celebration of marriages; but where a district has been assigned to a chapel, and it becomes a vicarage, or "ecclesiastical parish," the option ceases, and the banns must be proclaimed and marriage celebrated therein, and not in the "mother church" or that of the civil parish.

If three months be permitted to elapse, the banns become useless, and the parties must either obtain a licence, or submit to the republication of banns. The minister ought to satisfy himself that the parties are of full age, or that the consent of parents is obtained, and it is usually on the score of insufficiency of age that banns are "forbidden." By the Act 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 85, a marriage may be performed in church on the superintendent registrar's certificate without banns, provided that the incumbent's consent is obtained. One of the parties must be resident within the Ecclesiastical parish of the church in which the marriage is to take place.

Marriage licences are of two kinds—(1) the Common or Ordinary Licence granted by the Archbishops and Bishops, through their Surrogates, for marriage in any church or chapel duly licensed for marriages; (2) the Special Licence granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury for marriage at any time or in any place on good reason being shown (see p. 353). The Act of 1823 is severe on the clergy, making it a felony for any clergyman to marry the parties in the absence of banns or licence; and every Registrar or other person who knowingly unduly solemnizes a marriage is also guilty of felony. By a subsequent alteration in the law, the hours for marriage were extended, and they are now from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The minister should be careful that there are two or more witnesses present, and that two witnesses attest the entries in the register books, which are kept in duplicate.

All civil jurisdiction over marriage was taken away from the Ecclesiastical Courts by the Divorce Act of 1857. An incumbent may, under Section 57 of this Act, refuse to marry a divorced person whose marriage has been dissolved for his or her adultery, but must allow another clergyman of the diocese to perform the service.

Marriage with a deceased wife's sister—including a sister of half blood—was legalised in 1907. No clergyman, however, can be compelled to solemnize such a marriage, but he can allow his church to be used for the purpose by another minister.

A marriage certificate is nothing more than a copy of the entry in the church register; and the customary fee is 2*s.* 6*d.*, and a stamp duty of 1*d.* Searches in the register-books may be made on payment of small fees, viz., 1*s.* for a single year, and 6*d.* additional for every other year. There are small fees, regulated by custom, on the certificate given of banns in one parish for marriage in another. Marriage fees are not uniform, and if excessive there is power with the Diocesan Chancellor to moderate them. With those who are in a position to afford it, it is usual to pay a guinea to the clergyman, and 5*s.* to the clerk; and the usual fees are paid although a stranger-clergyman be invited to perform the service.

MARRIAGE LICENCES.

MARRIAGE LICENCES can be obtained in London by application at the Faculty Office, at the Vicar-General's Office, and at the Bishop of London's Registry, all within the old area known as Doctors' Commons, by one of the parties about to be married. In the country they may be obtained at the offices of the Bishops' Registrars, but licences obtained at the Bishop's Diocesan Registry only enable the parties to be married in the diocese in which they are issued; those procured at the Faculty Office, 23 Knightrider Street, Doctors' Commons, E.C., are available for London and all England and Wales; those procured at the Vicar-General's Office, 3 Creed Lane, Ludgate Hill, E.C. (hours in both offices 10 to 4; Saturdays 10 to 1), are available for London and all England and Wales, except the Province of York. No instructions, either verbal or in writing, can be received, except from one of the parties. Affidavits are prepared from the personal instructions of one of the parties about to be married, and the licence is delivered to the party upon payment of fees amounting to thirty shillings, in addition to the cost of stamp, 10*s.* 6*d.* No previous notice is required and the licence is available as soon as it is issued. The cost of licences through a clerical surrogate in the country varies, according to the diocese, from £1 15*s.* to £2 12*s.* 6*d.* By the 4th George IV. c. 76, it is enacted, in order to avoid fraud and collusion in obtaining licences for marriage, that before any such licence be granted one of the parties shall make a declaration, on oath, that there is no legal impediment to the intended marriage; and also that one of such parties hath had his or her usual place of abode for the space of fifteen days immediately preceding the issuing of the licence within the boundary of the parish church, or the district parish in the church of which the marriage is to be solemnized.

It may be added that in the country there may generally be found a parochial clergyman who is also a surrogate, before whom the above-mentioned affidavit may be taken, and whose office it is to procure the licence from the Bishop's registry, the surrogate delivering the same personally to the applicant.

SPECIAL MARRIAGE LICENCES.

SPECIAL LICENCES are granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury, under special circumstances, for marriage at any place with or without previous residence in the district, or at any time, &c.; but the reasons assigned must meet with his Grace's approval. Application must be made to The Faculty Office, 23 Knightrider Street, Doctors' Commons, E.C. 1 (tel., 6834 Central). Fees for licence stamp, &c., £25.

BEFORE A REGISTRAR AND IN NON-CONFORMIST BUILDINGS.

Marriages can take place in a District Register Office or in a Nonconformist building registered for marriages, (1) by Certificate, (2) by Licence. Notice of such marriages must be given personally to the Superintendent Registrar, a Registrar of Births and Deaths, a Registrar of Marriages, or the deputy of such officer. A marriage at a register office takes place in the presence of the Registrar of Marriages and the Superintendent Registrar; a marriage at a registered building takes place in the presence of the Registrar of Marriages, unless it is had under the provisions of the Marriage Act, 1898, respecting which see below. In each case the presence of at least two witnesses is necessary.

NOTICE OF MARRIAGE BY CERTIFICATE.

If both parties reside in the same registration district, they must both have resided there for seven days before the notice can be given. It may then be given by either party.

If the parties reside in different registration districts, notice must be given by each to a registration officer in the district in which he or she resides, and the preliminary residential qualification of seven days must be fulfilled by each before the notice can be given.

NOTICE OF MARRIAGE BY LICENCE.

One notice only is necessary, whether the parties live in the same or in different registration districts, and either party may give the notice.

If both live in the same district, one of them must have lived there for fifteen days before the notice can be given.

If they live in different districts, and both have fulfilled the necessary residential qualification, notice may be given in either district. If one only has fulfilled the qualification, the notice must be given in the district in which the residence has been fulfilled, and the other party must be resident in England or Wales when the notice is given.

The notice contains particulars as to names, ages, residence, length of residence, and the building in which the marriage is to take place. It also contains a declaration that there is no legal impediment to the marriage, and, in the case of minors, that the consent of the person whose consent to the marriage is required by law, has been duly given. A person making a false declaration renders himself or herself liable to prosecution for perjury.

ISSUE OF CERTIFICATE (WITHOUT LICENCE) FOR MARRIAGE.

After the lapse of twenty-one clear days from the date of the entry of the notice in the notice-book, the Superintendent Registrar may, provided no impediment is shown, issue his certificate for the marriage, which can then take place at any time within three calendar months from the date of the entry of the notice.

ISSUE OF CERTIFICATE AND LICENCE FOR MARRIAGE.

After the lapse of one week-day (not Christmas Day or Good Friday) from the date of entry of the notice, the Superintendent Registrar may, provided no impediment is shown, issue his certificate and licence for the marriage, which can then take place on any day within three calendar months from the date of entry of the notice.

DOCUMENTS TO BE PRODUCED AT THE MARRIAGE.

(1) Marriage by Certificate:—
- a. If both parties live in the same district:—The certificate of the Superintendent Registrar of that district.
- b. If they live in different districts:—A certificate from the Superintendent Registrar of each district.

(2) Marriage by Licence:—The certificate and licence of the Superintendent Registrar of the district in which the notice is given.

PLACE OF MARRIAGE.

The marriage must generally take place at a building within the district of residence of one of the parties, but there are exceptions, as follows:—

a. Section 14 of 19 & 20 Vict. cap. 119, provides that, if the usual place of worship of either of the parties is outside the district of his or her residence, the marriage may take place in such usual place of worship, provided that it is not more than two miles distant from the boundary of the district in which the notice is given.

b. The Act 3 and 4 Vict. cap. 72, provides that, if there is not within the district of residence of either party a registered building within which marriages are solemnized according to the rites and ceremonies of the religious denomination to which the parties belong, the marriage may take place in a registered building of the required denomination in the nearest district.

A marriage which has been duly celebrated in a register office in Ireland may be proved by the certificate of such marriage (Guillet v. Guillet, 27 T.L.R. 426).

Marriage Ceremony.

The marriage must be solemnized between the hours of 8 a.m. and 3 p.m, with open doors. Each of the parties must declare as follows — "I do solemnly declare that I know not of any lawful impediment why I, A. B., may not be joined in matrimony to C. D."; and each of the parties must say to the other, "I call upon these persons here present to witness that I, A B, do take thee, C D., to be my lawful wedded wife [or husband]." A wedding-ring may be, and is generally, used at a marriage at a register office

Marriage Act, 1898.

The presence of a Registrar of Marriages is not necessary at marriages at Nonconformist registered buildings which have adopted the provisions of this Act. The Act (which does not apply to Scotland or Ireland, or to marriages according to the usages of the Jews or of the Society of Friends) provides for the appointment of an "authorised person" (a person, usually the minister or an official of the building certified by the trustees or governing body as having been duly authorised for the purpose) who must be present at and must register the marriage If the presence of a Registrar is required at a marriage at a building at which the provisions of the Act have been adopted, the fact must be stated when notice of the marriage is given, and the consent of the minister or trustees to the Registrar's attendance must be obtained

The parties must at some time during the ceremony make the following declarations —

"I do solemnly declare that I know not of any lawful impediment why I, A B, may not be joined in matrimony to C D"

Also each of the parties must say to the other.—

"I call upon these persons here present to witness that I, A B, do take thee, C D, to be my lawful wedded wife [or husband] ', or, in lieu thereof —

"I, A B, do take thee, C D, to be my wedded wife [or husband] "

Rules and Regulations relating to this Act were published in October, 1909. (See Statutory Rules and Orders, 1909, No 1332)

Naval Marriages Act, 1908

This Act, which came into force on January 1, 1909, was framed with the object of relieving sailors of the Royal Navy of the difficulties under which they laboured as regards fulfilling the necessary residential qualification for the purpose of marriage

It provides that any officer, seaman, or marine borne on the books of one of His Majesty's ships who wishes to marry may, if the marriage is to take place at a register office or a Nonconformist registered building, give notice to his commanding officer, who, after the lapse of twenty one clear days, can issue a certificate for the marriage The other party must give notice in the usual way to a registration officer in the district in which she resides.

If the marriage is to take place at a church of the Church of England, the chaplain or commanding officer must publish the banns on board the ship on three successive Sundays. he can then issue a certificate of publication of banns. The banns must also be published in the church in which the marriage is to take place.

No marriage by licence can take place under this Act

Miscellaneous Information Respecting Marriages

Parties should be married in the name in which they are generally known.

A marriage may take place at a registered building before a Registrar without religious ceremony if the consent of the trustees is obtained.

If parties who have been married at a register office desire to go through a religious ceremony at a church, they may do so on production to the incumbent of a certificate of the register office marriage, but this ceremony is not recorded as a marriage in the register books.

A divorced person desiring to marry again in a register office or registered building must give notice to the Superintendent Registrar, to whom a copy of the divorce decree must be produced.

In Wales, and in places where the Welsh tongue is used, the declaration and contracting words may be said in Welsh as provided by Section 23 of the Marriages and Registration Act, 1837.

If both parties are Jews, they must give notice to a registration officer in the usual way, and may marry according to their usages in a synagogue or private dwelling house at any hour, the marriage must be registered by the secretary of the synagogue of which the man is a member.

If both parties are members of the Society of Friends (Quakers), or if, not being in membership, they have been authorised by the Society of Friends to solemnize their marriage in accordance with its usages, they must give notice to a registration officer, and may be married in a Friends' meeting-house; the marriage must be registered by the registering officer of the Society appointed to act for the district in which the meeting-house is situated. The presence of a Registrar of Marriages is not necessary at such marriages of Jews or members of the Society of Friends.

Marriage with a deceased wife's sister was rendered legal by the Deceased Wife's Sister Act, 1907. The marriage of a woman with her deceased husband's brother is still illegal, and the Act forbids the marriage of a man with the sister of his divorced wife during the wife's lifetime.

MARRIAGE IN ENGLAND OR WALES WHEN ONE PARTY LIVES IN SCOTLAND OR IRELAND.

Notice for a marriage by a Superintendent 's certificate in a register office or ding may be given in the usual arty resident in England. As and, the party there, after a of fifteen days, should apply to the session clerk to publish banns; as regards Ireland, the party there, after a residence of seven days, must give notice to the District Registrar of Marriages. Notice cannot be given for such marriages to take place by the licence of the Superintendent Registrar.

Marriage of such parties may take place in a church of the Church of England after the publication of banns, or by Ecclesiastical licence.

MARRIAGES OF BRITISH SUBJECTS ABROAD.

Act passed June 27, 1892; came into force Jan. 1, 1893. Order in Council dated Nov. 22, 1913, whereby previous Orders are repealed and regulations for marriages under the Act are laid British subjects may contract a valid marriage in a foreign country provided they conform to the provisions of the Foreign Marriages Act, 1892. One of the parties to the marriage only need be a British subject.

Where a marriage according to the local law of a foreign country is valid by English law, then, before the marriage is solemnized in that country under the Act, the marriage officer as defined by the Act must be satisfied—

(a) That both the parties are British subjects; or,

(b) If only one of the parties is a British subject, that the other is not a subject or citizen of the country; or,

(c) If only one of the parties is a British subject and the other a subject or citizen of the country, that sufficient facilities do not exist for the solemnization of the marriage in the foreign country in accordance with the law of that country; or,

(d) If the man is a British subject and the woman a subject or citizen of the country, that no objection will be taken by the authorities of the country to the solemnization of the marriage under the Act.

In the case of any marriage under the Act, where the woman is a British subject and the man a foreigner, the marriage officer must be satisfied—

(a) That the marriage will be recognized by the law of the country to which the foreigner belongs; or,

(b) That some other marriage ceremony in addition to that under this Act has taken place, or is about to take place, between the parties, and that such other ceremony is recognized by the law of the country to which the foreigner belongs; or,

(c) That the leave of the Secretary of State has been obtained.

The marriage must be solemnized by or before a marriage officer as defined by the above-named Act.

It is necessary for one of the parties to the intending marriage to sign a notice stating the name, surname, profession, condition, and residence of each of the parties, and whether each of the parties is or is not a minor, and to give the notice to the marriage officer within whose district both of the parties have had their residence not less than one week then next preceding, and the notice must state that they have so resided.

If the parties reside in different districts, such notice must be given to the marriage officer of the district before whom the intended marriage is to be solemnized, by the party who has resided for a period of not less than one week within the district of such marriage officer.

If one of the parties resides (a) in the United Kingdom, or (b) in a Colony or India (a) notice must be given in like manner as if the party so resident were about to be married in that part of the United Kingdom in which he or she resides, and in England or Ireland must be given to the superintendent registrar or registrars, and in Scotland must be given by proclamation of banns, and (b) such notice must be given by the party dwelling in such Colony or in India as may be provided by any law of that Colony or of the Governor-General of India in Council, or in like manner as if the party were about to be married in that place.

If the non-resident party has dwelt in the district of a marriage officer in a foreign country notice must be given by that party in like manner as if the marriage were to be solemnized by or before such marriage officer, or if the place in a foreign country at which the non-resident party has dwelt is not within the district of a marriage officer the notice may be given to any person authorised by the Secretary of State to receive such notices. Where neither party has resided for a period of not less than one week within the district of the marriage officer before whom the intended marriage is to be solemnized, and (a) the marriage cannot conveniently be solemnized at the place where either of the parties has had his or her usual place of abode, or (b) the permission of the Secretary of State has been obtained, notice must be given by each of the parties in the place where he or she has had his or her usual place of abode for a period of not less than one week immediately preceding the giving of such notice in the prescribed manner, and a certificate of the giving of such notice obtained.

If the Secretary of State is satisfied that for some good reason the party has not been able to give the required notice and that the marriage is not clandestine and that adequate notice has been given he may permit the marriage to be solemnized.

Before the marriage is solemnized each of the parties must make on oath

(a) That he or she believes that there is no impediment

(b) that both the parties have had their usual place of residence in the district of the consular marriage officer for three weeks immediately preceding, or if they have not both resided there during three weeks then that one of them has so resided, and stating the place where the party who has not so resided has within three months immediately preceding had for three consecutive weeks his or her usual place of abode, and the notice that has been given in that place, or, if neither party has resided there, stating the place or places where each party has within three months immediately preceding had for three weeks his or her usual place of abode, and the notices that have been given in those places

After the expiration of 14 days after the notice of an intended marriage has been entered then if no lawful impediment to the marriage is shown and the marriage has not been forbidden in manner provided by the Act, the marriage may be solemnized A consular officer holding a warrant for a district can only solemnize a marriage at his own official house Parties residing within a consular district who may wish to be married under the Act must go to the consular officer provided with a warrant for that district two or more witnesses are required to be present

The following fees for marriages under the Foreign Marriage Act are leviable under the Consular Fees Order in Council of August 18 1892 and are payable to His Majesty's Government

For receiving notice of an intended marriage	0	10	0
For receiving notice of a caveat	1	0	0
For every marriage solemnized by or in the presence of a Marriage Officer and registered by him	0	10	0
For certificate by a Marriage Officer of notice having been given and posted up in case of one of the parties residing outside the consular district in which the marriage is to take place	0	5	0
For attendance by consular officer at a marriage solemnized in accordance with the local law and for registration of the same	1	0	0

Marriages may be solemnized 8 a m to 3 p m

No religious ceremony is required but any form according to the creed of the contracting parties may be used The presence of the duly authorised Marriage Officer is however necessary to render the marriage valid If the ceremonial be that of the Church of England it can only be performed by a clergyman of that Church

Marriages solemnized under the Foreign Marriage Acts are legal by English law when both parties are British subjects and also when only one of them is a British subject but such marriages are not necessarily valid out of His Majesty's dominions In cases where one of the parties is a subject of the country where the marriage is proposed to take place or of a third country the party in question must previously comply with the requirements of the marriage law of the country to which he or she belongs so far as it may be possible to do so in order to render such marriage also valid by the law of that country

An Englishwoman married to a foreigner follows the nationality of her husband

In Germany and Switzerland marriages by any foreign consular officer are in the absence of any treaty stipulations strictly prohibited

A marriage which would not be valid in England would be equally invalid if solemnized in an embassy legation or consulate abroad For instance, marriages within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity or affinity would not be valid

A marriage between Christians in India may be proved in England by an India Office certificate (Braid v Braid 1909, 25 T L R 646)

Marriages may also be solemnized under the "Foreign Marriages Act, 1892," before the commanding officer of any of His Majesty's ships on a foreign station provided he be of such rank and of such vessel as is for the time being authorised for that purpose by Admiralty instructions

MARRIAGES ABROAD WITH FOREIGNERS ACCORDING TO FOREIGN LAW.

ACT OF 1906.—Under the Marriage with Foreigners Act, 1906, any British subject desiring to be married in a foreign country to a foreigner according to the law of the country may, after giving notice of the marriage, obtain a certificate from the registrar that there is no legal impediment to the marriage In order to obtain the certificate the rules set out in the schedule to the Act must be complied with. Any persons may enter an objection to a certificate, the validity of which will be decided by the Registrar General

A marriage by repute which is valid by the law of the domicile in a foreign country will be recognised as valid by the English courts (re Green Noyes v Putkin, 1909 25 T L R 222)

MARRIAGES IN SCOTLAND

According to the law of Scotland marriage is a contract which is completed by the mutual consent of parties No formalities are required and no consent of parents or guardians is necessary It can be contracted by a male over 14 years of age and a female over 12. Marriages may be "regular" or "irregular"

A regular marriage is one which is celebrated by a Minister of religion after due notice by the publication of banns or publication by the Registrar Any Minister of any denomination (including a person officiating at a Quaker wedding) who performs the ceremony is reckoned to be a minister of religion It must be performed before two witnesses and one of the parties must have resided in Scotland for at least 15 days before the ceremony Public proclamation is made by (a) banns or (b) notice by the Registrar Banns must be proclaimed in the parish church of both parties In the case of one of the parties residing in England or Ireland a certificate of the proclamation of banns in the parish church of the residence of that party is accepted It is ordered that the proclamation of banns should be made three times, but by immemorial practice proclamation on one Sunday is sufficient The Clerk of the Kirk Session of the Parish takes in notices of banns and issues certificates of proclamation The fee for proclamation may not exceed 2*s* 6*d* A certificate of proclamation of banns is only valid for three months

Under the Marriage Notices (Scotland) Act 1878 a notice posted up in a conspicuous or accessible place on the board or outer wall of the Registrar's office is equivalent to the proclamation of banns Exhibition is made for seven consecutive days Objection may be made within other seven days. If no objections are lodged the Registrar issues a certificate fee, 2*s* 6*d* Such certificate of publication is only valid for three months Under the Naval Marriages Act 1908 banns may be published on board one of His Majesty's ships where an officer, seaman or Marine on the ship's books wishes to contract a marriage in Scotland A declaration under the Marriage Notices (Scotland) Act already referred to may also be filled up and the officer commanding the ship may grant a certificate

Irregular Marriages are survivals of modes of marriage which were general throughout Europe in mediæval times, Scotland having disregarded

the decrees of the Council of Trent invalidating irregular marriages, Scotland following the ancient Canon law These marriages may be contracted in three ways (1) by exchange of consent before two witnesses (called in legal language per verba de presenti); (2) by promise of marriage followed by intercourse on the faith of the promise (called marriage by promise, subsequente copula), the promise, however, can only be proved by the writing or the oath of the party when action is brought (3) by constant living together as husband and wife (called marriage by habit and repute), i e, the general repute of the neighbourhood supported by consistent conduct Marriage by the first mode is only valid if one of the parties has been resident in Scotland for 21 days before the contract is entered into. (This is the result of legislation and not part of the common law of Scotland) 'Gretna Green marriages were abolished in 1856 by the Act 19 and 20 Victoria, Chap 96 Marriages thus contracted may be registered if the parties appear before the Sheriff with their witnesses and petition for registration within three months. On the Sheriff granting warrant the Registrar registers the marriage for a fee of 5s 3d The other two forms of marriage before they are held to be valid must be declared by a decree in the Court of Session

Marriage with a foreigner may be solemnized regularly if one of the parties has a residential qualification and provided that if one party has resided in Scotland for 21 days and the minister agrees to dispense with the proclamation of banns in the case of the foreigner Marriage of a Scottish person with a foreigner, or marriage of two foreigners, may be contracted irregularly if one or other of the parties has resided in Scotland for 21 days

(1) The pawnbroker at the time of the pawning shall deliver to the pawner a special contract pawn ticket, signed by the pawnbroker

(2) The duplicate of the special contract pawn ticket shall be signed by the pawner

The pawnbroker may also charge —For ticket, profit per calendar month, for storage of the pledge, and payment to inspect account of sale, such sums and rates as may be agreed upon at the time of making the contract

After the first calendar month any time not exceeding fourteen days will be charged as half a month and any time exceeding fourteen days and not more than one month as one month

The charge for storage of the pledge will be per calendar month, or any part of a month in addition to the charges above mentioned

Pledges may be pawned under special contract for a period of not less than three months

In all other respects pledges under special contract are subjected to the same rules as to sale by auction inspection of account of sale payment of surplus produced by sale and loss of ticket, as are set forth above in the case of ordinary pledges for more than 10s

RECEIPTS

RECEIPTS should be kept for six years from the date of payment, after which period no action can be brought concerning the goods, &c., received

RENT RESTRICTION

AND OTHER MODIFICATIONS OF THE LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT

(1) Preliminary —The Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, very materially affects the relationship of landlord and tenant As regards dwelling houses, it is to remain in force until June 24, 1923, and as regards business premises, until June 24, 1921 It came into force on July 2, 1920 To remove certain prevalent misconceptions let it be stated at once that this Act does not prevent the sale of houses, or affect (i.) any house which was not let on August 3, 1914, and has not since that date been let, but as soon as such a house is let then the Act begins to apply to it; (ii.) any house anywhere which was let at £105 or more on August 3, 1914, (iii.) any house which was being erected on, or has been erected since, April 2, 1919 But note that (subject as afore said) it affects every house below a certain rental in the country Speaking generally, it overrides all agreements It would seem to be impossible for parties, even now, to contract out of the Act

(2) Meaning of "Dwelling House"—This means a house or part of a house let as a separate dwelling where the standard rent or rateable value does not exceed in London, £105, in Scotland, £90, elsewhere, £78, but it does not include a house bonâ fide let at a rent which includes board, attendance, or use of furniture Part of the house may be let for business purposes

(3) "Standard Rent —This means the rent on August 3, 1914, or if the house was then unlet, the rent at which last let before then, or if after that date, the rent at which it was first let

(4) Restriction on increase of rent —If rent has been increased since March 25, 1920, or is there after increased, then if the increase exceeds what is allowed by the Act, the excess cannot be recovered, in spite of an agreement to the contrary

(5) Permitted Increases —If a landlord since August 4, 1920, has improved or made structural alterations (not including decorations or repairs), he may add 6 per cent of the cost to the rent if the expense was incurred before July 2 1920, and 8 per cent if after that date. He may also add any increased rates, and (generally) 15 per cent of the net rent He may also, if responsible for the whole of the repairs, add 25 per cent to the rent, or if responsible only for part of the repairs, such amount as a county court judge shall think reasonable Provision is also made for preventing a landlord putting extra burdens on the tenant Before making any increase in rent four weeks' notice must be given to the tenant

(6) Restriction on Right to Possession —A landlord cannot obtain possession whether by notice, judgment or otherwise unless (a) the tenant is in arrear with his rent or has broken some covenant, or (b) the tenant or some one living with him has been guilty of nuisance or waste or (c) the tenant has given notice to quit as result of which the landlord has sold the premises or taken other steps which would be prejudiced if he did not have possession, or (d) the landlord wants possession for himself, and the court is satisfied that reasonable alternative accommodation suitable in all respects is available In all these cases (a) to (d) possession may be obtained, if the Court considers it reasonable to make an order to that effect Alternative accommodation need not, however, be provided if (i.) the tenant held the dwelling house as an employee of the landlord, or (ii.) the dwelling house is required by the landlord for the occupation of a person engaged in agricultural work or (iii.) the landlord gave up occupation to join the colours or (iv.) the landlord became landlord a considerable time ago, and greater hardship would be caused by refusing an order for possession than by granting it There are certain other cases in which possession may possibly be obtained—the rigour of the Act being to some extent mitigated for the benefit of discharged soldiers (see s 5(2))

(7) Furnished Houses.—If a furnished house is let at a rent which will yield to the landlord 25 per cent. in excess of the normal profit, such excess may be declared irrecoverable. "Normal profit" means the profit which might reasonably have been expected from a similar letting on August 3, 1914. To let any furnished dwelling-house or part of it at an excessive rent is made an offence punishable by fine on summary conviction.

(8) Business Premises. — The Act generally applies to business premises; but in the case of such premises, instead of the increase of 15 per cent. referred to in paragraph (5) supra 35 per cent. is to be allowed.

(9) Conditions of Statutory Tenancy. — The tenant, who is entitled to remain in possession by virtue of this Act, becomes a statutory tenant. As such he must observe and is entitled to the benefit of all the terms and conditions of the original contract of tenancy in so far as they are applicable. Thus, he can only give up possession on giving proper notice, or, if no notice was required, then not less than three months' notice.

(10) Prohibition of Premiums.—It is not illegal for a tenant to demand and receive from his landlord, nor is it illegal for a landlord to give his tenant, a premium for giving up possession of a house, but it is illegal for a tenant to ask or receive a premium from any other person.

(11) Procedure.—All claims, etc., arising under the Act should be dealt with in the County Court. If proceedings are taken in the High Court, the plaintiff can recover no costs.

(12) Power to convert a House into several Tenements.—By the Housing and Town Planning Act, 1919, s. 27, where, owing to changes in the character of a neighbourhood, a house cannot be let as a whole, but could be let in separate tenements, the local authority or any person interested may apply to the County Court for an order allowing such conversion, notwithstanding any restrictive covenant in any lease. The County Court may make an order upon such terms as shall appear to be just.

(13) Restriction on Demolition of Houses.—By the Housing (Additional Powers) Act, 1919, s. 6, no person may without the written consent of the local authority demolish, or use otherwise than as a dwelling house, any house which is or can be made reasonably fit for use as a dwelling house. An appeal from the refusal of the local authority to allow such demolition lies to the Minister of Health. Penalties are imposed for infringement of this section.

STREETS AND FOOTPATHS.

STREETS AND FOOTPATHS.—The scavenging of streets and the cleansing of footways and pavements is generally undertaken by the sanitary authorities. It is unlawful to place or leave on any footway any furniture, goods, wares or merchandise, or any cask, tub, basket, pail, &c.; or to place over any footway any blind, shade, covering, awning, or other projection less than eight feet in height from the ground; or to place any goods, wares, merchandise, matter, or thing whatsoever, so that the same project in such a manner as to obstruct or incommode the passage of any person over or along a footway; or to roll any cask, tub, hoop, or wheel upon any footway, except [illegible] footway; or to [illegible] in any street, or [illegible] carpet, rug, or mat in any street after the hour of eight in the morning.

VACCINATION.

The parent of every child born in England must within six months after the birth of the child, or the person having custody of a child must within six months after receiving it, have the child vaccinated by a registered private medical practitioner or by the Public Vaccinator for the district. If the vaccination is performed by a private medical practitioner a certificate in the form prescribed by the Vaccination Order, 1898, of successful vaccination must be sent to the Registrar of Births within seven days. The Public Vaccinator is required on the request of the parent or guardian of a child to visit the home of the child and vaccinate it free of charge with glycerinated calf lymph or with such other lymph as may be issued by the Local Government Board at the option of the parent. If a child is not vaccinated within 4 months of its birth, the Public Vaccinator is required to give 24 hours' notice to the parent and to visit the home of the child and offer to vaccinate it. No parent or other person will be liable to any penalty under the Vaccination Acts if within four months from the birth he makes a statutory declaration before a commissioner for oaths or one justice of the peace that he conscientiously believes that vaccination would be prejudicial to the health of the child, and within seven days thereafter delivers the statutory declaration (which requires no stamp) to the Vaccination Officer for the district. A conscientious objector can thus escape all penalties, but a person who does not obtain a certificate, or make the declaration, will still be liable to penalties for not having a child vaccinated, and by the Vaccination Order, 1898, issued under the Vaccination Act, 1898, by the Local Government Board, the due vaccination of every child not exempted is secured by a very complete system of registration, and in future the Vaccination Officers will be able to undertake prosecutions without directions from Boards of Guardians, and the Boards will have no power to prevent such prosecutions. [See also Vaccination Order, 1907.]

WILLS.

REASONS FOR MAKING A WILL.—Every man having a wife and family should make his will. However small his estate, it is an imperative duty in most cases, and is safer in every case, to protect the interest of the survivors by a will, and by the appointment of one or more trustworthy persons to carry his wishes into effect. When persons die intestate, having foolishly put off making a will until it is too late, their negligence may deprive those for whom they were most anxious to provide. Thus a widow may find that the estate, a life policy perhaps, is not all hers, but has to be shared with a distant cousin of her husband's. Negligence, or unreasoning dislike to making a will, becomes an irreparable crime against those who have the first claim to protection. The help of a lawyer in making a will is not in every case essential, but it is always advisable, particularly where there is a desire on a testator's part to provide for his property being "settled" as it is called -e.g., the income being paid to his widow for her life, or until remarriage, and on her death or remarriage the capital being divided among his children equally. The tying-up or postponement of the enjoyment of income or capital requires the skill of a practised lawyer. Assuming that a lawyer is not employed, a person having resolved to make a will must not regard it as a light matter, to be got rid of in a few minutes, like writing a letter, but one demanding the most serious attention It is only after a person is dead, and cannot explain his meaning, that his will can be open to dispute It is the more necessary, therefore, to express what is meant in language of the utmost clearness, avoiding the use of any word or expression that seems to admit of another meaning than the one intended The lawyers have a maxim that the unforeseen (i e the event not provided for) always happens It is better to be prolix than to leave the smallest room for doubt or uncertainty, although the same name or word be repeated over and over again Sounding phrases are entirely out of place Avoid the use of "legal terms" such as "heirs' and "issue," when the same thing may be expressed in plain language If in writing the will a mistake be made, it is better to rewrite the whole Before a will is executed that is, signed by the testator in presence of two witnesses, an alteration may be made by striking through the words with a pen but opposite to such alteration the testator and witnesses should write their names or place their initials Never scratch out a word with a knife or other instrument, and no alteration of any kind whatever must be made after the will is executed If the testator afterwards wishes to change the disposition of his estate, it is better to make a new will revoking the old one, or to add a codicil to the first, which must be duly executed and attested in the same manner as the original will A will should be written in ink and very legibly on a single sheet of paper Although, of course, forms of wills must vary to suit different cases, the following directions may be found useful to those who in cases of emergency, are called upon to draw up wills either for themselves or others —

TESTATOR OR TESTATRIX —The person who makes the will is the testator, or if the will maker be a woman, the testatrix

ESTATE By this word is to be understood property of all kinds, both real and personal Real property includes tithes and advowsons as well as freehold land and houses while personal property includes debts due, arrears of rents money leasehold property, house furniture goods assurance policies, stock in public companies, and the like

RESIDUARY LEGATEES —It is well in all cases to leave to some person or persons "the residue of my estate and effects" although it may be thought that the whole of the property has been disposed of in legacies already mentioned in the will It should be remembered that a will operates on property acquired after it has been made

TO BEGIN A WILL A form in which a will may be commenced is —'This is the last will of me, Thomas Smith, of Vine Cottage, Silver Street Reading, in the county of Berks'

TO END A WILL —After disposing of the property the will may be ended as follows —"And I hereby appoint the said —— sole (or joint) executor(s) of this my Will, and I revoke all former wills and codicils Dated this —— day of ——, 19—"

EXECUTION OF A WILL —The testator should sign his name at the foot or end of the will, in presence of two witnesses, who will immediately sign their names in his and in each other's presence A person who has been left a legacy or share of residue in the will, or whose wife or husband has been left a legacy, should not be an attesting witness. Their attestation would be good, but they would forfeit the legacy. It is better that a person named as executor should not be a witness Husband and wife may both be witnesses, provided neither is a legatee If a solicitor be appointed executor, it is lawful to direct that his ordinary fees and charges shall be paid, but in this case he (as an interested party) must not be a witness to the will

ATTESTING EXECUTION —Opposite to or beneath the testator's signature should be written the attestation clause The following form of attestation will be found sufficient —

Signed by the testator [or testatrix, as the case may be], in the presence of us, both present at the same time who in his [or her] presence and in the presence of each other have hereunto set our names as witnesses

THOMAS SMITH [Signature of Testator]

William Jones, of Vine Cottage, Silver Street, Reading, Tailor Henry Morgan, of North Street, Reading, Esq

It is desirable that the witnesses should be fully described, as they may possibly be wanted at some future time If the testator should be too ill to sign, even by a mark, another person may sign the testator's name to the will for him, in his presence and by his direction, and in this case it should be shown that the testator knew the contents of the document The attestation clause should therefore be worded "Signed by Thomas Brown, by the direction and in the presence of the testator, Thomas Smith in the joint presence of us who thereupon signed our names in his presence and in the presence of each other, the will having been first read over to the testator who appeared fully to understand the same' If the testator be blind the will should be read aloud to him in the presence of the witnesses, and the fact mentioned in the attestation clause If by inadvertence the testator should have signed his will without the witnesses being present then the attestation should be —"The testator acknowledged his signature already made as his signature to his last will and testament in the joint presence' &c Any omission in the observance of these details causes delay and expense, and sometimes great difficulty is experienced in procuring an affidavit by one of the attesting witnesses before the will can be admitted to Probate

CODICIL —When any change is required to be made in the disposition of property as stated in the will, the change should be embodied in a codicil A codicil should begin —"This is a codicil to the will of me Thomas Smith of Vine Cottage Silver Street Reading, in the county of Berks the said will bearing date, &c A codicil must be dated at the end, and signed and witnessed with exactly the same formalities as the will

EXECUTORS —It is usual to appoint two executors, although one is sufficient The name and address of each executor should be given in full, as follows — I appoint John Jones of number twenty one, London Street, Ipswich, and Edward Matthews, of number seventeen Market Street, Lincoln, executors of this my will' An executor may be a legatee Thus a child or wife to whom the whole or a portion of the estate is left may be appointed sole executor, or one of two executors The addresses of the executors are not necessary, but it is desirable, here as elsewhere, to avoid ambiguity or vagueness

APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEES.—The form of appointment of executors will also serve when the estate is left in care of trustees, except that the persons should be designated "executors and trustees." The Public Trustee may be appointed executor or trustee of a will. See PUBLIC TRUSTEE, post.

TRUSTS OF THE WILL.—When the estate is wholly for the children, the will may read, after the appointment of the executors and trustees:—"I give and devise all my estate and effects, real and personal, of which I may die possessed or entitled to, unto the said John Jones and Edward Matthews, upon trust in equal shares for all or any my children or child living at my death who being sons or a son attain the age of 21 years or being daughters or a daughter attain that age or marry. And for all or any the children or child living at my death, who being male attain the age of 21 years or being female attain that age or marry of any child of mine who dies in my lifetime leaving children or a child living at my death, such last-mentioned children or child to take the share or shares which their parent would have taken if living at my death, and so that no grandchild of mine shall take whose parent is living and capable of taking." Where the widow is to have a life-interest use the following words: "upon trust for my wife during her life [or during her widowhood], and after her death [or second marriage, which first happens] upon trust in equal shares for all or any my children or child" &c. as before. The words in square brackets will only be used where the widow is to lose her interest if she marries again.

TESTAMENTARY CAPACITY.—A minor cannot make a will. A married woman (married since January 1, 1883) may dispose by will of any real or personal property as her separate property as if she were a feme sole (Married Women's Property Act, 1882, s. 1 (1)). As to the powers of a woman married before that date it is advisable to consult a solicitor.

REVOCATION.—A will is revoked by a subsequent will (but only so far as such subsequent will operates as a virtual revocation, as by making other provisions inconsistent with the previous will; for this reason a will should always have a clause revoking previous testamentary dispositions), or by burning, tearing, or otherwise destroying the same. It is not sufficient to obliterate the will with a pen. Marriage in every case acts as the revocation of a will: so that after marriage the old will should be re-acknowledged, or a new one made.

LAPSED LEGACIES.—If a legatee die in the lifetime of the testator, the legacy or share of residue lapses and falls into the residue, excepting only in cases where the legatee is a child or "other issue" of the testator and leaves issue living at the testator's death, and the will does not provide for the class of children or issue being ascertained at some period other than the death of the testator. For instance, if a share of residue is left to "all my children living at my wife's death," the share of a child who died in the wife's lifetime would lapse even though the child should leave issue.

TO ONE PERSON ABSOLUTELY.—When it is the intention to leave all the property to one person, as for instance a wife or child, the will may read:—"I devise and bequeath all my estate and effects, real and personal, which I may die possessed of or entitled to, unto my wife Mary Smith, absolutely."

TO CHILDREN UNDER AGE.—When estates are left wholly or in part to children under the age of 21 years, trustees should be appointed to hold the property in trust for those to whom it will ultimately belong. The trustees will have power to apply the annual income for their maintenance. A wife may be appointed a trustee, or may be sole trustee. It is also usual to appoint the executors or some near relative, guardians of children under age. By the Guardianship of Infants Act, 1886, the mother of a child, if she survives the father, becomes the guardian of such child, either alone, if no guardian is appointed, or jointly with any guardian appointed by the father.

ALL PROPERTY TO BE INVESTED.—Executors and trustees may be empowered to sell and dispose of an estate, and after the payment of all just debts and expenses to invest the remainder. For this purpose the section headed "Trust Investments" should be consulted.

The stringency of the law as to the due execution of wills is only relaxed in favour of sailors and soldiers while on service. The law of wills is mostly contained in the Wills Act, 1 Vict. c. 27.

DUTIES OF EXECUTORS.—After the death of the testator, the duties of the executor may be stated briefly as follows:—The first duty of the executors, or of one of them, is to see that the funeral takes place in a suitable and becoming way; then to make lists or schedules of the debts and the assets or property. For purposes of duty it is necessary to estimate the value of the real and personal property left, or get it valued. Under the Finance Act, 1894, duties are charged on all property in which the testator had a life interest, even though the property may not have been under his personal control. The executor must take the will to the Probate Registry, Somerset House, or to the Probate Registry of the district in which the testator had a fixed place of abode, or to a solicitor, and prove the will; to collect all the property of the deceased and pay all his just debts, and before distributing the estate, if it be a large one, it is necessary in order to relieve the executors from personal liability to duly advertise in certain London and local newspapers for all claims against the estate to be sent in before a specified date. Pay the legacy or succession duty. Dispose of the residue of the property as directed in the will. By the Land Transfer Act, 1897, all the testator's real estate becomes vested in the executors, who hold the same as trustees for the persons beneficially entitled under the will or otherwise, and such persons can only acquire a title to the estate through the executors, after payment of all charges and liabilities to which the same is subject. Executors are not obliged to act, neither is it necessary that all the executors should act: one alone is competent to prove a will and carry out its provisions. In small estates, probate and letters of administration may be obtained through an Inland Revenue Office.

ADMINISTRATORS.—If an executor has not been appointed in the will, or if the executor be dead, or does not wish to act, the residuary legatee nearest of kin to the deceased, or a legatee under the will, is entitled to act and administer the will, and is called administrator.

WHERE TO FIND A PROVED WILL.

To find a will proved before 1st January, 1858, the date on which the Court of Probate Act, 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 77), came into operation, it is best to search first—if the testator was a man of substance—the index to the wills proved in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, which is kept at Somerset House. Failing this, the will is probably to be found in the registry of the district in which it was proved. The wills proved prior to 1858 were all distributed among the district registries when these institutions came into existence. This is the only broad rule which can be laid down to guide a searcher. To find a will proved since 1858 is a far simpler task. It must have been proved either at the Principal Registry at Somerset House, or in the registry of the district in which the testator lived. In the former case the original will itself is carefully preserved at Somerset House, the copy of which probate has been granted is in the hands of the executors who proved the will, and another copy for Parliament is bound up in a folio volume of wills made by testators of that initial and date; the indices to these volumes fill a room of considerable size at Somerset House, where the indices may be examined and any will read on payment of a search fee of one shilling. In the latter case, the original will, proved in the District Registry, is there kept, and may be seen or a copy obtained, but a copy is sent to and filed at Somerset House, where also it may be seen. A general index of grants, both probate and administrations, is prepared and printed annually in lexicographical form, and may be seen at either the Principal or a District Registry. This index is usually ready by about June or July of the following year. The reader may not copy any part of the will except the names and addresses of the executors and the date and private number of the will. If he desires a copy, he can order one to be made, for which he will pay according to the length of the will, at the rate of sixpence a folio (ninety words) for an ordinary copy, and ninepence a folio for a certified copy, which, with a shilling stamp impressed thereon, can be produced and read in any court of law. The District Registries established by the Act of 1857 are the following:—

SAFE CUSTODY OF WILLS.

There is a depository for the safe custody of the Wills of living persons at Somerset House. Since 1857 this depository has been provided by the State under sect. 91 of the Act 20 & 21 Vic. c. 77; but the provision has been almost a dead-letter. A will may be deposited through the Registrar of a District Registry, who will transmit the will to London in a registered letter on receiving a fee of 10*s.* for the deposit, of 2*s.* 6*d.* for entering a minute thereof, and 2*s.* for filing the affidavit which is required. A will once deposited will not be given up to anybody, but must remain in the registry until the testator dies, unless he goes to the registry with the original minute of deposit and other proof of his identity, and destroys his will in the presence of the Registrar. (See also PUBLIC TRUSTEE, post.)

PROBATE OF WILLS.

OBTAINING PROBATE OR ADMINISTRATION WITHOUT THE AID OF A SOLICITOR.

The entrance to the office for personal applications is in the south-east corner of the Quadrangle of Somerset House, Strand, Room 44. The applicant should bring the registrar's certificate of the death of the deceased, or an official certificate of burial, and the will, if there be one, and full details of the property and debts of the deceased.

If there be no will or no executor be appointed, or the executor will not act, two sureties must also attend and enter into a bond for the faithful administration of the estate, unless the whole personal estate does not exceed £50, or the husband is the applicant, when one surety only will be required.

The scale of probate duty as at present in force will be found in detail under "Estate Duty."

In no case can any correspondence be entered into; nor can an interview be given to any agent. The business of the department can be transacted only with the applicant in person.

Where the deceased resided within the district of one of the "District Probate Registries" (q.v.) application may be made at that registry instead of at Somerset House.

Where the whole real and personal estate, without the deduction of debts or funeral expenses, does not exceed £500, application may be made at one of the Inland Revenue Offices in the suburbs and many principal towns throughout the country.

Where the deceased has left no will, and the whole personal estate does not exceed £100, and the widow resides at more than three miles from any Probate Registry, application may be made to the Registrar of the County Court.

Scotland.—"Confirmation" is the Scottish equivalent of Probate. That is obtained in the Sheriff Court of the County in which the deceased was domiciled at the date of his death or where he had no fixed domicile or died abroad, in the commissariat of Edinburgh. Executors are either "nominate" or "dative." An Executor nominate is one nominated by the deceased in his will. An Executor dative is one appointed by the Court (1) in the case of intestacy or (2) where the deceased had failed to name an executor in his will. In the former case the deceased's next-of-kin are all entitled to be declared executors dative. An inventory of the deceased's estate and a schedule of debts, together with an affidavit, must be given up. If the deceased had personal property in England or Ireland it is shown in the inventory, and then the confirmation is produced in the principal Court of Probate in England or Ireland. It is then sealed in such Courts and has the effect of probate or letters of administration in England or Ireland. In estates under £500 confirmation is obtained at reduced fees.

SCOTS LAW OF WILLS.

The only formalities required by the Law of Scotland as regards due execution of a will are for purposes of authentication. A will must be that a person may leave a amount of that legacy does ——— ——— ——— ——— (£8 8s. 8d. sterling). A will may be either (1) holograph, i.e., written by the testator himself, in which case no witnesses are necessary; (2) tested, which means that it is signed in presence of two witnesses. It is not necessary that these witnesses should sign in presence of one another, or even that they should see the testator signing so long as the testator acknowledges his signature to the witnesses. If the testator cannot write, his will may be authenticated by a notary and two witnesses. A parish minister may act as a notary for the purpose of subscribing a will in his own parish. Wills are registered for execution purposes in the Books of the County in which the deceased died domiciled, and in the Books of Council and Session, H.M. General Register House, Edinburgh, for preservation. The original deed may be inspected in the General Register House on payment of a small fee. A certified official copy may be obtained from either register on payment of stamp duties and writing fees.

TRUST FUNDS AND INVESTMENTS.

The Act of 1893 enacts that Trustees may invest in any Parliamentary Stocks or Government Securities of the United Kingdom: on real or heritable Securities in Great Britain or Ireland: in Bank of England Stock: Bank of Ireland Stock: India 3½ per cent. and 3 per cent. Stocks; any Stock hereafter issued by authority of Parliament charged on revenues of India: any Securities having interest guaranteed by Parliament: Metropolitan Board of Works or London County Council Stocks: Debenture Stock created by Metropolitan Police District Receiver: Debenture, Rent-charge, Guaranteed or Preference Stocks of any railway in Great Britain or Ireland that has paid not less than 3 per cent. per annum on Ordinary Stock for each of the 10 years preceding date of investment: any railway or canal Stock in Great Britain or Ireland leased for 200 years or more at a fixed rental to any railway specified above: Indian Railway Debenture Stocks of companies with interest paid or guaranteed by Indian Council: "B" Annuities, Eastern Bengal, East Indian, and Scinde, Punjab, and Delhi Railway, "C" and "D" Annuities of the East Indian Railway, and any like annuities of any other railway hereafter created: any Indian railway with fixed or minimum dividend paid or guaranteed by Indian Council: any Debenture, Guaranteed or Preference Stocks of any incorporated or chartered Water Company in Great Britain or Ireland that has paid not less than 5 per cent. per annum on Ordinary Stock for each of the 10 years preceding date of investment: any Corporation Stock of any borough having 50,000 inhabitants: any County Council Stock authorised by Act of Parliament or Provisional Order: any Water Stocks issued by incorporated Commissioners levying compulsory rates over areas containing 50,000 inhabitants, such rates not having exceeded 80 per cent. of authorised amount for 10 years: and in any Securities authorised by order of the High Courts of Justice of England or Ireland. Provided Stocks redeemable within 15 years are not purchased at a premium over the redemption price, or at more than 15 per cent. premium over such redemption price if redeemable after 15 years.

The Rule of the Supreme Court, 1893, authorises investment in:—Debenture, Preference,

Guaranteed or Rent-charge Stocks of railways in Great Britain or Ireland having for ten years next before the date of investment paid a dividend on Ordinary Stock or Shares, and in like Stocks if guaranteed by Railway Companies of the same description and in Nominal Debentures or Nominal Debenture Stock under the Local Loans Act, 1875 or under the Isle of Man Loans Act 1880, provided such Stocks are not liable to redemption within fifteen years from the date of investment

The Trusts Amendment Act, 1884 (Scotland only), excludes Irish real or heritable Securities or Stocks and British Railway contingent Preference and Waterworks Stocks admits all Railway Debenture Stocks and Guaranteed Stocks of railways that have paid Ordinary Dividends for the past ten years, and all Municipal Loans, and East India Stocks, and registered Colonial Stocks if approved by Court of Session

The Colonial Stock Act, 1900, permits Trustees both English and Scottish to invest in certain Colonial Stocks registered in the United Kingdom which the Treasury publishes a list of in the London and Edinburgh Gazettes but subject to the clause as to Redeemable Stocks in the Trustee Act, 1893

THE PUBLIC TRUSTEE

This is a Government Office (opened in 1908) by means of which the State acts as Executor and as Trustee under a Will, or as Trustee under a Settlement whether new or old and in other capacities of a like nature The public demand for the services of the Public Trustee continues unabated. The value of the trusts accepted up to March 31, 1920, was £154 011,203

The facts of any trust new or old, in which it is desired that the Public Trustee should act may be brought to his notice by letter or by personal interview Upon his assenting to act his appointment is effected in the same simple way as in that of a private trustee or he can be appointed by an Order of the Court He can act solely or jointly with others

In the case of a Will about to be made, all that the testator need say is, 'I appoint the Public Trustee executor and trustee of this my Will , or the appointment may be a joint one with friends or relations In the case of a Will already made, the appointment of the Public Trustee can be effected by means of a codicil Executors who have obtained probate can transfer their duties to him under an Order of the Court He can also act as Administrator with or without the Will annexed

The Public Trustee being a permanent trustee, the expense of fresh appointments is saved His integrity is guaranteed by the State, while the public demand for his services should ensure a valuable experience and skill in the execution of his office, and a wide knowledge in the work of investment

The Public Trustee is not, as such, limited in his powers of investment to trustee securities, but, like a private trustee he is bound by such powers of investment as may be given him in the Will or trust instrument under which he acts.

The progress of the Department may doubtless be ascribed to the wide public need for such an office secondly, to the State guarantee which accompanies the remedy provided, and thirdly, to the endeavour which is made to keep the administration upon personal lines The Public Trustee makes a point of giving the personal attention of himself or of his senior officials to the personal details of any trust The statutory rules require that strict secrecy shall be observed in respect of all matters dealt with in the Department Accounts of every trust, in simple form, are furnished to the beneficiaries as required.

The Public Trustee Act provides that the fees to be charged shall be arranged from time to time so as to produce an annual amount sufficient to discharge the salaries and other expenses of the Department A profit is not intended Owing to the increase in general administrative expenses and to the shrinkage of the capital values and the net income upon which the fees are assessed, it has been necessary to revise the scale prevailing since 1912. An important Committee of Investigation, presided over by Sir George Murray G C B was appointed by the Lord Chancellor in April, 1919, to inquire into the organisation of the Office and any alteration which might be required in the scale of fees.

An interview with the Public Trustee or with any of his senior officers can be arranged at any time by letter or telephone

A pamphlet giving full particulars and details of the new fees can be obtained free of cost upon application to the Office of the Public Trustee Kingsway, W C 2 (tel Holborn 2 400) or at any Post Office

A branch office has been opened in Northern Assurance Buildings, Albert Square, Manchester

(For list of Officers, see p 259)

THE HEAD MASTERS CONFERENCE (Secy, W A Bulkeley Evans, C B E, M A, 12 King's Bench Walk, Temple, E.C 4).—The object of the Conference is the discussion of educational questions which affect such schools as are in close connexion with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge The annual meetings are as a rule, held in December alternately (a) at some school represented on the Conference, (b) at London or some University town In considering applications for admission to the Conference, the committee has regard to the scheme or other instrument under which the school is administered and the numbers in the school As a general rule, there should be 100 boys at least in any school represented at the Conference, and about ten resident undergraduates at the Universities who have gone direct from the school, but regard is also paid to the proportion of under graduates to the total number of boys in the school

ASSOCIATION OF UNIVERSITY WOMEN TEACHERS (Founded 1883, Incorporated 1910).—Teachers holding a degree conferred by a University of Great Britain or Ireland or Overseas Dominions, and of some foreign countries, are eligible for membership, amounting to 2 787 President, Miss Gray, Secretary, Mrs B. SOLICITORS' CHARGES

These are now usually regulated in conveyancing and non-contentious business by the Solicitors' Remuneration Act, 1881, and the Scale thereunder—we say "usually" because that Act allows an option to a solicitor of declining to adopt it In practice, most solicitors (although some old established firms are found to prefer the old system) are willing to adopt the Scale, and especially on mortgages and sales Looking first at the old system, we find that an Act of 1843 made solicitors charges on conveyancing liable to taxation by a public official, and in 1870 a further Act enabled the taxing officer to have regard to "skill, labour, and responsibility as well as to mere length of documents The Act of 1881 enabled the high legal authorities, with the consent of certain representative solicitors, to frame a Scale, and this has been done It chiefly relates to sales, purchases, and mortgages, and is based upon the value of the property or amount of the money involved Besides this, it is legal for a client to make a bargain beforehand for a fixed sum The amount coming to the solicitor, whether under Scale or agreement, is intended to cover the services of himself and his clerks, while it is, of course, exclusive of actual outlay for stamps, &c On purchase or mortgage money exceeding £300 and not exceeding £1,000, the Scale charge for each party's solicitor is 1½ per cent, this does not apply to sales by auction Where a negotiation fee is chargeable, in addition, by the vendor's, purchaser's, or mortgagee's (not mortgagor's) solicitor, the Scale charge on sums exceeding £300 and not exceeding £3,000 is 1 per cent It should be noted that if the solicitor negotiates the purchase or mortgage, he is entitled to an additional fee of substantial amount under the Scale referred to All charges are now subject to an increase of 33⅓ per cent

Scotland — Solicitors' fees for Conveyancing and General business are regulated by a joint table approved by the different societies of Law Agents (Solicitors) Fees for litigation are regulated by the Court of Session The tables of fees are published in The "Parliament House Book' and in 'The Scottish Law Directory When a solicitor sues for payment of a professional account it is remitted to the Auditor of the Court for taxation of his charges

BRITISH WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The Weights and Measures Act of 1878, superseding all previous laws, enacts the legal measures for the United Kingdom, basing them upon the Standard Yard and the Standard Pound, in the custody of the Standards Department of the Board of Trade.

The Yard and the Pound are the only two independent standards for weights and measures. The Gallon, the capacity standard, wet or dry, is based upon the Pound. The Act of 1878 defines the Gallon as the volume of ten standard pounds of distilled water weighed in air against brass weights, both water and air at the temperature of 62° Fahrenheit, with the barometer at 30 inches.

Apothecaries' Weight.

For the use of Apothecaries and for selling drugs retail.

Measures of Weight.

20 grains..... = 1 scruple (℈).
3 scruples..... = 1 drachm (ʒi).
8 drachms..... = 1 Apothecaries' ounce (oz. Apoth.).

Measures of Capacity.

60 minims (min.) = 1 fluid drachm (fl. dr.).
8 fluid drachms = 1 fluid ounce (fl. oz)

The Apothecaries' grain is the Avoirdupois grain, and the Apothecaries' ounce is the Troy ounce, of 480 grains. The Apothecaries' drachm is not the same as the Avoirdupois dram, and is spelt differently. A fluid ounce of distilled water at a temperature of 62° Fahrenheit is equal in weight to the Avoirdupois ounce (437·5 grains). A fluid drachm (54·6875 grains) is equal in weight to TWO Avoirdupois drams.

Approximate Equivalents are as follows:—

Avoirdupois Weight.

(a) For minute weighments—
7000 grains (gr.) ... = 1 pound (lb.).
(b) Retail—
16 drams (dr.)... = 1 ounce (oz.).
16 ounces ..... = 1 pound.
28 pounds..... = 1 quarter (of a cwt.).
The quarter is halved into stones.*
(c) Wholesale—
1 cental ..... = 100 lbs.
4 quarters ..... = 1 hundredweight (cwt.)
20 hundredweight = 1 ton (2,240 lb.).

Miscellaneous Weights.—Ballast (pig = 56 lb.); beef (barrel = 200 lb.); blacklead (cask = 11½ cwt.); butter (barrel = 4 firkins = 224 lb.); coal (sack = 224 lb., ton = 20 sacks, bushel = 80 lb., chaldron = 36 bushels); cocoa (bag = 112 lb.); coffee (bag = 140 lb. to 168 lb., bale of Mocha = 224 lb. to 280 lb., barrel = 112 lb. to 168 lb., tierce = 5 cwt. to 7 cwt.); cotton (bale, U.S.A. = 400 lb. to 400 lb., Egypt = 700 lb. to 740 lb., India = 500 lb. to 600 lb.); glass (seam = 24 stones of 5 lb. = 120 lb.); gunpowder (barrel = 100 lb.); hides (last = 20 doz.); hops (bag = 280 lb., pocket = 1½ cwt. to 2 cwt.); lead (a fodder, London and Hull = 19½ cwt., Derby = 22½ cwt., Newcastle = 21½ cwt.); pepper (bag of black = 326 lb., of white = 168 lb.); pork (barrel = 224 lb.); potatoes (sack = 168 lb.); raisins (barrel = 112 lb.); saltpetre (bag = 168 lb.); soft soap (barrel or pack = 256 lb., firkin = 64 lb.); steel (faggot = 120 lb.); sugar (bag = 112 lb. to 196 lb., hogshead = 13 cwt. to 16 cwt., tierce = 7 cwt. to 9 cwt.); tar (barrel = 26¼ gallons); tea (chest = 84 lb.); tobacco (hogshead = 12 cwt. to 18 cwt.); turpentine (barrel = 224 lb. to 280 lb.); wool (sack = 364 lb.).

* The Smithfield stone (for dead meat) is 8 lb. only.

Troy Weight.

For gold and silver. The ounce, divided decimally, and not into grains, is the sole unit of weight. The Troy ounce is the same as the Apothecaries' ounce, = 480 Avoirdupois grains in weight. There is no Troy pound.

Jewellers' Weight.

The metric carat of 200 millegrammes is the legal standard of weight for precious stones and pearls.

Measures of Capacity.

(a) Retail and Liquid—
4 gills . ... = 1 pint.
2 pints . . = 1 quart.
4 quarts = 1 gallon.
(b) Wholesale—
8 gallons .. . = 1 bushel.
8 bushels . . = 1 quarter.
A measure of 2 gallons is called a peck.
A chaldron is 36 bushels = 4½ quarters.

Wheat, Corn, and Flour.

Wheat and other cereals are commonly sold by weight, the bushel being thus reckoned:—
Wheat, English, 60 lb. Foreign, 62 lb.
Barley, English, 50 lb. French, 52½ lb. Mediterranean, 50 lb.
Oats, English, 39 lb. Foreign, 38 and 40 lb.
Rye and Maize, 60 lb. Buckwheat, 52 lb.
A sack of flour = 280 lb.: U.S. barrel of flour is 196 lb; a peck of flour = 2 gallons = 14 lb.
100 lb. wheat produces 70 lb. flour.
100 lb. flour produces 130 lb. bread.
A quartern loaf = 4 lb.
A barrel of oats = 14 stone.
A bag of rice = 168 lb., of sago 112 lb.
A bag of biscuits = 102 lb.
A last of grain = 80 bushels.
NOTE.—A Quarter is a heaped measure of 8 bushels. A bushel of English wheat is reckoned as 60 lb. weight, and a Quarter as 480 lb.

Hay and Straw.

Truss of Straw, 36 lb. Truss of Old Hay, 56 lb.
Truss of New Hay (to September 1st), 60 lb.
Load of hay or straw = 36 trusses.
Ton of hay = 36 trusses.
An acre of grass should yield 1 to 2 tons of hay.

Liquid Measure.

Size of Barrels.	Gals.
Firkin or Quarter Barrel.....	9 = 9 × 1
Kilderkin, Rundlet, or ½ Barrel	18 = 9 × 2
Barrel	36 = 9 × 4
Hogshead (1½ barrels)	54 = 9 × 6
Puncheon (2 barrels).....	72 = 9 × 8
Butt of Ale (3 barrels).....	108 = 9 × 12

An Anker = 10 gallons; a Tierce = 42 gallons; a Pipe of Port or Madew = 115 gals.; Teneriffe = 100 gals.; Marsala = 93 gals.; Madeira and Cape = 92 gals.; Sherry and Tent = 108 gals.; Butt of Lisbon and Bucellas = 117 gals.; Aum of Hock and Rhenish = 30 gals.; Hogshead of Brandy, 60 gals.: Claret, 46; Port, 57; Sherry, 54; Madeira, 46 gallons; Puncheon of Brandy or Rum = 120 gals.

Bottle Measure.

The customary glass bottle of wine or spirits should contain one-sixth of a gallon = 26⅔ fluid ounces.

In the drug trade two large bottles are used:—
Corbyn... ..... = 40 fluid oz. (quart).
Winchester quart = 80 ,, (½ gallon).

Water.

The British Ton is the weight of a cubic British Metre of pure water at the temperature of melting ice, very nearly. At present, the following relations hold good :—

Cubic inch .... = 252·458 grains.
Gallon (277·274 cub. in.) = 10 lb. (distilled).
Cubic foot ..... = 62·321 lb.
35·943 cubic ft. (224 gals.) = 1 ton.

Water for Ships : Tun, 210 gals., Butt 110, Puncheon 72, Barrel 36, Kilderkin 18 gals.

Cisterns : A cistern 4 feet by 2½ and 3 deep will hold brimful 286·963 gallons, weighing 16 cwt. 2 qrs. 21·6 lb. in addition to its own weight.

Measures of Length.

(a) Trade and Manufacture—
12 inches (in.) = 1 foot (ft.).
3 feet = 1 yard (yd.).

Any of the above units may be used singly, and as a prime unit, to be divided fractionally or decimally, as required, to any necessary extent.

(b) Travellers' Measure—
220 yards = 1 furlong.
8 furlongs = 1 mile.
3 miles = 1 league (seldom used).

(c) Surveyors' Measure—
100 links = 1 chain (22 yards).
10 chains = 1 furlong.
8 furlongs = 1 mile.

A Pole of 5½ yards is a quarter of a chain.

A Cricket Pitch is one chain between the stumps

A Lawn Tennis Court is 78 × 36 feet (double) and 78 × 27 feet (single).

A Croquet Lawn is 175 × 140 feet (full size) or a similar multiple of 5 × 4 feet.

Birmingham Gauge.

The Weights and Measures Act of 1878 made standards on and after Nov. 1, 1914, certain new divisions of an inch. The equivalent of an inch is 15/0 B.G. The numbers proceed by units down to 1/0 B.G., which = 0·3964 inch, and from 1 B.G. to ·532 inch) by units to 52 B.G. (·00095 inch).

Square or Surface Measure.

(a) Trade and Manufacture—
144 square inches = 1 square foot.
9 square feet = 1 square yard.

(b) Travellers' Measure—
Square miles and fractions or decimals are sufficient for all practical purposes.

(c) Surveyors' Measure—
Either in links and square chains when :—
10 square chains = 1 acre.
640 acres = 1 square mile.

Note.—The Anglo-Saxon acre's-length is the furlong, and the acre's-breadth the chain.

Or, for legal and civil purposes :—
30¼ square yards = 1 square rod or perch.
40 rods = 1 rood.
4 roods = 1 acre.

Surveys being usually made with the chain of 100 links, the only difficulty presented by the above table lies in the reduction of the balances of rods into square yards.

Railway Gauges.

In Great Britain = 4 ft. 8½ in.
,, Ireland = 5 ft. 3 in.
,, U.S.A. = 4 ft. 8½ in.
The 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge is also used in Canada, France, Germany, Netherlands, Belgium, Denmark, Austria, Hungary, Italy, Switzerland Sweden and European Turkey.
,, Australia :—
N.S.W. = 3 ft. 6 in. and 4 ft. 8½ in.
Victoria and South Australia = 5 ft. 3 in.
Queensland and Western Australia = 3 ft. 6 in.
,, New Zealand = 3 ft. 6 in.
,, India = 2 ft. 6 in. ; 3 ft. 3⅜ in. and 5 ft. 6 in.
,, South Africa = 3 ft. 6 in.
,, Egypt = 4 ft. 8½ and 3 ft. 6 in.
Ceylon = 5 ft. 6 in.
,, Japan = 3 ft. 6 in.
,, Russia = 5 ft. 0 in.
,, Spain and Portugal = 5 ft. 6 in.
,, Asia Minor = 4 ft. 8½ in. and 3 ft. 5½ in.

A single track of 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge requires 12 ft. of roadway ; a double track requires 23 ft. of roadway.

Circular Measure.

60 minutes = 1 degree (°).
30 degrees = 1 sign.
12 signs = 1 circumference.
Diameter of circle × 3·1416 = circumference.
Diameter squared × ·7854 = area of circle.
Diameter squared × 3·1416 = surface of sphere.
Diameter cubed × ·5236 = solidity of sphere.
One degree of circumference × 57·3 = radius.
Diameter of cylinder × 3·1416 ; product by length or height, gives the surface.
Diameter squared × ·7854 ; product by length or height, gives solid content.

Note.—A circle of 7 yards diameter has, in practice, a circumference of 22 yards = 1 chain. This relationship is of great importance in the laying out of railway curves, in range-finding, &c., since the relationship between diameters in multiples of 7 yards, and circumferences in chains, holds good for circles of any size.

Electrical Measures.

It is customary to express electrical measurements in terms of the centimetre, the gramme, and the second (C.G.S. units), and the value of the units has been fixed by international agreement. The principal units are as follow :—

As a unit of resistance, the international Ohm, which is based upon the ohm equal to 10^9 units of resistance of the C.G.S. system of electromagnetic units, and is represented by the resistance offered to an unvarying electric current by a column of mercury at the temperature of melting ice, 14·4521 grammes in mass, of a constant cross-sectional area, and of a length of 106·3 centimetres.

As a unit of current, the international Ampère, which is one-tenth of the unit of current of the C.G.S. system of electro-magnetic units and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the unvarying current which, when passed through a solution of nitrate of silver in water, in accordance with a certain specification, deposits silver at the rate of 0·00118 of a gramme per second.

As a unit of electro motive force, the international Volt, which is the E M F that, steadily applied to a conductor whose resistance is one international ohm, will produce a current of one international ampère and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by $\frac{1000}{1434}$ of the E M F between the poles or electrodes of the voltaic cell known as Clark's cell at a temperature of 15° C, and prepared in the manner described in a certain specification

As a unit of quantity the international Coulomb, which is the quantity of electricity transferred by a current of one international ampère in one second

As a unit of capacity, the international Farad, which is the capacity of a conductor charged to a potential of one international volt by one international coulomb of electricity The unit generally used in practice is one millionth part of this, or the microfarad

As the unit of work the Joule which is 10^7 units of work in the C G S system and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the energy expended in one second by an international ampère in an international ohm In practice the watt hour is usually employed It represents the work done by such a current in an hour, and equals 3 600 joules

As the unit of power, the Watt which is 10^7 units of power in the C G S system, and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the work done at the rate of one joule per second 746 watts = 1 horse power and the value of a Board of Trade unit (B O T U) is 1 000 watt-hours, or 3 600 000 joules, or 1⅓ horse power hours

As the unit of induction the Henry, which is the induction in the circuit when the E M F induced in this circuit is one international volt while the inducing current varies at the rate of one international ampère per second Weight of Cubic Foot and Cubic Yard.

A cubic yard of anthracite coal solid, weighs 2 160 lb, bituminous 2,025 lb cannel 1 400 lb A cubic yard of coal stacked in usual way = 1 160 lb A cubic yard of compressed hay = 225 lb, of hay in stack, 126 lb, of compressed straw 145 lb of straw in stack, 90 lb, of grain 20 bushels

Yarn Measures

Cotton and Spun Silk Count —
Thread = 1½ yards
Lea or Skein, skn. = 120 yards
Hank hk = 7 Skeins, or Leas = 840 yards
Spindle, spdl = 18 Hanks.
Counts = the number of Hanks in 1 lb
Bundle Hanks either of 5 lb or 10 lb
Reels of cotton vary from 30 to 1,760 yards they must be marked correctly
Bundles of Cotton are chiefly made up for export

Worsted Count —Wrap, 80 yards; Hank = 560 yards = 7 Wraps; Counts or Numbers are the number of hanks in a lb.

Linen Count —The Hank or Lea is 300 yards, and the number of these in 1 lb is the count of the yarn A Spindle is 48 hanks, a Bundle is 200 hanks

West of England Count —The Hank is 320 yards, and the number of hanks in 1 lb is the count of the yarn Temperature Measures.

Variations of temperature are measured by thermometers, which are graduated on three different systems, viz —

The Fahrenheit thermometer,
The Centigrade, or Celsius thermometer
The Réaumur thermometer

In the Fahrenheit thermometer the distance from the freezing point of water to the boiling point is divided into 180 degrees The freezing point is marked 32°, and the boiling point 212°

In the Centigrade thermometer the freezing point is marked 0°, and the boiling point 100°

In the Reaumur thermometer the freezing point is marked 0°, and the boiling point 80°

To convert Centigrade degrees to Fahrenheit, multiply by $\frac{9}{5}$ and add 32°

To convert Réaumur degrees to Fahrenheit, multiply by $\frac{9}{4}$ and add 32°

For example —

20° Centigrade = 20 × $\frac{9}{5}$ + 32 = 68° Fahrenheit
20° Réaumur = 20 × $\frac{9}{4}$ + 32 = 77° Fahrenheit

To convert Fahrenheit degrees to Centigrade subtract 32° and multiply by $\frac{5}{9}$

To convert Fahrenheit degrees to Réaumur, subtract 32° and multiply by $\frac{4}{9}$

For example —

68° Fahrenheit = $\frac{5}{9}$ (68 − 32) = 20° Centigrade
77° Fahrenheit = $\frac{4}{9}$ (77 − 32) = 20° Réaumur

To convert Centigrade degrees to Réaumur degrees, multiply by $\frac{4}{5}$

To convert Reaumur degrees to Centigrade degrees multiply by $\frac{5}{4}$

For example —

20° Centigrade = 20 × $\frac{4}{5}$ = 16° Reaumur
20° Reaumur = 20 × $\frac{5}{4}$ = 25° Centigrade

Time Measures

Measurements of time are based on the time taken by the earth to revolve round its axis by the moon to revolve round the earth, and by the earth to revolve round the sun As these motions are not exactly commensurable with one another, it has been necessary to adopt average or mean intervals of time for ordinary use

Of these the first is the Day, which commences at midnight and is divided into 24 hours of 60 minutes, each of 60 seconds

The hours are counted from midnight up to 12 at noon, and again from noon up to 12 at midnight

For the Astronomical Day see p 90

With the Jews and Muhammadans the day begins, not at midnight, but at sunset on the previous day, and the hours between sunset and midnight belong to the succeeding day in the Jewish and Muhammadan calendars

The Week is a period of 7 days

The Month in the ordinary calendar is approximately the twelfth part of a year, but the length of the different months varies as follows —

January, March, May, July, August, October, and December have each 31 days
April, June, September, and November have each 30 days
February has 28 days, except in leap year, when it has 29 days

The Jews and Muhammadans use the lunar month, based on the length of time that the moon takes to revolve round the earth. The month commences, not at true new moon, but at sunset of the day when the new moon is first seen after sunset The length of the lunar month varies, so the Jewish and Muhammadan months have sometimes 30 and sometimes 29 days.

The Muhammadan year always consists of twelve lunar months, and is sometimes 354 and sometimes 355 days in length

The Year is the length of time that the earth takes to complete one revolution round the sun, which is 365 2422 mean days The ordinary year is taken as 365 days, and every fourth year, called Leap Year, has 366 days. Every year the date of which is divisible by 4, without remainder, is leap year But the last year of each century that is not divisible by 400 without remainder is not a leap year For example, the years 1800 and 1900 had only 365 days

Old and New Style —Various expedients have been adopted from time to time to reconcile the period known as the year (365 days) with the period of time occupied by the earth in its journey round the sun (365 2422 days). Julius Cæsar inserted an extra day every fourth year, but four Julian years thus consisted of 1,461 days, an error in 250 years of 3·12 days Certain expedients were adopted in the reign of Augustus, but towards the close of the 16th century there was a difference of 10 days between the civil and astronomical years, and in 1582 Pope Gregory ordained that Oct 5th should be called Oct 15th, and that only every fourth (instead of every) end century year should be a leap year This change was adopted by Italy, France, Spain, and Portugal in 1582, by Prussia, the German Roman Catholic States, Switzerland, Holland, and Flanders on Jan 1, 1583, Poland 1586, Hungary 1587, the German and Netherland Protestant States and Denmark 1700, Sweden (gradually) by the omission of eleven leap days, 1700–1740, the British Dominions (which included the then North American Colonies) in 1752, by the omission of eleven days (Sept 3 being reckoned as Sept 14) This "Western" Calendar was adopted by Japan in 1872, China in 1912, Bulgaria in 1915, Soviet Russia in 1917, and by Yugo Slavia and Rumania in 1919. It is anticipated that Greece will also adopt it The difference between the Old and New Styles since 1900 is 13 days (12 days after 1700, 12 days after 1800 and 13 days after 1900).

New Year's Day —The Civil year in the British Dominions (exclusive of Scotland) commenced with March 25, "Lady Day" or "The Feast of the Annunciation," until 1752 But on and from 1752 the civil year has commenced with Jan 1. The Old Style reckoning is still maintained to some extent by the British Treasury, and certain dividends are payable at the Bank of England on the Old Style Quarter Days, while the "Financial Year" is still reckoned as commencing on Old Lady Day, April 5 Scotland in 1600 changed New Year's Day from Mar 25 to Jan 1. On the Continent, Jan 1 was adopted as the first day of the year by Venice in 1522, Germany in 1544, Spain, Portugal and the Roman Catholic Netherlands in 1556, Prussia, Denmark and Sweden in 1559, France 1564, Lorraine 1579, Protestant Netherlands 1583, Russia 1725, Tuscany 1751

Time and Watch on Board Ship

TIME.—Time is kept by means of a bell, which is struck every half hour In the morning 1 bell sounds at 12 30 a m , and every half hour the number increases until 8 bells at 4 a m , then 1 bell again at 4 30 a m to 8 bells at 8 a m , 1 bell at 8 30 a m and 8 bells at noon In the afternoon 1 bell sounds at 12 30 p m and 8 bells at 4 p m after which is the First Dog Watch (1 bell 4 30, 2 bells 5 0 3 bells 5 30, 4 bells 6 0) and the Second Dog Watch (1 bell 6 30 2 bells 7 0 3 bells 7 30 8 bells 8 0) and thence 1 bell at 8 30 to 8 bells at midnight

WATCH For purposes of discipline, and to divide the work fairly the crew is mustered in two divisions the Starboard (right side looking forward) and the Port (left) The day commences at noon and is thus divided —

Afternoon Watch	noon to 4 p m
First Dog ,,	4 p m to 6 p m
Second Dog ,,	6 p m to 8 p m
First ,,	8 p m to midnight
Middle ,,	midnight to 4 a m
Morning ,,	4 a m to 8 a m
Forenoon ,,	8 a m to noon

This makes seven WATCHES which enables the crew to keep them alternately as the Watch which is on duty in the forenoon one day has the afternoon next day and the men who have only four hours rest one night have eight hours the next This is the reason for having Dog Watches which are made by dividing the hours between 4 p m and 8 p m into two Watches

Fish

In Scotland, and at certain places in England and Wales at which the Cran Measures Act, 1908 has been put into operation, fresh herrings must be sold by the Cran containing 37½ imperial gallons, or Quarter Cran of 9⅜ imperial gallons In the Isle of Man and in Ireland herrings are sold by the Maze which contains 5 long hundreds of 126 each On the East Coast of England at places where the above mentioned Act is not in force, they are sold by the Last, which contains 13 200 fish They are counted by the Warp which is 4 fish 33 Warps = 1 Long Hundred 132 , 10 Hundred = 1 Thousand 1 320 10 Thousand = 1 Last 13 200 Cured herrings are sold in barrels, the capacity of which, in Scotland, must always be 26 ⅝ imperial gallons, or in half barrels of 13⅓ gallons Herring barrels or half barrels must be of corresponding capacity in England and Wales if they are presented for the Government Brand at any place at which the Herring Fishery (Branding) Act, 1913 is in force

A Quintal of fish (Newfoundland &c) is 100 lb a barrel of anchovies — 30 lb a 'box of fish is about 90 lb

Geographical Measures

The North and South Poles are two points at the opposite extremities of that diameter of the earth round which it revolves The Equator is a great circle equally distant from the North and South Poles For geographical purposes, the surface of the earth is divided by circles, called the circles of Latitude and Longitude The circles of Latitude are small circles parallel to the Equator The circles of Longitude are great circles perpendicular to the Equator, and passing through the North and South Poles These circles are divided into Degrees, Minutes, and Seconds Degrees of Latitude are numbered from the Equator to the North and South Poles Degrees of Longitude are numbered from the primary circle of Longitude, or Meridian, which passes through the astronomical observatory of Greenwich (England)

A Geographical Mile is the length of one minute of Latitude If the earth was a sphere every minute of Latitude would be of the same length , but, as it is a spheroid, the length of a minute increases from 6 046 feet at the Equator to 6 108 feet at the Poles The mean length of the geographical mile is 6 076 8 feet The Nautical Mile is (strictly speaking) the length of a minute of the meridian, and is thus identical with the geographical mile In practice, however, it is taken as the Admiralty Knot of 6 080 feet, divided into 10 cables, which are assumed to be 100 fathoms or 600 feet

The Polar diameter of the Earth is 7 899 English miles The mean equatorial diameter is 7,926 miles The circumference at the Equator is 24 902 miles

Nautical Measures

6 feet = 1 fathom
100 fathoms = 1 cable length

15 feet or 5 yards, is called a chain and 1,000 fathoms make a nautical mile, or knot, in practical navigation

Ship Measurement

The Ton measurement of cargo was originally the space occupied by 4 hogsheads (= a Tun) of wine = 50 cubic feet. It is now 40 cubic feet, which is approximately the bulk of 4 quarters, or a short ton, of wheat

The Ton register, the unit of capacity of a ship, was originally the space occupied by a Last of 10 Quarters of wheat = 100 cubic feet This cubic space is the Ton register used by all maritime nations 100 English cubic feet

Gross tonnage is the sum in cubic feet of all the various enclosed spaces of a vessel divided by 100

Net tonnage is the gross tonnage less certain deductions on account of crew spaces engine room, water ballast and other spaces not used for passengers or cargo

Dead weight tonnage, or carrying capacity is the number of tons (of 2 240 lb) of cargo that a vessel is capable of carrying when charged to the load water line (q v)

Displacement tonnage is the number of tons of sea water displaced by a vessel when charged to the load water line (q v)

Load water line is the line that would be made round the shell of a vessel when loaded as deep as the minimum freeboard regulations permit

Draught is the distance in feet from the lowest part of the bottom of a vessel to the actual water line at which the vessel is floating Thus the load water line marks the greatest, or loaded draught of a vessel A vessel without any cargo in her hold or passengers or their luggage aboard is said to be 'light ship or light,' or "in ballast'

Free Board is the distance from the main or upper deck to the load water line of a vessel As a general rule the minimum free board provides an amount of reserve buoyancy that will keep a vessel afloat with two compartments holed

Speed of Ships

The Knot is a measure of speed of ships, the expression "15 knots indicates that the vessel in question is capable of steaming or sailing 15 nautical miles in one hour The Nautical

Mile = 6,080 feet (the Statute Mile being 5,280 feet and the Geographical Mile 6,076·8 feet) The following table shows the equivalents of 1 to 42 knots in land (statute) miles —

Sizes of Type

All Founders cast their type to one unit in height ("type high") which is ·11 inch though the letters may vary considerably in their breadth

The type chiefly used in this Almanack is named Nonpareil (6 point) The column contains 75 lines and is 12 Pica ems wide on an average every column contains about 3 000 letters or 600 words

The Point System — The basic unit in American (and many British) type foundries is the point of 0·013837 inch, and the names of the various types in the point system are added in parentheses

METRIC WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Tables for the conversion of British and Metric Weights and Measures will be found on page 454, headed: "Double Conversion Tables for Weights and Measures."

In addition to the Imperial standard weights and measures, the use of the French or Metric system of weights and measures was made permissive in the United Kingdom in 1897.

In the Metric system, the standard of length is the Metre, the standard of weight is the Kilogram, and the standard of capacity is the Litre. Accurate copies of the Metre, Kilogram, and Litre are kept in the custody of the Standards Office of the Board of Trade.

For the sake of comparison, the equivalent value of the nearest British measure is given.

1.—MEASURES OF LENGTH.

10 millimetres (mm.) = 1 centimetre (cm.) = 0·3937079 inch.
10 centimetres = 1 decimetre (dm.) = 0·328084 foot.
10 decimetres = 1 METRE (m) = 1·093614 yard.
10 metres ... = 1 dekametre (dam.) = 1·9884 poles.
10 dekametres = 1 hectometre (hm.) = 0·4971 furlong.
10 hectometres = 1 kilometre (km.) = 0·6214 mile.

A kilometre is approximately ⅝ mile, so that 8 kilometres may be regarded by pedestrians as 5 miles.

2.—MEASURES OF WEIGHT.

10 milligrams (mg.) = 1 centigram (cg.) = 0·1543 grains.
10 centigrams = 1 decigram (dg.) = 1·5432 ,,
10 decigrams = 1 gramme (grm.) = 15·4323 ,,
10 grammes = 1 dekagram (dag.) = 5·6438 drams.
10 dekagrams = 1 hectogram (hg.) = 3·5274 oz.
10 hectograms = 1 KILOGRAM (kg.) = 2·204622 lb.
10 kilograms = 1 myriagram = 1·5747 stones.
10 myriagrams = 1 quintal (q.) = 1·9684 cwt.
10 quintals ... = 1 tonne (t.) ... = 0·9842 ton.

10 millilitres (mil.) = 1 centilitre (cl.) = 0·0704 gill.
10 centilitres = 1 decilitre (dl.) = 0·1759 pint.
10 decilitres = 1 LITRE (lit.) = 0·8799 quart.
10 litres ..... = 1 dekalitre ... = 2·1997 gals.
10 dekalitres = 1 hectolitre (hl.) = 2·7497 bushels.

4.—MEASURES OF LAND.

100 sq. metres = 1 are (a.) ..... = 0·0988 rood.
100 ares ..... = 1 hectare (ha.) = 2·4711 acres.
100 hectares = 1 sq. kilometre = 0·386 sq. mile.

NOTES.

1 hectolitre ..... = 2·75 bushels.
1 hectolitre per hectare = 1·12 bushels per acre.
1 quintal ..... = 3·67 bushels.
1 quintal per hectare ... = 1·49 bushels per acre.
1 franc a hectolitre ..... = 3·6 pence a bushel.
1 ,, a quintal ..... = 4·3 ,, a cental; 21·2 ,, a quarter.
7 ,, ,, (duty) ..... = 12*s.* 6*d.* ,,

THE UNITED STATES.

The weights and measures are those of the United Kingdom, with the following differences:—

Weight.—In the short ton of 2,000 lb., the Cental of 100 lb. takes the place of the Cwt. in the long ton. There are TWO tons, therefore, the one of 2,240 lb., the other of 2,000 lb.

Capacity.—For grain, the old bushel of 2,150·42 cubic inches; its gallon = 268·8 cubic inches. This is commonly called the Winchester bushel, though really of the slightly different London standard.

For liquids, the old wine-gallon of 231 cubic inches, five-sixths of the Imperial gallon and = 58,317·8 grains of water. It is divided into 8 pints = 7,289·7 grains of water = 16·6 Imperial ounces. In medicine the pint is divided into 16 fluid ounces = 455·6 grains of water, and the ounce into 8 fluid drachms of 60 minims.

BRITISH DEPENDENCIES.

Channel Islands.

The weights and measures in use in the Channel Islands are those of the United Kingdom, the cental of 100 lb. being used as well as the cwt. of 112 lb. The Old Island Measures are as follows:—

		Jersey.	Guernsey.
Vergée (Normandy rood)	=	·44 acre	·4 acre.
Bushel	=	8·9 gallons	5·8 gallons.
Pound	=	7,561 grains	7,623 grains.
Cwt. (104 lb.)	=	112·3 lb.	(100 lb.) = 108·9 lb.

Malta.

Piede ..... = 11·166 inches.
Canna ..... = 2·2283 yards.
Libbra ..... = 12 oncia = 4886 Troy gr.
Rotdo ..... = 1·745 lb.

British India.

Ungul ..... = ·75 inch.
Guz, usually 33 inches; also the yard.
Koss ..... = 2,000 yards.
Bigha (Bengal) ..... usually = ·625 acre.
Cawny (Madras) ..... ,, = 1·33 ,,
Tola (rupee-weight) ..... = 180 grains.
Chittak ..... = 2 oz. av.
Seer, 16 chittak, or 80 tolas ..... = 2·204 lb.
Maund, 40 seers ..... = 82·287 lb.
,, (Madras) ..... = 24·68 lb.
Seer (Liquid) ..... = 1·760 pints.
Candy ,, ... = 500 lb.
Visham = 3 lb.; Dangali ..... = 3 pints.
Parah ..... = 15 gallons.
Catty (Singapore) ..... = 1⅓ lb.
Pikul ,, ... 100 catties = 133 lb.

Egypt.

The Metric System of Weights and Measures and the foot and pound and their multiples, is legal in Egypt. The foot and pound are rarely used and the Metric System is little known except in the large towns.

The Weights and Measures in common use, with their English equivalents, are as follows:—

Length—
Dira Baladi (used for piece goods) = 29·83 inches
Dira Mamari, or Pic (used by architects) ..... = 29·53 inches
Qasaba (used for agricultural land) = 11·65 feet

Area—
1 Qirat ..... = 209·3 sq. yards
1 Feddân (=24 qirats) ..... = 1·038 acres

Capacity—
1 Kéla ..... = ·454 bushel
1 Ardeb (=12 kélas) ..... = 5·444 bushels

Weight—

1 Rotl	= 99 lb
1 Oke	= 2 75 lb
1 Qantar (= 100 rotls)	= 99 05 lb

South Africa

Money, Weights and Measures—The coins and the standard weights and measures are British but the following old Dutch measures are still used—Liquid Measure Leaguer=about 128 imperial gallons half aum = 15½ imperial gallons anker = 7½ imperial gallons Capacity Muid = 3 bushels The general surface measure is Morgen equal to 2 116540 acres 1 000 Cape lineal feet are equal to 1 033 British imperial feet The short ton of 2 000 lb is used Recently a Bill was introduced to provide for the standardisation of the metric system for weights and measures with the optional use of imperial standards except in the case of chemists who are compelled to use the metric system

FOREIGN WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

EXAMPLE 1. What is the present value of a Lease having 37 years to run of the net annual value of £100 interest being reckoned at 4 per cent? ANSWER.—19 14 years purchase or £1 914.

EXAMPLE 2. A man aged 54 in the receipt of a pension or annuity of £100 a year net wishes to commute that for a present payment, interest being reckoned at 5 per cent. How much will he receive? ANSWER. Looking at the Table of Expectation of Life (q. v.) it will be seen that the expectation for age 54 is about 17 years and from the above table an annuity certain for 17 years interest at 5 per cent is worth 11 27 years purchase. The present payment required would therefore be £1 127 approximately.

Note to Example 2.—This method is only approximate. The values of annuities which depend on lives of a given present age when properly calculated according to a given mortality table and a given rate of interest are always somewhat less than those given by the method used in this example.

When the annuity is payable at the beginning instead of at the end of the year the amount for the following year less £1 must be taken. Thus for £1 at 2½ per cent for 25 years take 26 years £36 012 and deduct £1—£35 012

REPAYMENT OF PUBLIC LOANS

LARGE sums of money are every year advanced to County or District Councils and other public bodies for improvements building of workhouses schools, harbours, bridges &c., to be repaid in a given number of years including interest. The following scheme of tables for the repayments of Loans was compiled under the Local Government Act, 1848, and examined by the actuary of the National Debt Office. It gives the sums needed as the annual amount of principal combined with interest required for the liquidation of a debt of £100 at the stated percentage, in 10, 20 30 40 and 50 years —

Years	3 per Ct	3½ per Ct	4 per Ct	4½ per Ct	5 per Ct
10	11 14 5½	11 10 6	11 7 3	11 4 1	10 15 0
20	6 14 5½	7 0 8½	7 7 2	7 13 9	8 0 2½
30	5 2 0	5 8 9	5 15 8	6 2 9½	6 10 2½
40	4 6 6½	4 13 7	5 1 0½	5 9 8½	5 16 6½
50	3 17 8	4 5 3½	4 12 11½	5 1 0½	5 9 6½

If the loan be for £1 000 each annual instalment as shown above must be multiplied by 10 if for £2 000 then by 20 and so on

THE TURF IN 1920

(At the close of the Newmarket Second October Meeting)

Two Thousand Guineas, Tetratema, One Thousand Guineas Cinna The Derby, Spion Kop, The Oaks, Charlebelle, St Leger Caligula

Tetratema the best 2 year old of 1919, proved to be a non stayer This was conclusively proved in the Derby, the fastest on record Spion Kop after winning the chief classic at Epsom, was sent over to France for the Grand Prix, and the race was won by his stable companion, Comrade In the St Leger Spion Kop gave an unaccountable display, finishing last but one Caligula, the winner, though a son of Tetrarch, inherits staying power through his dam, Snoot, who has the Musket blood

Record prices were paid for bloodstock at the Doncaster sales Lord Glanely purchased the yearling colt by the Tetrarch—Blue Tit—for the world s record price of 14,500 guineas This was bred at the Sledmere Stud and the thirteen yearlings from this stud realised 54,630 guineas an average of 4 203 guineas each The huge total of 276 000 guineas was realised by the four days sales

GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION.—The British Empire occupies over one-quarter of the known surface of the globe, and its population exceeds one-quarter of the estimated number of the human race. The total area is distributed almost equally over the Northern and Southern Hemispheres, but more than two-thirds lie in the Eastern and less than one-third in the Western Hemisphere. The distribution of the surface over the Northern and Southern Hemispheres causes a complete alternation of the seasons, one half of the Empire enjoying summer while the other half is under winter conditions. In spite, however, of the uneven distribution east and west, daylight and darkness are almost equally divided, on account of the position of Australasia near the limit of east and west.

ETHNOLOGY.—By far the greater portion of the Empire lies within the temperate zones and is suitable for white settlement, the tropical areas being Southern India, West, East and Central Africa, parts of the West Indies, British Guiana and Honduras. Northern Australia, Borneo, and the various settlements in the Malay Peninsula. The estimated white population of the Empire in 1911 was 60,000,000, mainly British and Irish, but partly French, Dutch, and Spanish. The remaining 370,000,000 include 315,000,000 of the native races of India and Ceylon, 40,000,000 black races, 6,000,000 Arabs, 6,000,000 Malays, 1,000,000 Chinese, and 1,000,000 Polynesians, with various other elements, including 100,000 "Red Indians" in Canada.

RELIGIONS.—Of the total population over 320,000,000 are Hindus, 100,000,000 Muhammadans, 80,000,000 Christians (67,000,000 Protestants, 13,000,000 Catholics), 12,000,000 Buddhists, 12,000,000 Animists, 4,000,000 Sikhs, Jains and Parsees, 730,000 Jews, and the remainder Polytheists and Idol worshippers.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT.—There is no fundamental law upon which the Constitution of the Empire rests, but there are three main principles underlying its administration, viz., self-government, self-support, and self-defence. The first of these principles has been applied for years, and is fully developed in the case of Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, The second principle is equally developed, almost every unit being financially self-supporting, and few requiring aid from the Imperial Government. The third principle is of modern growth, and may be said to be the outcome of the Imperial Conference (post).

SELF-GOVERNMENT.—(1) The United Kingdom.—The Constitution recognises certain great principles, including the fair administration of justice, the prohibition of taxation without the consent of the people, and a limited monarchy, the power of the monarch being, in effect, wielded by a Ministry supported by a majority of the House of Commons, the members of which House are elected on a wide franchise, exercised by electors of both sexes. The component parts of the British Government are the King; the Legislature (House of Lords and House of Commons); the Executive Ministry, appointed by the Sovereign and responsible to Parliament; and the Judicature. (See also p. 487).

(2) The Indian Empire.—India is governed by the King as Emperor, acting on the advice of the Secretary of State for India, who is assisted by a Council whose members are appointed by the Secretary of State. In certain matters the actions of the Secretary of State and Council are not valid unless sanctioned by Parliament. The Governor-General of India in Council (the Council, in this case, being the Council of the Governor-General) acts for executive purposes very much on the lines of the governing body of a Crown colony.

(3) Imperial Dominions.—All British dominions are subject (except as regards taxation) to the legislation of the British Parliament, but no Act of Parliament affects a dominion unless that dominion is specially mentioned. If the legislature of a dominion enacts a law which is repugnant to an Imperial law affecting the dominion, it is to the extent to which it is repugnant absolutely void. Dominion legislatures may be controlled by the refusal of the Governor's assent to any measure passed; by reservation of a measure for the consideration of the Crown, and refusal of the Crown's assent; by a suspension clause and the refusal of the Royal assent. Subject to such control the parliament of a self-governing dominion exercises within its borders all the ordinary powers of a sovereign assembly.

The Imperial Dominions may be divided into four classes, according to the way in which they are governed —

(a) Those having responsible government The executive is entrusted to political chiefs who are responsible not merely or mainly to the Crown but to the elected legislature The Dominions thus governed are Canada, Newfoundland Australia New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa.

(b) Where there is government by legislative assembly wholly or partly elected, and an executive council nominated by the Crown or the Governor representing the Crown In this class may be placed the Bahamas Barbados Bermuda British Guiana Jamaica, Leeward Islands, Mauritius and Malta.

(c) Where there is government by a Governor acting with an executive and a legislative council the majority of whose members being nominated by the Crown or a Governor representing the Crown Dominions so governed include Ceylon Falkland Islands Fiji Gambia St Vincent Sierra Leone Straits Settlements Trinidad

(d) Wherein both legislative and executive powers are vested in the Governor alone In this class are Gibraltar Labuan and St Helena where power is also reserved to the Crown to legislate by Order in Council In South Africa Bechuanaland Basutoland and Zululand are governed in substantially the same way but no power is reserved to the Crown

(e) Protectorates The protectorates are countries which as regards their foreign relations are under the exclusive control of the King Emperor The protectorates of the British Empire include Egypt British East Africa Somaliland Nyasaland, Uganda, Swaziland and Nigeria

(f) Spheres of Influence A sphere of influence may be described as an area wherein other Powers undertake not to attempt to acquire influence or territory by treaty or annexation such British spheres exist in the Persian Gulf and in Arabia In addition to the Spheres of Influence are

(g) Mandatory Spheres where the responsibility for securing good government and a reasonable development of natural resources is confided to an already established government by mandate from the League of Nations Such British spheres are parts of the former German Colonies in West Africa and the former Turkish governments of Palestine and Mesopotamia

SELF SUPPORT —With but few exceptions the Imperial Dominions are self-supporting revenue being raised locally to meet the expenditure Occasional grants are made by the Imperial Government to meet exceptional expenditure or in aid of administration in the earlier stages of development Certain capital expenses are also undertaken from time to time by the Central Authority, e.g. the Nigerian purchase the Uganda Railway, &c No taxes are imposed on the subjects of a Dominion or Colony by the Imperial Government as such subjects are not directly represented in the Imperial House of Commons this principle, "No taxation without representation" was the mainspring of the revolt in the North American Colonies at the close of the eighteenth century Since that disastrous attempt to impose taxes without the consent of the taxpayers, the principle, which has for many years been accepted in great Britain, has become an accepted maxim of British Overseas administration.

SELF-DEFENCE —The Dominions, generally, provide for the defence of their immediate area, but the general strategical defence of the Empire is undertaken by the Imperial Government Questions affecting the general strategical defence of the Empire are considered and determined by the Imperial Defence Committee, which co-ordinates the work of the sea and land forces of the Empire In the War of 1914 1918 all the Dominions provided Armies or Contingents which fought in every area and bore a full share of the sacrifices by which victory was achieved

THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE —The origin of the Imperial Conference may be traced to the presence in London (in 1887) of the Premiers of the various self governing Dominions representing their countries at the celebrations of the Jubilee of Queen Victoria Similar gatherings took place in 1897 1902 1907 and 1911 and in 1907 the title of "Colonial Conference was changed to Imperial Conference At the earlier meetings the Colonial Secretary presided but with the change of title additional importance was given to the assembly by the assumption of the Presidency by the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom In 1917 and 1918 the Conference was called the Imperial War Conference and was held under the Chairmanship of the Secretary of State for the Colonies The constitution of the Conference is as follows —

President The Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, Chairman (in the absence of the President) The Secretary of State for the Colonies

Members The Prime Ministers and other Ministers of Canada Australia New Zealand Union of South Africa, and Newfoundland the Secretary of State for India and other representatives of India Secretary Sir H C M Lambert K C M G C B Assistant do, C T Davis C.M.G, E J Harding C M G

THE LEGISLATURE —The Parliament of the United Kingdom is the supreme legislative authority of the Empire. This Parliament has with the consent of the King Emperor, delegated its legislative authority to other parliaments constituted by itself, while retaining a general supervision of Imperial affairs through the medium of the Colonial Office The Secretary of State for the Colonies is a Cabinet Minister has active participation in the government of the Imperial Dominions varying with the measure of self government accorded to them Parliament also exercises a control over Indian affairs through a Secretary of State (See also Self Government and "Imperial Conference, ante)

THE JUDICATURE —The Supreme Judicial Authority of the Empire is the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council before which appeals may be brought (in the form of a petition to the Crown) from Consular Courts and Courts of Vice Admiralty and from the Courts of India and every British Dominion The Committee (see p 267) consists of such members of the Privy Council as have held or are holding high judicial office, provision being made for the inclusion of representatives of India and the self governing Dominions. India and the Dominions have each a judicial system with judges appointed by the Crown The Supreme Judicial Authority for the United Kingdom is the House of Lords.

EDUCATION —Educational systems, on a more or less uniform plan, are developed throughout the Empire under the control of the respective governments. Universities and University Colleges have been established and degrees are conferred. Under the will of Cecil Rhodes scholarships were founded at various colleges of Oxford University. These Rhodes Scholarships are tenable for three years, are of the annual value of £300, and are open to scholars of each Province of Canada, of each State of Australia, of New Zealand, Newfoundland, Natal, Cape of Good Hope (4), Jamaica, and Bermuda. Each State of the U.S.A. has a similar nomination, and 15 scholarships, each of £250, were formerly in the nomination of the German Emperor, but this provision has since been rescinded by an Act of Parliament. Organising Secretary, Rhodes Scholarship Trust, Sir George Parkin, K.C.M.G., LL.D.

FINANCE.—Complete financial autonomy is enjoyed, in fact, by all British Dominions, and customs tariffs are in most cases the principal source of revenue. Until the close of the War of 1914-1918 the tariff of the United Kingdom was imposed without distinction on foreign and Imperial merchandise, but recent legislation foreshadows a general change of fiscal policy. The tariffs of the self-governing Dominions are generally lower for merchandise of British origin than for importations from foreign countries. There is no Imperial Debt, but certain obligations of Crown Colonies and Protectorates are met in the early stages of their development by the central Government, and occasional grants in aid of revenue are also made at need. In the Civil Service Estimates for 1920-21 the following "Grants in Aid of Local Revenues" were included:—Weihaiwei, £7,900 (an increase of £3,900 over 1918-19); Somaliland, £103,000, including £20,000 for the investigation of oil deposits (increase of £20,000); St. Helena, £3,800 (decrease of £4,200); Uganda, an instalment of annuities in repayment of advances under the Railway Act, £319,112; and Cyprus, £50,000.

PRODUCTION.—In 1913 the wheat crop of the world was about 452,200,000 quarters, of which 33,750,000 quarters were produced in the British Empire. India, Canada, Australia, the United Kingdom, and Egypt are the principal wheat-producing units, and Mesopotamia (with irrigation) has great potentialities. Barley, oats and maize, and tea, coffee and rubber are largely cultivated. Cane sugar is produced in India (for local consumption), West Indies, Australasia, Natal, and Mauritius, and beet sugar in Canada and elsewhere. Australia and New Zealand are the greatest wool-producing countries of the world, and the output of coal in the United Kingdom exceeds that of every country except the U.S.A. Cotton is extensively grown in India (4,827,000 bales of 400 lb. in 1916-17), Egypt (632,000 bales), and its cultivation is increasing elsewhere—West Africa (11,900 bales in 1917), East Africa (30 700 bales), Sudan (23,000 bales), and West Indies (3,000 bales). Iron ore is found in many of the Dominions, and pig iron is largely produced; tin is produced mainly within the Empire (particularly in the Malay peninsula), while more than half the world's supply of gold is drawn from South and South-West Africa and Australasia; it is produced also in Borneo, British East Africa, British Guiana, Canada, Ceylon, India, Malay States, Sarawak, Sudan, and West Africa. Precious stones are found in various parts of the Empire, South Africa being the principal supply of diamonds, and India of rubies and emeralds. Petroleum is produced in India (8,500,000 barrels of 42 gallons in 1917), Trinidad (1,600,000 barrels), Egypt (1,000,000 barrels), and Canada (200,000 barrels) and there are vast resources available at Mosul (Mesopotamia) and in the neighbourhood of the Persian Gulf.

EXTERNAL TRADE.—The Imports of all Nations were valued in 1914 at £3,500,000,000 to £3,750,000,000, and their Exports at £3,000,000,000 to £3,400,000,000, the difference in the totals being made up by the value of services rendered in transport and insurance.. The value of the earnings of British Mercantile Shipping in carrying merchandise exchanged by the various nations is stated to amount to £350,000,000, or even higher, for the year 1919. Before the War the value was generally reckoned at about £150,000,000. The total trade of the British Empire in 1919 was valued at £4,300,000,000 (Imports £2,400,000,000; Exports £1,900,000,000). The United Kingdom (Imports £1,632,000,000, Exports £970,000,000 — Total £2,602,000,000), India (£297,000,000, exclusive of bullion and specie), Canada (£449,000,000), Australia (£200,000,000), New Zealand (£52,000,000), South Africa (£82,000,000, exclusive of bullion and specie), and Egypt (£100,000,000) are the principal trading units of the Empire.

SHIPPING.—On June 30, 1915, there were 11,353 vessels (over 100 tons) flying the British flag, of which total 9,285 were registered in the United Kingdom and 2,068 in other parts of the Empire. These figures include 10,218 steam vessels of 20,830,918 tons (U.K., 8,675 vessels of 19,235,705 tons; Dominions, 1,543 vessels of 1,595,213 tons) and 1,135 sailing vessels of 443,150 tons (U.K., 610 vessels of 305,663 tons; Dominions, 525 vessels of 137,487 tons). In the War of 1914-1918 there were lost through enemy action 2,774 merchant vessels of 9,538,918 gross tonnage, of this total 2,197 (7,638,020 tons) were British, 238 (696,845 tons) French, 230 (742,365 tons) Italian, 29 (120,176 tons) Japanese, and 80 (341,512 tons) U.S.A. In 1915-1918 merchant vessels (over 100 tons) of 11,274,000 gross tons were launched by Allied countries and others not at war with them, the British tonnage so launched being 3,703,000 gross tons. On Sept. 30, 1920, the gross tonnage of steamships under construction in all the shipyards of the world was 7,565,000 tons, of which 3,731,000 were building in British and 1,772,000 in American shipyards. On June 30, 1920, the gross tonnage of steamships of the Mercantile Marine of the United Kingdom was 18,111,000 tons. In 1919 20 the number of all steamships under all flags fitted for oil fuel was 426, with a gross tonnage of 1,995,780 tons, an increase of 215 ships (802,630 gross tons) over 1918-19; in addition many ships were built (or under construction) with oil engines as the propelling power.

TOWNS.—Capital, London (England). Population (1911), 4,522,961 (with suburbs, 7,252,963).

At the Census of 1911 there were in the British Empire 3 cities with over 1,000,000 inhabitants, 9 with 500,000 to 1,000,000 (see p. 103), and 82 others with over 100,000 inhabitants. Of these 94 cities 50 were in the United Kingdom (England 42, Wales 3, Scotland 4, Ireland 2), 29 India, 4 Canada, 4 Australia, 2 Egypt, and 1 each in New Zealand, South Africa, Ceylon, Hong

Religion and Languages.

The inhabitants of the United Kingdom are almost entirely Christians, and mainly Protestants, the exceptions being 5 million Roman Catholics (principally in Ireland), 250,000 Jews, and a small number of non-Christian immigrants. In England the Church of England (with an Episcopal form of Government), and in Scotland the Church of Scotland (with a Presbyterian form of Government), are the "Established Religions." The Church was disestablished in Ireland in 1869, and in Wales in 1920. There has been no religious census since 1851, but many of the religious bodies publish estimates of membership. The language of the people is English, with a large proportion of Welsh-speaking people in Wales, many of whom are bi-lingual. Attempts have been made, under Sinn Fein auspices, to revive the Gaelic language in Ireland. Gaelic is still spoken in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland.

* The total of Emigrants from 1904-9 includes only those of British and Irish nationality. The total number of Emigrants of all nationalities to places out of Europe from 1853-1919 is 19,588,045 (17,790,764 of British and Irish and 1,797,281 of foreign nationality). From 1815-1852 the total number of emigrants from the United Kingdom was 3,463,332.

CENSUS POPULATION OF THE BRITISH ISLES

Previous to 1801 there existed no official return of the population of either England or Scotland, nor was it till 1813 that statesmen had anything more than surmise to guide them respecting Ireland, and the census then taken of that country was far from correct. The estimate formed of the English population at various periods, calculated from the numbers of baptisms, burials, and marriages, was in the years—

1570	4,160,221	1670	5,773,646
1600	4,811,718	1700	6,045,008
1630	5 600,517	1750	6,517,035

The first general Census of the United Kingdom was taken in 1801, and since the time named there has been a fresh numbering every ten years, with the following results:

1801	16,345,646	1861	29,321,288
1811	18,509,116	1871	31,845,279
1821	21,272,187	1881	35,241,482
1831	24,392,485	1891	38.104,975
1841	27,036,450	1901	41 976,827
1851	27,724,056	1911	45,370,530†

 The population of the United Kingdom a month before the outbreak of the War of 1914-1918 was officially estimated at 46,089,249. The number of persons to the square mile was in 1911 England and Wales, 618 0, Scotland, 256 5, Ireland, 135 6.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT

THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION.—The British Constitution is mainly unwritten and customary but its development is marked by certain outstanding and fundamental laws, of which the principal are Magna Carta (1215) the Habeas Corpus Act (1679) the Act of Settlement (1701), the Act of Union with Scotland (1707), the Act of Union with Ireland (1800) and the Parliament Act (1911). The first secured annual parliaments and the equal administration of justice, the second established the liberty of the person, the third provided for the Protestant succession to the throne the fourth and fifth created the United Kingdom and the last enabled the Commons to pass certain Acts without the adherence of the other Chamber. The constituent parts of the British Constitution may be thus briefly described.

1. The Sovereign.—The throne is hereditary in the English house of Windsor with mixed succession the sons of the Sovereign and their descendants having precedence of daughters but daughters and their descendants preference over late al lines. The Monarchy is constitutional and limited. The King has a right to veto Bills passed by both Houses of Parliament but in practice his veto is almost obsolete.

The King can do no wrong is a maxim of the Constitution and consequently no action for civil wrong will lie against the Crown. A petition of right however will generally enable an injured subject to obtain redress while if in the administration of an Act of Parliament a Government department exceeds its rights, a declaration of right may be obtained in an action against the Attorney General.

2. The Legislature.—Parliament consists of two houses the Lords and the Commons.

(a) The House of Lords consists of peers. A peer may hold his seat by (1) hereditary right (2) creation by the King (3) official position or election. English bishops (24) Irish peers (28) elected for life and Scottish peers (16) elected for duration of Parliament also sit in the House of Lords.

The powers of the House of Lords were much restricted by the Parliament Act 1911. Thus if a Money Bill is not passed unamended by the House of Lords within a month of its being sent up it become law upon the Royal assent being notified. A Public Bill other than a Money Bill will become law without the consent of the Lords if it is passed by the Commons and sent up to the Lords in three successive sessions provided two years elapse between the date of the second reading in the Commons in the first session and the date when it is passed by that body in the third session. Passing a Bill with amendments by the House of Lords is equivalent to rejection unless the Commons approve the amendments. Any bill by which the maximum duration of Parliament is increased is excepted from this Act. Members of the House of Lords are unpaid.

(b) The House of Commons.—This body consists of 707 members elected by the registered male and female electors in county borough and university constituencies. Roughly speaking about one third of the population are electors. The maximum duration of Parliament is five years. Members of the House of Commons receive annual salaries of £400.

(3) The Executive.—The Crown (the King in Council) makes peace and war, issues charters, increases the peerage, is the fountain of honour, of office, and of justice. The Cabinet, under the presidency of the Prime Minister consists of Ministers, drawn from the ranks of the party in power and appointed by the Sovereign on the advice of the Prime Minister. Ministers receive salaries of varying amounts (see page 207). The Cabinet has no corporate existence. Ministers are severally responsible to Parliament for their actions, and the Cabinet as a whole is responsible to Parliament for its joint and several administration. Ministers hold their office during the Sovereign's pleasure, they may be dismissed at any moment.

4. The Judicature.—(a) England and Wales.—The laws in England and Wales are administered by judges appointed by the Crown, who hold office for life and cannot be removed save on petition presented by both Houses of Parliament. Two Courts of Appeal hear appeals from the High Court the ultimate Court of Appeal from all the courts in the United Kingdom being the House of Lords. Civil cases arising in London and Middlesex are tried at the High Court in London but civil cases arising in the country are tried on circuit by judges of the King's Bench (Assizes). The Chancery division has exclusive jurisdiction to try certain classes of actions. To the County Courts is relegated the duty of trying actions where the sum in dispute does not exceed a certain amount. The County Courts too have jurisdiction to try cases arising under certain special Acts of Parliament e.g., the Workmen's Compensation Act. Bankruptcy cases arising in London are heard in the London Bankruptcy Court those arising out of London are dealt with in the County Courts.

With regard to criminal law it is a general principle that except for certain minor offences, every person charged is entitled to be tried by a jury. Courts of criminal jurisdiction in England are (1) the judges of the High Court sitting at Assizes for the trial of cases out of London, and at the Central Criminal Court ("The Old Bailey," see p. 555) for the trial of cases arising in and around London (2) Courts of Quarter Sessions, holden for every county and formed of justices of the peace presided over by a chairman who is unpaid. The recorders of certain cities and boroughs have a jurisdiction similar to that of courts of Quarter Sessions. (3) Courts of Petty Sessions consisting of at least two justices of the peace or a stipendiary magistrate. (4) The Court of Criminal Appeal has power to hear appeals against convictions and sentences.

(b) Scotland.—Scots civil law is administered by the Court of Session, which is a court of law and equity. The High Court of Justiciary is the supreme criminal court in Scotland. It consists of all the judges, and as a rule it is confined to the trial of serious cases. The Sheriff of the county (see p. 530) exercises functions which correspond to those of the English County Court Judges and of the Chairmen of Quarter Sessions. Burgh magistrates and justices of the peace have jurisdiction in petty

(c) Ireland.—The higher courts in Ireland are very similar to the English courts, but the County Court Judges are also the Chairmen of Quarter Sessions and there are Resident (stipendiary) Magistrates (see p. 539) who have jurisdiction in petty cases.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Local Government is carried out under the central control of the Ministry of Health (which superseded the various Local Government Boards in 1919). The subjects which local bodies administer are, inter alia the poor law; the laws relating to public health; the maintenance of the police; the control of the sale of intoxicating liquors; the provision of lunatic asylums. Local authorities also have to administer and carry into effect the laws as to elementary and other schools. The ruling principle has been to entrust special interests to those specially interested. In England and Wales there are elective Councils for each County (under Chairmen), for each City and County Borough (under Lord Mayors or Mayors), and for Urban and Rural Districts (under Chairmen), every parish being thus included. Scotland has elective County Councils under a Convener, Burgh Councils under a Lord Provost or Provost, and the Parish Councils with Chairmen. Ireland has a more elaborate system of local government than Great Britain with popularly elected Councils for Counties, Boroughs, and Rural Districts, the municipalities having Lord Mayors or Mayors.

POLICE.

The authorized strength of the Police force on Sept. 29, 1916, was 55,657 in England and Wales, 5,953 in Scotland, and 10,887 in Ireland. The Police of England and Wales are administered by the Home Office, those of Scotland by the Scottish Office, and those of Ireland by the Irish Secretary's Office. The LONDON POLICE consists of the City Police and of the Metropolitan Police. The City Police district comprises an area of 675 statute acres, and contains two courts of justice, those of the Guildhall and Mansion House, where the Lord Mayor and the rateable value is enormous, and there are 19,657 night residents. The Force comprises a Assistant Sergeants, and 1,006 Constables; also 22 Constables on private service duty. The cost of the maintenance of the City Police in 1919-1920 was £370,202 (in 1891 the cost was £120,460).

The Metropolitan Police district embraces an area of 447,626 statute acres, with a population of about seven millions. There are within this area fourteen Police Courts, viz., Bow Street, Clerkenwell, North London, Lambeth, Marlborough Street, Marylebone, Old Street, Thames, Tower Bridge, Westminster, West London, Greenwich and Woolwich, South Western, and West Ham (see p. 274). The Force on Oct. 16, 1920, consisted of 40 Superintendents, 689 Inspectors, 3,071 Sergeants, and 17,809 Constables, making a total of 21,609, with 301 horses. The strength of the Metropolitan Special Constabulary Reserve and its Auxiliary Force on Sept. 30, 1920, was 12,663. The cost of the maintenance of the Metropolitan Police in 1919-1920 was £6,445,511 (the fines at Metropolitan Police Courts reduced the gross amount by £38,499). On March 31, 1920, there were 10,388 Police pensioners, of whom 530 were over 75 years of age.

For the Women's Division of the Metropolitan [illegible] (All Ranks) in 1920, see pp. [illegible] of the Board of Admiralty).

The Royal Navy (see pp. 275-9) is recruited by voluntary enlistment, and is administered by the "Commissioners for executing the office of [illegible]gh Admiral of the United Kingdom."

The Army (see pp. 280-4) is recruited by voluntary enlistment in normal times, but was raised to the requirements of the War by the [illegible] administered [illegible] bership to

The Royal Air Force (see pp. 285-6) is recruited by voluntary enlistment, and is administered by the Air Ministry.

EDUCATION.

I.—ELEMENTARY.

Statutes require parents in England and Wales to cause their children to receive efficient elementary instruction or to attend school from 5 to 14 years of age; in Scotland, to provide efficient education up to 15 years; in Ireland, to cause their children to attend school from 6 to 14 years.

In order to give effect to these requirements Local Authorities are empowered to make free provision for school accommodation, attendance of pupils and teaching-staffs, whilst the State supplies nearly one-half of the maintenance funds conditionally upon receipt of satisfactory reports from government inspectors appointed by the Board of Education for England and Wales, by the Committee of Council on Education for Scotland, and by the Commissioners for National Education in Ireland. In 1916 attendance was not enforced in 27 per cent. of the Urban Districts and Towns, and in 43 per cent. of the Rural Districts It may be remarked—(i) that there is no definition of "school" in the Acts, (ii) that efficiency of instruction given is not tested except in publicly managed schools, (iii.) that Local Authority schools increase in number though still fewer than voluntary (non provided) schools The latter are maintained by the Authorities whilst the responsibility for the buildings remains with the foundation managers Of such schools there are about 33 000 in all including some designed for particular purposes e.g., Higher Elementary and Central for older pupils special for 'defectives' and the like

Teachers number 200 000 women preponderating Except in cotland there is a considerable proportion of teachers who are not fully qualified The war has lessened the number of male teachers which was already diminishing State grants for pensions on a more liberal scale than formerly are now offered under the Superannuation Act of 1918 by which it is hoped to render the profession more attractive

Twenty per cent of the population are of the pupil age School life is over in the great majority of cases after about seven years of schooling the minority proceeding to some other kind of day school Recent legislation requires Local Authorities in England Wales and Scotland to make schemes for consideration by the Board of Education to provide suitable practical instruction to give advanced instruction to those pupils who stay beyond 14 and to improve the facilities towards preparing pupils for higher education and the teaching profession also nursery schools for children under five

Elementary school education includes teaching in practical matters—needlework drawing gardening handicrafts cookery etc—and the sections upon health medical attendance physical training evening play centres, home study future employment, etc, show that the schools are valuable agencies in child welfare generally

II.—Education Beyond Elementary

The Education Act 1918 has in view powers for compulsory and therefore free education of a continuative kind in part time day schools up to 16 and ultimately 18 years and implies free secondary education of some type hereafter

Secondary

The aims method and instructions are in marked contrast to the comparative simplicity of those in Elementary Education In all the four countries it is now felt that although technical instruction was the first branch to be promoted by statute undifferentiated 4 year secondary (intermediate) courses should be gone through before pupils proceed to specialisation for industrial commercial, etc employments

(i.) England.—The number of Secondary schools deemed efficient by the Board is 1 073 containing 243 000 pupils of whom about one fourth come up from elementary schools with 'free places' others with scholarships Nine tenths of these schools receive State grants and nearly one third are controlled by Local Authorities Fees are charged to most of the pupils Most secondary schools are over full Of these 'efficient' schools about 40 per cent receive boarders (about 27,000) in varying proportions and drawn in many cases from distant areas Most of them are endowed or under trusts, and their trust incomes and property form a considerable asset in secondary school finance. The Authorities aim at securing graduate Teachers as far as possible As in Elementary schools there is a shortage of fully qualified teachers, but the recent Act for providing Pensions for School Teachers may be expected to make the posts more attractive.

(ii.) Wales.—The system is much the same as in England though the schools are under earlier statutory provisions and are called 'Intermediate' in many cases The number of efficient schools was (in 1914) 122 and of pupils 22 000 girls preponderating Three per cent of the schools do not receive government grants and 81 per cent were provided by the Local Authorities In Wales there is a Central Welsh Board,

(iii.) Scotland Intermediate and Secondary Schools.—Three kinds of courses are provided 'Higher Grade and Intermediate with post Intermediate The former are taken in 196 schools by 33 000 pupils and the latter in 56 schools by 20,000 pupils All are under the same Commissioners and Local Authorities as are the Elementary schools

(iv.) Ireland.—Intermediate Education is under a Special Board who have recently gained fresh statutory powers and a State grant analogous to those in force elsewhere in the United Kingdom Up to 1917 their operations were chiefly examinational though grants for inspection results had already been authorised and are made Their report (1917) contains reference to schools in so far as their pupils (11 000) were presented for examination It seems that 346 schools were affected with some 12 000 pupils There are also Commissioners of Education in Ireland whose powers are confined to certain endowed schools (800 pupils) mostly in Ulster

Technical

Technical Education in England and Wales is provided in Evening and similar schools (mostly controlled by Local Authorities) 3 143 in number and attended by 417 148 students on whom State grants are paid and of whom about one half are under 17 years of age The average attendance of a student is about 50 hours per annum There are also Teachers Courses (294) Tutorial Classes (100) Technical Institution Courses (24), with 1 169 part time day students Day Technical Classes (127) held in 38 Institutions with 97 295 students on whom State grants are paid and also 151 Schools of Art, 19 Branch Schools of Art and 49 Art Classes

In Scotland Technical Education is provided in like manner but in Ireland by a Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction

Training

Training is provided by the State for Elementary School Teachers of whom 50 per cent have been trained in Colleges having nearly 13 000 places Slight progress has been made lately towards providing for the Training of Teachers for Secondary Schools a small annual State grant being made for the purpose

Universities

There are 18 Universities in the United Kingdom of which 10 are in England 4 in Scotland, 1 in Wales and 3 in Ireland (pp 301 6) and 4 independent University Colleges Most of these Universities and University Colleges receive State grants in respect of technical and professional work under the Board of Education Regulations. The Acts of 1918 empower Local Authorities to give aid to University work There are 30,000 full time students at these Universities and Colleges

FINANCE.

The Revenue and Expenditure of the United Kingdom for the six years ended March 31, 1920, are stated as follows:—

Year.	Revenue.	Expenditure.
1914–15	£370,328,000	£1,132,654,000
1915–16	336,767,000	1,559,706,000

The Budget, 1920–1921.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer introduced, on April 19, his Budget for the financial year April 1, 1920 to March 31, 1921. The final balance-sheet, after allowing for the changes in taxation, summarised below, shows a total estimated Revenue of £1,418,300,000, a total expected Expenditure of £1,184,102,000, and a Balance for Debt Reduction of £234,198,000.

Changes in Taxation.

Excess Profits Duty.—Increased from 40 to 60 per cent. as from Jan. 1, 1920. If a war levy on profits be imposed the increase of 20 per cent. is to be cancelled.

Companies' Profits.—A special tax of 1s. in the £ on profits of limited liability companies after the first £500.

Motors.—The existing tax of 6*d.* a gallon on motor spirit and the present licence duties on motor cars and cycles abolished as from Jan. 1, 1921, and the following system of taxation substituted:—Motor cars and cycles used for town purposes to pay a new scale of duty according to weight; vehicles used as hackney carriages to pay by seating capacity; private motor cars to pay £1 per horse-power unit or part of unit, with a minimum of £6.

Alcoholic Liquors.—Duties on spirits increased from 50s. to 72s. 6*d.* the proof gallon. Beer duty raised from 70s. to 100s. the standard barrel. Wine duties doubled, and sparkling wines to pay 40 per cent. ad valorem.

Cigars.—A 50 per cent. surtax ad valorem on imported cigars.

Income and Super Taxes. Income tax standard rate of 6s. in the £ unchanged, but proposals by Royal Commission adopted for differentiation and graduation. Super-tax exemption limit lowered from £2,500 to £2,000, and rates increased up to a maximum of 6s. in the £ on a graduated scale. Scheme for permanent relief from payment of double income tax on the same income within the British Empire.

Stamps.—Companies' registration duty increased from 5s. to £1 per cent. Duties on transfer of stocks and shares doubled. Stamps on receipts and scrip certificates increased from 1*d.* to 2*d.* Duty on fire, accident, sickness, and indemnity policies raised from 1*d.* to 6*d.* The scale of ad. valorem duties on sea insurances increased.

Land Values.—Duties repealed.

Postage.—On inland letters 2*d.* for 3 ounces and ½*d.* per additional ounce (present rate 1½*d.* for 4 ounces). On newspapers, 1*d.* up to 6 ounces, and ½*d.* on additional 6 ounces.

Telegram:—Twelve words for 1s., additional words 1*d.* each.

Telephones.—Rates to be increased when Select Committee report.

THE INCOME TAX

Under the Finance Act of 1920 a radical alteration has been made in the method of granting relief in the Income Tax in favour of earned income as compared with investment income, and in the method of graduating the burden of the tax according to the size of a tax payer's income and his family responsibilities The previously existing exemptions abatements and reliefs are replaced by the various reliefs set out below In introducing the new system, the Act employs two terms not previously used in connection with the Income Tax viz, "assessable income and taxable income

"Assessable Income means, in the case of "earned income, the amount of such income as computed for Income Tax purposes, after deducting the amount of the "earned income allowance mentioned below and in the case of other income the actual amount of such income as computed for Income Tax purposes

Taxable Income means that part of the assessable income upon which Income Tax is actually charged that is the 'assessable income less the various deductions referred to below

Deduction in arriving at Assessable Income Earned Income Allowance—The differentiation in favour of earned income is made not as heretofore by reducing the rate of tax charge able upon such income as compared with investment income but by deducting one tenth of the earned income in order to arrive at the assessable income The deduction is given irrespective of the amount of the total income but must not exceed £200 for any one individual The assessable income of a taxpayer is therefore his total income, as computed for Income Tax purposes after making the appropriate deduction in respect of any earned income

Total Exemption—Exemption from tax may be claimed where the total assessable income does not exceed £135 or in the case of an individual whose wife is living with him £225 Where the income is wholly earned these limits are equivalent to £150 and £250 respectively See above

Deductions from Assessable Income in order to arrive at Taxable Income—Where the taxpayer is not totally exempt the following deductions may be claimed from the total assessable income in order to arrive at the taxable income The deductions may be claimed irrespective of the amount of the taxpayer's total income

Personal allowance may be claimed of £135 or in the case of an individual whose wife is living with him £225

Wife's Earned Income—When a taxpayer's total income includes any earned income of his wife the personal allowance of £225 is increased by a sum equal to nine tenths of the amount of such earned income subject to a maximum additional allowance of £45

Deduction for a Widower's (or Widow's) House keeper taking Charge of Children.—A deduction of £45 may be claimed, under certain conditions, by a widower who has living with him a female relative for the purpose of having the charge and care of any child or adopted child of his in respect of whom the deduction for children (see below) is given or by a widow who has a female relative resident with her for the like purpose

If the widower or widow proves that he or she has no such female relative who is able or willing to take such charge, the same deduction may be claimed in respect of some other female person employed for that purpose

Deduction in respect of Widowed Mother, &c., taking Charge of Children—A deduction of £45 may be claimed, under certain conditions by an Unmarried Person who has living with him and maintains at his own expense either his mother (being a widow or living apart from her husband) or some other female relative for the purpose of having the charge and care of any brother or sister of his in respect of whom the deduction for children or adopted children (see below) is given.

Deduction for Children—A deduction may be claimed in respect of each child, step-child, or adopted child under the age of 16 years or who if over that age, is receiving full time instruction at any university college school or other educational establishment The deduction allowable is £36 in respect of one child, and £27 in respect of each additional child for whom the relief is due

No deduction is however allowed in respect of any child or adopted child who is entitled in his or her own right to an income which after excluding any income to which the child is entitled as the holder of a scholarship bursary, or other similar educational endowment, exceeds £40 a year

Deduction in respect of Dependent Relatives—A deduction of £25 may be claimed in respect of (a) any person whom the taxpayer maintains at his own expense, and who is a relative of his or of his wife, and incapacitated by old age or infirmity from maintaining himself or herself or (b) his or his wife's widowed mother whether incapacitated or not or (c) a daughter who is resident with the taxpayer and upon whose services he is compelled to depend, by reason of old age or infirmity

The deduction under (a) or (b) is conditional however upon the income of the dependent relative not exceeding £50 a year The deduction applies in the case of a female taxpayer with the substitution of 'husband for 'wife above

Rates of Tax chargeable on the "Taxable Income"—The following provisions as to the rates of tax chargeable on the taxable income (i.e. that part of the income on which tax is actually charged) apply whatever the total amount of the income The first £225 of the taxable income is chargeable at half the standard rate of tax, i.e., for the year ending April 5 1921 at 3*s* in the £ The remainder of the taxable income is chargeable at the standard rate of tax i.e. at 6*s* in the £

Relief in respect of Life Assurance Premiums—Where allowance is due in respect of premiums paid for Life Assurance or for contracts for Deferred Annuities the allowance is deducted from the amount of tax arrived at under the preceding paragraph, and calculated at following rates —3*s* in the £ on the amount of the premium paid on policies taken out since June 22, 1916, irrespective of the claimant's total income and on policies taken out before June 22, 1916, a deduction of 3*s* in the £ is allowed on the premiums paid by a claimant whose income does not exceed £1,000, of 4*s* 6*d* in the £ where his income exceeds £1,000 and does not exceed £2,000, and of 6*s* in the £ where his income exceeds £2,000

THE DEBT OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

The National Debt was raised almost entirely for foreign wars. There was a trifling sum of £664,263 until the "Glorious Revolution" of 1688, which added nearly £16,000,000 to the Debt. Under Queen Anne the campaigns of the Duke of Marlborough added nearly £38,000,000, part of which was paid off in the time of George I. In the reign of George II about £87,000,000 were added, but the first twelve years of George III saw £10,000,000 of this paid off. The American War added £121,000,000, making the total nearly £250,000,000, which was reduced considerably until 1793, when the repayments ceased owing to the outbreak of the French Revolutionary War. In twenty three years, £601,500,343 were added to the debt for the purposes of the war, the following amounts being raised:

Year	£	Year	£	Year	£

1800	23,030,520	1808	12,095,044	1816	514,059

The amount of the Debt in January 1816, was £900,436,000 (Funded, £816,312,000; Unfunded, £44,727,000; Annuities, £39,397,000), the annual charge being nearly £33,000,000, but the following amounts were paid off from 1817–1837:

Fisheries.

The quantities and values of the fish landed in the United Kingdom (excluding shellfish and river salmon) were as under in 1914 and 1919. In 1914 shellfish to the value of £401,812 were landed, and in 1919 the value was £691,067. The values of the 1919 catch are still inflated as compared with pre-war figures, but the average value per ton has declined as compared with 1918. The United Kingdom quantities have increased, being practically level with 1914 and nearly double 1918. The quantities for Scotland are still below 1914, but those for England and Wales are slightly above, while those for Ireland have materially improved.

Forestry.

In 1915 the estimated area of the forests and plantations (land planted with trees within the preceding 10 years) in the United Kingdom was 3,098,000 acres, of which 1,730,000 acres were in England, 188,000 acres in Wales, 880,000 acres in Scotland, and 300,000 acres in Ireland. Grants for the development of forestry are made by the Treasury, under the advice of the "Development Commissioners" appointed in 1910. Before the War of 1914-18 the United Kingdom imported annually about 10,000,000 tons of timber, valued at about £27,000,000. Of this total, over 85 per cent. consisted of light pine and fir from Russia, Sweden, Norway and Canada. There are in the United Kingdom over 10,000,000 acres of waste land, and about 12,000,000 acres of mountain and heath land, used for light grazing. It is estimated that less than one-third of this total of 22,000,000 acres, if put under trees which can be grown in the country, would supply 95 per cent. of the total requirements, leaving only 5 per cent. (timber which cannot be grown in the British Islands) to be imported from abroad.

MINERAL PRODUCTION OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

The quantity and value of the principal minerals won in 1914 and 1918 are shown in the following table. The total value (at the mines and quarries) of all minerals won in 1914 was £ 5,163,032 and in 1918 the value had increased to £ 5,257,079,792, with a greatly diminished out. The total number of persons employed in 1918 at the 3,275 mines in work was 1,029,688, of whom 807,086 (males) were employed underground, and 210,841 males and 11,761 females above ground. In the 4,362 quarries, 43,215 persons were permanently employed; of these, 27,917 (284 females) worked inside the quarries and 15,298 (548 females) outside the quarries.

The United States is the only country to show an increase over the pre-War figures. After dropping from 517 million tons in 1913 to 466 million and 482 million tons in the following years, the production rose to 535 million tons in 1916, 591 million tons in 1917, and 621 million tons in 1918. In 1919 (owing to the great strike) the production of the U.S.A. fell to 494 million tons. In 1919 the coal production of the United Kingdom showed an increase over that of 1918 of 2,030,863 tons. In the first three-quarters of 1920 the production was 62,103,000 tons (1,188,500 persons employed), 58 166,000 tons (1,200,300) and 59,467,000 (1,207,800), a total of 179,736,000 tons for the nine months to Sept. 30, 1920.

Coal Exports of the U.K.

The value of coal, coke, and patent fuel exported in various years is shown below. Coal bunkered by ships in the foreign and coastwise trade (21,031,550 tons in 1913 and 12,021,242 tons in 1919) and Admiralty shipments of coal (34,500,000 tons in 1918) are not included in these figures. Before the War of 1914-1918 the value of the coal consumed by the ships of the Royal Navy was about £2,500,000 annually. Oil has taken the place of coal in most of the recently built ships.

Iron Ore

The production and importation of iron ore are as shown below. Values are not shown as that of iron ore produced in the United Kingdom is taken at the place of production, while the value of imported ore is enhanced by transport and handling to the port of entry. The value of the iron ore produced in the United Kingdom in 1918 is stated at £7 106,656, that of the imported ore at £13 441 225 of which 4 272 905 tons (£8 320 411) came from Spain.

Pig Iron

The quantity of ore smelted and pig iron made is shown below. In 1905 the quantity of coal used in the manufacture of pig iron was 19 255 555 tons, in 1918 the quantity was 2 636 840 tons of coal and 11 286 680 tons of coke. In 1905 there were 345 blast furnaces at work and in 1918 they numbered 318.

The classes of wool grown are divided into three groups, viz., merino wool for clothing, crossbred for clothing, and low wool (mainly used for carpets, rugs, etc.). The approximate proportion of these classes is 1,074,000,000 lb merino, 2,033,200,000 lb crossbred, and 700,000,000 lb low wool.

The British Empire produced 63 per cent. of all merino wool grown, 40 per cent. of all crossbred, and 9 per cent. of carpet wools, 40 per cent. of the last named being produced by Russia.

Textiles Industries of U.K.

The cotton and woollen industries of Great Britain are centred on the coalfields; the linen industry is centred mainly at Belfast and Dundee. Leicester, Nottingham and Derby are the chief seats of the hosiery manufactures, and Nottingham, Derby and Kilmarnock of the lace industry. The cotton industry depends entirely upon imports and consumed over 750 000 000 lb of imported cotton in 1918; the woollen industry consumed about 330 000 000 lb of wool, of which about one third was produced in the United Kingdom; the linen industry consumed about 80 000 000 lb of flax, of which almost one half was home grown. The total value of the textiles produced is not stated, but the value of those exported in 1919 is given in the Trade Returns of the United Kingdom at £204 173 178 for cottons, £33 907 909 for cotton yarn, £6 398 051 for jute yarn and manufactures, £82 240 476 for woollens and worsteds, £3 398 024 for silks and U.K. Cotton Imports 1913–1919.

The total imports of raw cotton in 1919 amounted to 19 582,867 centals of 100 lb., of which 14 536 289 centals were from foreign countries and 5 046 578 centals from British Dominions.

Other Industries.

The Metal Industries are next in importance to textiles. Engineering and metal working centres are generally speaking in the neighbourhood of the coalfields, particularly on the N.E. coast at Barrow in Furness and at Sheffield, London, Crewe, Swindon, Derby, Southampton, Birmingham and Coventry in England, on the Clyde in Scotland, and in Belfast, Ireland. The Leather Industry is important at Bristol, Leicester, Northampton and Nottingham. Earthen and China Ware in the Pottery District on the South Staffordshire coalfields where there are supplies also of coarse clay and no stone, the China Clay (kaolin) being brought from Cornwall or imported from abroad. Paper making (which also absorbs China Clay), Printing, and Brewing are also of general importance and Distilling is a considerable industry in Scotland and Ireland.

Trade Union Membership.

At the end of 1918 the 1,220 British trade unions had a membership of 6 624 000 as compared with 5 547 000 at the end of 1917, an increase of 19 per cent. The women membership increased by a third and stood at about 1 250 000 and the membership of agricultural labourers was more than doubled. The recently formed unions include 200,000 teachers in elementary and secondary schools. The principal unions are contained in the List of Societies, pp. 342–6.

TRADE OF THE UNITED KINGDOM (MERCHANDISE ONLY).

In statistics of Trade, the term GENERAL TRADE refers to the whole volume of Imports (including such as are temporarily detained and afterwards exported), and to the whole volume of Exports. The term SPECIAL TRADE includes only Imports for consumption in the country receiving them, and Exports of home produce or manufacture. In the first of the following tables the General Trade is shown for a period of twenty years and the Special Trade for a similar period, showing the 'apparent" balance of Imports over Exports. Subsequent tables show the various quantities and values of the merchandise exchanged during the year 1919.

The balance of Imports over Exports is not the true balance on account of the system of valuation in official returns, the Imports being taken at their CIF value (which includes the Cost of the merchandise and the charges for Insurance and Freight), whereas the Exports are taken at their FOB (free on board) value, which includes only the Cost of the merchandise delivered on the exporting ship. Such Exports have an added value by the time they reach their destination, having become loaded en route with Insurance and Freight. They leave the country with an FOB value and arrive at their destination with an acquired CIF value.

COMMUNICATIONS

The total mileage of public roads in the United Kingdom is approximately 240,000 miles, of which 190,000 are in England and Wales, 26,000 in Scotland, and 60,000 in Ireland The annual cost of maintenance is about £25,000,000

The maintenance and repair of bridges and main roads is within the jurisdiction of the County Authorities in each Division of the United Kingdom, other roads being maintained by Borough, Urban, Rural, and Parish Councils The increase of motor traction and the consequent use of highways by other than county or district residents has led to a movement in favour of the nationalisation of the highways A Development Fund (for which a sum of £1 000 000 was allocated in 1919–20) was formed in 1910 for the creation and improvement of highways, and for the improvement of rural transport (the sum of £8,250,000 was allocated to the Road Improvement Fund in 1919–20) Under the Act of 1919 the functions and duties of the Road Board were transferred to the Ministry of Transport, which now controls all matters previously dealt with by the Road Board

Railways

On Dec 31, 1918, there were 23 709 miles of railway open for traffic in the United Kingdom, with a total mileage (owing to double, treble and quadruple tracks) of close on 55 000 miles The mileage operated by the various Companies is as under —

Canals

There are 4,673 miles of canals and canalized rivers in the United Kingdom (England and Wales 3,641 miles Ireland, 848 miles, Scotland, 184 miles), no additions to the mileage having been made for several years. In 1905 the inland waterways carried 43 161 927 tons of merchandise, the revenue being £2,680 710 and expenditure £1,891,213 Of the total mileage 1,363 miles were owned or controlled by railway companies (the longest systems being the Shropshire Union, 202 miles; Grand Junction, 189 miles, Birmingham, 159 miles; and Leeds and Liverpool, 145 miles). The total paid-up capital of all the canals was £47,350,768. The existing system is at its greatest development in the Midland counties of England, and in Lancashire and Yorkshire A Royal Commission, appointed in 1906, reported, in 1909 in favour of a development scheme under an Inland Waterway Board, to improve the existing system Their principal proposal was the formation of four main routes (from a centre in South Staffordshire) to the Thames (London), the Mersey (Liverpool), the Humber (Hull), and the Severn (Gloucester), the proposed routes to accommodate barges up to 200 tons On Jan 1, 1918, there were 1,202 miles of inland waterways in England and Wales, and 304 miles in Ireland, under the Canal Control Committee, appointed by the Government on March 1, 1917, there were also 1,025 miles controlled by the Railway Executive Committee The Manchester Ship Canal, opened in 1894, has a total length of 36 miles, and connects Manchester with the Mersey port of Liverpool, in 1913 the tonnage carried through the canal was 5,780,161 tons, and in 1919 the tonnage was 3,589,043 tons

Posts Telegraphs and Telephones

The carriage and custody of the mails has been maintained by the State from time immemorial The telegraphs were transferred to the State on Feb 5, 1870, the telephones on Jan 1 1912 The submarine telegraph cables connecting the British Isles with the various Dominions and Foreign Countries are maintained and worked by private companies In 1919 a Trans Atlantic Aerial Post was inaugurated by the successful flight of an aeroplane from St John's Newfoundland to Clifden, Ireland and by the voyage of H M Airship R 34 from Scotland to New York and from New York to England

In the year ending March 31, 1915, 3 409 000,000 letters (74 per head of the population) were delivered in the United Kingdom in addition to 880 000 000 post cards and 1,321,000,000 half penny packets There were (March 31 1916) 3 264 822 miles of telegraph and telephone wire (264 480 telegraph 2 843,254 telephone and 157 088 spare wire) with 14 156 telegraph offices. In 1914 15 81 758 000 inland and 14,580 000 foreign telegrams were transmitted On March 31 1916 there were 1 061 trunk telephone exchanges with 363 945 miles of wire, the number of calls being 40 392 719 there were also 263 135 telephones in London and 523 856 elsewhere in the U K the effective London calls numbering 249 millions and the others 527 millions

U S A	13 6	U K.	2 0

Wireless Telegraphy — In 1909 1910 the wireless telegraphy stations on the coasts of the United Kingdom were acquired by the Government, except the long distance stations at Poldhu (Cornwall) and Clifden (County Galway), which are maintained (and worked under licence), by the Marconi Company

THE KINGDOM OF ENGLAND.

Position and Extent.—The Kingdom of England occupies the southern portion of the island of Britain and lies between 55° 46′ and 50° 0″ N. latitude (from the mouth of the Tweed to the Lizard), and between 1° 46′ E. and 5° 43′ W. (from Lowestoft to Land's End). England is bounded on the north by the summit of the Cheviot Hills, which form a natural boundary with the Kingdom of Scotland; on the south by the English Channel; on the east by the Straits of Dover (Pas de Calais) and the North Sea; and on the west by the Atlantic Ocean (which washes the Cornish coast), the Principality of Wales and the Irish Sea. The total area of the kingdom is 50,851 square miles, the population numbering 34,047,659 at the Census of 1911 (an increase of 3,236,239 over the figures of the 1901 census).

Relief.—There is a natural orographic division of England into the hilly districts of the north, west and south-west, and the undulating downs and low-lying plains of the east and south east. In the extreme north the Cheviot Hills run from east to west and divide England from Scotland, culminating in the Cheviot, 2,676 feet above mean sea level. Divided from the Cheviots by the Tyne Gap is the Pennine Chain, running N. by W. to S. by E., with their highest point in Cross Fell, 2,930 feet above mean sea level. West of the Pennines are the Cumbrian Mountains, which contain in Scafell Pike (3,210 feet) the highest land in England, and east of the Pennines are the Yorkshire Moors, their highest point being Urra Moor (1,489 feet). South of the Pennines there are heights above 2,000 feet in the Peak of Derbyshire (highest point 2,088 feet), and in Dartmoor (High Willhays, 2,039 feet). In the western county of Shropshire are the isolated Wrekin (1,335 feet), Long Mynd (1,674 feet), and Brown Clee (1,805 feet); in Herefordshire the Black Mountain reaches 2,310 feet, in Worcestershire the Malvern Hills reach 1,395 feet, in western Monmouthshire are the Sugar Loaf (1,955 feet) and Coity (1,905 feet), and the Cotteswold (or Cotswold) Hills of Gloucestershire contain Cleeve Cloud (1,134 feet).

Hydrography.—The Thames is the longest and most important river of England, with a total length of 210 miles from its source in the Cotteswold Hills to its outflow into the North Sea. The lower river is navigable by ocean-going steamers to London Bridge, and small craft reach Lechlade, 160 miles from the mouth. The Thames is tidal to Teddington (60 miles from its mouth), and its upper stream is connected with the Severn by a canal at Lechlade; the Wilts and Bucks canal enters at Abingdon, and the Wye canal at Reading. The principal tributaries are the Cherwell, Lee, Kennet, Wey, Mole and Medway. The Thames forms county boundaries almost throughout its course, and on its banks are situated the capital of the British Empire; Windsor Castle, the home of the Sovereign; Eton College, the first of the public schools; and Oxford, the oldest university in the kingdom. The Severn is the longest river in Great Britain, rising in the north-eastern slopes of Plinlimmon (Wales) and entering England in Shropshire, with a total length of 220 miles from its source to its outflow into the Bristol Channel, where it receives on the left the Bristol Avon, and on the right the Wye, its other tributaries being the Vyrnwy, Tern, Stour, Teme and Upper (or Warwickshire) Avon. The Severn is tidal below Gloucester; and a high bore or tidal wave sometimes reverses the flow as high as Tewkesbury (13½ miles above Gloucester). The scenery of the greater part of the river is very picturesque and beautiful, and the Severn is a noted salmon river, some of its tributaries being famous for trout. Navigation is assisted by the Gloucester and Berkeley Ship Canal (16¾ miles), which admits vessels of 350 tons to Gloucester, other canals connecting with the Thames, Trent, Dee and Mersey. The Severn Tunnel, which carries the Great Western Railway under the river, 14 miles below the Sharpness Bridge, was begun in 1873 and completed in 1886 (at a cost of £2,000,000) after many difficulties from flooding, etc. The tunnel is 4 miles 624 yards in length (of which 2¼ miles are under the river). Of the remaining English rivers those flowing into the North Sea are the Tyne, Wear, Tees, Ouse and Trent from the Pennine Range, the Great Ouse (160 miles) from the Central Plain, and the Orwell and Stour from the hills of East Anglia. Flowing into the English Channel are the Sussex Ouse from the Weald, the Itchen from the Wiltshire and Hampshire Hills, and the Axe, Exe, Dart, Tamar and Exe from the Devonian Hills; and flowing into the Irish Sea are the Mersey, Ribble and Eden from the western slopes of the Pennines and the Derwent from the Cumbrian Mountains. The English Lakes are noteworthy rather from their picturesque scenery and poetic associations than from their size. These lie mainly in Cumberland, but partly in Westmorland and Lancashire, the largest being Windermere (10 miles long), Ullswater and Derwentwater.

Islands.—The Scilly Islands form part of the county of Cornwall, and are distant 25 miles from Land's End. The group consists of about islands, with a total area of about 4,000 acres, only St. Mary's, Tresco, St. Martin's, St. Agnes and Bryher being inhabited, the total population in 1911 being 2,006. The capital is Hugh Town, in St. Mary's. The climate of the Scilly Islands is unusually mild, and vegetation is luxuriant, semi-tropical plants flourishing in the open. The Isle of Wight forms an administrative county and is separated from Hampshire by the Solent and Spithead. The total area is 147 sq. miles, with a population in 1911 of 88,186. The climate is mild and healthy, and many watering places have grown up during the last century. The capital is Newport at the head of the estuary of the Medina, Cowes (at the mouth) being the chief port; other centres are Ryde, Sandown, Shanklin, Ventnor Freshwater, Yarmouth, Totland Bay and Bembridge.

Climate.—The south westerly winds from the Atlantic Ocean penetrate to the heart of the country, affecting the temperature of the greater part of the kingdom, and only the coastal regions of the east have a modified continental climate. The mean annual temperature is about 50° Fahrenheit, varying from 52° in the Scilly Islands to 48° at the mouth of the Tweed, and generally the west of England is mild and wet in winter and cool and less wet in summer, while the east is cool and dry in winter and spring and hot and less dry in summer and autumn, the wettest region being the Lake district of Cumberland and the driest in the Thames estuary and the Lincolnshire Wash.

EARLY INHABITANTS.

Prehistoric Man.—A skeleton found at Galley Hill, near Northfleet, Kent (in 1895), has been ascribed to a man of Central Asian race of the Early Stone Age, and stone implements of the remote Eolithic, Palæolithic and Neolithic periods are abundantly found throughout England. The Neolithic period is held to have merged into the Bronze Age about 2000 to 1500 B.C., and a date between these years has been given to Stonehenge (presented by Sir C. H. E. Chubb to the Nation in 1908, and now preserved as a national monument). Stonehenge (10 miles N. of Salisbury, Wiltshire) consists of two circles of menhirs (the largest monolith being 22½ feet in height), only 16 remaining in position in the outer circle, while two of the five triple sets are still in position in the inner circle. The use for which the temple or monument was erected is the subject of many conjectures.

The Celtic Invasion.—In the latter part of the Bronze Age the Goidels, a people of Celtic race, and in the Iron Age another Celtic race of Brythons, invaded the country and brought with them Celtic civilization and dialects, place names in England bearing witness to the spread of the invasion over the whole kingdom.

The Roman Conquest.—Julius Cæsar raided Britain in 55 B.C. and 54 B.C., and in 43 A.D. the conquest of the country was undertaken by the Roman Emperor Claudius, who sent Aulus Plautius with a well-equipped army of 40,000 men, and himself visited Colchester (Camulodunum) and Londinium. The British leader from 48–51 A.D. was Caractacus (strictly Caratācus), who was finally captured and sent to Rome. By 70 A.D. the conquest of South Britain was completed, a great revolt under Boadicea (strictly Boudicca), Queen of the Icēni (Norfolk), being crushed in 61 A.D. In 122 A.D. the Emperor Hadrian visited Britain and built a continuous rampart, known as Hadrian's Wall, from Wallsend to Bowness (Tyne to Solway), remains of which are still traceable. The Romans administered Britain as a Province under a Governor, with a well defined system of local government, each Roman municipality ruling itself and the surrounding territory. Colchester, Lincoln, York, Gloucester and St. Albans stand on the sites of five Roman municipalities, while London was the centre of the road system and the seat of the financial officials of the Province of Britain. A well preserved Roman town of about 100 acres was first uncovered in the 18th century at Silchester (Calleva Atrebatum), 10 miles south of Reading, and since 1890 the whole site has been investigated. Four main groups of roads radiated from London, and a fifth (the Fosse) ran obliquely from Ermine Street (at Lincoln), through Leicester, Cirencester and Bath to Exeter. Of the four groups radiating from London one ran S.E. to Canterbury and the coast of Kent, a second to Silchester and thence to parts of Western Britain and South Wales, a third (now known as Watling Street) ran through Verulamium (St. Albans) to Chester, with various branches, and the fourth reached Colchester, Lincoln, York and the eastern counties. Christianity reached the Roman Province of Britain from Gaul in the 3rd century (or possibly earlier), the Bishops of Londinium, Eboracum (York), and Lindum (Lincoln) attending the Council of Arles in 314. The Roman garrison of Britain was much harrassed in the 4th century by Saxon pirates, who invaded the eastern counties from the Wash to Spithead, while about 350 A.D. incursions in the north of Irish (Scoti) and Picts became most formidable, and towards the end of the century many troops were removed from Britain for service in other parts of the Roman Empire. Early in the 5th century Gaul was taken from the Romans by Teutonic invaders, and Britain was cut off from Rome; officials were no longer sent to the island, the garrison was left to defend itself, and appears to have been driven inland by the Northern and Saxon invaders, and to have been conquered and absorbed by the Celtic inhabitants, whose language and customs re-emerged.

Anglo-Saxons and Normans.—The Celtic Britons appear to have called in the Saxons to resist the raids of the Picts and Scots, and eventually the English (Angles, Saxons and Jutes) drove the Britons into the mountain fastnesses of the West (Strathclyde, Wales and Cornwall), the name of Welch (old English Waelise = Foreign) being given to the islanders by the invaders from the continent. The area thus conquered was divided into several kingdoms, of which the chief were Northumbria (Bernicia and Deira), Mercia (Middle Angles), and Wessex. The heathen Angli (whose gods Ti, Woden, Thunor and Frigg are commemorated in "Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday") were converted to Christianity by a mission under Augustine (dispatched by Pope Gregory in 597), which established Archbishoprics at Canterbury and York, and the whole of England appears to have been converted by the end of the 7th century. In the 8th century Offa, King of Mercia, is stated to have built a wall and rampart, afterwards known as Offa's Dike, from the mouth of the Dee to the Severn Estuary, as a protection against the Welch. The greatest of the English kingdoms was Wessex, with its capital at Winchester, and the greatest of the Wessex kings was Alfred the Great (871–901), who resisted the incursions of the Northmen (Danes) and fixed a limit to their advance by the Treaty of Wedmore (878). In the 10th century the Kings of Wessex recovered the whole of England from the Danes, but subsequent rulers were unable to resist the invaders, and England paid tribute (Danegelt) for many years, and was ruled by Danish Kings from 1016 to 1042, when Edward the Confessor was recalled from exile. In 1066 Harold (son-in-law of Edward and son of Earl Godwin of Wessex) was chosen King of England, but after defeating a Northumbrian revolt under his brother Tostig (aided by an invading army of Harold Hadraada of Norway) at Stamford Bridge in Yorkshire (Sept. 25), he was himself defeated at the Battle of Hastings (or Sautlache) on Oct. 14, 1066, and the Norman Conquest secured the throne of England for Duke William of Normandy. Since the Norman Conquest all attempts to invade England have been defeated.

ENGLISH COUNTIES.

For Administrative purposes England is divided into 50 Administrative Counties (under the Local Government Act of 1888). The boundaries of these Administrative Counties differ in many cases from those of the older Geographical Counties, while the areas of the 78 County Boroughs created under the Act of 1888 are excluded from the County Areas, and the population of the Boroughs is separately enumerated. The area, population and chief officers of the Administrative Counties are shown overleaf.

THE PRINCIPAL ENGLISH CITIES.

LONDON.

LONDON, the capital of England and of the British Empire, and the greatest city in the world, is situated on both banks of the River Thames, 50 miles from its outflow into the North Sea. The various areas of London, with the population of each (according to the Census of 1921), are shown below.

Area	Acreage, 1921	Population, 1921.
County of London	74,826	4,522,685
City of London	675	19,657
London Police Districts ...	443,424	7,251,358
Proposed "London Health Area"	3,045,120	9,201,484

The City of London (see pp. 543–4) administers London within its ancient boundaries, where the Saxon Port Reeve became Bailiff in 1066, Mayor in 1191, and Lord Mayor in 1354. The City is the financial and business centre of London, and includes the head offices of the principal English banks, insurance companies, and mercantile houses, in addition to buildings ranging from the historic interest of the Roman Wall, the Norman Tower and the 14th century Guildhall, to the massive spendour of St. Paul's, and the architectural beauty of Wren's spires (Bow Church, St. Bride's, St. Dunstan's in the East, etc.), for which (and for other City buildings) see pp. 551–559.

The City of Westminster, which is bounded by the City of London on the east, by Chelsea and Kensington on the west, by Paddington, St. Marylebone and Holborn on the north, and by the Thames and Chelsea on the south, was formed into a borough by the London Government Act of 1899, and was created a city by Royal Charter of Oct. 19, 1900, the Council consisting of a Mayor, 10 Aldermen and 60 Councillors. Extending from the eastern end of the Strand to Kensington Gardens, and from Oxford-street to the Thames, it includes within its boundaries a large number of the finest buildings in London. The Abbey and the Roman Catholic Cathedral, the Houses of Parliament and the Law Courts, Buckingham Palace and St. James's, and the principal Government offices, Clubs and Theatres are situated in Westminster, which also includes the fashionable residential districts of Mayfair and Belgravia, the chief buildings being described on pp. 551–562. Westminster is the richest of the London areas, the rateable value of property being £7,087,831 in 1920, the product of each 1d. in the £ being £28,291.

Metropolitan Boroughs.—Under the London Government Act of 1899 the administrative functions of the various vestries in the Metropolitan districts surrounding the City of London were transferred to 28 Metropolitan Boroughs (see p. 542), of which one became afterwards the City of Westminster. The area covered by these boroughs extends northwards to include Stoke Newington, southwards to Wandsworth and Lewisham, eastwards to Woolwich, and westwards to Hammersmith.

London County Council.—For County purposes the affairs of London are administered by the London County Council (see pp. 547–550), which was created by the Local Government Act of 1888.

Miscellaneous Authorities.—The Poor Law is administered in the Metropolitan area by the Metropolitan Asylums Board (see p. 250), and by 32 Boards of Guardians; for Police purposes the administration is invested in the City Corporation as to the City Police (see p. 573) and in the Home Office as to the Metropolitan Police (see p. 573). The authority for the supply of water is the Metropolitan Water Board (see p. 250), while the River Thames is administered as to its tidal portion by the Port of London Authority (see p. 256) and above Teddington by the Thames Conservancy (see p. 262), the lighthouse and pilotage authority being Trinity House (see p. 265). The bridges (see p. 555) are maintained in the City of London by the Bridge House Estates Committee of the Coporation of the City, and in the remaining area by the London County Council. The lighting of London is carried out by private enterprise, and in some cases by the Borough Councils, while locomotion is provided by the London County Council as the Tramway authority, and by private enterprise as to underground or other railways and motor vehicles.

LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL (Lancashire), on the right bank of the river Mersey, 3 miles from the Atlantic and 201 miles N.W. of London, is one of the greatest trading centres of the world and the principal port in the United Kingdom for the Atlantic trade. The municipal area is 24,108 acres (which includes 2,883 acres in the bed of the river Mersey) (about 33 square miles, excluding the bed of the river), with a population at the census of 1911 of 746,421 (estimated at 781,948 in 1920). The total net register tonnage of vessels on which dues were paid during 1919 was 13,576,751 tons, while the value of the seaborne trade of the port was stated at £688,942,365 for 1918, and £835,849,867 for 1919. The docks, on both sides of the river, have a linear quayage of about 37 miles, and the Gladstone dock will accommodate the largest vessels afloat. The dock authority is the Mersey Dock and Harbour Board. The chief import is cotton, those next in importance being grain, provisions, sugar, fruit, oil, timber and tobacco.

The principal buildings are St. George's Hall, erected 1838–1854, from the designs of Harvey Lonsdale Elmes, at a cost of £300,000, and regarded as the finest modern example of classical architecture; the Town Hall, erected 1754 from the designs of Wood; the Cathedral (in course of erection from the designs of Bodley and Gilbert Scott), which will be the largest ecclesiastical building in England; the Walker Fine Art Gallery; the University; the Royal Infirmary; the Municipal Offices; and the Custom House.

Liverpool was incorporated as a borough early in the 13th century and was created a city in 1880. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor and a City Council which comprises 37 Aldermen and 112 Councillors. The City returns 11 members to Parliament. The name is believed to be derived from Norse words meaning the "Pool of the Slopes."

Principal City Officers.

Lord Mayor (1920–1921), Rt. Hon. E. Russell-Taylor.
Recorder, Edward G. Hemmerde, K.C. (1909)
Police Magistrate, Stuart Deacon (1910).
President, Court of Passage, Sir Wm. F. Kyffin Taylor, K.B.E., K.C.
Coroner, A. G. Inglis
Town Clerk, C. Hammond Etherton, C.B.E. (1914).
Clerk of the Peace, E. D. Crippa.
Medical Officer of Health, E. W. Hope, C.B.E., M.D.

MANCHESTER.

MANCHESTER (Lancashire), the centre of the world's cotton trade, is 189 miles N.W. of London. The municipal area is 22,686 acres (about 34 square miles), the population at the census of 1911 being 714,333 (estimated at 786,193 in 1920).

Manchester is the distributing centre of the cotton spinning and weaving of Lancashire for the whole world, and of butter and foodstuffs for the most densely populated part of England. It also contains large engineering and machinery works and factories of hats, clothing, india-rubber goods, chemicals, etc. The city is connected with the Mersey by the Manchester Ship Canal (opened in 1894), which has a total length of 35½ miles, a depth of 28 feet, and a minimum width at the bottom of 120 feet. The value of the seaborne trade of the port is stated at £107,082,759 for 1918, and at £146,890,745 for 1919, the net tonnage of ships entered and cleared in 1917 being about 2,000,000 tons.

The principal buildings are the Town Hall, erected in 1877 from the designs of Alfred Waterhouse, R.A.; the Royal Exchange (1869); the Free Trade Hall, erected from the designs of Walters, in 1856, on the site of the "Peterloo Massacres" (Aug. 16, 1819) in St. Peter's Fields; the Art Gallery; the Whitworth Institute; the 17th century Chetham Library; the Rylands Library (1899), which includes the Althorp collection; the University (Owens College); and the 15th century Cathedral (formerly the parish church). Manchester is one of the principal centres of political, literary and scientific advancement, and the Gaiety Theatre (Miss Horniman) and the Hallé Concerts have placed the city in the forefront of dramatic and musical development. The Manchester Guardian newspaper exercises a widespread influence throughout the English-speaking world.

The town received a charter of incorporation in 1838 and was created a city in 1853. The Lord Mayor presides over a Corporation of 35 Aldermen and 105 Councillors. Manchester returns 10 members to Parliament. The Celtic name of the city was Mancunium.

Principal City Officers.

Lord Mayor (1920–1921), Rt. Hon. William Kay.
Recorder, Arthur Jacob Ashton, K.C. (1914).
Stipendiary Magistrate, Edgar Brierley (1902).
Town Clerk, Thomas Hudson (1920).
Clerk of the Peace, Francis Ogden (1890).

BIRMINGHAM.

BIRMINGHAM (Warwickshire), the chief centre of the hardware trade of the world, is 113 miles N.W. of London. The municipal area is 43,601 acres (about 68 square miles), with a population at the census of 1911 of 840,202 (estimated at 900,000 in 1920).

The chief industries are brass working, jewellery and precious metals, iron, machinery, small arms and ammunition, railway rolling stock, glass making, electro plating, cycles and chemicals.

The principal buildings are the Town Hall, built in 1832–1850 on the lines of the Temple of Jupiter Stator at Rome, with a large hall (where the triennial musical festival is held); the Council House and Corporation Art Gallery and Museum (1878); the University (Aston Webb, 1909); the Central Library; the 13th century Church of St. Martin (rebuilt 1873); the Cathedral (formerly St. Philip's Church, built by Archer, a pupil of Wren's), the Roman Catholic Cathedral of St. Chad (Pugin), and the Wesleyan Central Hall. Birmingham was incorporated as a borough in 1838, and was created a city in 1889; it is governed by a Lord Mayor and City Council of 30 Aldermen and 90 Councillors. The city returns 12 members to Parliament. The origin of the name is obscure, as Bromwycham, "the home on the hill by the heath," is disputed. The city was a Saxon town, and William de Bermingham was Lord of the Manor in the early part of the 13th century.

Principal City Officers.

Lord Mayor (1920–21), Rt. Hon. W. A. Cadbury.
Recorder, Sir Ryland Dent Adkins, K.C., M.P. (1920).
Stipendiary Magistrate, The Rt. Hon. Lord Ilkeston (1910).
Town Clerk, F. H. C. Wiltshire (1918).
Clerk of the Peace, Joseph James (1905).
Coroner, Isaac Bradley (1897).

LEEDS.

LEEDS (Yorkshire, West Riding) is favourably situated in the coal and iron districts of England, 185 miles N.N.W. of London, and is the centre of the woollen industry. The city has also the largest share of the leather trade of the United Kingdom, in addition to large flax, canvas and rope works, and factories of thread, linen, glass and earthenware, with metal casting, machinery and machine tools, steam engines, and other engineering works. Leeds is connected with the Mersey in the west by the Leeds and Liverpool Canal, with the Humber in the east by the Aire and Calder Navigation, and is an important railway centre.

The municipal area is 28,090 acres (nearly 44 square miles), the population at the census of 1911 being 445,550 (estimated at 480,297 in 1920).

The principal buildings are the Town Hall (1858), the Royal Exchange (1872), the Philosophical Hall, the Art Gallery, the University and the Leeds Institute of Science, Art and Literature (1865). The Parish Church (St. Peter's) was rebuilt in 1840; the 17th century St. John's Church has a fine interior with a famous Renaissance screen; the 17th century Mill Hill Chapel was rebuilt in 1849.

Leeds was made a county borough in 1888, and was created a city in 1893. The Lord Mayor presides over a corporation of 17 Aldermen and 51 Councillors. The city returns 6 members to Parliament. The earliest forms of the name are Loidis or Ledes, the origin of which is obscure.

Principal City Officers.

Lord Mayor (1920–1921), Rt. Hon. Albert Braithwaite.
Recorder, John Albert Compston, K.C. (1
Stipendiary Magistrates, Charles Milner (1894); Horace Marshall (1910).
Clerk of the Peace, Arthur Copson Peake (1896).
Town Clerk, Sir Robert Fox (1904).

BRISTOL

BRISTOL (Gloucester and Somerset), astride the River Avon and within 8 miles of the estuary of the River Severn (Bristol Channel), is a city and seaport 119 miles W of London, with a municipal area of 18,445 acres (29 square miles) and a population at the census of 1911 of 357,059 (estimated at 380,000 in 1920).

The principal industries are shipbuilding, rope making, chocolate, sugar and tobacco factories, glass and earthenware, soap, leather and chemical works, breweries, and copper, lead and iron works. The harbour was constructed from the Rivers Avon and Frome in 1809 and extends from the Severn (Avonmouth) to the city. The net tonnage of ships entered in 1919 was 1,845,096 tons, and of those cleared 1,804 325 tons, the value of the seaborne trade being stated at £46,899,222 for 1918. The principal imports are grain, fruit, oils, ore, timber, hides, cattle and general merchandise, and the chief exports are machinery, manufactured oils, cotton goods, tin and salt.

The chief buildings, in addition to the 14th century Cathedral (rebuilt by Street 1868–1888), the 14th century Church of St Mary, Redcliffe (described by Queen Elizabeth as "the fairest, goodliest and most famous parish church in England"), and the 15th century Temple Church, are Canynges' House, the Merchant Venturers Almshouses, St. Peter's Hospital, the Council House, Guildhall, Exchange (erected from the designs of John Wood in 1743), Colston Hall, the University and Clifton College. The Clifton Suspension Bridge, with a span of 702 feet over the Avon, was projected by I K Brunel (the designer of the Great Eastern) in 1836, but was not completed until 1864.

Bristol was a Royal Borough before the Norman Conquest, and in 1899 its Chief Magistrate (Sir Herbert Ashman) became a Lord Mayor. The Corporation includes 23 Aldermen and 69 Councillors. The city returns 5 members to Parliament. The earliest forms of the name are Brygstowe and Bristou.

BRADFORD

BRADFORD (Yorkshire, West Riding), 192 miles N N W of London and 8 miles W of Leeds, in the coal and iron district, is the centre of the woollen and worsted trade. The city is connected with the Mersey in the west and with the Humber in the east by canals, and is an important railway centre. The municipal area is 22,879 acres (about 36 square miles), with a population at the 1911 census of 288,458 (estimated at 294 504 in 1920).

The principal textile industries are worsteds, woollens, silks and cottons, and there are also important engineering and iron works, and quarries of freestone.

The chief buildings, in addition to the 15th century Cathedral (formerly the Parish Church), are the Town Hall (1873), Exchange (1867), Cartwright Memorial Hall (1904), commemorating the inventor of the power loom, Temperance Hall (1837), Grammar School, Technical College (1882), and the Mechanics' Institute (1832).

The Saxon township was created a parliamentary borough in 1832, a county borough in 1888, and a city in 1907. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor, 21 Aldermen and 63 Councillors. Bradford returns 4 members to Parliament.

KINGSTON UPON HULL

HULL (officially "Kingston upon Hull") is situated in the East Riding of Yorkshire, at the junction of the Hull with the Humber, 22 miles from the North Sea and 181 miles N of London. The municipal area is 9,359 acres (about 15 square miles), with a population of 278,024 at the census of 1911 (estimated at 291,327 in 1920).

Hull is the principal seaport for shipping the manufactures of Yorkshire and Lancashire to Northern Europe, and among its principal imports are grain from Russia and America and timber from Scandinavia, in addition to iron, fish, butter (from Denmark and Siberia), and fruit. The net tonnage of the shipping entered and cleared in 1919 was upwards of 3,000,000 tons, the value of the seaborne trade of the port being stated as £90,398,722 for 1918 and as £148,023,115 for 1919.

The chief buildings, in addition to the Docks, are the Parish Church (Holy Trinity), 272 feet in length (the largest parish church in England), the Guildhall (1915), Exchange (1866), Chamber of Commerce, Corn Exchange, Market Hall, Custom House, Dock Offices, Royal Institution (1854), Wilberforce's House and Trinity House (1753).

The name of Wyke-upon-Hull was changed to Kingston-upon-Hull by Edward I. in the 13th century. The town was incorporated in 1576 and made a county borough in 1888. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor, 16 Aldermen and 48 Councillors. Hull returns 4 members to Parliament.

Principal City Officers.

High Steward, Rt. Hon. T. R. Ferens, P.C.
Lord Mayor (1920–21), Rt. Hon. T. B. Atkinson.
Recorder, Henry Thomas Kemp, K.C. (1917)
Sheriff, John William Locking

NEWCASTLE UPON-TYNE

NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE (Northumberland), on the north bank of the Tyne estuary, 8 miles from the North Sea and 272 miles N. of London, has an area of 8,452 acres (13 square miles) and a population of 278,107 at the census of 1911 (estimated at 300,000 in 1920).

The city is conveniently placed on the estuary, in the neighbourhood of the Northumberland and Durham coalfields. Its exports include coal, chemicals, pig iron, iron and steel manufactures and machinery; the chief imports being wheat and grain, fruits, iron, iron ore and steel, petroleum, sulphur ore, timber and wood, and potatoes. The net tonnage of ships entered in 1919 was 3,913,232 tons, and of those cleared was 5,043,375 tons. The chief industries are shipbuilding, metal works and machinery, chemicals, glass, brick, tile and earthenware, and rope making.

The principal buildings are the (11th century) "New" Castle, of which the walls, keep and chapel are well preserved, the Cathedral (St. Nicholas), St. Andrew's Church (11th century), St. John's (14th century), St. George Jesmond, the Roman Catholic Cathedral of Hexham and Newcastle, the Corporation Buildings, Guildhall (1658), Moot Hall (1810), Exchange (1860), Central Newsroom and Art Gallery (1838), Wood Memorial Hall (1870) and the Custom House. The city is connected with the south bank of the Tyne by four bridges, of which the old High Level Bridge (1849) was designed by Robert Stephenson and carries the railway and road way, the new High Level Bridge (1906) carries the railway only.

The pre-Norman borough of Monkchester was re-named Newcastle in the 11th century when the castle was erected as a defence against the Scots. In 1400 it was made a county borough, and in 1889 was incorporated. The City Corporation now includes a Lord Mayor (1906), 19 Aldermen and 57 Councillors. Newcastle upon-Tyne returns 4 members to Parliament.

Principal City Officers

Lord Mayor (1920–1921), Rt. Hon. Thomas William Rowe.
Recorder, Llewellyn Arthur Atherley Jones, K.C., M.P. (1906).
Sheriff, Anthony Oates.
Town Clerk and Clerk of the Peace, Arthur Maule Oliver (1907).

NOTTINGHAM.

NOTTINGHAM (Nottinghamshire), the principal manufacturing centre of hosiery and lace, stands on the left bank of the Trent, where the tributary stream Leen enters the river, 128 miles N.N.W. of London. The municipal area is 10,935 acres (17 square miles), and includes an open market place of 5½ acres in the centre of the city, with a population at the census of 1911 of 259,904 (estimated at 270,000 in 1920).

The city is connected with the North Sea and the Atlantic by canals and is an important railway centre. The principal industries are cotton, silk and merino hosiery, lace, bleaching, dyeing and spinning, tanning, engineering and cycle works, brewing, and the manufacture of tobacco, etc.

The chief buildings are the 11th century Nottingham Castle (restored in 1878, and now the City Museum and Gallery of Art), St. Mary's, St. Peter's, and St. Nicholas's Churches, the Roman Catholic Cathedral (Pugin, 1842–4), the Guildhall and Sessions Court (1887), Shire Hall, Albert Hall, Exchange, University College, Hospital and Eye Infirmary.

Snotengaham or Notingeham (the "town of the Caves") possesses a Charter of Henry II., and was created a city in 1897. The Corporation comprises a Mayor, 16 Aldermen and 48 Councillors. The city returns 4 members to Parliament.

Principal City Officers

Mayor (1920–1921), Herbert Bowles
Recorder (vacant, 1920)
Sheriff, John Henry Breckingham
Town Clerk and Clerk of the Peace, William John Board (1908).
City Coroner, Charles Lambert Rothera.

THE COUNTY PALATINE OF DURHAM.

It is uncertain when "Palatine" privileges were first exercised in the County of Durham as no formal creation of the Palatinate by charter or deed appears to have ever been made. From the founding of the See of Lindisfarne out of which the bishopric and palatinate of Durham arose the Bishops received large grants of lands with extensive immunities, and Guthred king of Northumbria and Alfred the Great appear to have confirmed the grant to the See of the whole of the land between the rivers Tyne and Wear. There is no evidence of the exercise of palatine privileges by the Bishops prior to the Norman Conquest but it is probable that these were acquired in the reign of the Conqueror and they were exercised by the Prelates until resumed by the Crown in 1836. Palatine counties are understood to have been erected for the defence of neighbouring kingdoms against the Welsh and Scots and were in reality self contained kingdoms in alliance with their creator. The ancient customs of the County Palatine of Durham are in some measure retained; the administrative authority being exercised on behalf of the Crown.

THE PRINCIPALITY OF WALES.

PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY

Position and Extent—The Principality of Wales occupies the extreme west of the central southern portion of the island of Great Britain, with a total area of 7,467 sq miles, and a population (1911) of 1,724 800 It is bounded on the N by the Irish Sea, on the S by the Bristol Channel, on the E by the English counties of Cheshire, Salop, Hereford and Monmouth, and on the W by St George's Channel The greatest length from N to S (Point of Air to Barry Island) is 136 miles, and the greatest breadth from W to E (St David's Head to the English border) is 92 miles.

Separated from the mainland of Wales by the Menai Straits is the Welch island county of Anglesey or Mon (276 sq miles), communication with which is facilitated by the Menai Suspension Bridge (1,000 ft long), built by Telford in 1826 and by the tubular railway bridge (1,100 ft long) of the L. & N W Railway, built by Stephenson in 1850 Holyhead harbour, on Holy Isle (N W of Anglesey), provides accommodation for a fast steam packet service to Kingstown and Dublin (70 miles)

Relief—Wales is generally mountainous, the chief systems being those of North Wales (Snowdon 3,571 ft, Carnedd Llywelyn 3,484 ft, Carnedd Dafydd 3,426 ft), Berwyn (Aran fawddy 2 970 ft), Powys (Plinlimmon 2,462 ft Drygan Fawr 2,115 ft, Radnor 2,163 ft), and the Black Mountain, Brecknock Beacons and Black Forest ranges (Carmarthen Van 2,632 ft, Brecon Beacon 2,862 ft, Pen y gaver fawr 2,660 ft)

Hydrography—The principal river of those rising in Wales is the Severn (see England), which flows from the slopes of Plinlimmon to the English border, dividing Montgomeryshire on its way The Wye (130 miles) also rises in the slopes of Plinlimmon, and flows between Radnor and Brecon on its course to England The Usk (56 miles) flows into the Bristol Channel, through Monmouthshire The Dee (70 miles) rises in Bala lake and flows through the Vale of Llangollen, where an aqueduct (built by Telford in 1805) carries the Pontcysyllte branch of the Shropshire Union Canal across the valley The estuary of the Dee is the navigable portion, 14 miles in length and about 5 miles in breadth, and the tide rushes in with dangerous speed over the "Sands of Dee" The Towy (68 miles), Teifi (50 miles), Taff (40 miles), Dovey (30 miles), Tâf (25 miles), and Conway (24 miles), the last named broad and navigable, are wholly Welch rivers

The largest natural lake in Wales is Bala (Llyn Tegid) in Merionethshire, 4 miles long and about 1 mile wide, Lake Vyrnwy is an artificial reservoir, about the size of Bala, and forms the water supply of Liverpool, while Birmingham is supplied from a chain of reservoirs in the Elan and Claerwen valleys

EARLY HISTORY

Celts and Romans—The earliest inhabitants of whom there is any record appear to have been subdued or exterminated by the Goidels (a people of Celtic race) in the Bronze Age, and a further invasion of Celtic Brythons followed in the ensuing Iron Age. The Roman conquest of South Britain and Wales was for some time successfully opposed by Caradog (Caratâcus), King of the Silures, a tribe inhabiting the present counties of Glamorgan, Brecon, Radnor and Monmouth. In A D 78 the conquest of Wales was completed under Julius Frontinus, and communications were opened up by the construction of military roads from Chester to Caerleon-on Usk and Caerwent, and from Chester to Conway (and thence to Carmarthen and Neath). Christianity was introduced (during the Roman occupation) in the 4th century, and the faith thus established was preserved (after the withdrawal of the Roman garrison) by native effort, and was carried to the northernmost corners of the British Isles by missionaries to the Hebrides and to the Orkneys and Shetlands

The Anglo Saxon Attacks—The Anglo-Saxon invaders of South Britain drove the Celtic Goidels and Brythons into the mountain fastnesses of Wales, and into Strathclyde (Cumberland and S W Scotland) and Cornwall, giving them the name of Waelisc, or Welch (=Foreign). The West Saxons victory of Deorham (577) isolated the Waelisc of Wales from those of Cornwall, while the battle of Chester (613) similarly cut off communication with the Waelisc of Strathclyde In the 8th century the boundaries of the Welch were further restricted by the annexations of Offa, King of Mercia, and counter attacks were largely prevented by the construction of an artificial boundary from the Dee to the Wye (Offa's Dyke) In the 9th century Rhodri Mawr united the country against further incursions of the Saxons by land, and against the raids of Norse and Danish pirates by sea, but at his death his three provinces of Gwynedd (N), Powys (Mid) and Dehenbarth (S) were divided among his three sons—Anarawd, Mervyn and Cadell—the son of the last-named being Howel Dda, who codified the laws of the country, while Lewelyn ap Seissyllt (husband of the heiress of Gwynedd) again united the provinces and reigned as Prince from 1015–1022.

The Norman Conquest—After the Norman conquest of England William I created Palatine counties along the Welch frontier, and Robert FitzHamon, the Norman Earl of Gloucester, raided South Wales and erected fortresses from the Wye to Milford Haven Henry I introduced Flemish settlers into South Wales, but after his death the Welch rose under the leadership of Gryffith ap Rhys and routed the Norman-Flemish forces at the fords of the Teifi (Cardigan) in 1136 From the early years of the 13th century the house Gwynedd, in the north, gained an ascendency over the whole of Wales, and Llewelyn ap Iorwerth was in constant strife with England for recognition as an independent sovereign, but Llewelyn, the son of Iorwerth, was killed in 1282 during hostilities between the Welch and English, and his brother David was captured and executed by the English in 1283. On Feb 7, 1301, Edward of Carnarvon, son of Edward I, was created Prince of Wales, a title thenceforward borne by the heir apparent to the throne of England

The Welch are a distinct nationality, with a language and literature of their own, and the national bardic festival (Eisteddfod), instituted by Prince Rhys ap Griffith in 1176, is annually maintained. These Eisteddfodau (sessions) form part of the Gorsedd (assembly), which is believed to date from the time of Prydian, a ruling prince in an age many centuries before the Christian era.

CARDIFF.

CARDIFF (Glamorgan) at the mouth of the river Taff (Caer Taff), the port of the South Wales coal fields, has a municipal area of 8,095 acres, and a population at the census of 1911 of 182,280 (estimated at 204,436 in 1920). The net tonnage of ships entered at the port in 1919 was 5,599,000 tons, and of those cleared 6,163,000 tons, the value of the seaborne trade being £30,981,000 in 1918. The prosperity of the city is largely due to the opening of the Docks in 1839, and to their continuous development since that date. The chief exports are coal, coke, patent fuel, iron, and iron and steel manufactures, and there is a large ship repairing industry.

The principal buildings are Cardiff Castle, built in the 11th century, the National Museum of Wales, Public Library, the University College of South Wales and Monmouthshire, the Registry of the University of Wales, Technical College, City Hall and Law Courts, and Glamorgan County Hall. The city returns 3 members to Parliament.

City Officers.

Lord Mayor (1920-21) Rt. Hon. James Taylor.
Stipendiary Magistrate, Sir T. W. Lewis.
Recorder, W. Llewelyn Williams, K.C.
Town Clerk & Clerk of the Peace, Cecil G. Brown.

SWANSEA.

SWANSEA (Glamorgan), at the mouth of the River Tawe, is the chief centre of the copper, tinplate and spelter industry of the United Kingdom, and contains the largest tube works in the country. The trade of the port also includes coal and patent fuel; the net tonnage of ships entered in 1919 being 2,253,750 tons, and of those cleared 2,253,605 tons.. The municipal area is 24,193 acres, with a population at the census of 1911 of 114,673 (estimated at 167,000 in 1920).

The principal buildings are the Norman castle (re-built in 1330), the Royal Institution of South Wales, founded in 1835 (containing Museum and Library), and the 17th century Grammar School, founded by Hugh Gore. Swansea was chartered by King John, and incorporated as a borough by Henry III. The borough returns 2 members to Parliament.

City Officers.

Mayor (1920-21), Percy Molyneux.
Recorder, Sir E. Marlay Samson, K.B.E., K.C.
Town Clerk, H. Lang-Coath.

THE KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND.

Position and Extent.—The Kingdom of Scotland occupies the northern portion of the main island of Great Britain and includes the Inner and Outer Hebrides, and the Orkney, Shetland, and many other islands. The Kingdom lies between the Atlantic Ocean on the N. and W., and the North Sea on the E. The greatest length* of the mainland (Cape Wrath to the Mull of Galloway) is 274 miles, and the greatest breadth (Buchan Ness to Applecross) is 154 miles. The total area of the Kingdom is 31,510 square miles (land and water), with a population (at the census of 1911) of 4,760,904.

Relief.—There are three natural orographic divisions of Scotland. The Southern Uplands have their highest points in Merrick (2,764 feet), Rinns of Kells (2,668 feet), and Cairnsmuir of Carsphairn (2,612 feet), in Kirkcudbright; Hartfell (2,651 feet) in Dumfries; and Whitecoomb (2,695 feet), in Peebles. The Central Lowlands include the valleys of the Tay, Forth and Clyde, and the cities of Edinburgh, the capital of the Kingdom, and Glasgow, its principal seaport. The heather-clad Northern Highlands extend almost from the extreme north of the mainland to the central lowlands, and are divided into a northern and southern system by the Great Glen; they contain, in the central Grampian Hills, Ben Nevis (4,406 feet), the highest point in the British Isles, and Ben Muich Dhui (4,296 feet). The Cheviot Hills form a natural boundary between Scotland and England, their highest point being Cheviot Hill (2,676 feet).

Hydrography.—The principal river of Scotland is the Clyde (106 miles), one of the most important rivers in the world, with the greatest commercial estuary in Scotland. The Clyde is formed by the junction of Daer and Portrail water, and flows through the city and port of Glasgow to the Firth of Clyde. During its course it passes over the picturesque Falls of Clyde, the largest falls in the British Isles, Bonnington Linn (30 feet), Corra Linn (84 feet), Dundaff Linn (20 feet), and Stonebyres Linn (80 feet), all occurring within a stretch of 4 miles, above and below Lanark. The Tweed (96 miles) forms a boundary between Scotland and England at Berwick, and has important woollen industries ("Tweeds") in its valley. The Tay, noted for its salmon, and the longest river in Scotland (117 miles), flows into the North Sea, with Dundee (the centre of the jute industry) on the estuary, which is spanned by the Tay Bridge (2 miles 73 yards), opened in 1887 to replace that destroyed by a gale (Dec. 28, 1879). The Dee (90 miles), a noted salmon river, flows through scenery of unequalled beauty to the North Sea at Aberdeen. The Spey (110 miles), the swiftest flowing river in the British Isles, and also noted for its salmon and its scenery, flows into the Moray Firth. The Forth (66 miles), navigable to Stirling, is spanned by the Forth Bridge, constructed 1882–9 at a cost of £3,000,000, with a length of 5,330 feet (with approaches 8,295 feet).

The lochs are the principal hydrographic feature of the Kingdom, both on the mainland and in many of the Islands. The largest in the Kingdom and in Great Britain is Loch Lomond (24 miles long), with Lochs Awe, Tay, Rannoch and Ericht in the Grampian valleys; Loch Ness (24 miles long and 800 feet deep), with Lochs Oich and Lochy, in the Great Glen; and Lochs Shin (20 miles) and Maree in the northern Highlands.

Orkney.—About 6 miles N. of the Caithness coast, separated from the mainland by the Pentland Firth, is the island county of Orkney, a group of 90 islands and islets ("holms" and "skerries"), of which one-third are inhabited. The total area of the group is 375½ square miles, with a population (1911) of 25,896. Kirkwall, in Pomona (or mainland), the largest island of the group, is the capital of the county. Many of the Orkney (and Shetland) Islands contain brochs (Pictish towers) and other Pictish and Scandinavian remains. Scapa Flow, between Pomona and Hoy, was the war station of the Grand Fleet from 1914–9 and the scene of the scuttling of the surrendered German High Seas Fleet (June 21, 1919).

Shetland.—About 50 miles N. of Orkney (with the detached Fair Isle at 25 miles N.) is the island county of Shetland, a group of about 100 islands and islets, of which 29 are inhabited. The total area of the group is 551 square miles, with a population (1911) of 27,911. Lerwick, in Mainland (the largest and principal island), is the capital of the county. Fair Isle, the southernmost of the group, is famous for hand-knitted hosiery, and Unst for the finest of the Shetland woollen work, for which the county is famous. Muckle Flugga, about 1 mile N. of Unst, is the most northerly of the group and of the British Isles (60° 51′ 30″ N. lat.).

*Western Islands.—Off the W. coast, at varying distances, and extending from Sutherland to Argyll, are over 500 islands and islets, of which 102 are inhabited. The total area of these Western Islands is 2,812 square miles, with a population of close on 80,000, but owing to the mountainous surface of the land only about 300 square miles are under cultivation. The Inner Hebrides include the island of Skye (643 square miles—capital, Portree, famous as the refuge of Prince Charlie after his defeat at Culloden, Inverness-shire, in 1746), which contains the Cuillins (Sgurr-na-Banachdich, 3,243 feet), Red Hills (Ben Caillich, 2,403 feet), and many other picturesque mountains; Mull (367 square miles),

* Land's End to John o' Groats.—The customary measurement of the Island of Great Britain is from the site of John o' Groat's house, near Duncansby Head, Caithness (at the N.E. extremity of the island) to Land's End, Cornwall (at the S.W. extremity), a total distance of 897 miles in a straight line and (approximately) 960 by road. But the site of the house of John de Groot (with its 8 doors and octagonal table, to solve the question of precedence between John and his 7 brothers) is about 4 miles S.W. of Duncansby Head, while Dunnet Head (also in Caithness) extends further N. than Duncansby. John de Groot is believed to have obtained permission to settle in Caithness (from the Netherlands) in the reign of James IV. (1488–1513).

* The Hebrides.—Until the closing years of the century "The Hebrides" included other Scottish islands in the Firth of Clyde, the peninsula of Kintyre (Argyllshire), the Isle of Man, and the (Irish) Isle of Rathlin. The origin of the name is stated to be the Greek Eboudai, latinized as Hebudes by Pliny, and corrupted to its present form. The Norwegian name Sudreyar (Southern Islands) was latinized as Sodorenses, a name that survives in the Anglican bishopric of "Sodor and Man."

containing Ben More (3,185 feet), Ben Buy (2,354 feet), and Ben Creach (2,289 feet), Jura (160 square miles), with a chain of hills culminating in the Paps of Jura, Beinn an Oir (2,571 feet), and Beinn Chaolais (2,407 feet), Islay (235 square miles), and many smaller islands. The Outer Hebrides, separated from the mainland by the Minch, include Lewis with Harris (770 square miles), celebrated for its homespun "Tweeds, North Uist, South Uist, Barra and other islands. Thirteen miles W of Stornoway (the largest town of Lewis and of the Hebrides) are the "Druidical remains of Callernish, a well preserved series of monolithic circles, cruciform in general arrangement, but generally regarded as a heathen monument of the remote Stone Age.

Climate.—The climate of Scotland is influenced by the much indented coast line and (like that of South Britain) by the Gulf Stream Drift, which emerges from the Gulf of Mexico as a strong current about 30 miles in width with a speed of about 4 miles per hour. The stream gradually loses its velocity and becomes shallower and cooler, until at about 35° N. lat. (off Cape Hatteras) it comes to be a distinct stream and its surface waters are carried across the Atlantic by the prevailing westerly winds. The climate is more bracing and less treacherous than that of England, the average duration of sunshine on the east coast being greater than on the east coast of England, while the south western section is no wetter or more relaxing than the corresponding section of England. The mean winter temperature is in the neighbourhood of 35°, and that of summer about 58° Fahrenheit.

EARLY HISTORY.

Prehistoric Man.—North Britain appears to have been invaded in Palaeolithic times by a succession of races, who died out or were exterminated by other immigrants. The earliest race of which there is any record is that since known as the Picts, believed to be of non Aryan origin, and stated to have been named Picti by the Romans on account of the tribal habit of painting the body. The Picts seem to have inhabited the whole of North Britain and to have spread over the north of Ireland. Picts Houses are most frequent in the northern counties of Caithness and Sutherland and in the Orkney Islands, and it is generally believed that the Picts were driven northwards by later Celtic immigrants. Celtic Gaidels and Brythons arrived from Belgic Gaul during the latter part of the Bronze Age and in the early Iron Age and except in the extreme north of the mainland and in the islands the civilization and speech of the people was definitely Celtic at the time of the Roman Invasion of Britain.

The Roman Invasion.—In A.D. 80 Julius Agricola extended the Roman conquests in Britain by advancing into Caledonia as far as the "Grampian" Hills, but after a victory at Mons Graupius (since corrupted to "Grampius") he was recalled, and no further advance was made for about 60 years, when the Roman frontier was carried to the isthmus between the Forth and Clyde and marked by the Wall of Picts, towards which ran military roads from the Cheviots. The Roman occupation of Southern Caledonia was not so effective as that of South Britain, and before the close of the second century the northern limit of Roman Britain had receded to Hadrian's Wall, from the Tyne to Solway Firth, where it was maintained until about 450 A.D.

The Scots.—During the later years of the Roman occupation the garrison was continually harassed by Pictish tribes north of the Wall, aided by Scots (the Gaelic tribe then dominant in Ireland), and when the garrison was withdrawn these Picts and Scots were the principal enemies of the Celtic Brythons, who are believed to have called in the Saxons to protect them from the invasions of their neighbours. A relic of the struggle between Pict and Brython is still to be seen in the Catrail, or Picts Work Dyke, of Roxburgh (from Torwoodlee near Galashiels, to Peel Fell in the Cheviots). Christianity was introduced into Southern Caledonia about 380 by missionaries from Romanized Britain, who penetrated to the northern districts and islands. After the withdrawal (or absorption) of the Roman garrison of Britain there were many years of tribal warfare between the Picts and Scots, the Brythonic Waelisc (Welch) of Strathclyde (South west Scotland and Cumberland), and the Anglo Saxons of the Lothians. The Waelisc were isolated from their kinsmen in Wales by the victory of the West Saxons at Chester (613), and towards the close of the 9th century the Scots under Kenneth Macalpine became the dominant power in Caledonia. In the reign of Malcolm I (943–954) the Brythons or Waelisc (Welch) of Strathclyde were brought into subjection, the lowland kingdom of the English (Lothian) being conquered by Malcolm II (1005–1034). From the close of the 11th century until the middle of the 16th there were constant wars between Scotland and England, the outstanding figures in the struggle being William Wallace, who defeated the English at Stirling Bridge (1297), and Robert Bruce, who won the victory of Bannockburn (1314). James IV and many of his nobles fell at the disastrous battle of Flodden (1513), and in 1603 James VI., the Stuart King of Scotland and the heir to the Tudor line of England (his mother, Mary "Queen of Scots," was the great granddaughter of Henry VII.), succeeded Queen Elizabeth on the throne, his successors reigning as Sovereigns of Great Britain. After the abdication (by flight) of James VII. and II., the crown devolved upon William III. (grandson of Charles I.) and Mary (daughter of James VII. and II.) and, their issue failing, upon Anne (second daughter of James VII. and II.). Anne's children died young, and the throne devolved upon George I. (great grandson of James VI. and I.). In 1689 Graham of Claverhouse "roused the Highlands on behalf of James VII. and II. but died after a military success at Killiecrankie. In 1715 armed risings led to the indecisive battle of Sheriffmuir, but the movement died down until 1745 when the "Young Pretender" defeated the Royalist troops under Sir John Cope at Preston Pans and advanced to Derby in England (1746). From Derby, the adherents of "James VIII. and III." (the title claimed for his father by the Young Pretender), fell back on the defensive and the Jacobite movement was finally crushed by the Royalist troops under the Duke of Cumberland at Culloden (April 16, 1746).

The Hebrides did not become part of the Kingdom of Scotland until 1266 when they were ceded to Alexander III. by Magnus of Norway. Orkney and Shetland fell to the Scottish Crown as a pledge for the unpaid dowry of Margaret of Denmark, wife of James III., in 1468, the Danish suzerainty being formally relinquished in 1590.

EDINBURGH.

EDINBURGH, the Capital of the Kingdom, has a municipal area of 32,402 acres, and a population (Census of 1911) of 320,318 (estimated at 450,000 in 1920). The boundaries were extended in 1920 so as to include the Burgh of Leith and part of the suburban district of the County of Midlothian. The city is built on a group of hills and contains in Princes Street the most beautiful thoroughfare in the world. The principal buildings are St. Giles's Church (restored 1879-83), and St. Mary's (Scottish Episcopal) Cathedral (Sir Gilbert Scott), the Castle (which contains, in St. Margaret's Chapel, the oldest building in Scotland), Parliament House (the present seat of the judicature, containing the Advocates' and Signet Libraries), the University, the General Register House (Robert Adam), Royal Scottish Academy, National Portrait Gallery, and Holyrood Palace (containing parts of the royal palace of James IV. and V.). The city is governed by a town council of 71 members, and sends 5 members to Parliament.

Lord Provost (1920-21), The Rt. Hon. John William Chesser.

Town Clerk, Andrew Grierson, S.S.C., J.P.

City Chamberlain, Robert Paton.

GLASGOW.

GLASGOW, a Royal Burgh, City and County of a City, and the principal commercial centre in Scotland, has a municipal area of 19,183 acres, and a population of 784,455 at the Census of 1911 (estimated at 1,124,656 in 1920). The city occupies the north and south banks of the Clyde, one of the chief commercial estuaries of the world, and its trade was valued at £110,248,762 in 1919, the tonnage of the ships entering being 5,149 037 tons, of those cleared 5,031,571 tons. The principal industries are iron and steel works, shipbuilding, chemicals, leather, woollens, muslin-weaving, distilling, inkle-making, tobacco, cotton-mills and furniture. The chief buildings are the Early English Cathedral, built early in the 13th century, and incorporating part of an earlier structure, the University (Sir Gilbert Scott), the City Chambers, the Royal Infirmary and the Western and Victoria Infirmaries, the Art Galleries and the Mitchell Library. The City is governed by a town council of 113 members, and sends 15 members to Parliament.

Lord Provost (1920-21), The Rt. Hon. Thomas Paxton.

In Scotland the principal local court is the Sheriff Court. The Sheriff is the chief judge, but the judge who usually sits is the Sheriff Substitute The jurisdiction of the Sheriff Court is both civil and criminal In civil questions the jurisdiction is practically unlimited, whatever be the money value of the cause On the criminal side the Court has cognizance of all serious crime, but the power of punishment is limited to fine and imprisonment, it does not extend to penal servitude

The Sheriff Clerk is the Clerk of the Sheriff Court, and his duties correspond nearly to those of a Registrar in the English Courts

The Procurator-Fiscal is peculiarly a Scottish official Criminal prosecutions are in Scotland conducted by Crown officials at the public expense, the Lord Advocate and his deputies prosecute in the High Court, the Procurators-Fiscal in the Sheriff Court

The Address of the Secretary of the Sheriff Substitute Association is County Buildings, Falkirk

THE KINGDOM OF IRELAND.

Position and Extent—Ireland lies in the Atlantic Ocean, to the West of Great Britain, and is separated from Scotland by the North Channel and from Wales by the Irish Sea and St George's Channel. The land area of the island is 32,531 sq. miles and its geographical position between 51° 26′ and 55° 21′ N. latitude and from 5° 25′ to 10° 30′ W. longitude. The greatest length of the island, from N.E. to S.W. (Torr Head to Mizen Head), is 302 miles and the greatest breadth from E. to W. (Dundrum Bay to Armagh Head), is 174 miles.

The population at the census of 1911 was 4,390,219, a decrease of 68,556 since the preceding census of 1901.

Relief—The island is occupied for the greater part of its area by the Central Plain, with an elevation of 50 to 350 ft. above mean sea level, with isolated mountain ranges near the coast line. The principal mountains, with their highest points are the Sperrin Mountains (Sawel 2,240 ft.) of County Tyrone in the North, the Mountains of Mourne (Slieve Donard 2,796 ft.) of County Down, and the Wicklow Mountains (Lugnaquilla 3,039 ft.) in the North East; the Derryveagh Mountains (Errigal 2,466 ft.) of County Donegal in the North West; the Connemara Mountains (Twelve Pins 2,695 ft.) of County Galway in the West, Macgillicuddy's Reeks (Carrantuohill 3,414 ft., the highest point in Ireland) in the South West; and the Galtee Mountains (3,018 ft.) of County Tipperary, and the Knockmealdown (2,609 ft.) and Comeragh Mountains (2,470 ft.) of County Waterford in the South.

Hydrography—The principal river of Ireland (and the longest in the British Isles) is the Shannon (240 miles), rising in County Cavan and draining the central plain. The Shannon flows through a chain of loughs to the city of Limerick, and thence to an estuary on the western Atlantic seaboard. The Slaney flows into Wexford Harbour, the Liffey to Dublin Bay, the Boyne to Drogheda, the Lee to Cork Harbour, the Blackwater to Youghal Bay and the Suir, Nore and Barrow to Waterford Harbour.

As in Scotland, the principal hydrographic feature is the Loughs, of which Lough Neagh (150 square miles) in the north east, is the largest in Ireland and the British Isles, others being the Shannon Chain of Allen, Bodeirg, Forbes, Ree and Derg, and the Erne Chain of Gowna Oughter, Lower Erne and Erne, in the central plain; Melvin, Gill, Gara, and Conn in the north and Corrib and Mask (joined by a hidden channel) in the south. In County Kerry to the east of Macgillicuddy's Reeks, are the famous Lakes of Killarney.

Climate—The climate of Ireland is more equable than that of Great Britain, and the rainfall is more evenly distributed. The variation in mean temperature is only about 3° Fahrenheit, the summer extremes being 59° in the N. and 62° in the S.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

Primitive Man—Although little is known concerning the earliest inhabitants of Ireland, there are many traces of neolithic man throughout the island, while the use of bronze implements appears to have become known about the middle of the 17th century B.C. In the later Bronze Age a Celtic race of Goidels appear to have invaded the island, and in the early Iron Age Brythons from South Britain are believed to have effected settlements in the south east, while Picts from North Britain established similar settlements in the north. Towards the close of the Roman occupation of Britain, the dominant tribe in the island was that of the Scoti, who eventually established themselves in the north of the neighbouring island.

Legendary History—According to Irish legends, the island was settled by a Milesian race, who came from Scythia by way of Spain and established the Kingdom of Tara, about 500 B.C. The supremacy of the Ardri (high king) of Tara was acknowledged by eight lesser kingdoms (Munster, Connaught, Ailech, Oriel, Ulidia, Meath, Leinster, and Ossory) ruled by descendants of the eight sons of Miled. The basalt columns on the coast of Antrim, eight miles from Portrush, known as the Giant's Causeway, are connected with the legendary history of Ireland as the remnants of a bridge built in the time of Finn M'Coul (Fingal) to connect Antrim with Scotland (Staffa).

Christianity—Christianity appears to have been known to many of the people of Ireland before the 4th century A.D., although it did not become general until the advent of St Patrick. St Patrick was born in Britain about 389 and was taken to Ireland as a slave about sixteen years later, escaping to Gaul at the age of 22. In 432 he was consecrated Bishop at Auxerre and landed in Wicklow to establish and organise the Christian religion throughout the island.

The Northmen—The Roman conquest of Britain was not extended to Ireland and little is known of the history of the country until the invasions of Northmen (Norwegians and Danes) towards the close of the 8th century A.D. The Norwegians were distinguished as Findgaill (White Strangers) and the Danes as Dubgaill (Black Strangers) names which survive in Fingall, MacDougall and MacDowell, while the name of the island itself is held to be derived from the Scandinavian Ira land (Land of the Irish); the Provinces of Ulster, Leinster and Munster being survivals of the Norse Ulaid stadr, Laigin stadr and Muman stadr. The outstanding events in the encounters with the Northmen are the Battle of Tara (980) at which the Hy Neill king Maelsechlainn II. defeated the Scandinavians of Dublin and the Hebrides under their king Amlaib Cuarán, and the Battle of Clontarf (1014) by which the Scandinavian power was completely broken. After Clontarf the supreme power was disputed by the O'Brians of Munster, the O'Neills of Ulster, and the O'Connors of Connaught, with varying fortunes.

The Anglo Norman Invasion—In 1152 Dermod MacMurrough (Diarmait MacMurchada), the deposed king of Leinster, sought assistance in his struggle with Ruadri O'Connor (the ardri, or high king of Ireland), and visited Henry II., the Norman king of England. Henry authorized him to obtain armed support in England for the recovery of his kingdom and Dermod enlisted the services of Richard de Clare, the Norman Earl of Pembroke, afterwards known as Strongbow. Strongbow landed at Waterford (Aug. 23, 1170) with 200 knights and 1,000 other troops for the reconquest of Leinster, where he eventually settled after marriage with Dermod's daughter In 1172 (Oct 18) Henry II. himself landed in Ireland, with a force larger than Strongbow's, and obtained homage from the Irish kings, but Anglo Norman rule underwent many fluctuations in the succeeding centuries, being confined in the early 15th century within the English "Pale of 600 square miles. In the reign of Henry VII English rule was greatly extended, and the administration of Irish affairs was anglicised by Robert Poyning, Lord Deputy of Ireland, who summoned the Parliament of Drogheda (Dec. 1494) at which were enacted the Statutes of Drogheda afterwards known as Poyning's Law making the legislature of Ireland subordinate to and dependent on that of England A later parliament conferred on Henry VIII the title of King of Ireland, and in Elizabeth's reign the conquest of the island was completed In the time of James I an apparently trivial incident the introduction of the potato (1616), profoundly influenced the future of the nation as it required little labour to cultivate, and Raleigh's fatal gift soon became so much the main food of the Irish that a potato famine caused almost universal starvation In the same reign also many of the leading families of the north eastern counties fled the country after participation in an abortive rebellion and their lands were distributed amongst English and Scottish colonists, adherents of the Reformed Church, the number of Protestant settlers constantly increasing in succeeding years in spite of racial and religious estrangements with the Roman Catholic Celts Cromwell's campaign in Ireland (1649–1650) was carried on with ruthless cruelty and universal military success terminating in the subjugation of the kingdom and the legislative union with England but further estrangement was caused between the Roman Catholics and the Protestant Colonists At the Revolution of 1688 the Protestants adhered to the cause of William and Mary, and William III defeated the Roman Catholic adherents of James II at the Battle of the Boyne (July 1, 1690) and at the Battle of Aughrim (July 12, 1691) The Jacobite risings of 1715 and 1745 found no adherents in Ireland, but various insurrections took place in the 18th century, culminating in the rebellion of 1798, after the suppression of which the Act of Union (Jan 1, 1801) combined the Irish and British legislatures Catholic Emancipation was enacted by the Parliament of the United Kingdom in 1829, and extensive relief works were carried out to mitigate the severities of famine from 1831–1847 In 1845 the population reached its highest point (8 295,061) of whom the vast majority were dependent for food on the success of the potato crop

Home Rule.—The demand for a separate Parliament for Ireland was first advanced at Westminster by an Irish party under the leadership of Isaac Butt (born 1813, died 1879), who was succeeded by Charles Stewart Parnell (born 1846, died 1891) by whose efforts the necessity of granting a measure of Home Rule to Ireland was impressed upon one of the great political parties of Great Britain After many failures to pass a Bill through both Houses of Parliament a Home Rule Bill was eventually placed on the Statute Book in 1914, with a suspensory clause for the duration of the War In the later stages of the War, however the extreme party of Irish politicians developed their organization under the name of Sinn Fein (Ourselves Alone) and demanded complete severance from Great Britain and the recognition of an Irish Republic Various efforts have been made by the Cabinet to arrive at a solution of the Irish problem which is complicated by the separatist demands of the extremists (who are in open rebellion against the Government) and the desire of the Protestants of Ulster to remain united with Great Britain, with the additional problem of the minorities of Protestants in the Southern counties A Home Rule Bill, in lieu of that placed on the Statute Book in 1914 was before Parliament in 1920 an island in the Irish Sea, in lat. 54° 3 – 54° 25′ N. and long. 4° 18′ – 4° 47′ W., nearly equidistant from England, Scotland, and Ireland. The total land area is 145,325 acres (227 sq. miles), with a population (1911) of 52,016. The cultivated area (1920) was 88,831 acres, and the live stock included 6,334 horses, 21,110 cattle, 73,950 sheep, and 3,352 pigs. In the ninth century a body of malcontents from Norway emigrated to the western isles of Scotland, and their prosperity drew upon them the anger of the Norwegian monarch Harold, who in the year 870 sent forth a great expedition and conquered the Orkneys and the Shetlands, the Western isles, and Man. For three centuries the Norwegian rule remained intact, but when, in 1263, Alexander III. defeated the famous Haco, at the battle of Largs, all these islands fell under Scottish rule. On his accession to the English throne, Henry IV. seized on the Isle of Man, and in 1406 bestowed it on the Stanley family. In 1827 the Crown purchased it for the sum of £417,144. The land is rich in minerals, lead, iron, blende and slate, and exports large quantities of agricultural produce. Fifty miles of railway have been constructed, and about 23 miles of electric tram road.

Man is governed by a separate Legislature, called the Tynwald, consisting of two branches—the Governor and Council and the House of Keys. Bills after having passed both Houses are signed by the members, and then sent for the Royal Assent. Unless signed by the legal quorum of each House a Bill is not sent for the Royal Assent, the quorum of the Upper House or Council being the Governor and two Members, and of the Lower House or Keys thirteen Members, the majority of the whole number (24). After receiving the Royal Assent, it does not become law until promulgated in the English and Manx languages on the Tynwald Hill. On the promulgation taking place a certificate thereof is signed by the Governor and the Speaker of the House of Keys.

CAPITAL, Douglas. Pop. (1911), 21,192 (Castletown is the ancient capital); the other towns are Peel and Ramsey.

THE CHANNEL ISLANDS

situated off the north-west coast of France (at distances of from ten to thirty miles) are the only portions of the Dukedom of Normandy now belonging to England, to which they have been attached ever since the Conquest. They consist of Jersey (28,717 acres), Guernsey (15,654 acres), and the following dependencies of Guernsey—Alderney (1,962 acres), Brechou (74), Great Sark (1,035), Little Sark (239), Herm (320), Jethou (44), and Lithou (38), a total of 47,083 acres, or 73·4 square miles.

The climate is mild, and the soil exceptionally productive. The land under cultivation in 1916 was 49,678 vergées (2¼ vergées = 1 acre), the principal product of the soil of Jersey being potatoes, tomatoes, and wheat, and of Guernsey green crops and oats, fruits and tomatoes. The famous Jersey and Guernsey breeds of cows have earned a well-deserved celebrity. The principal officer in each island is the Lieut.-Governor, who represents the King-Emperor (the Duke of Normandy). French is the official language of the local legislatures, called the States, and of the Royal Court, and is still spoken by the people, but English is now permissible in the Legislative Assembly. The Bailiff, appointed by the Crown, presides over the States and over the Royal Court or judicial body. The islands being all but exempt from imperial taxation they possess a very large trade. The chief town of Jersey is St. Helier, on the south side, where there is excellent sea-bathing; the principal town of Guernsey is St. Pierre Port, on the east coast.

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

LONDON was famed for its vast conflux of traders and its abundant commerce even in the first century of the Christian era. From the Romans it is said it received municipal institutions, which have endured in their main features to the present day. In Saxon times it was in reality a small independent State, and its burgesses maintained their independence even after the Battle of Hastings. William the Norman only gained possession of their city by means of a treaty with them, and about eight years after he granted a charter, which is still preserved. It is addressed to William the Bishop, Godfrey the Portreeve, and all the Burgesses, and promises that they shall be "law worthy" (i.e., possessed of privileges) as they were in the days of Edward the Confessor. The Portreeve, however, received the Norman title of Bailiff, which, in 1191, was changed to Mayor; the first holder under the new name being Henry Fitzalwyn, who filled the office for 24 years. On his death a new charter was granted by King John in 1214, which directed the Mayor to be chosen annually, which has ever since been done, though in early times the same individual often held the office more than once. A familiar instance is that of "Whittington, thrice Lord Mayor of London" (in reality four times, A.D. 1397, 1398, 1406, 1419); and many modern cases have occurred. The title of Lord Mayor is said to have been first bestowed in 1354 by Edward III. The Lord Mayor is elected at Michaelmas; he is sworn into office on November 8, and on the following day presented to the Lord Chief Justice at the Royal Courts of Justice, to take the final declaration of office—the pageant, conducted with some degree of civic state, being popularly known as the Lord Mayor's Show.

Aldermen were first appointed by a charter of Henry III. in 1242, and were elected annually between 1377 and 1394, when a charter of Richard II. directed them to be chosen for life. The Common Council was at an early date substituted for a popular assembly called the Folkmote. At first only two representatives were sent from each ward, but the number has since been greatly increased, some wards having as many as 16 members, and none less than four. Sheriffs (as well as aldermen) were Saxon officers, who usually had charge of a large district. The time of their appointment for London is uncertain, but they appear in ancient records as early as A.D. 1130. At first they were only the officers of the Crown, and were named by the Barons of the Exchequer; but King John gave them, in the first year of his reign, permission to choose their own Sheriffs. The citizens, however, lost this privilege, as far as the election of Sheriff of Middlesex is concerned, by the Local Government Act, 1888, but they continue as heretofore to choose the Sheriffs of the City of London. They are appointed on Midsummer Day, and enter on office at Michaelmas.

Officers.—The Recorder was first appointed in 1298. The Chamberlain is an ancient officer. There were at one time two Chamberlains—the King's Chamberlain and the Chamberlain of the Guildhall. The former appears to have fallen into abeyance circ. 1319. The first contemporary record of the office of City Chamberlain is 1276. The Town Clerk (called Common Clerk) and Common Serjeant (now appointed by the Crown) are mentioned as officers in the charter of Edward II., A.D. 1319, but the offices can be traced to a much earlier date than this.

THE CITY GUILDS (LIVERY COMPANIES)

As will be seen from the following table, many of the London Guilds or Livery Companies are possessed of great wealth Sixteen of the Companies have more than ten thousand pounds a year and most of them are very liberal in their charities especially in the way of education

In the majority of cases the designation of the Company gives a clue to the trade which gave rise to the guild, the Cordwainers (cobblers), Fletchers (arrow makers), Loriners (bridle, bit and spur makers), Poulters (poulterers) Scriveners (legal writers), Upholders (upholsterers), and Vintners (wine sellers) retaining the ancient name of the trade

The order of precedence is given in parentheses after the name of each Company 8 203 Liverymen of the Guilds are entitled to vote at elections in Common Hall (see p 543) The actual net number is however, smaller, as many belong to more than one Guild, and only those who have residential or other qualification in the City have the Parliamentary vote in that district

Parliamentary Boundaries.—In consequence of changes under the Representation of the People Act (1918) the Administrative County of London now includes the whole of the Metropolitan Parliamentary Divisions. It also comprises the 28 Metropolitan Boroughs and the City of London.

The Metropolitan Police District extends over a radius of 15 miles from Charing Cross, exclusive of the City of London, with an assessable value in 1919-20 of £57 876,591, and embraces an area of upwards of 699 square miles. The number of new houses built since 1879 up to and including the year 1917 is 602,362, with 34 in course of erection, the new mileage since 1879 being 1,636.

THE London County Council was constituted under the Local Government Act of 1888. London is an administrative county, covering an area of 117 square miles

The City of London is an electoral division of the county The County of the City of London is a county for non administrative purposes, such as quarter sessions, justices, &c and the Metropolis outside the City is a county for non administrative purposes, by name the County of London in which the justices continue their judicial duties

The Council comprises a chairman, 20 aldermen and 124 councillors together 145 or if the chairman be also an elected member or alderman, 144 By the Representation of the People Act 1918 following on the redistribution of seats under that act for parliamentary and local government purposes the membership of the Council was increased by 6 councillors and 1 alderman The term of office for aldermen is 6 years and half retire every 3 years The councillors are elected for 3 years The councillors are elected directly by the ratepayers and the councillors elect the aldermen The positions of aldermen and councillors are the same except as to the term of office

The method by which the Council discharges the multitudinous duties entrusted to it is a generous delegation of powers to committees under well defined rules subject to the reservation to the Council itself of all questions of principle, and to periodical reports of action taken

The Finance Committee have important statutory powers No costs debt or liability exceeding £50 may be incurred by the Council except upon a resolution passed on an estimate submitted by the Finance Committee The Council is the principal money raising body for all the local authorities in the county and has a net debt according to the latest returns of £44 734 000 (of which £10 946 000 represents debt incurred for revenue producing undertakings) and an annual expenditure of about twenty seven millions of which about twelve millions are expended on education The Asylums and Mental Deficiency Committee administer the duties falling on the Council under the Lunacy Acts and the Mental Deficiency Act 1913. The Council has mental hospitals with accommodation for over 20 000 patients The Housing Committee perform the duties cast upon the Council by the Housing of the Working Classes Acts and the Housing Town Planning &c Act 1919 including the clearance of insanitary areas and the building of working-class dwellings The total capital outlay up to 31st March 1920 in respect of schemes carried out prior to the Act of 1919 was Clearance of insanitary areas, £2,714 000, working class dwellings, £2,984 000 It has always been the aim of the Council to make its working class dwellings self supporting, and in this taking all the dwellings as a whole it succeeded until last year, the returns for which showed a deficiency of £10,600 on a total rent roll of about £355,000 The increased rents which can be charged under the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, will, it is anticipated, be sufficient to restore the estates which were completed before 1919 to a self supporting condition In response to the appeal of the Government to local authorities generally, the Council prepared a scheme which has been approved by the Ministry of Health, to be carried out in 5 years, from 1919, for the erection of 29 000 new dwellings to accommodate approximately 145 000 people Any deficiency on this scheme in excess of the produce of a penny rate, will be met out of moneys provided by Parliament

The Improvements Committee are responsible for the carrying out of street improvements and the construction of bridges (outside the City of London) and tunnels across the river Thames The largest improvements carried out in recent years are the new streets between Holborn and the Strand now known as Kingsway and Aldwych tunnels under the Thames at Rotherhithe and Woolwich and an extensive improvement at Westminster including a new embankment of the Thames between the Houses of Parliament and Lambeth Bridge

The Metropolitan Main Drainage system covers about 149 square miles including certain districts outside the county and comprises 370 miles of main storm relief intercepting and outfall sewers eleven pumping stations, two sewage precipitation stations and six sludge vessels The sewage is conveyed to the outfalls at Barking and Crossness, and there the solid matters held in suspension are precipitated and the sludge is taken out to sea The Council is carrying out experimental work in connexion with other systems of sewage treatment. The total capital outlay on main drainage is upwards of £12 700 000 and further expenditure, amounting to several millions, is in prospect for a scheme to relieve certain districts from flooding after heavy falls of rain

The Council is the Tramway Authority for London The system extends over 149 street miles of which 144 miles are electric lines (mostly underground conduit) Practically the whole of this great system is worked by the Council and through running with various systems outside the County of London is now maintained to the great advantage and convenience of the travelling public The total capital outlay on tramways amounted on March 31st 1920 to £13 887 000, and the net debt outstanding to £8 086 000. The results of working for the year 1919 20 were gross receipts £4 295 846 surplus on working £614 947 net deficiency after payment of interest on capital outlay and providing for repayment of debt £100 712 of which £81 898 was met out of the Renewals Fund and General Reserve Fund and the balance of £18 814 carried forward to 1920-21

The Education Committee comprises thirty eight members of the Council and twelve co opted members of whom not less than five are required to be women In accordance with the Education Act, 1918 the Council has submitted to the Board of Education a scheme for the development of educational facilities of all kinds.

Amongst the Other Powers and Duties of the Council may be mentioned the following —Sanctioning of loans required by the councils of the metropolitan boroughs the sanctioning of local sewers; controlling the building line and the naming and numbering of streets, supervising buildings and district surveyors, dangerous structures, cattle diseases, controlling storage of explosive substances and petroleum infant life protection gas gas meter, and electric meter testing, testing weights and measures, licensing of slaughter houses and of cow houses, supervision of common lodging houses, the granting of music and dancing licences public health, including treatment of tuberculosis and diagnosis and treatment of venereal diseases, historic buildings and monuments, inspection of factories and certain other buildings to secure means of escape from fire, administration of the Shops Act the Children Act, and the Midwives Acts, licensing and inspection of employment agencies, registration of massage establishments, licensing of premises under the Cinematograph Act, registration of motor cars collection of duties on dog and establishment and certain other local taxation licences and registration of War charities A Motor Ambulance service has been installed, with six stations spread over the county and special facilities for calls by telephone

The Expenditure of the Council, including loans to other local authorities, is met by two chief sources of supply—capital money raised by the issue of Stock, Bonds or bills, or by the use of the Sinking Fund of the Council's debt, and current income raised in a county rate or by the revenue of undertakings Certain contributions, including education grants, are also received from the Imperial Exchequer During the war, expenditure on capital account was reduced to very small proportions, and large sums available from the sinking fund and other sources were invested in War Loan and War Bonds

No issue of London County Consolidated Stock has been made by the Council since May 1909, but the Council in April 1920 made an issue of £7 000 000 5½ per cent Bonds convertible under certain conditions into 5 per cent London

County Consolidated Stock, and subsequently agreed to a further issue of £3,000,000 of such Bonds In co operation with the Councils of the Metropolitan Boroughs the Council has also made an issue of 6 per cent Local Bonds for Housing, the amount of the issue in the first instance being £5,000,000 This is to meet the expenditure of Metropolitan Borough Councils on housing schemes which rank for State financial assistance, to which reference has been made under the Council's housing scheme All borrowings by the Council are subject to the provision of a sinking fund, under Treasury approval, sufficient to repay all expenditure within a period of 60 years The total Stock now outstanding amounts to £71,853,472, out of total issues of £77,856,011 These figures are exclusive of the issues of Bonds

The Rating for the year 1920–21 was estimated at the beginning of the year at the amounts shown in the statement given on p 548, namely, 4*s* 1*d* in the pound over the whole county, including the City, and a further rate over the county outside the City of 4*d* in the pound, together 4*s* 5*d* Of the total rate, 2*s* 5*d* was for education One half of these amounts was raised for the first half year For the second half year, however, the rate had to be increased by 9½*d* in the pound, of which 6*d* was in respect of education, and this increase, representing £1,745,330, must be borne in mind in connection with the figures in the statement The Assessable Value of the County of London on 6th April, 1920, was £45 634,817—a 1*d* rate over the whole county producing £190,145

THEATRES IN 1919–20.—The most notable productions in 1919–20 were Gay's Beggar's Opera revived after about two centuries (1727) at the Lyric Opera House Hammersmith The Skin Game by John Galsworthy Mary Rose, by Sir J. Barrie two comedies (Mr. Pim Passes By and The Romantic Age) by A. A. Milne the spectacular Garden of Allah (Hichens), which opened at Drury Lane on June 24 1920 and occupied the theatre during the usual pantomime season of 1920–21 a Grand Guignol season at the Little Theatre a Repertory season at the Old Drill Hall Hampstead, and Shakespearean and other classical works at the Old Vic. Chu Chin Chow (His Majesty's) reached its 1,467th consecutive performance on Oct. 17 1919 and its 2,000th performance on Dec. 29 1920. The record run at a London theatre in pre-war days was held by Charley's Aunt (1,466 consecutive performances).

The season as a whole, was prolific in production with frequent changes in programme after short runs, a total of 71 new plays and adaptations being introduced in addition to many revivals. Shakespearean productions at West End Theatres included Othello, Hamlet, Henry V. and Julius Cæsar.

A tablet has been affixed by the Records Committee of the London County Council on 88 Curtain Road, Shoreditch to commemorate the site of "The Theatre" Shoreditch, the first theatre in London.

CINEMATOGRAPH THEATRES.—It has been stated that there are upwards of 4,000 Picture Palaces and Cinematograph Theatres in the United Kingdom. The latest tendency is for first rate authors and artists to co-operate for the production of high class work, and the general level of the productions shows an upward movement. The following are the principal Cinemas and "Picture Theatres" in London:—

THE WORLD'S LITERATURE.

Books.—It is estimated that over 155,000 books, pamphlets and magazines are published annually in the various countries of the world, and that over 14,000,000 separate works have been published since printing was invented in the fifteenth century. The three largest libraries in the world are the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris, which contains over 5,000,000 volumes, the British Museum Library, London, where there are 40 miles of shelves, and an estimated total of about 4,000,000 volumes, and the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C., which contains 2,000,000 volumes. In most countries one or more libraries are entitled to have sent to them a free copy of every published book. In the United Kingdom, under an Act of 1835, a copy of every book published in the country must be sent to the British Museum, the Bodleian (Oxford), the Public Library, Cambridge, the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh, and the Library of Trinity College, Dublin, while a sixth copy was added for the National Library of Wales by the Copyright Act of 1911.

Newspapers.—It has been stated that over 60,000 newspapers are now appearing at daily or weekly intervals in the various quarters of the globe. Of these considerably over one-half are in the English language, there being 23 000 in the United States, and over 13,000 in the British Empire. The most celebrated newspaper in the world is The Times, founded in London in 1788. The greatest circulation is that of the Daily Mail, founded in London on May 4, 1896. During the newspaper strike in Paris, La Presse sold 4,120,000 copies in one day (Nov. 18, 1919).

In the Metropolitan Police Area Motor Cabs are fitted with a taximeter, which records the fare by a combination of time and distance. The Secretary of State has authorised the addition of 50 per cent. to the charges shown on the taximeter, the increase being operative from March 1, 1920, and applying also to the charges for luggage and extra persons. In addition to the legal fare and charges for luggage and extra persons, the Secretary of State has authorised an additional charge of 6*d.* for every hiring of a Horse Cab. Notice in relation to the increased charges must be conspicuously displayed inside Motor and Horse Cabs.

MOTOR CABS.

FARE payable for the hiring of a Motor Cab fitted with a Taximeter, including the increases noted in the leading paragraph:—

	s.	d.
(a) Not exceeding one mile, or for a period of time, or a journey not exceeding ten minutes	1	0
(b) Exceeding one mile or ten minutes:—
(1) For each quarter of a mile, or for a period of time, or a journey, not exceeding two and a half minutes	0	3
(2) For any less period or distance	0	3

In addition to the above the driver is entitled to charge the following extra payments:—

	s.	d.
(1) Luggage:—Whether hired by distance or by time—for each bicycle, child's mail cart, or perambulator, 9*d.*; for each package carried outside	0	3
(2) Extra persons:—When licensed to carry more than two persons—for each additional person beyond two, the whole journey	0	9

Provided that two children under the age of ten years shall count as one person.

HORSE VEHICLES.

Exclusive of the extra 6*d. noted in the leading paragraph.*

FARES BY DISTANCE (Cabs either with or without a Distance Recorder, but without a Taximeter): If hired and discharged within the Four-Mile Radius, for any distance not exceeding two miles

s.	d.

The driver may notify, by means approved by the Commissioner of Police, that he is willing to accept a fare of 6*d.* for any journey not exceeding a mile.

s.	d.

For every additional mile or part of a mile

If hired outside the Four-Mile Circle, wherever discharged, for the first and each succeeding mile or part of a mile 1

If hired within, but discharged outside the Four-Mile Circle, whole distance not exceeding one mile, 1*s.*; exceeding one mile, then for each mile ended within the circle, 6*d.*; and for each mile or part of a mile ended outside 1 0

FARES BY TIME: Inside the Four-Mile Circle. Four-wheeled Cabs, for one hour or less, 2*s.*; two-wheeled Cabs.. 2 6

If above one hour, for every quarter hour or part of a quarter of the whole time, four-wheeled Cab, 6*d.*; if a two-wheeled Cab ... 0 8

If above one hour, then for every quarter hour or part of quarter of the whole time.. 0 8

If hired within, but discharged outside, the Four-Mile Circle, the same.

EXTRA PAYMENTS.—Hirers of Cabs should particularly notice these regulations, as disputes generally arise from their not being clearly understood.

Whether hired by DISTANCE OR BY TIME.

	s.	d.
LUGGAGE.—For each bicycle, child's mail cart, or perambulator, 6*d.*; for each package carried outside the carriage	0	2

NOTE.—Luggage carried on the footboard of a hansom-pattern cab so that the doors do not close over it is deemed to be outside within the meaning of this clause.

	s.	d.
EXTRA PERSONS.—For each above two (two children under 10 years of age count as one person)	0	6
WAITING.—By distance: for every 15 minutes completed—if hired within the Four-Mile Circle, 4 wheels, 6*d.*; 2 wheels ...	0	8
If hired without Circle, 2 or 4 wheels ...	0	8

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.—The fares by Taximeter Motor Cabs are based upon a combination of time and distance. When the cab is kept waiting, delayed by traffic, or caused to travel at the rate of less than six miles an hour, then the charge is by time. When travelling at a speed of six or more miles an hour, then the charge is by distance. Fares for horse-drawn cabs are according to distance or time, at the option of the hirer, expressed at the commencement of the hiring; if not otherwise expressed, the fare to be paid according to distance; but driver can refuse to be hired by time between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m.

DRIVER, if hired by distance, is not compelled to drive more than six miles, nor more than one hour if hired by time; further, if hired by time, the driver may be required to drive at any rate not exceeding four miles an hour; if required to drive more than four miles within the hour he may demand, in addition to the fare regulated by time, for every mile or any part exceeding four miles, the fare regulated by distance.

AGREEMENT to pay more than legal fare is not binding.

If the driver agree beforehand to take any sum less than the proper fare, the penalty for demanding more than the sum agreed upon is 40*s.*

The driver of every cab shall have with him, and when required produce, the Authorized Book of Distances, and every driver of any cab shall, if so required, deliver to the hirer a printed ticket, showing fares, &c.

Driver may demand a reasonable sum as a deposit from persons hiring and requiring him to wait at any place, over and above the fare to which the driver is entitled for driving thither. Penalty 40*s.*, if driver, having received such deposit, refuse to wait, or go away before the expiration of the time for which the deposit shall be a sufficient compensation; or if the driver shall refuse to account for such deposit.

The London Cab Act, 1896, enacts that if any person hires a cab, knowing, or having reason to believe, he cannot pay the fare; or, fraudulently endeavours to avoid payment of a fare; or, having failed, or refused, to pay a fare, refuses, or gives a false address, is liable, in addition to the fare, to a penalty of 40*s.*

The fares legally demandable by a stage carriage are those painted in a conspicuous manner on the inside of every such carriage, and they are recoverable in a summary way before a Justice of the Peace, in the same way as fares for a

(and in the case of a stage carriage, by the conductor, or driver if no conductor) at the nearest Police Station within twenty-four hours, if not sooner claimed by the owner; such property to be returned to the person who shall prove to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Police that the same belonged to him, on payment of all expenses incurred, and of such sum to the driver as the Secretary of State has by order prescribed. Property found in a stage carriage by a passenger must be given up to the conductor under a penalty of £10.

All inquiries, &c., relating to public carriages should be addressed to the Public Carriage Office, New Scotland Yard; but inquiries as to property left in a cab or stage carriage should be made at the Lost Property Office, New Scotland Yard. Office hours, 10 to 4.

LAMPS TO BE LIGHTED.

The following regulations, under the Lights (Vehicles) Order of September 30, 1919, apply to the whole of England and Wales:—

EVERY VEHICLE, between half an hour after sunset and half an hour before sunrise, must carry:—

At the front—two white lights, one on the extreme off side, and the other on the extreme near side.

At the rear—a red light on the off side.

Except that.—

(1) BICYCLES AND PEDAL TRICYCLES need have only one white light in front and one red light at the rear.

(2) HANDCARTS need only carry one lamp on the off side showing a white light to the front and a red light to the rear.

In addition:—

TRACTION ENGINES must carry the above lights from sunset to sunrise during the six months from October 1 to March 31, and the lamps must be provided with shutters to enable them to be temporarily screened.

HARVESTING.—County Councils have power to make orders exempting vehicles used for the purpose of harvesting from carrying lights.

HACKNEY CARRIAGE STATISTICS.

During 1919 there were licensed public carriages:—Hansoms, 38; clarences—animal 549, mechanical 5,391; omnibuses—animal 15, mechanical 3,299; tramway cars—mechanical 2,619; total, 11,911. Drivers and conductors:—Cab drivers—animal 799, mechanical 8,600; stage drivers—animal 10, mechanical 11,597; composite licences (stage driver and conductor)—animal 16; mechanical 1,918; conductors, 15,490; total, 38,430.

HACKNEY AND STAGE CARRIAGE DRIVERS before obtaining a licence are required to pass an examination as to their ability to drive, and hackney carriage drivers, in addition, have to pass an examination as to their knowledge of town. It extends to a knowledge of the principal squares, clubs, hospitals, hotels, theatres, streets, and public buildings in London. During 1919, of 886 men examined, 333 were successful. The proportion of drivers to hackney carriages is 15·7 drivers to 10 carriages.

LOST PROPERTY.

Of lost property, 55,384 articles were deposited, of which 24,174 were claimed by the owners. The number of awards paid to drivers, &c, was 21,434.

STREET ACCIDENTS IN U.K., 1919.

IN addition to the accidents on the various railways of the U.K., there were no fewer than 51,326 accidents caused by vehicles on streets and roads in 1919. Of this number 2,628 were fatal and 48,698 non-fatal, compared with 2,193 fatal and 35,732 non-fatal accidents in 1918.

DECREASE IN BANKRUPTCIES.

England and Wales.

The total proceedings begun in all courts during 1918 was 488,958, as compared with 666,715 in the preceding year, a decrease of 177,757, or 27 per cent. As in previous years, the falling-off is almost wholly in proceedings commenced in county courts, these declining from 609,526 to 438,182, a decrease of 171,344, or 28 per cent. If the county court figures are excluded from the total of proceedings commenced, the decrease in the other courts was only 6,413, or 11 per cent.

Both bankruptcy petitions and companies winding-up proceedings have steadily diminished, the former since 1908 and the latter since 1912. Bankruptcy petitions fell from 3,933 to 1,276 during the war, a decrease of 68 per cent. Actions in county courts decreased from over 1,000,000 in 1914 to under 500,000 in 1918. On the other hand, the average amount claimed per plaint rose from £3 in 1913 to £4 7*s*. 6*d*. in 1918.

TITHE RENT CHARGE.

THE Tithe Rent Charge is based on the septennial average price of wheat, barley, and oats, the basic price per imperial quarter being taken at 56*s*. 8*d*. for wheat, 31*s*. 8*d*. for barley, and 22*s*. for oats (the Rent Charge being £100 when based on [illegible]).

Tithe Rent Charge for 1913 was £74 14*s*. 9¾*d*.; for 1914, £75 16*s*. 4*d*.; for 1915, £77 1*s*. 4¾*d*.; for 1916, £83 2*s*. 6¾*d*.; for 1917, £92 2*s*. 0¼*d*.; and has been fixed until Jan. 1, 1926, by the Tithe Act (1918) at £109 3*s*. 11*d*.

THE CHILTERN HUNDREDS

RESIGNATION OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT — No duly elected member of the Commons can resign his seat he must apply for some office of profit under the Crown, and so vacate his seat under the Act of Settlement, 1707 (6 Anne, c 7) and the usual practice is to apply for the Stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds, or of the Manor of Poynings or Northstead, or the Escheatorship of Munster, whereupon the seat is declared vacant (under the Place Act of 1742 which expressly permitted acceptance of such offices to serve as an excuse for resignation) and a new writ is issued by the Speaker

PRIME MINISTER'S RESIDENCE

DOWNING STREET Whitehall S W 1 — Named after a politician of Charles II's reign No 10 is the official town residence of the Prime Minister No 11 of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and No 12 is the office of the Government Whips Chequers, a country residence for Prime Ministers (from Jan 1, 1921), was accepted by Mr Lloyd George in 1917 (with an endowment to maintain the estate, &c) from Lord and Lady Lee of Fareham Chequers is a Tudor mansion in the Chilterns, about 3 miles from Princes Risborough, Bucks, and contains a collection of Cromwellian portraits and relics

LONDON: PRINTED BY WILLIAM CLOWES AND SONS, LIMITED, DUKE STREET STAMFORD STREET, S.E.

THE INDIAN EMPIRE extends over a territory larger than the Continent of Europe without Russia. Legally, "British India" means all territories governed by the King Emperor through the Governor-General of India, or through any officer subordinate to him, while "India" means British India, together with any territories of any prince or chief under the suzerainty of His Majesty, exercised through the Governor-General of India or any officer subordinate to him (Act 52-3 Vict., c. 63, s. 18). There are tracts of tribal territory on the N.W. and N.E. frontiers under the political influence, though not yet under the administrative rule, of the Indian Government.

Boundaries.—The political boundary of India marches with Persia from the Gulf of Oman to near Zulfikar on the Hariirud, then with the former Russian Empire along the frontier laid down by agreement in 1885 as far as the Oxus at Khamiab, thence along the Oxus by the Panjah branch up to the Victoria lake, and from the east end of that lake by the line demarcated in 1895 up to Povalo Schveikovski on the Taghdumbash Pamir, where three empires—the British, Russian, and Chinese—meet. From this point the frontier—in many parts not yet clearly defined—touches the Chinese Empire mainly along the crests of the Muztagh (Karakoram) range and the Himalayas, till the limits of French Indo-China are reached on the Upper Mekong. The Indian frontier, on leaving the Mekong, marches with Siam till it reaches the sea at Victoria Point, half-way down the Malay peninsula. Beyond the sea the Indian Empire includes the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, the Laccadive and Minicoy Islands, Aden and Perim, besides protectorates over Socotra, Bahrein and various chiefships along the coast from Aden to the Persian Gulf. Continental India, including Baluchistan, reaches from 8° to 37° N. latitude, and from 61° to 101° E. longitude. Delhi, the new capital, lies in 77° E. long.

Area and Population.—The total area of India proper is about 1,803,000 square miles, with a population of over 315 millions (about three-fourths of the population of the British Empire). The British Provinces, as distinguished from the Indian States comprise 61 per cent. of the area, and nearly 78 per cent. of the population. The details are as follows —

* Districts and Administered Territories. † Includes an estimated population of 1,622,265. ‡ Included in Punjab.

Physical Features.—Excluding Burma, which forms no part of the Indian peninsula, we may broadly divide the country into three sections, viz., the Himalayan region, the northern river-plains, and the southern table-land.

The Himalayas.—The Himalayas (which lie partly beyond the frontier), with their southern offshoots, form the natural northern boundary of India. The Himalayan range runs for 1,500 miles from N.W. to S.E., with a varying breadth of 150 to 200 miles, and attains a general height of 20,000 feet above the plain, culminating in the loftiest peaks yet measured on the globe—Mount Everest, 29,141 feet, Kunchinjunga, 28,146 feet, and Dhaulagiri, 26,826 feet, near the centre of the range; and Mount Godwin Austen, 28,250 feet, near its junction with the Hindu Kush. The line of perpetual snow is at about 16,000 feet. The Himalayas collect and store up water for the plains below. The slopes afford a representation of the tropical zone (especially on the southern slopes to the E.), the temperate zone (particularly to the S.W. of the range), and the arctic zone as the upward journey is taken from the plains. In the Himalayas are several sanatoria, including Murree, Simla, Mussoorie, Naini Tal, and Darjiling. Himalayan vegetation includes such varied species as the tree-fern, ilex, pine, oak, fir, deodar (cedar), rhododendron, barley, oats, millet, and many domestic vegetables. The fauna are as varied as the flora, and include the bison, musk-deer, yak, wild sheep and goat, bear, elephant, monkey, and tiger, with eagles, partridges, and pheasants. Between the Himalayas and the plains to the S.E. is the great fever-haunted Tarai or Duar jungle, densely forest-covered and full of big game.

The Great Plain.—The northern river-plains, lying at the foot of the Himalayas, comprise the rich alluvial plains watered by the Indus, the Ganges, the Lower Brahmaputra, and their tributaries. At no great distance from one another, four rivers take their rise in the Himalayas. The sources of two are on the north side—the Indus, which flows westward for 1,800 miles, and the Tsan-po or Brahmaputra, which flows eastward for nearly 1,500 miles. The other two, on the southern slope, are the Sutlej, which, after flowing W. and S.W. for 900 miles and collecting various other streams, joins the Indus, and the Ganges, which, during a journey S.E. and E. of about 1,550 miles, drains almost all the Bengal plain. The Brahmaputra, after flowing along the northern side as far as the eastern extremity of the Himalayas, turns sharply to the S., then to the W., and finally joins the Ganges, 75 miles from where their combined streams enter the Bay of Bengal. Thus the Himalayas supply India with the water gathered on both slopes. The Indus and Ganges, with their tributaries, are the source of an extensive system of irrigation by canals. The richest, most populous, and most historically famous part of India lies in the basins of these great rivers. Formerly the Ganges was the only great highway of Bengal; it is still the fertiliser and the water-carrier. But a close network of railways is increasingly used for transport. The richness of the Indo-Gangetic plain, with its ample rainfall, enables it to support a dense population, almost wholly agricultural. The density of the population rises in some districts to 900 per square mile. On the other hand, in Baluchistan there are only 6 persons to the square mile. The population has increased most in the densest areas, and pressure on the soil is severe in parts of Bihar and the United Provinces. In Northern India there are two harvests, rabi (spring) crops being reaped in March and April, kharif (autumn) crops in October to December. In the north we find wheat, pulse, maize, millet, barley, and tea; while in the south, indigo, cotton, sugar-cane, jute, oilseeds, tobacco, opium, and spices are produced. Among the fauna are monkeys, panthers, tigers, leopards, hyenas, jackals, squirrels, elephants, deer, crocodiles, and snakes. Salt, mica, and coal are the chief minerals. The Ganges delta yields rice, bamboos, and a large variety of palms. The Aravalli range, the primeval chain of India, divides Rajputana from the Central India States. To the N.W. of the peninsula lies the mountainous, barren, and thinly populated region of Baluchistan.

The Deccan.—Just as the Himalayas on the N. and the Hindu Kush and Suleiman Mountains on the N.W. form natural barriers of defence for Hindustan, so do the Vindhya Mountains, running almost due E. from the head of the Gulf of Cambay, north of the Nerbudda River, form a firm southern boundary to the river-plains of Northern India. Southern India, or the Deccan, is a plateau of triangular shape and very old geological formation, bounded on two sides by the Malabar and Coromandel coasts, which converge at Cape Comorin, and on the third by the Vindhyas. The Eastern and Western Ghauts all but complete this environing triangle of mountain ranges. In the extreme N.W., south of the Vindhyas, and parallel to them, but north of the Western Ghauts, we find the Nerbudda and the Tapti flowing westwards, their basins being sharply defined by the Satpura Mountains, which lie midway between them. As the Western Ghauts lie close to the coast, and afford no exit for rivers, there are no streams on the Malabar coast south of the Tapti; all the rivers flow eastwards, through defiles in the Eastern Ghauts, into the Bay of Bengal. The four chief rivers are the Mahanuddy, in the extreme N.E. (520 m.), the Godavery (900 m.), the Kistna (800 m.), and the Cauvery (472 m.), at intervals further to the south. The physical geography of Southern India has shaped its history: the S.W. coast shut in by mountains is very primitive and moves slowly; the S.E. open and easy of access by sea and towards the interior, has made great progress. The mountain slopes of this region, especially those of the Western Ghauts, which rise to 8,000 feet in the Nilgiris are still covered with the splendid vegetation of primeval forests. Teak, ebony, satinwood, sandalwood, palm, and bamboo abound. The jungles in the I. are very deadly. The tiger, bison, leopard, deer, and various smaller game afford sport. Snakes are found everywhere. In the valleys and on the higher plains many valuable crops are raised, chiefly rice, millet, cotton, oilseeds, coffee, tea, indigo, tobacco, and chinchona. The black cotton soil is very fertile. There is irrigation by dams, wells, tanks, and canals. The southern tableland has furnished considerable supplies of minerals. At present the minerals principally worked are coal, manganese ore, mica, monazite, and gold.

Burma.—Beyond the Bay of Bengal is the large province of Burma, watered by the Irawaddy and its tributaries and by the Salween. The delta region is flat, further inland are hills and rolling downs, while the north is mountainous. Rice is the chief staple. Millet, cotton, sesamum, and tobacco are also grown. The forests, particularly of teak, make a considerable contribution to the exports. Petroleum is produced on a considerable scale, and jade, wolfram, and rubies are mined. The fauna include monkeys, jackals, tigers, elephants, bison, and deer.

Climate.—About half of India is within the tropics, but the greatest extremes of heat and cold are in the N.W. In the Himalayas the climate is moist and cold. In Northern India it is dry, and the winters are rather cold. In tropical Southern India the climate is more equable. Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras all have an equable climate, owing to proximity to the sea. India depends for its fertility upon the monsoon rains. The S.W. monsoon brings moisture from the ocean south of the Equator, and reaches the west coast early in June, and the northern provinces late in June. The mountains arrest these currents and precipitate rain, the rainfall which averages 60 inches in the sub-Himalayan region, 30 inches in the Indo-Gangetic plain, and 30 inches in the Deccan, but is small in Sind and Rajputana. Madras benefits by the N.E. monsoon in the autumn.

Population.—The fourth general census of India was taken on the 10th March 1911. The enumeration embraced the whole of the Indian Empire, but only estimates could be made for a few outlying tracts and tribal areas on the frontier. The census returns gave a population of 315,156,396, as compared with 294,361,056 in 1901 (for details see p. 570), an increase in the ten years of about 7 per cent. The returns were in some parts much affected by severe malarial fever and plague, which caused a large temporary decrease in certain towns, particularly Cawnpore and Nagpur. The census total of 1911 is divisible into 244,267,542 (or 78 per cent.) for British India, and 70,888,854 (or 22 per cent.) for Native States. India is not over populated, for two-thirds of the people live on one-quarter of the area. In Burma, Assam, and elsewhere a much larger population might subsist. There were in 1911 29 towns with a population of over 100,000. Urban areas of over 5,000 people comprise only about 10 per cent. of the total population.

Caste.—Owing to the operation of the caste system India is broken up into a large number of mutually exclusive aggregates, the members of which are forbidden by an inexorable social law to marry outside the group to which they themselves belong. A caste may be defined as a collection of families or groups of families bearing a common name, which usually denotes or is associated with a specific occupation. The boundary of a caste may be said to be fixed by the rule restricting intermarriage, but its social status depends on the occupation of its members and their habits in respect of diet.

Religion.—The population by religions, so far as ascertained, includes 217,586,802 Hindus (69 per cent. of the total), 66,647,299 Muhammadans (21 per cent.), 10,721,453 Buddhists (3 per cent.), nearly all in Burma, leaving 7 per cent. for all other religions, including 3,876,203 Christians (three-fifths of whom are in Madras, Travancore and Cochin), 3,014,466 Sikhs (a large increase), 1,248,182 Jains (a decline ascribed to plague), 100,096 Parsis, and 10,295,168 described as Animists, who believe in magic and strive to propitiate impersonal forces. The Muhammadans, who are increasing faster than the Hindus, are infected with the caste system and other Hindu characteristics. The number of Indian Christians has increased nearly threefold since 1872.

Occupations.—Over 72 per cent. of the population was in 1911 dependent on pasture and agriculture. Industrial occupations support 35,000,000 persons, of whom nearly one-fourth are dependent on textile industries. The most important of these are industries connected with cotton, which employ nearly 6,500,000 persons, the majority of whom depend on hand-weaving. The public services support over 5,000,000 persons.

Sex.—Marriage is almost universal owing to religious obligations. The movement against infant marriage and enforced widowhood is gaining ground. There were in 1911 over 26,400,000 widows in India. The males outnumbered the females in 1911 in the proportion of 1,000 to 954.

Languages.—India has 220 vernacular languages, of extraordinary variety The languages spoken by 312,912,624 persons in 1911 are grouped in four families, and 23 languages belonging to these families are spoken by not less than one million persons each The principal languages are Hindi (spoken by 82,003,235 persons), Bengali (48,367,915), Telugu (23,542,861), Marathi (19,806,636), Tamil (18,128,365), Punjabi (15,876,758), Rajasthani (14,067,590), Western Hindi (14,037,882), after which come Gujarati, Kanarese, Oriya, Burmese, and Malayalam. Hindustani, a dialect of Hindi, has become the literary language of Hindustan, and is the lingua franca of India English is understood by many India under the Crown.

For a brief sketch of Indian History from 326 B C, the date of Alexander's invasion of India, to 1858, see WHITAKER'S ALMANACK for 1917, page 566 et seq

IN 1857, during Earl Canning's administration a mutiny of sepoys broke out on the 10th May at Meerut and spread through the whole Bengal Army Delhi was for some months in the possession of the rebels, and many chiefs joined the revolt The siege of Delhi, the massacre at Cawnpore, the relief of Lucknow and the Central India campaign stand out among the stirring events of that momentous time Although the control of Indian affairs was vested in the Cabinet through the Board of Control the great mutiny was laid to the charge of the East India Company whose eventful annals were brought to a close by the transfer of the entire administration of India to the Crown

INDIA UNDER THE CROWN.—The "Act for the Better Government of India" established the authority of the Crown and a Proclamation to the Princes Chiefs, and People of India, dated the 1st Nov., 1858, announced the resolution of Her Majesty to assume the government of the territories in India "heretofore administered in trust by the Honourable East India Company Legislative Councils were established Lord Canning was succeeded in 1862 by Lord Elgin, who however, died in Nov., 1863

Sir John (Lord) Lawrence (1864–69) reformed the finances which had been seriously burdened by the heavy military expenditure necessitated by the Mutiny His administration was marked by the Bhutan War (1864) and by the terrible Orissa Famine of 1866. He encouraged irrigation

Lord Mayo (1869–72) effected many administrative reforms instituted State railways, promoted the construction of roads and canals, and inaugurated the system of provincial finance, which has since been extended

During the tenure of office of Lord Northbrook (1872–76) the late King Edward VII., then Prince of Wales visited India. The Viceroy devoted attention to finance and to famine relief In 1875 the reigning Gaekwar of Baroda was deposed for misrule and disloyalty

Lord Lytton's administration (1876 80) was made eventful by a terrible famine in Southern India and by the Second Afghan War In 1877 the Queen assumed the title of EMPRESS OF INDIA

The peaceful term of the Marquess of Ripon (1880-84) was marked by the extension of local self government, and by fiscal, judicial, educational, and other reforms

His successor was the Marquess of Dufferin (1884 88) In 1885-6 occurred the Third Burmese War, by which Upper Burma with the Shan States was annexed The N W frontier of Afghanistan was delimited the frontier of India strengthened, and the army increased. The first Indian National Congress met in 1885.

The Marquess of Lansdowne (1888-94) continued his predecessor's policy of strengthening the army and consolidating British influence on the frontier The Indo-Afghan boundary was defined, and a serious outbreak in Manipur was suppressed He took the first step in currency reform by closing the Indian mints to the free coinage of silver He reconstituted the Legislative Councils in 1892 by introducing a more popular element, and conferring a limited right of interpellation and criticism in financial matters

The viceroyalty of Lord Elgin (1894 99) was full of events. In 1895 an outbreak in Chitral made necessary a large military expedition to relieve the garrison. Plague broke out in 1896, and has raged more or less severely ever since In 1896-7 an area of 307 000 sq ms., with a population of 70 millions, was visited by a grievous famine In 1897 the border tribes from Chitral to Baluchistan rose against the British garrisons In the Tirah campaign that followed over 40,000 troops were employed Several boundaries were settled under Lord Elgin, notably those with Russia on the Pamirs and with France on the Mekong The frontiers of Afghanistan, Persia and China were also defined The general Customs tariff, abolished in 82, was reimposed in 1894.

Lord Curzon (1899-1904 and 1904 5) succeeded Lord Elgin In 1899 the pound sterling was made legal tender in India concurrently with the rupee, at the exchange of Rs. 15 to £1 In 1899-1900 occurred one of the worst famines on record, the tracts affected covering 475,000 sq ms with a population of 60 millions Lord Curzon's term of office was a period of reform and reconstruction. He appointed Commissions of Inquiry on irrigation railways universities, agricultural banks, excise, and police, all of which suggested important reforms. He instituted agricultural banks and departments, and initiated legislation to free the cultivators from the money lenders. The famine codes were amended. A new province, under the direct control of the Governor General in Council was created, called the North West Frontier Province (1901) The Aden and the Perso Afghan boundaries were delimited An Imperial Cadet Corps of native princes and nobles was inaugurated Educational policy was reviewed and reforms introduced. A much needed reform of the police was undertaken. Lord Curzon also secured a perpetual lease of Berar from the Nizam In 1904 a mission with a military escort proceeded to Tibet, and secured a favourable treaty During Lord Curzon's absence in England for a few months in 1904 Lord Ampthill occupied the post of Viceroy Lord Curzon was reappointed in Dec., 1904. In 1905 the treaty with Afghanistan was renewed The Viceroy reduced the dimensions of Bengal, and constituted a new province, called Eastern Bengal and Assam, by combining parts of Bengal with Assam He carried out great reforms in the Army in conjunction with Lord Kitchener (appointed Commander in Chief in 1902), but differing from certain proposals made by the latter and finding that he lacked the support of the Home Government he resigned (Aug 1905).

Lord Minto succeeded in Nov., 1905 The Prince of Wales (now H M King George) made a tour in India during the winter of 1905-6. For some years after 1905 there was agitation among Bengalis owing to the partition of Bengal, and a Seditious Meetings Act was passed in Nov., 1907 In his Budget speech in 1907 the Secretary of State, Viscount Morley, foreshadowed important reforms in Indian administration designed to associate the people more closely with the Government. He nominated two Indian members to his own Council and an Indian member to the Governor General's Council He appointed Commissions to inquire into railways into the possibilities of financial and administrative decentralisation and into the conditions of factory labour and action was taken on their reports. In 1908 the unrest in Bengal assumed an anarchical character To mark the fiftieth anniversary of the transfer of India to the Crown a royal proclamation was issued in Nov 1908 promising extended self government Owing to the continued unrest in 1909 and 1910 a Press Act to control printing presses, was passed

Lord Hardinge succeeded in Nov., 1910 The Indian Legislative Council in June 1911 prohibited indentured emigration from India to Natal after 1 July, 1912, and a new Seditious Meetings Act was passed A great Durbar was held at Delhi on 12 December, 1911 by H M King George to announce his Coronation On this occasion the King Emperor also made announcements of new and far reaching steps in Indian policy, viz the transfer of the seat of Government from Calcutta to Delhi and the creation of a Governorship for the presidency of Bengal of a Lieut-Governorship for Bihar, Chota Nagpur and Orissa and of a Chief Commissionership for Assam Delhi was chosen as the capital on geographical historical, and political grounds The provincial changes involved a partial rescission of the partition of Bengal and the abolition of the province of Eastern Bengal and Assam, created in 1905. Bengal as reconstituted is a compact Bengali speaking province, placed under a Governor in Council A new province, Bihar and Orissa was formed including Chota Nagpur and the Sambalpur district Assam again became a separate province, under a Chief Commissioner The reconstituted provinces came into existence on 1 April, 1912. In pursuance of recommendations by the Decentralisation Commission, enhanced powers in respect of appointments and expenditure were granted to local governments having a quasi permanent provincial settlement. Moreover, greater permanency was arranged for in financial settlements with the provinces, which enables them to dispose of growing sources of revenue, the control of the Government of India being relaxed A Royal Commission was appointed in 1912 to inquire into the public services in India In Dec., 1912, the Viceroy took formal possession of the new headquarters at Delhi The State entry was marred by an attempt on the life of the Viceroy A Royal Commission was appointed in April, 1913, to examine and report on Indian Finance and Currency The outbreak of war in Europe in August 1914 was the signal for a great outburst of loyalty and devotion to the King Emperor on the part of the princes and peoples of India. Practically all the ruling chiefs placed their military forces and the resources of their states at the disposal of the Government and large forces of Indian troops were despatched for service in Europe Asia and Africa

Following on the outbreak of war serious disturbances were started in the Punjab and elsewhere by emigrants returning from Canada and the United States imbued with revolutionary ideas Order was restored as a result of measures taken under the Defence of India Act which was passed in March 1915 Several tribal risings on the North West Frontier were promptly and rigorously suppressed Lord Hardinge's term of office as Viceroy was extended from November 1915 to March 1916 The Viceroy announced in March 1916 that it had been decided eventually to abolish the system of indentured emigration from India Lord Hardinge put forward proposals for post war constitutional reforms

Lord Chelmsford succeeded in April 1916 A strong Commission was appointed to examine and report on the possibilities of further industrial development in India The year 1917 was marked by certain symptoms of unrest and the development of an agitation for constitutional changes towards self government or in its extreme form "Home Rule for India formulated by Mrs Besant and her party Restrictions afterwards removed were placed on Mrs Besant in consequence of her methods

The Mesopotamia Commission strongly criticised the administration from India of the early stages of the campaign The Public Services Commission appointed during Lord Hardinge's administration reported Three leading Indians attended the Imperial War Cabinet As regards indentured Indian labour in the Colonies, the Dominions representatives accepted the principle of reciprocity of treatment and commended to the favourable consideration of their Governments three general principles that the facilities for settlement accorded to Indians should not be less advantageous than those allowed to other Oriental nations that facilities should be accorded to educated Indians visiting the Colonies for travel and study and that Indians who have been permitted to settle should receive sympathetic treatment Action was taken against the Mahsuds and Mohmands on the North West Frontier The Lahore and Burma conspiracy trials were concluded and the leaders sentenced During the year the Viceroy made the following important announcements —The grant of King's Commissions to Indians a contribution of £100 000 000 towards the cost of the war, and further grants towards the improvement of education The special conditions arising from the war induced the Government of India to anticipate the findings of the Commission by organising at once as far as was possible the resources of the country, with a view to making India more self contained It also devoted itself to the supply of essential stores for the armies in the field, and a Munitions Board was created for the purpose of mobilising the resources of India for the war

Towards the end of 1917 the Secretary of State visited India in connexion with a development of constitutional progress, for some time under consideration by the Home and Indian Governments The Secretary of State and the Viceroy submitted their report to H M's Government in April 1918

The year 1918 was marked by some symptoms of unrest the Rowlatt Committee appointed in 1917 reported and revealed evidence of the association of the Bengal seditionists with German plots anti Moslem riots broke out in Berar and Muhammadans organised agitation leading to disturbances in Madras and Calcutta Recruiting for the Army broke all records the operations against the Marris were closed a War Conference was held at Delhi with the object of stimulating India's efforts in the war The Bombay Government took the first steps towards obligatory primary education a policy of more complete local self government was decided on by the Government of India Reckless speculations in Broach cotton prevailed and a certain amount of discontent due to high prices was manifested The Home Rule League continued its activities The influenza epidemic spread to India and it is estimated that over 7 million deaths in British India and Native States resulted The Industrial Commission appointed in 1916 issued a report its broad general conclusions were that—India is rich in raw materials and in industrial possibilities, but poor in manufacturing accomplishment The deficiencies in her industrial system are such as to render her liable to foreign penetration in time of peace and to serious dangers in time of war Her labour is inefficient she relies almost entirely on foreign sources for foremen and supervisors and her educated people have yet to develop a right tradition to industrialism Her stores of money lie inert and idle The necessity of securing the economic safety of the country and the inability of the people to secure it without the co operation and stimulation of government impose on government a policy of energetic intervention in industrial matters Two representatives of the Indian people appointed by the Government of India attended the Imperial War Cabinet in London In 1919 a bill was introduced into Parliament embodying the proposals of the Montagu Chelmsford Joint Report and eventually passed During the year considerable distress occurred in consequence of the partial failure of the 1918 autumn crops throughout Northern India and the Peninsula and relief measures were undertaken A strike of brief duration of mill hands due partly to economic and partly to political causes occurred in Bombay Serious disturbances in the Punjab and Delhi, resulting in many deaths followed on a "passive resistance movement inaugurated by Mr Ghandi against the Rowlatt' Bills introduced by the Government of India on the recommendation of the "Rowlatt Committee for renewing some of the powers which the Government had provided themselves during the War to deal with sedition The movement spread to Bombay, and the local government was forced to deport Mr Horniman the Editor of the Bombay Chronicle A Commission was appointed to enquire into the whole matter of the disturbances and the steps taken to suppress them The murder of the Amir and the subsequent events in Afghanistan were followed by an inroad of Afghans and some frontier tribes into India, necessitating prompt military action by the Government of India. Hostilities were terminated in August and a treaty of peace concluded (see p 607). The attitude of the frontier tribes was, however, on the whole good. Committees were appointed (1) to enquire into the organization and procedure of the civil secretariat of the Government of India, (2) to enquire into the administration and organization of the Army in India, whose conduct of the late campaign on the North West Frontier, following the troubles with Afghanistan, was much criticised, and (3) to advise in regard to the future of currency and exchange, (4) to investigate the system of prison administration. The "Sadler" Commission on the Calcutta University reported during the year and made drastic proposals for recasting the Indian secondary and university educational system. After reviewing the changes in social and economic conditions which call for reorganisation and improvement in the educational system of Bengal, the Commissioners made recommendations, involving an additional annual expenditure of half a million sterling, and a non-recurrent expenditure of an equal amount, for the establishment of a wholly new system of administration for secondary and higher secondary education, the creation of a new type of institution to be known as an Intermediate College, providing not only preparation for the University, but also for vocational training, by means of a sound secondary education continued as a rule up to the age of 18, affording a good grounding for careers in agriculture, commerce and industry, and for the medical, engineering, and teaching professions, as well as for the ordinary science and arts courses of the University, the organisation of a special corps of western trained teachers, the immediate establishment of a self contained teaching University at Dacca, the creation of a genuine teaching University at Calcutta, a complete re casting of the system of governance of Calcutta University, the encouragement of women's education, and for the improvement of conditions under which students live (provision of hostels, playing fields etc.) After the publication of the report the Government of India, in October, introduced a Bill for the establishment of the proposed University at Dacca. A scheme for the amalgamation of the three Presidency banks was formulated, the recommendations of the Indian Cotton Committee, appointed in 1917 for the extension and improvement of cotton cultivation in India aroused much interest, there was an awakening of interest in industrial enterprise in India attended, however, by some reckless speculation and, as elsewhere, the rise in prices necessitated improvement of pay in the various branches of the public service. The Union Government appointed a Commission to enquire into the Indian question in South Africa. Noteworthy features in the progress of India during the year were the appointment of an Indian, Lord Sinha, as Under Secretary of State for India in the Home Government, and the representation of India at the Peace Conference by two Indians, H.H. the Maharajah of Bikanir and Lord Sinha. The movement for compulsory elementary education continued to grow. The policy underlying the Government of India Act, 1919, mainly based on the recommendations of the "Montagu-Chelmsford" Report, viz., the increasing association of Indians in every branch of the Administration, with a view to the progressive realisation of responsible government, was carried forward a further stage in 1920 by the Home Parliament which, by rules, laid down the details of the constitution of the new Central and Provincial Governments (see pp. 589-90), and in furtherance of which elections were held during the year, preparatory to the inauguration of the new Councils early in 1921 by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught. One section of the India Home Rule for India party, dissatisfied with the Act, threatened non-co-operation with the Government in the future working of the reforms, and with the assistance of some Muhammadans, Mr. Gandhi, a Hindu, commenced a movement to carry out the threat, but the support of the "Moderate" wing of the party including that of Mrs. Besant was given to the Government. A prominent and distinguished Indian, Lord Sinha, was designated as the first Governor of Bihar and Orissa. In consequence of the agitation in support of more lenient Peace terms for Turkey some Muhammadans estimated to number over 20,000, emigrated to Afghanistan, but many of these Muhajarins returned greatly disabused by the reception accorded to them. The Amir's representatives visited India and discussed with officers of the Indian Government the possibility of a resumption of more friendly relations. Bolshevik propaganda created an unhealthy political atmosphere in some quarters. Fighting with the Mahsuds on the North West frontier continued throughout the year, in consequence of which the Viceroy announced Government's intention to occupy Central Waziristan, and to continue the railway from Jamrud towards the Khyber. Unrest, due in some measure to labour trouble, evidenced by an unprecedented number of strikes, and partly to unsatisfied political aspirations, was prevalent during the year. Trade showed remarkable expansion, and crop forecasts were good. Government, in pursuance of its policy of making India commercially more self supporting, instituted several inquiries into various trades and industries, and appointed a committee to inquire as to whether the adoption of a system of preferential tariffs would be beneficial. Further steps towards employing more largely Indians in the various Government services and for the improvement of conditions of service and pay of both European and Indian members of the same were taken. Several large works programmes were sanctioned. A committee was appointed to inquire into the administration of the railways. The recommendation of the Exchange and Currency Committee for the linking of the rupee to gold and the adoption of an exchange rate equivalent to one-tenth of the gold contents of the sovereign, i.e., an exchange rate of Rs. 10 to the £, was adopted. With a view to increasing banking facilities steps were taken to establish a large Imperial Bank. A High Commissioner for India in London, with a separate establishment, responsible to the Government of India for certain agency work, previously performed by the India Office, was appointed. The Army in India and the Medical Services Committees respectively reported and their conclusions are under consideration.

The recommendations of the Army in India Committee postulate —(1) control by the Government of India over Indian military affairs, (2) giving to India a voice in Imperial defence and (3) allowing to the Imperial General Staff a considered influence on Indian military policy. To ensure uniformity of military policy between Great Britain and India the Committee recommend —a diminution of detailed control by the India Office abolition of the Military Member of the Council of the Secretary of State for India, the Chief of the Imperial General Staff either directly or through the Military Secretary at the India Office (appointed on his recommendation) to be the sole military adviser of the Secretary of State for India the attendance of the Chief of the Imperial General Staff at meetings of the India Council, the attendance of the Military Secretary of the India Office at meetings of the Army Council the Commander-in-Chief in India to be the administrative and executive head of the Army subject to the control of the Governor General in Council the appointment of Commander-in-Chief on the recommendation of and with the right of communicating with the Chief of the Imperial General Staff a Military Council of high staff and other officers to assist the Commander-in-Chief in India the abolition of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Army Department, decentralisation of responsibility by the creation of four commands. A majority of the Committee recommend the placing of production and supply under a Civilian Member of the Viceroy's Executive Council instead of under a Surveyor General, responsible to the Commander-in-Chief as recommended by the Minority. The Committee also recommend —Closer relations, co-operation in training distribution of high appointments, and adjustments of pay, between the British and Indian Armies, a corps of officers fitted to serve with either British or Indian troops the amalgamation of certain Corps, the removal of grievances more sympathetic treatment of all ranks, re-organisation of existing and the development and equipment of new, services.

IMPERIAL LEGISLATION.—Legislation for India in England is chiefly of a constitutional or financial character. The Regulating Act (1773) which created the first Governor General, a Council of five members, and a supreme court with a chief judge, was the first statute that recognised the East India Company as a ruling body. Pitt's India Act (1784) left the business and most of the patronage to the Court of Directors but gave the supreme civil and military authority to a Board of Control whose president represented India in the House of Commons. In 1793 the Company's charter was renewed, in 1813, on a further renewal of the charter the trade of India was thrown open, while on the next renewal in 1833 the Company's monopoly of the China trade was abolished and they became a non-commercial governing body. In 1853 the Company's charter was renewed for the last time, and the Indian Civil Service was thrown open to competition. By "An Act for the Better Government of India" (1858), which still regulates Indian affairs, all the territories governed by the East India Company were transferred to the Crown, and all the powers exercised by the Company and the Board of Control were vested in the Secretary of State for India, assisted by a Council. Under this Act, as amended by Acts of 1889, 1907, 1915 and 1919, at least one half of the members of Council must have served in India for 10 years and must not have left India more than 5 years prior to their appointment. The number of members may be 12 and must not be less than 8, and is at present 8. Their term of office is now 5 years, with power of extension. There are now 3 Indian members. In 1877 (under the Royal Titles Act) Queen Victoria assumed the title of Empress of India. By the Indian Councils Act (1909) the imperial and provincial Legislative Councils were enlarged their powers of interpellation and criticism enhanced and the elective element extended special provision being made for the representation of landholders the professional classes Muhammadans and European and Indian traders and planters. The executive councils of Madras and Bombay were increased in size and power was given to constitute executive councils in provinces under Lieut.-Governors. The Government of India Act (1912) created a Governor of Bengal established an Executive Council for Bihar and Orissa and authorised the creation of legislative councils in provinces under Chief Commissioners. The Indian High Courts Act (1911) empowered the Government of India to increase the number of High Court judges from 15 to 20 to establish new High Courts and to appoint temporary judges. An Act to consolidate the Imperial Legislation relating to the Government of India was passed in 1915. The Government of India Act 1919 confers on provinces a larger measure of independence of the Government of India it distinguishes the functions of local governments and local legislatures from the functions of the Governor-General in Council and the Indian Legislature it provides for the devolution of authority in respect of provincial subjects to local governments for the allocation of revenues to those governments and for the use under the authority of the Governor-General in Council of the agency of local governments in relation to central subjects it provides for the transfer of some provincial subjects to the administration of the Governor acting with Ministers. It gives borrowing powers to local governments. It lays down that the 8 major provinces shall be governed, in relation to reserved subjects by a Governor in Council, and in relation to transferred subjects by a Governor acting with Ministers appointed from among the elected Members of the local legislative Council. It confers extended powers on local legislatures. For the Supreme or Central Government, it provides that the Legislature shall consist of the Governor-General and two Chambers viz the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly. It provides for the appointment of an Auditor-General and a Public Services Commission on India. A Statutory Commission is to be appointed 10 years after the commencement of the Act for the purpose of enquiring among other matters, as to the desirability of a further extention of the principle of self-government in India.

INDIAN LAW.—The law administered in the Indian courts consists mainly of (1) The enactments of the Indian Legislative Councils (imperial and provincial) and of the bodies that preceded them, (2) statutes of the British Parliament applicable to India (3) the Hindu and Muhammadan laws of inheritance and domestic law, (4) the customary law affecting particular castes and races

The Government of India.

Secretary of State—The Rt Hon EDWIN SAMUEL MONTAGU, PC MP

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA is the head of the Indian Administration in England and as a member of the Cabinet he is solely responsible to and represents the supreme authority of Parliament Subject to the provisions of the Government of India Act and rules made thereunder the Secretary of State can impose his orders on the Government of India and no expenditure from Indian revenues is legal unless sanctioned by him and a majority of his Council In matters requiring secrecy (e g foreign policy and the affairs of native States) the Secretary of State can act on his own authority without consulting his Council and in most other matters can overrule the majority of his Council Indian Government business in England is transacted at the India Office and at the office of the High Commissioner for India (see pp 246 247)

The King Emperor appoints the Governor General the Governors of the 8 major Provinces (Bengal, Madras Bombay the United Provinces, Bihar and Orissa the Punjab the Central Provinces, and Assam) the Commander in Chief the Members of the Executive Councils of the Governor General and of Governors, and the Judges of the High Courts The appointments of Lieutenant Governor are made by the Governor General, subject to the Secretary of State's approval The term of these appointments, except judgeships is usually 5 years

Subject to the Secretary of State's direction the supreme executive authority in India in both civil and military affairs is the Governor General in Council The Governor General's Executive Council now contains 8 members including the the Commander in Chief (of whom one half must have served in India 10 years) as well as himself Ordinarily the opinion of the majority prevails but the Governor General is empowered in special circumstances to overrule the majority In accordance with the Government of India Act 1919 and rules thereunder the Indian Legislature will consist of the Governor General and two Chambers viz the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly (see p 589 as to their constitution) Except as otherwise provided by or under the Act a Bill will not be deemed to have been passed unless agreed to by both Chambers but the Act confers powers on the Governor General of securing essential legislation in emergencies, subject to disallowance by His Majesty in Council, of returning Bills for reconsideration and of vetoing proposed legislation affecting the safety or tranquillity of British India The Indian Budget is to be submitted to both Chambers and to be voted on by the Legislative Assembly except in regard to certain specified heads but the Governor General in Council may act notwithstanding a refusal or reduction of grants where essential to the discharge of his responsibilities and the Governor General may authorise expenditure necessary for the safety and tranquillity of British India or any part thereof Differences of opinion between the two Chambers may be referred for decision by the Governor-General to a joint meeting of members of both Chambers appointed for the purpose Although the Government will not in future command a majority in the Legislature, it is necessarily given the power to reject adverse votes since its responsibility is not to the Indian Legislature but to Parliament The seat of the Supreme Government is now at Delhi the summer headquarters being still at Simla

Business is conducted by 11 Departments Finance Foreign and Political Home Legislative Revenue and Agriculture Public Works Commerce Industry Education Army and Railway Each Department is in the charge of a Secretary to Government (the Foreign and Political Department has both a Foreign and a Political Secretary) and is under the care of a member of the Viceroy's Executive Council who has authority to deal with affairs of minor importance and to select what is worthy of the consideration of the Governor General and his Council The Governor General himself superintends the Foreign and Political Department The Finance Department deals with public accounts loans, taxation opium currency banking mints &c The Foreign and Political Department conducts relations with Afghanistan Nepal and other conterminous countries and through its Political Residents and Agents in the various native States supervises their administration and regulates their relations with the paramount Power The Political Residents in the Persian Gulf Muscat and Turkish Arabia look after the commercial and political interests of India in those quarters The Home Department deals with the civil service judicial affairs prisons police &c The Legal Member of Council takes charge of Government Bills in connexion with the Legislative Department The most important subjects that come before the Revenue and Agriculture Department are land revenue and surveys forests agricultural development famine and meteorology The Public Works Department deals with irrigation roads buildings &c The department of Commerce deals with trade and shipping customs excise ports post-office, telegraphs &c The department of Industries deals with munitions industries stores factories &c The Army is under the Army Department of which the Commander in Chief has charge in Council The Education Department has the control of education local government sanitation &c Railway administration is entrusted to a Railway Department which is in the charge of the Commerce Member of Council

British India is divided into 15 Local Governments and Administrations viz —Under Governors Madras Bombay, and Bengal, still termed Presidencies the United Provinces the Punjab Bihar and Orissa the Central Provinces and Assam under a Lieutenant Governor, Burma under Chief Commissioners who are under the immediate authority of the Governor General in Council, the North West Frontier Province, British Baluchistan, Delhi, Ajmer Merwara Coorg, and the Andaman and Nicobar Islands.

The Governors of Madras, Bombay and Bengal are permitted to communicate direct with the Secretary of State

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS AND ADMINISTRATIONS *

Under the Government of India Act 1919, and rules made thereunder, the local governments are given a larger measure of independence of the Supreme Government. The Act distinguishes the functions of local governments and local legislatures of the Provinces from the functions of the Governor General in Council and the Indian Legislature. The Supreme Government is given authority over certain subjects classified as Central, such as defence political relations railways tariffs etc. Other administrative heads classified as Provincial viz. local self government, public health education public works, water supply land revenue administration famine relief agriculture excise administration of justice etc. are wholly or partly handed over to Provincial Governments with responsibility subject to certain limitations, within their own areas for administering them. In the eight major Governors Provinces—i.e. Madras Bengal Bombay, the United Provinces Bihar and Orissa the Central Provinces, the Punjab and Assam provincial subjects are further divided into "reserved" and "transferred" subjects the administration of, and responsibility for which, will rest with the Governor and his Executive Council and with the Governor and Ministers respectively. Ministers will be chosen from among the elected members of the Legislative Council by, and hold office during the pleasure of, the Governor. They will be directly responsible to the Legislative Council for the administration of the "transferred subjects but may be over ruled by the Governor if he considers their policy inconsistent with the discharge of his responsibilities.

The Act legislates for a transition from a bureaucratic to a self government system and for the gradual transfer of more subjects to the Ministers. Matters of departmental or minor importance will be dealt with as a rule by the Governor his Council and the Ministers sitting in conclave but the decision on reserved subjects will rest with the Governor in Council and that on transferred subjects with the Ministers subject to the Governor's intervention and control.

Legislative Councils will have an elected majority and normally a life of three years but may be sooner dissolved by the Governor. The previous sanction of the Governor General in Council will only be required in future to the introduction of certain classes of Provincial Bills. The Governor has powers of veto in regard to proposed legislation affecting the safety or tranquility of his Province or any part of it or of another Province and can secure legislation essential to the discharge of his responsibilities for reserved subjects. Such Bills must be sent to the Governor General for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure but in emergencies the Governor General may assent to them subject to disallowance by His Majesty in Council. The Governor has powers of assenting to or withholding assent to, or of returning for reconsideration other Bills, but must in certain circumstances send them to the Governor General for consideration who may reserve them for His Majesty's pleasure.

* The areas and populations of the separate provinces are for British territory only. The populations are according to the Census of 1911.

In Governors Provinces and in Burma certain sources of revenue are allocated to the local governments as sources of provincial revenues and the amount of contributions from local governments towards the support of the Central Government will be fixed for 1921 22 and succeeding years The contributions proposed to be required to be made by local governments in 1921 22 are (in lakhs of rupees) Madras 348 Bombay 56 Bengal, 63 United Provinces 240 Punjab, 175, Burma, 64 Central Provinces and Berar 22 Assam, 15 Borrowing powers are also conferred

An important change is made in regard to Provincial Budgets which will in future be voted on by the Legislative Councils who are thus given, for the first time, a voice in the disposal of provincial revenues, but the Governor has power to act, in respect of a demand for reserved subjects notwithstanding a refusal or a reduction of grants, if the demand is essential to the discharge of his responsibilities for the subject and in cases of emergency he can authorise such expenditure as may be necessary for the safety or tranquillity of his Province Certain heads of expenditure will not require an annual vote, thus avoiding a deadlock in case of irresponsible action by the Legislative Council in the matter of supply

Of the members nominated to the Indian Legislature and Provincial Legislative Councils some will represent certain communities and interests Males over 21 years of age possessing certain qualifications (residence within the constituency and the possession of certain property qualifications, the payment of land revenue, rent, local taxes income tax or municipal rates) are eligible for the franchise Women are not qualified for registration, but the disqualification may be removed in certain circumstances in any Province, or in all The franchise is low and will give the vote to small cultivators and some wage earners, and it is estimated that the first electorate will comprise over 5 000,000 persons

(1) MADRAS (area, 142,330 sq miles, pop 41,405,404) was not only the oldest, but the most important of the three original Presidencies before Clive's conquest of Bengal though it was small in extent until the annexation of the Carnatic in 1801 With a coast line of 1 730 miles the province has no good natural harbour but an artificial harbour has been constructed at Madras at great expense The province is not naturally fertile, though irrigation systems in the river deltas have enormously increased the produce of the soil, and have yielded a large profit to the State Rice, millet and other food grains, oilseeds, cotton indigo, spices tobacco tea &c, are cultivated Manganese ore is mined and exported. Madras is served by the South Indian and by the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railways, the latter connecting it with Bengal on the north and Bombay on the west About 90 per cent. of the people are Hindus There are about 1,200,000 native Christians, mainly Roman Catholics Many natives of the Presidency emigrate to Burma and Ceylon some only temporarily The languages principally spoken are Tamil and Telugu Madura (134 130) and Trichinopoly (123,512), famous for their Hindu temples, are the chief cities after the capital.

(3) BENGAL (area of newly constituted province, 78 699 sq miles, with population of 45 483 077) was placed under a Lieutenant Governor in 1854. The old Bengal Presidency included practically all Northern and Central India but subsequently the province consisted of part of Bengal proper with Bihar, Orissa, and Chota Nagpur. Fifteen districts of Eastern Bengal were detached in 1905 and combined with Assam while one district from the Central Provinces was added to Bengal. This partition was revoked in 1911 and Bengal now includes five Bengali speaking divisions. About 53 per cent of the population are Muhammadans and 45 per cent Hindus. The principal languages are Bengali and Hindi. For the most part the province is a great alluvial plain, very populous and productive. The chief products are rice, jute, oilseeds, sugar, tobacco, silk, tea, and coal. The East Indian Railway is the great artery of the Ganges Valley. The Eastern Bengal Railway, running north, and the Bengal Nagpur, south, from Calcutta, are also important. The Governor is assisted by an Executive Council of three members created in 1910. Important cities are Dacca (108 551) now the second capital, and Howrah (179,006) a great jute manufacturing centre adjoining Calcutta.

(4) The UNITED PROVINCES of AGRA and OUDH called 'North Western Provinces and Oudh' until 1902 (area 107 267 sq miles pop 47 182 044) forms the upper part of the great Ganges plain to the W of Bengal lying between the Himalayas and the hilly border of the central plateau. Originally (excluding Oudh) it formed part of the Bengal Presidency but in 1835 a separate administration was formed and a Lieutenant Governor. OUDH was annexed in 1856 and placed under a Chief Commissioner. After 1877 the two administrations were combined. The chief products are wheat rice barley pulse tobacco, millet cotton sugar and oilseeds. About 85 per cent of the population are Hindus and 14 per cent Muhammadans. Hindi and Western Hindi are the chief tongues. The province is served by the East Indian Oudh and Rohilkhand and Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railways. In 1887 a legislative Council was established. Among the important cities may be named the ancient city of Agra (185 449) containing the Taj Mahal and other great works of architecture the sacred Hindu city of Benares (203 804) the great manufacturing centre, Cawnpore (178 557), Bareilly (129,462) and Meerut (116 227).

(5) The PUNJAB (area, 99,222 sq. miles; pop. 19,583,128) occupies the N.W. angle of the great northern plain of India, and derives its name from the "Five Rivers" which, descending from the Himalayas, traverse the plain and unite in the Indus. It was annexed in 1849. Up to 1853 it was under a Board of Administration, who were then superseded by a Chief Commissioner, who was made Lieutenant-Governor in 1859, when also the Delhi Division was transferred to the Punjab from the North-West Provinces. The Punjab is mainly agricultural, and, owing to the scanty rainfall, depends largely for its harvests on vast irrigation canals, which are still being greatly extended, and are highly remunerative. The principal crops are wheat, millet, barley, maize, pulse, oilseeds, sugar, and cotton. The Punjab possesses rich deposits of rock-salt, which, with wheat and other grains and cotton, form the principal exports. Timber is scarce. More than half the population are Muhammadans, and more than a third are Hindus. The Sikhs number about 2,883,000 in the Punjab and Punjab States, to which they are mainly confined. Punjabi and Hindi are the chief languages. The various branches of the North-Western and Southern Punjab Railways serve the province. Amritsar, the sacred city of the Sikhs, has 152,756 people.

(6) BURMA is bounded by Tibet on the north, by China, French Indo-China, and Siam on the east, and by Assam, Bengal and the sea on the west. It is the largest province, having a total area of 230,839 sq. miles, about equal to Spain and Portugal, with a population of 12,115,217. These figures include the Shan States and Chin Hills. Many immigrants come from Bengal, Madras, and China. Tenasserim and Aracan were annexed after the first Burmese war in 1826, Pegu after the second war in 1852, and Upper Burma and the Shan States after the third war in 1885. The Shan States are administered by local sawbwas, or chiefs, under the superintendence of a political officer. The province is thinly peopled; but, owing to remarkable prosperity, the population has increased over 15 per cent. in 10 years. The inhabitants belong to numerous tribes, who are distinguished by a variety of manners, languages, and religions. Burmese and Karen are the chief languages. Buddhism, now almost confined to Burma, so far as the Indian Empire is concerned, is the religion of 86 per cent. of the people. The Burmese are much better educated than the natives of India proper, education being conducted by Buddhist monks. The delta country of Lower Burma is flat, but above Prome there is upland, hilly country. Rice, the main product of the delta region, is largely milled at Rangoon and exported. The principal export after rice is teak, which comes from the extensive forests of Burma and the Shan States, and overland from Siam. Burma is fairly rich in minerals, especially petroleum, rubies, jadestone, and wolfram. The Irrawaddy and its chief tributaries, the Chindwin, the Shweli, and the Myitnge, form important waterways. The main stream is navigable beyond Bhamo, 900 miles from its mouth, and carries much traffic. There are considerable exports by land to Western China. The Burma Railways have reached Myitkina, on the Upper Irrawaddy, while a branch has been built to the Shan States, which lie in the Salwin basin. The Lieutenant-Governor of Burma has a Legislative Council consisting of 30 members, 26 nominated (including 12 officials) and 2 elected, besides 2 extra members.

INDIAN APPOINTMENTS

THE higher civil administration of British India is recruited from four sources—1 Open competitive examination in England 2 The Indian Army 3 The patronage of the Secretary of State 4 The patronage of the Local Governments

The Civil Service of India —The annual examination ordinarily commences in London Aug 1 Candidates must be over 21 and under 24 on Aug 1 in the year of examination Application for permission to compete must be made on or before June 1, on forms that can be obtained from the Secretary Civil Service Commission London, W 1 Examination fee, £8 Selected candidates are on probation in England for one year, and receive an allowance of £200 if they pass their probation at one of the Universities or Colleges approved by the Secretary of State, conduct themselves well, and comply with all the rules laid down for their guidance A final examination is held in Indian law language, &c An allowance of £40 on account of passage to India (£50 in case of passage to Rangoon) will be paid to newly appointed civilians In case of failure to pass the final examination or failure to execute the usual covenant and to proceed to India, all allowances received must be refunded The salary of a covenanted civil servant commences usually at Rs 7 200 a year No person will be eligible for admission to the Indian Civil Service who has made before any tribunal established under the Military Service Acts, 1916, an application for the issue to him of a certificate of exemption from the provisions of those Acts on the ground of a conscientious objection to the undertaking of combatant service

Concessions as to the age limits, in the case of candidates who have served in the Army or Navy, are made, and full particulars can be obtained from the Civil Service Commissioners

The Indian Army — Candidates for commissions in the Indian Army are required to pass the Army Entrance Examination held by the Civil Service Commissioners Candidates must be between 17½ and 19 years of age (21 in the case of candidates already serving in the Army, for which the upper limit of age will be 21) Of the cadetships for the Indian Army offered some are allotted to King's India Cadets nominated by the Secretary of State for India and by the War Office, the remainder being offered to candidates in the order of their passing the entrance examination At the end of the period of training at Sandhurst, cadets recommended for commissions are gazetted to the Unattached List for the Indian Army On appointment to an Indian regiment, an officer's minimum initial pay is at the present moment Rs 425 a month (equals £42 10s at present exchange of 2s per rupee). Regulations and examination papers can be obtained from His Majesty's Stationery Office Imperial House Kingsway W C

Indian (Imperial) Police Force —It has been announced that a competitive examination will be held in London and other centres in the summer of 1921 in conjunction with the Army and Air Force Examination A fee of £4 will be required from candidates examined in London, and a larger fee from those examined in other centres At the time of a candidate's birth his father must have been a natural born British subject, but exceptions to this condition may be made in the case of candidates who have served in His Majesty's Armed Forces during the war Candidates must be above 19 and under 22 years of age on Aug 1 1921 must be unmarried, and if they marry before reaching India will be required to forfeit their appointments. Applications to compete at the examination must be made on forms to be obtained from the India Office Whitehall, London, and must be returned not later than April 30, 1921 Successful candidates will be required to undergo a strict medical examination, will be examined as to their ability to ride, and will be required to provide themselves with uniform, towards which a contribution of £30 will be made by the India Office Newly appointed officers may be required to provide themselves, in India, with a horse and saddlery, towards the cost of which the Government may contribute up to Rs 600. Free passage to India will be granted to probationers The initial pay for officers recruited in the United Kingdom is Rs 325 per month, plus an overseas allowance of Rs 125 per month in the case of probationers with non Indian domicile The pay proceeds by increments to Rs. 900, and thence to Rs 1,400 per month, subject to efficiency bars There are superior appointments (not reserved, however, exclusively for officers so recruited), with pay proceeding from Rs 1,600 to Rs. 3,000 per month Officers are subject to certain Leave, Pension, and Provident Fund Rules, details of which may be obtained from the India Office

The patronage of the Secretary of State for India is small, and is now chiefly dependent on the requirements of the Government of India in the Judicial Department. Some appointments to the Indian Educational Service, which includes teaching and inspecting posts, are made on the recommendation of a Selection Committee, constituted by the Secretary of State for India, from among candidates who must have received a liberal education and who seem to be most suitable by the Board of Education or the Scottish Education Department The age is usually from 23 to 30 Appointments are in the first instance for two years, the salary beginning at Rs 400 a month, rising by annual increments of Rs 50 a month to Rs 1,250 with prospects of promotion if service is extended Officers of non Indian domicile receive additional (Overseas) pay of Rs 150 per month during the first few years, but the amount is increased later Initial salary and date of increments will be ordinarily determined in future by age Appointments of Chaplains of the Church of England and the Church of Scotland to the Indian Ecclesiastical establishments are normally made, on the occurrence of vacancies by the Secretary of State for India from amongst candidates nominated by the Indian Chaplaincies Board of the Church of England and the General Assembly's Committee on Indian Churches respectively Church of England candidates must be between 27 and 34 years of age and Church of Scotland candidates must be under 34 years of age On appointment chaplains are on probation for two years and receive a salary of Rs 600 per month rising by annual increments to Rs 1 300 per month

The superior Engineer establishment of the Indian Public Works Department is engaged on the construction and maintenance of the various public works undertaken by the State in India In 1920 the Europeans appointed by the Secretary of State for India were selected from among candidates who had served in His Majesty's forces during the war and who were in possession of certain University engineering degrees or diplomas, or not being able to produce one of the recognised degrees or diplomas, had received a general education high enough to fit them to receive proper professional training and to become members of the engineering profession, had received some technical education in engineering and had some practical training and experience in engineering as civilians and in military or quasi military service In 1920 only those who had been born on or after Aug 2, 1893, and on or before Aug 1, 1898 were considered The pay and allowances of Europeans so appointed commence at Rs 525 a month in case of men under 24 years of age, but candidates, if above 24, are credited with service as though they had been appointed in their 24th year The pay rises by annual increments to Rs 1,625 per month, with possibilities of promotion to higher posts There is a prospect of pension, and there is also a Provident Fund European candidates in India and Mesopotamia, if considered suitable, were required to appear before a Local Advisory Committee in India Appointments are usually made in July in each year From time to time appointments to the Locomotive, Carriage, Wagon and Traffic Departments of Indian State Railways are made, full information regarding which can be obtained from the Public Works Secretary, India Office, London

Further information regarding these and other Indian appointments, viz., to the Indian Agricultural, Civil Veterinary, Geological, Medical, Queen Alexandra's Military Nursing, Royal Indian Marine and Bengal Pilot Services, and of Forest Engineers, can be obtained, on application, from the Under-Secretary of State, India Office, Whitehall, London, S W Pay, Leave, and Pension Regulations of the Indian Services are contained in the Civil Service Regulations, which can be consulted at the India Office

New Capital at Delhi	286	334	736

BURDEN OF TAXATION —If taxation proper be divided among the population of British India without allowing for certain portions of Salt, Excise and Customs duties which fall on persons in the Native States the burden in 1918–19 was 3*s* 3*d* per head or, if land revenue (which is akin to rent) be added 4*s* 10*d* per head The Budget for 1917–18 introduced a super tax on large incomes enhanced the export duties on raw jute increased the import duties on cotton manufactures and imposed as a war measure, a surcharge on railway goods and traffic The Budget of 1919–20 introduced a duty of 50 per cent on excess profits, but this tax was discontinued in 1920 21 The Budget for 1920–21 amended the super tax law, with the objects of, firstly bringing the law relating to super tax into relation with that governing income tax, and secondly replacing the super tax on the undivided profits of Companies and firms by a new super tax at a flat rate on the whole taxable income of companies in excess of Rs 50,000

DEBT AND ASSETS —On 31 March 1920 the debt of India amounted to £411,005 000 Miscellaneous obligations (Savings Bank balances, &c) amounted to about £51,071 000, besides a charge of £3,358 000 for various railway annuities. Its advances to Native States, corporations, agriculturists, &c., stood at £13,802,000, and to railway companies £2,336 000. Other assets were the Gold Standard Reserve of £36 344 000 and the cash balances in England and India £12,004 000 and £2,358,000 respectively

LAND REVENUE.—This is the oldest and the most important source of revenue The State is the paramount landlord in India, and the land revenue is the State's share in the rent of the soil. In most of Bengal and Bihar and Orissa, about one fourth of Madras, and part of Assam the land revenue has been permanently fixed, elsewhere generally the assessments, or settlements, are revised periodically (usually once in 20 or 30 years) The nature of the settlements varies in different provinces In parts of Bengal and Bombay the greater part of the United Provinces, the Punjab the N W Frontier Province, and the Central Provinces the settlement is with large proprietors or proprietary village communities (zamindari) and the estate is assessed as a whole Elsewhere (especially in Burma Berar, Bombay and Sind, Assam, and most of Madras) the raiyatwari tenure prevails, and each raiyat, or peasant proprietor, holds direct from the State In temporarily settled zamindari districts the land revenue usually amounts to about 50 per cent of the rental paid to the landlord by the cultivating tenant, while in temporarily settled raiyatwari districts the revenue varies from 20 per cent of the gross produce down to much smaller proportions, averaging about 8 per cent Private improvements are exempt from assessment The gross land revenue paid to the State in 1918–19 amounted to £22,994,000, of which £1,904,000 was due to irrigation and credited under that head

THE OPIUM REVENUE.—Poppy may now be grown only in parts of the United Provinces (Bengal opium) and in the Central Indian (Malwa) native States Except in these States the manufacture is a Government monopoly In 1918 19 5,102 chests of Bengal opium were sold for export, in addition to 8 666 chests sold direct to Governments of Hong Kong Straits Settlements and Netherlands (Indies) etc The gross revenue from Bengal opium, including the value of opium sold by the Excise Department for consumption in India was £3 289 000 The expenses of production &c were £1 307 000. Formerly most of the opium exported from India was consumed in China but the Government of India, in furtherance of the efforts of the Chinese Government to suppress the growth and consumption of opium in China decided in 1907 to reduce progressively the amount of Indian opium exported to China and as from 31 March, 1917, export of Indian opium to China is prohibited

EXCISE.—Licence fees and duties are levied on the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors opium and other drugs The revenue owing partly to stricter administration and partly to enhanced duties has greatly expanded in recent years and amounted to £11 422 000 net in 1918 19 Reforms in excise administration are in progress.

CUSTOMS.—The net revenue was £11 580,000 in 1918 19. (For tariff see page 602.) The export duty on rice yielded £740 900, and the countervailing duty on Indian cotton goods £981 000 in 1918–19. New and enhanced duties were brought into effect on 1 March, 1916 and 1 March 1917

INCOME TAX is levied on non agricultural in comes at the following rates —

Annual Income	Rate of Tax Per Rupee = per £
Rs 2 000 and over	5 pies 6¼*d*
,, 5 000 ,,	6 ,, 7½*d*
,, 10 000 ,,	9 ,, 11¼*d*
25 000 ,,	12 ,, 1*s* 3*d*

Super tax is leviable in addition to ordinary income tax on incomes of individuals and registered firms above Rs. 50,000 of Hindu undivided families above Rs. 75 000, at rates equal to 1*s* 3*d* to 3*s* 9*d* in the £ and on incomes of companies above Rs. 50 000 at a flat rate of 1*s* 3*d* in the £ STAMPS.—Stamps yielded £5 955 000 (net) in 1918–19. About two thirds of the revenue is from court fees and one third from commercial stamps.

SALT.—The salt duty was reduced from Rs. 2½ to Rs 2 a maund (82 lb.) in 1903, to Rs 1/ in 1905, and to Re 1 in 1907 It was increased to Rs. 1¼ with effect from 1 March 1916

FORESTS.—About 99,000 square miles of forests are reserved and scientifically worked by the State, while about 150,000 square miles besides are under State control A third of the revenue comes from Burma

POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.—The Post Office in 1918 19 conveyed 1,194 millions of letters postcards newspapers &c and issued over 35 millions of money orders Inland letter rates are the lowest in the world The length of telegraph wires in India on 31 March 1919, was 358,000 miles, and the number of messages sent in 1918 19 was over 21 millions Their capital cost to the end of 1918–19 was £9,131,000 The Indian Postal and Telegraph services were amalgamated on 1 April, 1914. The combined services yielded for the year 1918–19 a net income of £1,368,000 The Indo European Telegraph Department yielded a profit of 14 27 per cent on its capital expenditure of £1 236,000.

RAILWAYS.—Nearly all the railways in India are owned by the State and administered by a Railway Board though many are leased to and worked by companies The mileage open for traffic on 31 March, 1919, was 36 616 while the mileage under construction was 1 803 Of the mileage open about 50 per cent was on the standard gauge (5′6″ ft) and about 41 per cent on the metre gauge On the 31st March, 1919, the total capital at charge was £403 375,000 The net earnings of the railways in 1918 19 amounted to £29 657 000 The number of passengers increased to 472 millions and the goods traffic to 99 million tons Rates are very low third class passengers travelling on the average over four miles for a penny The net working profit from State railways was £10 858 000 in 1918 19. The total capital expenditure on State and other railways in 1918–19 was about £3,158 000

IRRIGATION.—The total capital outlay on State irrigation works up to 31st March 1919 was £50 941 000, which apart from the advantages to cultivators and protection against famine, yielded a profit to the State after payment of interest charges of about £2 154 000. The area irrigated by Government irrigation works was about 26 million acres, while the annual value of the crops raised is estimated at over 135 per cent on the capital outlay Two fifths of the irrigation revenue comes from the Punjab

HOME CHARGES.—The net expenditure in England chargeable to Revenue, amounted in 1918–19 to £20 400 000 Interest on Railway Debt and Annuities, £9,232,000, Interest on Irrigation Debt, £125 000 Interest on Ordinary Debt and Management of Debt, £1,920 000, Stores, £2 710 000 of which £1 404,000 was for Marine and Military Stores payments for British forces troop service, &c., £1 170 000 Army non effective charges, £2,970 000 Civil annuities, pensions, &c £1,428 000 Furlough payments civil and military £387 000. The expenditure of the Indian Government in England is met by bills or telegraphic transfers drawn on India by the Secretary of State, and sold by him in London for sterling

CURRENCY.—The principal coin in use is the silver rupee, containing 165 grains of fine silver and 15 grains of alloy and weighing in all 180 grains troy Up to 1893 the Indian Mints were open by law for the unrestricted coinage of silver into rupees Owing, however, to the almost continuous fall in the value of the rupee from 1871 to 1893 legislation in the latter year closed the mints to the public with a view to eventually fixing the exchange For a time the rupee continued to fall but subsequently it rose and between 1898 and 1916, was practically stable at 1*s* 4*d* The Act of 1899 made the British sovereign legal tender in India at the ratio of 15 rupees to the sovereign the rupee, however, remaining also legal tender to any amount, but the ratio was altered to 10 rupees in 1920 In 1907–8 and 1908–9 half the profit on silver coinage was applied to capital expenditure on railways With this exception the whole of the net profit on silver coinage since 1 April, 1900, has been held as a special reserve, now called the Gold Standard Reserve, which is partly invested in England in sterling securities, for the purpose of maintaining the rate of exchange between England and India On 31 March, 1920, the investments of this fund in sterling securities amounted to £36,344 000 (estimated value), while £551 was held in cash in England In June 1912, it was decided that no portion of the profit on coinage will be used for railways till the total sterling assets of the Reserve amount to at least £25,000,000 India has a paper currency The 1, 2½ 5, 10, 50, and 100 rupee notes are legal tender everywhere in India, but other notes only within then circles of issue In 1918 a branch of the Royal Mint was established at Bombay for the minting of gold coins

ARMY.—In peace time, the Army in India consists, first of British troops, about 76,000, and, secondly of Indian troops (largely Muhammadans), about 160,000 In addition, the native Army Reserves number nearly 40 000 men, and the Imperial Service Troops furnished by native States contribute 21,000, including cavalry, transport corps and sappers Further there are 38,000 European and Eurasian volunteers (efficients) For police duties and frontier service the regular military is supplemented by frontier militia and local levies During the period (1902–9) when Lord Kitchener was Commander in Chief, considerable changes were effected in the organisation and training of the Army On 1 June 1907, there was a redistribution of the Army of India The net military expenditure (including marine) has risen from about £20,000,000 in 1912–13 to about £44 480 000 in 1918 19, and to an estimated expenditure of £40,000 000 in 1920–21 During the war of 1914–18 the Government of India recruited on a voluntary basis over 800 000 combatants and more than 400,000 non combatants, giving a grand total of about 1 3 million men 1,215,000 officers and men were sent on service overseas from India, the total Indian casualties were 101,000 In 1917 the bar hitherto precluding the admission of Indians to King's Commissions was removed, the pay and pensions of the Indian soldiery were improved It is proposed to form an Auxiliary Force on a volunteer basis The "Esher Committee, appointed in 1919 reported in 1920, and made various recommendations (see p 586) which are now under consideration Ague is the chief cause of sickness among British troops, and enteric fever the chief cause of death

The ROYAL INDIAN MARINE consists of ten sea going vessels and numerous smaller steamers and launches

EDUCATION.—The main features of the Indian educational position are —A middle class widely instructed in those arts which qualify for the learned professions a proletariat, of which only a fraction is literate, a whole sex almost totally devoid of any education what ever Elementary education is based so far as possible, on an adaptation of indigenous institutions and traditions Higher education is an imported product It is popular, and has undoubtedly been attended with beneficial results As is natural with an imported product, its development is marked by some crudities and its influence has to some extent been unsettling It has appealed to the natural intellectuality of the people, and has succeeded only partially in stimulating practical application. There are eleven Universities, viz, those of Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, Benares, Patna, Dacca Aligarh (Muhammadan), Lahore, Hyderabad and Mysore There are movements for Universities at Rangoon and Nagpur, and for compulsory elementary education In State institutions education is secular The institutions in 1918–19 numbered 197,000 and the scholars 7,937,000, including 1,313,000 females Of the institutions, about 70 per cent are maintained by the State or aided by grants the rest being private and unaided. Of the total expenditure on education in 1918–19, £8,658 000 £2 364,000 came from fees, and £4,782,000 from provincial revenues or local and municipal funds The census of 1911 showed that only 106 males and 10 females per thousand can read and write

LOCAL SELF GOVERNMENT, municipal and rural, in its present form, is a product of British rule The municipalities at the end of 1918 19 numbered 731, controlling a total population of nearly 17½ millions, and receiving an income of £4 650,000 from rates and taxes (octroi, taxes on houses and lands, water, lighting, and conservancy rates, &c) and £2,415,000 from other sources (excluding loans) Out of 9,943 members of municipal bodies 9 119 were Indians, and 8 220 were non official In almost all districts in British India there are local district boards, partly representative Nearly one half of their total expenditure of about £5 918,000 in 1918–19 was devoted to civil works, one fourth to education, and the remainder largely to sanitation and hospitals

JUSTICE, POLICE, AND PRISONS.—There are about 11 000 officers exercising civil and criminal jurisdiction Many of the superior and the great majority of the inferior officers are Indians In 1918 2,160,000 civil suits were instituted, 1 930,000 persons were tried, and 919 000 convicted, in criminal cases, of whom 554 were sentenced to death, 2,149 to transportation and 163,724 to imprisonment The strength of the police in 1918 was 14,345 officers and 188,447 men There were 774 prisons, with a daily average of 116,000 prisoners, in 1918 At the convict settlement of Port Blair (Andamans) there were 12,471 prisoners on 31 March, 1919

VITAL STATISTICS.—The reporting of vital occurrences is still defective, and proposals have been formulated with a view to securing more complete and accurate vital statistics The recorded death rate for British India in the decennium ended 1913 ranged between 38 21 per 1,000 in 1908 and 28 72 in 1913, it was 62 46 per 1,000 in 1918, the increase being mainly due to influenza, there being over 7 million deaths from this cause Fevers of various kinds are by far the commonest cause of death, cholera, dysentery and diarrhœa, smallpox, and (since 1896) plague being other chief causes The reported deaths from plague up to the end of 1918 were about 10,466,000 in India as a whole Over 25 000 people were killed by snakes in 1918 In 3,127 hospitals and dispensaries, maintained mostly from public funds, 35,600,000 patients were treated in 1918 The number of persons vaccinated was 9,040,000 According to the census of 1911 there were 110,000 lepers

SURVEYS.—The Survey Department superintends forest and cadastral surveys, as well as trigonometrical and topographical surveys, special explorations, and map production Marine, geological, botanical, and archæological surveys are in operation The Meteorological Department is of great service in forecasting rainfall

TRADE OF INDIA.—Among the countries constituting the British Empire India comes second to the United Kingdom itself in the volume of its sea borne trade, which almost equals that of Canada and Australia combined. During the five years ending 1913 14 both imports and exports were, on the average twice as great as they were 25 years ago. The ordinary course of Indian trade shows yearly a large net export of merchandise and a net import of treasure. The above table exhibits the leading figures for the last five years in thousands of pounds sterling. As the publication of the treasure figures has been temporarily discontinued it is not possible to give the total imports and exports for 1917 18 to 1919–20.

In 1913–14 both imports and exports of merchandise were of unprecedented magnitude but the outbreak of war during the course of the year 1914 15 brought the figures for the year down to the level at which they stood five or six years earlier. There was however a recovery in 1916–17. The rise in prices was and continues to be a very potent factor in the increase in values. During the year 1919–20 as compared with 1918 19 the value of the imports of merchandise and Government stores increased by £22 112 000 and the exports by £51,929 000. These figures exceed all previous records. In imports the principal articles showing increases were — sugar (£4 930 000), mineral oils, chiefly kerosene (£3 768,000) machinery (£2,676 000) iron and steel (£2 386 000) motor cars, motor cycles &c (£2,360,000), railway plant, &c (£2,362,000), silk goods (£1 477,000), grain, &c (£1 310 000) copper (£942,000), hardware, provisions, fruit and vegetables, glass raw silk, wood and timber. There were decreases in cotton yarn (£3,005 000), chemicals (£587 000) woollen manufactures (£384 000), paper (£251 000) salt tea chests spices, cigarettes, &c, apparel and haberdashery.

Japan did not maintain its former position in the Indian market for textiles.

In the export trade raw cotton increased by £18,415 000, seeds by £10,087,000, cotton yarn and manufactures by £9 523,000, hides by £9,376,000, raw jute by £7 986,000. Exports of lac, copra, tea, leather, &c, increased. The chief falling off was in grain &c (£16,617 000), jute manufactures (£1 758,000) raw wool, opium, metals and ores rubber chemicals and oils.

The following statement shows the chief articles of the foreign trade of India in 1919–20 —

In imports the United Kingdom comes easily first with 50 per cent of the total but is much less prominent in exports from India on account of the wide demand for India's raw produce for food and manufactures England re exports a large quantity of her imports from India

Customs Duties —The Indian Tariff (Amendment) Acts 1916 and 1917 introduced new and enhanced Customs duties with effect from 1 March, 1916 and 1 March, 1917 respectively The general import tariff which has stood at 5 per cent ad valorem since 1894 was raised to $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent The principal exceptions to the general rate are as follows —Cotton yarn and thread are exempt but the duty on other cotton goods is $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, an Excise duty of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent being levied on those woven in Indian mills Arms and ammunition pay 20 per cent, sugar 10 per cent, cigars and cigarettes 50 per cent spirits generally Rs 11¼ a gallon, salt Rs 1¼ a maund (82 lb) silver coin or bullion As 4 an ounce silver plate silver thread and wire and silver manufactures 10 per cent, refined petroleum As 1½ a gallon (with an additional 6 as per gallon on motor spirit an excise duty of 6 as per gallon is levied on motor spirit produced in India), coal As 8 a ton Iron and steel goods grain, tea chests, printing materials machinery other than cotton machinery, railway materials and a few other articles pay $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent Gold living animals raw hides skins raw cotton and wool, certain agricultural requisites, cotton machinery quinine, and a few other articles are free There are export duties of As 3 a maund on rice, Rs 1½ per 100 lb on tea Rs 4½ per bale of 4 0 lb on raw jute other than cuttings, in the case of which the rate is Rs 1¼ per bale, Rs 20 per ton on jute sacking, Rs 32 per ton on hessians, and 15 per cent ad valorem on raw hides and skins with a rebate of two thirds of the duty on hides and skins exported to countries within the British Empire

Shipping —In 1918–19 the number of vessels engaged in the foreign trade which entered and cleared at ports in British India was 9,492, with a tonnage of 10,480,000 Of this tonnage, 70 per cent was under the British flag

Ports —The chief ports are Calcutta Bombay, Karachi, Rangoon, and Madras These ports are administered by port trusts having wide powers, but subject to Government supervision

Foreign Land Trade of India —The most important countries in the land trade are Nepal and the Shan States The imports of merchandise and treasure in 1919 20 were £10 310000, and the exports £9 495 000 (11 months)

Agriculture is by far the most important occupation of the people of India In British territory in 1918–19 228 million acres were cropped a decrease of 37 million acres as compared with 1917–18 due to the widespread failure of the monsoon of 1918 Of the total area cropped about 8 per cent was under wheat 34 per cent under rice, and 37 per cent under other food grains and pulses, 5 per cent under oilseeds and 8 per cent under cotton, jute, and other fibres Jute cultivation has been extraordinarily profitable Sugar, tea, and tobacco are other important crops The total area under irrigation was 47 million acres The agricultural departments (central and provincial) which have been much developed since 1906 supply information as to crop prospects new staples manures, crop experiments, implements cattle breeding &c and distribute seeds There is also a civil veterinary department

Banks and Co operative Credit Societies —Besides the three Presidency Banks closely associated with the Government there are joint stock banks European and Indian, and many small native banks Much success has been achieved in rural districts by co operative credit societies In 1918 19 there were 1049 central 27 061 agricultural and 1 690 non agricultural societies with a total membership of 1,117,708 and a capital of £10 763 000

Minerals —The output of coal in India in 1919 was 22 628 000 tons The production has much increased in recent years Nine tenths of the total comes from Bengal and Bihar and Orissa The production of crude petroleum in India (chiefly Burma) has increased from 19 million gallons in 1897 to 306 millions in 1919 The production of salt is about 1,764 000 tons The production of manganese ore in 1919 was about 507 000 tons and of saltpetre 18 000 tons The yield of gold (nearly all from Mysore) was about 507 000 oz in 1919 There is a considerable output of mica and a fluctuating output of rubies and jade Monazite and wolfram have now taken an important place in the list of minerals of economic value produced in India The output of the former in 1919 was 2,024 tons and of the latter 3,570 tons

Manufactures —In India the ancient village handicrafts still survive though they suffer more and more from the competition of machine made goods Cotton weaving is by far the most important hand industry Power mills have grown up under European auspices, but are now largely owned by natives The 264 cotton mills at work in British India and Native States in 1918–19, mostly in Bombay and Ahmedabad, contained 6,591,000 spindles and 116,000 looms Up country cotton mills have increased The production in 1918–19 was 615 million lb of yarn (mostly of low counts) and 350 million lb of woven goods There is a tendency to produce finer yarns and to pay more attention to weaving The 76 jute mills, mostly situated in or near Calcutta, contained 840,000 spindles and 40,000 looms There were, in 1919, 7 woollen and 9 paper mills, 26 breweries, and various other factories.

STATES OF THE RULING PRINCES AND CHIEFS OF INDIA.

THE States in India whose chiefs are in subordinate alliance with, or under the suzerainty of, the King Emperor, comprise about two fifths of the area but only two ninths of the population of India Their administration, with a few unimportant exceptions, is not under the direct control of British officials, but it is subject, in varying degrees, to the Supreme Government. The chiefs are entitled to British protection, but have no power of making war and peace, or of sending ambassadors to one another or to foreign States, the military force they maintain is strictly limited, no European is allowed to reside at any of their courts without special sanction and in case of misrule the Supreme Government can dethrone the chief or temporarily suspend him from the exercise of his powers In matters of Imperial interest, trade, main lines of railway, &c., the Supreme Government has jurisdiction Some States pay tribute, most do not Tributes aggregating £594,000 (£233,000 from Mysore) were paid to the Government of India in 1918-19. Generally speaking, the States are governed by their Princes, Ministers, and Councils, with the advice of a political officer of the Supreme Government. This officer may have charge, as British Resident, of one large State, or may be the Agent for a group of States. A common characteristic of all Indian States, important or insignificant, is that in their territory British Indian law does not run For them the Legislative Councils of the Governor General or of the Provincial Governments cannot legislate, and over them the High Courts or Chief Courts of the Provinces have no jurisdiction

The Assigned Districts of Mysore (Bangalore), Kalat (Quetta), and Berar are still technically Native States territory The Shan States, on the other hand, are technically part of British India, though administered by local Sawbwas or petty chiefs Excluding these territories, the Indian States have a combined area of 709,583 square miles, and a population of 70,868,854. They maintain in the aggregate a considerable body of troops of inferior military organisation in addition to their Imperial Service troops. Many treaties provide that States shall furnish troops on the requisition of the Supreme Government, and troops of Indian States served in almost every Indian campaign of the 19th century Lord Curzon inaugurated an Imperial Cadet Corps of Indian princes and nobles. The States vary greatly in size and importance Hyderabad is nearly as large as Great Britain, and the Nizam enjoys a very large revenue. On the other hand, in Kathiawar and elsewhere, where family custom has led to minute sub division, there are many chiefs of single villages In these petty estates the nominal chief may have some very limited magisterial powers, but the administration is regulated and carried on by the Supreme Government in its executive capacity The amount of control thus exercised over an Indian State in its internal affairs depends on a number of considerations, and varies from State to State The rulers have not necessarily any religious or tribal connexion with the majority of their subjects Thus the Nizam of Hyderabad is a Muhammadan, but most of his people are Hindus Although the Indian States, large and small, number 693, only about 200 are of any real importance The majority represent the scattered military chiefships which sprang from the ruins of the Moghul Empire in the 18th century The rulers of Gwalior, Indore, and Baroda are all descendants of successful generals who then rose to power Most of these States are of more recent origin than the British power in India A unique step was taken in 1910, when a new Indian State was created out of the family domains of the Maharaja of Benares

The salutes enjoyed by the Indian princes indicate their relative importance Those with eleven guns or more are addressed as His Highness On pages 603–604 are the names of 73 ruling chiefs who have salutes of eleven guns or more, with some particulars of their States Some well known Indians of title, such as H H the Agha Khan, G C S I, G C I E, the Maharaja of Darbhanga, G C I E, and the Maharajah of Burdwan, K C S I, K C I E, are not ruling chiefs

The States of Hyderabad, Mysore, Baroda, Kashmir, Sikkim, and Kalat, and those belonging to the Rajputana and Central India Agencies, 175 in all, are under the direct supervision of the Governor General in Council The remainder, chiefly minor States, are under the supervision or control of various Provincial Governments The States of first magnitude, which have a superior Resident, are Hyderabad, Mysore, Baroda, Kashmir, Jaipur, Udaipur, Gwalior, Indore, and Travancore and Cochin

The Indian States may be thus classified — 1 Hyderabad, the premier State in India (capital, Hyderabad, pop 500,623—the fourth city in India) This State is in the centre of the Deccan or central plateau of Southern India The ruling dynasty is of Turkoman origin, and is descended from Asaf Jah, who became Viceroy of the Deccan in 1712, and then independent of the Mogul Emperor Telugu and Marathi are the chief languages Wheat, rice, and cotton are produced The Nizam's Guaranteed Railway is the principal line 2 Mysore This State, situated on a plateau in Southern India, was administered by the Indian Government from 1831 to 1881, when it was restored to native rule, under a somewhat strictly framed instrument of transfer In Dec 1913, the instrument was replaced by a new Treaty putting the relations between the British Government and the State on a footing more in consonance with the actual position of the Maharaja among the Feudatory Chiefs of India Kanarese and Telugu are the chief languages There is a Mysore State Railway. Millets, pulses, and rice are the principal crops Mysore has important goldfields 3 Baroda, situated in Western India in Gujarat and Kathiawar and much interlaced with British districts. The reigning Gaekwar was the adopted heir of the ruler deposed in 1875 for misgovernment and misconduct 4. The Himalayan Hill States, west of Nepal, including Kashmir The important frontier State of Kashmir (capital, Srinagar, pop 126,344) was granted to Gholab Sing by Lord Hardinge, after the First Punjab War (1846) It comprises Jammu, Kashmir Ladakh, Gilgit, and Baltistan A British force stationed at Gilgit watches the northern passes and controls the feudatory chiefships of Hunza and Nagar while on the west the subordinate chiefship of Chitral is occupied by British troops depending for their support on the Peshawar border 5 Sikkim, a frontier State situated on the borders of Tibet between Nepal and Bhutan, acknowledged the British protectorate in 1890, when also the boundaries of Tibet were defined by the Sikkim Tibet Convention 6 The Sikh States, in the Sirhind plain, south of the Sutlej The most important of these is Patiala 7 Rajputana comprising the ancient sovereignties lying between Sind and the United Provinces Rajputana (pop 10,530,432) extends some 460 miles from north to south, and is 530 miles in breadth, and is larger than the British Isles About half of the area is desert It comprises 20 States of varying size and importance Of these 17 are ruled by hereditary Rajput chiefs two by Jat chiefs, and one by a Muhammadan The Governor General's Agent's headquarters are at Ajmer he has under him Residents for Eastern and Western Rajputana, and about twenty other officers distributed among the States to supervise the administration, and give advice when it is required The most important States are Jodhpur (Marwar), Udaipur (Mewar), and Jaipur The Rajput dynasties, the most ancient in India, go back before the Mogul Empire, and resemble feudal monarchies. 8 The States of Central India, lying to the north of the Nerbudda and to the south and east of Rajputana, although in the aggregate one third less in extent than those of Rajputana, are nearly four times as numerous All but 17 are petty chiefships The most important are Gwalior and Indore, which include between them one half of the whole area. The 31 minor States of Bundelkhand (largest, Rewa) are in political relation with the Central India Agency Bhopal, one of the principal Muhammadan States in India, is now for a fourth generation under female rule 9 The Malayalim States of Travancore and Cochin, lying together in S W India These important States, attached to Madras Presidency, represent ancient Hindu dynasties 10 The three northern Muhammadan States of Khairpur (Sind) Bahawalpur, and Rampur 11 Kalat (including Makran and Kharan) and Las Bela, with tribal areas in the possession of the Marri and Bugti tribes 12 Gujarat, including Kutch and the numerous petty chiefships of Kathiawar 13 The Southern Mahratta States 14. The numerous Afghan and Baluch tribes of the N W frontier, inhabiting the mountains from the north of Peshawar to the base of the Suleiman range, a distance of 800 miles The names of some of these tribes, Waziris, Orakzais, Afridis &c, have become familiar owing to the many expeditions against them 15 The aboriginal Gond and Kol tribes, under petty princes of aboriginal or Rajput blood, in Chota-Nagpur, Orissa, the Central Provinces, and the Jaipur (Vizagapatam) Agency 16. The Indo-Chinese group of States, and the numerous hill tribes of the N.E. frontier

Nepal (area about 54,000 sq miles, pop. 5 639,092) lies between British India and Tibet on the S slopes of the Himalayas, and includes Mt Everest (29,141 ft) Amid the sterile mountains lie many fertile valleys The lower hills are covered with jungle, in which wild animals abound Rice, wheat, &c., are grown Nepal is divided into four provinces. In 1919 20 its exports to British India were £3,243,000,* while its imports amounted to £1 788 000 * The chief trade route is that between Kathmandu and the Bengal frontier (76 miles) Nepal exports rice and other grains, hides oilseeds, ghi, cattle, jute, &c., and imports cotton goods and yarn, sugar, salt, spices, metals, &c The revenue, realised chiefly from land rent, forests, customs, &c., is over £1 000 000. The aborigines are Mongolian in type, and their religion is Buddhism The country was conquered in 1769 by the Gurkhas, who are Hindus and claim to be Rajputs. Their frequent aggressions led to a war with the British in 1814-6 Relations have now long been friendly The policy of seclusion is, however, consistently followed by the native rulers The real political power rests with the Prime Minister, who paid a most successful visit to England in 1908. The British Envoy does not interfere in internal affairs. The army numbers about 45,000. By arrangement with Nepal India obtains many fine recruits for its Gurkha regiments

Bhutan (area, about 20,000 sq miles, pop about 350 000, mainly Buddhists) also lies on the S L of the Himalayas, and its products resemble those of Nepal In 1863, owing to outrages on British subjects, portions of it were annexed to India an annual allowance being paid by the Indian Government as compensation By a treaty in 1910 this allowance was fixed at £6,667 and Bhutan agreed to be guided in its external relations by the advice of the British who, however, will not interfere in its internal affairs The former dual government of a spiritual chief and a temporal chief came to an end when the Tongsa Penlop the chief councillor and virtual ruler Sir Ugyen Wangchuk, K C S I., K C I E., was chosen hereditary Maharaja in 1907 He has a salute of 15 guns in British territory The estimated annual revenue is £13,000. Bhutan's total trade with India in 1919-20 was £45 690 * There is no British Resident

AFGHANISTAN

Amir of Afghanistan and its Dependencies, H H Amir Amanulla Khan, suc 1919
Salute in British territory, 21 guns

Afghanistan (called Khorassan by the natives) lies on the N W frontier of India Estimated area, 250,000 sq miles, and pop 4,600,000 It is bounded on the W by Persia (boundary fixed 1857 and 1904), on the S by Baluchistan (boundary fixed 1896-7), on the N by Asiatic Russia (boundary fixed 1886-7 and 1893-5) and on the E by the N W Frontier Province (boundary fixed 1895) The northern boundary runs from Zulfikar on the Persian frontier to Kushk, the Russian railway terminus on the branch line from Merv, and thence N E to the Oxus, which forms the boundary from Khamiab to Lake Victoria, whence the line to the Chinese frontier was fixed by the Pamir agreement of 1895 The Indo-Afghan frontier was settled by the Durand agreement of 1903 On this frontier from the Pamirs to the Gomal Pass are many Pathan tribes who are much influenced by mullahs

Mountains chief among which are the Hindu Kush, cover three-fourths of the country, the elevation being generally over 4,000 feet. There are three great river basins the Oxus, Helmand, and Kabul The climate is dry, with extreme temperatures The population is very mixed The Afghans (or Duranis) have predominated since 1747, especially in Kandahar next come the Ghilzais (military and commercial) and the Tajiks (aboriginals, who are cultivators or retail traders). All are Sunni Muhammadans, except the Hazaras and Kizilbashes, who belong to the Shiite sect. The national tongue is Pushtu

Afghanistan is divided into six provinces, Kabul, Kandahar Herat, Turkestan, Farrah, and Badakshan (with Kafiristan and Wakhan), which are under governors with subordinate nobles and judges, police, and revenue officers Amir Abdurrahman (1880-1901) established a strong central government; with a regular civil and military organisation, including offices for public works, posts police finance trade, &c He first formed a national army paid and controlled by himself It comprises about 90,000 regulars and irregulars, but lacks discipline and cohesion Considerable quantities of rifles and artillery have been purchased in Europe under arrangements made with the Government of India. Factories for arms and ammunition and for various commercial products, have been erected in Kabul The Afghan laws are Islamic sacred laws tribal laws and those of the Amir who is the Court of Appeal The law is bulky and the criminal law severe Recently steps have been taken to develop education, hitherto controlled by the mullahs Most of the people are industrious cultivators, and the country has become fairly settled, peaceful, and prosperous There is excellent irrigation and all profitable soil is utilised There are generally two crops a year, one of wheat (the staple food) barley, or lentils the other of rice, millet, maize and dal Afghanistan is rich in fruits Sheep and transport animals are bred Silk, woollen and hair cloths and carpets are manufactured Salt silver copper, coal iron, lead, rubies and gold are found The roads are generally unsuitable for wheeled traffic, but are being improved Goods are conveyed by pack animals The chief trade routes to India are the Khaibar Pass, from Kabul to Peshawar (191 miles), along which a motor service was established by the late Amir, and the road from Kandahar to Quetta (125 miles) The Sind-Pishin railway is now completed to the Baluchistan-Persian frontier. The trade of

* Figures for 11 months ended February 1920

Afghanistan with India in 1919-20 was over £3 345 000 * The exports to India are mainly fruits and nuts, raw wool, and ghi, while the imports therefrom are chiefly cotton yarn and piece goods, metals, leather goods, tea, and sugar The Afghan customs duties are heavy There is a large export of wool to Persia and Russia, cotton and silk goods, sugar, &c., being taken in exchange The annual revenue is unknown, and consists largely of payments in kind It may amount to £780,000 There are taxes on land, a grazing tax, customs duties, stamps, fines, poll taxes, receipts from State lands monopolies, and factories, and mining royalties.

As the result of a British mission to Kabul in 1904 5 the engagements which had existed with the Amir Abdurrahman since 1880 were renewed by the treaty of 21 March, 1905 By the Anglo Russian Convention of August, 1907, Russia declared Afghanistan outside the Russian sphere of influence

His Majesty the late Amir Habibullah Khan was assassinated on February 20, 1919, his brother, Nasrulla Khan by a coup d etat there upon seized and temporarily held the reins of government at Kabul, but the Amir's third son, Amanulla Khan, soon after declared himself, and was recognised as, Amir Afghan troops crossed the Indian frontier on May 3, on which the Indian Government took immediate steps to expel them, fighting followed and Dakka was occupied by British troops, but overtures were made by the Amir and a treaty of peace was signed in August.

The treaty provides that the privilege enjoyed by former Amirs of importing arms and ammunition through India is withdrawn the arrears of the late Amir's subsidy are confiscated, and no subsidy is to be granted to the present Amir, the British Government express willingness, conditionally, to receive another Afghan mission after six months, for the discussion and settlement of matters of common interest and the re establishment of the old friendship on a satisfactory basis, the Afghan Government agree to the Indo Afghan frontier accepted by the late Amir and agree to the early demarcation by a British Commission of the West Khyber where the Afghan aggression happened, and to accept such boundary as the British Commission may lay down By this treaty Afghanistan is left officially free and independent, both internal and external. All previous treaties have been cancelled by the war Representatives of the Indian Government and of the Amir met at Mussoorie in 1920 to discuss questions affecting the relations between the two governments

CAPITAL, Kabul (about 180,000). The chief commercial centre is Kandahar (80,000). Other provincial capitals are Herat (20,000) and Tashkurgan (17,000). British Agent (vacant), Rs 1,000

MESOPOTAMIA AND THE PERSIAN GULF.—For three centuries England has taken the lead in the Gulf trade She has suppressed piracy, slavery, and inter tribal warfare on land and sea, made surveys, and laid down buoys and cables Vigorous measures have been taken against gun-running. England and India still have the lion's share of the trade, the bulk of which is conducted by Indians, who make Bombay their entrepôt The Arabian shores are low lying deserts, the Persian coasts mountainous, at the head of the Gulf are great alluvial plains The heat is intense in summer Natural harbours are few The British Government have been entrusted with the mandate for Mesopotamia and are taking steps to expedite the creation of an Arab Government, with British advisers and with the ultimate object of the development of Mesopotamia as a Self governing State Municipal Councils, representative divisional councils, and councils of Notables have been set up The estimated cost to the British Exchequer of the occupation by British Troops is £21 500 000 for the current year, but the civil administration is self supporting and shows a surplus of revenue over expenditure The port of Basra has been greatly developed and a large capital expenditure has been incurred on railways during the British occupation. High Commr, Mesopotamia, Maj Gen The Hon Sir P Z Cox, GCIE, KCSI

Bahrein (capital Manama), governed by Sheikh Isa bin Ali and under the protectorate of the Indian Government, is the largest of a group of islands half way up the Gulf, near the Arab coast (El Katr). It is the headquarters of extensive pearl fisheries, and a distributing centre for the adjacent mainland Pearls are the only notable export, rice, cotton goods, dates, sugar, and spices the chief imports In 1918-19 the value of the exports was £1 318,000, and of the imports £1,350,000 The people (about 100,000) are Muhammadans The Sheikh has been in treaty relations since 1820 with the Government of India, who have a Political Agent at Bahrein. In 1880 he engaged not to make treaties with any other State.

The Sultan of Oman (Muscat) is in treaty relations with, and subsidised by the Government of India, who have a Political Agent at his Court

The independent tribes on the Pirate (Arab) Coast from Ras el Kheima to Odeid are bound under treaties with the Indian Government (dating from 1820, and confirmed in 1853 by a Treaty of Perpetual Peace) to maintain a maritime truce for the prevention of piracy and slavery, and for the cessation of hostilities at sea Hence their chiefs are sometimes called the "Trucial" chiefs The British Political Resident in the Persian Gulf is the recognised arbiter and adviser of these tribes, and peace is maintained by the British flag In 1892 these tribes agreed not to enter into relations with, or cede territory to any other Power than the British The trade of the Arab coast ports largely consists in exports of pearls to India via Lingah and Bahrein

Important caravan routes converge at Kuweit which has an excellent harbour The Sheikh is under treaty obligations with the Indian Government completed in 1905 A Trans Persian railway, linking Russia with India is under discussion By the Agreements of Aug 1919 between the Governments of Great Britain and Persia the former reiterates past undertakings to respect absolutely the independence and integrity of Persia to supply, at the cost of the Persian Government expert advisers for the several departments of the Persian Administration, and also officers, munitions, and equipment of modern type for the formation of a uniform force which the Persian Government proposes to create for the establishment and preservation of order and loans £2,000 000 to the Persian Government, at 7 per cent, secured on the Persian Gulf Customs revenues, and agrees to co operate with Persia for the encouragement of Anglo Persian enterprise for the improvements of communications in Persia, the two Governments agree to the appointment of a Joint Committee of experts for the examination and revision of the existing Customs Tariff In addition the British Government waives all claims from Persia for the cost of the maintenance of British troops sent to Persia during the war

ASIATIC RUSSIA —A portion of what was once the Russian Empire is conterminous with Persia and Afghanistan The Trans Caspian Railway runs via Merv to Samarkand and Andijan with a branch to Tashkent The Murghab Valley branch from Merv to Kushk on the Afghan frontier opened in 1898, brings the Russian railways within 70 miles of Herat and within 450 miles of the Chaman terminus of the Indian railways Another important strategic line connects Tashkent directly with Orenburg The Amu Darya, or Oxus which separates Bokhara from Afghanistan for 330 miles, is navigated by Russian steamers

CHINA —India is in contact with two dependencies of China, Chinese Turkestan and Tibet, and one province Yunnan

Chinese Turkestan is surrounded by the mountains of Tianshan, the Pamirs and Kuenlun There are three difficult passes into Russian Turkestan and two still more difficult ones into India The boundary between Kashmir and Chinese Turkestan has not been officially defined There is a British consul general at Kashgar (Major P T Etherton) Trade with India is chiefly carried over the Karakoram Pass (18,500 feet) viâ Ladakh, in Kashmir

Tibet, a plateau seldom lower than 10,000 feet, forms the northern frontier of India (boundary imperfectly defined), from Kashmir to Burma but is separated therefrom by the Himalayas India imports from Tibet wool borax salt, and musk, in exchange for cotton and woollen goods and grain The total trade in 1919–20 was about £700,000 Trade passes from Bengal (through Sikkim) and from the Punjab and the United Provinces Under the Anglo Chinese Sikkim Convention of 1890 a trade mart was opened at Yatung, but as the Tibetans persistently disregarded the Convention, a political mission was despatched from India, with a military escort It reached the capital, Lhasa after sharp fighting, on 3 August, 1904. A new Convention was signed (7 Sept), providing for the erection of boundary pillars between Sikkim and Tibet, for three trade marts, with British and Tibetan agents, for unrestricted traffic by existing routes, and for payment of an indemnity The Tibetans pledged themselves not to alienate any territory or grant concessions to, or permit the intervention of any foreign Power By the Convention of Peking (April, 1906) China accepted the Conventions of 1890 and 1904, and declared that no foreign State should interfere in Tibet while England also undertook not to interfere in the administration of Tibet or annex territory By the Anglo Russian Convention of Aug 1907 both Powers recognised the suzerain rights of China in Tibet agreed to maintain its territorial integrity to refrain from intervention in its internal administration, to treat with Tibet only through the Chinese Government not to send representatives to Lhasa not to assign any territory to either Power, and not to obtain railway mining or other concessions, but direct relations between British commercial agents and Tibetan authorities under the Conventions of 1904 and 1906 are permitted In Dec 1905 the ruler of Tibet the Tashi Lama, visited India The Dalai (or Sacred) Lama who fled before the British advance on Lhasa, returned to Tibet in Jan 1910 The Chinese had meanwhile strengthened their hold over the administration despite the opposition of the Lamas or monks who resented the loss of their authority In Feb 1910 the Dalai Lama again fled to India pursued by Chinese troops He was then deposed by the Chinese Emperor The British Government refused the Dalai Lama's appeal for their intervention but allowed him to remain at Darjiling He left India in June 1912, for Lhasa, where sharp fighting occurred between the Chinese and Tibetans the former being worsted In August 1912 the British Minister at Peking presented a Note to the Chinese Government, urging that China should not actively intervene in internal administration in Tibet To this the Chinese Government agreed and representatives of the British Chinese and Tibetan Governments met in conference at Simla in Oct, 1913 to discuss the relations between the three countries A convention the terms of which have not been made public, was initialled by the three representatives, but the Chinese Government have so far refused to ratify it

Yunnan is a Chinese province to the N E of Burma By Anglo Chinese agreements of 1894 and 1897 a boundary was fixed between Burma and Yunnan and arrangements were made regarding trade, extradition, &c Part of the boundary is still undefined By an agreement of 1896 Great Britain and France agreed to share equally all privileges or advantages that might be conceded by China in Yunnan Trade with Yunnan is chiefly by a difficult route from Bhamo, in Upper Burma The direct trade was about £1 500,000 in 1919–20 Burma imports from Yunnan hides, raw silk, &c and exports cotton goods, &c Lêng yueh and Ssumao near the Burma frontier, are treaty ports There are British consuls at Lêng yueh and Yunnan fu

SIAM (q v) marches with Burma for many hundreds of miles through mountainous country, and considerable trade is carried on over this frontier mainly with Chiengmai Burma imports from Siam teak, cattle, silk goods, &c, and exports cotton goods, &c In 1919–20 the value of the total trade was about £600 000 The boundary of Burma and N W Siam was demarcated in 1892–3. France in 1904 recognised the portion of Siam west of the Menam basin, including the Malay peninsula and adjacent islands, as within the British sphere of influence completed in 1905 A Trans Persian railway, linking Russia with India, is under discussion By the Agreements of Aug, 1919, between the Governments of Great Britain and Persia, the former reiterates past undertakings to respect absolutely the independence and integrity of Persia, to supply, at the cost of the Persian Government, expert advisers for the several departments of the Persian Administration, and also officers, munitions, and equipment of modern type, for the formation of a uniform force which the Persian Government proposes to create for the establishment and preservation of order and loans £2,000 000 to the Persian Government, at 7 per cent, secured on the Persian Gulf Customs revenues, and agrees to co operate with Persia for the encouragement of Anglo Persian enterprise for the improvements of communications in Persia, the two Governments agree to the appointment of a Joint Committee of experts for the examination and revision of the existing Customs Tariff In addition the British Government waives all claims from Persia for the cost of the maintenance of British troops sent to Persia during the war

ASIATIC RUSSIA —A portion of what was once the Russian Empire is conterminous with Persia and Afghanistan The Trans Caspian Railway runs, viâ Merv, to Samarkand and Andijan, with a branch to Tashkent The Murghab Valley branch from Merv to Kushk on the Afghan frontier, opened in 1898, brings the Russian railways within 70 miles of Herat, and within 450 miles of the Chaman terminus of the Indian railways Another important strategic line connects Tashkent directly with Orenburg The Amu Darya, or Oxus, which separates Bokhara from Afghanistan for 330 miles, is navigated by Russian steamers

CHINA —India is in contact with two dependencies of China, Chinese Turkestan and Tibet, and one province Yunnan

Chinese Turkestan is surrounded by the mountains of Tianshan, the Pamirs, and Kuenlun There are three difficult passes into Russian Turkestan and two still more difficult ones into India The boundary between Kashmir and Chinese Turkestan has not been officially defined There is a British consul general at Kashgar (Major P T Etherton) Trade with India is chiefly carried over the Karakoram Pass (18,500 feet) viâ Ladakh, in Kashmir

Tibet, a plateau seldom lower than 10,000 feet, forms the northern frontier of India (boundary imperfectly defined), from Kashmir to Burma but is separated therefrom by the Himalayas India imports from Tibet wool, borax, salt, and musk, in exchange for cotton and woollen goods and grain The total trade in 1919–20 was about £700,000 Trade passes from Bengal (through Sikkim) and from the Punjab and the United Provinces Under the Anglo Chinese Sikkim Convention of 1890 a trade mart was opened at Yatung; but as the Tibetans persistently disregarded the Convention, a political mission was despatched from India, with a military escort It reached the capital, Lhasa, after sharp fighting, on 3 August, 1904. A new Convention was signed (7 Sept), providing for the erection of boundary pillars between Sikkim and Tibet, for three trade marts, with British and Tibetan agents, for unrestricted traffic by existing routes, and for payment of an indemnity. The Tibetans pledged themselves not to alienate any territory or grant concessions to, or permit the intervention of any foreign Power By the Convention of Peking (April, 1906) China accepted the Conventions of 1890 and 1904, and declared that no foreign State should interfere in Tibet, while England also undertook not to interfere in the administration of Tibet or annex territory By the Anglo Russian Convention of Aug, 1907 both Powers recognised the suzerain rights of China in Tibet, agreed to maintain its territorial integrity to refrain from intervention in its internal administration, to treat with Tibet only through the Chinese Government, not to send representatives to Lhasa, not to assign any territory to either Power, and not to obtain railway mining, or other concessions, but direct relations between British commercial agents and Tibetan authorities under the Conventions of 1904 and 1906 are permitted In Dec, 1905 the ruler of Tibet, the Tashi Lama, visited India The Dalai (or Sacred) Lama, who fled before the British advance on Lhasa, returned to Tibet in Jan 1910 The Chinese had meanwhile strengthened their hold over the administration, despite the opposition of the Lamas, or monks who resented the loss of their authority In Feb, 1910 the Dalai Lama again fled to India pursued by Chinese troops He was then deposed by the Chinese Emperor The British Government refused the Dalai Lama's appeal for their intervention but allowed him to remain at Darjiling He left India in June, 1912 for Lhasa, where sharp fighting occurred between the Chinese and Tibetans the former being worsted In August, 1912 the British Minister at Peking presented a Note to the Chinese Government, urging that China should not actively intervene in internal administration in Tibet To this the Chinese Government agreed and representatives of the British, Chinese and Tibetan Governments met in conference at Simla in Oct, 1913 to discuss the relations between the three countries A convention the terms of which have not been made public, was initialled by the three representatives, but the Chinese Government have so far refused to ratify it

Yunnan is a Chinese province to the N E of Burma By Anglo Chinese agreements of 1894 and 1897 a boundary was fixed between Burma and Yunnan and arrangements were made regarding trade, extradition, &c Part of the boundary is still undefined By an agreement of 1896 Great Britain and France agreed to share equally all privileges or advantages that might be conceded by China in Yunnan Trade with Yunnan is chiefly by a difficult route from Bhamo, in Upper Burma The direct trade was about £1 500,000 in 1919–20 Burma imports from Yunnan hides, raw silk, &c, and exports cotton goods, &c Tengyueh and Ssumao, near the Burma frontier, are treaty ports There are British consuls at Tengyueh and Yunnan fu

SIAM (q v) marches with Burma for many hundreds of miles through mountainous country, and considerable trade is carried on over this frontier, mainly with Chiengmai Burma imports from Siam teak, cattle, silk goods, &c, and exports cotton goods, &c In 1919–20 the value of the total trade was about £600 000 The boundary of Burma and N W Siam was demarcated in 1892–3 France in 1904 recognised the portion of Siam west of the Menam basin, including the Malay peninsula and adjacent islands, as within the British sphere of influence

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Canada was originally discovered by Cabot in 1497, but its history dates only from 1534, when the French took possession of the country. The first settlement (Quebec) was founded by them in 1608. In 1759 Quebec succumbed to the British forces under General Wolfe, and in 1763 the whole territory of Canada became a possession of Great Britain by the Treaty of Paris of that year. Nova Scotia was ceded in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, the Provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island being subsequently formed out of it. British Columbia was formed into a Crown colony in 1858 having previously been a part of the Hudson Bay Territory, and was united to Vancouver Island in 1866. By the British North America Act, passed in 1867, the Provinces of Canada (Ontario and Quebec), Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick were united under the title of THE DOMINION OF CANADA and provision was made in the Act for the admission at any subsequent period of the other provinces and territories of British North America.

The Dominion of Canada occupies the whole of the northern part of the North American Continent (with the exception of Alaska and part of the coast of Labrador), from 49° North latitude to the Arctic seas, and from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean. The boundaries between the Ungava district of the Labrador peninsula (transferred to Quebec in 1912) and the Labrador coast region of Newfoundland are expected to be settled shortly by a Judicial Commission.

Relief.—From a physical point of view Canada may be divided into an eastern and a western division, the Red River Valley, in long. 97°, forming the separating line. The eastern division comprises three areas, presenting radically distinct aspects.—(1) The south-eastern area, bounded by the line of the Gulf and River St. Lawrence, from Belle Isle to Montreal, thence by a line running directly south to Lake Champlain, which is generally hilly, and sometimes mountainous, with many fine stretches of agricultural and pastoral lands. (2) The southern and western area, presenting, in the main, a broad, level, and slightly undulating expanse of generally fertile country, with occasional step-like ridges or rocky escarpments. The main hydrographical feature is the chain of lakes, with an area of 150,000 square miles contributing to the great river system of the St. Lawrence. (3) The northern area embracing nearly two thirds of the Dominion, with an average elevation of 1,000 feet above the level of the sea, pre-eminently a region of waterways, and including the great Laurentian mountain range. In this area are found the other great river systems, the Nelson and the Mackenzie. The western division referred to may also be said to possess two areas equally distinct in character. The first stretches from the Red River Valley to the Rocky Mountains. Here between lat. 49° and 54°, is the great Prairie Region, rising to the west in three terrace-like elevations, the lowest of which is 700 feet, and the third about 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. North of the 54th parallel the country passes again into forest. The second area from the western edge of the Prairie to the Pacific coast, is a distance of 400 miles, and contains the Rocky Mountains (Mount Hooker, 15,700 feet) and the Gold and Cascade Ranges, whose summits are from 4,000 to 16,000 feet high, the country being on the whole densely wooded.

Climate.—The climate in the eastern and central portions of the Dominion presents greater extremes of cold and heat than in corresponding latitudes in Europe, but in the south-western portion of the Prairie Region and the southern portions of the Pacific slope the climate is milder. Spring, summer, and autumn are of about seven to eight months duration, and the winter four to five months. The soil is generally fertile and all the products of the temperate zone are cultivated.

THE JUDICATURE

The Judicature.—Justice is administered, as in England, by judges, police magistrates, and justices of the peace, of whom the first named are appointed by the Governor-General for life from among the foremost men at the Bar in the several provinces. The highest court is the Supreme Court of Canada, composed of a Chief Justice and five puisne judges, and holding three sessions in the year at Ottawa. The only other Dominion Court, viz., the Exchequer Court of Canada, is presided over by separate judges, and its sittings may be held anywhere in Canada. The Provincial Courts include the Court of Chancery, Court of King's Bench, Court of Error and Appeal, Superior Courts, County Courts, General Sessions, and Division Courts. The duties of coroners are generally analogous to those in force in England, as are also methods of civil and criminal procedure, while trial by jury prevails.

1917–18	27,640,000	30,990,000	58,630,000
1918–19	33,200,000	36,800,000	70,000,000

The trade was chiefly distributed in 1918–19 as under.—

Country	Imports from	Exports to
United Kingdom	$2,399,853	2,713,089
United States	16,569,236	6,523 657
Canada.....	12,777,684	2,532,397

The principal imports in 1917–18 were flour, textiles, coal, hardware, and provisions, the principal exports were codfish, value $18,830,000; cod and seal oil, value $1,770,000, pulp and paper, $2,700,000; herrings, $2,070,000, sealskins, $400,000; tinned lobsters, copper, copper ore, iron pyrites and other minerals, $900,000; total value of the fishery products in 1918–19 was upwards of $25,000,000.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

The inhabitants are chiefly located on the coast-line of the shore and bays, nearly 10,000 being engaged in fishing—for cod in summer, a large proportion of which is exported to South America—and seal fishing in winter and spring Agriculture, mining, and lumbering are also engaging attention and affording means of employment, while large pulp and paper mills have been erected. During 1916–17 there was exported from Grand Falls and Bishop Falls paper and pulp valued at $1,510,440, most of which was consigned to the United Kingdom. The larger portion of the interior is practically in a state of nature, but the railways have opened up large tracts of rich agricultural, mineral, and timber lands hitherto of small value. A valuable discovery of copper has been made at Little Bay, about 200 miles from St John's.

COMMUNICATIONS

Railways —There were 841 miles of railway open in 1917 The trans insular line runs to Port aux Basques, viâ Exploits River and Bay of Islands, with branch connexions to Placentia, the principal settlements in Conception Bay, and to Lewisporte (in Notre Dame Bay) Branch lines are under construction

Posts and Telegraphs —There were 742 post offices in 1916, dealing with 3,770,000 letters and post cards, 3,450,000 newspapers and books, and 207,850 parcels There are 4,590 miles of telegraph line and 965 of telephone wire

LABRADOR.

Labrador, a dependency of Newfoundland, forms the most easterly part of the North American continent, and extends from Blanc Sablon, in the Straits of Belle Isle, on the south, to Cape Chidley, at the entrance to Hudson's Straits (or to Cape Wolstenholme), on the north; the boundaries between Quebec and Labrador being a matter of keen controversy which is expected to come up for settlement before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. Labrador possesses valuable cod, herring, trout, and salmon fisheries One of the grandest spectacles in the world is provided by the Great Falls of Labrador, on the Hamilton River. The inhabitants of this 850 miles of coastal America are mainly Eskimos, engaged in fishing and hunting There are no towns, but there are Moravian Mission stations at Maggovik, Hopedale, Nain, Okak, Hebron, and Killinek. Pulp and paper mills have been founded at Sandwich Bay and Hamilton Inlet to deal with the almost inexhaustible supply of timber,

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The territory of the Commonwealth includes the Continent of Australia, the Island of Tasmania, Norfolk Island, Lord Howe Island, and part of the island of New Guinea (Papua).

Australia (mainland) is probably the oldest of all land surfaces in either hemisphere, and may be regarded as the largest island or the smallest of the Continents, being surrounded by the following waters:—North, the Timor and Arafura Seas and Torres Strait; East, Pacific Ocean; South, Bass Strait (which separates Tasmania from the Continent) and Southern Ocean; and West, Indian Ocean. The total area of the Continent is 2,948,366 English square miles, the island of Tasmania having an area of 26,215 square miles, and making a total area for the States and Territories of 2,974,581 square miles. The coast-line of Australia is approximately 12,210 miles, and the geographical position of the Continent is between 10° 39'-39° 11½' South latitude and 113° 5' 153° 16' East longitude; the greatest length East to West is 2,400 miles, and from North to South 1,971 miles. Its nearest distance to England is about 11,000 miles.

From a physical standpoint the continent of Australia is divisible into an eastern and a western area, the former containing a regular coast-line with a good harbourage, roadsteads, rivers, and inland waterways, and a greater development of fauna and flora; the latter a broken coast-line with estuaries rather than rivers, and but little inland water communication. The whole continent is, roughly speaking, a vast, irregular, and undulating plateau, part of which is below the level of the sea, surrounded by a mountainous coast-line, with frequent intervals of low and sandy shore on the north, west and south. The Great Barrier Reef extends parallel with the East coast for 1 200 miles, at a distance of about 60 miles from the mainland. A large part of the interior, particularly in the west, consists of sandy and stony desert, covered with spinifex, and containing numerous salt-marshes, though reaches of grass-land occur here and there. The geological formation of Australia is remarkable for its simplicity and regularity; the strike of the rocks is, with a single exception, coincident with the direction of the mountain-chains, from N. to S.; and the tertiary formation to be found in the N., S., and W. develops in the S.E. into a gigantic tertiary plain, watered by the Darling and the Murray Rivers. Nearly all round the coast, however, and in eastern and south-eastern Australia, stretching far inland from the coastal range, is a rich grazing country, admirably adapted to the rearing of sheep. The most extensive mountain system takes its rise near the S.E. point, and includes a number of ranges known by different names in different places, none of them being of any great height. The principal rivers are the Murray, with its tributaries, the Murrumbidgee, Lachlan, and Darling, in the S.E. part of the island, which fall into the sea on the south coast: on the east coast, the Hawkesbury, Hunter, Clarence, Richmond, Brisbane, Mary, Burnett, Fitzroy, and Burdekin; on the west, the Swan, Murchison, Gascoyne, Ashburton, Fortescue, De Grey, and Fitzroy; on the north, the Drysdale, Ord, Victoria, and Daly; and the Roper, the Flinders, and Mitchell, which debouch into the Gulf of Carpentaria. Lakes are numerous, but nearly all are salt; the scarcity of the natural water supply has been, however, mitigated by successful borings. Minerals comprise gold, silver, copper, iron, and coal in large quantities, antimony, mercury, tin, zinc, &c.

Climate.—The seasons commence about March 21 (Autumn), June 21 (Winter), Sept. 22 (Spring), and Dec. 22 (Summer). The climate is extremely dry, but, except in the tropical coast-land of the north, the continent is everywhere highly beneficial to Europeans, the range of temperature being smaller than that of other countries similarly situated.

GOVERNMENT.

The Government is that of a Federal Commonwealth within the British Empire, the executive power being vested in the Sovereign (through the Governor-General), assisted by a Federal Executive Council of nine Ministers of State and such honorary Ministers who may be appointed thereto. The Constitution rests on the fundamental law of March 16, 1898, ratified by the Imperial Parliament on July 9, 1900; and the Commonwealth was inaugurated on Jan. 1, 1901. Under the Constitution the Federal Government possesses limited and enumerated powers as surrendered by the federating States, the residuum of legislative power being in the Governments of the various States. Briefly stated, the enumerated powers include authority over commerce and navigation, finance, defence, posts and telegraphs, census and statistics, and conciliation and arbitration in extra-State industrial disputes; with authority to assume the control of railways and lighthouses, marriage and divorce, emigration and immigration, currency and banking, and weights and measures.

Industrial Arbitration

Matters relating to the conditions of industrial employment in New South Wales are determined by a Court of Industrial Arbitration, which is empowered to make awards fixing the lowest rates of wages, the hours and times of work, rates of payment for overtime &c, and the proportionate number of apprentices and improvers in any industry and granting preference of employment to members of any trade or industrial union of employees Industrial agreements between employers and employees may be enforced as an award Awards were until recently made by subsidiary tribunals known as Wages or Industrial Boards, constituted for each industry, but their functions are now absorbed by Judges of the Industrial Arbitration Court At June 30, 1920, there were 342 awards and 98 industrial agreements in force The industrial laws provide for the registration of industrial unions of employers and employees, and for mediation in industrial disputes Under certain conditions strikes may be recognised as lawful, except strikes by Government employees, or by persons engaged in military or naval contracts, or by employees in an industry of which the conditions are regulated by award or industrial agreement, but when an award has been in operation for twelve months, the employees may decide by secret ballot to withdraw from its conditions

When a strike occurs or is contemplated, the Minister for Labour may order a secret ballot to ascertain if the majority of the employees favour a strike

A "Board of Trade of New South Wales" has been constituted in 1918 with extensive powers regarding industrial matters one of its functions being to declare annually the rate of living wage for adult employees of each sex, to be used as a standard by the Court in determining rates of wages

Industrial matters which extend beyond the limits of one State are determined by the Commonwealth Court of Arbitration and Conciliation

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

For purposes of Local Government with the exception of an area of 125 909 square miles in the sparsely populated western division the State is divided into 184 municipalities and 136 shires governed by councils which are elected triennially The councils are empowered to levy rates on the value of land, to float loans to acquire land and works, to construct and maintain streets, jetties wharfs, &c, to make regulations regarding, cattle slaughtering maintenance of public places, traffic street and road lighting, public health and safety, management of parks, &c

The basis of rating is almost wholly on the unimproved capital value of land which in 1918 was £94,686,224 for municipalities including the city of Sydney, and £109,133,215 for shires

* Including net amount received from Commonwealth on a per capita basis

Physiography

The surface of the country is generally undulating forest land, with mountains from 1,500 to 5,000 feet in height, and expanses of level open plains. There are numerous streams, the Derwent and the Tamar being the largest. The climate is fine and salubrious and well suited to European constitutions, and the hot winds of Australia do not reach the Island. At Hobart in 1919 the mean annual temperature was 55·4°, the mean temperature for Dec., Jan. and Feb. being 61·5° and that of June, July and Aug. 47·6°. The western side of the island is very wet, the eastern side having a rainfall similar to that of eastern England; the average rainfall varies from 20 inches to 100 inches in different parts.

Government

The island was first settled by the British in 1803 as an appendage to New South Wales, from which it was separated in 1825. In 1851 a partly elective legislature was inaugurated, and in 1856 Responsible Government was added. In 1901 Tasmania became a State of the Australian Commonwealth, q.v. The State executive authority is vested in a Governor (appointed by the Crown) aided by a Council of responsible Ministers.

Education

Primary education is compulsory, secular, and free, there being 483 State schools in 1919, with 38,239 children on the registers. Secondary education is also provided by the State (4 high schools with 1,139 scholars), and by private endowment. There is a University at Hobart, and technical schools at Hobart and Launceston.

Finance

The revenue and expenditure and debt of Tasmania for the five years ended June 30, 1914–1919, are stated as follows —

	Revenue	Expenditure	Debt
1915	£1,224,095	£1,384,149	£13,133,046
1916	1,376,493	1,340,711	13,908,913
1917	1,369,368	1,402,893	14,071,640
1918	1,503,047	1,459,748	15,137,355
1919	1,581,984	1,644,512	15,281,281

Banking.—In 1918 the banks of issue had total assets £7,909,186, the savings bank deposits on Jan. 1, 1919 were £3,089,422.

Production and Industry

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Of the total area of 16,778,000 acres on March 1, 1919, 254,109 acres were under crops and 666,954 under artificially sown grass, wheat 11,917 acres, while 1,399,087 acres (exclusive of mineral land) were leased from the Crown for pastoral purposes. The live stock on March 31, 1919 included 218,234 cattle, 1,841,924 sheep, 44,328 pigs and 41,281 horses. The wool clip in 1919 was estimated at 10,279,998 lb. Tasmanian blankets command very high prices in the commercial world. Fruit of all kinds and of the finest quality is grown in abundance.

Forestry.—The forests of Tasmania abound in the most beautiful cabinet woods and the largest size timbers adapted for every variety of purpose. In 1919 about 56,809,119 super. ft., estimated at about £391,374, were cut by the saw mills.

Minerals.—The chief minerals produced are copper, tin, silver, lead, osmondium, coal, wolfram and schulite; gold and zinc. Over 54,391 acres have been taken on mineral leases and mines of both lode and stream tin are being worked in the north. Coal of a good quality, and in easily accessible positions, is very generally distributed over the island.

TOWNS.

CAPITAL, Hobart. Population (1919), 50,000.

Other towns are Launceston (pop. 28,000), Devonport, Zeehan, Ulverstone, Latrobe, Waratah, Westbury, Longford, Burnie, and Queenstown.

VI.—WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

Includes all that portion of the continent west of 129° E. long., the most westerly point being in 112° 52′ E. long., and from 13° 30′ to 35° 8′ S. lat. Its extreme length is 1,500 miles, and 1,000 miles from east to west, and its total area 975,920 square miles.

Physical Features.—Large portions of the State, for some hundreds of miles inland, are hilly and even mountainous, although the altitude, so far as ascertained, rises nowhere above that of Mount Bruce (4,024 ft.) in the north-west division or the Stirling Range (3,640 ft.) in the south-west. The greater part of the far interior may be described as a great tableland, with an altitude of from 1,000 to 2,000 ft. above sea-level, the surface of which consists of large areas of sand-dunes, varied by wide stretches of clayey soils. Long, straggling rivers, broken during the summer into a series of pools, cross the country as far inland as the hills extend, widening in many cases nearer the coast into large sea estuaries. Of the area of Western Australia, which is equal to more than half that of European Russia, probably about three-fourths is suitable for pastoral purposes, immense tracts having already been proved eminently so. Some 60,000 square miles at least are equally fitted for agricultural purposes, more especially for the production of wheat, wine, and fruit, and considerable areas are already under cultivation. Gold, coal, and other minerals in abundance are found in many parts, and wide stretches of land are covered with forests of great commercial value.

POPULATION.

Year.	Males.	Females.	Total.
1915	171,304	146,712	318,016
1916	159,998	148,808	308,806
1917	158,701	150,722	309,423
1918	161,464	151,983	313,447
1919	176,902	154,758	331,660

The apparent decrease in the male population after 1914 existed, of course, only in a technical sense, since it was mainly due to enlistment of volunteers for the war. The total number of men who enlisted in the State during the course of the war was 34,353, and of these 20,768 returned. The settlement of the soldiers in suitable occupations has been vigorously pushed on since the end of the war. The tide of immigration from the United Kingdom and elsewhere has again set in, and in view of the unlimited scope Western Australia offers for further settlement, the Government is doing its utmost to encourage it. It is confidently expected that a better knowledge of the great resources of this as yet very meagrely peopled part of the Empire will more and more attract large numbers of suitable settlers from Great Britain and other populous countries, particularly as the Western Australian Government is again offering every inducement to the bonâ fide immigrant.

Natural Increase of the People.

Year.	Births.	Deaths.	Marriages.
1915	9,017	2,992	2,581

1918	7,106	2,833	1,612

Religions.

There is no State aid to religions. At the Census of 1911 there were 109,435 persons belonging to the Church of England, 56,626 Roman Catholics, 34,348 Methodists, and 26,687 Presbyterians.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The coastal regions of the west and of the north are undulating, with an interior slope to the central desert of Australia. The Darling and Hamersley ranges of the west have a western slope to the Indian Ocean, into which flow many streams, notably the Swan, Murchison, Gascoyne, Ashburton, Fortescue, and De Grey. In the north the Fitzroy flows from the Leopold range into the Indian Ocean, and the Drysdale and Ord into the Timor Sea.

Climate.—The average temperature of Perth (lat. 32° S.) for the past 23 years was 64°, while the mean for the barometer for 35 years was 30·02 inches. There are wet and dry seasons, the former lasting from May to October. The total rainfall at Perth during 1910 was 37·02, during 1911 23·38, during 1912 27·85, during 1913 38·28, during 1914 20·21, during 1915 43·61, during 1916 35·16, during 1917 45·64, during 1918 39·58; and during 1919 30·66; the average for the past 44 years being 33·60.

The climate is one of the most temperate in the world, especially in the south-western portion, where excessive cold is never and excessive heat very rarely known. The summer heat, which is mostly dry, with hardly any rainfall, is during the greater part of the hot season relieved by cool sea-breezes in the afternoon. The winters are rainy, but with occasional dry spells of perfect weather.

GOVERNMENT.

Western Australia was first settled by the British in 1829, and in 1870 it was granted a partially elective legislature. In 1890 responsible government was granted, and the Administration vested in a Governor, a Legislative Council, and a Legislative Assembly. The present constitution rests upon an Amending Act of 1899, further amended by the Constitution Acts Amendment Act, 1911; the Executive is vested in a Governor appointed by the Crown and aided by a Council of Ministers.

Education

Education.—Education is compulsory and free, and numerous elementary schools are under the control of the Minister of Education There are a training college, technical schools a school of mines and a Goldfields High School at Kalgoorlie, a modern school and a University The total amount expended on education during the year ended June 30, 1920 was £427 830 (including the University, £13,500)

It has been consistently the object of successive Governments to place within the reach of each child in the State every advantage of education from the kindergarten to the university

Finance

The revenue and expenditure and debt of the State for the 5 years ended June 30, 1916 1920 are stated as under —

1916	5 356 978	5 705 201	39 139,676
1917	4,577,007	5 276 764	40 914 826
1918	4 662 536	5 328 279	42 304 001
1919	4,944 850	5 506,865	43 637 076
1920	5 862 501	6,531,785	46 822 003

Banking.—There were including the Commonwealth Bank of Australia, 8 cheque paying banks formerly banks of issue, in the State on June 30 1920, with total assets £16 205 577 and liabilities £12,972 185. The amount due to depositors in the State Savings Bank at June 30 1920, was £5,739,029, in the School Savings Bank £45 510 and in the Commonwealth Savings Bank the amount due to depositors in Western Australia on the same date was £1 473 301 The combined amounts due to State Savings Bank depositors and State School Savings Bank depositors, on June 30, 1920, averaged £16 784 per head of the population, whilst the amount due to Commonwealth Savings Bank depositors on the same date averaged £4 156 per head of the population

War Funds.—The public contributions in Western Australia to a variety of War Funds up to June 30, 1919, totalled approximately £1,148,156, or considerably over £3 per head of the mean population during the war period.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Of the total area (624,588 800 acres) 1,629,400 acres were under crops in 1919-1920, wheat for grain accounting for 1,041,827 acres, large areas of good wheat growing soil exist in the southern districts The live stock included 880,644 cattle, 6,697,951 sheep, 58,160 pigs, 31 986 goats, and 174,919 horses There were about 3,000 acres of vineyards

Land Settlement and Agriculture—It is only a few years since the immense capabilities of the State as one of the world's potential great wheat producers were more generally realised In those few years the area under wheat for grain has increased annually by leaps and bounds the acreage in 1908 being only 279 609 whilst in 1916 it was 1 734,117 From 1916, owing to the war, a temporary retrogression has set in the acreage in 1920 being 1 041 827 Fruit growing, prior to the war, was rapidly creating a considerable export trade to foreign markets Large numbers of English and other immigrants were then annually settled on the still unoccupied agricultural areas of the State It is anticipated that with the energetic policy of development now once more initiated by the Government land settlement will progress even more rapidly than in former years, and that Western Australia will then absorb a constantly increasing stream of immigrants A very large portion of the south western division of the State containing many millions of acres, is especially suitable for wheat growing whilst the hills of the Darling Range and many other portions of the State produce grapes and other excellent fruit in the greatest variety

Manufacturing Industries—There were on December 31 1918, a total of 939 industrial establishments in the State employing either machinery or at least four hands The total number of persons employed by them was 14 030 as against 18 799 in 1914, the highest number previously reached The combined output of these establishments was computed at £8,399 262

Forestry—The forests are among the most extensive within the Commonwealth and contain some of the very finest hardwoods in the world Two of these, jarrah (Eucalyptus marginata) and karri (Eucalyptus diversicolor) have been largely exported and, just prior to the war their annual export value was over one million pounds. These two timbers are eminently suitable for every kind of constructional purpose and for use in all kinds of railway rolling stock The [illegible] already employed in these respects in Great Britain, India South Africa Egypt, and elsewhere Their hardness and durability is remarkable and the great size of the trees permit beams and pieces of unusually large dimensions being obtained For furniture and decorative purposes they are also extensively employed the beauty of the grain when polished [illegible] equal to that of the best Honduras mahogany Besides these trees the forests contain a wealth of hardwoods, one or other of them suitable for every purpose to which wood can be applied The beauty of grain and delicacy of working in nearly all of them recommend them for the furniture manufacturer Sandalwood (Santalum cygnorum) is peculiar to the State, and is exported very largely to the East, its essential oil being extracted locally There are in the forests many barks containing tannin Some of these are exported, the trade in mallet bark prior to the war having been extensive The forests are rich in gums and resins An Act for their protection and management was passed in 1918, and a scheme is now being completed for the regeneration on scientific lines of cut over areas.

Minerals—The groups of the Coolgardie goldfields (covering a vast portion of the interior and extending to the 125th meridian), as well as other fields, are being constantly worked, the production of gold being 734,066 oz in 1919, and 400,153 oz in the first eight months of 1920 To the Coolgardie group belong the following gold fields North Coolgardie Broad Arrow, North East Coolgardie East Coolgardie and Coolgardie The total amount produced in the State from 1886 to August 31, 1920, is 33,530 702 fine oz., of this amount the greater portion was received at the Royal Mint Perth

Magnetic iron lead, copper, and tin ores exist in large quantities as also coal

Total Production—The total estimated value of Western Australian production during 1918 was £17 710,138 distributed as follows Agricultural £4 757 763, Pastoral, £4 544 144 Dairy Poultry, and Bee Farming, £698 038 Forestry and Fisheries, £922,317 Mining, £4 265 577, Manufacturing £2 522,209 (value added to the raw material by the production of the industrial establishments)

Industrial Legislation—Industrial legislation has for many years included industrial arbitration with the result that wages are not subject to the frequent depreciation prevailing in the older countries

Trade—The principal ports are Fremantle, Albany Bunbury Geraldton, and Broome The opening of the Trans Australian Railway in Oct 1917 has afforded another means of ingress and egress both for travellers and merchandise The imports chiefly consist of provisions, sugar, tea tobacco spirits, beer, soap, machinery, iron mongery clothing of various kinds, &c The principal exports are of wool, gold, jarrah timber, silver tin copper ore, sandalwood mallet bark for tanning, pearls and pearl shells, hides and skins wheat, flour, fruit, &c The estimated value of the exports for the year ended June 30 1920, was—Wool, £3,937,106 timber, £465 331 sandalwood £240 579, pearl shell, £335 283 pearls, £96 542 hides and skins, £623 067 wheat, £2,541 698 flour £2 526,620

During 1919 20 the total imports into Western Australia were valued at £12 369 386 including £2 250 268 from the United Kingdom, and £7 409 269 from other States of Australia The exports totalled £15,258 301, including £6,668,829 to the United Kingdom and £1,146 383 to other States of Australia

TOWNS.

CAPITAL Perth Population (1919) of Metropolitan area, including Fremantle, 142,000

Perth, the capital, stands on the right bank of the Swan River estuary, 12 m. less from Fremantle The King's Park (approximately 1000 acres), on a hill overlooking the city and the wide estuarine reaches of the river, is one of unique natural beauty Other towns are Fremantle (including suburbs, 25,200), Albany (4,200), Kalgoorlie and Boulder (over 20,000), Bunbury (about 4,000), Claremont (6,000), Geraldton (3,800), Midland Junction (5,000), and Northam (2,500)

Territories

NORTHERN TERRITORY.

The Northern Territory occupies the centre of the Australian continent between 129°—138° East longitude as far as 26° South latitude, and its administration was taken over by the Commonwealth on Jan 1, 1911

The area is estimated at 523,620 sq miles The population on Dec 31, 1918, was 4,781 (exclusive of aboriginals)

Part of the country is desert but large portions of land are suitable for tropical and semi tropical agriculture and the Federal Government grants suitable areas rent free for the original settler s lifetime or for 21 years (whichever shall be longer) The staple industry is pastoral, and pigs and sheep thrive, while cattle and horses do well south of the 15th parallel The chief grasses are Mitchell and Flinders Many grants have been taken up, and a considerable area has been settled and improved Extensive meat freezing works have been erected near Darwin, which will greatly enhance the value of locally bred cattle which hitherto have been driven to other States for disposal For the months of April to September the climate is delightful From October to December it is hot and humid, from January to March is the wet season, when travelling becomes extremely difficult There are thousands of square miles of first class pasturage which will one day carry millions of sheep The chief rivers are Victoria, Adelaide, Daly, Roper, Liverpool, Goyder, Mc Arthur, and the Robinson The first five are navigable from 40 to 100 miles from their entrance for boats drawing 4 feet Pearl fishing is carried on round the coast the shell being of good quality There are considerable mineral resources, gold, silver lead and tin being indicated, and when communications are opened up, the industry will become important

The only railway is from Darwin to Emungalan (200 miles) A further extension to the head of the Roper River (80 miles) will be proceeded with in the near future, the permanent survey having been completed The policy of the present Government is to link up the Territory with the other States by means of a trans continental railway

Darwin, the seat of Government, occupies an elevated site 80 feet above high water mark overlooking Port Darwin, one of the finest harbours in Australia, and contains the offices of the Administrator and officials of the Territory The cable owned by the Eastern Extension Company lands at Darwin from Singapore The town is healthy and free from malaria The Darwin Botanical Gardens are about 1½ miles from the town

PAPUA.

(British New Guinea)

The total area of the island of Papua is about 215 000 sq miles, with an estimated native population of 1,000,000 Of the total area in 1914, the S E portion (90,000 square miles, pop 200,000) was a territory of the Commonwealth, the N E portion (70,000 sq miles, pop 120,000) was the German Colony of Kaiser Wilhelm s Land, and the W portion (158,000 sq miles, pop 600,000) was part of the Netherlands E Indies An expedition of Imperial Australian troops took possession of the German territory (Kaiser Wilhelm s Land) in the north on September 24, 1914 and the former German possessions in Papua have been allocated to the Commonwealth The area of the territory of Papua is thus increased to about 160 000 sq miles, estimated native population 320 000

The island is the second largest in the world, and lies some 80 miles to the north of Queensland between 0° 0 and 12° 0 S lat and between 130° 50′ and 154° 30 E long Its greatest length is 1 490 miles, with a maximum breadth of 430 miles The islands lying near Papua some 200 in number, form part of the Territory

The island of Papua was discovered in 1511 and was first claimed by the Dutch The British portion was annexed by Queensland to the Empire in 1883 but it was not then ratified by the Imperial Government A Protectorate was, however, proclaimed in 1884 on the guarantee of the Australasian Governments of £15 000 annually, to cover the cost of administration and British New Guinea was annexed by the Crown in 1888

The two largest rivers of the Territory are the Fly and the Purari The land is mountainous generally the highest point reaching 13 150 feet and a large portion of the country consists of forest The climate is favourable to the cultivation of all tropical products The soil is exceedingly fertile but the cultivated area is small Tobacco is being cultivated and a factory is established at Moresby Oil has been discovered and the petroleum industry is likely to become important The chief exports are copra rubber sisal hemp gold and copper ore

The ports of entry are PORT MORESBY Samarai Daru, and Bonagai

There is an Executive Council of 6 members who with 3 non official members form also the Legislative Council

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The Dominion of New Zealand is distant about 1,200 miles south east of the mainland of Australia, and consists of three main islands in the South Pacific Ocean, known as the North, South, and Stewart Islands having a length of 1,100 miles, between 34° 22′ and 47° 18′ South latitude and 162° East longitude – 173° West longitude, with several groups of smaller islands lying at some distance from the principal group

Geographical —The two principal islands of New Zealand have a total length of 1,040 miles, the total coast line reaching 4 330 miles A large portion of the surface is mountainous in character The principal range is that of the Southern Alps having its culminating point in Mount Cook (12,349 ft) The North Island mountains include several active and dormant volcanoes Mt Ruapehu (9,175 ft) and Mt Ngauruhoe (7,515 ft) are the most important Of the numerous glaciers, the Tasman (18 miles by 1¼) is the largest The North Island in particular is noted for its hot springs and geysers For the most part the rivers are too short and rapid for considerable use in navigation The more important include the Waikato (220 miles in length), Wanganui (140) and Clutha (210) Lakes (Taupo, 238 sq miles in area, Wakatipu, 112, and Te Anau 132) are abundant, many of them of great beauty

Meteorological —Owing chiefly to its great length New Zealand's climate varies very considerably in its different divisions In general it is mild with an abundant rainfall Snow is rarely seen except upon the higher levels Annual averages —North Island, mean temperature 56° F , rainfall 48 in (days with rain 159), South Island, mean temperature 52° F , rainfall 43 in (days with rain 150)

GOVERNMENT

The west coast of the South Island of New Zealand was discovered by Abel Tasman, the navigator (voyaging under the direction of the Netherlands East India Company) on December 13, 1642 The islands were visited in 1769 by Captain Cook, who returned to them in 1773, 1774, and 1777 In 1793 the Government of New South Wales despatched H M S Daedalus to the islands on a diplomatic mission The first settlement of Europeans was made in 1814 but no colonisation took place until 1825 In 1840 British sovereignty was proclaimed, and on May 3 1841 New Zealand was, by letters patent erected into a separate colony distinct from New South Wales On Sept 26 1907 the designation was changed to The Dominion of New Zealand. The Constitution rests upon the Act of 1852, under which the executive authority is entrusted to a Governor (now Governor-General) appointed by the Crown and aided by a Council of Ministers, with a Legislature of two houses

The judicial system is similar to that of England, with magistrates' courts and quarter sessions, and a supreme court with a Chief Justice and 8 puisne judges.

Chief Justice, Hon. Sir Robt. Stout, K.C.M.G. £2,250
Puisne Judges, Hons. F. R. Chapman, J. H. Hosking, Sir W. B. Edwards, T. Cooper, W. A. Sim, A. L. Herdman, T. W. Stringer, Sir J. W. Salmond each 2,000

In 1919, 24,680 civil cases were tried in Magistrates' Courts, while summary convictions in criminal cases were 32,692. In 1918 convictions (or sentences) in Supreme Courts were (Europeans) 310. Civil cases to number of 235 were tried, judgment being entered for a total amount of £104,927.

POLICE.

On March 31, 1910, the strength of the Police Force was 916 of all ranks, equivalent to 1 for every 1,325 of the population. Average cost of police protection per inhabitant was, in 1919-20, 4*s.* 11¼*d.*

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of local government the Dominion is divided into counties and ridings, with incorporated boroughs, under elected county and municipal councils, town, road and harbour boards. Electors are adult ratepayers of both sexes.

Revenue of local bodies, 1918-19 .....£3,138,972
Indebtedness, March 31, 1919 24,321,413

PASSPORTS.

Since Oct. 1, 1916, no person over 15 years is permitted to land unless in possession of a passport issued by a competent British authority.

DEFENCE.

Army.

The New Zealand De ence Forces consist of the N.Z. Staff Corps (Officers), the Permanent Staff (Warrant and N.-C. Officers), and the Royal New Zealand Artillery (Field and Garrison); the Territorial Forces consist of 12 regiments of Mounted Rifles; 9 batteries N.Z. Field Artillery; 9 companies N.Z. Garrison Artillery; 4 companies N.Z. Engineers; 2 battalions N.Z. Railway Corps; 17 battalions Infantry; 8 companies N.Z. Signal Corps; the N.Z. Army Service Corps; 2 battalions N.Z. Post and Telegraph Corps; 8 field ambulances N.Z. Medical Corps; the N.Z. Veterinary Corps; the Rifle Clubs; and the Senior Cadets

Military training is compulsory on all male citizens between the ages of 12 and 25—in Cadet Corps 12-18, Territorial 18-25, with short periods of training in the field. The Peace Effective is about 30,000 of all ranks. The Dominion contributed an Expeditionary Force for service in the field of more than 100,000 men, completely equipped, and its services in the various theatres of war were invaluable.

Commandant, Maj.-Gen. Sir E. W. C. Chaytor, K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O., A.D.C. £1,200

Navy.

The Naval Defence Act, 1913, provided for the establishment of a N.Z. Naval Force by voluntary enlistment for two years. The cruisers Chatham and Philomel have been handed over to the Dominion by the Imperial Government as the nucleus of a New Zealand-owned navy, to be, however, placed at the disposal of the Home Government in time of war. A number of small vessels, formerly belonging to the Australian Squadron, are located in N.Z. waters. In 1909 the Dominion presented the battle-cruiser New Zealand (18,000 tons) to the Imperial Government. The Calliope Dock, capable of docking two warships, was subsidised by the Imperial Government in 1898. N.Z. war expenditure to Mar. 31, 1920, amounted to £80,089,025.

Naval Adviser, Commr. T. A. Williams, C.B.E., R.N.

FINANCE.

Revenue and expenditure (Consolidated Fund) and debt of New Zealand for the 5 years ended March 31, 1916-1920 :—

Value of improvements	111,268,166	58,276,870
Capital value	£286,168,130	£159,365,315

Banking.—At the end of 1919 there were six banks of issue doing business, two of which were New Zealand banks. Total assets, £48,615,209; liabilities, £57,861,393; value of notes in circulation, £7,087,545.

Post-office and private savings banks had, at the close of 1918, 679,398 depositors, having £36,529,554 to their credit.

EDUCATION.

The State system of education is free, secular, and compulsory. There were (December, 1918) 2,365 public primary schools, with 5,464 teachers and 188,932 scholars; there are also (Dec. 1917) 320 private schools, with 25,491 scholars, and, in addition, 132 schools for the Maoris. The higher education of boys and girls in the cities and large towns is carried on in 33 endowed colleges and grammar schools. The University of New Zealand (to which are affiliated Auckland University College, Victoria University College, Canterbury College, and the University of Otago, the four colleges having 2,140 students in 1918) has power to confer degrees.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

Agriculture and Forestry.—The total area of the two main islands is 65,440,815 acres, and 41,262,193 acres of this were in occupation in 1916, this acreage representing 77,229 holdings. New Zealand is a pastoral rather than an agricultural country, but the quantity of wheat and oats grown is sufficient for the Dominion's requirements. The area under wheat in 1918-19 was 208,030 acres, giving a yield of 6,567,629 bushels. An area of 172,186 acres of oats was threshed, the yield totalling 6,884,609 bushels; while 301,724 acres were converted to chaff, hay, or ensilage. Other acreages were: barley, 18,753; rye-grass, 31,250; and potatoes, 19,116. An area of 438,045 acres was sown in turnips. Amongst the forest productions are the Kauri pine (found only at the northern extremity of the islands), much valued for shipbuilding and for its resin (Kauri gum). New Zealand flax is used for the manufacture of ropes and twine.

Live Stock.—The cattle in 1919 numbered 3,035,478; sheep, 25,828,554; pigs, 235,347; and horses, 363,188. The pastures of the South Island produce the celebrated sheep of the Canterbury Plain.

Minerals.—Coal-mining is one of the largest industries, the output in 1918 being 2,034,250 tons, the approximate total output to the end of 1918 being 48,192,840 tons. Gold-mining, both alluvial and quartz, is an important industry in many districts, and rich iron ore, in the form of ironsand, has been found in Taranaki, and in the form of brown hæmatite at Parapara, near Nelson.

EXTERNAL TRADE.

The total imports and exports of the Dominion are valued as follows, for the 5 years 1915-19 :—

	Imports	Exports.	Total.
1915...	£21,728,834	£31,748,912	£53,477,746

COMMUNICATIONS.

Railways.—In March, 1920, there were 2,996 miles of Government railway lines in working order, and more under construction; and 137 miles of private lines, together with an excellent coaching system. The number of passengers carried in 1919-20 was 12,760,814 (exclusive of 400,621 season ticket holders), while goods carried amounted to 6,000,277 tons. Revenue and expenditure were £5,752,487 and £4,105,067 respectively.

Shipping.—During 1918 the vessels entered inwards numbered 543 (tonnage, 1,279,548), and those entered outwards 544 (tonnage, 1,310,627), exclusive of coasting vessels.

Posts and Telegraphs.—The annual postal circulation was (1918) 249,672,975 letters and postcards, 35,476,212 newspapers, 42,301,230 books and packets, and 6,376,469 parcels, and the work is effected by 2,344 post-offices. There are 13,813 miles of telegraph line, with 50,742 miles of wire. The telephone service is highly efficient and universal in all centres. Telegrams transmitted during year, 12,091,017.

TOWNS.

CAPITAL, WELLINGTON, in the North Island.

The estimated population of the chief cities and towns was as follows (Dec. 31, 1919):—Wellington,* 100,898; Auckland,* 144,646; Dunedin,* 72,048; Christchurch, 101,747; Invercargill,† 18,726; Napier,† 16,383; Gisborne,† 14,366; Palmerston North,† 14,866; Nelson,† 10,340; Timaru, 14,828; Wanganui.† 21,778; New Plymouth,† 11,051; and Grey Valley Boroughs,† 8,495.

DEPENDENCIES OF NEW ZEALAND.

Antipodes Group (49° 41′ 15″ S. lat., and 178° 43′ E. long.) are uninhabited.

Auckland Islands lie about 290 miles south of Bluff Harbour, in 50° 32′ S. lat., and 166° 13′ E. long. The islands contain several good harbours, but are uninhabited.

Bounty Islands (47° 43′ S. lat., 179° 0′ 30″ E. long.) are uninhabited.

Campbell Island is uninhabited.

Chatham Islands, between 43° 30′ S. lat. and 175° 40′-177° 15′ W. long., have a population of 219 Europeans and 258 Maoris and half-castes. They support large flocks of sheep and some cattle.

Cook Islands Administration.—The Cook and other islands, annexed to the British Empire in October, 1900, and included in the boundaries of New Zealand since June, 1901, consist of the islands of Rarotonga, Aitutaki, Mangaia, Atiu, Mauke, Mitiaro, The Herveys (Manuae and Aoutu), and Takutea. Outside the Cook group are Savage (or Niue), Palmerston, Penrhyn (or Tongareva), Humphrey (or Manahiki), Rehson (or Rakaanga), Danger (or Pukapuka), and Suwarrow Island, which are situated in the South Pacific, between 8° to 23° S. lat. and 156° to 170° W. long. The population at the Census of 1916 numbered 12,797, all except 265 being Natives. The chief products are bananas, oranges, and other tropical fruits, copra, coffee, pearl-shell, and hats (Niue). The trade is chiefly with New Zealand and the United States of America. The exports (1918) were valued at £99,245, and the imports at £116,890. Rarotonga is the chief island, with a native population of 2,853, and a European population of 211. The government is administered locally under the direction of New Zealand. The Federal Council of the Cook Islands, under the direction of the Resident Commissioner at Rarotonga, legislates for all the islands except Niue, which has a Resident Commissioner and an Island Council of its own. The six Arikis of Rarotonga are of equal rank and are all members of the Federal Council. Rarotonga is a place of call for the mail steamers between Sydney, N.S.W., and Wellington, N.Z., and San Francisco, U.S.A.

Resident Commissioner, Rarotonga, F. W. Platts £800

Resident Comm., Niue, G. N. Morris 500

The Kermadec Group, between 29° 10′ to 31° 30′ S. lat., and 177° 45′ to 179° W. long., includes Sunday, Macaulay, Curtis Islands, and L'Espérance, and some islets. The group is uninhabited.

Nauru Island, just South of the Equator, was captured by an Australasian Expedition in 1914, and is administered by the Commonwealth of Australia and the Dominion of New Zealand. The island has a population of about 1,000. There are valuable deposits of phosphates on the island.

The Samoan Islands, consisting of the islands of Savaii, Manono, Apolima, Upolu, Fanuatapu, Namua, Nuutele and Nuulua (the remaining islands of the Samoan group belonging to the U.S.), have a total area of 1,050 square miles and a population estimated at 29,500. The largest islands are Savaii (660 square miles) and Upolu (340 square miles). Upolu contains the harbours of Apia and Saluafata, of which the former is the capital. In 1899 a disastrous tidal wave wrecked three U.S.A. warships and the "Eber" and "Adler" of the German Navy, H.M.S. Calliope, of the British Navy, effecting its escape. The disaster is recorded in "A Footnote to History," by R. L. Stevenson, whose home was at Vaima (near Apia), where also he is buried. The natives of the islands are Christians of different denominations, including a few adherents of the Latter Day Saints (Mormons). Coco-nuts (copra), cocoa and rubber are the chief products of the islands.

The Three Kings (discovered by Tasman on the Feast of the Epiphany), in 34° 9′ S. lat. and 172° 8′ 8″ E. long., are uninhabited.

PHYSIOGRAPHY

Boundaries —The provinces of the Union extend from the southernmost point of the African Continent to the course of the Limpopo River, i.e., from 34° 50′ – 22° South latitude, and include all the British territories within those limits, with the exception of Basutoland and the Swaziland and Bechuanaland Protectorates while provision is made for the future inclusion within the Union of those territories and of the territories of the British South Africa Company

Relief —The southernmost province contains many parallel ranges, which rise in steps towards the interior The south western peninsula contains the famous Table Mountain (3,582 feet), while the Great Zwarte Bergen and Lange Bergen run in parallel lines from west to east of the Cape province Between these two ranges and the Roggeveld and Nieuweveld to the north is the Great Karoo Plateau, which is bounded on the east by the Sneeuwbergen, containing the highest summit in the province (Compassberg, 7 800 feet) In the east are ranges which join the Drakensbergen (11,000 feet), between Natal and the Orange Free State

The Orange Free State presents a succession of undulating grassy plains with good pasture land, at a general elevation of some 3 800 feet, with occasional hills or kopjes The Transvaal is also mainly an elevated plateau with parallel ridges in the Vaaljes and Waterberg ranges of no great height The veld or plains of this northernmost province is divisible into the Hooge Veld of the south, the Banker Veld of the centre and the Bush Veld of the north and east, the first and second forming the grazing and agricultural region of the Transvaal and the last a mimosa-covered waste The eastern province of Natal has pastoral lowlands and rich agricultural land between the slopes of the Drakensberg and the coast, the interior rising in terraces as in the southern provinces.

Rivers —The Orange, with its tributary the Vaal, is the principal river of the south rising in the Drakensbergen and flowing into the Atlantic between the Protectorate of South-West Africa and the Cape of Good Hope. The Limpopo, or Crocodile River, in the north, rises in the Transvaal and flows into the Indian Ocean through Portuguese East Africa. Most of the remaining rivers are furious torrents after rain, with partially dry beds at other seasons.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

The Cape of Good Hope was discovered in 1486 by Bartholomew Diaz, the commander of one of the many expeditions sent out by successive Kings of Portugal to discover an ocean route to India. Diaz merely doubled the Cape and returned home. Eleven years later, in 1497, Vasco da Gama not only doubled the Cape and landed in what is now Natal, but successfully accomplished the voyage to India The Portuguese, however, did not make any permanent settlement at the Cape, although it was used by their vessels, and subsequently also by those of England and Holland, as a place of call in going to and from the East Indies. In 1652 the Netherlands East India Company took possession of the shores of Table Bay, established a fort, and occupied the adjacent lands, in order to be always ready with supplies for their passing ships. In 1814 the Cape was formally ceded to the British Crown

Natal derives its name from the fact of its discovery on Christmas Day, 1497, by the celebrated Portuguese navigator, Vasco da Gama The first European settlement was formed (1824) by a small party of Englishmen, who came by sea and established themselves on the coast where Durban now stands. Natal was then a part of the great Zulu kingdom under T Chaka Between 1835 and 1837 another settlement was formed by a large body of Dutch Boers, who came with their waggons overland from the Cape Colony and settled in the northern districts, where to this day the Boers preponderate. In the year 1843 Natal was proclaimed as British and annexed to the Cape Colony. In 1856 it was erected into a separate colony, with representative institutions, and in 1893 acquired responsible government.

The Transvaal was formed as the South African Republic by parties of Dutch Boers from the English colonies who "trekked" into the interior of the continent and wrested the land across the Vaal river from the native chiefs The discovery of the goldfields within its borders led to the settlement of large numbers of foreigners, and eventually to hostilities with the British Government A war of nearly three years' duration was fought with great tenacity, and its close was marked by the inclusion of the South African Republic within the British Empire, "responsible government" being granted almost immediately

The Orange Free State was founded, in much the same way as the Transvaal, by Boer emigrants from Cape Colony, and its independence was granted in 1854 Its subsequent history is identical with that of the Transvaal.

GOVERNMENT.

The Union of South Africa is constituted under the South Africa Act, 1909 (9 Edw. VII., cap 9), passed by the Parliament of the United Kingdom on September 20, 1909 In terms of that Act the self-governing Colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange River Colony became united on May 31, 1910, in a legislative Union under one Government under the name of the Union of South Africa, those Colonies becoming original Provinces of the Union under the names of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal, and the Orange Free State respectively.

The Union Government is seised of all State property, and the Railways, Ports, Harbours and Customs are administered by Union Commissioners for the benefit of a Consolidated Revenue Fund. The former debts of the Provinces are administered by and form a first charge upon the funds of the Union. Provision is made in the Act of 1909 for the admission to the Union of Rhodesia, and for the transfer to the Union Government of the administration of protected and other native territories. The Union was inaugurated by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G., in 1910

The Government publishes annually an "Official Year Book of the Union of South Africa," giving full statistics and descriptive information on all matters of public concern.

The seat of the Government is Pretoria; the seat of the Legislature is Cape Town.

The Executive is vested in a Governor-General appointed by the Sovereign, and aided by an Executive Council, with a Legislature of two Houses.

DEFENCE

At the commencement of the war, the S A Government undertook the defence of the Union thus freeing the Imperial troops for service elsewhere

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA TROOPS.

The South Africa Defence Act 1912, became law on June 14 1912 This Act provides for the establishment of Defence Forces comprising (1) a Permanent Force (2) a Coast Garrison Force (3) a Citizen Force (4) a Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve and (5) Special Reserves

Every citizen between the ages of 17 and 60 is liable to render personal service in time of war and those between 21 and 25 are liable to undergo a prescribed peace training with the Active Citizen Force spread over a period of four consecutive years The Act states however that only 50 per cent of the total number liable to peace training shall actually undergo that training unless Parliament makes financial provision for the training of a greater number citizens between the ages of 21 and 25 who are not entered for peace training with the Active Citizen Force are to be compelled to undergo training during these four years in a rifle association Provision is also made in the Act for the cadet training of boys between 13 and 17 in urban and other populous areas where facilities can conveniently be arranged

The Permanent Force—South African Mounted Rifle men was established on the 1st April 1913

The Union has been divided into 15 Military Districts In each Military District has been allotted various Units of different Arms to which the citizens entered for Peace Training in their 20th and 21st years are posted The first training Camps be in in September 1913

A Cadet organization is also in existence and Rifle Associations have been formed

In October 1914 a rebellion broke out and the rebels attempted to join forces with the Germans of the neighbouring Colony The Union forces under the command of General Botha met the outbreak successfully An expedition to German South West Africa, which followed resulted in the surrender of the German forces on the 9th July 1915 and the taking over of the administration of that territory by the Government of the Union

EDUCATION

In the South Africa Act Section 85 (iii) it is provided that Education other than higher education for a period of five years and thereafter until Parliament otherwise provides shall be and remain under the jurisdiction of the respective Provincial Councils For practical purposes it has been provisionally determined that all post matriculation instruction shall be deemed to constitute higher education The Department of Education under the Minister is therefore concerned with —

(1) The University of South Africa established April 1918 as successor to the University of the Cape of Good Hope, with the following constituent Colleges—(a) Rhodes University College, Grahamstown (1904) (b) Huguenot College, Wellington (1907) (c) Grey University College Bloemfontein (1910) (d) Transvaal University College Pretoria (1910) (e) University College Johannesburg (1910) (f) Natal University College, Pietermaritzburg (1909) (2) The University of Cape Town (1918—in succession to the South African College—1829) (3) The University of Stellenbosch (1918—in succession to the Victoria College). The Department is further charged with the Teachers First Class Certificate examinations

The total number of students at these Colleges in 1919 was 2,429 The State expenditure on higher education during 1919 20 was £187 500

Provision is made on the Vote of the Department of a grant in aid to the Potchefstroom University College (37 matriculated students in 1919) and to the South African Native College at Alice Cape Province an institution for the higher education of natives which was formally opened in February, 1916 and has present accommodation for 48 students

Primary Education and Education other than Higher Education —The central direction of public education (other than higher education) is exercised by the Provincial Education Department in each of the four Provinces of the Union Each Department is controlled by a Director or Superintendent of Education In the Cape Province practically all the schools are State aided In Natal they are partly State schools and partly State aided In the Transvaal and Orange Free State they are in the main State schools In all Provinces primary education is free

Railways.—The first railway in South Africa was commenced in April, 1859, the first sod being turned by the then Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, Sir George Grey. This was very shortly followed by Natal, who started the construction of a line running from Durban. Another two lines finally linked up at Heidelberg in 1895. The Cape line was opened for public traffic to Stellenbosch in 1862 and to Wellington in 1863, while a track to Wynberg was opened to traffic in 1864. Little progress was however made in succeeding years, and it became evident that the development of the country could not be left to private enterprise. The existing Cape lines were therefore purchased by the Government on the Jan. 1st, 1873, and in 1876 Natal followed by acquiring the railways in that colony. Increased working at once took place, and the construction of four lines was pushed inland from Cape Town, Durban, Port Elizabeth, and East London. Bloemfontein was reached in 1890 and two years later a line to Germiston linked up with the system already established in the Transvaal.

The total open mileage of Government owned lines at the end of March, 1919, was 9,542 miles (comprising Cape 4,254, Orange Free State 1,342, Transvaal 2,650 and Natal 1,302) of which 8,982 miles are 3 ft. 6 in. gauge and 560 miles 2 ft. gauge. The capital expenditure on Government railways up to March 31, 1919, amounted to £94,331,365. The gross earnings for the year ending March 31, 1919, were £15,282,279 and the net loss after payment of interest, £896,267. Working expenditure (excluding renewals) amounted to £10,239,275, or 67·0 per cent. of the gross revenue, as compared with £9,379,659 or 65·5 per cent. of the gross revenue for the previous year.

Posts and Telegraphs.—At the end of 1919 there were in the Union 2,665 post and telegraph offices open. 113,251,801 inland letters and cards, 66,952,997 newspapers, books and circulars were received and despatched in 1916 and 7,230,935 telegrams were received and despatched in 1919. The number of money orders issued during the year 1919 was 413,607, while 417,279 were paid. 3,288,645 postal orders were issued, and 2,929,539 paid. The revenue of the post and telegraph department was £2,227,783, and the expenditure £2,317,543. The revenue of the telegraph and telephone service being £950,683 and the expenditure £950,193 12s. 8d. miles of telegraph line, carrying 43,938 miles of wire, were open, and 7,591 miles of telegraph telephone wire. The number of depositors in the Government Savings Bank on Dec. 31, 1919, was 301,979, the amount to their credit being £7,049,108.

Shipping.—In 1919, 3,199 vessels (7,660,000 net tons) entered and 3,170 vessels (7,625,000 net tons) cleared at the ports of the Union of South Africa.

RAILWAYS AND HARBOURS BOARD.

The railways, ports, and harbours of the Union are administered and worked under the control and authority of the Governor-General in Council, exercised through a Minister of State, who is advised by a Board consisting of three Commissioners.

The management and working of the railways and harbours are subject to the control of the Minister of Railways and Harbours carried on by the General Manager, who is governed by such regulations as the Minister may from time to time frame, after consultation with the Board. The constitution of the Board at date is as follows:—

South West Protectorate.

Administrator, Sir Edmond H L Gorges, K C M G

SOUTH WEST AFRICA lies approximately between 17° 18'–29 10 S lat and 11° 40 21° E long, having an estimated area of 322 000 square miles, and a population of about 120 000 Parallel with the coast is a range of mountains (Omatako, 7,510 feet Nubeb, 4 265 feet Onyati 6 697 feet, Awas 8,247 feet), Schansberg, 7 647 feet which form the western edge of the great Kalahari Plateau, the eastern edge of which merges into the Kalahari Desert The northern and southern boundaries are the Cunene and Orange Rivers, but with these exceptions and the Great Fish River (500 miles) there are no streams of importance in the country

In 1920, Professor E H L Schwartz F G S, (Professor of Geology at Rhodes University College, Grahamstown) propounded a scheme for the irrigation of Ovamboland and the Kalahari (300 000 sq miles) by the construction of a weir on the Cunene River to irrigate Ovamboland, and on the Chobe (a tributary of the Zambesi), the water of the Chobe being diverted into Lake Ngami and to a proposed lake Makarikari in the Kalahari If the scheme were to be adopted it is claimed that the present arid wastes would become green and fertile

The northern district is known as Ovamboland the central part as Damaraland (or Hereroland) and the southern portion as Great Namaqualand

In accordance with a census taken on January 1, 1923, the white population was 14 830, and the native population (excluding Ovamboland and the Caprivi Zipfel) was 78 810 The number of natives in the areas excluded has been estimated to be between 150,000 and 200,000 The principal native races in the Protectorate are Hottentots Bushmen Berg damaras Hereros, Ovambos and Bastards The inhabitants are principally Animists

Administration—The administration of the Protectorate has been vested in the Government of the Union of South Africa under a mandate issued under the Treaty of Peace with Germany Arrangements have yet to be made giving full effect to the mandate which was accepted by the Union Parliament at the Session Extraordinary held in September, 1919

Agriculture and stock raising are the principal industries The exports (valued at £3 515,142 in 1923) include live stock guano, horns, hides, wool, meat, ostrich feathers, copper, ore, lead, marble, and diamonds the imports (£2,272,230 in 1923) include foodstuffs textiles, metal, and hardware. The railways prior to occupation by the Union Forces, were divided as follows —(1) The Otavi line, extending from Swakopmund to Tsumeb, with branches from Onguati to Karibib and Otavi to Grootfontein (421 miles) (2) The State (Northern) railways, extending from Swakopmund viâ Jakalswater to Karibib and Windhuk (240 miles) (3) The North and South Railway, extending from Windhuk to Keetmanshoop (314 miles). (4) The Southern Railway, extending from Luderitzbuch to Keetmanshoop, with a branch from Seeheim to Kalkfontein (365 miles) These railways, together with the line from Prieska to Kalkfontein (316 miles), connecting the S W African railways with the Union system, are now controlled and worked by the South African Railways Administration The line from Prieska to Kalkfontein was constructed in connexion with the recent military operations

The railway system in the Protectorate now controlled and worked by the South African Railways and Harbours Administration and connected with Union Lines (De Aar to Nakop Protectorate border 344 miles) comprises —

3 feet 6 inches Standard Gauge (968 miles)	Miles
Main Line Nakop (Union border) to Karibib	657
,, Karibib to Swakopmond	114
Branch Line Seeheim to Luderitzbucht	197

From Swakopmond the line extends to Walvis Bay (20 miles) a Union port now serving the Northern portion of the Protectorate

2 feet Narrow Gauge (317 miles)	Miles
Main Line, Karibib to Tsumeb	250
Branch Line, Otavi to Grootfontein	57
,, ,, Kranzberg to Onguati	10

The Rehoboth Line (Rehoboth Station to Rehoboth 8 miles) is now being worked by horse trolley the Outjo Line (22 miles from Otjiwarongo (incomplete) and the Kalkfeld Iron Line are not in use

The line Rossing to Karibib, viâ Jakalswater, has been uplifted

Privately owned lines (99 miles)	Miles
Kolmanskop—Bogenfels	74
Arandis—Khan Mine	7

Races and Religions

Native Population.—There are three distinct elements in the native population of Egypt. The largest, or Egyptian element is a Hamito-Semitic race known in the rural districts as Fellahin (fellah = ploughman or tiller of the soil). The fellahin have been mainly Muhammadans since the conquest of the country in the seventh century, but 834,474 Coptic Christians are enumerated in the towns and villages. These Egyptian townsmen and peasantry numbered 12 404 897 in the total of the Census of 1917. A second element is the Bedouin, or nomadic Arabs of the Libyan and Arabian deserts (32,663 Bedouins and 107 500 Sudanese and Berbarins), of whom about one-seventh are real nomads, and the remainder semi-sedentary tent-dwellers on the outskirts of the cultivated land of the Nile Valley and the Fayum. The third element is the Nubian of the Nile Valley, between Aswan and Wadi Halfa, of mixed Arab and negro blood. The Bedouins and Nubians are Muhammadans.

Foreign Population.—At the Census of 1917 the foreign residents were 205,998, of whom 30,796 were Turks, 56,735 Greeks, 40,198 Italians, 24 356 British, 21,270 French and Tunisians, 2,789 Austro-Hungarians, 4,225 Russians, 157 Germans, 23,976 other Europeans, and 1,496 Persians.

Religions.—At the Census of 1917 there were 11,623,745 Muhammadans, 1,026,115 Christians, 59,581 Jews and 8,814 other religions.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Boundaries.—Egypt occupies the north-eastern corner of the African continent, between 22° and 32° N lat. and 24° 37° E long. The northern boundary is the Mediterranean, and in the south Egypt is conterminous with the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. The western boundary runs from a point on the coast, N. of Sollum (long 25° E.), inland in a south-westerly direction for some distance and then turns S. along a meridian line approximately in long. 24° E. until it meets the parallel of 22° N. lat., which forms the N. boundary of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. The E. boundary follows a line drawn from Rafa on the Mediterranean (34° 15′ E. long.) to the head of the Gulf of Aquaba, from which point the remainder of the E. boundary is washed by the waters of the Gulf of Aquaba and the Red Sea.

Coast.—The Mediterranean coast of Egypt is flat and sandy, except to the westward of Alexandria, where low rocky cliffs in places approach the sea. Along the Red Sea coast a sloping sandy and gravelly plain mostly intervenes between the mountains and the sea, but the mountains rise generally to great heights at only a short distance inland, while in certain places, notably in the Gulfs of Suez and Aquaba, they approach so closely to the sea that their feet are washed by its waters. Coral reefs are conspicuous almost everywhere along the Red Sea coast, and there are numerous outlying shoals. Apart from the three great seaports of Alexandria, Port Said, and Suez, Egypt has but few harbours and anchorages adapted for large craft, the principal are those of Solum and Matruh on the Mediterranean, Tor, Abu Zenima, Zeitia, Temsa and Hurghada in the Gulf of Suez, and Safaga, Qosseir and Halaib on the Red Sea.

The Nile Valley.—The principal feature of Egypt is the Nile Valley, where the river runs through cliffs which, with the exception of a stretch of granite in the neighbourhood of Aswan, are chiefly of sandstone from Wadi Halfa to near Esna, while further north from Luxor to Cairo limestone predominates. The valley varies in width from less than half a mile in the southern granitic region to over ten miles in the northern limestone region, and the cliffs in some places rise to heights of over a thousand feet above the river. The fertile lands, on which the prosperity of the country depends, occupy the floor of the valley between the river and the bounding cliffs, while to the north of Cairo they spread out into the irregular fan-shaped formation of the Delta which comprises the six provinces of Lower Egypt, with the richest soil in the country. The Nile has a total length of 3,470 miles from the Victoria Nyanza to its mouths. In the 960 miles of its course through Egypt it receives not a single tributary stream. The river has a regular yearly rise and fall, attaining its maximum level about the middle of September and its minimum about the end of May. At Cairo the average rise and fall is about thirteen feet. The water of the Nile is carried in artificial canals for the purpose of irrigation, only the surplus being allowed to flow into the sea. The great dam at Aswan serves to impound some of the waters of the river in the early and more rapid part of its falling stage, so that they may be released during the summer to mitigate the deficiency which would otherwise occur at the lowest stages. Smaller barrages have been built at Esna, Assiut and at the head of Delta to control the supply of water into the great canals. West of the river, about 60 miles south of Cairo, is the fertile province of Fayum, with an area of about 500 square miles. This province, which is separated from the river by a narrow strip of desert, is watered by a great canal over 100 miles long called the Bahr Yusef, which takes its water from the river at Deirut.

The Libyan Desert.—Westward from the Nile Valley into Tripoli stretches the vast limestone plateau of the Libyan Desert. Though as a whole it constitutes one of the most arid and inhospitable regions of the world, the Libyan Desert contains a number of depressions wherein wells and springs furnish water in sufficient quantity to irrigate small areas and to support populations of several thousands. These depressions are the Oases, of which the principal from S.E. to N.W. are known as Kharga, Dahkla, Farafra, Baharia, and Siwa. On the eastern edge of the Libyan Desert, a few miles south-west of Cairo, stand the Pyramids of Giza, of which the highest, the Great Pyramid, is 451 feet high. Close to the pyramids is the Great Sphinx, 189 feet long.

The Eastern Desert of Egypt.—The country between the Nile and the Red Sea, known as the Eastern or Arabian Desert of Egypt, though likewise on the whole a very waterless region, presents a marked contrast to the Libyan Desert. Instead of being a vast monotonous plateau like the country on the other side of the river, the Eastern Desert presents a great diversity of physiographical features, the most marked one being the great back-bone of high and rugged mountains, mostly of igneous and metamorphic rocks, which extends north-westward from Abyssinia to near Suez, and reappears as a detached mass in the Peninsula of Sinai. The principal peaks of the Egyptian portion of this mountain chain are (from N. to S.) Gebels (Mounts) Gharib 5,760 feet, Abu Dokhan 5,450 feet, Shevib 7,150 feet, Hamata 6,490 feet, Faraid 4,480 feet, Gerf 4,650 feet, Shendib 6,271 feet, and Elba 4,680 feet. Flanking the mountain chain on the west, between the axis of the range and the Nile are plateaux of sandstones and limestones, dissected by wadis (dry water courses) often of great length and depth, with some wild vegetation and occasional wells and springs. The mountain-axis being much nearer to the Red Sea than to the Nile, the slopes of the eastern side are as a rule much steeper than those facing westwards, and the sedimentary flanking-plateaux are absent for long distances along the Red Sea coast. Wells and springs are more frequent in the south parts of the Eastern Desert than in the north owing to the southern tracts approaching more closely to the tropical rain-zone. The roads through the Eastern Desert follow as a rule the course of the main wadis from well to well and here and there are to be found small encampments of the wandering Arabs who form the scanty population of the region. The breeding of fast trotting camels is carried on chiefly by the Bisharin tribes who inherit the south parts of the Eastern Desert especially in the neighbourhood of Gebels, Gerf and Elba. The Eastern Desert is the source of most of the limited mineral wealth of Egypt, petroleum is worked at Jemsa and Hurgada, on the coast of the Gulf of Suez, and phosphates are mined on a considerable scale in the neighbourhood of Safaga and Qosseir, while at a few spots gold and emeralds have been extracted though as a rule with very little commercial success. Peridots are mined at St John's or Zeberged Island (in the Red Sea, lat. 23° 36' N.).

The Sinai Peninsula.—The north (Mediterranean) coast of Sinai is flat and sandy like that of Egypt. Inland, the ground gradually rises into a highly dissected limestone plateau, which extends southward for about 150 miles and terminates in the great scarp of El Tih; in some parts this scarp rises to over 5,000 feet above the sea-level. South of El Tih the character of the country abruptly changes the southern third of the peninsula being formed of rugged granitic mountains intersected by deep ravines. The highest peaks of these mountains such as Gebels (Mounts) Katherina, 8,680 feet; Um Shomer, 8,530 feet, Eth Thebt 8,030 feet are higher than any of those in Egypt proper. Springs and wells occur in fair abundance, mostly in the wadis, and running water (mostly brackish) is found at a few points. The mineral wealth of Sinai is not great, but manganese ore is mined on a considerable scale in the mountains east of Abu Zenima, and oil has been struck in borings on the Sinai side of the Gulf of Suez, though not as yet in payable quantities.

GOVERNMENT.

From B.C. 30 to A.D. 639 Egypt was a province of the Roman Empire, but in A.D. 640 the Christian inhabitants were subjugated by Moslem invaders, and Egypt became a province of the Eastern Caliphate. In 1517 the country was incorporated in the Ottoman Empire and was governed by pashas sent from Constantinople until the beginning of the eighteenth century, when for about 100 years the ruler was chosen from among the Mameluke, or bodyguard. From 1802–1804 French troops occupied the country, with the ostensible object of suppressing the Mamelukes and restoring the authority of the Sultan, and after their evacuation of the country, Mohammed Ali, who was appointed governor in 1805, exterminated the Mamelukes in 1811 and was eventually made hereditary governor of Egypt and the Sudan by a firman from the Sultan of Feb. 13, 1841. Mohammed Ali was succeeded before his death by his son Ibrahim (1848), whose nephew Abbas I. ruled from 1848–1854. During the reign of Said (1854–1863) a son of Mohammed Ali, the concession for the Suez Canal was obtained, and his successor Ismail (1863–1879), a son of Ibrahim was granted (by firman of May 14, 1867) the title of KHEDIVE, the previous rulers having held the title of Vali, or Governor. In the early years of Ismail's reign the Egyptian dominions were very largely extended, until in 1875 its territories comprised an area of nearly 1,500,000 sq. miles, with a population of about 16,000,000. The wild extravagance of Ismail drove him to raise enormous loans in Europe, which plunged the country into such financial embarrassment that the Governments of France and Great Britain intervened and forced Ismail to abdicate, appointing his son Tewfik (1879–1892) to succeed him.

Dual Control.—By a Khedivial decree of November 10, 1879, two Comptrollers-General were appointed for the reorganisation of the administration and re-establishment of financial equilibrium, Major Evelyn Baring being the British and M. de Blignières the French representatives. The Dual Control governed Egypt for two years, and a series of reforms was initiated, but further progress was interrupted by a military revolt, headed by an officer of the Egyptian Army (Ahmed Arabi Pasha). The revolt assumed alarming proportions, but the French Government declined to intervene, and a British expedition was despatched to re-establish the authority of the Khedive.

British Occupation.—The Dual Control was abolished by a decree of the Khedive (January 18, 1883) and a British financial adviser was appointed in place of the Comptroller General In January, 1884, Sir Evelyn Baring (who had previously served as Comptroller-General) was appointed Consul General for the United Kingdom, and the British expeditionary force, sent to quell the rebellion of 1882, remained in the country as an army of occupation. Meanwhile a revolt had broken out in the southern provinces, headed by Sheikh Mohammed Ahmed, of Dongola, who proclaimed himself a Mahdi of Islam This revolt led to the temporary abandonment of the territory now known as the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. In 1892 Tewfik was succeeded by his elder son Ibbas II., who was deposed in 1914 Sir Evelyn Baring (created Earl of Cromer) resigned the post of British Agent and Consul-General in 1907, and was succeeded by Sir Eldon Gorst, upon whose death (1911) the post was filled by the appointment of Viscount Kitchener

British Protectorate.—In 1914 Egypt was a semi independent tributary State of the Ottoman Empire, occupied by British troops At the outbreak of the Great War the Khedive, Abbâs II., who was absent from the country, declared himself an adherent of the Central Powers and was deposed, Hussein Kamil Pasha being appointed in his stead On November 18, 1914, a British Protectorate was declared over Egypt, which was therefore taken from the suzerainty of the Sultan of Turkey, and the Khedive assumed the title of Sultan Sultan Hussein Kamil died October 9, 1917, and was succeeded by his brother, the present Sultan In September 1919, a Commission (under the Presidency of Lord Milner) conducted an investigation into the affairs of Egypt, with a view to reporting on the introduction of fuller measures of self-government and of reforms in the judicial system During the closing months of 1919 symptoms of the unrest, which had pervaded the world in consequence of the Great War, evinced themselves in Egypt, and serious rioting occurred in Cairo and Alexandria On November 19, 1919, Field-Marshal Viscount Allenby, the British High Commissioner, issued a proclamation defining the aims of the British Government *

Sultan of Egypt

His Highness FUAD I., G C B (Ahmad Fuad), Sultan of Egypt; born March 26, 1868, succeeded his brother October 9, 1917, married May 24, 1919, to the daughter of Sabri Pasha

* The policy of Great Britain in Egypt is to preserve the autonomy of that country under British protection, and to develop the system of self government under an Egyptian ruler The object of Great Britain is to defend Egypt against all external danger and interference by a foreign Power, and at the same time to establish a constitutional system wherein—under British guidance as far as may be necessary—the Sultan and his Ministers and the elected representatives of the people may, in their several spheres, and in an increasing degree, co operate in the management of Egyptian affairs.

THE LEGISLATURE

By the Organic Law of 1883 were created (1) a Legislative Council of 30 members and (2) a General Assembly consisting of the Legislative Council, the Ministers of State and 46 members elected by the people These bodies were mainly consultative (except in respect of the imposition of new direct personal or land taxes, on which questions the General Assembly's vote was decisive), the legislative power resting with the Khedive and his Ministers By a Law of July, 1913, these two bodies were merged into one called the Legislative Assembly, consisting of (a) the Ministers as ex officio members (b) 66 elected members, and (c) 17 members nominated by the Government 15 of these to represent certain minorities The elected members are chosen in each district by the electors delegate, each of whom represents 50 electors on the principle of mandate and recall Their term of office is for 6 years, but a third of both nominated and elected members retire biennially. The Assembly can initiate legislation and must be consulted on laws initiated by the Government as also on public loans and important modifications of the railway and irrigation systems The Government is not bound by the resolutions of the Assembly although the legislative procedure laid down ensures that the Government shall act in full knowledge of the views of the Assembly The Assembly has a right of veto only on questions of new direct, personal or land taxation.

THE JUDICATURE

Justice is administered under four distinct systems all except the Consular Courts being supervised by the Ministry of Justice to which a British judicial adviser is attached The systems are (1) Mehkemas, or Courts of the Qadis who are chosen from the students of Azhar University and administer Muhammadan Law following the Hanafite Rite (2) Native Tribunals containing Egyptian and foreign judges and dealing with criminal charges against natives and with civil cases in which both plaintiff and defendant are local subjects (3) Mixed Tribunals founded in 1876 to deal principally with civil actions between foreigners of different nationality and between foreigners and natives (4) Consular Courts (of the 15 powers possessing rights to them by treaty) with criminal jurisdiction over foreigners and judging civil cases between foreigners of the same nationality

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The chief towns constitute governorships (muhafzas) and the remainder of the occupied country is divided into provinces (mudirias) which are subdivided into districts (markaz) each under a mamur, who controls the head man (omda) of each village in his district By the law of 1883 provincial councils were instituted consisting of two representatives from each markaz, under the presidency of the mudir (or governor) of the province These councils were reorganized in 1910 and were made the elementary education authority for the province, with certain restricted powers of local government

DEFENCE

The British Forces in Egypt and Palestine since the outbreak of the Great War have undergone many changes, and until the situation in the East has been cleared up its ultimate strength cannot be determined The Commander in Chief in Egypt is Field Marshal Viscount Allenby, G C B, G C M G (the High Commissioner), the G O C, Egyptian Exp Force, is Lieut Gen Sir W N Congreve, V C, K C B, M V O.

Service in the Egyptian Army is nominally compulsory on all Egyptian subjects between the ages of 19 and 27, the recruits required each year being chosen by ballot; but certain classes (professors, students, Government employees, &c) are exempt, and exemption may also be purchased for £E50, if paid before the ballot. Natives of the Sudan are enlisted voluntarily for service in the Egyptian Army. The Sirdar is appointed by the Sultan with the consent of the British Government.

There is no Navy in the proper sense of the term, there are 3 small cruisers belonging to the Coast Guard and Fisheries service, and 4 vessels under the Ministry of Communications, while the different Government Departments possess steamers on the Nile for inspection purposes.

The Egyptian Police (under the Ministry of the Interior) consists of City and Provincial Police, the former comprising 262 officers 376 constables and 5,103 men (443 Europeans), the latter 342 officers and 5 261 men. There are also 54 422 ghafirs, or native night watchmen.

EDUCATION

Education on native lines has long been given in elementary vernacular schools; some of these are under native management, and the rest are partly under the direct control of the Ministry of Education and partly under its inspection for grants in aid. The native system of education is completed by the more promising pupils at the Azhar University in Cairo, the principal University of the Moslem world. In 1920 there were 134 Elementary Schools (Maktabs) under Government supervision, with about 28,300 pupils, and about 3,270 Maktabs under inspection for grants-in-aid with 102,386 pupils; there were also 42,864 pupils in other elementary schools. The government primary schools give a 4 years' course and prepare for admission to secondary, agricultural and other special schools. There were also 7 government Secondary Schools with 2,525 pupils and 34 Secondary Schools under inspection for grants in aid with 4,588 pupils, other Secondary Schools (about 30) had 1,645 pupils in 1920. There are Colleges of Medicine, Law, Education, Engineering, Commerce, Veterinary Science and Agriculture at Cairo. Much assistance is given to education by private enterprise and benevolence and foreign schools abound. A National University, under entirely Egyptian management, was founded in 1908 at Cairo. Proposals are under consideration for the establishment of a State University and for the generalising of education among the masses of the people.

The reckless financial administration under Ismail, 1863-1879, led to the bankruptcy of the country in 1876 and to a Franco-British investigation and settlement of the national finances For the protection of the bondholders there was instituted a Caisse de la Dette, a body representing the creditors of the Egyptian Treasury with considerable powers and special privileges The Caisse, appointed during an era of bankruptcy, succeeded in protecting the interests of the bondholders, but as Egypt became solvent and prosperous, its stringent regulations prevented the development of the country out of surplus revenue a large part of which was held in suspense as contingent security for the service of the debt By an agreement of April 8 1904 between Great Britain and France, subsequently ratified by all the Powers the restrictions which hampered the liberty of the Egyptian Government in financial matters were abolished Though the Caisse de la Dette still exists its duties are now limited to receiving the revenues necessary for the interest and for the payment of the coupons as they become due while it also holds a considerable reserve fund (amounting to £E8 755 436 on April 1, 1918) the interest on which reduces the amount of the Treasury contribution The Egyptian debt was stated as follows (in £ sterling) on April 1, 1919 and 1920 —

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY

Irrigation —The total area of Egypt is estimated at approximately 222 100 000 English acres of which about 8 450 000 acres are formed of the alluvium brought down by the Nile from the Abyssinian hills the remainder being chiefly limestone desert Only the former are cultivable and only that portion of them which can be irrigated from the waters of the Nile—this portion amounts at present to 5 400 000 acres (1919), and is capable of extension (to 7 600 000 acres) by the improvement of water storage facilities and means of distribution King Mena (B.C 4000 approximately) is said to have been the founder of the first scientific system of using the Nile water for irrigation purposes, he employed what is known as the basin system, which is still used for the irrigation of all the land lying to the south of Deirût in Upper Egypt By this system the land is divided into rectangular areas varying in size from 5 000 to 50 000 acres and surrounded by banks, water is admitted to these basins during the flood season (August) to an average depth of 3 feet and is left on the land for about 40 days, it is then run off and the seed is sown broadcast on the uncovered land Since the British occupation the basin systems have been improved and provided with numbers of important masonry works they have also been insured against a insufficient flood by the construction of barrages at Esna and Assiût, of which the former was built during 1906–08, and the latter in 1898 1,02 they are situated in lat 25° 18 N and 27° 12′ N respectively

About 1820 Mohammed 'Ali Pasha introduced the system of perennial irrigation by digging deep canals in which the water could flow all the year round, by which means it was possible to grow two (or more) crops in one year and to introduce the cultivation of cotton on a large scale During his reign the barrages across the Delta were begun under the direction of Mongel Bey in 1843 and 1847 respectively but by 1863 they were found to be unworkable Since the British occupation they have been restored and greatly improved (1886 91) and a vast storage dam has been constructed at Aswân (lat 24° 2 N) at a cost of £E2,740,000, which was opened on December 10 1902 its height has since been raised so as to increase the capacity of the reservoir thus formed to a total of 85 460 000 000 cubic feet A barrage has also been built at Zifta in Lower Egypt

By these works and by the construction of a vast network of canals with controlling masonry works a small part of the excess waters of the river have been stored and distributed at all seasons of the year and perennial irrigation has been extended throughout Middle and Lower Egypt The increase in the value of the land has been enormous and some 2 million acres have been added to the cultivable land of Egypt

Agriculture and Live Stock —Although nearly the whole population is directly or indirectly connected with agriculture the total given in the census return of 1917 under the headings of proprietors tenants and labourers &c amounts to 4 012,000 persons employed representing only 30 5 per cent of the population The land is held in to 4 773 050 feddâns by 1 662 803 native owners and as to 5 486 155 feddâns by 8 242 European Of the native landlords 1 044 371 own up to 1 feddân, 476 910 up to 5 feddâns and 141,522 from 5 to 50 feddâns (1 feddân = 1 038 acres)

The agricultural land is of two kinds The first is that which is under the basin irrigation system by which the land receives one watering only This watering consists of a flooding at high Nile as the flood decreases the seeds of the various crops are sown and the basin fields are left without further watering Harvests of wheat barley beans clover vetches and lentils are gathered in due course The second kind of land is that which is perennially irrigated by means of canals and receives waterings according to rotations laid down by the Irrigation Department In these lands which are for the most part in Lower Egypt cotton maize wheat rice beans barley sugar cane clover vegetables and fruit are the chief crops In 1919 Egypt exported 6 708 906 kantârs of raw cotton valued at £ 5 441 901 (against 5 019 689 kantârs, £38 034,467 in 1918) In 1919 the quantity taken by the United Kingdom was 3 742,725 kantars (£35 284 139) against 3 528 401 kantars (£26 868 655) in 1918 In August, 1914, the price of this cotton was 8 45*d* per lb, in January, 1918 the price was 31 4*d* per lb and in March 1919, the quotation was 95*d* per lb

Minerals —The riparian districts of the lower Valley of the Nile are ill provided with workable mineral deposits, with the exception of abundant building materials The mineral resources of Egypt, therefore, are situated in its otherwise barren deserts Known deposits are chiefly situated at great distances from one another and from the Nile This fact has retarded exploration and development, but of late years considerable progress has been made Owing to lack of knowledge of mining, consequent upon their pursuit being entirely agricultural, the local industrial classes have had very little hand in the existing enterprises, whose capital and organisation is chiefly foreign In 1919 the value of the principal minerals produced was phosphates, £E156,730, salt, £E56 023, metallic ores, £E76,052, gold ingots, £E30,053, and kerosine, £E17,921

The following minerals, metals, and precious stones are at present being exploited or developed on a commercial scale —building stones, clays, gypsum, gold, manganese ores, natron, petroleum, phosphate of lime, peridots, salt, alum, magnesia and ochres. Besides those mentioned above, there are known to exist, in quantities more or less important, copper ores, emeralds, granite, iron ores, nickel ores, ornamental stones and sulphur Enquiries respecting the geology of Egypt should be addressed to the Geological Museum Applications concerning mining and quarrying and the issue of licences and leases should be made to the Department of Mines, Dawawin Post Office, Egypt

Manufactures —There are some cotton mills in the Delta for the manufacture of rough calico whilst in Upper Egypt are sugar, rice, and flour mills, and a certain amount of pottery is made Cigarette factories centre at Cairo and Alexandria from imported tobacco

EXTERNAL TRADE

The imports and exports of merchandise (the produce or manufacture of Egypt) for the 6 years 1914–1919, are stated as follows —

Year	Imports	Exports	Total
1914	21 724 606	24,091,796	45 816 402
1915	19 328 993	27 046 872	46 375 865

1919	47,409 717	75,888 321	123,298 038

In addition to the above figures for 1919 there were re exports valued at £E4 307 401 against £E1,378 732 in 1918 The adverse balance of £E4,406,554 in 1918 was turned into an excess of exports over imports of £E28 478 604 in 1919

There is a general import duty of 8 per cent ad valorem on all articles except fuel timber cattle and meat, which pay 4 per cent ad valorem, and an export duty of about 1 per cent all round The principal articles imported and exported in 1919 were —

COMMUNICATIONS

Railways —There is a network of railways in the Delta, the principal lines radiating from Cairo to Alexandria (and on to Rosetta) Damietta and Ismailia (continuing northwards to Port Said and southward to Suez) From Cairo the line runs southwards for a distance of 554 miles to Shellal, the First Cataract At this point a steamer connexion runs to Wadi Halfa connecting the Egyptian State system with the Sudan Government Railways Westwards from Alexandria (and close to the coast) runs a line which it is hoped to extend eventually to the frontier at Sollum, thus joining Tripoli to Egypt The total length of the Egyptian State Railways (excluding the Auxiliary Railways of Upper Egypt and the Western Oases Railway) on March 31, 1920, was 1,590 miles 26 212 988 passengers and 4,820,702 tons of merchandise were carried during 1917–8 the net receipts being £E1,910,874 The gauge is standard (4 ft 8½ in), with the exception of 138 miles between Luxor and Shellal which are 3 ft 6 in gauge There are two other State-owned lines in Egypt namely, the Auxiliary Railways of Upper Egypt consisting of 282 miles of standard gauge and the Western Oases Railways, a length of 141 miles (75 centimetre gauge) connecting the oases of Kharga with the Nile Valley In addition to the Government lines, there are 818 miles of light railways exploited by public companies By the completion of a swing bridge over the Suez Canal at Kantara (March, 1918) there is now direct railway communication from Cairo to Palestine

Caravan Routes —The principal caravan routes lead to the Oases of the Libyan Desert (though Kharga can now be reached by train), whence there is a route, known as the Darb el Arbain, leading to Dar Fûr and the south of the Sudan There are many well known routes across the Arabian Desert to the Red Sea, that from Qena to Qoseir being probably the most frequently used

Shipping —The Khedivial Mail Steamship Line (which is under British management) has its headquarters at Alexandria and a depôt at Suez the majority of the Egyptian pilgrims to Mecca now travel by it. The principal port is Alexandria, with 3 (1,330,702 tons) entered and 735 vessels (1,362,431 tons) cleared in 1919 The traffic through Port Said amounted in 1919 to 316 vessels entered and 316 cleared, the remainder being dealt with viâ Suez

Posts and Telegraphs —There were in 1919 2,501 post offices and stations, dealing with a total inland correspondence of 60,936,000 (including letters, post-cards newspapers, &c), and a total foreign correspondence of 30,177,000 There were on December 31, 1918, 4,622 miles of telegraphs, with 28,930 miles of wire, over which 2,155,443 messages were transmitted during 1918

A system of rural savings banks has been introduced under the control of the Post Office, the actual deposits being collected in each district by the sarraf (village tax collector)

THE SUEZ CANAL.

The Suez Canal —The Compagnie Universelle du Canal Maritime de Suez is an Egyptian company authorised in 1856 and confirmed in 1866, with a capital of 200 000,000 francs in 400,000 shares of 500 francs each The British Government acquired from the Khedive in 1875 a total of 176 602 shares (cost £4 000 000 value March 31 1920 £23 192 000

The Suez Canal was opened in 1869 The total length of the canal is 101 miles with a width of 45 metres (147 ft 8 in) having cost 743 260 929 francs to construct and enlarge the maximum draught of water allowed for vessels using the canal is 9 14 metres (30 feet). The average time for the transit through the canal is 16 hours 13 minutes By a convention signed on Oct 29, 1888, the canal was exempted from blockade and vessels of all nations whether armed or not are to be allowed to pass through it in peace or war The management of the canal is entrusted to a council of 32 administrators of whom 10 are British (three representing H M Government and seven the shipowning interest)

British Directors Sir Thomas Sutherland G C M G (Vice President of the Company) Sir Fredk Green K B E , J Harrison Hughes Lord Inchcape G C M G K C S I K C I E Oswald Sanderson, Sir E Wyldbore Smith Sir Owen E Phillips, C C M G

Representing H B M Govt H J Anstruther Sir Ian Malcolm, K C M G (and one vacancy)

The transit receipts in 1870 were 5 718 756 fr and in 1919 145 092 560 fr

The present rate of transit dues is 8 fr 25c per ton and 5 fr 75 c for vessels in ballast

The net dividends for the year 1915 amounted to 120 fr on the ordinary 500 fr shares and 97 915 fr on the Actions de Jouissance In 1919, the dividends were 191 877 fr and 168 597 fr , respectively

The following table shows the number and tonnage of vessels which have passed through the Suez Canal since 1914 with the percentage of British vessels —

Year	No of Vessels	Net Tons	British Tonnage

TOWNS

CAIRO, the capital, stands on the E bank of the Nile, about 14 miles from the head of the Delta Its oldest part is the fortress of Babylon in old Cairo, with its Roman bastions and Coptic churches The earliest Arab building is the Mosque of 'Amr, dating from A D 643, and the most conspicuous is the Citadel, built by Saladin towards the end of the 12th century The bazaars are always interesting, especially the Khân-el Khalili, the Hamzâwi, and the Brass Bazaar though the Muski, which leads to them, is fast losing its oriental character

ALEXANDRIA, founded B.C. 332 by Alexander the Great, was for over 1,000 years the capital of Egypt. Its great Pharos, or lighthouse, was one of the "*Seven Wonders of the World." It now contains two palaces of the Sultan's, Ras-el-Tin and Montaza, while almost the entire cotton trade of the country is here controlled by the big dealers and brokers. The principal towns (with their population in 1917) are as follows:—

WEIGHTS, MEASURES, AND CURRENCY.

Weights and Measures.

The Metric System of Weights and Measures and the foot and pound and their multiples, are legal in Egypt. The foot and pound are rarely used and the Metric System is little known except in the large towns.

The Weights and Measures in common use, with their English equivalents, are as follows:—

Length—
Dira Baladi (used for piece goods) = 22·83 inches
Dira Mamari, or Pic (used by architects) = 29·53 inches
Qasaba (used for agricultural land) = 11·65 feet

Area—
1 Qirat = 209·3 sq. yards
1 Feddân (=24 qirats) = 1·038 acres

Capacity—
1 Kêla = ·454 bushel
1 Ardeb (=12 kêlas) = 5·444 bushels

Weight—
1 Roti = ·99 lb.
1 Oke = 2·75 lb.
1 Qantar (=100 rotls) = 99·05 lb.

Currency.

The Egyptian monetary system prescribed by the Law of October, 1916, is on a gold mono-metallic basis, the unit being the Egyptian pound of 100 piastres, or 1,000 milliemes, weighing 8·5000 grams, 0·875 fine, or 7·4375 grams of fine gold.

The Legal tender qualities of the coins are: Gold—the Egyptian pound and 50 piastre pieces full legal tender. Silver—pieces of 20, 10, 5 and 2 piastres up to a sum of 200 piastres. Nickel—pieces of 10, 5, 2 and 1 milliemes up to a sum of 10 piastres. Bronze—pieces of ½ millieme up to 10 piastres.

The respective values of the new Egyptian coins are designated thereon in both Arabic and English characters.

The pound sterling is also legal tender in Egypt at the fixed rate of 97·5 piastres. The 20-franc piece and equivalent coins of the Latin Union circulate at the fixed rate of 77·15 piastres. The gold circulation consists almost entirely of British sovereigns, the Egyptian pound and the other legal tender gold coins being comparatively rare; the British sovereign is, therefore, the real basis of the monetary system, and the foreign exchanges, expressed in piastres, are based, not on the Egyptian pound of 100 piastres, but on the British sovereign of 97½ piastres.

The National Bank of Egypt issues notes for (£E.) 100, 50, 10, 5 and 1, and (piastres) 50 and 25: and the Government Currency Notes for (piastres) 10 and 5.

CAIRO is 2,520 miles from London; transit 6 days, or by P. & O. Mail viâ Brindisi, 5 days.

The inhabitants of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan are partly Arabs, partly Negroes, and partly Nubian of mixed Arab-Negro blood, with a small foreign element, including some 3,000 Europeans. The Arabs are all Muhammadans, as are some of the Negroes and the Nubians, but the Negroes are generally pagans. Before 1884 the population was believed to be between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000, but by 1898 they had been reduced to about 1,500,000 by war, repression, and disease.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

Boundaries.—The Sudan extends from the southern boundary of Egypt 22° N. lat., to the northern shore of the Albert Nyanza, 2° 19′ N. lat., and reaches from the French Sahara about 18° 15′ E. (at 22° N.) to the north-west boundary of Eritrea (Italian) in 38° 30′ E. (at 18° N.). The greatest length from north to south is approximately 1,400 miles, and from east to west 1,200 miles. The northern boundary is the 22nd parallel of North latitude; on the east lie the Red Sea, Eritrea and Abyssinia; on the south lie the British Protectorate of Uganda and the Belgian Congo; and on the west the French Congo.

Northern Region.—The greater portion of the region between 16° N. and 22° N. consists of the Nubian Desert on the east and the Libyan Desert on the west, divided by the fertile valley of the Nile, which is nowhere of great width. The Nubian Desert is bounded on the south by the rivers Atbara and Gash, the latter of which looses its annual flood in a fertile delta north of the town of Kassala. It is traversed from south to north by the continuation of the Abyssinian highlands, which constitutes the Nile-Red Sea water parting, and forms a series of parallel rocky ranges rising to a height of 5,000 feet, the lower slopes and valleys of which are clothed in vegetation and comparatively well watered. The maritime plain lying between these mountains and the Red Sea is covered with low bush, and at Tokar the Baraka (a mountain torrent) waters sufficient of it to produce excellent cotton.

The Central Region, between 16° N. and 10° N., contains on the east the so-called "Island of Meroë," the ancient seat of civilization in the Sudan, situated between the Atbara and the Blue Nile rivers. It is now almost uninhabited save for the natives who visit it to raise a precarious crop after the annual rains. The districts bordering on the upper reaches of the Blue Nile are covered with forests of large trees.

Southern Region.—From 10° N. to the southern boundaries are extensive tracts of cultivable lands enclosed by a semi circle of forests and swamps, through which a multitude of streams flow into the main river

Darfur is mainly an elevated plateau about 3 000 feet above sea level, with occasional summits in the Jebel Marra and Jebel Medob of 6,000 feet, with summer torrents in the khors, which flood much of the southern districts and vanish in the winter The Lado enclave, which had been leased to Leopold II , King of the Belgians, reverted at his death to the Anglo Egyptian administration, and now forms part of Mongalla The total area of the enclave is estimated at 15 000 sq miles, with a Negro population of about 250 000 The Gambela enclave (within the boundaries of Abyssinia) is leased from the Abyssinian Government as a trading post

Hydrography —The Nile basin covers a total area of nearly 1,100 000 sq miles, and while part of the basin lies in Abyssinia and Eritrea its course from the Central African Lakes to the Mediterranean is within the British Protectorates of Uganda and Central Africa, and the Egyptian and Sudanese dominions The main stream issues from the Victoria Nyanza at the Ripon Falls and flows through Lake Choga, whence it diverges to the Albert Nyanza and enters the plains of Lado in the Mongalla Province of the Sudan, as the Bahr el Jebel At Lake No the stream effects a confluence with the Bahr el Ghazal, from the south west, and further east with the Sobat from the south western highlands of Abyssinia From the junction with the Bahr el Ghazal the stream is known as the Bahr el Abiad or White Nile At Khartum 535 miles above the Sobat confluence, the river is reinforced by the Bahr el Azrak, or Blue Nile from the south east and near El Damer, 200 miles further north by a confluence with the Atbara, from Abyssinia Thence the river flows north west to Abu Hamed and makes a great south westerly bend, across the Nubian Desert before resuming its northward course through the Dongola to the northern frontier at Wadi Halfa From the Atbara confluence to the Mediterranean the Nile has a course of close on 1,600 miles, and from its sources to the confluence its length may be reckoned at 2 400 miles giving a total waterway of 4 000 miles From the Ripon Falls (on the northern shore of Victoria Nyanza) to Rosetta (on the Mediterranean) the length of the waterway is stated to be 3 475 miles Between Khartum and Wadi Halfa occur five of the six Cataracts the remaining (first) cataract being in Egypt at Assuan The sixth occurs at the Shabluka Gorge, below Khartum, the fifth below Berber, at El Sohmanieh the fourth in the Nubian bend, between Monastir and Merowe the third between New Dongola and the 20° N lat , the second ends just above Wadi Halfa the first (in Upper Egypt) has been greatly diminished in vehemence by the construction of the dam and locks at Assuan

The Sudan is administered by a Governor General aided since 1910 by a Council nominated from amongst the Officials of the Government All Ordinances and Laws are made by the Governor General in Council The Civil and Criminal Codes are based on those of India and Egypt The boundaries correspond in general with the territory obtained by conquest from the indigenous tribes by the armies of Mohammed Ali the first Khedive of Egypt and of his successors up to Ismail Pasha, between 1820 and 1875 At one time the authority of the Khedive extended along the western shore of the Red Sea as far as the Somali coast, but these outlying portions were gradually given up and in 1884 the Mahdist rebellion, culminating in the fall of Khartum and the death of General Gordon on Jan 26, 1885, compelled the Egyptian Government to withdraw from the whole of the Sudan, with the exception of Wadi Halfa on the Nile and Suakin on the Red Sea which were held as frontier posts An invasion of Egypt by the Mahdist hordes under Wad El Nejumi was defeated at the battle of Toski on Aug 3 1889 but from 1885 until the final overthrow of Mahdism in the campaign of 1896–98 the country was entirely under the oppressive rule of the Dervishes, and suffered a set back from which it will take many years to recover, the population decreasing from about 9 000 000 to less than 2 000,000 through famine and the spread of disease due to misgovernment Mohammed Ahmed the original Madhi, died a natural death on June 22, 1885, but was succeeded by the Khalifa Abdu lahi who ruled until his final overthrow by the Anglo Egyptian army at the battle of Omdurman on Sept 2, 1898. He escaped from the battle and remained at large until he, and most of his remaining Emirs, were killed at the battle of Gedid on Nov 24, 1898 After the reconquest of the Sudan a treaty, signed on Jan 19, 1899, between Egypt and Great Britain, defined the boundary between Egypt and the Sudan, and provided for its administration The British and Egyptian flags fly together and the territory is administered by a Governor-General appointed by Egypt with the consent of the British Government No duties may be levied on imports from Egypt and duties on imports via the Red Sea ports may not exceed those levied in Egypt. The import and export of slaves is prohibited.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The Sudan is divided into 15 provinces (mudirias) under governors (mudirs) subdivided into mamurias, or districts The governors (see p 669) are all British In some provinces there are High Court or Provincial Judges, in others the Governor acts as Provincial Judge District Judges have been appointed in many instances, and where no appointments have been made the Provincial Inspectors and District Officers act in their stead

DEFENCE.

Several regiments of the Egyptian Army (see Egypt) are stationed in the Sudan, which forms an excellent recruiting ground, and the Sirdar (Commander in Chief) is Governor General of the Sudan A detached body of the British army of occupation in Egypt is quartered at Khartum, under the command of the Sirdar The police and the locally recruited irregulars (jehadia) are under provincial administration

EDUCATION

In addition to kuttabs (vernacular schools) there are 6 primary schools at Khartum Omdurman, Wad Medani, El Obeid, Suakim and Atbara, where instruction is given in English as well as Arabic, attended by about 1,000 pupils, a secondary school at Khartum (Gordon College), and a training college (also at Gordon College), and technical or trade schools at Khartum and Omdurman The central authority is the Education Department

FINANCE

The revenue and expenditure of the Sudan for the seven years 1913–1919 are stated as follows —

Year	Revenue	Expenditure
1913	£E1,654,150	£E1 614,007
1914	1,543,550	1 531 350
1915	1 495,230	1,463 940
1916	1,857,860	1 745.530
1917	2,195,360	1,901,940
1918	2,774 690	2,336,315
1919	2 992 793	2,720,513

The revenue is derived mainly from land tax, animal tax royalties, customs and railways, posts telegraphs and steamboat services The deficits of the early years were met by a contribution from the Egyptian exchequer, the total sum so paid by Egypt from 1901 1911 amounting to £3 435,000 In addition nearly £5 000 000 has been advanced by Egypt for public works in the Sudan

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY

Agriculture —In 1918 the area under cultivation was about 2,700 000 acres of which (approximately) 8½ per cent was rain cultivation, 13 per cent naturally flooded, and 5 per cent irrigated by artificial means The area artificially irrigated is being extended (a) by pumping installations and (b) by gravitation canals The basin system (see Egypt, Irrigation) is used in the Dongola mudiria The chief rain crop is dura (African millet), which forms the staple food of the Sudanese Wheat, barley, dates lentils, beans, onions and melons are also grown, and ground nuts and sesame are also produced for oil, and an excellent quality of cotton in rapidly increasing quantities, the high prices being a great inducement to the cultivators The forests of the south west and south contain valuable timber, and gum is derived from the forests of Kordofan and the valley of the Blue Nile the Sudan being the chief source of the world's supply of gum arabic, rubber is obtained from the Southern Provinces The Live Stock includes camels, horses, cattle, sheep, goats and asses, and wild (and semi wild) ostrich in Kordofan The cattle trade is increasing in importance annually cattle are easily raised and the quality of the stock is improving under the supervision of the Veterinary Department

Minerals —Gold was once worked extensively from mines on the Red Sea littoral, in modern times these ancient workings have been reopened from time to time with varying success Limonite iron and copper are known to exist and the last two are worked by natives in the Bahr el Ghazal Province

EXTERNAL TRADE.

The principal exports are gum, ivory obtained by elephant hunters, cattle, sheep, sesame, dates, cotton and cotton seed, hides and skins The principal imports are cotton goods, machinery and metals, coal, food stuffs, tobacco and spirits The total trade for the eight years 1912–1919 is stated as follows —

Year	Imports	Exports	Total
1912	£E1,967,429	£E1,373,119	£E3,340,548
1913	2,109,476	1,185,186	3,294,662
1914	1,891 494	1,020,260	2 911,754
1915	1,704 250	1,577,991	3,282,241
1916	2 661 468	2,288,403	4 949,871
1917	3,102,117	3,490,565	6,592,682
1918	4,024 582	3,923,771	7 948,353

COMMUNICATIONS

Railways, &c —In 1915 about 1 500 miles of rail ways were open for traffic The Sudan Railway reached Khartum in 1899, a line from Atbara to the Red Sea at Port Sudan and Suakin and a branch to the Halfa Khartum line from Abu Hamed to Kareima to tap the Dongola Province, were opened in 1906. A bridge has been con structed over the Blue Nile at Khartum, and runs to El Obeid, the chief town of Kordofan Province, crossing the White Nile by another bridge near Hillet Abbas Since the opening of the eastern railway the Red Sea ports of Port Sudan and Suakin receive much of the trade which formerly passed northwards South of Khartum communication is established by steamers and boats on the Blue and White Niles, Sobat and Bahr-el-Ghazal, and inland chiefly by camels and donkeys

Telegraphs —All the principal towns are in direct telegraphic communication with Khar tum, the total mileage of telegraph lines being 4,353 miles in 1920 There are 65 stationary and 11 travelling Post and Telegraph offices and 11 wireless telegraphy offices

CAPITAL, KHARTUM, at the junction of the White and Blue Niles The town has been rebuilt and now contains a large mosque for Muhammadans, a cathedral and the Gordon College with extensive government buildings Population about 23 000 Opposite Khartum, on the Blue Nile is Khartum North (16,000), and on the White Nile is Omdurman (60 000), the former Madhist capital Other towns are Berber, Abu Hamed Merowé Dongola Wadi Halfa, Port Sudan, Suakin, Kassala, Kamlin, Sennar, Wad Medani Roseires Gallabat, Gedaref, El Obeid, El Dueim, El Fasher (Darfur) Kodok, Mongalla, Lado and Rejaf

The League of the Empire (FOUNDED 1901).

(Associated with the Overseas Club)

THE League is entirely non political and non sectarian Its practical work has been to promote co operation between the different Countries and Colonies of the Empire, mainly in affairs connected with education, and to afford full and correct information regarding them, so that the duties of citizenship may be better understood and appreciated, and personal and active interest inspired in the great problems connected with our Empire's conditions and progress The relation of the League to the Edu cation Departments and Governments throughout the Empire has been regularised (a) through the recommendation of its work to the Governments concerned by the Colonial Office of the Imperial Government and by the Agents General in 1902 3 (b) by the active and widespread acceptance of its schemes by the different Educational Autho rities and Governments In 1907 the League carried through the first Conference between the Education Departments of the Home and Colonial Governments. One of the effects of this Con ference was that the Imperial Government undertook to call the Imperial Conference on Education in 1911 In 1912 the first Imperial Conference of Teachers Associations was held by the League, and in 1913 was inaugurated the Imperial Union of Teachers In 1921 the second Imperial Conference of Teachers' Associations will be held in Toronto, by invitation of the Government of Ontario An annual meeting of the Imperial Union of Teachers takes place each July The League, through the liberality of the late Mr Louis Spitzel, has published a series of text books on the Empire, under the editorship of Professor A F Pollard (1) 'The British Empire—Its Past Its Present and Its Future (a book of reference), (2) 'The British Empire and Its History (for Secondary Schools), (3) 'The Story of the British Empire In 1907 the League helped to establish a lace industry in St Helena With the co operation of the Oversea and Home Education Authorities a Scheme for the interchange of teachers throughout the Empire is now in active operation, the League arranging yearly interchange appointments The School Affiliation and Comrades Correspondence Sections were established in 1901 2 Other work undertaken are the giving of lectures the estab lishment of a bureau of information, essay competitions exhibitions, and the furthering of the keeping of Empire Day

During the War the League distributed from its depôt over a million articles to the hospitals and troops, besides helping prisoners and others in distress The League has also given colours and shields to all the overseas contingents who fought for the Empire an isolated Island in the South Atlantic (3,417 miles from Plymouth 760 from St Helena and 900 from Cape Palmas on the African Coast) is of volcanic origin the peak rising to the height of 2 820 feet situated 7° 55' 55" S. lat. and 14° 25' 5" W long. It is said to have been discovered by a Portuguese named Joao de Nova Gallego on Ascension Day, 1501, and two years later was visited by Alphonse d'Albuquerque, who gave the island its present name. Its extreme length is 7½ miles, and extreme breadth 6 miles, with an area of about 38 square miles, and being situated in the heart of the S.E. trade winds its climate is dry and salubrious up to 1 800 feet but above that height to its limit it is damp and foggy. It remained uninhabited till 1815, when the English took possession of it. The island is under the Board of Admiralty by whom an officer is appointed as commandant. The inhabitants consist of officers and their families seamen marines and Kroomen a limited number of men also have their families with them the full complement of the island being about 250 (exclusive of 40 members and servants of the Eastern Telegraph Co.) with about 35 women and children. Georgetown the garrison settlement, is situated in a small bay on the N.W. coast. Ascension is visited by the sea turtle from January to May, which lay their eggs in the sand 112 being 'turned' during 1914, their weight being from 300 to 800 lb. The sooty tern or 'wide awake,' use the island as a nesting place about every eighth month their eggs being much appreciated by the inhabitants.

The League also hold a Conference of 300 Oversea Soldier Teachers in 1919

BAHAMAS

The Bahamas (or Lucayos) are an archipelago of the British West Indies lying between 21° 42'—27° 34' N. lat. and 72° 40'—79° 5' W. long., and extending from the coast of Florida on the north west to Haiti on the south east. The group consists of about twenty inhabited islands and an immense number of islets and rocks comprising an area of about 4 404 square miles and a population in 1917 of 59,928 the most part being descendants of liberated Africans. The principal islands are New Providence (containing the capital, Nassau) San Salvador Abaco Grand Bahama, Long Island Eleuthera, Exuma Harbour Island, Inagua Andros Islands Watlings Island Rum Cay, Long Cay Ragged Island, and Bimini. Originally settled by Englishmen, the Bahamas were, in 1781, surprised by the Spanish but at the peace of Versailles were restored to the English. The climate is salubrious, and in the winter Nassau, which is outside the tropics, is frequented by many Americans. The chief industry is sponge-gathering, the exports of sponge in 1918 being valued at £107,622. The fruit trade is principally with the United States, bananas cocoa nuts, fruit and vegetables being exported. Tomatoes are being cultivated in large quantities for shipment to the United States. Mahogany lignum vitæ mastic ironwood ebony logwood and satinwood are found throughout the islands. A fibre industry is largely established the land under the fibre plant being about 20 000 acres and the value of Bahamas hemp fibre exported in 1918, £128 564. The imports are chiefly food stuffs wines spirits cotton silk and worsted fabrics, and hardware.

The Government is vested in a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 9 members a nominated Legislative Council of 9 members, and an elective Representative Assembly of 29 members.

BARBADOS

the most windward of the West India Islands is situated in 13° 4' N. and longitude 59° 37' W. It is nearly 21 English miles long by 14 broad at the widest part and comprises an area of 106 470 acres (about 166 square miles), about 100 000 acres being cultivated. The estimated population, Jan. 1, 1920, was 200 368. The principal exports are sugar, molasses rum, and cotton, and the imports rice salted meat corn salted fish butter, flour, and Indian corn meal. Liberal provision is made for elementary education and Harrison's College provides for higher education. Unlike most of the neighbouring islands, Barbados has always remained in the possession of Great Britain, by which it was settled in 1625. In 1885 it was constituted a distinct government with a Governor, aided by an Executive Council and an Executive Committee, a Legislative Council of 9 members appointed by the Sovereign, and a House of Assembly of 24 members elected yearly on the basis of a moderate franchise

BERMUDA

The Bermudas or Somers Islands are a cluster of about 100 small islands (15 or 16 only of which are inhabited the rest being mere rocks) situated in the west of the Atlantic Ocean in 32° 15' N lat and 64° 51' W long comprising an area of about 19 square miles and containing a population of 21 840 (7 443 white, and 14 397 coloured) These islands derive their name from Bermudez a Spaniard, who sighted them in 1527 but they were first colonised by Admiral Sir George Somers who was shipwrecked here in 1609 on his way to Virginia The nearest point of the mainland is Cape Hatteras, in North Carolina, 580 miles distant

The Government is administered by a Governor, who is also commander in chief of the military forces He is advised by an Executive Council of 7 members appointed by the Crown There is also a Legislative Council, composed of 9 members appointed by the Crown, and a representative House of Assembly consisting of 36 members

The climate is mild and healthy There are no streams or wells, and the inhabitants are dependent on the rainfall stored and preserved in tanks Vegetation is prolific, the principal trees being the Bermuda cedar (juniper), formerly of great importance for shipbuilding The islands produce large quantities of onions, potatoes, and green vegetables, which are largely exported, together with cut flowers and lily bulbs, to New York Arrowroot and bananas are also grown, but meat, flour and other articles of consumption are imported from the U.S. and Canada. Fish are plentiful round the coasts The islands are much frequented as a health resort by Americans and Canadians

BORNEO

Borneo is a large island in the Eastern Archipelago extending from lat 7° 4' N to 4° 10' S, and from long 108° 50' to 119° 20' E It is about 850 miles in length and 600 in breadth and contains an area of 284 000 square miles, divided by the equatorial line into two nearly equal portions. The population is probably about 1 846 000, consisting chiefly of Dyaks Malays, Kyans, Papus or Negritos, Chinese Bajaus Dusuns, Muruts and Bugis (the aboriginal Celebes) The island was discovered by the Portuguese in 1521, and at the present time rather more than two-thirds of the island is included within "Netherlands India" The remainder of the island is under British protection

BRITISH NORTH BORNEO

The territory of British North Borneo occupies the northern part of the island, with a total area of about 31 000 square miles and a coast line of about 900 miles The population is 227 000 consisting mainly of Muhammadan settlers on the coast aboriginal tribes inland, and a large number of Chinese traders artisans and agricultural labourers The interior is mountainous (Mount Kinabalu, 13 455 feet) and is densely timbered

The two chief towns are Sandakan on the north east coast and Jesselton on the west coast All legislation is passed by the Legislative Council, which consists of 7 official and 5 unofficial members, who have the local title of Honourable The appointment of the Governor is subject to the approval of the Secretary of State For administrative purposes the whole State is divided into 5 Residencies The laws are based on the Indian codes of criminal and civil procedure amended and adapted by local ordinances There is an Imam's Court for Muhammadan law

British Honduras, in Central America, lies within 18° 29′ 5″ to 15° 53 55′ N latitude and 89° 9′ 22″ to 88 10′ W longitude Its extreme length and breadth are 174 m and 68 m respectively it is bounded on the north by Yucatan (Mexico) on the west and south by Guatemala and on the east by the Caribbean Sea. The total area is about 7 652 sq miles, with a population (Census 1911) of 40 458—20,374 males and 20,084 females The climate generally is damp and hot, but not unhealthy The temperature ranges from 50° to 98 The average lies between 75° and 80°, but this is considerably tempered by the prevailing sea breezes The country consists chiefly of primeval forest with savannahs and so called "pine ridges, which are open sandy plains covered with a wiry grass and dotted with pine trees, affording fair runs for cattle The ground is level and swampy along the coast line, and generally flat for about ten or twenty miles inland, after which hills from 500 ft to 4 000 ft. high succeed each other to the western boundary

The staple products are the natural woods of the colony, principally mahogany and logwood Sugar, rubber and cacao grow readily Fruit, including bananas, plantains, coco nuts, pineapples, oranges, and mangoes also grow well, while inland there are extensive regions of good pasturage There are indications of gold and other minerals. About 60,000 acres are under cultivation The best description of cacao trees grow wild in the bush Crown lands can be purchased at $3 per acre, plus cost of survey which averages about $1 25 per acre, or leased at an annual rental of 25c. to 30c per acre. There are 61 primary schools in the colony, and 3 schools with secondary departments in Belize

British Honduras is governed as a Crown colony There is an Executive Council of 3 official and 3 appointed members and a Legislative Council of 5 official and 7 appointed members. The Governor is President of both Councils.

CAMEROON

(Joint Franco-British Administration)

The German Protectorate of Kamerun on the west coast of Africa between (British) Nigeria and French Congo (the Spanish Muni River Settlements occupying a small intervening area) was obtained by conquest by France British forces during the War of 1914-18 and at the conclusion of Peace its administration was confided by the Supreme Council of the Allied Powers to Great Britain and France jointly

The approximate geographical limits are between 2° 12° N lat and 8° 48′-19° E long, and the area is about 295 000 square miles containing a population estimated at 3,500 000 The coast line extends from the Rio del Rey to the Muni River The south-eastern boundary (as rearranged in 1911) is the confluence of the Sanga with the Congo River, the extreme northern limit is the southern shore of Lake Chad, and the extreme eastern limit (1911) is the Ubangi River The territory occupies the north west corner of the Central African Plateau, with Cameroon Peak (13,370 feet) near the capital, on the coast, and the Chebchi and Mandara Mountains on the north west frontier Access was obtained to the Congo and Ubangi

Rivers by the Agadir compensation treaty with France (1911), under which the area of the colony was increased by 102 300 square miles. The Sanaga is a considerable river flowing into the Atlantic opposite Fernando Po. The Sanga and Dscha (or Ngoko) are tributaries of the Congo and the Logone Shari flows into Lake Chad. The inhabitants are Bantus and Sudanese with some Haussas and Fula tribes, of whom the latter are Muhammadans and the remainder pagans. Cocoa cultivation is a highly successful industry of recent origin and the Protectorate is rich in forest produce. The exports (valued at 23,336 000 marks in 1912) are rubber, palm oil, palm kernels, cocoa and ivory; the imports (34 242 000 marks in 1912) are chiefly clothing and textile goods, meat, fish and provisions. There were 170 miles of railway open in 1912.

In 1900 the whole area was divided into a British Sphere and a French Sphere.

The British Sphere is a wedge-shaped strip, running with the Nigerian border and containing an area of about 28 000 sq. miles. It is administered by the Nigerian Government; the capital being Buea, on the slopes of the Cameroon Mountain. The principal port is Victoria (in Ambas Bay), which is connected by railway with the capital.

CAYMAN ISLANDS

The Cayman Islands, forming a dependency of Jamaica, are situated between the meridians 79° 44' and 81° 26' W., parallels of 19° 15' and 19° 46' N., and consist of three islands, Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, with a total area of 225 square miles. They are said to have been discovered by Christopher Columbus on his return voyage from Porto Bello to Haiti, and called Las Tortugas. Population (1911) 5 564.

The principal town is Georgetown, in Grand Cayman; population (1911) 1 449.

an island in the Indian Ocean, to the south-east of the peninsula of Hindustan, is situated between 5° 55' – 9° 50½' N. lat. and 79° 42' – 81° 53' E. long. Its area is (with outlying islands) 25 481 square miles, or more than three-fourths of that of Ireland. Its greatest length is from north to south, 270 miles, and its greatest width 140 miles.

The climate varies with the altitude of the district, but on the whole, though tropical, it is healthy, except in the low-lying jungle. The coolest months are December and January, the hottest are April and May.

The population (Census of 1911) was 4 110 367, the most important element being the Sinhalese, descendants of colonists from the valley of the Ganges, who first settled in the island about B.C. 543. In 1507 the Portuguese landed in Ceylon and formed settlements along the coast, but about 150 years later they were dispossessed by the Dutch. In 1796 the British took possession of the Dutch settlements on the island, and annexed them to the Presidency of Madras; but five years after, in 1801, Ceylon was erected into a separate Crown colony. In 1815 the King of Kandy was deposed and banished, and his dominions, which had up to that time maintained their independence of European rule, were annexed to the British Crown.

The staple products of the islands are agricultural. The most important for home consumption is rice in its two forms of paddy and dry grain. The principal exports are tea, coffee, and products of the coco-nut palm, cinchona, rubber, cocoa, cinnamon, cardamoms, ebony, and a little vanilla.

About one-fourth of the island is under cultivation, and the leading areas in 1919, in acres, were:—Rice 710 922, other grain, 159 284, tea 449,538, coffee 941, coco-nuts, 1 011 570, rubber 308 687, cinnamon, 35 083, cocoa 31 235, and tobacco 12 246. The live stock in 1919 included 1 598,925 horned cattle, 68 040 sheep, 180 369 goats, 59 290 pigs, and 3 555 horses. Among the more important native industries are gold, silver, brass, ivory and tortoiseshell work, pottery, mats, fans, and wood carving. Ceylon is famous for precious stones, especially cat's-eyes, rubies, &c., and the pearl fishery in the Gulf of Mannar, off the N.W. of the island, yielded a revenue of Rs. 2 405 645 in 1905. The manufacture of salt is a Government monopoly.

There are 728 miles of railway open, 611 being 5 ft. 6 in. gauge and 117 miles 2 ft. 6 in., and the post and telegraph offices numbered 711, there being 7 319 miles of telegraph wire.

The government of Ceylon is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of 7 members, and a Legislative Council of 21 members including the Governor and the Executive Council. The Legislative Council contains representatives of the principal races and interests in the island. Four of the ten unofficial members are elected, the rest nominated by the Governor.

For administrative purposes the island is divided into 9 provinces, at the head of each of which is a Government agent. The larger towns have municipalities or local boards, and in the country districts the natives retain their village councils and tribunals for matters of minor importance.

CYPRUS

is an island in the Mediterranean Sea between N lat 34° 33 and 35 41 and E long 32° 17 and 34° 35 It is about 40 miles distant from the nearest point of Asia Minor and 60 miles from Latakia on the Syrian coast The distance to Port Said at the entrance of the Suez Canal is 238 miles The larger part of the island is an irregular parallelogram 100 miles long and 60 to 30 broad from which a narrow peninsula, 5 or 6 miles wide runs out for 40 miles towards the north east The area is 3 584 square miles The estimated population on Dec 31 1919 was 311 108 of whom about 21 per cent were Muhammadans and the remainder mostly members of the autocephalous Church of Cyprus which is a branch of the Orthodox Eastern Church The principal productions are grain of various kinds, sesame linseed wine and spirits, silk, olives, locust beans (carobs) cotton wool, hides grapes, oranges, pomegranates, asbestos aniseed sponges, sumac leaves, terra umbra, gypsum and salt The fertility of the soil has for centuries been proverbial In 1919 the wine export was 1,440,600 gals, and that of spirits 141 252 gals, the bulk of the wine and spirits going to Egypt The climate varies in different localities In the plains the summer heat is very great, and the British troops suffered when first stationed in the island. Excellent summer quarters were, however, found in the hills, and, owing to the enforcement of various sanitary measures, the death rate of the whole island is nearly as low as that of any European country

Cyprus was formally annexed to the British Empire in 1914 The inhabitants have been granted a political franchise, every man paying direct taxes having a vote The government is administered under the Colonial Office by a High Commissioner, assisted by a Legislative Council composed of 18 members, 6 being official and 12 elected The island is divided into three electoral districts each returning one Muhammadan and three Christian members

For administrative and legal purposes it is divided into six districts In each district the executive government is represented by a commissioner and each has a Court of Law presided over by an English judge, who is assisted by two native judges one being a Christian and the other a Muhammadan There is also a Supreme Court for the whole island, consisting of two English judges

The capital is NICOSIA (Lefkosia) near the centre of the island with a population of 26,052 in 1911 the other principal towns are Larnaca (population 9 262) Limassol (10,302) Famagusta (5 327) Kyrenia (1 726) and Paphos (3,435)

Important works at Famagusta have rendered the inner harbour accessible to steamers and a narrow gauge railway connecting the harbour with the capital (36 miles) was opened in 1905, and was extended to Morphou, 25 miles, in 1907, and to Evrychou 15 miles, in 1915 There is a regular service of steamers from Egypt

FALKLAND ISLANDS.

These, the only considerable cluster in the South Atlantic, lie about 300 miles east of the Straits of Magellan, between 51° 15′ 53° S lat and 57° 40′—62° W long They consist of East Falkland (area 3,000 sq miles), West Falkland (2,300 sq miles), and upwards of 100 small islands (islets, rocks, and sandbanks), comprising in the aggregate 6,500 sq miles, and a population in 1916 of 3,220 Mount Adam, the loftiest peak in the colony, rises 2,315 feet above the level of the sea. The Falklands were discovered by Davis in 1592, and visited by Hawkins in 1594. After having successively belonged to France and Spain they were given up to Great Britain about 1771, but not actually occupied In 1820 the Argentine Republic established a settlement in these islands, which was destroyed by the Americans in 1831 In 1833 they were again taken possession of by the English for the protection of the whale fishery, and colonised being the most southerly organised colony of the British Empire On Dec 8, 1914, a British squadron under Adm Sir Doveton Sturdee defeated a German squadron (von Spee) off the Falkland Islands The climate, though somewhat bleak, is usually considered healthy, and the temperature is on the whole equable, the thermometer ranging in winter from 20° to 50°, and in summer from 40° to 65° The islands are chiefly bog land, and have proved suitable for sheep, kitchen gardens occupy the only cultivated part, with the exception of one station situated in a sheltered position on the West Falkland, where a considerable crop of hay is grown The population is mainly British and is principally engaged in sheep farming and sea faring industries The chief exports are whale oil and guano wool tallow, hides and sheepskins The only important settlement is Port Stanley at the head of Port William, on the coast of East Falkland

SOUTH GEORGIA an island 800 miles east south east of the Falkland Group, with an area of 1,000 square miles, is a dependency of the Falkland Islands Among other dependencies are the South Shetlands, the South Orkneys (on which the Argentine Government have, with the permission of H M Government, established a meteorological station in connexion with a discovery that a cold winter in the Weddell Sea is a precursor of drought in the maize and cereal area of Argentina 3½ years later), the Sandwich Group, and a part of the mainland of the Antarctic, known as Graham's Land

GAMBIA

The West African river Gambia, which is navigable for some 300 miles from its mouth, was discovered by the Portuguese in 1447 and in 1588, the year of the Spanish Armada, Queen Elizabeth, being then at war with Spain and Portugal, gave a charter to a British Company to trade with the Gambia and as early as 1618 an effort to do so was made but it was not successful In 1686 a fort was built upon a rocky island and in honour of the new King, was named Fort James but the English merchants had formidable rivals in the Portuguese and French, and it was not until 1783 that the river was recognised by the Treaty of Versailles, as British The Colony had no regular political institutions until 1807, when it was put under the Government of Sierra Leone The Colony of the Gambia was created in 1843, and was constituted a separate government in 1888 It now consists of the Island of St Mary, British Kombo, Albreda the Ceded Mile MacCarthy Island and various other islands and territories on the banks of the river The total area is estimated at 4 132 sq miles The population of the Island of St Mary at the Census of April 2 1911 was 7 700 and that of the Protectorate 138 401 The climate is unhealthy during the rainy season viz from June to October but during the rest of the year it is less unhealthy The chief export is ground nuts which form seventy per cent of the total exports They were sent chiefly to Marseilles where the oil is extracted and used for the same purpose as olive oil but, since the outbreak of war the export trade has been mainly with the U K Beeswax, palm kernels, hides and calabashes are also exported and rice, cotton maize and a kind of millet called kous are produced in the countries bordering the Gambia but not in sufficient quantities to meet local requirements The chief imports are cotton goods kola nuts rice soap spirits, hardware, sugar, wine, and tobacco A Company of the W A F F (4 officers and 120 non commissioned officers and men) is stationed in the Colony, and there is an armed police force in the settlement (numbering 98 men), which performs both civil and military duties The government which is that of a Crown Colony, is vested in a Governor, assisted by an Executive Council consisting of 3 official members (besides the Governor), and by a Legislative Council of 5 official members and 3 unofficial members, nominated by the Crown

GOLD COAST.

The Gold Coast Colony comprises a portion of the coast of the Gulf of Guinea from about 3° 7′ W. to 1° 14′ E. of Greenwich, with a protectorate extending inland to an average distance of 440 miles, or to the 11° of N. latitude, bounded on the west and north by the French colonies of the Ivory Coast and French Soudan, and on the east by the German colony of Togoland. The total area of the colony and its dependencies is estimated at 80,235 sq. miles. The population (Census of April 2, 1911) was: Gold Coast Colony, 857,516; Ashanti, 287,814; Northern Territories, 357,519; total, 1,503,386, of whom about 1,000 are Europeans. The natives are almost all Pagans, but the number of Muhammadans and Christians is steadily increasing. The Castle and settlement of Elmina was founded by the Portuguese and taken from them by the Dutch. In 1618, some English merchants built a fort at Kormantyne, and subsequently many forts and factories were established by the English and other nations. The first English Company to trade with the Gold Coast was chartered in 1662. This was succeeded in 1672 by the Royal African Company, which enlarged and strengthened Cape Coast Castle until it was the best on the coast, and also built forts at Dixcove, Sekondi, Kommenda, Anamabo, Winnebah, and Accra. This was again succeeded in 1750 by the African Company of Merchants, which was constituted by Act of Parliament, with liberty to trade and form establishments on the West Coast of Africa between 20° N. and 20° S. lat. The settlements were in 1821 transferred to the Crown, and placed under the government of Sierra Leone, from which they were finally separated in 1874 under the title of Gold Coast Colony. The Dutch and English forts were intermingled until 1867, when an exchange was effected which gave all those on the west of the Sweet River to the Netherlands, and those on the east to Great Britain. In 1872 the Dutch transferred all their forts to Great Britain, which had previously, in 1850, bought the Danish forts. It was out of this transfer that the Ashanti war of 1873-4 arose, as the King of Ashanti, who had always been on good terms with the Dutch, feared that he would be cut off from the sea.

The trade is principally with the United Kingdom. Gold is found in considerable quantities, and diamonds were discovered in 1919; there are also large deposits of high-grade manganese. The principal exports in 1919 were: cocoa, £8,278,000; gold and gold dust, £1,403,760; palm kernels, £253,248; and kola nuts, £350,249. The chief imports are textiles, building materials, provisions, kerosine, and hardware. The climate, generally, is hot and moist and very malarious, but is becoming annually less unhealthy by the aid of medical science and sanitation. The Government assists the missionaries in educational matters, and has established schools of its own. Great efforts are being made to improve the sanitary condition of the coast towns. The principal towns are lighted and policed. The total tonnage of shipping entered and cleared in 1919 was 1,670,805 (British 1,404,715), in 1918, 983,994 (British 953,164). 2,600 miles of telegraphs have been established in the colony, of which 290 miles are in Ashanti and 203 miles in the Northern Territories. There is a wireless telegraph station at Accra. A Government railway runs from Sekondi through Tarkwa, the centre of the gold-mining industry, to Kumasi (168 miles). Another line runs from Accra to Tafo (65 miles), and further developments are being surveyed.

The seat of government is Accra* (population 19,588). The other principal towns are: Cape Coast (11,269), Ada (1,572), Elmina (5,079), Sekondi (9,122), Tarkwa (2,426), Kwitta (3,630), Axim (3,285), Kumasi (18,853), Saltpond (3,540), and Winnebah (5,840). The government is administered by a Governor, aided by a nominated Executive Council. There is a Legislative Council of 12 official and 9 unofficial members.

HONG KONG

The Crown Colony of Hong Kong consists of a number of islands situated off the south eastern coast of China at the mouth of the Canton River in 22° 10—22° 34 N lat and 113° 52—114° 30 E long and of a portion of the mainland

Hong Kong is an island about 10 miles long and from 2 to 6½ miles broad with a total area of 32 square miles, it lies close to the mainland, being separated at one point by a narrow strait (Lyee moon) not more than a quarter mile wide, and was first occupied by Great Britain in January 1841 and was formally ceded by the Treaty of Nankin in 1842. British Kowloon was subsequently acquired by the Peking Convention of 1860 and the New Territories, being a peninsula in the southern part of the Kwangtung province, by a lease signed June 9, 1898. The whole colony comprises an area of about 391 square miles, with an estimated population (1919) of 514,600, of whom 501,000 were Chinese. The non-Chinese residents, excluding naval and military, numbered about 13,600

The capital of the colony is Victoria which lies along the northern shore of the island facing the mainland, and between the mainland and the city is the harbour, which is one of the finest in the world with a water area of some 10 square miles. With the exception of liquor and tobacco the port is free and is fortified. It possesses excellent docks capable of holding the largest vessels for the purposes of repair. There is a considerable ship repairing and construction industry. Shipping entered (1918) 14 759 095 tons (1919) 17 363 741 tons. A railway of which 23 miles belong to the Government runs from Kowloon to Canton the length north of the Sham Chun River (which is the boundary of the British territory) is controlled by the Chinese Government. A light railway runs through the fertile valleys of the north east portion of the New Territories from Lanling to Sha Tau Kok a distance of 7 miles. Good roads connect the principal districts with the railway.

The island is broken in shape and mountainous the highest point being Victoria Peak which is about 1 820 feet high. The Peak District is a favourite place of residence and is reserved for Europeans. The hot season lasts from May to October. During the winter months from November to March the climate is cooler drier and more invigorating. The average daily maximum temperature ranges from 87° in July to 63° in February and the average daily minimum temperature from 78° in July to 55 in February. The average annual rainfall is 84 in of which no less than 75 per cent falls between May and September when the S W monsoon prevails.

Hong Kong is the centre of a vast trade in many kinds of produce chiefly camphor coal cottons flour gunnies hides iron and steel goods leather matches oils rice silks sugar tea and tin.

Much encouragement is given by the Government to education in the colony. In 1919 there were 576 schools subject to Government supervision attended by 25 786 pupils. The University (opened in 1912) includes faculties of medicine engineering and arts.

Hong Kong is a Crown colony and its government is administered by a Governor aided by an Executive Council of 8 members together with a Legislative Council of 14 members including himself a representative from the Chamber of Commerce and a representative of the Justices of the Peace. There is also a Sanitary Board, partly elected which controls all sanitary measures.

KENYA

Kenya, formerly "The East Africa Protectorate" includes the whole of the coast from the Umba to the Juba River, as also the vast territories in the interior bounded in part by international conventional lines. The eastern boundary was defined along the Juba and north east by an agreement with Italy (1891) and on the north by an agreement with Abyssinia in 1908. On the west the Colony adjoins Uganda and on the south the Portuguese colony of Mozambique.

A great portion of this vast region consists of pasture lands or barren wastes but there are not lacking extensive districts of great natural fertility on the coast as well as in the interior. The Colony is divided for administrative purposes into eight provinces which are subdivided into districts and sub-districts (1) Seyidie (2) Ukamba (3) Jubaland (4) Tuba land (5) Kenya (6) Naivasha (7) Nyanza and (8) Northern Frontier District of which the centres of administration are respectively Mombasa Nairobi Lamu Kismayu Nyeri Naivasha Kisumu and Moyale. Of the provinces Ukamba and Naivasha are best suitable to colonisation by Europeans. There is also a considerable region still undeveloped and not yet included in any administrative district. The population of the Colony has been estimated lately at 4 000 000 but no accurate census has ever been taken. Its area is approximately 200 000 square miles.

Kenya also includes the Witu Protectorate a small tract of country at the mouth of the river Tana. Witu is regarded for administrative purposes as part of Jubaland.

Mombasa which is connected with Europe by telegraph possesses perhaps the finest harbour on the east coast of Africa (population about 30 000 of whom 300 are Europeans). There is also telegraphic communication along the coast between Mombasa and Lamu and between Mombasa and Entebbe the capital of the Uganda Protectorate. There are also extensions radiating from the main Uganda Railway telegraph system to Taveta Fort Hall West Kenia Archers Post Southern Masai Reserve Lidima Ravine Kericho Nasin Gishu Machakos Kisii and Mumias also telegraph connexion between Mombasa and Tanga. Radio telegraph stations exist at Mombasa and Kismayu. The Uganda Railway has its terminus at Mombasa which is connected with the mainland by a railway bridge 1 732 feet in length. Nairobi the capital of the Colony and central station of the Uganda Railway has a population of about 25 000 of whom 1 200 are Europeans. There are also some 400 European farmers in the immediate neighbourhood of Nairobi.

The principal exports are hides and skins grain rubber fibre and copra. The principal imports are piece goods rice grain and flour building materials European provisions &c.

The importation of arms and ammunition is prohibited except under the most stringent regulations and the introduction and local manufacture of spirits is also heavily checked.

Communication with England by Union Castle Line via Suez Canal.

LEEWARD ISLANDS

The Leeward Islands of the West Indies under British authority consist of the 5 presidencies of (1) Antigua with Barbuda and Redonda (2) St Christopher and Nevis with Anguilla (3) Dominica (4) Montserrat and (5) the Virgin Islands with Sombrero under Commissioners all except the latter having their own local Legislature. These 5 presidencies are administered by a Governor to whom the Administrators and Commissioners are subordinate and there is also a General Legislative Council, possessing concurrent legislative powers with the local Legislatures on certain subjects. The population of the federal colony at the census of 1911 was 127 189. The General Legislative Council consists of 8 ex-officio and 8 elective members with the Governor as President.

MALAYA

(1) THE FEDERATED MALAY STATES

These States are situated on the mainland of the Malay Peninsula, and are closely connected with the Straits Settlements, they consist of the States of Perak, Selangor, Negri Sembilan, and Pahang, which have by treaty (1895) renewed their engagements with the British Government, and are administered under the advice of a Chief Secretary to Government with Residents in each State subject to the instructions of the High Commissioner who is also Governor of the Straits Settlements. The total area of the Federation is 27,623 square miles, with a population in 1911 of 1,036,999. The principal towns are Kuala Lumpur (Sel.) pop. 46,718; Ipoh (Pk.), 23,978; Taiping (Pk.) 19,556; Kampar (Pk.), 11,604; Seremban (N.S.) 8,667, Klang (Sel.), 7,657; and Teluk Anson (Pk.) 6,927.

The first three States are on the west coast and extend from the border of Province Wellesley to that of the independent State of Johore. Pahang is on the east coast. All are governed by their native rulers under the above mentioned control.

There are 1,001 miles of railway all constructed from revenue including the Johore State Railway (120½ miles) which is leased from the Johore Government. There is through communication between Penang and Singapore. The West Coast Railway through Kedah and Perlis connects with the Southern Siamese Railways and affords direct communication with Bangkok. Eventually the journey between Bangkok and Penang will take 36 hours by rail instead of 6 days by sea. The East Coast Railway (now under construction) through Pahang and Kelantan will also connect the Federated Malay States and Siamese railway systems. There are 2,456 miles of road and 1,695 miles of bridle paths, while the principal rivers are navigable for small boats.

One of the regions contributing largely to the raw products of the British Empire is the Malay Peninsula and the most productive portion of the peninsula is that embraced by the four Federated Malay States. The territory is greatly endowed by having tin and plantation rubber as its two richest products but the figures given below show that it has other exports of great value.

With the growth of the rubber industry there has been a tendency to neglect some of the other products of the country such as indigo, coffee, sugar and pepper and it may be mentioned that as recently as 1910 no less than 420 tons of pepper and 9,332 tons of sugar were exported from the Federated Malay States apart from what was exported from other States of the peninsula. Gold has always been found in small quantities chiefly in Pahang and the export in 1919 amounted to 16,402 oz., compared with 16,875 oz. in 1918, 16,967 oz. in 1917 and 16,161 oz. in 1916.

	1917 tons.	1918 tons	1919 tons
Rubber	80,022	78,389	106,453
Tin and tin ore	53,573	50,983	49,364

The climate is very uniform, and may be described as hot and moist. There is no well-marked dry season, and the rainfall in the low country is about 95 inches. The average maximum shade temperature is 90°, and the minimum 70°.

The States are policed by a mixed force of Indians and Malays, officered by Europeans.

(2) THE MALAY STATES NOT INCLUDED IN THE FEDERATION.

The Malay States not included in the Federation consist of Johore, Kedah, Perlis, Kelantan, and Trengganu. The relations of Johore with Great Britain are defined in the Treaty of Dec. 11, 1885, as amended by an agreement dated May 12, 1914, whereby the Sultan accepts, and acts upon, the advice of a British officer called the General Adviser. In respect of the other four States, the rights of Suzerainty, protection, administration and control were transferred by Siam to Great Britain by the Anglo-Siamese Treaty of March 10, 1909.

In all these States the trade is almost entirely carried on with the Straits Settlements. Currency, weights and measures are the same. The religion is Muhammadism.

JOHORE, with an area of 9,000 square miles and a population (Census, 1911) of 280,412, occupies the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula. Capital: Johore Bahru, population, 9,359. The rubber estates are important.

KEDAH, between 5° 5′ – 6° 35′ N., lies on the west coast of the peninsula, and includes the Langkawi group of islands. The population in 1911 was 245,986, and the approximate area 3,800 sq. miles. Rice is the principal crop in North Kedah, while coco- and betel-nut and rubber are cultivated in South Kedah. The capital is Alor Star, 8 miles inland on the Kedah River, with a population of about 12,000. The powers of the Sultan have owing to illness, been vested in a Regent, who is assisted by a Council. There are 38 British officials, employed in the Public Works, Survey, Police, and Medical departments.

MALTA,

an island in the Mediterranean Sea 58 miles from Sicily and about 180 from the African coast about 17 miles in length and 9 in breadth and having an area of 91¹ square miles The colony includes also the adjoining island of Gozo with an area of 24½ square miles Comino—the site of the Sultan's disaster in 1889 and now a sanitary station—and several islets The estimated civil population of the whole group on April 1 1918 was 224 323 In religion the Maltese are Roman Catholics The lower orders are mainly Punic in race The Maltese dialect which is generally spoken, is of Semitic origin and is held by some to be derived from the Carthaginian and Arabic tongues The upper classes are mostly descendants of those who sought the protection of the Order of St John during the Middle Ages from all parts of Southern Europe They speak English and Italian There is a Maltese order of nobility consisting of 29 families

The climate although not tropical is very hot in summer The mean temperature for the summer months in 1917 (June July August and September) was 76 1° In winter the range is from 50 6° to 58 8 In 1917 18 the highest temperature in the shade was 93 6 and the lowest 41 2

The islands are highly cultivated The chief products are corn oranges, melons, grapes forage cummin seed onions and potatoes figs and honey are plentiful The principal occupation of the people is in connexion with shipping about 8 000 females being occupied in making lace

The principal harbour is one of the finest in the world it is very deep, and large vessels can anchor alongside the shore It is an important port of call for vessels passing to and from the East and the Suez Canal being about half way between Gibraltar and Port Said There is an extensive arsenal and important dockyard, Malta being the headquarters of the Mediterranean Fleet, and an additional graving dock was opened on Feb 12, 1892 There is also a hydraulic dock, originally constructed by private enterprise, which has been taken over by the Admiralty Two new dry docks and both arms of the breakwater at the mouth of the principal harbour have now been completed

Citta Vecchia, the former capital of the island, contains the ancient palace of the courts of justice, the Cathedral, and the Seminary its population has now dwindled to about 436, but its suburb, Rabato had about 9,474 inhabitants in 1916–17 Citta Vecchia has been entirely eclipsed in importance by the modern capital of Valletta which was founded in 1566

Malta possesses a University and Lyceum, 168 elementary and infant schools, 2 secondary schools, and 39 night schools maintained at a total cost to the Government of £38,877 in 1917 18 in addition there are garrison schools, a Dockyard school and 71 private schools which receive no grants in aid from the Government

The island of Malta is said to have been converted to Christianity on the occasion of the shipwreck of St Paul in 58 A D In the Dark Ages it was taken by the Moors its commerce was destroyed and it was used mainly as a base for piratical expeditions In 1090 it was again brought under Christian rule being conquered by the Norman Count Roger of Sicily For 440 years it followed the fortunes of that kingdom but was in 1530 handed over to the Knights of St John, who made of it a stronghold of Christianity In 1565 it sustained the famous siege when the last great effort of the Turks was successfully withstood by Grand Master La Vallette The Knights expended large sums in fortifying the island and carrying out many magnificent works until they were expelled by Napoleon in 1798 The Maltese rose against the French garrison soon afterwards and with the assistance of some British and Neapolitan troops compelled the French to capitulate in 1800. The islands were then ceded to Great Britain the cession being confirmed by the Treaty of Paris of 1814

The government is administered as regards Imperial affairs by a Governor who is usually a distinguished General assisted by an Executive Council Under the Constitution of 1920 there is an elected Legislative Assembly for purely local affairs which are controlled by a Ministry responsible to the Legislature

In 1917 18 the Port of Valletta was entered by 457 vessels (tonnage 563 301)

MAURITIUS

Mauritius is an island lying in the Indian Ocean, 550 miles east of Madagascar, between 57° 17′–57° 46′ E. long. and S. lat. 19° 58′—20° 33′, and comprising an area of 720 square miles. The permanent population at the Census of 1911 was 370,393, of whom 257,887 were Indians, the majority born in the Colony and the remainder mainly of French or mixed descent.

Mauritius was discovered between the years 1507 and 1528 by the Portuguese, but they never formed any settlement on it. The Dutch visited it in 1598 and named it Mauritius, in honour of the Stadtholder Prince Maurice of Nassau. In 1644 they established a small colony on the shore, but in 1710 they abandoned the island and in 1715 the French took possession of it and changed the name to Ile de France. Under the French it became a great centre of trade, but in 1789 the seat of French Government in the East was removed to it from Pondicherry, and it was taken by a British force in 1810. The French language and French law have been preserved under British rule, when the ancient name, Mauritius, was restored.

Of the total cultivated area of 209,065 arpents, 168,670 are under sugar, 20,000 under fibre, and 20,395 under other crops. The necessaries of life have all to be imported from abroad. Rice and grain are obtained from India, flour and frozen meat from Australia, oxen from Madagascar, and minor imports from South Africa and elsewhere. The chief trade of the island is with India. Being just within the tropics it has a hot climate, but, except in Port Louis and some of the low-lying districts, it is not unhealthy. The island is subject to cyclonic disturbances, and a hurricane in 1892 was particularly severe.

There is an excellent harbour on the N.W. coast, on which the capital, Port Louis, stands, and the annual trade of the island passes almost entirely through Port Louis. The shipping entered and cleared, in 1919, amounted to 648,358 tons, of which 76·65 per cent. was British. In 1919 there were 143½ miles of railway (119¼ of 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge and 24 of 2 ft. 6 in.). 60 post offices, 57 telegraph and 42 Government telephone offices in the island, with 665 miles of telegraph, including block telegraph for the railway, and 142 miles telephone wires (Government).

The Government is administered by a Governor, aided by an Executive Council of four official members, and of such other persons in the service of the Government as the Governor, through instructions of the Secretary of State, may from time to time appoint; and a Legislative Council of 27 members, eight being ex-officio, nine nominated by the Governor and 10 elected by a moderate franchise. Port Louis has two members, and each of the country districts one.

The inhabitants of European descent are mostly Roman Catholic. Education has two branches.—(1) Superior or Secondary Instruction, to which is attached the Government Royal College and the Associated Schools; (2) Primary Instruction, consisting of the Government schools and the grant-in-aid schools. The total expenditure on education in 1918–19 amounted to Rs. 679,649. Of the pupils in the Government and aided schools 59 per cent. are Roman Catholics, 2 per cent. Church of England, 1 per cent. other Christian denominations, 11 per cent. Muhammadans, and 27 per cent. Hindus and others.

MESOPOTAMIA

Mesopotamia, 'the land between the rivers (Euphrates and Tigris), extends from Kurdistan on N and N E to the Persian Gulf on the S and S E, and from Persia on E to Syria and the Arabian Desert on W, the approximate position being between 37½° to 48½° E long, and from 37° 30' to 30° N lat The territory was freed from Turkish rule during the War of 1914 18 by Anglo Indian and British Dominion troops under Generals Nixon Maude and Marshall (Gen Maude succumbing to cholera after the capture of Baghdad) Under the Treaty of Peace with the Allies (1920) Turkey renounced the sovereignty over Mesopotamia and its future administration has been entrusted to Great Britain by the Supreme Council of the Allies

The total area of the districts comprised within the British Mandatory Sphere is about 150 000 sq miles, the distance from Basra in the south to Mosul in the north being approximately 500 miles The sphere comprises the former Turkish vilayets of Mosul Baghdad and Basra At the Census of 1920 the population was ascertained to be 2 849 282, as under —

Baghdad vilayet	1 360,304
Basra vilayet	785 600
Mosul vilayet	703 378

The Baghdad vilayet includes the Baghdad Samarra, Diyalah Kut Diwaniyah, Shamiyah, Hillah and Dulaim Divisions Basra vilayet includes Basra, Amara and Muntafik and Mosul includes Mosul, Arbil, Kirkuk and Suleimani (Mosul covers a great part of the ancient kingdom of Assyria, the ruins of the Assyrian capital being visible on the banks of the Tigris, opposite Mosul)

Of the total population there were in 1920 1,246,685 Sunni Muhammadans 1,494 015 Shiite Muhammadans, 87,488 Jews, 78,792 Christians, and 43,302 other religions.

Mesopotamia is capable of supporting a population many times in excess of its present inhabitants if irrigation is developed and extended In 1908 certain works were undertaken, following on the report of Sir W Willcocks, and since the British occupation notable improvements have been effected the Irrigation Department is at present confining itself to small and immediately remunerative schemes The wealth of the country depends entirely upon agricultural development, and two harvests can be gathered in the year, the chief crops being wheat barley and beans, and rice, peas and Indian corn wheat averages 464lb per acre, barley 612lb and rice over 1,000lb In 1918-19 there were 1,547,000 acres (deriving their water from the Tigris and Euphrates) under general cultivation an increase of 64 per cent on the previous year Cotton growing is a developing industry and it is estimated that Mesopotamia could yield 300,000 bales annually if sufficient labour is forthcoming. The country is being opened up and existing communications improved and secured Schools, hospitals and dispensaries have been established under British auspices Basra was equipped with wharves railway sidings, &c for military purposes, and is thus suited for commerce The chief imports are textiles sugar, and tea, and the chief exports are dates and piece goods

The Euphrates (which has a total length of 1 800 miles from its source to its outflow in the Persian Gulf) is formed by two arms of which the Murad Su (415 miles) rises in the slopes of the Ala Dagh a mountain of Eastern Erzerum, and flows westwards to a junction with the Kara Su, or Frat Su (375 miles) the latter rising in the north west of Erzeroum in the Dumlu Dagh The Tigris has a total length of 1 150 miles from its source to its junction with the Euphrates at Garmat Ali 70 miles from the Persian Gulf and rises in two arms south of the Taurus mountains in Kurdistan uniting at Til where the boundaries of the vilayets of Diarbekir, Van and Bitlis conjoin.

The Baghdad Railway —In 1899 the Anatolian Railway Company obtained a concession from the Sultan of Turkey for the construction of a railway from Konieh (the eastern terminus of the Anatolian Railway), to the Persian Gulf at Koweit viâ Baghdad a total length of 1 550 miles, with a single track of 4 ft 8½ in gauge Its projected course was from Konieh to Adana thence S E to Aleppo Jerablus (where it would cross the Euphrates and enter Mesopotamia) and Mosul and thence S down the right bank of the Tigris to Baghdad and the Persian Gulf As this scheme was under German control the British Government (on account of the paramount interests in the Persian Gulf of British India) declined to be a party to it and a new financial scheme was substituted in which 40 per cent of the capital was to be German and 20 per cent French while the Basra section of the line was to be under British control The first section, Konieh Eregli Bulgurlu (124 miles) was opened in Oct 1904 and at the outbreak of the War of 1914 18 about 1 200 miles (out of the total of 1 550 miles) were in operation with gaps in important sections (notably in the hills N W of Aleppo, and in the Mesopotamian desert W & S of Mosul) The line crosses the Euphrates on a wooden bridge at Jerablus At Aleppo there is a connexion with the Pilgrims' line from Medina (through Damascus and Homs to Aleppo) and, when completed, the railway will be served by the port of Alexandretta (Iskanderun) in the French mandatory sphere of Cilicia. The first through train from Basra to Baghdad left Basra on Jan 13, 1920. The total length of line open at that date was 945 miles compared with 1 113 miles during the War, some unimportant lines having been disused since the cessation of hostilities with Turkey.

The chief city is Baghdad the former capital of the Abbasside dynasty, one of the Caliphs of that dynasty being Haroun al Raschid of "the Arabian Nights." Baghdad has an estimated population of 170,000 other towns being Basra, 85,000 and Mosul (opposite the site of Nineveh) 90,000.

NIGERIA

The Colony and Protectorate of Nigeria includes the territories situated on the Bight of Benin, between Dahomey on the west and the Kameruns on the east. The Protectorate is in two main divisions, the Northern Provinces and the Southern Provinces, of which the northern group coincides with the former Protectorate of Northern Nigeria, and the southern group with the former Protectorate of Southern Nigeria. The headquarters of Government is at Lagos. The area of the whole territory is 336,000 sq miles, and the population roughly 16,500,000.

The chief industry is agriculture and crops consist of cotton, cocoa, ground nuts, maize, guinea corn millet, rice, coffee, yams, cassava, and tobacco. The natural products exported are palm oil and kernels, gum copal rubber, mahogany, shea nuts, hides and skins, and the export of ground-nuts is steadily increasing. A considerable industry has arisen in connexion with tin mining in the Northern Provinces. The Udi coalfields are of great extent and the coal is of excellent quality. A railway is in operation between Lagos and Kano, a distance of 705 miles. Branch lines run from Minna to Baro (on the Niger), and from Zaria to Bukuru. Another railway line runs from Port Harcourt, at the head of the Bonny estuary, to the coal fields at Udi (150 miles) and further railway extensions are in progress. Centres of trade are Lagos, Abeokuta, Ibadan, Oshogbo, Illorin, Zaria, Kano, Onitsha, Lokoja, Warri, Bonny, Sapele, Calabar, Opobo, Forcados, and Port Harcourt.

The principal imports are cotton goods, provisions, spirits, hardware, cutlery, cycles, kerosene, tobacco, building material, soap, and haberdashery.

NYASALAND PROTECTORATE.

This country was proclaimed a British Protectorate on May 14 1891. The Protectorate comprises the eastern shore of Lake Nyassa and the Country southwards nearly to the Zambesi.

The population of the Protectorate is estimated at 1,217 107 including 724 Europeans and 407 Asiatics, and it has a total area of 39 573 square miles.

The principal exports are cotton, tobacco, chillies, coffee, ground nuts, fibre, and tea. The cultivation and export of cotton and tobacco are considerable, and there are prospects of a steady development of these industries. Ivory and rubber are also exported. The principal imports are soft goods, provisions, and hardware. On Lake Nyasa there are seven steamers.

There are also twenty three steamers on the Zambesi and Shire rivers plying between Chinde and the railway terminus At Chinde situated in Portuguese territory at the mouth of the Zambesi, is a piece of land leased from the Portuguese Government, where goods intended for the Protectorate may be transhipped free of duty

Chief towns —Blantyre (population about 281 Europeans and 7 000 natives) and Zomba the headquarters of the Government A railway from Port Herald (the inland port of the Protectorate) to Blantyre (113 miles) is open for traffic An extension from Port Herald to Chindio on the Zambesi (61 miles) was opened to traffic in 1915, and further extensions to Beira and to Fort Johnston on Lake Nyasa are projected Main roads and "carrier roads are open all over the Protectorate the total mileage being 3 425

Mails to and from England are despatched every week via Cape Town and Beira Between Chinde and Europe the means of communication are the Union Castle Mail S S Co Messrs Rennie s Line via Natal and the British India Steam Navigation Co The Protectorate is connected by telegraph overland with the Cape via Fort Salisbury and with the Portuguese wires to Chinde and Quilimane The African Trans Continental Telegraph Company s line has now been extended northwards as far as Fort Jameson on Lake Tanganyika

PALESTINE AND HAIFA

Palestine and Haifa, extending from the Mediterranean on W to an eastern boundary formed by the Wady Arabah, Dead Sea River Jordan and Sea of Tiberias, and from the Egyptian frontier on S to the French Mandatory Sphere of the Great Lebanon on N, include part of the former Turkish vilayet of Lebanon and the sanjak of Jerusalem (El Kuds) This district is under British administration since the conquest of the country by the forces of General Allenby in 1918 and consists of a W maritime lowland, the mountain region of Judah (which forms the backbone of the district) and on the E, the depression through which the Jordan wends its way from the Sea of Galilee (Tiberias) to the Dead Sea The Dead Sea 1,292 feet below the level of the Mediterranean, is 46 miles long and has an average width of 8½ miles, it receives the waters of the Jordan and of six other rivers, and has no outlet, the surplus being carried off by evaporation Its water is intensely salt and has a specific gravity one sixth greater than water, with 24 per cent of salt (The Great Salt Lake of Utah, U S A, is 80 miles long and 30 miles wide, at 4,218 feet above mean sea level, and contains 25 per cent of salt) The country is generally fertile, and wheat, wine olives and various fruits are produced, while sheep and goats thrive in the lowlands (and in the mountains during times of drought) The area of the Mandatory Sphere is about 7,000 square miles, with a population of about 800,000, of whom 90 per cent are Muhammadans, 3 per cent Christians and 7 per cent Jews The chief ports are Acre, Haifa and Joppa There are railways from Haifa running N to Damascus and E across the Jordan, and from Joppa to Jerusalem these are connected by the "Milk and Honey" line running N from the Egyptian frontier (the rails being carried across the Suez Canal on a swing bridge at Kantara), and by a line from the Joppa Jerusalem railway running N to the Great Plain of Esdraelon (or Megiddo), the scene of the final overthrow of Turkish rule at the decisive battle of Sept. 19, 1918.

Palestine and Haifa are divided into 10 administrative districts, under Governors (Haifa, Galilee, Jenin, Nablus, Tulkeram, Jaffa, Jerusalem, Gaza, Hebron and Beersheba). Arabic, English and Hebrew are the official languages of the country The chief town, Jerusalem (Military Governor, Col Ronald Storrs, C M G, C B E) which has been in Moslem hands since 1244, and under Turkish rule since 1517, surrendered to General Allenby on Dec 9, 1917, to be entered the next day by British troops The city, which occupies so prominent a place in the affections of the Christian, Muhammadan and Jewish peoples has been placed under a separate governor and plans for restoration have been drawn up The population of the city was estimated in 1919 at 100,000 The Church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem is visited annually by large bands of Christian pilgrims, principally of the Orthodox and Coptic churches The site of Solomon's Temple is occupied by the Mosque of Omar which contains a relic of Mahomet and the sacrificial stone of Abraham Bethlehem, the scene of Christ's Nativity is 5 miles S of Jerusalem The Church of the Nativity at the E end of the present village is reputed to be the oldest Christian church in existence King David was also born in Bethlehem Nazareth, about 25 miles S W of the Sea of Galilee had a population of about 20,000 in 1919 Other large towns are Joppa (50 000), Gaza (40 000) Acre (12 000), and Haifa (12,000) The Jewish schools at Haifa have been purchased from the German Hulfsverein and presented to the Zionist Organization probably the best known of all the solitary islands in the world, is situated in the South Atlantic Ocean, 955 miles S of the Equator 760 S E of Ascension 1 140 from the nearest point of the African Continent 1 800 from the coast of S America and 4 477 from Southampton in 15° 55′ S lat and 5 42 W long It is 10½ miles long 6½ broad and encloses an area of 47 square miles with a population (Census 1911) of 3,520 St Helena is of volcanic origin and consists of numerous rugged mountains the highest rising to 2 700 feet interspersed with picturesque ravines The climate vies with that of Madeira in point of salubrity and evenness of temperature Although within the tropics the south-east trades keep the temperature mild and equable The thermometer goes up to 84° in the town at the sea level but in the country 1 800 feet above the sea the maximum is about 74 and the mean temperature ranges from 57 in September to 66 in March there being very little difference between night and day the lowest temperature in winter is 51° and the total rainfall (1917) 49 43 inches St Helena was discovered by the Portuguese navigator Juan de Nova Castella, on May 21 1502 (St Helena's Day) and remained unknown to other European nations until 1588 It remained uninhabited until the Dutch colonised it circ 1645 The English East India Company seized it in 1651, but it was retaken by the Dutch in 1672. In 1673 it was again taken from the Dutch and was held by the Company, who had obtained a charter for its possession from Charles II, until 1834 (with the exception of the period 1815 to 1821, during which the British Government held it as a residence for the Emperor Napoleon, who died there May 5 1821), when it was ceded by them to the Crown It was formerly an important station on the route to India, but its prosperity received a fatal blow by the cutting of the Suez Canal and it is now frequented only by a few sailing ships homeward bound from the East Indies. A phormium (flax fibre) industry and lace making, both under Government control, were established during 1907. St. James's Bay on the north west of the island, possesses a good anchorage.

The government is administered by a Governor with the aid of an Executive Council of 4 members, the Governor alone making all ordinances.

Sarawak is a state on the north west coast of the island of Borneo, with a seaboard of 400 miles, an area of about 42,000 square miles, and a population of about 600,000, composed of various races. The territory of the Raja of Sarawak extends from Cape Datu in the south to the Lawas District where it touches the boundary of British North Borneo. The southern boundary is formed by three ranges, the Serang Kelinghang and Batang Lupar mountains the eastern boundary is a broken range of mountains with peaks rising to 10,000 feet. The principal rivers are the Rejang (navigable for about 160 miles) the Baram (navigable for about 100 miles) the Batang Lupar and the Limbang. Kuching, the capital, stands on a small river (the Sarawak) which is navigable from its mouth to Kuching (20 miles). The government consists of a hereditary sovereign and a Supreme Council of 9 (4 Europeans and 5 Malay magistrates) and a General Council of 50, composed of European and Malay officials and native chiefs, meeting every 3 years. The civil service is composed of English officials to the number of 50, appointed by the sovereign. The government of Sarawak was obtained in 1842 from the Sultan of Borneo by the late Sir James Brooke who became well known as Rajah Brooke of Sarawak. Other concessions have been made in 1861, 1882, 1884, and 1890 when the Limbang River was obtained. The Lawas River was added in 1904. The country produces sago gutta percha india-rubber bees wax birds' nests oil gold, silver diamonds antimony quicksilver tobacco rice, rattans, coal gamboir and pepper. A large petroleum field has been discovered in the Baram district, and is now a valuable asset. Gold exports (1913) $1 077 400 (1915) $1,256,500. (1916) $1 209,050 (1917) $675 600 (1918) $923 100. SEYCHELLES

The Seychelles Islands, in the Indian Ocean, which number altogether 90, were occupied by the French about 1742 (annexed by a British ship in 1794 and were finally assigned to Great Britain in 1814. By letters patent of Sept. 1903 they were erected into a separate colony. The principal islands of the group are Mahé Praslin, Silhouette, Curieuse and La Digue and the total area of the islands with dependencies, is estimated at 148½ square miles, of which Mahé occupies nearly 56 square miles. The population of all the islands (Census 1911) was 22,691 (Mahé 17 721 Praslin 2,018 La Digue 1,364, other islands 1,588), an increase since the Census of 1901 of 3,454. Victoria, the capital on the N.E. side of Mahé, has an excellent harbour it is an Admiralty coaling station, and depôt for patent fuel. Although only 4°8 of the Equator the islands are very healthy, the death rate in 1917 being 20 63 per 1,000. There are 22 Roman Catholic and Church of England primary schools, there is a Government college (King's College) and a school (Victoria School) maintained for higher education.

The principal exports are copra, vanilla coco nuts, coco nut oil, tortoise shell, cinnamon essential oils, soap, and guano Aldabra one of the dependencies of the Seychelles and about 680 miles from Mahé, is famous for the gigantic land tortoises, whilst the unique double coco nut Coco de Mer, is found in Mahé and in larger quantities in Praslin, where there is a famous valley The Governor is assisted by an Executive Council of 3 members (2 ex officio and 1 nominated) and by a Legislative Council of 3 official and 3 unofficial members

SIERRA LEONE

The peninsula of Sierra Leone situated on the West Coast of Africa was ceded to Great Britain in 1787 by the native chiefs for the purpose of being used as an asylum for the many destitute negroes then in England At a somewhat later date the Colony was used as a settlement for Africans from North America and the West Indies and great numbers of Africans rescued from slave ships have from time to time been liberated and settled there The Colony has a coast-line of 210 miles, with an estimated area of 4 000 square miles In 1911 its population was 75,572, of whom 650 were resident Europeans Of the rest, more than half are the descendants of liberated Africans, while the remainder belong to the neighbouring tribes A babel of tongues is thus to be heard in the streets of Freetown In 1896 a Protectorate was declared over the territory adjoining the Colony to the northward and eastward The extreme depth of the Protectorate from north to south is about 210 miles, lying between 7° and 10° N lat, and the extreme breadth from east to west is 180 miles, between 10° 40′ and 13° 21′ of W long Its estimated area is 27,000 sq miles, and its population about 1,227,560 For administrative purposes it is divided into 5 districts, under District Commissioners, the principal peoples being the Limbas and Korankos in the north, the Temnes in the centre, and the Mendis in the south

The principal exports are palm kernels, kola nuts and palm oil, but ginger, plassava, hides, and rice are also exported The value of the palm kernels exported in 1919 reached £1,191,607 The chief imports are cotton goods, coal, apparel hardware, provisions, and tobacco Freetown the capital possesses the finest and most important harbour in West Africa

A railway runs inland from Freetown to Pendembu a distance of 227½ miles and a branch line 104 miles in length extends in a north easterly direction from Bola to Kamabai By the extension of the railway and the development of a system of roads in the Protectorate it is estimated that the output of Sierra Leone products into the European market is capable of being more than doubled There are 825 miles of combined telegraph and telephone service

Sierra Leone is a Crown Colony possessing a Legislative Council nominated by the Crown, and having full power to legislate for the Protectorate as well as for the Colony The Governor is advised by an Executive Council

BECHUANALAND.

(The Bechuanaland Protectorate.)

The Bechuanaland Protectorate is a country of British South Africa, in the centre of the vast tableland stretching north to the Zambesi.

The Protectorate is bounded on the south and east by the Cape and Transvaal Provinces of the Union, on the north and north-east by Rhodesia, Southern Rhodesia, the Zambesi and Chobe (Linyanti) Rivers, and on the west by South-West Africa. It is about 400 miles long and 450 mile shroad, with a total area of about 275,000 square miles. The population at the Census of May 7, 1911, was 125,350, of whom 1,692 were whites.

The climate is healthy during part of the year, but malarial fever is prevalent during February, March, and April. The country is essentially pastoral, although Kaffir corn, mealies, beans, pumpkins and melons are sown, and when the rainfall is adequate crops are reaped. Cattle thrive, and numbered 323,911 at the Census of 1911. Much of the country is thick bush. The High Commissioner for South Africa has the power of making laws by proclamation for the Protectorate, where he is represented by a Resident Commissioner. The population is almost entirely a native one, the principal tribes being those of Khama (Bamangwato), of Linchwe (Bakgatla), of Sebele II. (Bakwena), of Tshosa (Bangwaketsi), of Seboko Mokgosi (Bamalete), and of Mathibe (Batawana).

The railway from Kimberley to Vryburg and Mafeking traverses the Protectorate on its way to Rhodesia. There is a telegraph line from Cape Province through from Mafeking, viâ Gaberones and Francistown, to Bulawayoand Salisbury. The chief European centres are Lobatsi, Gaberones, Francistown, and Serowe, whither the Chief (Khama) and all his people moved a few years ago from Palapye The headquarters of the Protectorate Administration are at Mafeking, Cape Province.

AREA AND POPULATION.

	Sq m.	Pop
Southern Rhodesia (Salisbury)	149,000	788,500
Northern Rhodesia (Livingstone)	291,000	941,335

The total area of Rhodesia is about 440,000 square miles, the total population being estimated at 1,729,835 in 1919. The territory is named after Cecil Rhodes, the founder of the British South Africa Company, and extends from Lake Tanganyika and the Congo watershed in the north, to the Limpopo River in the south.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Railways.—The main arteries of communication are the Rhodesia and the Mashonaland Railways. The former is a continuation of the line from Cape Town to Vryburg, viâ Kimberley, and was opened to Bulawayo in November, 1897, the distance from Cape Town being 1,362 miles. A line connecting Bulawayo with Salisbury (301 miles) was completed in Oct. 1902. From Salisbury the Mashonaland Railway runs eastwards to Umtali and is continued by the Biera Railway Companies to the port of Beira (Portuguese), a total distance of 374 miles. The section from Bulawayo viâ the Wankie coalfields to the Victoria Falls (282 miles) was completed in June, 1904. The line crosses the Zambesi at the Victoria Falls, traverses Northern Rhodesia, and crossing the border (507 miles), extends a further 450 miles viâ Kambove to Bukania, in the Belgian Congo State. A branch line of standaid gauge (3 ft. 6 in.) runs from Salisbury to the Eldorado mine (78 miles), and has been extended to Sinoia (4 miles). A standard-gauge line leaves the Eldorado branch at Mt. Hampden Junction (13 miles from Salisbury) for the Shamva mines (73 miles). A line connects Gwelo with Selukwe (24 miles); another runs from Bulawayo viâ Gwanda to West Nicholson (104 miles), opening up the mining district to the south-east; another connects Bulawayo with the Matopo Hills, where the founder of Rhodesia and Sir Starr Jameson are buried, and a branch line from Gwelo to Umvuma has been extended to Victoria (123 miles).

Telegraphs.—The African Transcontinental Telegraph Line ("Cape to Cairo") has been constructed as far as Ujiji in East Africa, about 3,250 miles from the Cape.

SOUTHERN RHODESIA.

Area and Population.—The total area is 149,000 square miles, and the estimated population (1919) 788,500, of whom 38,300 are Europeans. The native population is estimated at 750,000, with 4,000 Asiatics and other coloured persons, including those of mixed race.

Constitution.—Southern Rhodesia is administered by the Company under the Charter of 1889, amplified from time to time by Orders in Council. The Administrator is advised by an Executive Council consisting of the Resident Commissioner and not less than three members, appointed by the Company with the approval of the Secretary of State for the Colonies. There is a Legislative Council consisting of the Administrator, the Resident Commissioner (ex officio), and 19 members, of whom six are nominated by the Company with approval of Secretary of State, and 13 are elected by the registered voters. A Supplemental Charter was issued on March 13, 1915, giving effect to the arrangement to which the Directors of the Company had agreed to render possible the establishment of Responsible Government in Southern Rhodesia, should the Legislative Council desire it, and should H.M. Government concur at some date other than that the Charter permits.

The laws in force in the Cape Colony up to June 10, 1891, were adopted for Southern Rhodesia, so far as they are applicable. Subsequent legislation has been by proclamation of the High Commissioner and by ordinances passed by the Legislative Council. Municipal self-government has been established in Salisbury, Bulawayo, Gwelo, Umtali, and Gatooma.

Industrial Progress.—Southern Rhodesia is rich in mineral deposits, and it abounds in traces of the ancient gold-workers. Though the climate is sub-tropical, the average altitude makes it well suited for European occupation, and for the cultivation of European fruit-trees, cereals, and vegetables, in addition to tobacco and the indigenous products of the country. The local breeds of cattle are constantly restocked by importation of pedigree stock.

The first regular crushing returns began in September, 1898, and the gold produced to December 31, 1919, was of the value of £45,227,791. The output for the year ended December 31, 1917, was valued at £3,495,391. Silver, copper, coal, diamonds, lead, chrome iron, asbestos, and other minerals have also been produced in considerable quantities.

SALISBURY, the seat of government, is situated on the Mashonaland plateau, 4,880 ft. above sea-level (white population, census, 1911, 3,979). BULAWAYO, the largest town in Matabeleland, 4,460 ft. above the sea-level, had a white population of about 4,800 in 1916.

NORTHERN RHODESIA.

This territory, a large portion of which was first opened to British influence by David Livingstone, is partly occupied by the native tribes living under their own chiefs, but large tracts are being opened up for European settlement. Over 1,000,000 acres of land are under settlement by white farmers, whose operations are chiefly stock-raising; over 50,000 head of cattle are being grazed by them. Extensive mineral deposits, copper in particular, have been discovered. Indigenous rubber is found in large areas. The country is well timbered, and well watered by the Zambesi and Kafue rivers and their affluents. There are large herds of native cattle (310,208 in 1919). Game is also abundant.

The total area is about 291,000 sq. miles, and the population was estimated in 1919 at 941,335, of whom 2,932 are Europeans.

SWAZILAND.

(The Swaziland Protectorate.)

Swaziland (called by the natives Kwa Ngwane) lies between the Drakensberg and Lebombo Mountains in British South Africa. The Transvaal Province forms a boundary on the south, west and north, the eastern boundary being Zululand (Province of Natal) and the Portuguese province of Mozambique (Delagoa Bay). By the Convention of 1894, Swaziland was placed under the administration of, but not incorporated with, the South African Republic; the British Government now controls the Territory. The total area is 6,678 square miles, and the estimated population 111,700, of whom 1,700 are whites, the remainder being Ama-Swazi Bantus (or Swazis). Swaziland is divi-ible into three longitudinal regions: the mountainous regions of the west, with an approximate altitude exceeding 4,000 feet; the Middle Veld, about 2,000 feet lower; and the Low Veld, bounded on the east by the Lebombo Mountains, with an average altitude not exceeding 1,000 feet. Except in the Low Veld the country is well watered and healthy.

A Special Court having the full jurisdiction of a Supreme Court, and Courts of Assistant Commissioners having a restricted jurisdiction, have been established. Native chiefs continue to exercise jurisdiction according to native law and custom in civil disputes between natives, subject to a final appeal to the Resident Commissioner. The Paramount Chief, Sobhuza, son of the late Paramount Chief Bunu, is about 21 years of age, and the regency is in the hands of his grandmother, Labotsibeni, widow of Mbandeni.

The numerous mineral and land concessions and monopolies granted by Mbandeni, of which many of the latter carried exemption from Customs dues or invested private individuals with powers properly exercisable by the Crown, rendered satisfactory government difficult. A Commission was therefore appointed under Proclamation to inquire into these concess ons and monopolies, and those conferring exclusive rights have been expropriated, compensation being made out of loans raised for the purpose. The Commission also determined the validity and extent of all concessions, and the agricultural and grazing rights of the natives have been fully safeguarded. A general survey of the country took place in connexion with the work of the Concessions Commission and the Special Commissioner.

The soil is generally fertile, particularly so in the Low and Middle Veld. The whole of the Territory forms excellent grazing for cattle, and cattle-ranching on a large scale has been commenced by several companies. There were about 280 000 head of cattle in the Territory at the end of March, 1920

In the winter season between 250 000 and 300,000 sheep are brought to Swaziland for grazing from the high table lands of the Eastern Transvaal The agricultural products are tobacco maize (the staple product) millet pumpkins ground nuts beans, and sweet potatoes grown in insufficient quantities to meet local requirements Most of the sub tropical fruits can be grown with success Large areas of land are suitable for growing cotton coffee and tea The country possesses considerable mineral wealth including gold tin coal and copper During the year ended March 31 1920 449 tons of cassiterite tin valued at £66 676 were exported A few gold mines were being worked on a small scale but these have had to close temporarily owing to the war

Mbabane the headquarters of the Administration is situated on the hills at an altitude of 4 000 feet At each of the district headquarters—Hlatikulu Stegi and Piggs Peak—there is a small number of Europeans in the vicinity of the station likewise at Bremersdorp the old head quarters of the Territory There are eleven schools for Europeans at various centres and the Government has established a school for natives at Zombode the kraal of the Regent at which until recently the young Paramount Chief (Sobhuza) attended There is also a school for coloured children Grants are also made to the various native purposes

There is a tri weekly communication by motor car between Mbabane and Carolina (82 miles) and between Mbabane and Bremersdorp (23 miles) Elsewhere the communication is by cart or runners There are 14 post offices, and a telegraph office at Mbabane Piggs Peak Bremersdorp and Ezulweni

SINGAPORE is an island situated off the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula, from which it is separated by a narrow strait about three-quarters of a mile in width, its length is about 27 miles, and its breadth 14 miles, it comprises, with the adjoining islets, an area of 217 square miles. It was first occupied in 1819, and formally ceded to the British Government by the Sultan of Johore in 1824. The seat of government for all the settlements is the town of Singapore, situated on the south side of the island in lat. 16 N. and long. 103° 53 E., with 303 321 inhabitants in 1911. The climate is fairly healthy for Europeans, except for the absence of any marked change of temperature throughout the year. The railway from Singapore to Bangkok was to be open for passenger traffic on July 1 1918.

The number of merchant vessels entered and cleared in 1919, exclusive of native craft was 11,245 with a tonnage of 14 088,775. The total for the whole colony was 16,578, with a tonnage of 18,885 183. The total native craft entered and cleared at all four ports Singapore, Penang Malacca Labuan during the same year was 63 770 (tonnage, 2,566,091). The harbour, in the extent of its shipping is one of the greatest ports in the world being a port of call for vessels trading between Europe or India and the Far East the North of Australia and the Netherlands Indies, and is strongly defended. The Tanjong Pagar docks and wharves were taken over by Government in 1905 at a cost (fixed by arbitration) of $29,000 000. The King's Dock (opened in 1913) is the largest east of Suez being 879 feet long, 100 feet wide, and 34 feet deep, its cost was $3 500 000.

Singapore is a free port, no duties are levied upon anything except opium, tobacco, spirits wines beer, and petroleum consumed in the colony. The trade returns aggregate for 1919 (including inter settlement trade) amounted to $1,498 966 248 (including the value of bullion and specie for the last half of the year only) the value of exported tin being $72,426,990.

Labuan is an island of the Malayan Archipelago, situated about 6 miles off the north west coast of Borneo in 5° 16' N lat and 155° 15 E long., and forms part of the Settlement of Singapore. Its area is about 28 square miles and its population is 6,546. It was ceded to Great Britain by the Sultan of Brunei in 1846 being at that time uninhabited. The island has a fine harbour. The exports consist of coal, cloth, rice sago, earthenware brassware, &c. Victoria Harbour, in the south east is the principal inlet, and affords good anchorage. There is a cable station of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company on the island. Imports (1919), $2,110,246, exports, $1 639 314.

Resident, J. W. Goldthorp.

The Cocos Keeling Islands are a group of about 20 small islands about 700 miles south west of Sumatra, and form part of the Settlement of Singapore. The population is about 700, and the island exports about 800 tons of copra. There is a station of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company on Direction Island.

CHRISTMAS ISLAND, in the Indian Ocean about 200 miles south west of Java, and 700 miles east of the Cocos Keeling Islands, has an area of about 56 square miles and a population of about 1 500. A District Officer is stationed on the island, which contains enormous phosphate deposits worked by the Christmas Island Phosphate Company. The amount exported in 1919 was 81 197 tons.

PENANG is the northernmost of the Settlements. It includes Penang or Prince of Wales's Island (population 1911 141,559), on the eastern side of which is Georgetown, the port and capital and the strip of mainland opposite known as Province Wellesley (population 1911, 128 978) and the Dindings. Penang Island about 15 miles long and 9 broad is situated off the west coast of the Malay Peninsula, in lat 5° 28 N., long 100 21' E. and was ceded to the Government of India in 1786 by the Raja of the neighbouring territory Kedah. Area 108 square miles. At the time it was founded Penang was the only British settlement in further India now it is the emporium for all the trade of the northern and more prosperous parts of Sumatra and the Malay Peninsula. Its aggregate trade for 1919 (including inter settlement trade) amounted to $389,043,436 the export of tin from the port being $57,374,408 in 1919.

Province Wellesley is a strip of coast about 45 miles in length with an area of 288 square miles, ceded by the Raja of Kedah in 1798, with some land S. of the Krian River acquired more recently. The province is in a high state of cultivation as compared with the neighbouring territory, containing rice, spices, tapioca, and rubber plantations.

The Dindings Territory (area 183 square miles population in 1911, 7,466) is at present little developed, but it contains what is considered the best natural port on the western side of the peninsula. The headquarters are at Lumut, where a District Officer is stationed, and steamers call regularly at Pangkor. The territory comprises a group of islands (of which Pangkor is the largest) and a strip of the mainland on the west coast of the peninsula, cut out of the State of Perak, and measuring about 22 miles long by about 10 miles in width.

MALACCA, the largest of the Settlements situated on the western coast of the peninsula, between Singapore and Penang and about 110 miles to the N.W. of Singapore comprises an area of about 720 square miles. It is one of the oldest European settlements in the East having been taken possession of by the Portuguese in 1511, and held by them till 1640, when the Dutch drove them out. In 1795 it was captured by the British, and retained till 1818 when it was restored to the Dutch, it finally became a British possession in pursuance of the treaty with Holland March 17, 1824 being exchanged for the British settlements in Sumatra. The population in 1911 was 124,082.

(Including para rubber $55 359 777 exported in 1919.)

Penang, 20 days, and Malacca, 23 days.

TANGANYIKA TERRITORY

TANGANYIKA TERRITORY formerly "German East Africa" was attacked by British and South African forces and conquered in 1918, the German forces surrendering near Abercorn in North-east Rhodesia on Nov. 23, 1918. Civil Administration was established pari passu with the conquest of the territory, and the whole Colony passed under the effective control of the present Administration at the beginning of 1919.

The country is now divided between the British and Belgians, the Belgian sphere of occupation including the provinces of Ruanda and Urundi, bordering on Lake Tanganyika, with headquarters at Kigali

Tanganyika Territory has a coast line of about 600 miles and an estimated area of 384,180 square miles The Sultan of Zanzibar's rights over the narrow strip of coast territory were acquired by Germany in 1890 for a payment of 4,000,000 marks The coast line extends from the mouth of the Umba to the mouth of the Rovuma River

The native population consists mostly of tribes of mixed Bantu race, and was enumerated for the whole area (Jan 1, 1913) at 7,659,898, the coloured population (other than native) being 14,898. According to German law every native born after 1905 is free, but a mild serfdom was continued under German rule The total white population was 5,356 in 1913 The native population in the British area is about 3,500,000

Education is not compulsory In 1913 there were 109 Government schools, including four for handicrafts, with 18 European and 159 native teachers and 6,177 pupils Five Protestant and three Roman Catholic missionary societies had schools with 108,551 pupils

Near the coast are forests of mangrove cocopalm, baobab, tamarind, &c, and in the higher regions the acacia, cotton tree, sycamore, banian and other trees, the area of Government forests being 652,067 acres There are a number of plantations of coco palms, coffee (on the higher lands), caoutchouc, sugar, cotton, cardamum and cinchona, while fibre plants (especially sisal) are successfully cultivated In 1912 there were 43,617 cattle, 41,647 sheep and goats in the possession of Europeans, and 3,950,250 cattle and 6 398,300 sheep and goats in the possession of natives Minerals known to exist within the Protectorate are coal, iron lead, copper, mica, and salt Agates, topaz, moonstones, tourmalin, and quartz crystals are found, and garnets in large quantities

The revenue of German East Africa for the year 1914 was put at £825 500, and the expenditure £1,188 500, and the Tanganyika Territory estimates for 1920–21 are Revenue (Ordinary), £671,620, extraordinary (grant in aid), £330,000, total, £1,001,620, expenditure £1,111,809 The imports in 1918 1919 were valued at £1,018 000, and in 1919 20 at £1,158,000, the exports were valued at £700 000 in 1918 19, and at £1,426 000 in 1919–20 The chief exports in 1919 20 were Sisal (16,744 tons, £436,000) cotton (1,629,851 lb, £62,000), hides (78,890 cwt, £227 000), skins (4,897 cwt, £29,000), copra (106,625 cwt, £105 090), coffee (78,530 cwt, £187,000), ghee (11,051 cwt, £40,000) wax (5,481 cwt £24 000), ground nuts (16,485 cwt, £18,000), grain (231,624 cwt, £91,000), sim sim (33 076 cwt, £35,000), rubber (2,141 cwt, £6,000), and ivory (257 cwt, £13,000), the chief imports in 1919 20 were cotton piece goods (£554,000) rice (£51,000), other food stuffs (£149,000), kerosene (£39,000) cigarettes (£32,000) tobacco (£27 000), spirits, wine and beer (£55,000) The trade is chiefly with Zanzibar, British East Africa and India

The chief seaports are Dar es Salaam, Bagamoyo, Saadani, Pangani, Kilwa, Lindi, Mikindani and Tanga, but few of these are accessible to ocean-going vessels, though gradual improvements are being introduced Wide well kept roads (on some of which rest-houses and stores are provided) run all through the colony. There are two railway lines in the Protectorate—the Usambara railway from Tanga to New Moshi (220 miles), commenced in 1905 and completed in Feb., 1912, and the Central railway (780 miles), from Dar es-Salaam to Kigoma, completed in Feb, 1914 There are also Government coasting and lake steamers. Dar-es-Salaam is in telegraphic communication with the coast towns, Zanzibar, Mombasa, and many inland centres There are 62 post offices and telegraph stations. Three Battalions of the King's African Rifles are stationed in Tanganyika Territory

In 1919 20, 59 steamers (exclusive of coastal boats) of 193,440 tons and 1792 vessels (dhows) of 46,157 tons entered the various ports from places beyond the territory

TOGOLAND.

(Joint Franco British Administration)

The former German colony of Togoland was conquered by Franco British forces during the war of 1914–18, and its administration has been entrusted to France and Great Britain jointly by the Supreme Council of the Allied Powers

Togoland is situated on the Gulf of Guinea between the (British) Gold Coast Colony and (French) Dahomey, and is bounded on the south by the Atlantic and on the north by (French) Upper Senegal Niger, and lies between 0° 15′ W.–2° E long and 6°–11° N lat at its extreme limits, the coast line being only 28 miles in extent (1° 14′–1° 38′ E long) The coast is fringed with lagoons, but for some 50 miles inland are undulating plains, which end in a plateau, about 1,000 feet in mean level, with Mount Agu (3,135 feet) and Mount Avaklu (3,250 feet) in the south west The country is watered by the Oti, which effects a confluence with the Volta at the western boundary of Togoland The area is 33,659 English square miles, with a population of about 1,000,000 The Christian element is small. Coffee, cocoa, cotton, maize, kola and other tropical products are abundantly cultivated, palm oil, palm kernels, rubber, cotton, maize, ground nuts, vegetable butter, fibre, indigo, kola nuts, ebony, and other forest products are exported (exports, 1919, £850,744). The imports (valued at £665,322 in 1919) are textiles, metals, hardware and spirits. The revenue exceeds the expenditure and the colony is in a very flourishing condition. About 220 miles of railway are open, lines running from the capital to Anecho and to Misahöhe and Atakpame.

In 1916 the whole territory was divided into a British Sphere and a French Sphere.

The British Sphere consists of an area of about 10,200 sq. miles with an estimated population of 200,000. No portion of the coast is included in the British area. The sphere is administered by the Government of the Gold Coast.

TRINIDAD and TOBAGO

TRINIDAD is the most southerly of the West India Islands. It is close to the north coast of the continent of S. America, the nearest point of Venezuela being 7 miles distant. It lies between 10° 3′—10° 50′ N. lat. and 60° 55′—61° 56′ W. long., and is about 69 miles in length by 54 in breadth with an area of 1,862 square miles (359,469 acres cultivated) and a population at the Census of 1911 of 333,552 (including Tobago). The estimated population on Dec. 31, 1918 was 381,309. The island was discovered by Columbus in 1498, was colonised in 1588 by the Spaniards and capitulated to the British under Abercromby in 1797. The chief town and port of entry, Port of Spain (pop. 67,874), is one of the finest towns in the West Indies with sewerage, electric lighting, tram and telephone services. Other towns of importance are San Fernando (pop. 9,852), about 30 miles south of the capital, Princestown (pop. 4,497) and Arima (pop. 4,020). A remarkable phenomenon is the asphalt lake near the village of La Brea, 120 acres in extent, containing an apparently inexhaustible supply. In 1918, 56,799 tons (£88,825) were exported. The soil is rich and productive, the most important products being sugar, cocoa, mineral oil, molasses, rum, copra, limes and coconuts, and various kinds of timber and fruits. The chief exports (1918) were sugar, 35,104 tons, value £821,068; rum, 145,035 gallons, value £89,590; molasses, 897,168 gallons, value £169,363; bitters, 25,960 gallons, value £25,960; cocoa, 58,638,562 lb., value £1,547,085; coconuts, 22,200,385, value £145,721; and copra, 5,231,991 lb., value £77,947. Coal is found in Manzanilla, and is indicated in other parts of the island. The petroleum industry has made considerable advance, boring operations being carried on by 12 different companies. There are 124 miles of railway open; electric lighting and tramway service and waterworks and sewage operations have been established. The island is crossed by the telegraph wire of the West India and Panama Company, by Government telegraph and private telephone wires. There is also wireless telegraphic communication between Trinidad and Tobago and between Trinidad and Demerara. The Government is vested in a Governor, an Executive Council and a Legislative Council, all of whom are nominated by the Crown.

OIL INDUSTRY.—The development of the oil fields is progressing satisfactorily. The number of Companies operating at the close of 1918 was twelve, and other substantial concerns are preparing to commence operations.

During 1918, 72,872,398 imperial gallons of crude oil were extracted, and of this 43,597,000 gallons were exported. Petrol, kerosene, and lubricating oil continue to be manufactured in local refineries: 2,741,622 imperial gallons of gallons of lubricating oil were exported in 1918.

Tobago was annexed in 1889 to the Government of Trinidad and on Jan. 1, 1899 it was constituted a ward of that island. It is between 11° 9′ N. lat. and 60° 43′ W. long., about 75 miles south-east of Grenada, 18 miles north-east of Trinidad and 120 miles S.S.W. of Barbados, is 26 miles long and from 6 to 7½ broad and has an area of 114 square miles with a population (Census 1911) of 23,587. It is one of the most healthy of the West Indies, the temperature varies from 81° to 88°.

There are two towns in the island, viz. Scarborough (pop. 729) and Plymouth (pop. 535).

TRISTAN DA CUNHA

is the chief of a group of islands of volcanic origin lying in lat. 37° 6′ S. and long. 12° 2′ W., discovered in 1506 by a Portuguese admiral (Triśão da Cunha), after whom they are named. The population numbers about 100, and the inhabitants are said to be very long lived. The principal settlement (Edinburgh) is in the north-west of the island. In spite of periods of distress the inhabitants refuse to leave the island for the Cape of Good Hope, to which they are attracted by offers of land

INACCESSIBLE ISLAND is a lofty mass of rock with sides 2 miles in length, the island is the resort of penguins and sea fowl

THE NIGHTINGALE ISLANDS are three in number, of which the largest is 1 mile long and ¾ m wide and rises in two peaks 960 and 1 105 ft above the sea level respectively The smaller islands Stoltenhoff and Middle Isle are little more than huge rocks Numbers of seals and sea elephants visit these islands

GOUGH ISLAND (or Diego Alvarez) in 40° 20 S and 9° 44′ W lies about 250 miles S S E of Tristan da Cunha The island is about 8 miles long and 4 miles broad, with a total area of 40 square miles, and has been a British possession since 1816 The island is the resort of penguins and has valuable guano deposits There is no permanent population

TURKS AND CAICOS ISLANDS

These West India islands geographically form a sort of annexe of the Bahama group from which Government they were separated in 1848 In 1873 they were annexed to Jamaica from the north west of which they are distant about 420 miles They have an area of about 170 square miles The population in 1911 was 5 615 of which the principal island Grand Turk contains 1 681 Salt is the principal industry of the islands and Sisal hemp and sponges are exported

A Commissioner administers the government of the Dependency assisted by a Legislative Board This Board has control of local finance and passes local ordinances subject to the assent of the Governor of Jamaica who is also the medium of communication between the Commissioner and the Colonial Office The Legislature of Jamaica has the power to pass laws applying to the Turks and Caicos Islands and the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Jamaica extends to the Islands in matters of divorce and matrimonial causes and is also a Court of Appeal

UGANDA

(The Uganda Protectorate)

The territories now comprised within this Protectorate came under British influence in 1890 and a portion of them was for a time administered by the Imperial British East African Company In 1894 a British Protectorate was declared over the kingdom of Uganda and some of the adjoining territories The present limits are approximately as follows —On the north, the Uganda Sudan boundary, on the east, a line drawn down the middle of Lake Rudolf, and along the west boundary of the Colony of Kenya and the eastern shores of Lake Victoria on the south, by Tanganyika Territory (late German East Africa) and on the west, by the eastern boundary of the Belgian Congo Within these boundaries lie part of the Victoria Nyanza, part of Lake Edward, the whole of Lake George, half of Lake Albert, the whole of Lake Kioga, the whole of Lake Salisbury, part of Lake Rudolf, and the course of the Nile from its exit from Lake Victoria to Nimule where the Egyptian Sudan commences Total area, 1 0 300 square miles including 16,377 square miles of water Owing to sleeping sickness the islands of Lake Victoria have been entirely depopulated and the inhabitants numbering about 20 000, settled on the mainland in fly free districts

With the exception of the Rudolf Province and the districts of Karamoja and Lobor, the whole Protectorate is now under direct administration, but the native kings or chiefs, whose rights are in some cases regulated by treaties, are encouraged to conduct the government of their own subjects The province of Buganda is recognised as a native kingdom under a Kabaka (H H Daudi Chwa grandson of the celebrated Mutesa) He is assisted in the government by three native ministers and a Lukiko, or native assembly In Buganda (and in Bunyoro, Ankole and Toro, also ruled over by native 'Kings'), purely native matters are dealt with by the various Lukikos, but in serious cases there is an appeal to higher courts For Europeans and non natives justice is administered by His Majesty's Courts The principal British representative is the Governor who makes Ordinances for the administration of justice the raising of revenue and other purposes There are local and special courts of justice and a High Court with civil and criminal jurisdiction In 1919 there were 2 601 criminal cases tried, 135 of which were cases of serious crime There is an armed constabulary force under a British Commissioner of Police and British officers There is also a volunteer reserve of Europeans

The total population of Uganda (year ended March 31 1920) is given as 2 962 550 composed as follows Natives, 2,957 075 Asiatics 4,528, Europeans 947 (including 306 females) Among the natives approximately 785 000 belong to the intelligent civilised Baganda a race converted to Christianity by British and French missionaries Educational work is undertaken by the various Missionary Societies who receive grants amounting to £2 225 towards scholarships, etc, for students and teachers About 170 000 natives speak Bantu languages there are a few Congo pygmies living near the Semliki river the rest of the natives belong to the Masai, Nilotic, and Sudanese groups

In 1918 19 total exports £1 247,457 1919–20, total exports £1,828 537 the import figures are now merged in those of Kenya The export trade, which is increasing is mainly in cotton, £1 209 663 in 1919–20 coffee, £161 714, chillies, £10 251 oil seeds £57 868 rubber, £25 992, ivory, £65 952 hides and skins £270 472 The trade is chiefly with Great Britain, the United States, and India

Expenditure	292 913	323,692	465,117

In 1919–20 the poll tax amounted to £247,372 and Customs to £90,849

The headquarters of the British administration is at ENTEBBE, the native capital of Buganda is at MENGO (Kampala). Nile steamers from Khartoum ply to Rejaf, which is about eight day's march from Nimule, the Sudan port of the Lake Albert Marine Service. A regular steamer service is maintained by the Uganda Railway Administration between Kisumu the railway terminus, and Entebbe, Port Bell and Jinja, the principal Uganda ports on Lake Victoria. The Busoga Railway Marine, which, with the Busoga Railway, is controlled by the Uganda Railway deals with the traffic on Lake Kioga. There are two steamers and a large number of lighters on that waterway. An additional steamer and subsidiary craft ply on Lake Albert and the Nile between Butiaba Nimule and Belgian port of Kasenye at the south of Lake Albert. The Busoga Railway of the same gauge as the Uganda Railway 62 miles in length runs from Jinga (on Lake Victoria) to Namasagali a point on the Nile below the rapids, and deals with the cotton output in the regions round Lake Kioga connecting that lake with Lake Victoria. There is a railway from Port Bell to Kampala, 7¾ miles in length. There is a fleet of Government motor vans. The length of telegraph line in the Protectorate is (1919) 1,225 miles with 24 telegraph offices.

WEIHAIWEI

The territory of Weihaiwei was leased to Great Britain by China by a convention made on July 1, 1898 and lies in latitude 37 30 N. longitude 122 10 E. It is situated in the Chinese province of Shantung and comprises the island of Liu Kung all the islands in the Bay of Weihaiwei and a belt of land 10 English miles wide along the entire coast line with a total area of about 285 square miles and a population in 1911 of 147 177 in which are included 3 000 resident on the island of Liu Kung. In addition to the leased territory there is a zone which comprises that portion of the province of Shantung lying east of the meridian 122 40—an area of 1 500 square miles—within which Great Britain has the right to erect fortifications, station troops or take any other measures necessary for defensive purposes. The winter is cold, but dry and bracing. The summer heat is not excessive, and the rainfall is, as a rule, small.

The government is administered by a Commissioner. Weihaiwei is a port of call for steamers running to and from the North of China, and there is regular steam communication with the ports of Shanghai Hong Kong Chefoo, and Tientsin.

WINDWARD ISLANDS

The Government of the Windward Islands is made up of the three colonies of Grenada (the seat of government) St. Vincent and St. Lucia with their dependencies the Grenadines being divided between Grenada and St. Vincent. The total area is 508 square miles with an estimated population (1920) of 180 182. There is one Governor for the three islands but there is no General Legislative Council as in the Leeward Islands and no common tariff or treasury. Each island retains its own institutions and in the Governor's absence is governed by an Administrator subordinate to him.

Grenada is situated between the parallel of 12 30 11 58 N. lat. and 61° 20–61 35 W. long. and is about 21 miles in length and 12 miles in breadth. It is about 96 miles north of Trinidad 68 miles S.S.W. of St. Vincent and 100 miles S.W. of Barbados. Area about 85 120 acres. Population (including some of the Grenadines) estimated at 74 490 in 1920. The country is mountainous and very picturesque and the climate is healthy. Grenada was discovered by Columbus in 1498 and named Conception. It was originally colonised by the French and was definitely ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Versailles in 1783.

The soil is very fertile and cocoa spices rubber cotton coffee and fruit are grown. The forests are rich in timbers. The imports chiefly comprise dry goods bread stuffs hardware &c. The Legislative Council consists of 14 members seven of whom are officials.

St. George's on the south west coast is the chief town and possesses a good harbour.

ST VINCENT,

an island about 95 miles west of Barbados, situate in 13° 10′ N lat. and 61° 57′ W long, is 18 miles in length and 11 in breadth, comprising an area with its dependencies, of 150 sq miles and a population (Dec. 31, 1919) of 53,210. In 1846 a large number of Portuguese labourers, amounting to 2,400, entered the island, and proved a valuable acquisition. St. Vincent is more thoroughly English than the two other islands of the group though it has been the scene of warfare In 1783 it was secured to Great Britain

The chief products are arrowroot, cotton, sugar, molasses rum cassava, cocoa coffee, and spices Its chief imports are linen, cotton and woollen manufactures Canadian flour, fish lumber &c Steps have been taken to settle the labouring classes on lands acquired for the purpose

ZANZIBAR

(The Zanzibar Protectorate)

The Zanzibar dominions became independent in 1856 under the rule of Seyyid Majid a son of Seyyid Said Sultan of Muscat and Zanzibar They formerly extended along the mainland as far south as Tungbi Bay and north as Warsheikh but since the cession of the coast line from Ruvuma to Wanga including the island of Mafia to Germany in 1890 and of the Benadir coast to Italy in 1904 they are now confined to the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba a ten mile coast line from Wanga to Kipini the islands of Lamu Manda Patta and Siwa together with the port of Kismayu with a radius of 10 miles As far as the mouth of the Juba the Zanzibar dominions on the mainland are under the administration of H M Government through the Governor and Commander in Chief in the East Africa Protectorate (q v) Zanzibar has been a British Protectorate since November 1890 On July 1 1913 the Protectorate was transferred from the Foreign to the Colonial Office

By a decree of Sultan Hamoud (1897) the legal status of slavery ceased to be recognised in the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba

As the centre of the Arab power Zanzibar from the beginning of the nineteenth century until quite recently dominated the trade of East Africa The island contributes comparatively little to the actual commerce of the world beyond a very considerable export of cloves, worth on an average £300,000 per annum but it serves as a 'gigantic go down' or storehouse for the whole East African coast where both imports and exports are received and distributed

Of late years the importance of Zanzibar as a port of transhipment and distributing centre has largely decreased, owing to the development of the mainland, to the opening up of the coast ports to direct steamship service with Europe and to the transfer to Aden of the seat of trade with the Benadir coast Recent figures however, tend to indicate that the island, in spite of losing the main transhipment trade, will continue, from the very fact of its geographical position, to retain control of the local trade—of that portion of the trade which goes to small towns up and down the adjacent mainland coast

copra groceries, rice and coal, the exports are ivory, cloves, copra, hides, gum-copal, and many minor articles

The large quantities of goods which pass through Zanzibar in mail and other steamers, and those which are transhipped to and from the coasting vessels in the harbour without being landed are not included in the statistics from which the above figures are taken which do not therefore give an adequate idea of the importance of the port of Zanzibar as the centre of trade in E Africa There is direct communication with the United Kingdom by the Union Castle and Ellerman Harrison Lines and also a monthly cargo service by the British India Steam Navigation Company There are through steamers to and from Europe of the Messageries Maritimes Marittima Italiana and Portuguese Government Line and a bi-weekly service to and from Bombay

The city of Zanzibar on the island of the same name, is the largest in East Africa and possesses a magnificent harbour which presents great facilities for shipping and trade generally The population of Zanzibar and Pemba (Census of 1910) was 198 914 the area of the former 640 square miles and of the latter 380 square miles

The number of ocean going steamers which entered the port in 1919 was British 74 French 11, Norwegian 5 others 14 the total tonnage being 440 737 and 4 714 dhows (82 334 tons) entered the port in 1919

IMMIGRATION.

Statistics concerning the arrival of aliens are available for nearly a century, but the Government exhibits little interest in those who leave its shores. From 1790–1917 33,198 353 alien passengers arrived in the U.S. The following figures (from the Statistical Abstract) show the number of arrivals at certain periods from 1820–1918:—

PHYSIOGRAPHY

The Republic occupies the southern portion of the North American Continent, between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, in latitude 25° 49° North and longitude 67°-124° 30′ West, its northern boundary being Canada and the southern boundary Mexico.

Its coast-line on both oceans has an estimated length of about 15,610 miles, besides 3,620 miles on the great lakes and 5 744 on the Gulf of Mexico. The principal river is the mighty Mississippi-Missouri, traversing the whole country from north to south, and having a course of 4 500 miles to its mouth in the Gulf of Mexico, with many large affluents, the chief of which are the Yellowstone, Nebraska, Arkansas, Ohio, and Red River. The rivers flowing into the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans are comparatively small, among the former may be noticed the Hudson, Delaware, Susquehanna, Potomac and Savannah, of the latter, the Columbia, Sacramento, and Colorado. The Mobile and Colorado of Texas fall into the Gulf of Mexico, also the Rio Grande, a large river partly forming the boundary with Mexico. The areas

Mountains separates the western portion of the territory from the remainder, all communication being carried on over certain elevated passes, several of which are now traversed by railroads. West of these, bordering the Pacific coast, the Cascade Mountains and Sierra Nevada form the outer edge of a high table land, consisting in great part of stony and sandy desert, and in which occurs the Great Salt Lake, extending to the Rocky Mountains. Eastward the country is a vast gently undulating plain, with a general slope southwards towards the marshy flats of the Gulf of Mexico, extending to the Atlantic, interrupted only by the Alleghany Mountains, of inferior elevation, in the Eastern States. Nearly the whole of this plain, from the Rocky Mountains to some distance beyond the Mississippi, consists of immense treeless savannahs and prairies of luxuriant grass. In the Eastern States (which form the more settled and most thickly inhabited portion of the territory) large forests of valuable timber as beech, birch, maple, oak, pine, spruce, elm, ash, walnut, and in the south, live oak, water oak, magnolia, palmetto, tulip-tree, cypress, &c., still exist, the remnants of the wooded region which formerly extended over all the Atlantic slope, but into which great inroads have been made by the advance of civilisation. The Mississippi valley is eminently fertile. The mineral kingdom produces in great abundance iron, copper, lead, zinc, and aluminium, the non-metallic minerals including immense quantities of coal, anthracite, petroleum, stone, cement, phosphate rock, and salt. Precious metals include gold and silver, raised mainly in Colorado, California, and Alaska (gold), and Colorado, Montana, Utah, and Idaho (silver), while precious stones are worked in great variety, including the turquoise, sapphire, tourmaline, and garnet.

HISTORY

EARLY COLONISATION.—A natural factor, the great expanse of ocean which divides the American continent from Asia, has saved America from Asiatic domination, and it required many centuries of progress before the European adventurer dared to attempt the passage of the narrower Atlantic. The aboriginal inhabitants were comparatively few in number, and being generally backward in development, except in Mexico, have left few permanent traces of their presence.

Although Columbus discovered America in the fifteenth century (Oct. 12, 1492), American history may be said to commence with the colonising expeditions from Europe in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. No definite European settlement was attempted until the last quarter of the sixteenth century, when England, Holland, Sweden, France, and Spain made determined efforts to bring into account the potential wealth of the newly discovered continent. Of these nationalities the English secured a paramount influence, through their natural aptitude for colonisation, which continues to distinguish that race (and in a greater degree the Scotch) amongst the nations of Europe In the seventeenth century a chartered company founded Jamestown (1607), and many Royalist settlements were established in the district which had been named Virginia, after Queen Elizabeth, in the previous century. But step by step with the Church and Royalist foundations in the South a similar series of Puritan and Separatist centres was established in the North The small band of "Pilgrim Fathers" in their 180-ton Mayflower, from Southampton, England, to Plymouth, Massachusetts (1620), was soon followed by a stream of well-to-do merchants from Boston, Lincolnshire, and other east coast English towns, and New England became rapidly prosperous Between these two settlements the Dutch had established themselves in New Netherlands (1621), and the Swedes in New Sweden (1638) Other English foundations were Maryland (1632), Carolina (1663), New York (1664), New Jersey (1665), and Pennsylvania (1681) From that date Continental enterprise may be said to have ceased for half a century, and Georgia (1732) was the last of the English settlements

EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.—A continuous struggle was waged between the English and French settlements in America, but until the War of 1754–1763 little part was taken by Great Britain in the actual campaigns The issue of this war decided the fate of America It secured the possession of the Pacific coast for the inhabitants of the Atlantic slope, and roused the interests of the British Government in the possibilities of its American colonies The Home Government endeavoured to recover from the colonies part of the cost of the war by which their existence had been secured, but "taxation without representation was bitterly resented In December, 1773 some English ships laden with tea arrived in the harbour of Boston, where a non-importation agreement was strictly enforced A band of colonists, disguised as Indians, boarded the vessels and threw their contents into the sea This Boston Tea Party of December 16, 1773, remains as an outstanding incident in the quarrel between America and Great Britain In spite of the counsels of Chatham the King persisted in repressive measures, generally with inadequate forces and at inopportune moments. The colonists resisted in arms and bloodshed ensued at the first engagement at Lexington, April 19, 1775, and continued until the Capitulation of Yorktown, October 19, 1781, when Lord Cornwallis surrendered with the whole of his forces to General Washington. When peace was concluded, Sept 3, 1783, between America and Great Britain, no vestige of territory over which the dispute had raged remained under British rule

The Declaration of Independence On July 4, 1776, the delegates of the various American colonies adopted the Declaration of Independence * "We, the representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, solemnly publish and declare that these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, Free and Independent States" This Declaration was at length acknowledged by Great Britain, and the United States of America from this beginning has become one of the greatest Powers of the world. The Declaration of Independence was followed by the framing of a Constitution, which was ratified in 1787 to 1790 by the 13 Original States (Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland, South Carolina, New Hampshire, Virginia, New York, North Carolina, and Rhode Island) This Constitution established a legislature of two houses, and vested the executive power in an elective President, and on April 30, 1789, George Washington entered office as the first of a line of Presidents of the United States of America.

NINETEENTH CENTURY.—The maritime war of Britain and France led to the outbreak of hostilities between the former and the United States, owing mainly to the rival interpretation of the law of allegiance in connexion with impressment of British subjects from American ships to serve in the British Navy. On June 18, 1812, the United States declared war against Britain in which the latter was generally successful on land and the United States almost invariably victorious on the sea A land engagement at Chateauguay on October 26, 1813 gained lasting glory for the troops of Canada, and earlier in the same year—June 1, 1813—a duel at sea between the Chesapeake and the Shannon did much to restore the prestige of the British Navy Peace was concluded by the Treaty of Ghent on December 24, 1814, after a purposeless war, which Canada alone has reason to remember with satisfaction.

Continental Congress, Richard Henry Lee proposed, and John Adams of Massachusetts, seconded, a resolution declaring the United Colonies free and independent States, and Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, Roger Sherman, and Robert Livingston were appointed a committee to draw up a Declaration of Independence. This famous document, composed almost entirely by Jefferson, was adopted unanimously on July 4, 1776."

The Gold Rush.—In 1846 a dispute arose between the United States and Mexico in connexion with the boundaries of Texas, recently (1845) admitted as a State of the Union, and after hostilities of several months the war ended in the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo (1847) Under this treaty Mexico surrendered the disputed portions of Texas and New Mexico, part of Arizona, and California. In 1848 a great rush of goldseekers entered the newly acquired territory, which remains the principal gold producing State of the Union.

The Civil War.—Among the industrial classes of America in 1860 nearly 4 000,000 were negro slaves, descendants of those planted in the Colonies by Britain The question of their emancipation led to a bitter dispute between the Northern and Southern States of America the latter seceding from the Union in 1861 Two years earlier John Brown, an advocate of emancipation, had embittered the relations between the North and South by a raid upon the Government arsenal of Harper's Ferry, which he captured and held until forced to surrender, and although he was hanged by the State of Virginia his object was eventually achieved by President Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation of January 1, 1863 The Secession of the Southern States was followed by hostilities which included many pitched battles, fought with astounding tenacity and prolific slaughter on both sides Hostilities ceased soon after the surrender of General Lee at Appomattox on April 9, 1865, and the bitterness engendered by the war was buried in a lasting peace By a careless observance of the Foreign Enlistment Act, Britain permitted the departure from Liverpool of the Alabama, which committed depredations upon United States shipping, and was also guilty of other acts of negligence, for which, under the Treaty of Washington, May 8, 1871, Britain was called upon to pay £3,250,000 damages to the United States In the four years war the Confederate (Southern) States lost over 200,000 men by death and disease, while the victorious Federal (Northern) States lost close on 350,000 from the same causes

War with Spain.—The continuous misgovernment of the neighbouring island of Cuba brought America into conflict with Spain in 1898 A succession of revolts, which the Spanish forces were unable to suppress, left Cuba the prey to anarchy, and induced the United States to despatch to Havana the warship Maine By accident or design that vessel was destroyed by an explosion (Feb 15), and the United States declared war against Spain on April 25 1898 The outcome of the hostilities was the freedom of Cuba and the acquisition by the United States of the Spanish possessions in the Philippine Islands in addition to Guam (Pacific) and Porto Rico in the West Indies

Twentieth Century.—On June 28 1902, Congress appropriated the sum of $40 000,000 for the purchase of all outstanding rights in the work inaugurated on the Panama Canal, and on April 28, 1904, a further sum was granted for the purchase of a strip of territory on each side of the proposed waterway from the Republic of Panama Operations were immediately undertaken, and the Canal was completed in 1913 and was opened to traffic with no inaugural ceremony on August 1, 1914

Anglo American Arbitration.—A Treaty of Arbitration between the United Kingdom and the United States was signed at Washington, August 3, 1911 The Treaty contained seven Articles (see 1912 Edition of Whitaker's Almanack) An Anglo-American Peace Commission Treaty was signed by Mr Bryan and the British Ambassador on Sept 15, 1914

War with the Central European Powers.—On April 6, 1917 the United States, after fruitless endeavours to obtain guarantees from Germany that the rights of neutrals on land and sea would be observed entered the war on the side of France, Great Britain and the Allied and Associated Powers The first shot by U S troops (Oct 27, 1917) was followed by a full participation in the campaigns of the Allies, and the Armies of the United States contributed very largely to the defeat of the Central Powers At the date of the Armistice (Nov 11, 1918) 3,670 888 troops had been placed under arms, and 77,459 were numbered amongst the killed or died of disease, accident or other causes U S troops also figured amongst the armies sent to the assistance of Russia against the Bolshevik regime, but these were withdrawn, in accordance with the plans of the Allies, in 1919

The United States of America is a Federal Republic consisting of 48 States and 1 Federal District (of which 13 are Original States, 7 were admitted without previous organisation as Territories, and 28 were admitted after such organisation), and of 2 organised Territories.

The Constitution.—By the Constitution of Sept 17, 1787 (to which ten amendments were added on Dec. 15, 1791, and eleventh to fifteenth Jan. 8, 1798, Sept 25, 1804, Dec. 18, 1865, July 28, 1868, and March 30 1870), the government of the United States is entrusted to three separate authorities—the Executive, the Legislative, and the Judicial.

THE EXECUTIVE.

THE Executive power is vested in a President, who is elected every four years, and is eligible for re-election. The mode of electing the President is as follows:—Each State appoints, in such manner as the Legislature thereof directs (they are now elected by popular vote on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November of the year preceding the year in which the Presidential term expires), a number of electors, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress; but no Senator or Representative, or anyone holding office under Government, shall be appointed an elector. The electors for each State meet at their respective State Capitals on the second Monday of the January following, and there vote for a President by ballot. The ballots are then sent to Washington, and opened on the second Wednesday of February by the President of Senate in presence of Congress, and the candidate who has received a majority of the whole number of electoral votes cast is declared President for the ensuing term. If no one has a majority, then from the three highest on the list the House of Representatives elects a President, the votes being taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote. There is also a Vice-President, who, on the death of the President, becomes ex officio President for the remainder of the term. In case of the removal or death of both President and Vice-President, a statute provides for the succession of the Secretary of State, Secretary of the Treasury, Secretary of War, Attorney-General, Postmaster-General, Secretary of Navy, and Secretary of the Interior, so that the State can never be without a Head or Ruler.

The President must be 35 years of age and a native citizen of the United States. He receives a salary of $75,000, with a travelling allowance of $25,000. Executive duties:—

(1) He is Commander-in-Chief of the Army and of the Navy (and of the Militias when they are in Federal service), and he commissions all officers therein.

(2) With the consent of the Senate, he appoints the Cabinet officers and all the chief (and many minor) officials.

(3) He exercises a general supervision over the whole Federal Administration and sees that the Federal Laws are duly carried out. Should disorder arise in any State which the authorities thereof are unable to suppress, the aid of the President may be invoked.

(4) He conducts the Foreign Policy of the Republic, and, with the approval of the Senate, negotiates Treaties with Foreign Powers. The Declaration of War rests with Congress.

(5) He makes recommendations of a general nature to Congress, and when laws are passed by Congress he may return them to Congress with a veto. But if a measure so vetoed is again passed by both Houses of Congress by a two-thirds majority in each House, it becomes law, notwithstanding the objections of the President.

UNITED STATES RECLAMATION SERVICE

Director, Arthur P Davis, Interior Building, 18th and E Streets, N W Washington D C
Western Office, Tramway Buildings Denver, Colorado $8 000 000

The Reclamation Service, which employs 100 people at headquarters and upwards of 5 000 in the West and controls an expenditure of about $8 000 000 annually, was organised as a bureau of the Interior Department, under the Reclamation Act of June 17 1902 It is engaged in the investigation construction and operation of irrigation works in the arid and semi arid States of the West Thirty projects have been authorised for construction or operation for irrigation of lands in Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho Kansas, Montana Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota Oklahoma, Oregon South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington and Wyoming These projects aggregate 3,200,000 acres and the major works aid in serving an additional 1,000,000 acres under private canals that generally get stored water from the government reservoirs. The funds for this work have come chiefly from the sale of public lands, and the money expended is returned to the fund by easy payments of settlers, usually in twenty annual instalments without interest, in accordance with the Reclamation Extension Act of August 13, 1914.

The Service has built on the 30 projects over 12,000 miles of canals, ditches and drains (including 100,000 canal structures), involving the evacuation of 174,000,000 cubic yards of materials. In connexion with this work there have been constructed 100 storage and diversion dams with an aggregate volume of 13,700,000 cubic yards, including the Arrowrock Dam, the highest in the world (349 feet), the Elephant Butte Dam on the Rio Grande (forming the largest artificial irrigation reservoir in the United States), and the longest roller crest dam in the world located on the Grand River in Colorado. The Service has built 95 tunnels, 983 miles of road, 83 miles of railroad, 3,141 miles of telephone line, a dozen power plants and 651 miles of transmission lines; and is also mining coal, and has manufactured 1,676,000 barrels of cement and sand cement. The net construction cost to June 30, 1919, was $123,853,000.

Over 150,000 persons are living on the 40,000 farms irrigated by the Service. Of the 3,200,000 acres above referred to, water is now available for 2,800,000 acres, and of this area 1,100,000 acres were harvested in 1919, producing crops worth over $88,000,000, or an average of over $80 per acre. The additional lands using stored water yielded crops worth $50,000,000 more. The project showing the largest unit returns in 1919 was the Okanogan in the State of Washington, with an average of $367 per acre.

The largest irrigable area is that of the Boise project in Idaho, 327,552 acres, of which the net cost of construction to June 30, 1919, was $11,973,276. The next is the North Platte in Nebraska-Wyoming, 251,715 acres; cost $10,549,095 to June 30, 1919. Information in regard to farms available for settlement may be obtained by addressing Statistician, U.S. Reclamation Service, Washington, D.C.

Public land farm units on the several projects are opened for settlement from time to time as canals are extended to make irrigation water available. Under present law, soldiers of the World War have a preference right to enter these farms, and at recent openings such soldiers have taken all units.

The Service issues the "Reclamation Record," a 48-page illustrated monthly publication, containing articles of interest to irrigation farmers and engineers. An annual report is also issued.

An engineering library of about 2,000 manuscript and printed volumes on the subject of irrigation is maintained in the Washington office of the Service. This library contains descriptions of the construction and operation of the projects, with numerous photographs and maps, cost data and results of original experimental investigations, and is available for consultation by those interested.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE,
North Capitol Street, Washington, D.C.

The Government Printing Office was established in 1861, and represents an expenditure of close on $16,000,000, the annual cost of operation and maintenance being $14,000,000. In addition to the printing of all Government publications, the office issues a Style Book, which regulates the spelling and treatment of all words employed in such publications.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS,
Capitol Hill, Washington, D.C.

The Library of Congress was established in 1800 and destroyed by fire in 1814. In 1815, purchase of Jefferson collection formed basis for a new collection. Partially destroyed by fire, 1851, and replenished in 1851–2. Since that date increased (1) by regular annual appropriations by Congress (now $98,000); (2) by deposits under the copyright law; (3) by gifts and exchanges; (4) by the exchanges of the Smithsonian Institution, the library of which (40,000 volumes) was, in 1866, deposited in the Library of Congress, with the stipulation that future accessions should follow it. It comprises 2,831,333 printed books and pamphlets, the floor space of the building (erected at the cost of $6,347,000, and first occupied in 1897) being 430,255 square feet, and the capacity of the book stacks 3,540,000 octavo volumes and 84,000 volumes of newspapers, the shelving extending to nearly 100 miles. The library is maintained by Congress, the appropriation in 1921 being $721,025.
