161. —— ——.]—In 1878 A. entered into a contract for the sale to him of two freehold houses at the price of £650. The deposit of £50 was paid by him, & £360, part of the balance, was obtained from his niece B., to whom he gave his I.O.U. On Aug. 31, 1878, the wife of A., by his direction, wrote to B. as follows: "A. bought two houses yesterday & he is going to have them settled & signed in your name & give them to you. I send you the conditions of sale for you to look at, & I should like you to come & see A. . . . Bring your bank book with you, as what you have might as well go into them as for us to pay interest. It is all right I can assure you. I sent the £50 by cheque last night on deposit." On Oct. 25, 1878, the two houses were duly conveyed to A., & he directed his wife to hand over the title deeds to B., & he also said to his wife that the deeds belonged to B., & were of no use to his wife. The deeds were sent to B. by A.'s wife. Subsequently A. died intestate & his eldest brother & heir-at-law commenced an action against B. claiming a declaration that he, pltf., was entitled to the rents & profits of the two houses & the delivery up of the title deeds:—Held: there was sufficient evidence of a contract to create an equitable mtge. in favour of B. & upon which the possession of the title deeds by B. originated, & there should be a redemption decree upon that footing, the costs of B. being added to her security.—Re MCMAHON, MCMAHON v. MCMAHON (1886), 55 L. T. 763.

162. —— ——.]—(1) Where there has been an equitable deposit of deeds to secure repayment of a loan an action of detinue cannot be maintained therefor prior to repayment.

(2) The remedy is by a suit for redemption, or by summary application for the deeds on terms of substituting for the security a sum of money equal to the amount secured with a proper margin.

(3) In cases of legal or equitable mtge., a tender properly made & improperly rejected is not equivalent to payment.

(4) It is a well established rule of equity that a deposit of a document of title without either writing or word of mouth will create in equity a charge upon the property to which the document relates to the extent of the interest of the person who makes the deposit (LORD MACNAGHTEN).—BANK OF NEW SOUTH WALES v. O'CONNOR (1889), 14 App. Cas. 273; 58 L. 163. As against stranger—Possession not otherwise accountable.]—A mere deposit of deeds, even without a word, may constitute an equitable mtge., but it can only occur, as against strangers, in cases where the possession of the title deeds can be accounted for in no other manner, except from their having been deposited by way of equitable mtge., or the holder being otherwise a stranger to the title & to the lands.—BOZON v. WILLIAMS (1829), 3 Y. & J 150; 148 E. R. 1131, Ex. Ch.

164. Proof of time of loan & deposit.]—In order to constitute an equitable mtge. by deposit, there must be proof of the time when both the loan & deposit were made.—KEBELL v. PHILPOT (1838), 7 L. J. Ch. 237; sub nom. KEBELL v. PHILPOTT, KEBELL v. DANIEL, 2 Jur. 739.

165. Proof how possession acquired.] — The mere production of a bond creditor of the title deeds to the obligor's real estate, without explanation, neither constitutes an equitable mtge., nor a sufficient ground for any inquiry before the Master.

A bond creditor, claiming also an equitable mtge. on real estate, filed his bill for foreclosure, & in aid, for the administration of the personal estate, against the exors. & the parties entitled to the mortgaged estate. He failed in proof of the equitable mtge.:—Held: he was not, on such a record, entitled to a decree, as a specialty creditor, for the administration of the real estate.—CHAPMAN v. CHAPMAN (1851), 13 Beav. 308; 20 L. 166. What amounts to a deposit—Verbal authority to person holding deeds in another capacity.]—Bkpt. being indebted to a banking co. made an oral promise to the directors to give them, when required, security for the debt. He was then entitled to a reversionary interest in one-fifth of a farm, to come into possession on the death of his mother, who was tenant for life, & who held the title deeds. The mother afterwards died, & the title deeds came into the possession of resp., who was manager of the bank, & who was also entitled to one-fifth of the property. Resp. told bkpt. that he had possession of the deeds, & that he held his, bkpt.'s, one-fifth for the bank. The bankrupt expressed his assent:—Held: the co. had not a valid equitable mtge. of bkpt.'s share in the farm, for there was no memorandum in writing to satisfy Stat. Frauds, & the conversation which took place between bkpt. & resp. as to the custody of the deeds, not being followed by any act which altered the legal position of the parties, was not such a part performance of the oral promise to give security as would exclude the operation of Stat. Frauds.—Re BEETHAM, Ex p. BRODERICK (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 766; 56 L. J. Q. B. 635; 35 W. R. 613; 3 T. L. R. 489, C. A.

(b) Deposit by Mistake.

167. Does not create mortgage.]—A. by deed mortgaged freeholds to B. At the same time, the title deeds not only of the freeholds but of leaseholds belonging to A. were delivered to B.:—Held: in the absence of proof to the contrary, B. had no lien on the leaseholds for the money advanced.

If I accidentally deliver a box of deeds to a creditor of mine that would not constitute him an equitable mtgee. (ROMILLY, M.R.).—WARDLE v. OAKLEY (1864), 36 Beav. 27; 55 E. R. 1066.

173. —— ——.]—J. A. voluntarily gave to his sisters, in 1848, a mtge. for a term of two hundred years, to secure an antecedent debt. The sisters allowed him to retain the title deeds, that he might give security on the estate for another debt for which he was then being sued by L. Shortly afterwards, J. A. agreed, in writing, to give L. a mtge. on the estate for the debt, & the deeds, in pursuance of this agreement, were deposited with G. P. & B., the London agents of J. A.'s solr., & who shortly afterwards became his solrs., to be held by them for the purpose of giving effect to the security. J. A., in 1851, made a mtge. in fee to C., who had no notice of the prior incumbrances, & G. P. & B. handed over to C. the title deeds. In 1855, the sisters made a sub-mtge. of the term by assignment:—Held: (1) the mtge. of 1848 was void under 27 Eliz. c. 4, as against C., who therefore took the legal fee discharged of the term; C., having no notice, was not affected by the fraud committed by G. P. & B., in parting with the title deeds; & having the title deeds, & having acquired the legal estate for value without notice, he was entitled to priority over the sisters & their assignee, & over the equitable security of L.; (2) the securities of the sisters & their assignee were void as against L.—LLOYD v. ATTWOOD, ATTWOOD v. LLOYD (1859), 3 De G. & J. 614; 29 L. How far the assignees can get the deeds from them, is another matter. A. sent B. a box containing the deeds & other securities, which B. did not examine until after A.'s bkpcy., when he found that the only deed relating to the T. estate was an old paid off mtge.:—Held: the letter & the schedule, taken together, created an equitable charge on the T. estate.—Re DAINTRY & RYLE, Re RAVENSCROFT, Ex p. ARKWRIGHT (1843), 3 Mont. The box remained in B.'s possession, & on his death the deeds were found to have been abstracted from it, & they could not be identified. The legal personal representative of B. then deposited certain specific deeds, selected by A., as a security for the debt:—Held: (1) assuming that A. had, in consequence of B.'s wrongful act, obtained a general lien on all B.'s deeds for the money, still he had waived it by taking the particular security from the legal personal representative; (2) the creditors of B. were bound by the arrangement between his legal personal representative & A.—MASON v. MORLEY (No. 1) (1865), 34 Beav. 471; 55 E. I. Extent of Property Charged.

210. R. 553, N. P.

211. ——.] — A deposit of title deeds primâ facie creates an equitable mtge. upon the whole property comprised in them. A debtor deposited his title deeds with his creditor until such time as his account should not exceed £100, at which time they were to be restored to him. Debtor died indebted to creditor in £274:—Held: creditor's lien extended to the whole £274.—ASHTON v. DALTON (1846), 2 Coll. 565; 7 L. T. O. S. 109; 10 Jur. 450; 63 E. R. 863.

He afterwards paid off the mtge. & took a surrender of the term, retaining the deed of surrender in his own possession & became bkpt.:—Held: the lien created by the deposit extended to the whole estate freed from the incumbrance.

(2) Other deeds deposited at the same time, & forming part of the same security, related to an undivided share belonging to bkpt. in other property. Between the times of the deposit & bkpcy., the entirety of a certain portion of the property was conveyed to bkpt. in lieu of his undivided share, he paying £100 for equality of partition:—Held: the lien affected the portion conveyed to bkpt. & the assignees had no claim in respect of the £100.—Re BAKER, Ex p. BISDEE (1840), 1 Mont. The trustees gave no notice to the debtors. A. received £200, part of the £600, the securities having been returned to him by the trustees, & the remainder was lost by the insolvency of the debtors. A. invested the £200 with other moneys of his own on freeholds, & by writing acknowledged the £200 to be trust property. He afterwards deposited the title deeds with the trustees as a security for the whole £600:—Held: the equitable mtge. was valid to the extent of £200 but no further.—JAMES v. BYDDER (1841), 4 Beav. 600; 5 Jur. 1076; 49 E. The £800 beir advanced by C. out of which the mtge. is paid off by A. who thereupon receives the title deeds from the mtgee., he having assigned to attend, etc., & delivers them up to G. A. & B. direct a mtge. deed to be prepared to C. which is engrossed & executed by A., B. refusing to execute or to have anything to do with it; & afterwards A. dies; & then B. dies; both having paid the interest on the £1,000 up to the death of each:—Held: the delivery over of the deeds by the tenant for life, did not, under the circumstances, create such a lien on the estate in the way of equitable incumbrance, as to have the effect of charging the inheritance with any part of the £1,000, the proof of B.'s assent to the deeds being deposited for the security of the money, or any part of it, not being sufficiently direct & positive to establish the fact of his intention that the deeds should be delivered to C. for that purpose. Pltf., however, decreed to be entitled to the benefit of the term, & to stand in the place of the mtge. quoad the mtge. money paid off out of the money advanced.—WILLIAMS v. MEDLICOT (1819), 6 Price, 495; 146 E. 217. —— —— Tenant in common in tail — Consent of remainderman.]—A. & B. brothers were tenants in common in tail of copyhold property, with cross remainders between them. B. obtained a loan for A. from C., for which A. gave his promissory note, & deposited the title deeds with C. as a collateral security, & gave a written memorandum, by which he engaged "to make a formal surrender of my interest in the estate to which the said deeds relate, by way of further security, whenever thereunto required"; & B. wrote at the foot, "I join in the deposit." A. died unmarried, & without having surrendered to C. or barred the remainders. Upon a bill by C. against B., seeking to foreclosure the entirety:—Held: (1) this was a good equitable charge, not merely upon A.'s "Interest" in his moiety, but also upon B.'s estate in remainder, & B. must bear the expense of surrendering that moiety; (2) the charge extended only to the moiety of the estate which originally belonged to A.—PRYCE v. BURY (1854), as reported in 23 L. Several subsequent transfers, to which pltf. was not a party, were made, & in Feb. 1896, the mtge. debt & the security were vested in A. In 1892 pltf. gave B., her solr., the money to pay off the mtge., which he did not do, though he continued to pay interest on the mtge. as it became due to the transferee for the time being. Pltf. made no inquiry in 1892 for the reconveyance nor for the title deeds, but left the whole matter in the hands of her solr. In Oct. 1897, A. transferred the mtge. debt & the property to B., & the next day B. transferred the same to deft., to whom the deeds were handed. The cheque for £1,500 from deft. was paid by B. into his private account, & the cheque to A. was drawn by B. on his firm's account, which was then in funds, at another bank. In Dec. 1899, application was made by deft. to pltf. for arrears of interest, & the fraud was discovered. On an action by pltf. to establish her priority over deft., & for a reconveyance of the mtged. property:—Held: (1) on the transfer to B. the mtge. debt became discharged, & he held the property as trustee for pltf.; (2) deft., having taken the transfer from B. without the privity of mtgor., could only hold it against mtgor. subject to the state of account between B. & mtgor., & as between them the debt was non-existent; (3) pltf. had never lost the right to redeem, & directly the agent, who had received the amount to pay off the mtge., became himself the transferee, the debt was extinguished, & no transferee from him could treat the debt as a subsisting charge upon the property, & pltf. was therefore entitled to priority & to have a reconveyance from deft.—TURNER v. SMITH, [1901] 1 Ch. 213; 70 L. He is bound to inquire whether these are all the charges affecting the property.

The title deeds of plot A. were deposited with pltfs. as a security for advances. A parcel of deeds relating to plots B. & C. which adjoined A. was afterwards deposited with defts. with the representation that they related to plots A. B. & C. A legal mtge. was subsequently executed to defts., in which the general words were large enough to comprise the whole of the plots. mentioned in the memorandum was granted & deposited with S. By indenture of Mar. 2, 1847, T. assigned a moiety of the entire premises to A.; & on Sept. 20, 1847, executed an assignment of all his estate & effects for the benefit of his creditors. By indenture of Aug. 31, 1848, S. assigned both plots of land, mill, & buildings to deft., subject to the equity of redemption, and with such power of sale as S. possessed. In Apr. 1852, deft. offered the premises for sale by auction; & the conditions stated (inter alia) that he sold as mtgee.; & that, as he had only an equitable interest in the second plot, the purchaser should accept such title as he was able to deduce & convey. Pltf. became the purchaser of both plots, but refused to complete the purchase, on the ground that the legal estate in the second plot was outstanding, & might be used adversely to him; & having brought an action to recover back the deposit:—Held: there was no failure of consideration, inasmuch as the assignment by T. of the legal estate in the one plot, & memorandum of deposit of future lease of the other plot, were one & the same transaction & security, & the lease, when deposited, was subject to the same conditions, including the power of sale, as were contained in the assignment, &, consequently, T. would not be entitled in a ct. of equity to redeem the second plot.—ASHWORTH v. MOUNSEY (1853), 9 Exch. 175; 2 C. At the date of the deed the grantor was entitled to a reversionary interest in stock standing in the name of trustees. The annuity was regularly paid for more than twenty years by the grantor, but on his death his personal estate proved insufficient to pay his debts, & the real estate was not enough to provide for the annuity:—Held: (1) so far as the charge on the reversionary interest in the stock was concerned, the deed depended only upon contract, & did not create a perfect & complete equitable charge in favour of C.; (2) as there could be no specific performance of a contract in favour of a volunteer C. had no priority over the creditors of the grantor.—Re LUCAN (EARL), HARDINGE v. COBDEN (1890), 45 Ch. 258. —— ——.]—A father on the marriage of his second son, by deed of settlement covenanted to pay him an annuity of £1,000 a year for life, & to charge the annuity on a sufficient part of the real estate he might die seised of; provided that nothing in the settlement should prevent his dealing with his real estate during his life, or, so only that sufficient real estate were left charged with the annuity, by will. The father subsequently made his will by which he devised his real estate, subject to the charges & incumbrances thereon, in strict settlement on his first & other sons in tail male; he bequeathed the greater part of his personal estate among his children, giving his second son legacies, the income of which when invested would be considerably more than £1,000 a year. He died leaving three sons:—Held: the settlement operated not only as a covenant by the father, but also as a charge upon all the real estate of which he should die seised.

If there is a covenant to charge all the real estate which a man has at a particular time, that covenant will itself make a charge. But where the covenant is to charge, not all or any definite portion of a man's estate, but only that which is worth £1,000 a year, or which would be sufficient to secure £1,000 a year, then from the indefiniteness of the matter referred to there will be no charge unless an instrument is afterwards executed to give effect to the covenant (COTTON, L.J.).—MONTAGU v. SANDWICH (EARL) (1886), 32 Ch. By a subsequent deed the father & son, no other person being a party, agreed to suffer a recovery of the entailed estates & to sell them & also the fee simple estates, & that out of the proceeds the father's debts, for some of which the son was surety, should be paid, & that certain sums should be taken by the father & son for their own use, & that £4,000 should be paid & provision made for the annuity, pursuant to the covenant on the daughter's marriage. A recovery was accordingly suffered, & the estates were limited to the father & son in fee. The father & son afterwards agreed to abandon the last-mentioned agreement, & in consideration of the son covenanting to pay the father's debts, the estates were conveyed by them to the son in fee. The son afterwards mortgaged the estates comprised in the recovery:—Held: the covenant for payment of the annuity created a charge on the estates, & the mtgee. having had notice of that covenant, the premises were subject to the annuity; but the covenant to settle the estate or £4,000 in lieu of it, created no lien or charge on any of the father's estates, & the subsequent agreement between the father & son was merely voluntary & was fairly abandoned by them.—RAVENSHAW v. HOLLIER (1834), 7 Sim. 3; 58 E. 266. Conveyance of legal estate—May be added to registration of charge.]—In 1871 a lease was granted of a public-house for a term of ninety-nine years at a rent of £100 per annum. The lease contained a proviso for re-entry on default for twenty-one days in payment of the rent. This lease was assigned to deft. R. In May, 1897, R., as beneficial owner, demised the house by way of mtge. to F. & Sons for the residue of the term, less the last day thereof. No rent was reserved by this deed, & R. covenanted to indemnify F. & Sons against the original rent. The deed contained provisions making R. in effect a trustee of the last day of the term for the mtgees. or a purchaser from then. By a deed dated July 27, 1899, the house was conveyed to R. in fee at the price of £3,650, "subject to but with the benefit of," the lease. To enable him to complete the purchase he arranged to borrow £3,000 from pltf. bank on the security of the house; & on July 27, 1899, a mtge. to the bank was executed immediately after the conveyance to R. the £3,000 being paid by the bank directly to the vendors. The property had been described to the bank as a "freehold ground rent of £100 a year" secured on the house. By the mtge. deed R. conveyed to the bank by way of mtge. the hereditaments comprised in the documents specified in a schedule, as to such of them as were freehold in fee simple, & as to such of them as he was entitled to for any term of years for the residue of such term, except the last day thereof. The schedule comprised the conveyance of July 27 & the other title deeds relating to the freehold & the counterpart of the lease of 1871, but no other document relating to any leasehold interest. At this time registration of title to land under the Land Transfer Acts had been made compulsory on sale in the parish in which the house was situate.

On Aug. 28, 1899, R. applied for the registration of himself as proprietor of the house, with a possessory title.

On the same day he executed an instrument charging the house with the payment to the bank of the £3,000 & interest.

The charge was in the form No. 39 in the schedule to the Land Transfer Rules, 1898, but there was added to it a grant of the house to the bank in fee, subject to redemption. This charge was also taken in for registration, & on Sept. 18, 1899, the registrar issued a certificate that R. was registered as proprietor of the house with a possessory title, & another certificate that the bank were registered as proprietors of the charge.

In Apr. 1901, R. executed a deed of arrangement with his creditors to which the bank were not parties. F. & Sons took possession of the house, & the bank demanded payment of the rent of £100 from them, as well as from the trustees of the deed of Apr. 1901, but it was not paid.

The bank then brought an action against R., F. & Sons, & the trustee of the deed of arrangement, claiming to enforce their security by foreclosure or sale. They claimed also a declaration that the term had not merged in the fee, & that they were entitled to re-enter for non-payment of the rent:—Held: (1) the term was still in existence, & the bank, if the legal estate in the fee was vested in them, were entitled to enter for default in payment of the rent; (2) by virtue of the registered charge with the added words the legal estate in the fee had passed to the bank.—CAPITAL & COUNTIES BANK, LTD. v. RHODES, [1903] 1 Ch. 631; 72 L. 268. Duties of registrar.]—In 1901 C. was registered under the Land Transfer Acts as proprietor of a charge on certain property in London for £350. In 1903 her solr., T., produced to O. what purported to be a transfer of the charge, upon which £300 was then owing, from C. to O., together with an authority, also purporting to be signed by C., to pay the money to T. O. paid the £300 to T., & took the transfer to the Land Registry & was registered as proprietor of the charge. The transfer & the authority were both forged. There was no negligence on the part of C., & O. was quite honest in the transaction & had acted with reasonable care. At the instance of C. the ct. ordered the register of charges to be rectified by removing the name of O. therefrom & restoring the name of C., & that was done. O. claimed to be entitled to indemnity under Land Transfer Act, 1897 (c. 65), s. 7 (4):—Held: the act of the registrar in putting O. on the register was a mere ministerial act, & not a judicial act as on the registration of a person first registered as proprietor of land, & it conferred on him no estate or right which he had not before registration, & he could not show that he had a transfer from some one previously on the register, & in that sense relied on the register; he, therefore, could not claim any beneficial interest in the charge, & had not suffered any loss by the rectification, & was not entitled to any indemnity.—A.-G. v. ODELL, [1906] 2 Ch. 47; 75 L. (2) The priorities given by the Yorkshire Registries Act, 1884 (c. 54), are not to be altered except in cases of actual fraud, which means fraud importing grave moral blame.

In 1889 certain beneficiaries under a will deposited with a bank the title deeds of an estate in Yorkshire to secure an overdraft by the trustees in order that the trustees might be guaranteed against loss in carrying on testator's business. This was done with the knowledge & approval of J., a solr., who represented one of the trustees in this matter. The charge was never registered. J. subsequently took a mtge. of the same property & registered it, & he claimed priority over the bank. The bank, being satisfied with the personal security of the trustees, did not contest the claim:—Held: J. was guilty of actual fraud in taking advantage of a defect in the bank's security to defeat the interests of his client, & he was not entitled to the protection of the Yorkshire Registries Act, 1884 (c. 54).—BATTISON v. HOBSON, [1896] 2 Ch. 403; 65 L. another deed of even date which recited the annuities as being respectively subject to "a proviso for redemption or repurchase," the real estates on which they were charged, were conveyed to trustees for a term of years, with a power of sale to secure the regular payment of them, & subject thereto on trust for the grantor. The grantor by his will charged his real estates in aid of his personal estate with the payment of his debts, other than mtge. debts, & subject thereto, devised them in strict settlement:—Held: the annuities were to be treated as securities for the repayment of loans, & consequently the value of them, there being no personal assets for their payment, was, by virtue of the will, a charge upon the corpus of the real estates, & the tenant for life of the real estates, as between him & the remainderman, was only liable to keep down the interest on such value.—BULWER v. ASTLEY (1844), 1 Ph. 422; 13 L. 291. Right of repurchase — Assignable.]—By an indenture, dated Mar. 12, 1888, A., in consideration of £2,000 paid to him by a life assurance co., covenanted, if he should survive his father, to pay to the co. an annuity of £1,400 during his life; & A., as beneficial owner, conveyed to the co. all the dividends, interest, & annual income of the proceeds of the sale of certain freehold, copyhold, & leasehold property, or of the property itself until sale, to have & to hold the same unto & to the use of the co. & their assigns "by way of security for the said annuity of £1,400." Under clause 4 of the deed A. might, upon giving to the co. or their assigns one calendar month's notice of his intention to do so, & upon paying to the co. or their assigns, on or before Mar. 12, 1890, the sum of £3,000, together with the amount of any additional premiums payable as thereinafter mentioned, & all costs & expenses, & all arrears, if any, of the annuity of £1,400, up to the day of repurchase, repurchase the annuity, & the premises thereinbefore conveyed by him should upon such repurchase be reconveyed on his request & at his expense. By clause 8 it was provided that the deed should "be deemed to be a mtge. within Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), ss. 19–24," & that the powers thereby conferred on mtgees. should be incorporated therein. By an indenture, dated Dec. 31, 1889, in consideration of £8,500, A., as beneficial owner, assigned to B. all his reversionary interest in the hereditaments before-mentioned subject to the deed of Mar. 12, 1888. On Mar. 11, 1890, B., in pursuance of the 4th clause of the deed of Mar. 12, 1888, gave notice to the co. of his intention to redeem the securities & repurchase the annuity. The money was tendered to the co. first on behalf of B., then on behalf of A. The co. refused the tender. An action was accordingly brought against the co. by A. & B. claiming that they were entitled to redeem the property comprised in the deed of Mar. 12, 1888, & to have a reconveyance thereof:—Held: the deed was a mtge., & the right of repurchase under clause 4 thereof was not a personal privilege, but one capable of assignment; &, therefore B. had the right to redeem the property.—SECRETARY OF STATE IN COUNCIL OF INDIA v. BRITISH EMPIRE MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE CO. He subsequently made several mtges. of the property by deeds, some of which recited the annuity deed. The annuity deed had not been registered as required by Judgments Act, 1854 (c. 15), s. 12:—Held: as Judgments Act, 1854 (c. 15), s. 12, was in similar terms to the claims in the Registry Acts which had been decided not to make an unregistered conveyance void as against a subsequent purchaser who had notice of it the legislature must be taken to have used the words in Judgments Act, 1854 (c. 15), in the sense given to them by those decisions & the annuities therefore were valid as against all the subsequent incumbrancers who took with notice of them, & against the trustee in bkpcy. of the grantor.—GREAVES v. TOFIELD (1880), 14 Ch. 294. ——.] — A party having applied to deft. for the loan of a sum of £6,700 for twelve months, on the security of a mtge. of freehold property, deft. refused to advance the money unless the borrower would give him a promissory note for the amount, to be discounted by him at £5 per cent. This the borrower agreed to, & a bond & mtge. were given for £6,700, & the sum of £6,365, the amount of the note minus the discount & charge of preparing the securities, was paid to the borrower. An ejectment having been brought to recover possession of the premises, on the ground that the mtge. was invalid as being given for an usurious consideration, the jury found that the primary object of the transaction was the discounting of the note, the mtge. being only a collateral security in the event of the note not being paid:—Held: the transaction was not usurious, & the mtge. was valid independently of 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 80, & 2 & 3 Vict. c. 27.—DOE d. 305. ——.]—In 1867 T. P. mortgaged an estate to L. & A. for £1,000, & at the same time E. P. & C. P. gave to L. & A. a joint & several bond in the penal sum of £400, reciting that the £1,000 had been advanced at the request of E. P. & C. P., & that they had agreed to give as a better security for part thereof a bond conditioned for payment of £200 & interest. The bond was conditioned to be void if the mtgor. paid the mtge. money & interest according to his covenant. T. P. paid the interest till Dec. 1877, after which it fell into arrear, & in 1880 the mtgees. entered into possession. E. P. died in 1883 without having made any payment or given any acknowledgment. L. & A., as creditors under the bond, took out a summons for administration of his estate. E. P.'s representatives disputed the claim on the ground that this was a proceeding to recover money secured on land, & was barred by the lapse of twelve years under Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57):—Held: (1) this was not a proceeding to recover money secured on land, but to recover damages because another person failed to pay money secured on land & it did not come within the scope of Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 8; (2) if remedy on the bond had been barrable by the lapse of twelve years under that sect., the payments of interest by the mtgor. would have prevented the bar.—Re POWERS, LINDSELL v. PHILLIPS (1885), 30 Ch. SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

306. Allottee under Inclosure Act—Under unsigned award.]—By a local Inclosure Act, comrs. were empowered to allot the lands to be inclosed among the proprietors interested; & by section 46, it was enacted, that the several lands so to be allotted & awarded, & the new allotments should, immediately after such allotment should have been made, remain & enure to the persons to whom they should be allotted, who should thenceforth be seised & possessed thereof to the same uses, etc. as the lands, in lieu of which they were allotted, were subject to:—Held: the legal estate in the allotment vested in the allottee immediately upon its being made, & did not require to be completed by the award. Consequently, a proprietor, to whom an allotment was made & possession delivered, was empowered to convey the same to a mtgee., though the award was not signed by the comrs. for many years afterwards.—DOE d. 313. Mortgage with covenant for further assurance—Subsequent bankruptcy—Liability of assignee in bankruptcy.]—PYE v. DAUBUZ, No. 153, ante.

314. —— Subsequent act of bankruptcy — Second mortgage pursuant to covenant.]—Tenant in tail in remainder, assuming to be tenant in fee in remainder, made a mtge. in fee with a covenant for further assurance. He became tenant in tail in possession, & afterwards, pursuant to his covenant, suffered a recovery & made a new mtge. In the meantime, however, he had notoriously committed an act of bkpcy, on which, subsequently, a commission issued:—Held: the second mtge. was good as to principal, interest, & costs to the date of the act of bkpcy.—WHITE v. HAYWARD (1831), 1 L. J. Ch. 120.

315. Estate of mortgagee—Mortgage after vesting in possession—Entail barred in subsequent bankruptcy.]—Insolvent, who was tenant in tail of one fourth of an estate, expectant on the decease of his father, in his schedule filed under the insolvent Act, stated that he was possessed of no real estate. He obtained his discharge in 1825. He subsequently became entitled to one third of another fourth of the same estate, as tenant in tail. After the decease of his father, he mortgaged his interest in the estate, & in 1831, became a bkpt., & under his bkpcy., a disentailing deed was executed, & a partition made. The assignee in insolvency discovered, in 1853, the interest of the insolvent in the estate, &, upon a bill filed by him against the assignee in bkpcy. & the mtgee., he was declared entitled to the estate; but upon further consideration:—Held: (1) under 1 Geo. 4, c. 119, the assignee of the insolvent took no interest in one twelfth of the estate beyond the life of the tenant in tail; also, (2) the ct. was not precluded, by the decree made, from making a new declaration, & giving consequential relief, & the mtgee. was entitled to so much of the estate as belonged to the insolvent; & neither the bkpcy. nor the disentailing assurance affected the question in dispute, nor did the statute confer upon the assignee any right as against the issue in tail, or on the person entitled in remainder expectant on the death of the insolvent without issue.—STURGIS v. MORSE (1860), 2 De G. F. & J. 223; 29 L. J. Ch. 766; 2 L. T. 647; 6 Jur. N. S. 766; 8 W. R. 737; 45 E. R. 607, L. JJ.

316. —— Base fee—Disentailing assurance subsequent to bankruptcy of mortgagor.]—In 1841 Lord H., being entitled in remainder, subject to the existing life estate of Lord D. as tenant in tail to two undivided third parts of certain hereditaments, mortgaged his interest in the property to M.D. In 1842 Lord H. became bkpt. At the date of his bkpcy. the statute in force was 6 Geo. 4, c. 16 as amended by Fines & Recoveries Act, 1833 (c. 74). No disentailing deed was executed by the comrs. in bkpcy. pursuant to sect. 64 of that statute; but in 1872 Lord H. executed a disentailing deed. In 1878 Lord D. the tenant for life, died. Pltf. was a sub-mtgee. from M.D., & brought this action to realise his security:—Held: the mtge. by Lord H., the tenant in tail in remainder, conferred upon the grantee, not merely an estate for the life of the grantor, but a base fee, voidable by the entry of the issue in tail; notwithstanding the intervening bkpcy., the subsequent disentailing deed by the tenant in tail operated to confirm the base fee; & therefore, pltf. was entitled, under his security to a base fee, to continue so long as there should be issue of Lord H. who would have succeeded under the entail.—HANKEY v. MARTIN (1883), 49 L. T. 560.

317. Disentailing deed by mortgagor — Whether execution ordered by court.]—In a mtge. suit by a judgment creditor of a tenant in tail in possession, the latter was ordered to execute a disentailing deed, in order to give full effect to pltf.'s charge.—LEWIS v. DUNCOMBE (1855), 20 Beav. 398; 52 E. 318. —— ——.]—Deft., being tenant in tail in remainder of certain freehold estates in the county of Surrey, & of certain copyholds, mortgaged certain specified freeholds, & also all the freehold manors, messuages, hereditaments & premises whatsoever & wheresoever, of which he was seised & entitled in possession, reversion, remainder, or expectancy or otherwise, to pltf & his heirs, during the life of deft., for securing two sums of money & interest. The deed contained a general covenant for further assurance. Deft. afterwards became bkpt. Pltf. having prepared a disentailing deed, tendered it to deft. for his execution, but deft. refused to execute it. Thereupon pltf. filed a bill, praying that deft. might be decreed, pursuant to his covenant for further assurance, to execute & deliver to pltf. a disentailing deed of all the estates to which he was entitled in tail male, in remainder or otherwise:—Held: he was not entitled to such a decree, & the bill was therefore dismissed.—DAVIS v. TOLLEMACHE (1856), 28 L. 319. —— Proviso for redemption as revivor of uses of settlement.]—Under a settlement of real estates made in 1831, A., in 1884, was tenant for life in possession, B. first tenant in tail, & C. second tenant in tail in reversion. B., being a lunatic, C., with the consent of A., disentailed his interest & resettled the estates, with a power to charge the same, which was exercised. In 1893, B., who was then tenant in tail in possession, acting by C. as his committee, mortgaged the estates with a proviso that on redemption they should be "reconveyed by the mtgees. to the uses, upon the trusts & with & subject to the powers & provisions in & by the settlement of 1831 declared & contained":—Held: notwithstanding that the estate tail was barred by Fines & Recoveries Act, 1833 (c. 74), s. 21, the proviso for redemption in the mtge. of 1893 was valid & operative, so that the uses created by the settlement of 1831 were revived subject to the resettlement of 1884.—Re OXENDEN'S SETTLED ESTATES, OXENDEN v. CHAPMAN (1904), 74 L. 320. Notice to trustees—Trustees for purposes of Settled Land Acts—Compound settlement.]—Testator by his will dated in 1870 devised a residential estate in settlement. In the midst of & surrounded by the estate & near to the mansion house there was a smaller property which belonged to other persons. The tenant for life under the will purchased the property for £7,800, &, having mortgaged it for £7,000, himself providing the balance, he by deed in 1904 settled it on the subsisting uses of the will, but subject to the mtge. & to repayment to himself of his costs, charges, & expenses arising out of the transaction. It was proved that the acquisition of this additional property was most desirable & beneficial. Neither in the will nor in the deed of 1904 was any general power of sale conferred on the trustees of those instruments, but the deed contained a proviso that the trustees thereof should have power, by sale or mtge. of the property thereby assured, to raise the amount of the costs, charges & expenses above referred to. The tenant for life applied to the ct. for its sanction to his raising the amount of the incumbrance & costs, charges, & expenses by a mtge. of the entirety of the estate, & that the trustees of the deed of 1904 might be appointed trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Act, of the settlement created by the will & the deed of 1904:—Held: (1) the trustees of the deed of 1904 ought to be appointed trustees of the compound settlement for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts, as otherwise there would be no one to whom notice could be properly & adequately given under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 45 (1); (2) the proviso contained in the deed of 1904 had not the effect of making the trustees of that instrument trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts, as those Acts contemplated trustees having a general & not a limited power, that is, a power exercisable at any time & for any purpose, & not a power exercisable in a contingency & for a particular purpose. The application was therefore granted.—Re COULL'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1905] 1 Ch. 712; 74 L. J. Ch. 378; 92 L. T. 616; 53 W. R. 504.

321. Request by mortgagee in writing—Owner having general power of appointment.]—Where the estate owner of a settled estate having a general power of appointment over the settled hereditament requires to raise money for his own use & benefit, he is entitled, under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 16, to demise the settled land by way of legal mtge. to a mtgee., at such mtgee.'s request in writing, in order to secure the moneys advanced; such mtge. being expressed to take effect subject to any prior equitable charges subsisting under the settlement.—Re EGERTON SETTLED ESTATES, [1926] Ch. 574; 95 L. 322. Discharge of incumbrances on settled land—Mortgages—Discretion of court to refuse—Prejudice to annuitants.]—The tenant for life of settled land, part of which was mortgaged & part was not, & the whole of which was charged with the payment of certain life annuities, proposed to raise a sum of money by mortgaging the settled land, including the part of it not then subject to any mtge., in order to pay off the existing mtges. & certain pecuniary legacies given by the settlement. The proposed mtge. would, by virtue of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), ss. 20, 21, take priority over the annuities & all other charges & estates created by the settlement. It was not proposed to pay off the annuitants out of the money to be raised, nor could they be so paid off; &, having regard to the estimated probable sum which would be produced by a sale of the land under the powers given by the Settled Land Acts, it appeared that such a sale would preserve, whilst the proposed mtge. would unjustly prejudice, their interests. It was assumed that the tenant for life in deciding to effect the proposed mtge. was acting honestly, & with the desire, bonâ fide, to preserve his family estates for those intended by the settlor to enjoy them:—Held: Settled Land Act, 1890 (c. 69), s. 11, gave the tenant for life power to mortgage the unmortgaged part of the settled land in order to pay off the incumbrances on the other part; but having regard to Settled Land Act 1882 (c. 38), s. 53, & to the circumstances, the ct. had power to interfere, to restrain him from effecting the proposed mtge.—HAMPDEN v. BUCKINGHAMSHIRE (EARL), [1893] 2 Ch. 531; 62 L. An order in conformity with this last provision was made by the judge, subsequently to which C. became indebted for money lent to pltf., to whom he mortgaged his life estate, as a security for the loan, in respect of which he further gave a judgment. Pltf. applied to the trustees who resisted payment on the ground of the said Act & order, & this bill was filed by pltf. to enforce his security against C.'s life estate.—GREEN v. MORTIMER (1861), 3 L. 338. Power to mortgage implied from other express powers—Express power of leasing—Demise by way of mortgage.]—(1) Testator devised his real estates in strict settlement, making M. first tenant for life, without impeachment of waste, &, after giving to male tenants for life powers to jointure their wives & provide portions for younger children, proceeded to authorise the tenant for life when in possession & the guardians of infant tenants for life in possession to demise any parts of the estates, except the mansion house, for any term not exceeding twenty-one years, at the best rent, without fine or premium. He then empowered such tenants for life & guardians to grant any lease or leases of any mines or collieries, or of any parcels of land, for the purpose of digging for, winning, or gaining minerals or coal in any part of his estates " for such terms or number of years, & under & subject to such rents or reservations & agreements, as to such tenant for life or guardians or guardian shall seem reasonable & proper," & also to grant building or repairing leases for any term not exceeding ninety-nine years without any fine or premium. In 1843, M. the tenant for life, by a deed reciting the leasing power, in consideration of £6,000 paid to him by C., demised the mines included in a mining lease made by testator to E. in 1829, which would expire in 1848, to C. for ninety-nine years at a peppercorn rent, subject to redemption on payment of £6,000 & interest. The deed contained an appointment of a receiver of the rents & royalties payable by the present & future tenants, & did not oblige C. to work the mines; but the tenant for life covenanted to grant, or concur in granting, such further leases as C. should require:—Held: this deed was a valid exercise of the power of leasing mines, & created a good legal mtge. for an absolute term of ninety-nine years.

(2) By a deed of April, 1850, reciting the will & the power of leasing mines, & that M. was indebted to S. P. & B. in £60,000 & that it had been agreed that S. P. & B. should pay what was due on the mtge. of 1843, & take a transfer of that security, & that for securing to S. P. & B. the payment of the debt due to them from M. & any other moneys they might advance to him, it had been agreed that such further mtge. as thereinafter contained should be made; the mtge. debt of £6,000 was assigned to S. P. & B., & the term was also assigned to them subject to the existing equity of redemption, & M. granted his life estate to J. C. as a trustee for S. P. & B. It was declared that the collieries & property assigned to S. P. & B. should be subject to the proviso for redemption thereinafter contained. There followed a proviso for redemption of all the mtged. property on payment of £67,000, being the aggregate of the £60,000, & the moneys secured by the mtge. of 1843:—Held: the £60,000 was effectually charged on the ninety-nine years term as well as on the life interest, for this deed was a good exercise of the leasing power by varying the proviso for redemption in the deed of 1843, & that even if it were a defective exercise of that power, the defect was one which a ct. of equity would make good.—MOSTYN v. LANCASTER, TAYLOR v. MOSTYN (1883), 23 Ch. B. died in 1812, & the husband of A. was his exor. & one of his residuary legatees. The term passed to A.'s husband as exor., & he died in 1824. After the death of B. no interest was paid, & upon the death of A. the remainderman took possession. A.s husband bequeathed all his property to A. & made her one of his exors., but she did not prove. In ejectment upon demises by the exor. of A. & also by the exors. of A.'s husband:—Held: the mtge. deed was not invalidated by the fact that the expenses were partly incurred in exchanging lands allotted to A. with the lands of her husband.—DOE d. 340. —— Limited to specific sum per acre—Personal liability of owner for excess.]—By the General Inclosure Act, 1845 (c. 118), a tenant for life is empowered to charge the allotments by way of mtge., with the inclosure expenses, not exceeding £5 per acre, &, by the Amendment Act, 1848 (c. 99), the money so to be raised to be paid to the Inclosure Comrs. The trustees of a settlement, with the usual powers of sale & exchange, were to apply the moneys to arise from any sale or exchange in the payment off of existing incumbrances upon the settled estates, or in the purchase of other lands. The trustees sold a part of the estates, & paid the money over to the tenant for life, who applied it in paying the expenses of inclosure, & in improving the allotments. The tenant for life died without having executed any mtge. in pursuance of the Act:—Held: the moneys so expended by him were, to the extent of £5 an acre, a charge on the settled estates, & his estate was liable to make good the balance.—VERNON v. MANVERS (EARL) (1862), 31 Beav. 617; 1 New Rep. 117; 32 L. 343. Whether mortgagee concerned with application of money—Lands vested in trustees by statute.]—Where lands were vested in trustees by Act of Parliament, to be mortgaged for a particular purpose, it was incumbent on the mtgee. to see the money applied accordingly.—COTTEREL v. HAMPSON (1686), 2 Vern. 5; 23 E. R. 616, L. C.

344. —— Assignee of mortgagee.]—Testator devised certain freehold estates to trustees, for five hundred years, upon trust that they should, by sale, demise or mtge. of all or any part of the estates, for all or any part of the term, or by other lawful means, levy & raise £2,400, &, when so raised, upon trust that they should put & place out same at interest, upon Govt. or real security, & call in & replace same from time to time as they should think proper; &, upon trust, to pay the proceeds to the testator's daughter, for her life; & should, after her decease, call in the £2,400, & pay same to the daughter's appointees; &, in default of appointment, among her children. The trustees borrowed the £2,400, & executed a mtge. for same, on which they indorsed a receipt for the amount. The tenant for life died; the mtgee. transferred the mtge. to pltf. On a bill to foreclose the mtge. one of defts. entitled to the £2,400 under the trusts of the will, suggested that the trustees never received the mtge. money; & that the mtgee. was, under the trusts of the will, liable for its misapplication:—Held: the trust implied an authority to receive the £4,200, & the trustees having given a receipt, it was not necessary for the mtgee. to show that the money reached the hands of the trustees. &, further, pltf. being a transferree for value, having the legal estate, he was not bound to inquire, & the ct. made a decree for a foreclosure.—LOCKE v. LOMAS (1852), 5 De G. & Sm. 326; 21 L. 345. Trustees under private Act—Execution of specific works—Mortgage of materials requisite for execution—Whether trust property within provisions of Act.]—By a local Act certain persons were incorporated as Comrs., for the purpose of "constructing tidal basins, a dock, & other works at Birkenhead": & by a further local Act, certain trustees were submitted for these Comrs.; & the property which was vested in the Comrs. by virtue of the former Act, was, by the subsequent Act, vested in the trustees. By sect. 39 of the former Act, the Comrs. were empowered to borrow at interest, on the credit of the several rates & tolls by that Act granted, & of any property which might be vested in the Comrs. by virtue of that Act, any sums of money, so that the amount owing by them did not at any one time exceed a certain specified sum; & for securing the repayment of the moneys so borrowed, the Comrs. might assign over the said rates, tolls, & property to the person who should advance or lend such money, as a security for the money so borrowed. By sect. 40, such mtge. was to be by deed duly stamped, etc., & might be according to the form given in the schedule to the Act. By sect. 41, such mtgees. were to be creditors on the rates or tolls & property equally. By sect. 43, a register of such mtges. was to be kept, & to be open to inspection. By sect. 57, the Comrs. were empowered to purchase certain lands, & to agree with the parties interested in such lands for the purchase for a consideration in money, etc. After a portion of the works had been completed, the trustees, who were indebted to their contractor for the execution of a part of the works, by two several indentures assigned to him by way of mtge. all the plant, goods, machinery, & working materials, in use in & about the docks. These deeds were not in the form given by the Act, nor were they registered:—Held: as the property assigned by these deeds was not such property as that contemplated by sect. 39 of the first Act, but was property to which the trustees were entitled independently of the Act; & therefore the trustees had an absolute control over it, & the mtges. in question were valid.—M'CORMICK v. PARRY (1852), 7 Exch. 355; 21 L. J. Ex. 143; 18 L. T. O. S. 291; 155 E. R. 984.

346. Extent of power—Costs of mortgage included.]—A power in trustees to raise by mtge. a fixed sum implies a power to raise also the incidental costs of the mtge.—ARMSTRONG v. ARMSTRONG (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 541; 43 L. J. Ch. 719.

347. Power given to sole executrix—With power to appoint another to assist in execution of trusts—Joint mortgage.]—R. by his will appointed his wife sole extrix., with power to appoint another person to assist her in carrying out the trusts of the will, & gave her certain leasehold houses during her widowhood, with power to sell, mortgage, or lease any part thereof, & to apply the money to her own use, & subject thereto he gave the same on certain trusts in favour of his children. R. died in 1883. By indenture of Oct. 31, 1887, between the widow & other beneficiaries under the will, it was agreed that the widow should appoint another person to act with her in the trusts of the will, & that she should, prior to such appointment, sell the leaseholds & apply the money as therein mentioned. The leaseholds were not sold according to this agreement, but the widow, by indenture of Dec. 8, 1887, appointed W. to act with her as co-trustee, & vested the leaseholds in themselves jointly, & by indenture dated May 19, 1888, they mortgaged the leaseholds to deft. He afterwards contracted as mtgee. to sell a part of the leaseholds to pltf., who refused to complete the purchase, & sued deft. for the return of his deposit:—Held: the widow & W. had power to mortgage the leaseholds, & deft. could make a good title to them.—SAXBY v. THOMAS (1890), 64 L. T. 65, C. A.

348. Power to charge for valuable consideration—Mortgage for past & future advances.]—A. died in 1866, appointing his two sons, his partners, trustees & exors. He gave £5,000 in trust for his daughters & their children charged on all his estate. He empowered his trustees to retain the £5,000 in their business as long as they might reasonably require or wish, & subject to that option, & as soon as they conveniently could, they were to invest it otherwise. He gave all his residue to his sons, & declared, if they should sell or charge any part of the real estate for a "full or valuable consideration," it should not be liable, in the hands of the purchaser, to the legacy. Certain freehold business premises belonged to A. & his sons in common, subject to a mtge. for £2,000. In 1878 the sons mortgaged these premises to R. to secure past & future advances. No fresh advance was made at the time. Out of previous advances the sons had, without any stipulation to that effect by R., paid off the £2,000 mtge. & taken a reconveyance to themselves. Other part of such advance they had applied in extending their business:—Held: the mtge. to R. was a charge for a valuable consideration within the terms of the will; the testator had made his sons the sole judges of the length of time during which it was reasonable to keep the amount of the legacies in the business; & in the absence of mala fides the mtge. to R. had priority for the whole amount due on it to the charge of the £5,000.—REDMAN v. RYMER (1891), 65 L. 349. Under trust for sale—Whether intention of testator to effect absolute conversion.]—A trust, "to make sale & dispose of" testator's real estates, by private sale or public auction:—Held: not to authorise a mtge.; there appearing an intention on the part of testator, that his whole real estate should be converted.—HALDENBY v. SPOFFORTH (1839), 1 Beav. 390; 8 L. J. Ch. 238; 3 Jur. 241; 48 E. R. 991.

350. —— ——.]—(1) Testator, by his will, after appointing three persons his exors., gave to them the residue of his personal estate & directed them or other the trustees to be appointed under the provisions contained in his will to stand possessed of his residuary personal estate, upon trust, at such time or times as to them should seem meet, to sell & convert into money all such part thereof as should not consist of money & invest the produce in securities, & to stand possessed of same, upon trust thereout to pay his funeral expenses & debts & certain large legacies which he specified, & to stand possessed of the residue for his two sons equally, & the will contained a clause which, according to the construction put on it by the ct., empowered the trustees to give receipts. Sixteen years after the death of testator, the then acting trustees of the will, who were not the exors., raised money upon a deposit of the title-deeds of two leasehold houses, part of testator's residuary estate:—Held: dismissing a claim filed by the mtgees. to enforce their securities, inasmuch as the trusts of the will showed a conversion out & out of testator's property to be absolutely necessary, the trustees were not authorised in raising money by mtge.

(2) A power of sale out & out, & having an object beyond the raising of a particular charge, does not authorise a mtge.; but where the power is for raising a particular charge, & the estate is settled or devised subject to that charge, it may be proper to raise the money by mtge., & such a mtge. will be supported as a conditional sale.

(3) Where a trust is created by will for the payment of debts & legacies, a purchaser or mtgee. is not bound to see to the application of the money raised, the principle referable to such a case being that testator has shown his intention to be to entrust the trustees with the power of receiving & applying the money. Persons, however, who deal with trustees raising money at a considerable distance of time & without apparent reason for so doing, are under an obligation to inquire & see that no breach of trust is being committed.

(4) They [the trustees] covenant, most unusually to pay the money themselves (LORD ST. LEONARDS, C.).—STROUGHILL v. ANSTEY (1852), 1 De G. M. & G. 635; 22 L. J. Ch. 130; 19 L. T. O. S. 367; 16 Jur. 671; 42 E. R. 700, L. C.

351. —— ——.]—A trust for sale of real estate held not to authorise a mtge. Real estate was conveyed to trustees upon trust to "sell & dispose" thereof, &, out of the money to arise, "levy, raise & pay" two sums of £150 & £1,000, & invest the residue of the moneys to arise, for the husband & wife for their lives, & afterwards for their children, &, in default, as the wife should appoint by will:—Held: the trustees were not justified in raising these two sums by mtge., inasmuch as a conversion of the estate into money, out & out, was intended.—PAGE v. COOPER (1853), 16 Beav. 396; 20 L. T. O. S. 287; 1 W. R. 136; 51 E. R. 831.

352. —— ——.]—J. W. by will devised real property upon trust for sale when & as the trustees should think necessary for the purposes of his will. The purposes of the will required under certain circumstances the raising of money. J. W., the trustee of the will, executed mtges. of the trust estate, received the mtge. moneys, & applied them to his own use. Subsequently some of the beneficiaries under the will brought an action against the trustees to recover certain moneys which they alleged had been received by W. as trustee of the said will. The moneys so claimed included the sums raised by the disputed mtges. Judgment was recovered in the said action for the whole sum claimed. Execution was levied, & produced £1,300, which was not enough to pay the whole of the moneys claimed other than the mtge. moneys. New trustees of the will had been appointed, & the new trustees & beneficiaries brought this action against the mtgees. to set aside the mtges. A foreclosure action by the mtgees. was heard at the same time:—Held: the will contained no implied power to mortgage, & the mtges. must be set aside, but only on the terms of pltfs. paying to the mtgees. a due proportion of the £1,300 recovered from J. W.—WALKER v. SOUTHALL, SOUTHALL v. WALKER (1887), 56 L. T. 882.

353. —— Power to postpone sale — Mortgagee with notice.]—Testator, who died in 1841, directed his trustees to sell his real estate, & giving them some discretion therein. Instead of selling, they mortgaged, & retained the estate:—Held: (1) they had committed a breach of trust, & the estate having become depreciated they were liable for the loss; (2) the mtge. was void as against the mtgee. with notice, but he was entitled to stand as a creditor on the produce of the estate, to the extent to which the mtge. money had been properly applied.—DEVAYNES v. ROBINSON (1857), 24 Beav. 86; 27 L. J. Ch. 157; 29 L. T. O. S. 244; 3 Jur. N. S. 707; 5 W. R. 509; 53 E. R. 289.

354. —— —— Power to manage during postponement.]—Testator gave his real & residuary personal estate to trustees in trust for sale, with a power of postponement in the usual form followed by a power, also in common form, during such postponement to manage & let the real estate & to make out of the income or capital of his real & personal estate any outlay they might consider necessary for renewals of leases, improvements, repairs, premiums on policies or otherwise for the benefit or in respect of his real or personal estate. The will contained no express power to raise money by mtge. or charge:—Held: the trustees had power to raise money by mtge. or charge of the real estate for the purpose of repairing houses forming part of the real estate.—Re BELLINGER, DURELL v. BELLINGER, [1898] 2 Ch. 534; 67 L. J. Ch. 580; 79 L. T. 54.

355. —— Power to settle accounts & wind up affairs.]—Testator appointed H. & J. exors. & trustees of his will & directed that the trustees or trustee for the time being of his will should have full power to settle his accounts & wind up his affairs as they or he should think fit, & in so doing "to make any sales & arrangements they or he shall judge expedient," & testator decreed all his real estate unto & to the use of his trustees upon the trusts therein declared. After testator's death J., H. having renounced probate & disclaimed the trusts of the will, in order to meet some pressing claims against the estate borrowed a sum of £500 upon the security of a mtge. of a portion of the real estate:—Held: under the terms of the will J. being both exor. & trustee had power to mortgage testator's real estate.—Re JONES, DUTTON v. BROOKFIELD (1889), 59 L. 356. Under trust to raise money — Portions for children.]—The trust of a term is, to raise daughters' portions by rents, issues, & profits; or by making leases for three lives at the ancient rent; or by granting copyholds on fines; the money to be paid to the daughters at their age of eighteen or marriage, or as soon after as same can be raised out of the premises as aforesaid; the portions, as it seems, may not be raised by sale or mtge.—MILLS v. BANKS (1724), 3 P. 357. —— Testamentary charge for payment of debts & legacies.]—A testamentary charge of real estates with the payment of debts, generally, authorises a trustee, to whom, after imposing the charge, testator has devised the estates upon trust for other persons, to sell or mortgage the estates charged, & exempts the purchaser or mtgee. from liability to see to the application of the purchase or mtge. money.—BALL v. HARRIS (1839), 4 My. & Cr. 264; 8 L. 359. —— —— Costs of transfer of mortgage.]—Testator devised freehold estates to a trustee for a terms of two thousand years upon trust to raise money in aid of his personal estate for the purpose of satisfying his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses & legacies, & subject thereto he devised his real estates in strict settlement. The trustee raised £10,000 under the term, by a mtge. of the estates; & on the mtgee. requiring payment he obtained a transferee, & the mtge. was transferred except as to a small portion of the estates, which was mortgaged by the trustee to secure the costs of the transfer. There still remained a sum of £1,600 raisable under the term in certain contingencies:—Held: it was the duty of the trustee to protect the term for the sake of the beneficiaries, & he was entitled to charge the costs of the transfer upon the estates.—SEWELL v. BISHOPP (1893), 62 L. J. Ch. 985; 69 L. T. 68, C. A.

360. Under powers of management.]—A devise by will to trustees, of leaseholds for lives, in trust, during the life of A., by & out of the rents & profits, or otherwise, to keep the premises in repair & full lived, & to pay the fines & expenses attending any renewals & repairs thereof, authorises a mtge., but not a sale of the whole lease. The mtgee. may procure a sale.—GARMSTONE v. GAUNT (1845), 1 Coll. 577; 14 L. J. Ch. 162; 4 L. T. O. S. 310; 9 Jur. 78; 63 E. R. 550.

361. ——.]—Trustees having power, during the minorities of tenants for life or in tail, to superintend the management of an estate, cut timber, erect, pull down, & repair houses, & do various other things of a more or less similar character, "& generally to deal with the premises as they or he might do if they or he were the absolute beneficial owners or owner thereof, without being answerable for any loss or damage which might happen thereby," deposited with a bank the title deeds of the estate to secure an advance of money to be employed in the erection of buildings under the power:—Held: the bank had no valid title under the power.—BROOM v. SHEFFIELD & ROTHERHAM BANK (1876), 24 W. R. 948.

— Management of business — Mortgage of property not forming assets of business—Mortgage for purposes of business.]—Testator, who died in 1866, devised & bequeathed all his real & personal estate upon trust for sale & conversion, & empowered his trustees to carry on his business for such time as they should see fit, & to employ in the business all the capital which might be invested therein at the time of his decease, & the profits thereof, & to increase or abridge, the business & his capital therein, & generally to transact all matters & concerns respecting the business, & to do all acts relative thereto, in the same manner as if they were absolutely entitled to the same. The personal estate of testator comprised nearly the whole of the capital of the business. His real estate consisted of the manufactory & buildings upon which the business was carried on, & for which he received a rent. The trustees carried on the business after testator's death in partnership with other persons; but the firm ultimately became bkpt. In 1869 one of the trustees advanced to his co-trustees £2,000, & the title deeds relating to the manufactory & premises were deposited with him for securing the repayment of the advance with interest. The money was applied for the purposes of the business. This transaction had not been disclosed. In Jan. 1882, an action was commenced for the administration of testator's estate. In pursuance of an order made in that action, the business was sold in 1883. In Sept. 1882, certain of the beneficiaries mortgaged all their respective shares under the will to secure the repayment to a banking co. of £4,600. The banking co. applied by petition for leave to intervene in the action, & obtain payment of their debt. The question raised was, whether the trustees had power to make an equitable mtge. of real estate, which did not form part of the assets employed in the business, for the purposes of the business:—Held: power to employ other assets in the business was conferred upon the trustees by the authority to increase the capital of the business; as they could have sold the real estate & used the proceeds in the business, they were not wrong in using the property itself to assist in carrying on the business; & that the mtge. of 1869 had priority over the mtge. of 1882.—Re DIMMOCK, DIMMOCK v. DIMMOCK (1885), 52 L. T. 494.

363. —— —— Mortgage in prejudice to prior annuitant.]—Testator bequeathed a pecuniary legacy & a life annuity to his widow, & gave all his real & personal estate to trustees, upon trust, subject to the payment of the legacy & annuity, to pay the rents & income to his daughter for life, & he directed that, after her death, the estate should be held in trust for his grandchild. He empowered his trustees to continue his business of a brick manufacturer, & to increase or diminish the real or personal estate employed therein at his death:—Held: the annuity was a first charge upon the corpus of the real & personal estate; & further, the trustees could not create a paramount charge by mortgaging the real estate to raise moneys for the discharge of debts incurred by them in carrying on testator's business.—Re WEBB, LEEDHAM v. PATCHETT (1890), 63 L. 367. Costs of rebuilding mansion house—Of settled estate.]—A residential estate of small extent was settled in strict settlement upon the settlor, his wife & family, & power was given to certain trustees, during the minority of any person entitled to the rents & profits, to rebuild or repair the mansion house, & to pay for the cost out of the rents & profits; & they also had power, with the consent of the tenant for life, to lease the property for ninety-nine years. The value of the estate to the settlor & his family depended chiefly upon the residence. Since the death of the settlor, his widow being tenant for life in possession, the house had become ruinous from the foundation having given way & could only be rendered habitable by rebuilding on a new site. The ct., on bill filed by the widow, authorised the trustees to raise by mtge. of the settled property £5,000 to be spent in rebuilding the residence, on being satisfied that the value of the estate, with the house, & subject to the mtge., would not be less than if the house had been removed & the materials sold.—FRITH v. CAMERON (1871), L. 370. —— Covenant to pay as trustees but not so as to create personal liability.]—P. & H. formerly carried on business in partnership & as such were entitled as part of their partnership property to certain freehold property which was subject to a mtge. created by them to secure £2,000, & interest. After the deaths of P. & H. disputes arose between their respective trustees as to P.'s share in the partnership property, & ultimately a compromise was made in pursuance of one of the terms of which a deed was entered into between pltf., the present trustee of P.'s will, & defts., the present trustees of H.'s will. By that deed pltf. as trustee granted & released unto defts. P.'s share in the mtged. premises subject to the mtge., & defts. 371. —— ——.] — (1) Where the person invoking the aid of the ct. is himself implicated in the illegality, the ct. will not allow itself to be made an instrument to enforce an illegal agreement, whether deft. has pleaded the illegality or not.

Pltf. lent money to trustees upon the security of a mtge. of their trust property. The ct., having come to the conclusion on the evidence that pltf. was a money-lender who had lent the money at a time when he was not registered as a money-lender under the Money-lenders Act, 1900 (c. 51), held the mtge. to be void, & refused to enforce it even against one of defts., who had failed to plead the Act by way of defence.

The committee with his sisters occupied the mansion accordingly, & incurred heavy &, as it was alleged, unreasonable expenses about the establishment. The income being insufficient to pay the allowance, it fell into arrear, & the committee mortgaged the arrears. He subsequently was removed from being committee & became bkpt., & a large amount of bills incurred in keeping up the establishment remained unpaid. A surplus having arisen applicable to payment of the arrears, the new committee presented a petition for direction as to its application:—Held: although the allowance was made to the former committee without any obligation to account, & with an intention indirectly to confer a benefit on him & his sisters, still it was an allowance made to a person in a fiduciary position for a particular purpose, & which he had no right to mortgage, & the mtgee. could stand in no better position than the committee himself.—Re WELD (1882), 20 Ch. 383. —— —— Leaseholds for long term — At peppercorn rent & onerous covenants.]—Mtgee. of a share of the proceeds of a real estate devised in trust to sell & to invest the proceeds in Govt. or real securities commenced an action against the mtgor. & the trustee of the will alleging that the money had been invested upon improper securities. An order was made directing accounts & inquiries, & reserving further consideration. Shortly afterwards the trustee paid into ct. the amount of the mtged. share, & paid to the other beneficiaries their shares. The certificate found these payments, & as to the mode of investment stated simply that the money had been invested on mtge. of leaseholds. On further consideration pltf. did not give notice to read the evidence taken in chambers. HALL, V.C., declined to hear the evidence taken in Chambers, held that on the finding in the certificate the investment was not shown to be improper, & that the action was unnecessary, & made an order giving the trustee his costs, & costs, charges, & expenses out of the fund in ct. On appeal:—Held: Under a trust to invest in real securities an investment on mtge. of leaseholds is improper, unless the leaseholds are for a long term of years at a peppercorn rent without onerous covenants.—Re CHENNELL, JONES v. Part of the mtged. estate was afterwards sold for less than the value of the stock lent, & one third of the price was paid in cash to the trustees of the marriage settlement:—Held: the estate was not discharged, there being no evidence that the cash had been duly invested, or that the trustees received cash instead of stock, in order to invest on real security. Semble: if the purchase deed had contained a recital that the trustees of the settlement had determined to invest the money on real security, they need not have received it in stock, but their receipt for it in cash would have been a good discharge.—PELL v. DE WINTON (1857), 2 De G. & J. 13; 27 L. the consent in writing of the tenant for life was not previously obtained, although upon hearing of the change of investment he did not make any objection thereto. Upon the death of the tenant for life the money on mtge. was called in. The whole of the principal invested was forthcoming, but the remaindermen, who were entitled to the capital, claimed that the trustees ought to replace the sums of stock sold in 1875, which at that time stood at a lower price than in 1887 when the proceedings were commenced:—Held: the sale in 1875 was improper, as having been made for the purpose of effecting another investment which was a breach of trust as not being in the names of the trustees solely, & the investment of 1879 was also a breach of trust, as the previous consent of the tenant for life after the facts were fully laid before him was not obtained, & consequently the trustees were liable either to replace the stock sold, or to pay the difference in price of the stock sold in 1875 & of the same amount of stock at the time of the commencement of the proceedings.—Re MASSINGBERD'S SETTLEMENT, CLARK v. TRELAWNEY (1890), 63 L. 394. —— ——.] — Trustees are not justified in allowing trust money to get into the hands of a solr., or in allowing him to hold the securities upon which the trust fund is invested; & the law is the same where the estate is being administered by the ct. Trustees of an estate which was being administered by the ct. employed a solr. to manage the trust estate, & allowed him to receive the trust moneys for the purpose of investment. The solr. represented that he had duly made investments, & he rendered periodical accounts to the trustees purporting to show such investments, & paid the interest upon them. He had, in fact, never made any investments, but had misappropriated the money, & ultimately he filed a liquidation petition, & a part of the trust fund was thus lost:—Held: the trustees were liable to make good the loss to the trust estate.—Re DEWAR, DEWAR v. BROOKE (1885), 54 L. 398. Duty to make periodic investigation — No suspicion that title in jeopardy.]—I do not believe that there is any obligation or duty on the part of trustees to make periodical or further investigations as to either the title of the security or the solvency or the sufficiency of the mtgor. I must not be taken, in saying that, for a moment to question that if there are circumstances which suggest to a reasonable man that the security is in jeopardy the duty may not arise; but the liability of a trustee in dealing with an authorised security must really proceed on the footing of wilful default & not upon not making inquiries when he ought to do so (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—RAWSTHORNE v. ROWLEY (1907), [1909] 1 Ch. 409, n.; 78 L. The deed comprised a number of other properties. The trustees made no inquiry as to whether the lessor's consent was necessary to the sub-demise:—Held: the trustees had been guilty of negligence, & the ct. was precluded from giving them, under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1892 (c. 13), s. 4, relief against the forfeiture.—MATTHEWS v. SMALLWOOD, [1910] 1 Ch. 777; 79 L. iii. Valuation of Proposed Security.

400. No statutory obligation to take valuation.]—There is no fixed rule that in all cases where a portion of the premises upon which mtge. money is lent is utilised for business purposes, trustees would be guilty of a breach of trust in advancing more than a moiety of the value of the property; but if the mtged. premises & the business are so inseparable that the discontinuance of the business may result in depreciation of the premises, trustees ought not to advance more than one half. Sect. 8 of Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), is a relieving sect., & does not impose a statutory obligation upon trustees to take a valuation, & the neglect to do so does not exclude them from the benevolent operation of Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (c. 35), s. 3. In Apr. 1899, the trustees of a settled legacy of £3,500, invested this trust money upon mtge. of two blocks of freehold house property in Norwich, a portion of the premises being used for the purposes of a butcher's business of forty years' standing. A bank had previously allowed an overdraft of £6,000 upon the security of a deposit of the title deeds of same property. No independent valuation was made on behalf of the trustees at the time of making the advance. They relied upon a valuation made in Sept. 1896, for a different purpose, by a highly skilled valuer at Norwich, who valued the whole of the premises at £6,550. The butcher's business subsequently failed, & the premises became much depreciated in value & wholly insufficient to pay the settled legacy.

In an action by the beneficiaries under the settlement seeking to make the trustees liable for a breach of trust in investing upon an insufficient security:—Held: the value of the property at the time of the advance in 1899 was £5,500, & having regard to all the circumstances which the trustees were entitled to take into consideration, they were justified in lending more than one half the value upon the portion used for business purposes, in order to make up the full loan of £3,500, & were not liable for a breach of trust; even assuming that they had advanced a larger sum than was justifiable, they had acted reasonably within Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (c. 35), s. 3, & should be relieved from liability.—PALMER v. EMERSON, [1911] 1 Ch. 758; 80 L. J. Ch. 418; 104 L. T. 557; 27 T. L. R. 320; 55 Sol. Jo. 365.

401. No independent valuation.] — Under a settlement S. was tenant for life with an ultimate trust, in default of children, which happened, for her testamentary appointees. The trustees, having power to invest on leasehold securities, invested the trust funds, with S.'s consent, on separate sub-mtges. of leasehold houses, unfinished & unlet, on a building estate of which the roads & drainage were in a defective condition. The investment was made without an independent or reliable valuation, & more than half of the value of the house was lent on each sub-mtge. S. died, having by will disposed of the trust-funds & appointed exors. The exors., with the sanction of the Chief Clerk, in an action establishing S.'s testamentary appointment, had the sub-mtges. transferred to them by the trustees, & subsequently, finding them an insufficient security, brought an action against the trustees to make them personally liable for the deficiency:—Held: although the sub-mtges. were not improper investments in point of form, the trustees, having invested the trust funds on insufficient security of a speculative character, & without proper precautions, must make good the loss; & the exors. having taken the transfers in ignorance of the circumstances attending the investment, were not bound by adoption or acquiescence.—SMETHURST v. HASTINGS (1885), 30 Ch. D. 490; 55 L. J. Ch. 173; 52 L. T. 567; 33 W. R. 496; 1 T. L. R. 335.

Annotation:—Refd. Mara v. Browne, [1895] 2 Ch. 69.

402. ——.]—(1) Pltfs. brought an action for a declaration that an investment of £4,440, trust moneys on mtge. of freehold house property was a breach of trust, & that the mode in which the property was subsequently neglected was a further breach of trust, on the ground that the property was not a proper security for any part of the trust funds; that the trustees did not have a valuation made by a properly instructed & independent valuer; that the valuation which was in fact made was unsatisfactory; that the mtgor. ought to have covenanted to keep the property in repair, & ought not to have been empowered to grant leases. The property depreciated in value, & two of the mtged. houses ceased to be let & fell into disrepair, & the beneficiaries contended that the trustees ought to have taken steps from time to time to ascertain the condition of the property:—Held: it was not proved that the property was of such a nature as to be wholly improper for the investment of trust moneys but the valuation obtained by the trustees was not such a valuation as is contemplated by Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 8.

(2) In applying Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 9, the ct. will be guided by the principles which obtained before the passing of Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), as to the margin of value to be required. Applying these principles, the ct. held that the property was a good security for at most £3,400, & that the trustees must make good the balance:—Held: the trustees were not liable under the circumstances of this case for not insisting on a covenant to repair, or a clause precluding the mtgor. from granting occupation leases or for neglect to inspect the mtged. property from time to time.

(3) The maximum sum which a prudent man can be advised to lend on mtge. depends on the nature of the property & upon all the circumstances of the case. If the property is liable to deteriorate or is specially subject to fluctuations, a prudent man will require a larger margin for his protection than he would in the case of property attended by no such disadvantages. It is not the law when once a valuer has ascertained the value of a property, whatever its nature & whatever method of valuation the valuer has adopted, a trustee is primâ facie justified in making an advance of two-thirds of its value.—SHAW v. CATES, [1909] 1 Ch. 389; 78 L. By the deed of partnership, B., as owner of the freehold, was to receive £300 a year out of the profits of the school, & in the event of his death, S. was to take a lease at the same rental. The advance was made in reliance upon the report of a surveyor, instructed by one of the trustees in his capacity of solr. to B., such report being made for the purposes of a previous mtge. negotiation with other trustees, which fell through. By this report the property was estimated at £5,800 on the assumption that a responsible tenant was willing to take a lease of the property at a rental of £400 a year. The security having proved insufficient:—Held: the trustees had not acted as prudent men in making such an advance upon a valuation made on behalf of the borrower, & must restore the trust funds.—WALCOTT v. LYONS (1886), 54 L. 405. —— ——.]—Defender, M., was trustee under a marriage contract, by which the wife's property was settled on herself for life, excluding the jus mariti; &, in case she survived her husband, to her in fee; but, should she predecease her husband, to him for life or until his second marriage; & lastly, in the event of her predeceasing her husband, to her children in fee, after her husband's decease or second marriage. Defender, M., & the husband & wife, who were also trustees, lent this trust fund on the security of unfinished houses in course of erection under a building speculation. The only valuation the trustees had before them was one by an architect, which had been obtained by the borrower, but they consulted defender H., who was their law agent, & were informed by him that there was no objection to the investment. The deed contained an immunity clause exonerating the trustees from "omissions or neglect of diligence, or the insufficiency of securities, insolvency of debtors, or depreciation in the value of purchases." Pursuers, the children of the marriage, while both spouses were alive, brought an action for a declaration that defender, M., & the law agent were jointly & severally liable to restore the fund, which had been lost by the failure of the speculation:—Held: (1) there had been a positive breach of duty on the part of defender M., & he was liable, pursuers' rights being contingent, & the husband & wife being barred from any relief against him, to restore the trust fund by paying it to a judicial factor appointed by the ct. to abide the event, if & when pursuers became entitled; (2) the law agent was not liable, for there was no evidence to prove that he had been employed by the pursuers or any person on their behalf.—RAE v. MEEK (1889), 14 App. Cas. 558, H. 406. —— Valuation on behalf of vendors to mortgagor.]—In May, 1870, F. & G. the trustees of a will, one of whom, F., was an experienced farmer, & the other, G., a solr., advanced a sum of £2,400, part of the trust estate, along with another sum of £2,600 not part of the estate, making together £5,000, at £4 per cent., on the security of a freehold farm, which in 1868 had been sold to the mtgor., who was farming that & neighbouring land on a peculiar system of husbandry. The trustees had power to advance on contributory mtges. In 1868, the farm had been valued on behalf of the vendors, of whom G. was one, & also the solr., at £6,895. This valuation was communicated to F. at the time of the mtge.; & no other valuation was made. Interest was paid in full, but irregularly, down to Nov. 1877, since which time the farm, which was situated on clay soil, in a wet situation, had become unsaleable & unlettable, owing to unfavourable seasons, & had yielded no income. The mtgor. became insolvent. Upon claim by the cestui que trust against F. & the exors. of G., to be declared entitled to payment of the £2,400 & interest since Nov. 1877:—Held: (1) notwithstanding that no valuation was used at the date of the mtge. other than the valuation made on behalf of the vendors at the time of the sale to the mtgor.; that G. the trustee, was himself one, & solr. of the others, of the vendors to the mtgor.; & that the sum advanced was more than two thirds of the estimated value of the farm; the trustees were not liable to make good the deficient security; the test of liability always is, whether or not the trustees have acted as prudent men would have acted in dealing with their own property.

407. —— Value deduced from price paid by mortgagor.]—The trustees of a settlement invested the sum of £45,000 forming part of the funds subject to the settlement, by way of mtge. When the mtge. was taken no actual valuation of the property comprised in the security was made; but the greater part of the property, which was adjacent to the remainder, had been bought at public auction in the previous year by the mtgor. at a rate which would have given to the property comprised in the security the value of £7,167. The true value of the property at the time of the mtge. was, however, £6,394, so that the sum actually advanced by the trustees exceeded the two thirds value by £237 6*s.* 8*d.* The trustees acted under the advice of the solrs. to the trust. In an action against the surviving trustee for the payment of this sum of £237 6*s.* 8*d.* & the interest thereon, the trustee sought relief under Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (c. 35), s. 3. The ct. found that the trustee acted honestly & not unreasonably, but refused to excuse him altogether; & directed him to make good the sum of £237 6*s.* 8*d.*, no order being made as to the costs of the action.—WAITE v. PARKINSON (1901), 85 L. The property was a hotel in the country, & the trustees had sent down a London surveyor who valued the hotel, including therein the licence, at nearly double the sum to be advanced. The hotel turned out to be worth much less than the sum advanced. 414. ——.]—A trustee advanced trust moneys to a brickbuilding firm upon the security of a first mtge. of their premises, freehold & leasehold, & some of the plant. In so doing he acted upon the advice of his solr. & upon a favourable report & valuation made by a respectable firm of architects & surveyors. A bank of good standing, moreover, consented to postpone a charge of theirs to his mtge. The mtgors. failed three years afterwards, whereby their lease of that part of the property upon which was most of the clay & shale necessary for the carrying on of the business, became forfeited. The remainder of the property proved unsaleable, & rapidly went to ruin. An action was subsequently brought by the cestuis que trust to make the trustee liable for the loss sustained by them, & it appeared that the report & valuation proceeded, ex facie, in some respects upon faulty principles:—Held: nevertheless the trustee had acted as a prudent man would have acted in dealing with his own property, & was therefore not liable.—Re PEARSON, OXLEY v. SCARTH (1884), 51 L. This deed, & the other title deeds, they retained as a security for the unpaid purchase-money with interest, & they entered into a written agreement with the purchaser that the deeds should remain with them as such security, & that he should, if required, execute a proper mtge. This agreement was signed by the purchaser, & by the trustee in whose custody the deeds were placed. Eight years afterwards the purchaser paid the principal & interest of his debt to this trustee, & received from him the deeds, including the conveyance with the receipt indorsed:—Held: by such payment the purchaser did not discharge himself of his liability incurred by participation in the breach of trust, & the trustee who received the money having misapplied it & absconded, the purchaser was made to pay it over again.—WEBB v. LEDSAM (1855), 1 K. & J. 385; 1 Jur. 419. —— No written security — Covenant by mortgagor to surrender property.]—By an antenuptial settlement, a sum of stock was settled upon certain trusts for the benefit of the wife & children of the marriage. The settlement contained powers for the trustees to sell the trust fund & re-invest the proceeds in Govt. or real securities. By a contemporaneous memorandum, which was executed by the father, the wife, & the intended husband, & indorsed upon the deed of settlement, the trustees were empowered to advance any portion of the trust fund to the owners or lessees of Vauxhall Gardens, upon mtge. either as first, second or third mtgees., for such time & at such rate of interest as the trustees might think fit. The trustees lent the whole of the trust to three persons, who, afterwards became the joint proprietors of & partners in Vauxhall Gardens, but no written security was then taken by the trustees. One of the three proprietors of Vauxhall Gardens subsequently retired from the partnership. Some time afterwards, the trustees obtained a covenant from the two remaining partners to surrender the Vauxhall Gardens by way of mtge., subject to two prior charges. This mtge. eventually proving a wholly inadequate security for the trust fund, a suit was instituted to compel the trustees to reinstate the stock:—Held: under the circumstances, the trustees must be considered, in having made the advance without security, & in having afterwards accepted the covenant of two only of the three joint debtors, to have misapplied the trust fund, & they had subjected themselves to the liability of replacing it.—FOWLER v. REYNAL (1851), 3 Mac. & G. 500; 21 L. A trustee advanced £1,908 trust money on the security of an assignment of an equal amount of the £6,800:—Held: this was a breach of trust.—NORRIS v. WRIGHT (1851), 14 Beav. 291; 51 E. R. 298.

England, Wales, or Ireland, & were empowered to vary investments with the consent of the husband & wife during their joint lives. Lands in Ireland, which were already subject to mtges. for £4,700 & £2,460, were further mortgaged for a sum of £17,900, which was by subsequent payments reduced to £12,150. There were three sub-mtges. of the last-mentioned mtge. for the sums of £4,000, £2,153, & £5,000 respectively. The trustees of the marriage settlement, without the consent of the wife, sold out India stock forming part of the trust funds, & invested the proceeds thereof on a transfer of the third sub-mtge. for £5,000. They took no legal advice as to the propriety of this investment before making it. In an action against the surviving trustee of the settlement for breach of trust:—Held: without deciding whether a puisne mtge. on land in Ireland is of necessity & in all cases an improper investment for trust funds, an investment of such a nature as the trustees had made in the case before the ct. was a breach of trust, & in the circumstances, deft. ought not to be relieved from liability in respect thereof under Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (c. 35), s. 3.—CHAPMAN v. BROWNE, [1902] 1 Ch. 785; 71 L. 426. —— —— ——.]—Trustees sold a tenement, the property of the trust to one of seven beneficiaries under the trust deed, the price in terms of the contract being payable, in May, 1874. In Nov. 1874, the purchaser being unable to pay £12,000 of the price, was allowed to retain it on loan. As security for the loan, he conveyed to the trustees three houses, including his purchase from the trust, upon each of which there were prior incumbrances to an amount exceeding two thirds of the estimated value as stated by the borrower. Besides these securities the trustees held the personal obligation of the borrower & his father in law; both of whom were engaged in trade. Some of the other beneficiaries remonstrated in 1874, & again in 1880; but the money was allowed to remain on these securities until 1884, when the borrower & his father in law became bkpt., & about £10,000 was lost to the trust. The trust deed contained a clause empowering the trustees to lend out the proceeds & other funds of the trust on "such securities heritable or personal" as they might think proper; & an immunity clause declaring that the trustees should not be liable for "omissions, errors, or neglect of management." The same law agent acted for the trustees & the borrower:—Held: the trustees had not acted with perfect impartiality between the beneficiaries, nor had they brought to the management the same care & diligence which a man of ordinary prudence would have exercised in his own concerns; in these circumstances neither the immunity clause nor the authority to lend on personal security were sufficient to protect them, & they were personally liable to make good the deficiency in the trust funds.—KNOX v. MACKINNON (1888), 13 App. Cas. 753, H. 431. —— Leaseholds—Speculative character of property.]—The trustee of a will was directed to invest the trust funds "in his own name or under his legal control" in, amongst other modes of investment, freehold, copyhold, leasehold, or chattel real securities. He invested a sum of £2,000, part of the trust funds, on a contributory mtge. of certain leasehold flats held under leases at substantial rents. The security was introduced by a surveyor to the trustee's solr., who recommended it to the trustee & suggested same surveyor as a suitable person to value the property on the trustee's behalf. The trustee appointed the surveyor & it was arranged that he should be paid a fee only in the event of the mtge. going through. The surveyor made his report, from which it appeared that the property was of a speculative character, but the surveyor nevertheless advised that it formed a good security for the sum proposed to be advanced by the trustee & his co-mtgee. The trustee, relying on the advice of his solr. & on the report, advanced the £2,000. The mtgor. subsequently became insolvent, & the trustee & his co-mtgee. were compelled to sell the property under their power of sale, with the result that the greater part of the £2,000 advanced by the trustee was lost. In an action against the trustee for breach of trust:—Held: the investment was improper & a breach of trust; in making it the trustee, although he had acted honestly, had not acted "reasonably," & he was therefore not entitled to be relieved or excused from personal liability under Judicial Trustees Act, 1896 (c. 35), s. 3.—Re DIVE, DIVE v. ROEBUCK, [1909] 1 Ch. 328; 78 L. The trustees, acting bonâ fide, had, in 1828, upon the report of a surveyor, who had valued the property at £3,500, & the annual rental at £175, lent £2,600, part of the trust moneys, upon a mtge., with powers of sale of the valued property, & which consisted of four freehold messuages, at the time in an unfinished state, the actual yearly rent of which being only £105. The mtgor. having become insolvent, the trustees sold the property in 1836, which then realised less than the amount lent by £353 4*s*. 2*d*., & that sum was lost to the estate. The valuers' report was in fact based upon a valuation of more than double the amount invested, & upon the supposition that the concern was going, but the report did not state this, nor distinguish between the value of the land & that of the buildings, machinery, etc. The trustees acted bonâ fide but acted upon the report without making any further inquiries. The security having failed :—Held: the trustees had not acted with ordinary prudence, & were liable to make good the money, with interest at 4 per cent. from the date of the last payment; & the tenant for life was not liable to return to the trustees 1 per cent., which was claimed on the ground that the higher interest was due to its being a hazardous security.

(2) Upon the general law applicable to this case I have only to observe further that whilst trustees cannot delegate the execution of the trust, they may, as was held by this House in Speight v. Gaunt (1883), 9 App. Cas. 1, avail themselves of the service of others wherever such employment is according to the usual course of business (LORD WATSON).

(3) The cts. of equity in England have indicated & given effect to certain general principles for the guidance of trustees in lending money upon the security of real estate. No one ever said that the rule as to lending not more than one half the value of house property was a hard & fast rule. When applying that rule all the circumstances must be looked at (KAY, J.).

Trustees when they are lending trust money upon house property should tell their valuers that they are lending trust moneys & that they do not desire to lend more than one half the actual value of the property. They should ask for a valuation which would enable them to judge whether they are justified in lending the amount they propose to lend (KAY, J.).—Re OLIVE, OLIVE v. WESTERMAN (1886), 34 Ch. 453. Proviso that money shall not be called in—For stated period of years.]—Under a power to invest trust money "on real securities," a trustee lent it to a railway co., on the usual assignment of the "undertaking," tolls, etc., the principal not payable till seven years:—Held: whether real security or not, the investment was improper.—MANT v. LEITH (1852), 15 Beav. 524; 21 L. 454. Exclusion of power of sale.]—A widow, a tenant for life, desiring an increase of income, induced a trustee to invest, out of a trust fund, a sum exceeding two thirds of its value on mtge. of copyhold house property at interest at £5 per cent. After the rents had become insufficient to pay the interest, her daughter, on her marriage, became entitled to one fourth of the trust fund. The trustee having stated to the husband & wife the deficiency in the widow's income & its cause, they accepted a small sum of money in hand in lieu of their one fourth, & made no objection for ten years, when the widow died. Becoming then entitled to the remaining three fourths parts of the fund, they sought by suit to charge the trustee with the deficiency:—Held: they had so far acquiesced in the investment & could not complain of it; it was not a breach of trust for a trustee to take a mtge. not containing a power of sale.—FARRAR v. BARRACLOUGH (1854), 2 Sm. & G. 231; 2 W. In such a case, the personal covenant of the mtgor. to pay the principal money should not be dispensed with.—LOCKHART v. REILLY, REILLY v. LOCKHART (1855), 24 L. T. O. S. 316; 3 W. R. 227, L. C.

456. Joint account clause—Power of sale exercisable by survivor.]—Mortgage in fee to A. & B. with power "to them, their heirs or assigns," to sell & give receipts for the purchase-money, & to reimburse "themselves & himself" out of the proceeds; & it was declared that the money advanced belonged to them on a joint account, & that the receipt "of the survivor" should be a sufficient discharge for the principal, etc., remaining due at the death of either:—Held: the survivor of A. & B. could make a good title to a purchaser under the power of sale.—HIND v. POOLE (1855), 1 K. & J. 383; 3 Eq. Rep. 449; 1 Jur. N. S. 371; 3 W. R. 331; 69 E. R. 507.

457. —— Whether court will go behind clause.]—In 1840 property was mortgaged to W. in fee, there being nothing in the mtge. deed to show that he was not the beneficial owner of the mtge. money. He died in 1842, having by his will devised & bequeathed his real & personal estate to three trustees, of whom his wife was one, on trusts for the benefit of his wife & children, & having appointed the same three persons exors. He also devised & bequeathed his trust & mtge. estates to the same three persons, subject to the trusts & equities affecting the same respectively. The widow alone proved the will, & alone acted as trustee. The other two trustees disclaimed the trusts. In 1854 the widow obtained a decree absolute foreclosing the mtge. In 1865, she, by a deed indorsed on the mtge. deed, conveyed the property, without receiving any pecuniary consideration for it, to K., C. & B., in fee, as joint tenants at law & in equity. The conveyance contained a recital that testator held the mtge. money on an account under which K., C. & B. were then solely entitled thereto as was thereby acknowledged, whereby the widow, as trustee under testator's will, was trustee only of the property of K., C. & B., & they had requested her to convey it to them. On a subsequent sale of the property by persons who had purchased it from K., C. & B., the purchasers required evidence of the truth of the recital in the deed of 1865 that K., C. & B., were entitled to the mtge. money, &, assuming that testator was a trustee of the mtge. money, the purchasers required the vendors to show that the property sold was comprised in the trust; that K., C. & B. were duly appointed to succeed testator in the trust; & that they had an effectual power of sale & of giving a receipt for the purchase-money:—Held: it would be contrary to the practice of the ct. to go behind a recital evidently framed for the purpose of keeping notice of trusts off the conveyance; & a good title had been shown by the vendors.—Re HARMAN & UXBRIDGE & RICKMANSWORTH RY. 459. —— ——.] — A firm of solrs. advanced on mtge. of certain freeholds a sum of money which was expressed in the mtge. deed to belong to the mtgees., one of whom was a member of the firm, on a joint account. The money was in fact advanced as to one moiety by trustees out of the trust funds, & as to the other moiety by the firm out of their partnership assets. The security contemplated advances on the footing of equality, & contained no unusual provisions. The firm acted on the occasion of the mtge. as the solrs. of the trustees, & advised the investment, & subsequently became bkpt. The mtged. property was not at any time a sufficient security for the money advanced:—Held: the firm were involved in a breach of trust, on the ground that the security was inadequate, & it ought to have been taken in the names of the trustees, & for omitting to advise the trustees that the investment was a breach of trust the firm might be answerable in damages, but the benefit acquired by the firm under the security was one which was in the contemplation of the parties at the time of the advance, & was not a sufficient ground for declaring the firm to be trustees in the whole or in part of their moiety of the mtge. debt & security, & consequently the trustees were not entitled to be paid out of the security in priority to the persons claiming under the firm.—STOKES v. PRANCE, [1898] 1 Ch. 212; 67 L. The mtge. deed provided for interest at the rate of 5 per cent., but contained a proviso for the reduction of the rate to 4 per cent. on punctual payments. All the payments of interest except the first had been punctual, but, through pltf.'s ignorance of the proviso for reduction of the interest, they had been made at the rate of 5 per cent. In an action by pltf. to recover from deft., the trustee, the extra 1 per cent. paid under this mistake:—Held: the action was rightly brought against the trustee; the only contract was between pltf. as mtgor. & deft. as mtgee.; money had been received under that contract by the mtgee.; & he alone could be asked or required to repay it.—KING v. STEWART (1892), 66 L. 465. —— ——.] — Funds, subject to the trusts of a settlement, were invested in Exchequer bills, on the sale of which the proceeds were paid to the account of a firm of solrs., F., S., & F., at their bankers. The funds were afterwards advanced on a mtge. of house property in a new neighbourhood, & of inadequate value. At that date there were no trustees of the settlement, & the mtge. was taken in the names of S. & two other persons who were then proposed, & shortly afterwards appointed new trustees, & never repudiated the transaction. S. was the member of his firm who acted for them in all the matters, & for the work which he did the firm, by arrangement, received, at the time when the money was advanced, payment for their bill of costs out of the funds. The mtge. proved to be an insufficient security, & in an action against the trustees it was held that they were jointly & severally liable to make good the loss sustained. The property not having been sold, or the trust funds replaced, beneficiaries sought to make the firm of solrs. liable for the loss of the funds on the ground of negligence, though S.'s partners had not had any personal knowledge of the property at the time when the mtge. transaction was completed:—Held: (1) in all that S. had done in the matter of the mtge. he acted within the scope of his authority as a partner, his firm must be taken to have had knowledge that the security was, for trustees, improper, & consequently, they were implicated in & jointly & severally liable for the breach of the trust; &, further, the judgment which had been recovered against S., as one of the trustees, had not discharged his partners from liability; (2) though there had not been an express retainer, the relation of solr. & client might be inferred from the acts of the parties; it subsisted between the firm & the trustees, & the firm were liable in discharge of the duty which had been undertaken to the clients; (3) the liability extended to the estate of a member of the firm since deceased.

466. Agents must be competent.]—Trustees are bound to employ competent solrs. & agents; & therefore, where trustees lent trust funds upon mtge., & their solr. accepted without inquiry an abstract & a valuation made for the purpose of a previous mtge., & it afterwards turned out that the solr. for the mtgor. had concealed the fact that since the date of the mtge. & valuation two other mtges. had been effected, & loss resulted to the trust estate in consequence:—Held: the trustees were liable to make good the loss to their cestuis que trust.—HOPGOOD v. PARKIN (1870), L. 467. Agent must be employed within scope of his business.]—The rule that trustees, acting according to the ordinary course of business, & employing agents as prudent men of business would do on their own behalf, are not liable for the default of the agent so employed, is subject to the limitation that the agent must not be employed out of the ordinary scope of his business. Trustees empowered to invest on mtge. lent under the advice of their solrs. a sum of £5,000 upon mtge. of a freehold house & grounds at Liverpool, valued to them at from £7,000 to £8,000. The trustees did not exercise their own judgment as to the choice of a valuer, but accepted the suggestion of their solrs. that a London surveyor who had introduced the security to them, & was in fact the agent of the mtgor. with a pecuniary interest in the completion of the mtge. should, value the property for the trustees, & they acted upon the report of this valuer, which was of an inflated character. The mtgor. afterwards became bkpt., & the property would not realise the sum advanced:—Held: the trustees were jointly & severally liable to replace the sum advanced, with interest at 4 per cent. from the date of the loan.

In investing trust money upon mtge. of house property trustees ought not to lend more than half the value.—FRY v. TAPSON (1884), 28 Ch. D. 268; 54 L. J. Ch. 224; 51 L. T. 326; 33 W. R. 113.

Upon the occasion of the investment of a trust fund on mtge., the trustee employed the same solr. as the mtgor. Subsequently he had reason to suspect the sufficiency of the security, but took no steps to inquire into the matter. It afterwards turned out that the solr. had practised a fraud on the trustee, & that the security was insufficient:—Held: the trustee was liable for the loss occasioned to the trust estate.—SUTTON v. WILDERS (1871), L. 470. —— ——.] — Trustees advanced trust money upon mtge. of properties consisting of an hotel & stables, & cottages & houses which were principally let out at weekly rents. Valuers were employed, & the particulars of the several properties as furnished by the mtgors. were submitted to them, but the trustees did not make inquiries for the purpose of verifying the statements made by the mtgors. as to the value or nature of the properties, or whether they were all let, or what was the amount of the outgoings payable. In their instructions to the valuers, they told them that the mtgees. were trustees, but they did not tell them, according to the rule laid down for trustees in lending on the security of house property that they did not desire to lend more than one half of the value. Neither did they call the attention of the valuers to circumstances which might affect the value. They also omitted to instruct the valuers to ascertain whether the particulars were correct, or what were the outgoings or average amount of repairs. In each case the valuers gave it as their opinion that a sum more than one half of the value might be advanced on the security, & such a sum was in each case advanced. Shortly afterwards the mtgors. became insolvent. The several properties were put up for sale, but failed to realise the amounts advanced: —Held: (1) the investments were improper; the trustees had been guilty of negligence in not making inquiries as to the particulars & in not giving proper instructions to the valuers, & in acting upon valuations which under the circumstances they ought not to have acted upon, & they were jointly & severally liable for the money lost.

(2) Trustees ought not to introduce the valuer, who is valuing property with a view to mtge. by the trustees, to the mtgor., or the mtgor.'s agent, for the purpose of negotiating the amount of the fee for the valuation.—Re PARTINGTON, PARTINGTON v. ALLEN (1887), 57 L. T. 654; 4 T. L. R. 4.

Annotation:—As to (2) Reld. Shaw v Cates, [1909] 1 Ch. 389.

471. —— —— Reliance on ascertainment by valuator of relevant facts.]—By the Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), trustees lending trust moneys on the security of property on which they can lawfully lend are relieved from the burden formerly cast upon them by the ct. of investigating for themselves the nature & circumstances connected with the security & the financial position of the borrower, & are justified in assuming that the surveyor or valuer employed by them under s. 8 (1) of the Act of 1893 to report as to the value of the property & to advise them as to lending money on it will ascertain for himself all the facts necessary to enable him to make a proper report. Trustees who by their trust are authorised to lend trust moneys on the security of leasehold property are entitled to lend it on the security of leasehold cottage property let on weekly tenancies, but the amount which they may safely lend on such property must depend upon the circumstances of each particular case. The words "instructed & employed independently of any owner of the property" in s. 8 (1) mean the relation of employer & employee must exist between the trustees & the surveyor or valuer, & between them alone. The surveyor or valuer must be entitled to look for payment of his remuneration to the trustees alone, & must be responsible to them alone for the due performance of his duty. He must be instructed & employed by the trustees in the particular matter independently of the mtgor., but it is not incumbent on the trustees before employing him to inquire into his previous business transactions with a view of ascertaining whether at any time near or remote he has acted for or advised the mtgor.

It is the duty of surveyors & valuers in advising trustees as to lending trust moneys to state in their report not only what they consider to be the actual value of the property offered as security, but also what proportion of that value the trustee may safely advance upon the security quite irrespective of any supposed rule as to the two thirds limit, subject only to this, that if they are so satisfied as to the importance of the security as to advise them to advance more than two thirds of the value, the trustees would not be justified in acting on that advice, inasmuch as if they did so they would exceed the limit prescribed by s. 8 (1). Where a surveyor or valuer is employed by trustees to value & report upon property it is not essential for him, in order to comply with s. 8 (1), in so many words to state in his report that he advises the trustees to advance a specified sum of money; it is sufficient if he states what he considers to be the value of the property & that it forms a sufficient security for the sum named by him.—Re SOLOMON, NORE v. MEYER, [1912] 1 Ch. 261; 81 L. 473. —— Employment must be independent of owner of property.]—An investment of trust funds on mtge. of property of insufficient value was made by trustees at the instigation & request & with the consent in writing of the tenant for life; but it did not appear that he intended to be a party to any breach of trust, or to an investment on the property without inquiry, & in effect he left it to the trustees to determine whether the investment was a proper one for the moneys proposed to be advanced:—Held: (1) the trustees were not entitled under Trustee Act of 1888 (c. 59), s. 6, to have the life interest of the tenant for life impounded by way of indemnity to them against their liability for the loss to the estate by reason of the improper investment; (2) during the life of the tenant for life he was entitled to receive the income of so much of the trust fund as was not lost, & the trustees were entitled to retain for their own use the interest of the money paid by them to make good to the trust fund the amount of the loss.

The words "believed to be" in Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 4, do not govern the words "instructed & employed independently of any owner of the property"; &, therefore, in order to entitle a trustee lending money on the security of property to the protection of the section, he must be able to show that the surveyor or valuer on whose report he acted was in fact so instructed & employed.—Re SOMERSET, SOMERSET v. POULETT (EARL), [1894] 1 Ch. 231; 63 L. It was not shown that the tenants for life concurred in the selection of those particular securities. The trustees being decreed to make good the loss arising from the deficiency of the securities:—Held: the tenants for life respectively, & their respective life interests in the trust funds, were respectively liable to make good to the trustees the amount paid by the trustees towards replacing such loss, to the extent of the income received by the tenants for life respectively from the improper investments, & of certain sums improperly received by the tenants for life respectively out of the capital. Semble: trustees to whom no direction as to investment is given cannot safely invest on mtge.—RABY v. RIDEHALGH (1855), 7 De G. 481. Depreciation of investment.]—M., who died in Dec. 1872, by his will gave all his property to his wife, his son L. M. & E., a solr., upon trust to set apart securities of the nominal value of £10,000 to be selected by his wife, & to pay the income to his wife for life, & after her death he directed that the said sum of £10,000 should fall into his residuary estate, which he gave to his said son & a daughter in equal shares. Testator's widow selected securities to the amount of £10,000, including three mtges. on agricultural lands (a) for £2,000, (b) for £1,550, (c) for £2,400. The will contained no investment clause or express power to vary investments. By a deed poll, dated May 31, 1875, the widow, son, & daughter, with the consent of her then intended husband, empowered the trustees either to retain the existing investments or call them in, & gave them a wide power of investment. The daughter soon afterwards married, & her reversionary share in the £10,000 was settled. The three mtge. securities were left undisturbed until Oct. 1888, when, on the suggestion of E., the trustees had them valued. The valuer reported that (a) the land mortgaged for £2,000 was worth £1,840, & a good security for £1,350; that (b) the land mortgaged for £1,550 was worth £1,650, & a good security for £1,400; that (c) the land mortgaged for £2,400 was worth £2,340, & a good security for £1,800. A long correspondence ensued between the trustees, E. insisting that notices should be given to call in the mtge. money, & the mtgors. compelled to reduce the amounts in each case due, to two thirds of the valuation. L. M. & his mother urged that this course would cause the land to be thrown on the trustees' hands, &. while willing to have the mtges. reduced, insisted that it would be sufficient to reduce the sums due in each case to the amounts for which the valuer considered the land good security. This was an originating summons taken out by E., to which the two other trustees were made only defts., asking for the determination of the ct. whether the trustees ought to take any & what steps to call in, or otherwise with respect to, the mtge. securities (a), (b), & (c):—Held: as directions what should be done could be given in an administration action, they could now be given on an originating summons; it is not the duty of trustees who hold mtges. which were originally proper investments, but have depreciated in value, to call them in immediately that the value has fallen so far as to leave less margin than is required by the ct. for a fresh investment. But it is their duty, when they find the security becoming insufficient, to consider & decide as practical men what is best to be done, having regard to all the circumstances, including the risk of having the property thrown on their hands. When, owing to a difference of opinion between trustees, they cannot exercise their discretion, the ct. will assist them. In this case, the ct. not having evidence before it to decide the question, an inquiry was directed in the terms of the summons.—Re MEDLAND, ELAND v. MEDLAND (1889), 41 Ch. D. 476; 60 L. By a letter of Apr. 29, 1918, the lenders demanded payment of the instalments of interest due on Feb. 1, & May 1, 1918, respectively, & stated that unless the interest were in future regularly & punctually paid interest at the rate stipulated for in the bond would be exacted. On May 13 payment of interest for the two quarters at the lower rate was made & was accepted without demur. On Aug. 7 the borrower sent a cheque for the interest due on Aug. 1, but it was returned as being neither timeous nor sufficient:—Held: (1) default had been made in the punctual payment of interest; (2) the lenders were not estopped by their conduct from insisting on their strict rights under the bond.—MACLAINE v. GATTY, [1921] 1 A. In Jan. 1881, B. took out a debtor's summons for £150, on the footing that interest continued to be paid at the rate of 7½ per cent. down to the date of demand, & not merely until July 15, 1879, in which case the debt would have been under £50:—Held: the agreement amounted to a contract that if the £1,000 was not repaid in July, 1879, interest at 7½ per cent. should continue to be paid, & accordingly that there was a liquidated demand of sufficient amount within Bkpcy. 498. —— —— Circumstances negativing implication.]—Where any settlement or contract contains a provision that a certain fixed sum of money is to be charged on land & to be paid at a fixed time, then, as between the owner of the land & the person entitled to the money, the money, in the eye of a ct. of equity, bears interest from the date fixed for payment of the money, although nothing is said as to interest in the settlement or contract, unless there are circumstances negativing the presumption that interest is payable.

In 1823 an order was made in a lunacy giving the lunatic's committees power to purchase on his behalf a freehold estate, & to pay the purchase-money out of the rents & profits of his real estate; & the order went on to declare that the rents & profits so to be applied "shall form a lien on the purchased estate in trust for the lunatic, his exors. & administrators"; but the order was silent as to interest. The committees accordingly paid the purchase-money out of the rents & profits of the lunatic's real estate, & in 1824, in consideration of the purchase-money, a conveyance was executed to trustees for the lunatic. The conveyance contained a declaration of lien corresponding to the terms of the order, but again without mentioning interest. In 1828 the lunatic died intestate, leaving a married sister his heiress-at-law & sole next of kin, who thereupon took out administration to his estate. In 1853 she died, when her husband, D., became tenant by the curtesy of the purchased property, & continued in enjoyment as such until his death in 1887. After this wife's death he had taken out administration to her estate, & also to the estate of the lunatic. No steps had ever been taken for raising the amount of the lien or charge, & no interest had ever been paid upon it. In an action by D.'s legal personal representatives against the persons who had become entitled to the purchased estate to enforce the lien:—Held: although interest was not mentioned either in the order in lunacy or in the conveyance, the ct. would, in accordance with its well-settled practice in other cases of equitable charges on land where interest is not mentioned, such as loans on deposit of title deeds, portions & legacies charged on land, & having regard to the circumstances of the case, treat the lien as an interest bearing debt, that is to say, as bearing interest at 4 per cent. as from the death of the lunatic; & inasmuch as, in the events which had happened, such interest must be regarded as having been virtually paid down to D.'s death in 1887, the lien was not statute-barred at that date.—Re DRAX, SAVILE v. DRAX, [1903] 1 Ch. 781; 72 L. 499. Right to sue for principal without suing for interest.]—A principal sum secured by deed, & the interest stipulated to be payable thereon are two distinct sums, & not one entire sum, & either may be sued for, independently of the other. Interest is not a part of the debt secured by mtge., but rather sounds in damages, although, semble, it may be sued for in debt.

Declaration in debt for £800 on a covenant, in a mtge. deed for securing payment on a future day certain, of that sum & interest, that deft. would pay the said sum of £800 with interest on etc., with breach that he did not, nor would pay the said sum of £800 on, etc.:—Held: good, although there was no averment that the interest had been satisfied or that pltf. abandoned his claim thereto.—DICKENSON v. HARRISON (1817), 4 Price, 282; 146 E. Mortgagee in possession — Rents sufficient to keep down interest—Right to capitalise.]—A mtge. of leaseholds contained a proviso that, if & so often as any interest due under the mtgor.'s covenant should be in arrear for twenty-one days, after the day appointed for the payment thereof, that interest should be treated as an accession to the capital secured by the deed as on the day on which the same ought to have been paid, & should thenceforth bear interest at the rate & on the days provided by the deed. The mtgee. entered into possession of the property & received the rents. On the taking of the accounts in a redemption action:—Held: if on the expiration of twenty-one days after any interest became due, the mtgor. not having paid the interest, there was in the hands of the mtgee., after deducting ground rent & other proper outgoings, an amount arising from the rents received by him sufficient for the payment of the interest, though it had not been actually appropriated to that purpose, the interest could not be said, within the meaning of the proviso, to be in arrear, & the mtgee. therefore was not entitled to have it capitalised.—WRIGLEY v. GILL, [1906] 1 Ch. 165; 75 L. PART IV. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 4.

l. Construction of covenant.]—A mtge. stipulated in general terms that interest was to run upon the principal sums advanced, without any limitation as to the period of its currency; & also stipulated that in default of punctual payment at the end of each year, the mtgees. were to be at liberty to treat unpaid interest as principal, & to recover it from the mtged. property. According to the tenor of the mtge. when all its provisions & conditions were considered, it was not the true construction that the capital sum was to cease to bear interest at the contract rate upon the arrival of the time stipulated for payment.—BINDESRI NAIK v. GANGA SARAN SAHU (1897), I. Sect. 3.—Proviso for redemption.]

of redemption, unless there appears a clear intention of making a new settlement, remains subject to the old uses, or to the trusts of the original settlement.

By a marriage settlement, a rentcharge of £200 a year was secured to the wife for life, payable quarterly, with powers of distress, etc. To enable the husband to mortgage, the wife released her rentcharge to the mtgee. The equity of redemption was reserved to the husband, who covenanted to convey other lands on the trusts of the settlement. The husband, by his will, gave his real & personal estate to his brother, on condition that he would allow his wife £300 a year for life:—Held: the £200 a year remained a valid charge on the equity of redemption; &, it was not satisfied by the £300 a year.—WOOD v. WOOD (1844), 7 Beav. 183; 49 E. R. 1034.

502. —— ——.]—Lands were limited to a father for life, with remainder as the father & his son should appoint, with remainder to the son in tail, with remainder to the father & son, in fee. The father & son appointed in fee, by way of mtge., with a proviso that, on repayment of the mtge. money, the mtgees. should convey the hereditaments to the father & son, their heirs or assigns, or as they should direct; & it was declared, as between the father & son, that the father should, during his life, keep down the interest on the mtge. debt:—Held: the course of limitation of the estate was not changed by this proviso.—HIPKIN v. WILSON (1850), 3 De G. & Sm. 738; 19 L. 504. —— ——.]—Lands of a wife were settled to such uses as she & her husband should appoint & subject thereto to the use of the husband for life, with remainder to the wife for life, with remainder to the children of the marriage. Two days afterwards the husband & wife, in exercise of the power, appointed the lands to the use of trustees upon such trusts as the husband alone should appoint, & subject thereto in trust for the husband for his life, or till his bkpcy., with remainder in trust for the wife for life, & after her death on the trusts declared by the former deed. Some months afterwards the husband executed a mtge., reciting merely an agreement for a loan, & thereby appointed that the trustees should hold the lands upon trusts for sale, & securing the repayment of the mtge. money, & subject thereto upon trust for the husband & his heirs:—Held: the equity of redemption was effectually resettled, & belonged to the husband in fee.—HEATHER v. O'NEIL (1858), 2 De G. & J. 399; 27 L. 505. —— ——.]—A husband & wife mortgaged by feoffment & fine land of which they were tenants by entireties in fee simple, & by the proviso for redemption the land was to be reconveyed to the husband & wife & their heirs, or to such other persons or person & for such intents & purposes as the husband & wife or the survivor of them, or the heirs or assigns of such survivor, should nominate, direct or appoint. By a reconveyance, executed by the mtgee. & by the husband & wife on the mtge. debt being paid off, the mtgee. by the direction & appointment of the mtgor. & his wife, released & the husband & wife appointed & released the premises to the use of the wife for life, with remainder to the use of the husband for life, with remainder to uses in favour of their daughter & her children. After the death of the wife the husband conveyed the property to a purchaser for value:—Held: the mtge. sufficiently indicated an intention to charge or modify the wife's estate, for the purpose of enabling her to deal with the equity of redemption without a fine & her occurrence in the settlement made by the reconveyance was a sufficient consideration to sustain the settlement against the subsequent purchaser.—ATKINSON v. SMITH (1858), 3 De G. & J. 186; 28 L. 506. —— ——.]—A married woman was entitled for life in the event of surviving her husband to a rentcharge. She joined him in executing a mtge. of the estates upon which it was charged, & by the mtge. deed absolutely released & extinguished her rentcharge. A portion of the estates was reconveyed by the mtgees. to the husband released from the mtge., & he afterwards remortgaged the same to other mtgees., who under a power entered into a contract for sale. The title being objected to on the ground that the rentcharge was still subsisting the vendors produced parol evidence that the former mtgees. had stipulated with the solr. of the mtgor. & his wife for the absolute release of the rentcharge:—Held: where a wife joins in a mtge. deed her equity of redemption is not released if there be no express contract on her part to do so, & at any rate the title was too doubtful to be forced upon the purchasers.—Re BETTON'S TRUST ESTATES (1871), L. 508. —— ——.]—By a settlement of 1862 real estate, then subject to a mtge. in fee, was conveyed by B. to trustees, upon trust to permit her daughter R., a married woman, to receive the rents for her separate use, & upon further trust "for such person or persons, not being her present husband, or any friend or relative of his, & for such estate or estates" as R. should by deed or will appoint; &, in default of appointment, then over. In 1868 B. & R., by a deed containing no recitals, mtged. the property in fee, subject to the prior mtge., the proviso for redemption reserving the right of reconveyance to R., "her heirs or assigns, or as she or they shall direct." In 1885 R., her husband being then dead, made a will consisting of a general devise of all her real & personal estate in favour of a sister & her children:—Held: the limitations in the settlement were not altered by the form of the proviso for redemption in the mtge. of 1868 so as to confer upon R. an absolute estate in fee simple.—Re BYRON'S SETTLEMENT, WILLIAMS v. MITCHELL, [1891] 3 Ch. 474; *sub nom. 509. Proviso precluding redemption for fixed term.]—If there are first & subsequent mtgees. of the same estate, the mtgor. cannot require the first mtgee. to assign the debt & property to a nominee of his own, under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 15, without the consent of the puisne mtgee. The "mtgor. entitled to redeem" in that sect. means a mtgor., or person claiming under the mtgor., who has a right to require a reconveyance from the mtgee.; & no other person can take advantage of that sect.

Every mtgor. is entitled to redeem, but there is a difference in their rights. Where there is one mtgor. & one mtgee., there, of course, his right to redeem is absolute. But where there are several successive mtgees. the mtgor. can redeem the next to him without redeeming any other; but if he wishes to redeem any anterior mtge. he must also redeem all who are between that mtgee. & himself. A puisne mtgee. indeed is in rather a worse position than this; for, although he is entitled to redeem those above him, he cannot do so without foreclosing those between himself & the ultimate equity of redemption. So that the words "where a mtgor. is entitled to redeem" really includes every mtgor., except a mtgor. who is precluded by some special term in his mtge. deed from redeeming within a specific time. For although the law will not allow a mtgor. to be precluded from redeeming altogether, yet he may be precluded from redeeming for a fixed period, such as five or seven years (JESSEL, M.R.).—TEEVAN v. SMITH (1882), 20 Ch. 510. —— Similar provision against calling in by mortgagee.]—In 1896 a lessee of land on which he had built a hotel mortgaged it to a brewer to secure £5,500 & interest, & covenanted to buy all beer & other liquors consumed at the house from the mtgee. for a period of twenty-eight years & so long after as any money should remain due upon the security. The deed also provided that the mtgor. should not be entitled to pay off the mtge. before 1924 without the consent of the mtgee. There was a power of sale without notice upon the happening of any one of numerous events, & upon a sale under the power the purchaser might be required to take a conveyance subject to the "tie." In an action by the mtgor. to redeem the mtge.:—Held: the proviso against redemption for twenty-eight years, even if it might be supported in a case where there was a similar provision against calling in the mtge., exceeded all reasonable limits & could not be enforced.—MORGAN v. JEFFREYS, [1910] 1 Ch. 620; 79 L. Limitations on right to redeem.]—See Part VII., Sect. 4, post.

511. Meaning of "month."]—"Month" in law is, primâ facie, a lunar month, or twenty-eight days, unless otherwise expressed. But, in mtge. transactions, a month means a calendar month.

By a mtge. dated Mar. 9, 1917, defts., as mtgors., conveyed certain lands in Cornwall containing about 500 acres, with the mines & minerals thereunder, to pltf. as mtgee. to secure £5,000 & interest at 6 per cent. The mtge. contained a provision that if interest were paid on every half-yearly day on which it was payable until Mar. 9, 1923, or within "twenty-eight days" after each such day, the mtgee. would not call it in, "provided also that in case a co. shall be formed with limited liability within six months of the declaration of peace, & which co. shall acquire the said premises," then the mtgee. would accept first mtge. debentures of the said co. for the £5,000 to be in full satisfaction & discharge of the principal moneys secured by the mtge. No interest on the mtge. had been paid since Mar. 1922. Within six calendar months of the declaration of peace, but some days after the expiration of six lunar months, a co. with limited liability was formed by defts. with a memorandum & articles duly registered & a capital of £10,000, divided into 100,000 shares of 2*s.* each, & defts. agreed to sell to the new co. the premises comprised in the mtge. of Mar. 9, 1917. Some three & a half years before the formation of this co. the premises & mines comprised in the mtge. had been entirely abandoned, certain of the plant & machinery sold, & the shafts filled up. Only £10 12*s.* of the capital of the co. had been paid up, & there was no ostensible business to be carried on. Pltf. claimed judgment for £5,000 on account, &, in default of payment, foreclosure. The defence was that there had been a compliance with the proviso in both respects:—Held: the transaction being one of mtge. was excepted from the rule at common law that "month" primâ facie meant lunar month, & further, apart from its being an exception to the rule, there was sufficient context in the mtge. deed to show that the six months referred to in the proviso for redemption meant six calendar months.—SCHILLER v. PETERSEN & CO., LTD., [1924] 1 Ch. 394; 93 L. 532. ——.]—The S. co. carried on the business of manufacturing zinc & spelter, sulphuric acid, & zinc oxide on leasehold premises. They had erected a number of cupola & other furnaces for the purposes of their manufacture, which, as between them & their landlords, were admitted to be trade fixtures. In 1880 the co. conveyed the land & buildings comprised in its lease to trustees for debenture-holders upon trust to permit the co. to carry on business until default in payment of the debentures or winding up, & then to sell. In 1883 the co. executed a second mtge. to trustees for a second set of debenture-holders, which comprised, besides the land & buildings, all stock-in-trade, stock of ores, & loose plant & material. It appeared that in the course of smelting metals for the co.'s business small quantities of gold & silver were given off in the form of vapour, & became imbedded in the bricks lining the furnaces. The co. having been ordered to be wound up, the trustees of the first mtge. deed entered & sold. The second mtgees. took out a summons that they might be allowed to enter & remove the gold, silver, & other metal imbedded in the said bricks, claiming that it was included in their mtge., & not in the first. It was admitted that the metals

535. —— ——.]—Where the owner of the inheritance annexes thereto fixtures, which would in the ordinary case of landlord & tenant be removable by the latter during his term, for a permanent purpose, and for the better enjoyment of his estate, they become part of the freehold.

A., the owner of land, in 1853 mtged. it in fee to B., & afterwards erected certain buildings thereon, to which, for the more convenient use of the premises in his business of an innkeeper, brewer, & bath-proprietor, he affixed a steam-engine & boiler, a hay-cutter, a malt-mill or corn-crusher, & a pair of grinding-stones. The lower grinding-stone was boxed on to the floor of part of the premises, by means of a frame screwed thereto, the upper one being fixed in the usual way; & the steam-engine & other articles, except the boiler, were fastened by means of bolts & nuts to the walls or the floors for the purpose of steadying them, but were all capable of being removed without injury either to themselves or to the premises. The engine was used to supply water to the baths & to put the other machines in motion; & the whole were subservient to the business carried on by A. A. continued in possession until 1858, when he became bkpt.:—Held: his assignees were not entitled to claim these fixtures, but they passed to the assignee of the mtgee. as part of the freehold.—WALMSLEY v. MILNE (1859), 7 C. 538. —— ——.]—The owner in fee of a worsted mill, at which he carried on the business of a worsted spinner & stuff manufacturer, mortgaged it to pltfs. By a deed of arrangement under Bkpcy. Act, 1861 (c. 134), subsequently executed, the mtgor. assigned all his property to defts. as trustees for the benefit of his creditors. Under this latter deed defts. seized certain looms which were in the mill that was mortgaged. These looms were attached to the stone floors of the mill by means of nails driven through holes in the feet of the looms, in some cases into beams which had been built into the stone, & in other cases into plugs of wood driven into holes drilled in the stone for the purpose. It was necessary that the looms should be so attached for the purpose of steadying them & keeping them in a true direction, perpendicular to the line of the shafting, by means of which the steam power was applied to them. It was impossible to remove the looms without drawing the nails; but this could be done easily & without any serious damage to the flooring. 540. Fixtures expressly included — Whether mortgagee entitled.]—In Jan. 1797, several persons carried on business in partnership as calico printers; & in the same month certain premises on which their works were principally carried on were conveyed to one of the partners in fee. The conveyance mentioned the premises to consist, besides land, of dwelling-houses, machine house, & other buildings & erections, & stated them to be then in the possession of the partner to whom they were conveyed & another partner. Various buildings & machines were afterwards, from time to time, erected on the premises by the firm, for the purpose of extending the works. The whole was firmly fixed to the freehold, & stood on that part of the land which was conveyed to one of the partners in 1797; but the part in question could be removed without material injury to the buildings. In the different stock takings of the firm, the lands & buildings were always valued & classed separately from the machinery & fixtures. In the part of the country where the premises were situated, machinery of this description were constantly bought & sold distinctly from the freehold. The freehold in the premises having been subsequently conveyed to the partners, they, in 1828, mortgaged them to pltf.'s wife, under the description of all the messuages, dwelling-houses, & lands, & buildings therein mentioned, " & also, all that & those the steam engine, mill gearing, heavy gear to millwright work, fixed machinery & other matters & things, etc., then standing & being in & upon the thereby demised buildings, works, & premises, which in any manner constituted fixtures & appendages to the freehold of the same or any part thereof." All the machinery, fixtures, etc., appeared to have been in the reputed partnership of the partners who carried on the works until 1831, when they became bkpt., & defts. were appointed their assignees. Pltf., who was the husband of the mtgee., had inspected the statements of affairs of the partners, which treated the machinery as not included in the mtge., & had made no objections to such statements. In Apr. 1831, the assignees sold all the machinery & fixtures, with the exception of two steam engines, two water wheels & iron flooring, & other small articles; & the greater part of them were removed by the purchasers. The articles claimed by the mtgee. were all firmly fixed to the freehold, in such a manner, however, that they might easily be removed without material injury to themselves or the buildings:—Held: the machinery did not belong to the inheritance but was part of the personal estate of the bkpts., & it passed to the assignees; & the machinery in question was not intended to pass, & did not pass, to the mtgee., under the mtge. deed.—TRAPPES v. HARTER (1833), 2 Cr. & M. 153; 3 Tyr. 603; 3 L. As between pltfs. & the mtgor.'s assignees in bkpcy.:—Held: (1) assuming it possible to distinguish between the case of machinery placed upon land for the purpose of trade or manufacture as collateral to & independent of the use & enjoyment of the land, & that of machinery placed upon land for the purpose of better & more profitably enjoying the land (as to which qu.), the recitals showed that this was a case of the latter description; & although the means of the proposed use & enjoyment of the land was manufacture or trade, all articles fixed to the freehold, whether by screws, solder, or any other permanent means, or by being let into the soil, partook of the nature of the soil, & would have descended to the heir along with & as part of the soil itself; (2) the mere grant of the land, following upon the preceding recitals, was sufficient to pass all articles so fixed, & a subsequent enumeration of certain of such articles did not rebut the inference that all articles so fixed passed by the mere grant of the land, as forming part of the freehold.—MATHER v. FRASER (1856), 2 K. & J. 536; 25 L. E. then mortgaged his interest in the land by underlease to pltf., who had no notice of the agreement, & who allowed E. to remain in possession. Defts. afterwards supplied the boiler, which was fixed in the land. One of the instalments not being paid, defts. entered & carried the boiler away. In an action by pltf. against defts. for removing the boiler:—Held: pltf. having allowed the mtgor. to remain in possession, must be taken to have acquiesced in his making agreements for fixing & removing fixtures for the purposes of his trade, & he could not claim the boiler as against defts.—GOUGH v. WOOD & Co., [1894] 1 Q. 563. —— —— Chattel fixed to freehold—Entry by mortgagee into possession.]—In determining whether or not a chattel has become a fixture the intention of the person affixing it to the soil is only so far as it can be presumed from the degree & object of the annexation.

A gas engine was let out on the hire & purchase system under an agreement in writing which provided that it should not become the property of the hirer until the payment of all the instalments & should be removable by the owner on the failure of the hirer to pay an instalment. The engine was affixed to freehold land of the hirer by bolts & screws to prevent it from rocking & was used by him for the purposes of his trade. Default having been made in the payment of the instalments, the engine was claimed by the owner, & also by the mtgee. of the land, who took his mtgee. after the hiring agreement & without notice of it, & had entered into possession while the engine was still on the land:—Held: the engine was sufficiently annexed to the land to become a fixture, & any intention to be inferred from the terms of the hiring agreement that it should remain a chattel did not prevent it from becoming a fixture; & consequently it passed to the mtgee. as part of the freehold; even if a licence to remove the engine could be implied from the mtgee. leaving the mtgor. in possession the entry of the mtgee. into possession determined such licence.—HOBSON v. GORRINGE, [1897] 1 Ch. 182; 66 L. 567. Equitable mortgage by deposit of title deeds—Subsequent to hire purchase agreement—Prior equitable interest of vendor.]—A co. hired machinery fixed on its business premises from L. & H. on the terms of a hire purchase agreement, which provided that the co. was to pay a monthly rent for the hire of the machinery, & should become the purchaser on payment of a certain sum in which event credit would be given for the previous payments of rent. Until the purchase the co. was to be a mere bailee of the machinery, & in case of default in making the monthly payments or breach of the conditions of the agreement L. & H. were empowered to enter & remove the machinery. Subsequently, the co. gave to a bank an equitable mtge. of the business premises by a deposit of the deeds thereof accompanied by a written charge under the common seal of the co. containing an agreement to give a legal mtge. on demand. The bank took without notice of the hire purchase agreement. The co. failed to pay the instalments & committed breaches of the conditions of the hire purchase agreement; L. & H. demanded delivery up of the machinery & a winding up order was made against the co. The principal secured to the bank was due with an arrear of interest:—Held: the bank being merely an equitable mtgee. & L. & H. having an equitable interest in the machinery under their hire purchase agreement the interest under that agreement had priority over the interest of the bank.—Re ALLEN (SAMUEL) & SONS, LTD., [1907] 1 Ch. 575; 76 L. (d) Fixtures attached by Tenant of Mortgagor.

568. Demise by mortgagor in possession—Right of tenant to remove fixtures during term.]—Trade fixtures attached by the landlord, who is mtgor. in possession, are not in his reputed ownership.

We are satisfied . . . that the pipes & machinery were so attached as to be part of the freehold at common law. If the bkpt. had been a tenant, & had fixed the property in question for trade purposes, I should even then have thought it not within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, the then reputed ownership sect., though there might be fixtures which would be within that sect. . . . In this case, however, the bkpt. was the freeholder & owner of the machinery, & the moment he affixed them they became part of the freehold, & consequently not chattels in his reputed ownership. Therefore, the mtgee. is entitled to the usual order (LORD ERSKINE, C.J.).—Re BUTTERWORTH, Ex p. WILSON (1835), 4 Deac. & Ch. 143; 2 Mont. & A. 61; 4 L. J. Bcy. 24, Ct. of R.

SUB-SECT. 4.—ACCRETIONS.

570. General rule.] — The goodwill of a public-house is not a personal goodwill, but on sale of the house passes with it.

K., the lessee of a hotel, demised it by way of mtge. to P. to secure an advance. The deed contained an attornment clause by which, "for better securing payment of the interest" the mtgor. attorned tenant to the mtgee. at a rent which was equal to the amount of the yearly interest on the sum advanced. K. subsequently mortgaged the same premises to H. The deed recited the first mtge., & contained an attornment clause in similar words to that in the first mtge. K. filed a liquidation petition on July 3, 1879. Trustees were appointed on July 14. Afterwards the first mtgees. distrained for a quarter's rent due under the attornment clause in their mtge. on July 18. In Sept., the second mtgee. distrained under his attornment clause for a half-year's rent due in Aug. The hotel was subsequently put up for sale by auction by the first mtgees. under an arrangement, & the trade fixtures & also the furniture & loose chattels were sold:—Held: (1) the second mtgee. had a right to distrain after the bkpcy. of K. under the attornment clause in his mtge. for one year's rent, & his right was not at all affected by the fact that there was a prior attornment to a prior mtgee.; (2) the attornment being for the better securing payment of the interest does not constitute between mtgor. & mtgee. the relation of tenant & landlord only, nor compel the mtgee. to elect between his character of mtgee. & landlord; he remains mtgee. with all the incidents attaching to that position, the attornment is merely an additional security; therefore fixtures added by the mtgor. after the date of the mtge. pass to the mtgee. in his capacity of mtgee.

(3) Everything that the mtgor. adds to the house to improve its value must be taken to be an accretion for the benefit of the mtgee. (LUSH, L.J.).—Re KITCHIN, Ex p. PUNNETT (1880), 16 Ch. D. 226; 50 L. J. Ch. 212; 44 L. T. 226; 29 W. R. 129, C. A.

572. —— —— ——.]—A bill in equity will not lie to redeem a mtge. of chambers in the inns of ct., but pltf. must apply to the bench or to the judges of the society; secus: if on application to the bench they refer pltf. to his remedy in equity.

A., possessed of a renewable term, mortgaged it to J., who gained a new term from the original landlord to commence after the old one:—Held: this new term should be subject to the old equity of redemption.—RAKESTRAW v. BREWER (1729), 2 P. 573. —— —— ——.]—There is no authority for the general proposition that if a person only partly interested in an old lease obtains from the lessor a renewal, he must be held a constructive trustee of the new lease, whatever may be the nature of his interest or the circumstances under which he obtained the new lease. A person renewing is only held to be a constructive trustee of the new lease if, in respect of the old lease, he occupied some special position by virtue of which he owed a duty towards the other persons interested: as, for example, in the case of a renewal by a tenant for life of settled leaseholds, or by a partner of a partnership lease, or by a mtgee. of a mtged. lease. In all such cases the new lease is treated as engrafted on or as forming part of the original lease.—Re BISS, BISS v. BISS, [1903] 2 Ch. 40; 72 L. J. Ch. 473; 88 L. T. 403; 51 W. R. 504; 47 Sol. 574 Improvement by mortgagor or his personal representative — Renewal of lease.]—Defts., who were entitled to the equity of redemption of leaseholds charged with a mtge., attempted to get rid of it by fraudulently incurring a forfeiture, which they induced the lessor to take advantage of. They afterwards obtained a new lease from him, which they sold:—Held: the new lease was subject to the mtge., notwithstanding C. L. P. Act, 1852 (c. 76), s. 210, & a decree was made for payment by defts. of the mtge. with costs.—HUGHES v. HOWARD (1858), 25 Beav. 575; 53 E. R. 756.

575. —— ——.]—An ecclesiastical lease of a house for a term of years which was renewable by custom though it contained no covenant by the lessors for renewal was mortgaged & the equity of redemption was afterwards assigned for value. The Ecclesiastical Comrs. in whom the reversion had become vested would not renew the lease, but before the expiration they agreed to sell the reversion to the assignee of the equity of redemption. The conveyance was not executed till after the expiration of the lease. While the negotiation for the purchase of the reversion was in progress the assignee borrowed £300 giving the lender a memorandum in writing which stated that the money was to be secured by a mtge. from him of the house "so soon as he had completed the enfranchisement of the property from the Comrs." The lender had no notice of the mtge. of the lease:—Held: the mtgor. could only hold the fee simple of the property subject to the mtge. of the lease & he, & consequently the lender of the £300, was not entitled to any prior lien on the property for the purchase-money of the reversion notwithstanding the fact that the mtgor. was under no obligation to the mtgees. of the lease to obtain a renewal of it, or to purchase the reversion.

The doctrine of this ct. has always been that the mtgor. of a renewable lease can hold a renewed lease only subject to the mtge. (PEARSON, J.).—LEIGH v. BURNETT (1885), 29 Ch. D. 231; 54 L. J. Ch. 757; 52 L. T. 458.

The co. presented a petition for prolongation of the terms of the patents, & the mtgee. was not a party to the petition. The prolongation was opposed mainly on the ground of want of novelty, &, therefore, of merit:—Held: as the invention was useful there was not that absence of novelty as would be fatal to an application for prolongation; the whole of the first patent & a portion of the second ought to be extended for five years upon petitioners undertaking to give the mtgee. the same security over the new patents that he had over the old.—CHURCH'S PATENTS (1886), 3 R. In 1883, the moneys secured by the mtge. being still unpaid, the occupier sent a written application for a renewal of his license to the justices at their annual licensing meeting, & they adjourned the hearing of the application. At the adjourned hearing applts. applied, as mtgees. & under their power of attorney, for a renewal of the license to the occupier, who appeared, but stated that he did not wish for a renewal. No objection was made to the renewal on any of the grounds specified in 32 & 33 Vict. c. 27, which Act applied to the occupier's license. The justices refused the application, & applts. appealed to quarter sessions in their own names, as mtgees., & also as attorneys of the occupier, & in his name, & for & on his behalf. 587. —— —— Premises comprised in colliery lease—Right of mortgagee to receiver of business.]—A colliery co. executed a mtge. to a banking co. by subdemise of their lands, mines, & seams of coal & other premises comprised in certain leases, & also their buildings & some of their fixed machinery. Default having been made of principal & interest, the bank took possession of the mines & appointed a receiver of the income, but did not work the mines. They afterwards brought a foreclosure action against the colliery co., & moved for a receiver & manager of the colliery:—Held: although the business of the colliery was not expressly mentioned in the mtge. deed, it was intended to pass & did pass to the mtgees., & they were entitled to apply in the action for a receiver & manager of the colliery; the ct. would, in the exercise of its discretion, appoint a receiver & manager, although the mtgees. had taken possession & appointed a receiver of the income.—COUNTY OF GLOUCESTER BANK v. RUDRY MERTHYR STEAM & HOUSE COAL COLLIERY CO., [1895] 1 Ch. 629; 64 L. Goodwill attached to personal reputation—Tailor.]—A public body acting under the power of their Act & of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), gave notice to pltf. who was a tailor to take his house which was leasehold. After some negotiation they offered him £400, of which £150 was to be apportioned to his leasehold interest & £250 to his trade damage & personal expenses to which pltf. agreed. Pltf. had mortgaged his leasehold interest & could not make a good title. Pltf. then brought an action for specific performance of the agreement & defts. afterwards paid the £400 into ct. under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 76, executed a deed poll & took possession:—Held: pltf. was entitled to judgment in the action & to have the £250 paid at once to him with interest from the time when defts. took possession. 589. Whether mortgagee entitled to demand that policy moneys be applied in rebuilding.]—Pursuers having a heritable security by bond on certain premises insured them against fire in defender's office for £900. Prior securities had been given by the owner upon the same premises to other creditors, & those creditors had insured in other offices. The premises having been in part destroyed by fire, the prior incumbrancers, recovered from & were paid by the offices in which they were insured an amount sufficient for the re-instatement of the premises, & for the payment of the rent during the period of re-instatement, but the premises were not in fact re-instated. It appeared that immediately before the date of the fire the value of the premises was sufficient to cover the prior bonds & that of pursuers, but in consequence of the fire the value of the premises was so reduced that they were not sufficient to meet the balance remaining due to the prior creditors, & the pursuers' bond was left entirely uncovered:—Held: (1) pursuers were entitled notwithstanding the amount paid to the other creditors, to recover to the full extent of their loss; but pursuers were not entitled to recover anything in respect of the loss of rent of the premises after they had been damaged by fire.

(2) It has not so far as I know ever been decided that it [Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act, 1774 (c. 78), s. 83] applies as between mtgor. & mtgee. (LORD SELBORNE).—WESTMINSTER FIRE OFFICE v. GLASGOW PROVIDENT INVESTMENT SOCIETY (1888), 13 App. Cas. 699; 59 L. T. 641; 4 T. L. R. 779, H. L.

590. ——.]—By a deed executed in Nov. 1911, B. charged a house in Walthamstow with payment to C. of a sum of money & covenanted to insure & keep insured the mtged. property against fire in a certain amount. Prior to the charge the property had been insured by B. under an annual policy expiring at Christmas, & after the date of the charge B. renewed the policy for the ensuing year. In Feb. 1912, the house was destroyed by fire, & in May, 1912, S., a judgment creditor of B., obtained a garnishee order nisi attaching the money due under the policy. After the date of the order C. served the insurance co. with notice that he required the money to be applied in rebuilding the house, & at the hearing of an application to make the order absolute his counsel insisted on this being done:—Held: (1) Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act, 1774 (c. 78), s. 83, giving interested persons the right to have insurance moneys expended in rebuilding, was of general as opposed to local application; (2) the same sect. applied so as to enable a mtgee. to require the money to be expended in rebuilding.—SINNOTT v. BOWDEN, [1912] 2 Ch. 414; 81 L. 591. Mortgage by trustee-beneficiary—At instance of other beneficiary—Whether interest of trustee passes.]—A widow who, under her marriage settlement & otherwise, was entitled to annual & other sums charged on her husband's estates, was one of the trustees of his will, whereby the estates were devised in trust to raise £200 for her benefit, & subject thereto in trust to convey the estates as testator's daughter by a former marriage should direct. The daughter borrowed money upon the security of a mtge. of some of the estates, in which the widow & her co-trustee joined, & whereby, after reciting the will & the agreement for the loan, & that the daughter had directed the widow & her co-trustee to make such conveyance as was thereinafter contained, the widow & her co-trustee, as devisees in trust, by the direction of the daughter, conveyed the estates to the mtgee. upon trusts for sale & for payment of the mtge. debt, & of the surplus as the daughter should appoint, & subject thereto according to the trusts of the will:—Held: the mtge. did not pass the beneficial interest of the widow; nevertheless, her charges must be postponed to the mtge., she having concurred in it, without reserving her priority.—STRONGE v. HAWKES (1853), 4 De G. 595. ——.] — J., a young man in very poor circumstances, was deft. in a probate action in which he claimed a share of certain real estate as co-heir of deceased. To enable him to conduct his defence he borrowed money from K., a solr., to whom he executed a mtge. whereby he, J., covenanted to employ a particular person as his solr. in the action & if he should be successful in the action to pay K. £225 " by way of bonus "; & it was provided that K. should make such further advances to J. as & when K. should think fit to meet any further necessities of J., or to be applied in or towards the costs of the action. The deed then charged J.'s interest in the real estate in question with present & future advances & interest at 5 per cent. & the £225 bonus. J. received a further advance from K. making a total of £100 for advances, & was ultimately successful in establishing his claim in the probate action. In action by J. to redeem:—Held: (1) the mtge. was tainted with champerty; (2) the bonus was illegal as being a collateral advantage stipulated for by a mtgee.; (3) the transaction was voidable as an undue advantage obtained from J., when under the pressure of distress & in a position analogous to that of an expectant heir; & accordingly redemption was decreed on payment only of the sums actually advanced to J., with interest. —JAMES v. KERR (1889), 40 Ch. The Comrs. of Inland Revenue having assessed the indenture to the double stamp duty on the £1,000 transferred, & also on the £1,100, the amount of the original mtge. debt, as being a "release" of that amount:—Held: the indenture was a "transfer" of the mtge. debt for £1,000 within Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), sched., & was liable only to the duty on such transfer, but was not a "release" of the £1,100, the amount secured by the original mtge., & was therefore not liable to the second duty assessed upon it as such release.—HUMPHREYS v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. A receiver was appointed by the deed to receive the rents & profits so long as any money remained due to the society; but there was a provision that he was not to enter into possession of such rents & profits until default should be made in payment of the principal & interest:—Held: this instrument was chargeable with ad valorem stamp duty under the head "Mtge., Bond, Debenture, Covenant," in the Stamp Act, 1891 (c. 39), sched. In 1837, by indenture between R., the heir-at-law of J., of the first part ; B. the devisee of M., of the second ; & H. of the third reciting that the £1,000 was still due to B., that H. had agreed to pay it off, & had advanced to R. £1,723 more ; B., in consideration of the £1,000 & R. conveyed the same premises to H. in fee, subject to a proviso for redemption of payment of £2,723 ; & interest, with a covenant by R. to pay that sum on a day different from that limited in the deed of 1773, & a power of sale in case of non-payment of the said sum of £2,723 & interest, or any part thereof, on the day thereby limited for payment thereof :—Held : this deed required an ad valorem stamp in respect of the £1,723 ; & also a deed stamp in respect of the new security taken for the £1,000.—HUMBERSTON v. JONES (1847), 16 M. & W. 763 ; 2 New Pract. 617. —— —— ——.]—(1) An indenture quadripartite between A. B. C. & D., recited that A. was entitled to certain copyhold land ; that he had contracted for the sale of it to D. who had been let into possession, & had erected certain cottages on the land : that D. had entered into an agreement to mtge. the land to C. for £400 : that, for the purpose of carrying the agreements for mtge. & purchase simultaneously, into effect, certain surrenders to a trustee had been made by A. & B., the one by direction of D., to such uses as C. should appoint, &, in default of appointment, to the use of C. & his heirs, the other to the use of D. & his heirs, subject to the surrender in favour of C. The indenture then witnessed, that in pursuance of the agreements, & in consideration of the premises A. & B. covenanted with C., his heirs & assigns, & also separately with D. his heirs & assigns, that they A. & B. had right to convey, for quiet enjoyment, etc., & that, in further pursuance of the agreements, & in consideration of the premises D. covenanted with C. for payment of the £400 & interest, with power of sale on default, a proviso for quiet enjoyment, & a declaration that the trustee in whom the copyholds were vested, should stand seised, in trust for pltf., his heirs & assigns, for securing payment of principal & interest, &, subject thereto, for deft., his heirs, etc. :—Held : this indenture was not an instrument operating upon several "matters or things" within 12 Ann. stat. 2, c. 9, s. 24, & the first skin was therefore properly stamped with a single 35*s.* stamp.

(2) By a second indenture, made between D. & C. reciting the former indenture, that D. had made default in payment of the £400, & interest & had applied to C. to lend him the further sum of £100, which C. had consented to do, D. covenanted with C. his heirs, etc., that the copyhold should remain further charged with the £100, & interest & that C. should hold the property as security for the whole sum of £500 & interest :—Held : this indenture operated as a further charge, & therefore was properly stamped with a 30*s.* stamp, under Stamp Act, 1815 (c. 184).—RUSHBROOK v. HOOD (1847), 5 C. B. 131 ; 17 L. J. C. P. 58 ; 10 L. T. O. S. 88 ; 11 Jur. 931 ; 136 E. R. 824.

618. —— —— ——.]—A., being tenant in fee of land, mortgaged for a term to secure £150, & afterwards died, having devised the land to B. for life, remainder to C. in fee. Afterwards, B. & C. borrowed from Z. £165, to pay off the principal & interest, & also £185 more ; & the mtgee., by assignment, to which B. & C. were parties, assigned the term to Z., as a security for the whole £350 ; & B. & C. covenanted for the payment of the whole £350 :—Held : the deed required, besides an ad valorem stamp on the £185, a stamp in respect of the covenant of B. & C., since they became, by the deed, absolutely liable to the payment of the £165, which otherwise they would not have been without assets : & the covenant, as to such liability, could not be considered as merely incident to the assignment in respect of the old loan or the new security for the new loan.—DOE d. 619. —— ——.]—A mtge. deed which bears an ad valorem stamp on the amount advanced, does not require a £1 15*s.* deed stamp, because it contains also an assignment by a former mtgee. to whom part of the money is paid in satisfaction of his mtge., & a deed of assignment of a term, for a nominal consideration, to a trustee for a mtgee., in order to the better securing of the repayment of the mortgage money, requires only a £1 stamp, & not an ad valorem stamp.

(2) A. mortgaged certain premises in fee, & B., his son & heir-at-law, joined in the deed & covenanted for payment of the mortgage money. After A.'s death, B., to whom the property had been devised by him, executed a deed, which recited that the premises were in his occupation, appointing C. receiver of the estate, for the purpose of securing the due payment of principal & interest to the mtgee. ; & empowering him to collect the rents from tenants, to determine tenancies by notice, etc., to distrain, to enforce any remedies by ejectment or otherwise, for non-payment of rent or non-performance of agreements by tenants, &, with the mtgee.'s consent, to let to new tenants, etc. :—Held : B. was not estopped from setting up, as a defence, that there was an outstanding tenancy from year to year in tenants who had paid rent to the mtgee.—DOE d. 643. General right to fix or remove.] — GOUGH v. WOOD & CO., No. 562, ante.

644. ——.]—In the absence of express stipulation to the contrary, a mtgor. in possession has the right to permit trade fixtures to be put up & removed from the mtged. premises provided they are removed before the mtgee. takes possession, but this right of removal ceases when possession is taken by the mtgee.

In Nov. 1902, a freehold laundry was mortgaged in the usual form for £400, the mtgor. covenanting not to remove any fixtures without the written consent of the mtgee. In June, 1903, trade machinery was fixed up in the premises under a hire & purchase agreement, which provided that it should not become the property of the hirer until all instalments had been paid, & should be removable by the owner on the failure of the hirer to pay any instalment. Default having been made in payment of an instalment, the owner entered & removed the machinery.

In an action by the mtgee. against the owner of the machinery for wrongful removal:—Held: the machinery passed to the mtgee. as part of the freehold.

If he does not care to take possession. . . . I think that a mtgee. would fail to obtain an injunction to restrain the removal of such fixtures, unless he also proved that his security was deficient, or would become so by such removal (FARWELL, L.J.).—ELLIS v. GLOVER & HOBSON, LTD., [1908] 1 K. 662. When remaining in mortgagor's possession.]—By marriage settlement, lands were settled on the husband for life, with a joint power of appointment in the husband & wife. They mortgaged the land, with all title deeds, to A for a term, & delivered the deeds to him. M. paid off the mtge.; & took an assignment of the premises from A., the first mtgee., but without mention of title deeds, & M. never demanded them. A. afterwards gave up the deeds to the husband; & he deposited them with defts., solrs., as collateral security for mtge. money which he owed their client. Afterwards, the husband & wife mortgaged the settled lands in fee, subject to the term, without mention of title deeds; & they executed the power of appointment by giving a like power to the wife alone. The husband died; & the wife appointed to herself in fee. She then offered defts. to pay the debt due from her late husband to their client, on receiving back the title deeds, denying, however, that she was liable for such payment; but defts. refused to deliver them unless they were paid also their own charges for business done for their client in respect of the mtge. to him. In trover by the wife against defts. for the deeds :—Held : the wife was entitled to hold the deeds as against the mtgee. in fee, having an interest in them in respect of her equity of redemption, no mention being made of them in the conveyance in fee, & the deeds never having been handed over to the mtgee. in fee.

The purposes of the suit having been satisfied, & the portions raised by mtge., he applied to have the title deeds & leases given up to him, which application was opposed by the mtgees. & was refused by the judge:—Held: as the tenant for life had, on a former occasion, taken some of the deeds abroad, the delivery of them to him ought not to be ordered without the consent of the mtgees. Semble: the deeds ought to be delivered to him on his giving sufficient security for their safe custody & production, & for returning them to ct. when ordered. —JENNER v. MORRIS (1866), 1 Ch. H. then brought ejectment, after notice to quit, against B. & A.:—Held: B. & A. might both show, in defence, the first mtge. to O., O.'s notice to them, & their payment of rent to O. For, although B. could not dispute M.'s title at the time of the demise, he might show that H. had no derivative title from M., & he was not precluded by having paid rent to H. under a mistake of the facts. A., by showing that M., at the time of the demise to him, was only mtgor. in possession, did not impugn M.'s right to confer upon him, by the demise, a legal title to the possession, but might show that M. had since been treated as a trespasser by the mtgee., so as to determine M.'s right; & O.'s notice to the tenant to pay him the rent might, if received in evidence, tend to show that by so doing O. treated the mtgor. as a trespasser.

By the same deed the mtgor. attorned as tenant from year to year to the receiver, & there was a proviso, that if default should be made in payment of the mtge. money, or interest, at the times appointed, the mtgee. might enter & avoid the tenancy created by the attornment. There was also a proviso, that nothing therein contained should lessen the rights, powers or remedies of the mtgee. under the mtge. 678. Nature of tenancy—Whether tenant at will—Quodam modo tenant at will.]—Now, a mtgor., is not properly tenant at will to the mtgee., for he is not to pay him rent. He is so only quodam modo (LORD MANSFIELD).

Where the mtgor. is himself the occupier of the estate, he may be considered as tenant at will; but he cannot be so considered, if there is an undertenant; for there can be no such thing as an undertenant to a tenant at will. The demise itself would amount to a determination of the will. There being in this case a tenant in possession, the mtgor. is, therefore, only a receiver of the rent for the mtgee., who may, at any time, countermand the implied authority, by giving notice not to pay the rent to him any longer (ASHHURST, J.).—MOSS v. GALLIMORE (1779), 1 Doug. covenant by the mtgor. for further assurance in case of such default:—Held: the mtgee. had the right of possession, under this deed, from the time of its execution, & not merely from Mar. 25, 1820; & therefore, an ejectment for the recovery of the premises, brought by the heir-at-law of the mtgee., within twenty years of the latter but not of the former date, no interest having been paid in the meantime, was too late.

The legal estate passes by the deed of release, although the releasee cannot sue the releasor on the covenants, unless in case of non-payment on, or interruption after Mar. 25, 1820. There is therefore no ground for saying that a redemise was to be made until that day & indeed it would be very difficult to support such a supposition, seeing that the deed is executed by the mtgor. only. The deed contained a proviso for quiet enjoyment by G. if he paid the quarterly sums, etc., & observed the rules of the society & the covenants in the deed; but that in case he made default defts. might enter, & lease or sell the house, & out of the proceeds retain the amount of payments in arrear, etc., & pay the surplus, if any, to G.; & a clause by which G. agreed to become tenant of the house to defts., their heirs or assigns, or other the trustee or trustees for the time being of the society, thenceforth during their will, at the clear net yearly rent of £66, payable on the usual quarterly days, subject to the powers of distress & entry for non-payment thereof, & to all usual remedies as in leases of like property. G. died, leaving payments in arrear; defts. distrained upon the goods in " house, which was in the occupation of his widow, who subsequently took out administration.

708. —— ——.]—In 1824, H. the tenant of certain copyhold premises, demised them for twenty-one years from Christmas, 1823; & the lease contained a covenant for further renewal. In Jan. 1847, the devisees of H., who had been admitted tenants as such by the lord of the manor, demised the premises to M. who had previously purchased the lessee's interest under the lease of 1824. In May, 1847, M. demised the premises to Q., & in July, 1847, Q. mortgaged the premises to deft. By this deed Q., in consideration of the sum of £400 advanced by deft., granted, bargained, sold, & demised the premises to him for the residue of the term wanting one day, & also the benefit of the covenant for further renewal. The deed contained a proviso for redemption in case Q. should pay £10 being one half-year's interest on Jan. 29, 1848, & £410 the principal sum & interest on July 29, 1848. The deed contained covenants for the payment of principal & interest; & it also provided, that Q. should remain in possession until default in payment, with a power to sell the premises; & the proceeds of such sale were to go first in satisfaction of the principal & interest, & the surplus, if any, to Q.; & it was further agreed that Q. should hold the premises as tenant at will to deft., at the clear yearly rent of £150, payable quarterly, for which rent it should be lawful for deft. to distrain; but that deft. might at any time determine the tenancy, by leaving a written notice on the premises, & that deft. should apply the rent, when received, in satisfaction of the principal & interest, & should pay the surplus, if any, to Q. The mtgor. having made default, the mtgees., without having given him any notice of their intention thenceforward to treat him as a tenant, distrained, after the lapse of more than a year from default, as for a year's rent in arrear:—Held: not having given him notice of their intention to treat him as a tenant, they were not entitled to distrain.—CLOWES v. HUGHES (1870), L. 711. Provision for possession for fixed period—Interest in nature of term of years—Tenant at sufferance on expiration of period.]—Certain premises were let to pltf. by P., who had previously mortgaged them to defts., the trustees of a benefit building society, to secure payment of subscriptions, etc., which might become due from him to the society. The mortgage deed gave power to defts. to distrain the goods of P., on the premises for arrears of subscriptions due to the society, as for rent due on a demise. Defts. distrained on the premises for subscriptions due from P., & seized pltf.'s goods. Pltf. replevied the goods, & recovered in the action of replevin, in the county ct., as damages, the amount of the expenses of the replevin bond.

If there be an express agreement in the mtge. deed that the mtgor. shall remain in possession for a certain time, he has an interest in the nature of a term of years during such time; but, upon expiration of such period, if there be default in payment of the money, the mtgor, becomes a mere tenant at sufferance (BOVILL, C.J.).—GIBBS v. CRUIKSHANK (1873), L. No surrender of the copyholds was made. On July 16, 1877, the bankers sent an auctioneer to distrain for £10,000, being two years' rent. The auctioneer, on the same day saw the managing director of the co., gave him formal notice of distraint, & by arrangement with him employed two workmen of the co. to keep possession of the chattels distrained. On July 18, the co. requested the bankers not to proceed to an immediate sale, to which the bankers assented, & the two men remained in possession. On July 19, a petition was presented for winding up the co.; & on July 28, a winding-up order was made. By arrangement with the liquidator, the men went out of possession in Oct., & in Nov. the bulk of the chattels was sold by the liquidator without prejudice to the rights of the bankers, & realised less than £5,000:—Held: the attornment clause created the relation of landlord & tenant; there being no ground for saying that the rent of £5,000 was so unreasonable as to be fraudulent, the mtgees. had the same rights of distress as any other landlord.—Re STOCKTON IRON FURNACE CO. 720. Purpose of attornment — Further security —For payment of principal.]—A. assigned the lease for twenty-one years of a house in which he resided, together with two policies of assurance upon his life, to deft., by way of mtge., to secure the repayment of £250 & interest, as well as the premiums upon the policies; & the mtge. deed contained a clause by which the mtgor. attorned tenant from year to year to the mtgee. in respect of the leasehold house at the yearly rent of £175, provided that the mtgee. might at any time, without notice, take possession of the premises & determine the tenancy. There was no specific provision that any part of such rent should be applicable to the principal of the debt. The mtgor. became bkpt., & the mtgee. distrained upon the furniture in the house, which was not the property of A., for a year's rent under the attornment clause, though at that time the landlord's rent of £115, the interest upon the money advanced, & the premiums upon the policies, had been paid. Pltf., who was the owner of the furniture, filed a bill to restrain the sale.

Upon a demurrer, for want of equity:—Held: the attornment clause was not intended to enable the mtgee. to repay himself any of the capital advanced, but only to secure the payment of rent, interest, & premiums. Secus: if the object of the attornment clause had been expressed to be for enabling the recovery of the principal as well.—HAMPSON v. FELLOWS (1868), L. Nature of tenancy created — Attornment as yearly tenant—Whether yearly tenancy created.]—A mtge. deed gave a power of entry on default; & to the intent that the mtgees. might have for the recovery of interest the same powers of entry & distress as are by law given to landlords for the recovery of rent, the mtgor., deft., thereby attorned tenant from year to year to the mtgees. Deft. continued in possession for more than a year. The mtgees., after default, assigned to pltfs., & gave notice to deft. to quit:—Held: there was no tenancy from year to year, & immediately upon the notice pltfs. might maintain ejectment.—METROPOLITAN COUNTIES ASSURANCE CO. v. BROWN (1859), 4 H. & N. 428; 28 L. 725. —— —— ——.]—A mtge. deed contained an attornment clause whereby A., the mtgor., attorned & became tenant from year to year to B., the mtgee., for & in respect of the mtged. premises, at the yearly rent of £800, to be paid by equal quarterly payments. It was thereby agreed that it should be lawful for B., at any time after three months from the date of the mtge. without giving previous notice of his intention so to do, to enter upon & take possession of the premises whereof A. had attorned tenant, & to determine the tenancy created by the aforesaid attornment A. filed a liquidation petition & on the same day a receiver was appointed, who entered into possession of A.'s estate & effects. Notice of the petition & of the appointment of a recever was sent to B., who two days later, by virtue of the attornment clause, distrained upon the goods & chattels on the mtged. premises for half a year's rent then due:—Held: a tenancy from year to year & not a tenancy at will was created by the attornment clause, & B. was entitled, under Bkpcy. Act, 1869 (c. 71), s. 34, to distrain for the rent due to him from A. at the time of filing the liquidation petition.—Re THRELFALL, Ex p. QUEEN'S BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1880), 16 Ch. 726. —— Attornment for term of ten years—Tenancy at will created—Mortgage not executed by mortgagor.]—B. being mtgor. in possession, executed a mtge. on Sept. 12, 1866, of the premises to defts. to secure the repayment with interest of certain advances to be made by defts. The mtge. was by indenture between B., & defts., but was never executed by defts.; the deed recited the previous mtge., which was in fee, & by it B. conveyed all the premises comprised in the recited mtge. to defts., in fee, upon trust that defts. should, either immediately or at any time, sell them, " & as a further security for the principal & interest for the time being due from B. to defts. B. did thereby attorn & become tenant to defts., their heirs & assigns, as & from the date thereof, of such of the premises thereby conveyed as were in his occupation, for & during the term of ten years, if that security should so long continue at the yearly rent of £800, to be paid on Oct. 1, the first yearly rent to be payable on Oct. 1, then next. Provided that, notwithstanding anything therein contained, & without any notice or demand of possession, it should be lawful for defts., their heirs, exors., administrators, or assigns, before or after the execution of the trusts of sale, to enter upon the said mtged. premises, or any part thereof, & to eject B. or any person claiming through him, & to determine the said term of ten years, notwithstanding any lease that might have been granted by B." Defts. made the stipulated advances, & B. continued in occupation of the premises; & on Oct. 15, 1866, defts. distrained for the first year's rent:—Held: (1) the intention of the parties, as evidenced by the deed, was to create a tenancy at will only, & not a term of ten years; a deed being therefore unnecessary, the tenancy was created by the assent of the parties & the occupation under it, & the fact that defts. had not executed the deed was immaterial; (2) the parties having agreed that the relation of landlord & tenant should be established between them, the mtgor. was estopped from setting up that defts. had no legal reversion; & it made no difference that the fact of the mtgor. having only the equity of redemption appeared on the face of the deed; & the distress was therefore lawful.—MORTON v. WOODS (1869), L. 727. —— Attornment as monthly tenant—Not made tenancy at will.]—A member of a building society borrowed £7,500 from the society, which was to be repaid in a series of monthly instalments of £71 17*s.* 6*d.* each, including interest at 7 per cent. The instalments were payable at the monthly meetings of the society, &, if the member neglected to pay them, when due, he became liable to a fine, at the rate of 5 per cent. per month on the total amount in arrear & unpaid at each meeting. To secure the loan he executed to the trustees of the society a mtge. of real estate. The deed contained a proviso that if the member should fail for three monthly meetings to pay his subscriptions, interest, fines, or other moneys, or to observe the regulations of the society, or in the event of his becoming bkpt., the mtgees. might enter into possession or receipt of the rents of the mtged. property; & " for the better securing the payments which by the rules of the society ought to be made by the mtgor," it was agreed that, if the mtgees. should at any time become entitled to enter into possession or receipt of the rents, & the mtgor. should then or afterwards be in the occupation of the whole or part of the property, he should during such occupation be tenant thereof from month to month to the mtgees., at a monthly rent equal in amount to the moneys which ought to be paid monthly by the mtgor. from time to time for subscriptions, interest, fines, & other moneys under the rules, & that the tenancy should commence on the day up to which he should have fully paid all & every part of such subscriptions, interest, fines, & other moneys, & the rent for the period intervening between the commencement of the tenancy & the day on which the trustees should be entitled to enter into possession or receipt of rents should be payable & paid on that day, & the monthly rent due upon & subsequently to that day should become due monthly in advance, & be payable at the monthly meetings, the first payment of rent becoming due on the day on which the mtgees. should first become entitled to enter into possession. Power was given to the mtgees. to determine the tenancy by fourteen days' notice. The deed was not executed by the mtgees., nor was it registered under the Bills of Sale Act, 1878 (c. 31). The mtgor. committed default in his payments, & was afterwards adjudicated a bkpt.:—Held: it was no objection to the attornment clause that the monthly rent was fluctuating in amount; a rent the amount of which may fluctuate according to the happening of certain events is not an uncertain rent; the tenancy under the attornment clause was not made, by Stat. Frauds, sect. 1, a tenancy at will.—Re KNIGHT, Ex p. VOISEY (1882), 21 Ch. D. 442; 52 L. J. Ch. 121; 47 L. T. 362; 31 W. R. 19, C. A.

The mtgor. died intestate, & his heir-at-law entered into possession of the mtged. property, & for a time paid the interest under the mtge., but subsequently became bkpt. The mtgees. having distrained for arrears of interest, on the ground that they were entitled to do so as landlords under the attornment clause:—Held: as the original tenancy was determined by the death of the mtgor., & a new tenancy was not created between the mtgees. & the heir-at-law by mere payment of interest, the distress was illegal, & the trustee in bkpcy. was entitled to the proceeds of the distress.—SCOBIE v. COLLINS, [1895] 1 Q. 740. —— —— Not affected by Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25—Or by Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 10.]—The principle of Moss v. Gallimore, No. 678, ante, & Rogers v. Humphreys, No. 785, post, that the mtgor. is in possession & receives the rents of the mortgaged property only by leave of the mtgee., & the mtgee. is the reversioner expectant on leases of the mortgaged property & is entitled on taking possession of it to all arrears of rent in respect of leases made before the date of the mtge., or subsequently thereto by authority of the mtgee., is not affected by the provisions of Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (5), or of Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 10, which deal with procedure only.

A co. issued debenture stock secured by a trust deed whereby certain freehold & leasehold properties were specifically mortgaged to the trustees of the deed, & a floating charge was created in their favour on all the assets of the co. Subsequently the co. assigned to W. & H. certain book debts, including rents in arrear in respect of leases, some of which were specifically included in the trust deed, & also certain drawbacks owing to the co. by the Crown in respect of beer exported by the co. on which the co. was entitled to receive payments equal to the amount of the excise brewing duty paid thereon. W. & H. gave notice of their assignment to the tenants from whom rents were due & to the shipping agents who had been employed by the co. to export the beer ; but gave no notice to the Crown. A receiver & manager of the assets & undertaking of the co. was appointed on behalf of the debenture-holders. He gave notice of his appointment to the tenants & to the Crown :—Held : the rents in arrear in respect of property not specifically charged belonged to W. & H., but the rents of properties specifically mortgaged belonged to the debenture-holders inasmuch as they had taken possession by the appointment of a receiver & giving notice ; the drawbacks were only subject to the floating charge & could be dealt with by the co. ; & as the co. had this power by their contract with the debenture-holders, the latter could not, with notice of the assignment, obtain priority to the assignees by giving notice to the Crown.—Re IND, COOPE & CO., LTD., FISHER v. THE CO., KNOX v. THE CO., ARNOLD v. THE CO., [1911] 2 Ch. 223 ; 80 L. Prepayment of rent — Validity against mortgagee.]—B. having leased his land to pltf. at a rent payable quarterly, subsequently mortgaged the land to defts., who allowed B. to remain in receipt of the rent. Subsequently to the mtge., B. applied to pltf., who was not aware of the mtge., to pay him a year's rent in advance, & pltf. did so. After the payment, & before the rent had become due, defts. gave notice to pltf. to pay the rent to them, & pltf. refusing to pay it, defts. distrained for it:—Held: in an action for an illegal distress, that payment of the rent before it became due was not a good payment as against defts., the mtgees., & pltf. was still liable to pay them the rent.—DE NICHOLLS v. SAUNDERS (1870), L. 748. —— ——.] — In July, 1864, L. demised premises to deft. for five years at a rent of £55 per annum, payable quarterly. Immediately after the grant of the lease, deft. advanced to L. £170 on account of rent; & in Sept. 1865, L. mtged. the premises to pltf. In May, 1866, B., who claimed under a prior mtge. from L. dated in Sept. 1858, through C., his attorney, commenced an action of ejectment against deft. to recover possession of the premises, but did not proceed with it; & on Nov. 1, 1866, pltf.'s attorney wrote to deft.: "Mr. C. has written to say his clients are no longer entitled to receive your rent, I therefore request that you will have the kindness to pay the same here by Monday next":—Held: the prepayment of rent was no bar to pltf.'s claim to the rent accruing after deft. had notice that pltf. was grantee of the reversion; & that the above letter, coupled with the circumstances known to deft., that he was raising money by mortgaging his reversion, & that the pltf.'s claim for rent, could hardly be founded upon any other alleged right than one resulting from a grant of the reversion, would warrant a jury in inferring that deft. had notice that pltf. was such grantee.—COOK v. GUERRA (1872), L. Soon after the commencement of the term the lessor agreed to accept, & deft. paid, a lump sum in satisfaction of all rent reserved by the lease during the term. The lessor then mortgaged the premises to pltf. Pltf. knew nothing of the payment of rent in advance by deft., & had only seen the counterpart lease; but she had made no inquiry of deft. before the mtge. was completed:—Held: pltf. was bound by the arrangement made between deft. & the lessor, & could not recover from deft. any part of the rent reserved by the lease.—GREEN v. RHEINBERG (1911), 104 L. By the abstract delivered, it appeared that A., by indenture of Sept. 30, 1817, demised the premises to B. for eighty nine years less twenty one days from Michaelmas, 1817, with various covenants to be performed by B., his heirs, etc.; that B., on Mar. 25, 1829, mortgaged the premises for the residue of the term, to secure £487 & interest to C.; & that, by indenture of Apr. 2, 1831, B. demised the premises to D. for twenty one years less eight days, at the rent of £48, with covenants on the part of D., similar to those of B. in the indenture of Sept. 1817. The mtgees. were willing to execute any conveyance that might be requisite for the purpose of making a good title to the purchaser :—Held : B. was in a situation to make a good title to the premises sold, the lease to D., though originally a lease by estoppel, being

If, however, the lease be subsequent to the mtge., then the mtgee. may treat the lessee & all those who may be in possession as wrongdoers, & may bring ejectment, but he cannot distrain or bring any action for the rent they have contracted to pay, as there is no relation of landlord & tenant between them. If the tenant choose to pay the rent to the mtgee., & he accepts it, a relation of landlord & tenant is created between the mtgee. & the tenant; & the remedy of the mtgee. will depend upon the particular circumstances of each case.

No notice is necessary to be given by the mtgee. that he means to proceed against tenants when they have come in subsequently to the mtge., because in such cases their title is wrongful, as against the mtgee.; but there may be cases where, in consequence of the conduct of the mtgee., notice may become necessary.—ROGERS v. HUMPHREYS (1835), 4 Ad. & El. 299; 1 Har. & W. 625; 5 Nev. & M. 790. —— —— Mortgagee substantially a party.]—C., the owner of a leasehold estate which was subject to a mtge., entered without the privity of the mtgees. into an agreement with P. to grant him a lease for twenty one years, & in 1875 P. took possession under this agreement. On Mar. 25, 1881, the mtgees.' solrs. wrote to P. stating that they, on behalf of the mtgees., had withdrawn C.'s authority to receive the rents & asking him to pay the rent due that day & all future rent to them. P. wrote to ask C. whether he ought to pay according to the notice, & C. replied that he would be correct in doing so. P. consulted his solrs., who inspected the mortgage deed, & advised him that the mtgees. could claim rent from him. P. therefore paid the mtgees. the rent due on Mar. 25, & on June 22 gave them notice to determine his tenancy at Christmas. At the end of the year the mtgees. refused to accept possession, & in June, 1882, they & C. commenced this action to compel P. to take a lease according to the agreement:—Held: the notice by the mtgees. to the tenant to pay rent to them & the payment accordingly did away with the agreement between C. & P. & made P. tenant from year to year to the mtgees.

Evidence might have been given, if the facts were so, that the mtgees. were in substance parties to the agreement for the lease, that they authorised it, & that it was made by the mtgor. for them as well as for himself (LORD SELBORNE, C.).

But the paramount right of the mtgees. being asserted, the tenant has availed himself of the right which in that case the law gives him to consider himself as holding no longer from the mtgor., but as a tenant from year to year of the mtgees. (LORD SELBORNE, C.).

When a mtgee. intervenes by virtue of his paramount title, & claims rent, which he has a right to do without setting up any lease whatever, the rent if paid will be the previously existing rent, under a new tenancy from year to year under the mtgees. 817. May treat mortgagor as landlord — Until mortgagee interferes.]—(1) Mtgee. having given notice to the tenants holding the mtged. premises under leases granted by the mtgor. after the mtge., is entitled to receive from those tenants the rents actually due at the time of the notice, as well as those which accrued due afterwards. Where such rents had been received by the agent of the mtgor. after his bkpcy., & were not actually paid over:—Held: the agent might retain such rents in order to pay the interest accruing due on the mtge. to the mtgee., who had required him to do so, & the assignees could not recover them.

I have no doubt, that in point of law, a tenant who comes into possession under a demise from a mtgor., after a mtge. executed by him, may consider the mtgor. his landlord so long as the mtgee. allows the mtgor. to continue in possession & receive the rents; & that payment of the rents by the tenant to the mtgor., without any notice of the mtge., is a valid payment. . . . The mtgor. cannot dispute the title of the mtgee. When the mtgor. occupies the premises, he holds under the mtgee., who may put an end to the rights of the mtgor. (BAYLEY, J.).

(2) Mtgee. by giving notice of the mtge. to the tenant may thereby make him his tenant & entitle himself to receive the rents (BAYLEY, J.).

Pltf. having sued deft. for a breach of his covenant in not delivering up the fixtures:—Held: deft. was not estopped from setting up the title of the mtgee., & pltf. could not recover the value of the fixtures, but only the actual damage sustained by him in consequence of their detention from Apr. 10, to Apr. 13.—WATSON v. LANE (1856), 11 Exch. 769; 25 L. R. distrained for rent in 1820:—Held: D., who replevied at the instigation of N., might, under the plea of riens in arriere, avail himself of these payments.—DYER v. BOWLEY (1824), 2 Bing. 91; 9 Moore, C. During the quarter ending at Michaelmas the mtgees. gave a notice to the tenant informing him of the existence of the mtge., & that the principal sum was still due & owing together with an arrear of interest, & requiring him to pay the rent thereafter to accrue due to them. The rent which became due at Michaelmas being still unpaid, an order was made in an action against the mtgor. appointing pltf., who had recovered judgment, receiver of the rents of the premises, "without prejudice to the rights of any prior incumbrances who may think proper to take possession of the same by virtue of their respective securities." Subsequently the mtgees. threatened the tenant with legal proceedings unless he paid the rent to them, & the tenant thereupon paid them the quarter's rent due at Michaelmas. The receiver claimed payment of such rent from the tenant:—Held: the tenant's occupation after notice to pay rent to the mtgees. was evidence from which a tenancy to the mtgees. ought to be inferred, & therefore he was justified in paying the rent to them, & could not be liable for same rent to the mtgor. or any one claiming under him. —UNDERHAY v. READ (1887), 20 Q. 832. Damages against mortgagor—Covenant for quiet enjoyment.]—By a deed of settlement made by deft. in 1842, under a power contained in his father's will, a term of one thousand years in certain estates was limited to T. & W., in trust, by mtge., sale or otherwise to raise a sum not exceeding £10,000 for payment of deft.'s debts; & in 1843 the trustees assigned the term by way of mtge. to A. & B., deft. being a party to the deed, covenanting for payment of the principal & interest, & also for title in the trustees, & for quiet enjoyment by the mtgees. in case of default. His assignment contained a power to deft. to lease, by & with the consent & approbation of the mtgees., their heirs, etc. In 1846 deft. without having obtained the consent of the mtgees. granted a lease of part of the lands to pltf. with a covenant for quiet enjoyment during the term, "without the let, suit, trouble, denial, eviction, molestation or disturbance of the lessor his heirs or assigns or any person or persons claiming or deriving or to claim or derive, by, from or under him, them, or any of them." Pltf. in 1851 received a notice from the surviving mtgee., informing him of the mtge. & that the principal & interest were unpaid & in arrear, & requiring pltf. to pay rent to him. Having consulted his attorney & finding that he could not successfully resist the claim of the mtgee., pltf. consented to give up possession of the land to him, & the mtgee. entered & took possession, paying pltf. £75 as a compensation for certain improvements:—Held: pltf. was entitled to maintain an action upon the covenant for quiet enjoyment, the facts showing an eviction or at all events a molestation & disturbance of pltf., by one claiming title, by, from, or under deft.—CARPENTER v. PARKER (1857), 3 C. 835. Under Judicature Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (5)—Action for breach of covenant.]—A mtgor. in receipt of the rents & profits has a sufficient interest to enable him to maintain an action for an injunction to restrain an injury done to the mtged. property without joining the mtgee.

F., being owner of copyhold land, covenanted with S. to stand seised thereof in trust for him & his heirs, subject to a rent, & subject to a covenant by S. not to use any building erected thereon as a beerhouse. All the estate of S. vested in deft. F. sold the land to pltf., B. advancing the purchase money, & it was conveyed to B., subject to a proviso for conveyance to pltf. upon payment by him to B. of the amount advanced. Deft. used the building erected upon the land as a beerhouse:—Held: upon the general principles of equity, pltf. was entitled to restrain deft. by injunction from using the building for that purpose without joining B. Qu.: whether Jud. Act, s. 25 (5), would have entitled pltf. to an injunction in his own name.

If by that sub-section [sub-sect. 5] the mtgor. may sue for possession on rents & profits or in respect of trespass or other wrong, meaning wrong independent of any contract or duty, it is possible that the mtgor. may sue for rents & profits, but not for breach of covenant to insure against fire or to repair (BRAMWELL, L.J.).—FAIRCLOUGH v. MARSHALL (1878), 4 Ex. The question whether a mtgor. is in such possession of rents & profits of land as will entitle him, under Jud. Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (5), to bring an action in respect of such land is to be determined by reference to all the circumstances of the case, & by the possibility of doing justice upon the existing record between all parties interested. 846. Benefit of covenant running with land—Made with mortgagor alone.]—Where on a sale the benefit of a covenant restricting the use of the purchaser's land is clearly annexed to all or any part of land retained by the vendor, it passes by assignment of that land or any part thereof, & may be said to run with it, as well in contemplation of equity as of law, without proof of any special bargain or representation on the assignment, & even though the assignee is ignorant of the existence of the covenant. In such a case it runs not because the conscience of either party is affected, but because the assignee has acquired something which adhered in or was annexed to the land. As in contemplation of equity a mtgor. is the true owner of the land, the benefit of such a covenant will run with the land in equity where it is made with a mtgor. alone, notwithstanding the rule at law according to which a mtgor. for this purpose was treated as a stranger to the land.—ROGERS v. HOSEGOOD, [1900] 2 Ch. 388; 69 L. SECT. 7.—OTHER CASES.

847. Money paid into court on compulsory purchase—Petition by tenant for life—Need not be served on incumbrancers.]—Tenant for life, empowered under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), to treat for the fee, contracted to sell lands to a railway company.

The vendor presented a petition for the investment of the purchase-money, which had been paid into ct., in stock & payment of the dividends to himself. The co. then brought to the knowledge of the ct. that petitioner had mortgaged & otherwise incumbered his life estate, & suggested that the incumbrancers should have been served & the petition stood over for that purpose. Semble: unnecessary to serve the incumbrancers, petitioner being mtgor. in possession quite undisturbed by the incumbrancers.—Re HUNGERFORD, Re RUGBY & STAMFORD RAILWAY ACT, 1846 (1855), 1 K. & J. 413; 1 Jur. Enforcement of restrictive covenants—Against mortgagee—& purchase from him—Building estate.]—On the sale of a building estate in lots the purchaser of each lot entered into a covenant with the vendor & with the purchasers of the other lots not to build upon his lot beyond a specified building line. The purchaser of one lot mortgaged a part of his lot. The mtgee. had notice of the covenant, but no express restriction as to the use of the land was imposed on him by the mtgor. The mtgee. afterwards foreclosed & sold the mortgaged land, part of which ultimately became vested in defts. by purchase. Defts., as well as the sub-purchasers through whom they claimed, took with notice of the restrictive covenant:—Held : there was no implied obligation as between the mtgor. & the mtgee. restricting the use of the land, & the mtgor. was not entitled to enforce the restrictive covenant as against defts.—KING v. DICKESON (1889), 40 Ch. SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), ss. 85–87.

867. General rule—Any person interested.]—(1) A mtgee. is not bound to convey the legal estate in the mtged. property & to deliver up the title deeds to a person from whom he has accepted payment of principal, interest & costs, if that person has only contracted to purchase a part of the mtged. estate & has not accepted the title. On tender by a person having partial interest giving a right to redeem the mtgee. is bound to convey, but the conveyance should reserve the equities of the other persons interested.

(2) Any person interested in the equity of redemption is entitled to redeem (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).

A party to a foreclosure suit whose interest is thereby foreclosed, & who afterwards becomes entitled to an interest in the same estate, by devise or otherwise, from another person who was not a party to the foreclosure, may bring his bill of redemption. Relief will not be given in such a case on a claim for redemption, stating only that pltf. is entitled to the equity of redemption under certain instruments, but not stating any of the proceedings in the suit for foreclosure, or the grounds on which pltf. seeks to set it aside.—BROMITT v. MOOR (1851), 9 Hare, 374; 22 L. 877. Joint mortgage of wife's property—Bankruptcy of husband—Right of wife to redeem—Subject to right of assignees.]—At the hearing of a suit instituted by the wife of a bkpt. for redemption of a mtge. executed by the husband & wife of the wife's real estate, the assignees of bkpt., who were co-defts. with the mtgee., disclaimed their right to redeem, & a decree was made giving the first equity of redemption to the wife. After this decree, the Comr. in Bkpcy. allowed the mtgee. to prove against the estate of bkpt. for the full amount of his principal & interest. Upon appeal to the Lord Chancellor:—Held: the disclaimer of the assignees operated only in acceleration of the wife's right to redeem, but if she did not exercise the right, then, the purpose for which the disclaimer was given having ceased to exist, the assignees' equity of redemption would continue as before. Consequently, the mtgee. could only be admitted to prove, subject to the condition that in the event of the bill being dismissed as against him, the interest of bkpt. in the mtged. premises should be sold, & proof admitted for the residue of the mtge. debt, after deducting the proceeds; or, in the event of redemption by the wife, the proof should be admitted subject to the same being expunged, or remaining wholly or partially for the benefit of the person paying the mtge. debt.

Explanation of the rule that a dismissal of a bill for redemption operates as a decree for foreclosure.

If the bill of the party entitled to it be dismissed & that dismissal precludes any further claim, then the equity of redemption ceases to exist merely for the reason that it is no longer capable of being enforced. But that only applies to the individual who has filed the bill, & it would be impossible upon that ground, & on the effect of that reasoning, to say that the right to redeem belonging to deft., the equity of redemption of deft. is equally lost (LORD WESTBURY, C.).—Re GLEAVES, Ex p. PAINE (1863), 3 De G. It was not known who was the heir-at-law & the mtgee. never entered into possession. The extrix. of the mtgor. claimed to redeem the whole of the mtged. property which claim was resisted by the mtgee. who insisted that her only right was to redeem the mtged. personalty on payment of a proportionate part of the mtge. debt. The extrix. brought an action for redemption & BACON, V.-C., made a decree for the usual accounts as against a mtgee. in possession, directing that on payment of what was found due the mtgee. should convey & assign the mtged. properties, real & personal, to pltf., subject to such equity of redemption as might be subsisting therein in any other person or persons. Deft. appealed:—Held: (1) this decree was right, for that the owner of the equity of redemption of one or two estates comprised in the same mtge. cannot insist on redeeming that estate separately, & cannot be compelled to redeem it separately, his right being to redeem the whole, subject to the equities of the other persons interested; (2) although the heir-at-law, if known, ought to have been a party, the ct. would not delay making a decree until he was ascertained & made a party.—HALL v. HEWARD (1886), 32 Ch. The mtgor. sold his equity of redemption at an undervalue, & an assignee of the purchaser substituted for them another policy on the mtgor.'s life, in lieu of the original ones, which were dropped, & assigned the same to the mtge. 954. —— ——.]—Trustees of an insurance society advanced £10,000 to C. on the security of a reversionary interest to which C. was entitled contingently on his surviving his father. As part of the loan transaction the trustees insured the life of C. against that of his father for £34,500 in the society of which they were trustees, & paid the premiums till C.'s death. C. executed a bond charging the reversion with principal, premiums, & interest on principal & premiums. By written agreements the interest & premiums were to accumulate at compound interest for five years. The agreements contained special clauses providing, inter alia, to whom the policy in certain specified events should belong, & declared that in the event of C. paying the whole sum due before the death of his father the trustees should be bound to assign the policy to C., & that if C. should pre-decease his father without having paid all principal moneys, interest, & costs the policy should belong absolutely to the trustees, they being bound in that event to impute to the debt all moneys they might receive in respect of the policy. C. died in his father's lifetime, having never paid anything:—Held: upon the true construction of the documents the contract was, not that the policy should be effected for the trustees' protection only & for their sole benefit, subject to an option for C. to make it his own in the event of his paying off the debt in his lifetime, but that the policy was mortgaged to the trustees & was the property of C. subject to the charge; therefore that in accordance with the equitable doctrine against fettering a mtgor.'s right of redemption C.'s representatives were entitled to the policy moneys after deducting all sums due.

There is a further equitable rule which seems to be this: that this right of redemption shall not even by bargain between creditor & debtor be made more burdersome to debtor than the original debt, except so far as additional interest & expenses consequent on the debt not having been paid at the time appointed may have occurred or arisen: that any agreement making such right of redemption is void (LORD BRAMWELL).—SALT v. NORTHAMPTON (MARQUESS), [1892] A. A limited co. borrowed money upon the security of their debenture stock subject to the lender having the option to purchase the stock at 40 per cent. within twelve months; the loan to become due & payable with interest at thirty days' notice on either side. Within the twelve months & before the co. gave notice of their intention to repay the loan, the lender claimed to purchase the stock at the agreed price:—Held: the option was void, & the co. was entitled to redeem the loan on payment of principal, interest, & costs.

The doctrine "once a mtge. always a mtge." means that no contract between a mtgor. & mtgee. made at the time of the mtge. & as part of the mtge. transaction, or in other words, as one of the terms of the loan, can be valid if it prevents the mtgor. from getting back his property on paying off what is due on the security. Any bargain which has that effect is invalid, & is inconsistent with the transaction being a mtge. . . . Debenture stock is usually a sum of money charged on the assets of the co., issuing it. . . . It can be mortgaged as well by the co. which issues it as by an ordinary holder. I can discover no reason for treating a mtge. of debenture stock as something so different from other mtges. as to render the principle once a mtge. always a mtge. inapplicable to it (LORD LINDLEY).—SAMUEL v. JARRAH TIMBER & WOOD PAVING CORPN., [1904] A. 958. —— ——.] — It is now fully established by the House of Lords that the old rule that a mtge. cannot be made irredeemable still prevails, & that equity will not permit any clause or contrivance, being part of the mtge. transaction or contemporaneous with it, to prevent or impede redemption.

Applt., in consideration of a mtge. of licensed premises granted to him by resps., borrowed £500, to be repaid by 208 monthly instalments. The mtgor. was not to be at liberty to pay off the debt otherwise than by instalments without the express consent in writing of resps., & the premises, which were to be a tied house during the continuance of the security, were held for a term of years which exceeded by six weeks only the actual expiration of the lease. On the failure of the resps. on one occasion to supply beer in accordance with their covenant, applt. assumed to treat the tie as at an end, & resps. brought an action for damages & an injunction. Applt. counterclaimed to redeem:—Held: the mtge. being obviously meant to be irredeemable, the provision as to repayment of the debt could not be enforced, & applt. was entitled to redeem.—FAIRCLOUGH v. SWAN BREWERY CO., LTD., [1912] A. The repayment of the advances was secured by the promissory notes or acceptances of the contractors, &, collaterally by the deposit of a number of foreign stocks & securities. In an action for foreclosure or sale of these securities the question was raised whether pltfs. were entitled to claim the commission of 1 per cent. per month on unpaid instalments in addition to interest, or whether such commission was contrary to law as being in the nature of a penalty:—Held: the contract to pay commission was wholly separate from the payment of interest, it being an independent undertaking to pay something on the happening of a particular event, & could not be considered an illegal charge; the account of what was due upon the securities must be taken on the footing of the validity of the stipulation: & payment must be made on a fixed day, or, if not, then foreclosure, with liberty for any parties to apply in chambers for a sale.—GENERAL CREDIT & DISCOUNT CO. v. GLEGG (1883), 22 Ch. completed in accordance with the agreement on Sept. 2, 1907, & in July, 1908, a private co. was formed for the purpose of working the estate. The whole of the capital, £100,000, was issued & no opportunity was given to pltf. to find one-third, but in Dec. 1908, he was informed by the co. that it was proposed to increase its capital to £120,000, & offering him in accordance with the terms of the said agreement one-third of that amount, viz., 4,000 £10 shares. Pltf. refused this offer, & alleged that under the agreement he was entitled to an option to find one-third of the original capital, & not having had such option he claimed the extra £5,000 under the agreement:—Held: (1) the offer actually made to pltf. did not satisfy the option to which he was entitled; (2) the clause in the agreement providing for payment of the extra £5,000 formed part of the agreement to purchase, & was not a clog on the equity of redemption; (3) pltf. was entitled to recover the £5,000. The doctrine [of clogging the equity of redemption] entirely depends on its being a bargain by the mtgee. in his relation as mtgee. towards the mtgor. & had nothing to do with a bargain which a vendor made in dealing with his own property. . . . It was impossible to say that this bargain was a term of the mtge. (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—DAVIES v. CHAMBERLAIN (1909), 26 T. L. R. 138, C. A.

973. ——.]—Pltf. was entitled to a life estate in possession in certain property, subject (inter alia) to a jointure charge payable during the life of an old lady; & in consideration of £1,000 he mortgaged his life estate to deft., to secure £3,300 payable within three months of the old lady's death. He also by an agreement, signed afterwards, tacked to this security, a charge of £400, with interest at £5 per cent. per month:—Held: pltf.'s interest, with regard to the jointure charge, was not reversionary so as to bring the case under the rule applicable to mtges. of reversionary interest. The mere fact that a borrower was in great want of money, & the lender exacted exorbitant interest, will not induce the ct. to interfere on behalf of the former.

Mtge. of an hotel to a brewer contained a covenant by the mtgors. that during the continuance of the security they would deal exclusively with the mtgee. for all beer & malt liquor sold on the mtged. premises. The mtgors. having ceased to purchase beer of the mtgee. he now moved for an injunction to restrain the breach of this covenant; the mtgors. also claimed to be entitled to redeem before the expiration of the five years:—Held: as the covenant entered into by the parties for the purchase & supply of beer during the continuance of the security was a reasonable one, which did not in any way clog the redemption or give the mtgee. any undue advantage, it ought to be enforced by injunction.—BIGGS v. HODDINOTT, HODDINOTT v. BIGGS, [1898] 2 Ch. 307; 67 L. This may be redeemable by his heir after his decease, notwithstanding the redemption is limited to the mtgor. during his life only. So if a mtge. be made redeemable, upon payment of the mtge. money at a certain day, but if the money be not then paid, that if the mtgee. will pay a further sum to the mtgor., that then his estate shall be absolute, or that he will make him a further conveyance, or any thing to that effect, this estate is notwithstanding redeemable after the day of payment, & the mtgee. cannot enforce the mtgor., after default, to make him an absolute estate, until he forecloses him.—PRICE v. PERRIE (1702), Freem. This ct. as a ct. of conscience is very jealous of persons taking securities for a loan, & converting such securities into purchases. 1018. Assignment of equity—Right of assignor to indemnity.]—No exoneration of the heir by the personal assets of a party, who never personally contracted; or not originally but only as a further security in a subsequent transaction, not intended to disturb the order of charge.

The same principle applies to the purchase of an equity of redemption; for the party means at the time of the contract to buy the estate subject to that mtge.; in relation to which mtge. the personal contract was entered into; & that was not his. If he enters into no obligation with the party, from whom he purchases, neither by bond nor covenant of indemnity to save him harmless from the mtge., yet this ct., if he receives possession, & has the profits, would, independent of contract, raise upon his conscience an obligation to indemnify the vendor against the personal obligation to pay the money due upon the vendor's transaction of mtge.; for, being become owner of the estate, he must be supposed to intend to indemnify the vendor against the mtge. Pltf. had further mortgaged his share to M. to secure a debt of his own. Upon the bank pressing for payment pltf. & his brothers agreed to sell their respective equities of redemption to the bank. By the deed of assignment the bank released pltf. & his brothers from all moneys owing to the bank on the security of their mtges., but the bank's mtges. were to be kept on foot as a protection, so far as regarded pltf.'s share, against M.'s mtge. The bank also covenanted to pay all duties payable in respect of the shares & to indemnify pltf. & his brothers against the same. Before his share fell into possession, pltf. brought an action for a declaration that he was entitled to be exonerated by the bank from all liability in respect of M.'s mtge.:—Held: having regard to the existence in the deed of an express limited covenant of indemnity, no fuller indemnity could be implied; & on these grounds he dismissed the action.—MILLS v. UNITED COUNTIES BANK, LTD., [1912] 1 Ch. 231; 81 L. SUB-SECT. 2.—NOTICE OR INTEREST IN LIEU THEREOF.

A. In General.

1031. Necessity for notice—Reasonable time.]—(1) As to a tender of mtge. money, there ought to be reasonable notice of paying it in; & if the tender be insisted on to stop interest, the money must be kept dead from that time, because the party is to be uncore prist.

(2) Six months notice given to pay in the mtge. money at Lincoln's Inn Hall, though this be not the place mentioned in the proviso of the deed, yet where money was lent in town, & no objection made to the notice, no reason for a personal tender, or to make a man carry a great sum to a person in the country.—GYLES v. HALL (1726), 2 P. 1033. —— —— Matter of practice not law.]—(1) Mtgee. is not bound to produce his mtge. deed to the devisee of the mtged. estate, until payment of principal & interest, notwithstanding the devisee may be ignorant of the amount of the interest, the time of payment, & all the other particulars of the security.

(2) It is the usual practice for a mtgor., when he intends paying off the mtge., to give a proper notice of his intention so to do; but I apprehend that there is no law of this or any other ct. which requires that to be done (SHADWELL, V.-C.).—BROWNE v. LOCKHART (1840), 10 Sim. 420; 9 L. 1034. —— —— Or interest in lieu thereof.]—After default in payment of the mtge. money according to the proviso for redemption in the mtge. deed, the mtgor. is at liberty to pay off the mtge. money without giving the mtgee. six months' notice if he pays six months interest in advance in lieu of the notice.—JOHNSON v. EVANS (1889), 61 L. T. 18, C. A.

1035. —— —— —— Reversionary interest.]—SMITH v. SMITH, No. 1044, post.

1036. —— —— —— Mortgage by deed with proviso for redemption.]—An equitable mtgee. by deposit of title deeds of land accompanied by a memorandum of deposit is not entitled to six months notice before he is bound to accept a tender of the amount due, nor to six months' interest in lieu of notice.

In the case of a regular mtge. deed with a proviso for redemption the just inference is that the loan on mtge. is intended to be of a permanent character, & that the parties intended that after default the mtgee. should be entitled to a six months' notice; but where the just inference from the transaction is that the mtge. is merely temporary, as is the case where the mtge. is in the usual form by deposit merely, then it is not reasonable to infer that the parties intended that notice should be given.—FITZGERALD'S TRUSTEE v. MELLERSH, [1892] 1 Ch. 385; 61 L. 1039. Demand for payment made by mortgagee—Whether notice necessary.]—The rule, that in case of default of payment by the mtgor., six months' notice or interest must be given, applies when the mtgee. has required payment on a particular day & the money is not then paid.—BARTLETT v. FRANKLIN (1867), 36 L. 1040. —— ——.]—Deft., a mtgee., gave pltf., a mtgor., notice to pay off the mtge., & that in default of payment within three months she intended to sell the property. Before the expiration of the three months some correspondence took place as to the execution of the reconveyance, & the matter was not completed on the day when the three months expired, but a week later pltf. tendered the amount of principal & interest to date, which deft. refused to accept on the ground that pltf. must give a six months' notice to pay off or pay six months' interest in lieu thereof. Pltf. then took out a summons for redemption, upon which the common order was made. The master by his certificate found what was due upon the mtge. at the date of the tender, & that a good tender had been made by the mtgor. & refused by the mtgee. He also fixed the time & place for payment, not allowing any interest subsequent to the tender. Pltf. attended at the time & place with the money accordingly, but deft. failed to attend. On a summons to vary the certificate :—Held : (1) a good tender having been made, pltf. was not bound under the circumstances to give a fresh notice or pay six months' interest ; (2) pltf., who had not actually set the money aside, was liable for interest from the date of tender to the date of actual payment, he having had the use of the mtgee.'s money all that time.—EDMONDSON v. COPLAND, [1911] 2 Ch. 301 ; 80 L. 1041. Notice to pay off given by mortgagor—New notice necessary.]—One of the beneficiaries under a will mortgaged her interest in testator's estate. She gave the mtgees. six months' notice to pay off the mtge. on July 1, 1885, & on May 20, 1885, an order was made in an action to administer the estate on the application of the beneficiaries & in the presence of the mtgees. which directed (inter alia) payment to the mtgees. out of funds in ct. standing to the credit of the mtgor., of the mtge. debt with interest up to July 1, 1885. Owing to delay in the completion of the order the payment could not be made on July 1, & on July 2 the mtgees. took out a summons, claiming six months' additional interest in lieu of a fresh six months' notice to pay off the mtge. On July 20 the order was completed, & on July 21 the mtgees. took the sum mentioned in the order out of ct. :—Held : the mtgees. were only entitled to additional interest from July 1, to July 21, on the ground that by accepting the order, they assented to payment out of the fund in ct. subject to all the contingencies to which the completion of the order might be subject.

The contention is that the mtgees. agreed to accept payment on July 1, & that as the money was not paid to them, they are entitled to a fresh six months notice, or to six months' interest in lieu of notice. No doubt that is the ordinary rule where a mtgor. gives notice to pay off the mtgee., & he does not make the payment on the appointed day (PEARSON, J.).—Re MOSS, LEVY v. SEWILL (1885), 31 Ch. C. Loss of Right.

1043. General rule—Action to enforce security—Subsequent notice of intention to redeem.]—A son who was residuary legatee under his father's will, mortgaged his interest under that will to H. The son died having made P. his exor. & A. his residuary legatee. A., as residuary legatee, & H., on behalf of himself & the other creditors, brought an action against the exors. of the son for administration of the son's estate, & H. brought an action against the exors. of the father for administration of the father's estate. Shortly after this P. gave notice to H. that he should pay off the mtge. in six calendar months, & this notice was accepted by H. :—Held : notwithstanding the giving & acceptance of the notice, H. having taken proceedings to recover his mtge. money was bound to accept in satisfaction of his claims his principal money & costs with interest up to the time of payment, though such payment was made before the expiration of the notice.—Re ALCOCK, PRESCOTT v. PHIPPS (1883), 23 Ch. 1044. —— ——.]—A mtge. was made of the mtgor.'s interest in a fund in ct. subject to a prior life interest. The fund was assigned by the mtge. deed to the mtgee. " to have, receive, & take the same," subject to the life interest & to the proviso for redemption. After the time appointed for redemption had expired the tenant for life died, & the trustee of a settlement of the fund made by the mtgor. presented a petition for the application of the fund in payment of the mtgee., & payment of the residue to the persons entitled thereto. The mtgee. had not demanded payment of the debt, or taken any steps to compel payment :—Held : notwithstanding the nature of the mtged. property & the form of the mtge. deed, the mtgee. was entitled to six months' interest from the date of the service of the petition on him.

If the mtgee. of a reversionary interest were to apply for & obtain payment of his debt when the reversion fell into possession, in such a case it may well be that he would not be entitled to any interest because it might be said that he had taken steps to compel payment of his debt (ROMER, J.).—SMITH v. SMITH, [1891] 3 Ch. 550 ; 60 L. 1047. —— Proceedings in administration action—Proof of debt.]—(1) On the sale of an estate, subject to mtges. by trustees, one of the conditions was, that the purchaser should pay a deposit, & agree to pay the remainder of the purchase on or before Oct. 11, 1840; &, on payment thereof, the purchaser should be entitled to the rents from that day, up to which time all outgoings, including interest to the mtgees., was to be borne by the vendors; but if from any circumstance the money should not be paid at the time fixed, the purchaser should pay interest at 5 per cent. until the time of payment. The purchaser was ready with his money on the day appointed to complete his purchase, & also to pay off the mtgees., to whom he had given the usual notices; but the contract for sale could not be carried into effect on that day, in consequence of an order of the ct. made subsequently to the contract, & which was not contemplated at the time the contract was entered into, subjecting all contracts entered into by the trustees to the approbation of the ct.:—Held: under the above condition, the purchaser was bound to pay interest on his purchase-money at 5 per cent. from Oct. 11, 1840, & not from the time when the ct. ordered the contract to be carried into execution; & also to the mtgees. at 5 per cent., the rate payable on their mtges.; & he was not entitled to be relieved in these respects as against the vendors & the trust estate, although he had only made 3½ per cent. by his money pending the delay in procuring the approbation of the ct. to the contract, & would be obliged to give some of the mtgees. fresh notices.

1052. —— Sale by mortgagee.]—(1) The second mtgee. of a ship claimed an account against the first mtgee., who had sold the vessel upon the mtgor. becoming bkpt. Deft. offered to pay a specific amount. The action having been commenced more than six years after the sale, deft. pleaded Stat. Limitations. Pltf. set up an express trust as a bar to Stat. Limitations:—Held: there was no express trust; in case of an ascertained surplus the first mtgee. might be constructively a trustee of the surplus, but after six years, evidence could not be adduced to prove a surplus.

(2) Where the mtgee. of his own mere motion realised the mtged. property, he was held not to be entitled to interest in lieu of notice.—BANNER v. BERRIDGE (1881), 18 Ch. D. 254; 50 L. J. Ch. 630; 44 L. T. 680; 29 W. R. 844; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 420.

It is true that by bringing their action of foreclosure, pltfs. waived any right to require six months' notice of payment off, & at any time before the judgment pltfs. might have been tendered & required to accept what was due to them for principal & interest to date & costs properly incurred. Notice is given to pay off the debt at the time appointed by the deed. The notice is regularly served. The preliminary steps are all taken & completed before the day fixed by the notice & the deed. The day fixed is May 8, which fell on a Sunday, & it was therefore arranged that the meeting should be on Monday, May 9, & should be at the house of B., a solr., who was one of the devisees. . . . It is not disputed that on May 9, the money was produced & would have been paid if there had been parties to receive & give a discharge for it. . . . F. gave his bond to secure the £2,000, & also by deed covenanted to convey certain lands to trustees, to secure the said sum of £2,000 & interest at £5 per cent. The following year, upon B. desiring to be paid off, an agreement, dated May 17, 1800, was executed, whereby, in consideration of B. allowing the £2,000 to remain secured at interest as aforesaid, F. agreed to pay her yearly the additional sum of £12 16*s.* 3*d.*, which, together with the interest at £5 per cent., would equal the dividends upon the sum of £3,764 14*s.* 3*d.* £3 per cent. consols; & also agreed, instead of paying the sum of £2,000, to repurchase the sum of £3,764 14*s.* 3*d.* £3 per cent consols, or pay B. such a sum of money as, at the time he might be so requested, would be sufficient to re-purchase that amount of stock. By an indenture made upon the marriage of B., in the year 1810, reciting the bond & deed of covenant of 1799, the debt due from F. was assigned to F. & another as trustees of the marriage settlement: but no notice was taken of the deed of 1800. The bill prayed specific performance of the agreement of 1800, & a foreclosure upon the footing of that agreement, & for further relief:—Held: a letter from F.'s solicitor to the solr. of B., stating his willingness to pay the money due upon the original transaction of 1799, & stating "Dr. B. now tenders," etc., but not actually tendering the amount, did not amount to a tender, although B.'s solr. treated it as a tender, & wrote in answer, "I decline your tender, & shall file the bill."—POWNEY v. BLOMBERG (1844), 14 Sim. 179; 13 L. 1064. —— Of mortgagor.]—Testator, by his will, charged his debts & legacies upon his real & personal estate, & gave such real & personal estate to trustees upon trust for his nephew for life, to whom also he gave a legacy, with remainder to the first & other sons of the nephew successively in tail male, with remainder to the second & every other son of testator's brother successively, in tail male, remainder to testator's own right heirs; & added—" & upon this last-mentioned contingency, failing heirs male of my said brother, & of my said estate going to my right heirs more remote as aforesaid, then I do hereby charge, subject, & make liable my said estate with the payment of the sum of £5,000 to my niece." Testator died in 1775, leaving his brother his heir-at-law. The nephew entered into possession of the real estate, which consisted of a plantation in Jamaica, subject to a mtge. created by testator in 1765. The brother afterwards died, leaving the nephew, his only son, & then heir-at-law of testator; the nephew died in 1822, without issue male. The bill was filed in 1837 against the mtgees. & the devisees of the nephew to obtain payment of the niece's legacy of £5,000 :—Held : (1) an administrator of the nephew, to whom letters of administration had been granted limited to the purposes of the suit, was a sufficient representative of the personal estate of the nephew in the cause; (2) the heir-at-law of the survivor of the trustees appointed by testator, & the personal representative of testator, should properly be parties to the cause; but defts. not having, by plea or answer, objected that such heir or personal representative were necessary parties, the ct. would, under Ord. 40 of Aug. 1841, in the circumstances of the case, make a decree saving their rights.

Where the absent party was wanted only with a view to the interest of the parties to the record, as if he were a necessary party in respect of an interest of his own, which would not be prejudiced by a decree in his absence, & the objection was not taken by the answer, there was no reason why the ct. should not exercise a discretion as to making a decree in his absence (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—FAULKNER v. DANIEL (1843), 3 Hare, 199; 67 E. (c) Mortgagee after Assignment.

1070. Original mortgagee—Mortgagee not joining in assignment—Need not be party.]—The heir of mtgor. need not bring the original mtgee. before the ct., where he has assigned without the mtgor.'s joining.—HILL v. ADAMS (1742), 2 Atk. 39; 26 E. R. 420.

1071. Assignee in place of original mortgagee—Sufficient—Mesne assignees need not join.]—(1) Where there has been an assignment without the previous authority of the mtgor., or his declaration, that so much is due, it is enough to make that man a party, who has contracted to stand in the place of the original mtgee., & all assignees, till the title was got in by himself (LORD ELDON, C.).

(2) If an assignment of a mtge. is taken without the intervention of the mtgor., whatever the assignee pays, he can claim nothing under the assignment but what is actually due between the mtgor. & the mtgee. (LORD ELDON, C.).

(3) It is clear the mtgee. cannot originally covenant for a collateral advantage; also, if upon the true effect of the instrument, there is nothing more than that the mtgee. shall do what a mtgee. ought to do as a trustee, there is no pretence to say, the trust is distinct from the mtge. There is nothing unfair, or perhaps illegal, in taking a covenant originally, that, if interest is not paid at the end of the year, it shall be converted into principal. But this ct. will not permit that; as tending to usury; though it is not usury. So a mtgee. cannot stipulate to be receiver of the rents & profits with a commission. In one case that has been considered by the Ct. of K. B. usurious. But it has been long determined here, that though a mtgee. may stipulate for a receiver, to be paid by the mtgor., & may appoint a bailiff, etc., he cannot himself stipulate for any advantage beyond the interest; & though it seems to make little difference to the mtgor., who is receiver, yet this ct. considers it as tending to usury & oppression, & a collateral advantage; which a man contracting for a loan of money shall not make. So upon this contract; if a mtgee. stipulates to enter & take possession as trustee, & do a variety of acts he ought to do, whether he stipulates, or not, he not only shall not have any the advantage from it, but his stipulating for it might a mtgor. affect his right to the money lent. Upon what is a general rule also, independent of contract, account or trustee cannot charge any thing beyond GOLDWIN paid to the person, for whose estate he is 32 E. He afterwards mortgaged it & other property to C. for £24,000. A. died, & the succeeding tenant for life prayed a redemption against C. on payment of such a sum as was due on account of the £6,000, thus splitting the charge of £20,000 into two portions:—Held: both B. & the exors. of A. were necessary parties to such a suit.

If in this case pltf. were willing to redeem by payment of £24,500, I should have no hesitation in saying that it was not necessary for him to make the prior incumbrancers parties; but here pltf. asks to redeem defts. on payment of so much of a charge on the estate as they may be properly entitled to. 1103. Redemption by tenant for life—Decree settling equity of redemption.]—(1) A mtgee. cannot be compelled to place another person in his stead as mtgee., & he may therefore refuse to convey the mtged. premises to any person who should become mtgee. by that conveyance. In the absence of contract, he can only be called upon to reconvey to the mtgor. or his assignee. The petition of a tenant for life of an equity of redemption for a transfer of the first mtge. on payment by her into ct. of the moneys thereby, while a second mtgee. was in possession was dismissed with costs.

(2) The same tenant for life having filed her bill to redeem that & a second mtge., the case was considered as though pltf. were tenant in fee, & the usual decree was made, but with a direction that the reconveyance should be made according to the limitations of the will under which pltf. was tenant for life.—COLYER v. COLYER, PAWLEY v. COLYER (1863), 3 De G. Under a bonâ fide mistake pltf. failed to lodge the money in ct. until after the two months fixed by the order:—Held: notwithstanding the expiration of the two months, the action was not dead, but the ct. had jurisdiction, at the instance of pltf. to extend the time limited by the order so as to include the actual date of lodgment.—COLLINSON v. JEFFERY, [1896] 1 Ch. 644; 65 L. ii. Equitable Mortgage by Deposit of Deeds.

1126. Does not act as foreclosure.]—The rule that the dismissal of the bill in a redemption suit operates as a foreclosure of the mtge. does not apply to an equitable mtge. by deposit of title deeds.

A mtgor. filed a bill for the redemption of a legal mtge. The mtgee., by his answer, alleged that he had advanced another sum of money on the deposit of the title deeds of another estate, & he claimed to hold both estates till both debts were paid. Pltf. amended his bill by stating the allegations made by deft., but before the bill came to a hearing he obtained an order, ex parte, dismissing the bill with costs. The mtgee. afterwards contracted to sell both the estates, & then filed a bill for the administration of the estate of the mtgor., who was dead, praying for permission to carry out the sale, & for payment of his whole debt out of the mtgor.'s estate:—Held: the equitable mtge. was not foreclosed, & pltf. was entitled to the relief prayed for. —MARSHALL v. SHREWSBURY (1875), 10 Ch. 1129. Order for sale out of court—Proceeds paid into court.]—(1) Under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 25, the ct. has power in a redemption action to order a sale of the mtged. property on an interlocutory application made before the trial of the action by a person interested in the equity of redemption.

In an action by the owner of the equity of redemption of property subject to several mtges. for the redemption of the mtges., pltf., soon after the issue of the writ, applied by summons for an order giving him liberty to sell the mtged. property, & asking that he might have the conduct of the sale. The first & second mtgees. opposed the application, the others supported it:—Held: an order for sale ought to be made, but that a reserved price must be fixed large enough to cover what was due on the first & second mtges. & pltf. must give security for the costs of the sale. The conduct of the sale was given to pltf. on the ground that he was more interested than the first or second mtgees. in obtaining as large a price as possible for the property.

It was ordered that the sale should take place out of ct., & that the proceeds of sale should be paid into ct.—WOOLLEY v. COLMAN (1882), 21 Ch. D. 169; 51 L. J. Ch. 854; 46 L. T. 737; 30 W. R. 769.

1137. Purchasers from building society—Society mortgagors for unpaid purchase-money—Failure by society to complete purchase.]—Purchasers of land from a building society must not delude themselves with the idea that the directors & the trustees of the society can convey a good & valid title; they are bound to call for the title deeds, as in the event of their taking a defective title they must bear all the consequential risks. A building society purchased a piece of freehold land, & the vendors upon the payment of one-fourth of the purchase-money conveyed the land to the trustees of the society in fee, & signed a receipt for the whole of the purchase-money. The directors of the society & the trustees at the same time signed an agreement to pay the remaining purchase-money by instalments, & declared that in the meantime the deed should remain in the hands of the vendors, & that in default of payment they would execute a legal mtge. to secure the unpaid purchase-money. Default was made, & an action was brought to recover the purchase-money, & on a claim filed, a decree was made to carry the agreement into effect. The society, immediately on the execution of the conveyance by the vendors, sold the land in lots 1140. Where no prayer for redemption—Redemption not allowed in same action.]—Qu.: Whether, where a bill, filed by pltfs., of whom some are infants, seeks to set aside a mtge. as fraudulent & void, & the ct. is of opinion that the mtge. is valid, a decree can properly be made in such a suit for the redemption of the mtge. by pltfs.—MARTINEZ v. COOPER (1826), 2 Russ. 198; 38 E. 1141. —— ——.]—A bill by assignees of a bkpt. prayed to set aside a mtge. executed to a creditor by a bkpt. on the eve of bkpcy., as being "in fraud of his general body of creditors," & it also prayed general relief. The bill failing on the ground of fraud:—Held: pltfs. were not entitled to a decree for redemption.—JOHNSON v. FESENMEYER (1858), 25 Beav. 88; 53 E. R. 569; on appeal, 3 De G. & J. 13, L. C.

1143. —— —— Unless mortgagee sets up claim as absolute owner.]—The privilege of a mtgee., not to be redeemed in a suit in which pltf. disputes the validity of the mtge. deeds & does not pray redemption, cannot be enjoyed by one who has by his acts abandoned that character, & sought in the suit to establish his title as absolute owner.—NATIONAL BANK OF AUSTRALASIA v. UNITED & BAND OF HOPE CO. (1879), 4 App. Cas. 391; 48 L. J. P. C. 50; 40 L. T. 697; 27 W. R. 889, P. C.

1144. Prayer for redemption—Joinder of alternative claims.]—A bill which seeks to set aside a number of mtges. as invalid & prays that pltf. may be at liberty to redeem such as are valid cannot be treated on demurrer for multifariousness as a redemption bill but must be taken as a bill to set aside the mtges. merely.—ERNEST v. PARTRIDGE (1863), 1 New Rep. 425.

1145. —— ——.]—Pltf. claimed a declaration that an alleged mtge. of land to deft. created no charge on the land comprised in it, & he claimed possession of the land. Pltf. claimed alternatively an account of what was due on the mtge. & redemption. Pltf. was a judgment creditor of the mtgor.; he had obtained an order appointing him receiver of the rents of the land, & the order had been registered. On a summons by deft. to stay all proceedings in the action, on the ground that no leave of the ct. had been obtained to join another cause of action with the action for the recovery of the land:—Held: pltf. was entitled without leave to ask for possession of the land in either alternative—immediate possession if the mtge. was invalid, & possession on payment of what should be found due if the mtge. was valid.—HUNT v. WORSFOLD, [1896] 2 Ch. 224; 65 L. d. Delay of mortgagor in filing bill —Whether redemption allowed.]—Held: pltf. was entitled to redeem on payment of deft.'s advances, although seven years had elapsed before pltf. filed his bill impeaching the transaction, the excuse assigned for the delay being his poverty, it appearing that the parties could be restored to their original positions without loss to defts.—BRADY v. KEENAN (1868), 14 Gr. 214.—CAN.

1148. ——— ———.]—A person entitled to an equity of redemption cannot make the mtgee. a party to a suit respecting the mtged. estate without offering to redeem ; but where a mtgor., by deed to which the mtgee. was not a party, had conveyed another estate to trustees to sell & pay off the mtge., so as to exonerate the mtge. estate, it was held that a person interested in the equity of redemption might file a bill, not offering to redeem, against the mtgee. & trustees, to have an execution of the trust.

An estate was charged with a mtge. & with portions, & a term was vested in trustees for securing the portions. A second estate was conveyed on trust to sell & pay the mtge. & portions. In a suit for the execution of the trusts, the mtgee. objected that the trustees of the term were not parties ; but the objection was overruled. —DALTON v. HAYTER (1844), 7 Beav. 313 ; 3 L. T. O. 1149. ——— ———.]—A judgment creditor cannot sustain a bill, for a general administration & account, against a prior incumbrancer, unless the bill contains an offer to redeem ; as redemption is the only relief, in equity, to which a subsequent incumbrancer is entitled, as against a prior mtgee. —GORDON v. HORSFALL (1847), 5 Moo. 1150. ——— ———.]—A bill was filed by a second mtgee. of three estates, each of which was subject to a distinct prior mtge., for a foreclosure against the mtgor., & an account against the prior mtgees. The bill also sought to impeach a sale made by one of the prior mtgees. as an improvident one. It did not seek or offer to redeem the prior incumbrances : —Held : (1) the bill was not multifarious, but was demurrable, on the ground that it contained no offer to redeem.

1152. ——— ———.]—Pltf. demised certain property to deft., to secure £4,500, & it was provided that if pltf. should pay the amount & interest on Apr. 2, following, in performance of the covenant therein contained, or on full payment thereof either previously or subsequently & before any execution of the trust or power of sale therein contained, the term should cease ; & it was declared that deft. should stand possessed of the property, upon trust, in case pltf. should not pay the amount on Apr. 2, to sell & apply the proceeds in such payment. The mtgor. filed a bill, on Apr. 1, praying an account of all dealings between himself & the mtgee., & that " on payment by pltf. to deft. of what, upon taking such accounts, might be found due," deft. might be ordered to reconvey the property, & for an injunction to restrain deft. from selling. Upon general demurrer for want of equity :—Held : (1) the demurrer was not sustainable upon the ground that the bill was filed before Apr. 2, this being a trust for sale in case of non-payment, & not a simple case of mtge., with proviso for redemption on a fixed day ; (2) the bill contained no sufficient offer to pay what might be found due ; & on this technical ground, the demurrer was allowed with leave to amend.—HARDING v. TINGEY (1864), 4 New Rep. 10 ; 34 L. J. Ch. 13 ; 10 L. T. 323 ; 10 Jur. N. S. 872 ; 12 W. R. 684.

1153. ——— ———.]—A bill by a person entitled to a mtged. estate, under the mtgor.'s will, against the mtgee. & the mtgor.'s representative, to have the mtgor.'s estate applied in payment of the mtge., cannot be sustained. A bill by a person claiming under a mtgor. against the mtgee. is irregular, unless it offers to redeem. Pltf. was entitled to an estate, subject to a mtge. created by his ancestor. He instituted a suit against the mtgee. & the representatives of his ancestor, praying to have the mtge. paid out of his assets or by a sale of the estate, & also for the delivery up of independent securities given by pltf. to deft. :—Held : the suit was multifarious, & a demurrer to it was allowed.—HUGHES v. COOK (1865), 34 Beav. 407 ; 55 E. R. 692.

1154. ——— ———.]—In an action of ejectment it appeared that pltf. had derived title by purchase from the mtgor. of the estate in question, & had covenanted with his vendor to pay all sums due on the mtge. ; while deft. had derived title & possession by a subsequent purchase at a fiscal sale obtained by the mtgee. in possession in proceedings to which pltf. was not a party :—Held : whether pltf. was bound by the fiscal sale or not, he could not in justice or in law eject deft. without at least paying to him the moneys due on the mtge. ; & whether he was entitled to redeem or not, there being no prayer for relief of that character, it could not be decreed to him in this action.—MURUGASER MARIMUTTU v. DE SOYSA, [1891] A. 1155. Exception to rule—Enforcement of trusts relating to equity.]—DALTON v. HAYTER, No. 1148, ante.

1156. ——— ———.]—A mtgor. & his two incumbrancers, by a deed, conveyed the mtged. estates to trustees on trust to keep down the interest on the charges, & to accumulate the surplus rents & apply them in payment of principal, with an ultimate trust for the mtgor. ; & by the deed it was declared that nothing therein should derogate from the rights of the incumbrancers, & that, when they were paid off, the trusts of the deed should cease :—Held : a subsequent judgment creditor of the mtgor. could maintain a bill against all parties to the deed, & have the accounts taken under the deed without offering to redeem.—JEFFERYS v. DICKSON (1866), 1 Ch. Where the mtgor. of a reversionary interest applied under Ord. 54, r. 1, for the determination of the question whether, according to the true construction of the mtge. deed, she was entitled to redeem during the period fixed by the deed for the continuance of the loan : —Held : the ct. was bound to decide the question, & ought not to put the mtgor. on the terms of offering to redeem.—Re NOBBS, NOBBS v. LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY, [1896] 2 Ch. 830 ; 65 L. On a bill to redeem, & that the agreement should stand only as a security :—Held : pltf. was not entitled to relief in equity, & bill dismissed.—PURDIE v. MILLETT (1829), Taml. 28 ; 48 E. R. 12.

1161. —— ——.]—(1) The circumstance that two parties stand to each other in the relation of trustee & cestui que trust, does not affect any dealing between them unconnected with the subject of the trust. Thus, the rule that the trustee cannot purchase from his cestui que trust does not extend to a purchase by a mtgee. from his mtgor.

The father died in 1872, having made another son C. his exor. & residuary legatee. The mother died in 1887. C. shortly afterwards sent a letter to G. enclosing the indenture & stating that he handed it over to G. in compliance with the wish of their late mother. C. afterwards changed his mind & claimed the share under the mtge. No interest had ever been paid on the mtge. debt by G. & no acknowledgment given by him in respect of it:—Held: in the absence of any consideration the letter though coupled with delivery of the mtge. deed was not an effectual release & was uncomplete as a gift & did not amount to a declaration of trust & C. was entitled to the share.—Re HANCOCK, HANCOCK v. BERREY (1888), 57 L. 1168. Trustee mortgagees—Bankruptcy of one—Power of court to vest securities in remaining trustees.]—One of four trustees of a settlement having been adjudicated bkpt. & having absconded, an action was brought by one of the cestuis que trust against the other three trustees, claiming to have the trusts carried into execution, & to have it declared that defts. were bound to make good any loss which might accrue on three mtges. on which part of the trust funds had been invested, & which pltf. alleged to be insufficient securities. He also alleged that the fourth trustee had acted fraudulently. The legal estate in the mtged. properties was vested in all the four trustees, & the stocks, in which the remainder of the trust funds had been invested, stood in the names of the four trustees. Before issue was joined in the action, the defts. in pursuance of an order of the ct. gave notice to call in two of the mtges., & one of the notices had expired. Owing to the pendency of the action no one could be found willing to accept the trusts in place of the bkpt.:—Held: in these circumstances, the ct. could properly appoint defts. trustees in the place of themselves & the bkpt.—DAVIES v. HODGSON (1886), 32 Ch. to the interest of the owner of the estate & charge. A. devised an estate to his heir, who, in his own right had a charge on it. The heir bought up an incumbrance on the estate amounting to £11,555, for £2,000 :—Held : he was entitled to the full amount, as against the other incumbrancers on the estate.

The question is simply this, whether the owner of the reversion in fee of an estate subject to two charges, neither of which was created by himself, is entitled to buy in the former of those two charges, & insist upon it as available against the second charge, or whether the owner of the second charge is entitled to have an account of what was actually paid for the purpose of getting in the former one, & making it stand simply as a security for that amount. I am of opinion the second mtgee. has no such equity against any stranger who might purchase the first charge & that the owner of the reversion, not having created the first or second charge is in this respect entitled to stand in the place of a mere stranger (ROMILLY, M.R.).—DAVIS v. BARRETT (1851), 14 Beav. 542 ; 51 E. By a disentailing deed in 1854 his eldest son, with his consent as protector of the settlement, assured the settled estates in fee simple, subject to the uses, estates, & terms limited in the settlement anterior to the limitations in tail male & all powers to such precedent estates belonging or annexed, to such uses as the father & son should by deed jointly appoint. The solr. afterwards submortgaged the land to the bank by way of equitable deposit to secure his general indebtedness to them. The bank then obtained from the solr. a written memorandum of deposit of which they gave notice to pltf., & afterwards took a legal transfer of the mtge. The solr. then became bkpt., owing the bank a sum far exceeding £4,000. In a redemption action against the bank, pltf. sought to redeem the mtge. on payment of £1,000, being the amount of the mtge. debt less the value of the collateral security. The bank contended that he could only redeem on payment of the full £4,000:—Held: the bank, being ignorant of the solr.'s fraud, were entitled as against pltf. to apply the stock towards the general indebtedness of the solr., but as regarded the mtge. of the land they were in no better position than their assignor, who could not have resisted pltf.'s right to redeem on payment of £4,000 less the value of the stock.—DE LISLE v. UNION BANK OF SCOTLAND, [1914] 1 Ch. 22; 83 L. Receipt in body of, or indorsed on deed—Full amount not in fact paid—Whether conclusive against mortgagor.]—Mtgors. executed a mtge. assigning their interest in a sum of Consols standing in the names of trustees to secure a sum advanced to them by the mtgee. The receipt for this sum was indorsed on the mtge. deed, & was signed by the mtgors. The mtgee., before the time fixed for the payment of the sum advanced, assigned the mtge. debt to deft., who paid the full amount mentioned in the receipt, & had no notice of the existence of any equities between the mtgor. & mtgee. other than those appearing from the mtge. deed. As a matter of fact, the mtgors. had only received a portion of the money for which they had given their receipt:—Held: as between the mtgor. & assignee, the assignee had the better equity, & was entitled to be paid the full amount mentioned in the receipt indorsed on the mtge.

The assign is bound to give credit for all moneys received by an assignor before he has given notice of the assignment to the mtgor. (FRY, L.J.).—BICKERTON v. WALKER (1885), 31 Ch. D. 151; 55 L. J. Ch. 227; 53 L. T. 731; 34 W. R. 141, C. A.

A few months afterwards H. deposited the mtge. & title deed with S. & co. to secure an advance of £100 to himself, S. & co. having no knowledge of the circumstances under which the mtge. was obtained by H.:—Held: as between pltf. & S. & co., the equity of the latter must prevail, & they were entitled to rely upon their security for the £100 & interest due from H.—FRENCH v. HOPE (1887), 56 L. A mtge. deed was prepared & executed by defts., purporting to be in consideration of the specified amount, the receipt whereof was acknowledged in the body of the deed. The solr. himself advanced a sum of money the amount of which was disputed, but the deed was made out in the name of a clerk in the solr.'s office as mtgee. The mtge. debt was subsequently assigned to the solr. & by him, by way of sub-mtge., to pltfs.' testator, for whom he was also acting as solr. for the investment of money on mtge. The solr. & testator of pltfs. died without giving to defts. any notice of the assignments, but notice was subsequently given by pltfs. of both assignments, & this action was brought in their names upon the covenants in the principal deed to recover the amount specified therein:—Held: testator of pltfs. not having had actual or constructive notice that the amount specified in the mtge. deed had not been paid, pltfs. were entitled to rely on the acknowledgment contained in that deed, & to recover the amount therein stated to have been received.—BATEMAN v. HUNT, [1904] 2 K. This mtge. contained the usual receipt clause acknowledging that the sum of £2,500 had that day been advanced to the mtgor., pltf. In fact, no money was advanced by B. to pltf. B. then informed pltf. that his other client had executed a mtge. in favour of pltf. to secure the £2,500, & that he would hold the deeds on his behalf as his solr. No such mtge. was in fact ever executed. On Apr. 24, 1906, B. sub-mtged. the mtge. of Feb. 3, 1906, to deft., who knew that B. was the solr. of pltf. On this sub-mtge. & a collateral security B. obtained £1,200 from deft. The collateral security turned out to be a forgery & of no value, & in June, 1906, B. absconded. Deft. when he took the sub-mtge. of Apr. 24, 1906, did not inquire as to the state of account between pltf. & B. & no notice was given to pltf. of this sub-mtge., which pltf. first heard of after B. had absconded. Pltf. claimed that the mtge. of Feb. 3, 1906, was void as against him on the ground that it was obtained from him by fraudulent misrepresentation, & that no money was in fact advanced on it, & that the sub-mtge. was also void as against him, & he also claimed a re-assignment of the reversionary interests by deft.:—Held: it would be unduly extending the dictum of constructive notice if the claim of pltf. were allowed to be maintained; & the receipt clause contained in the mtge. deed operated as an estoppel.—POWELL v. BROWNE (1907), 97 L. 1258. ——.]—Where a debt not legally assignable has been equitably assigned for value, & the debtor has had notice of the assignment all payments which he may thereafter make to the purchaser on account of the debt are well made so far as the debtor is concerned, although the purchaser may have sold the debt, provided the debtor has no notice of the sale; nor is it absolutely necessary for him on making such payment to require production of the original assignment.

A judgment debtor had left his residence in embarrassed circumstances. His brother in law paid the debt, took an assignment of it, & afterwards mortgaged it, but the mtgees. gave no notice of their security to the debtor, whose residence at that time it did not appear that they had the means of ascertaining. The brother in law possessed himself of property of the debtor, & a settlement of accounts took place between them, in which the judgment debt formed an item, ending with the payment of a balance to the judgment debtor, & a general mutual release of all claims, including the judgment debt. The judgment debtor had no notice of the mtge., but did not obtain or require the delivery up of the assignment of the judgment debt:—Held: the mtgees. had no claim upon him in respect of it.

If a ct. of equity laid down the rule that the debtor is a trustee for the assignee, without having any notice of the assignment it would be impossible for a debtor safely to pay a debt to his creditor (TURNER, L.J.).

I see no substantial difference between actual payment & a release to the debtor founded upon a fair & bonâ fide arrangement (TURNER, L.J.).—STOCKS v. DOBSON (1853), 4 De G. M. & G. 11; 22 L. J. Ch. 884; 21 L. T. O. S. 189; 17 Jur. 539; 43 E. R. 411, L. JJ.

1259. ——.]—A brother & sister entitled in moieties to a reversionary interest in a fund in ct. mortgaged it to secure a debt of the brother, the sister joining, & being described in the security as a surety for the brother. The mtgee. obtained a stop order, & afterwards on his marriage assigned the mtge. debt to trustees, who however neither obtained a stop order nor gave notice to the sister of the settlement. On a petition of the brother stating that the tenant for life had assigned to him her life interest in his share of the fund, & that he had paid a portion of the mtge. debt, & praying for a transfer of his share of the fund, a solr. who had acted for the sister & for the mtgee. on the occasion of the mtge. took upon himself without authority to instruct counsel to appear for the sister & her husband, & also for the mtgee. who was abroad, & to consent to or not oppose the petition. Upon the hearing of this petition the fund was ordered to be, & was transferred out of ct. :—Held : the mtgee. was not bound or affected by the unauthorised appearance for him ; neither the omission of the trustees to obtain a stop order, nor any of the above circumstances, operated to discharge the liability of the surety's share, but it continued subject to the payment of the mtge. debt.

When a debt not legally assignable has been assigned in the only manner in which it can be, that is to say, equitably, & the debtor has not notice of the assignment, he may, of course, pay the assignor as safely & effectually for all purposes of the debtor as if the assignment had not been made (KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.).—WHEATLEY v. BASTOW (1855), 7 De G. The solr. handed the deeds & memorandum to B. as security for £2,000, together with a memorandum signed by himself that the £2,000, part of the annexed £3,000 security, then belonged to B., with interest at 5 per cent. The solr. afterwards obtained a return of the deeds from B. upon an assurance that in lieu thereof others of equal value should be deposited. Other deeds were subsequently deposited, which proved to be worthless. The mtge. of £3,000 was paid off by A.'s representatives, & the genuine deeds were given up to them by the solr. without the memorandum of deposit. No notice of B.'s security had been given to A. B. then claimed payment of the £2,000 against the estate of A., upon the ground of constructive notice to A. through his confidential solr. :—Held : B., by neglecting to give notice to A. of the transfer of the mtge. & by giving up the documents originally deposited with him, had lost any right he might have been against A.'s estate.—Re SOUTHAMPTON'S (LORD) ESTATE, ALLEN v. SOUTHAMPTON (LORD), BANFATHER'S CLAIM (1880), 16 Ch. A. retained the title deeds of the land, & in 1851 deposited them with pltf. to secure the payment of a sum then advanced. Between deft. P. & A. there were various cash dealings, & in 1848, the amount due by P. in respect of the purchase-money, etc., was, by means of the money due to him, reduced. The accounts between the parties continued unsettled, & no appropriation of the balance due to P. was made by him by way of satisfaction of the residue of the purchase-money due to A., who in Dec. 1855, was adjudicated bkpt. The evidence as to when P. received notice of pltf.'s equitable mtge. was conflicting :—Held : pltf. was entitled to a decree against P. to the extent of the equitable interest which A. had in the land, no appropriation of the debt due to P. having been made before he had notice of the equitable lien of pltf.—RAYNE v. BAKER (1859), 1 Giff. 241 ; 6 Jur. The transferee omitted to give notice of the transfer to the mtgor., & he was ignorant of it. Afterwards the property was sold & was conveyed as free from incumbrances by the mtgor. & the original mtgee. to the purchaser by a deed, prepared by the solr., which contained false recitals, the mtge. & the transfer of it being suppressed.

The purchase-money was received by the solr., who out of it retained the mtge. debt & interest, & paid over the balance to his client, the mtgor. The purchaser had no notice of the mtge. The mtgor. did not call for the title deeds or the mtge. deed when the mtge. was paid off, but left everything to his solr., the original mtgee., & signed what he told him to sign. The solr. paid the interest on the mtge. debt to the transferee until he absconded, when the fraud was discovered. The purchaser then claimed to hold the property free from the mtge. :—Held : as the mtgor. had been a party to the false recitals in the conveyance to the purchaser, & had not called for the title deeds when the mtge. debt was retained by the solr. out of the purchase-money, he could not claim as against the transferee the benefit of the ordinary rule that payments made by a mtgor. to a mtgee. without notice of a transfer are good as against the transferee ; & the purchaser had no better equity against the transferee. Inasmuch as the evidence showed the mtgor. had placed himself entirely in the hands of his solr., & constituted him his general agent in the transactions, the knowledge of the solr. must be imputed to him, & he must be a solr. who had acted for the sister & for the mtgee. on the occasion of the mtge. took upon himself without authority to instruct counsel to appear for the sister & her husband, & also for the mtgee. who was abroad, & to consent to or not oppose the petition. Upon the hearing of this petition the fund was ordered to be, & was transferred out of ct. :—Held : the mtgee. was not bound or affected by the unauthorised appearance for him ; neither the omission of the trustees to obtain a stop order, nor any of the above circumstances, operated to discharge the liability of the surety's share, but it continued subject to the payment of the mtge. debt.

A judgment debtor had left his residence in embarrassed circumstances. His brother in law paid the debt, took an assignment of it, & afterwards mortgaged it, but the mtgees. gave no notice of their security to the debtor, whose residence at that time it did not appear that they had the means of ascertaining. The brother in law possessed himself of property of the debtor, & a settlement of accounts took place between them, in which the judgment debt formed an item, ending with the payment of a balance to the judgment debtor, & a general mutual release of all claims, including the judgment debt. The judgment debtor had no notice of the mtge., but did not obtain or require the delivery up of the assignment of the judgment debt :—Held : the mtgees. had no claim upon him in respect of it.

If a ct. of equity laid down the rule that the debtor is a trustee for the assignee, without having any notice of the assignment it would be impossible for a debtor safely to pay a debt to his creditor (TURNER, L.J.).

I see no substantial difference between actual payment & a release to the debtor founded upon a fair & bonâ fide arrangement (TURNER, L.J.).—STOCKS v. DOBSON (1853), 4 De G. M. & G. 11 ; 22 L. J. Ch. 884 ; 21 L. T. O. S. 189 ; 17 Jur. 539 ; 43 E. R. 411, L. JJ.

When a debt not legally assignable has been assigned in the only manner in which it can be, that is to say, equitably, & the debtor has not notice of the assignment, he may, of course, pay the assignor as safely & effectually for all purposes of the debtor as if the assignment had not been made (KNIGHT BRUCE, L.J.).—WHEATLEY v. BASTOW (1855), 7 De G. The solr. handed the deeds & memorandum to B. as security for £2,000, together with a memorandum signed by himself that the £2,000, part of the annexed £3,000 security, then belonged to B., with interest at 5 per cent. The solr. afterwards obtained a return of the deeds from B. upon an assurance that in lieu thereof others of equal value should be deposited. Other deeds were subsequently deposited, which proved to be worthless. The mtge. of £3,000 was paid off by A.'s representatives, & the genuine deeds were given up to them by the solr. without the memorandum of deposit. No notice of B.'s security had been given to A. B. then claimed payment of the £2,000 against the estate of A., upon the ground of constructive notice to A. through his confidential solr. :—Held : B., by neglecting to give notice to A. of the transfer of the mtge. & by giving up the documents originally deposited with him, had lost any right he might have been against A.'s estate.—Re SOUTHAMPTON'S (LORD) ESTATE, ALLEN v. SOUTHAMPTON (LORD), BANFATHER'S CLAIM (1880), 16 Ch. P. became the purchaser from A. of a piece of land, the purchase-money to be paid in the years 1852 & 1855, as mentioned in the agreement. A. retained the title deeds of the land, & in 1851 deposited them with pltf. to secure the payment of a sum then advanced. Between deft. P. & A. there were various cash dealings, & in 1848, the amount due by P. in respect of the purchase-money, etc., was, by means of the money due to him, reduced. The accounts between the parties continued unsettled, & no appropriation of the balance due to P. was made by him by way of satisfaction of the residue of the purchase-money due to A., who in Dec. 1855, was adjudicated bkpt. The evidence as to when P. received notice of pltf.'s equitable mtge. was conflicting :—Held : pltf. was entitled to a decree against P. to the extent of the equitable interest which A. had in the land, no appropriation of the debt due to P. having been made before he had notice of the equitable lien of pltf.—RAYNE v. BAKER (1859), 1 Giff. 241 ; 6 Jur. 1269. ——.]—The owner of real estate mortgaged it in fee to his solr. who shortly afterwards transferred the mtge. to a client, the title deeds & the mtge. deed, on which the transfer was indorsed, being handed over to the transferee. The transferee omitted to give notice of the transfer to the mtgor., & he was ignorant of it. Afterwards the property was sold & was conveyed as free from incumbrances by the mtgor. & the original mtgee. to the purchaser by a deed, prepared by the solr., which contained false recitals, the mtge. & the transfer of it being suppressed.

The purchase-money was received by the solr., who out of it retained the mtge. debt & interest, & paid over the balance to his client, the mtgor. The purchaser had no notice of the mtge. The mtgor. did not call for the title deeds or the mtge. deed when the mtge. was paid off, but left everything to his solr., the original mtgee., & signed what he told him to sign. The solr. paid the interest on the mtge. debt to the transferee until he absconded, when the fraud was discovered. The purchaser then claimed to hold the property free from the mtge. :—Held : as the mtgor. had been a party to the false recitals in the conveyance to the purchaser, & had not called for the title deeds when the mtge. debt was retained by the solr. out of the purchase-money, he could not claim as against the transferee the benefit of the ordinary rule that payments made by a mtgor. to a mtgee. without notice of a transfer are good as against the transferee ; & the purchaser had no better equity against the transferee. Inasmuch as the evidence showed the mtgor. had placed himself entirely in the hands of his solr., & constituted him his general agent in the transactions, the knowledge of the solr. must be imputed to him, & he must be

By deed dated in 1901, which recited that he had already charged his share with £350, the beneficiary assigned his equity of redemption in the trust premises to the solr. for deft. trustees, who was also solr. for the mtgee. & transferee. The trust funds becoming divisible, the trustees, believing the statement of the solr. that he was absolutely entitled, allowed the solr. to receive the whole of the share of the beneficiary in the trust funds. No notice of the mtge. or transfer was given to the trustees.

In an action by the transferee of the mtge. of 1896 against the trustees of the settlement comprising the trust premises claiming an account of principal, interest, & costs owing under the mtge.: —Held: in the circumstances the trustees were set on inquiry how the alleged assignee came to be such assignee, & in the course of such inquiry they would have discovered notice of something affecting the assignee's title, & must be held responsible to the holder of the mtge., not being able to shelter themselves from responsibility behind the fraudulent agent whom they employed to make the inquiry.—DAVIS v. HUTCHINGS, [1907] 1 Ch. 356; 76 L. 1272. Payment by transferee—To solicitor in possession of transfer deed—Transfer executed by mortgagees.]—G. & H. were mtgees. for £1,000 on property of S. Their solrs., D. & P., who had the deeds in their custody, applied to deft., who was also a client of theirs, saying that they believed he had £1,000 to invest on mtge., & that G. & H. wanted £1,000 on a transfer of S.'s mtge. Deft. inspected the property, & being satisfied, he, on June 19, 1878, sent the £1,000 to D. & P., who gave him a receipt for it. In July, D. & P. fraudulently induced G. & H. to execute a deed of transfer to deft. with a receipt indorsed, which deed they stated to G. & H. to be a deed of reconveyance to S. on his paying off the mtge. D. & P. shortly afterwards handed this deed with the title deeds to deft., & went on paying him interest as if they had received it from S. who was in fact paying his interest to the agents of G. & H. G. & H. made no inquiry as to the mtge., & this went on till 1883, when D. & P. became bkpts., & the £1,000 received from deft., which had never been handed over to G. & H., was lost. G. & H. then brought their action against deft., asserting a right against the property in the nature of an unpaid vendor's lien:—Held: as pltfs. by the deed of transfer & receipt which they handed to D. & P. enabled them to represent to deft. that the £1,000 which he had previously handed to D. & P. had come to the hands of pltfs., they had raised a counter-equity which prevented their claiming a vendor's lien, though this would not have been the case if, D. & P. having no authority to receive money for pltfs. deft. had paid the £1,000 to D. & P. at the time when the deeds were delivered to him, since he would then have known that pltfs. had not received the money.—GORDON v. JAMES (1885), 30 Ch. 1273. General rule—Right as equitable transferee—Without actual transfer.]—A mtgee. of two estates, A. & B., of which A. was subject to a first mtge., in exercise of a power of sale in his mtge., sold the estate A. The first mtgee., to whom another debt was due upon an equitable deposit of a policy of assurance & other documents by the mtgor., refused to join in the conveyance to the purchaser, unless he received out of the purchase-money the amount due to him on both his mtges. That amount was paid to him accordingly, & the documents comprised in the equitable deposit were delivered to the second mtgee. The balance of the proceeds of sale was insufficient to discharge what was due to the second mtgee.: —Held: as the equitable mtge. was paid with money which, had the first mtgee. not claimed the right to consolidate, would have belonged to the second mtgee., it was in fact paid by the second mtgee., who by the fact of such payment became equitable transferee, & was entitled to consolidate that mtge. with his mtge. on estate B.

What then were the rights of pltf. as between them & the trustees in bkpcy. of the mtgor. As they had paid under compulsion of law this sum of £273 to T. they were entitled to stand in his place as against the mtge. of the securities, & in other words they were what we call equitable transferees even without a transfer being executed (JESSEL, M.R.).—CRACKNALL v. JANSON (1879), 11 Ch. Mr. R. asked pltf. to lend him £450 for the purpose of paying off the mtge. Pltf. thought the mtged. property belonged to Mr. R. & did not know of the Cardiff property, & he agreed to advance the money upon having a legal mtge. for £300 on the Bristol property & a guarantee of £150 by Mr. & Mrs. R.'s solr., who was to hold the deeds for him in the meantime. Mrs. R. did not know of this transaction. The money was paid & the deeds of the Bristol property were now in the custody of the solr. as stakeholder. Mrs. R. refused to execute a mtge. in favour of pltf., & he brought this action against her, her husband, & the solr., for a declaration that he was entitled to a charge on the Bristol property for £450 & interest. 1324. General bequest of all securities for money —Nothing to show intention to pass freehold estate.] —(1) Lands of which A. is mtgee. in fee will not pass under a general devise of all A.'s lands, if the devise be subject to uses which A. was not entitled to declare in respect of the mtged. lands.

(2) A bequest by A. to B., his exors., administrators, & assigns, of A.'s stock-in-trade, ready money, & securities for money, debts, personal estates & effects, will not carry A.'s legal estate in a mtge. in fee, although a trust be declared that B., his heirs, exors., administrators & assigns, shall invest the produce thereof, & of A.'s real estates, devised to B. by a separate clause, which does not affect the mtged. property, in the purchase of land, to be conveyed to certain uses in strict settlement.

The general rule is, that you must first have words sufficient to pass the mtge. property ; secondly, that it must not be limited to uses inapplicable to such property. . . . You have not persuaded me that the words "securities for money" are sufficient to pass the estate in lands in mtge., where the limitation is to the legatee, his exors., administrators & assigns, & whereon the face of the will there is nothing which denotes an intention that under these words a freehold interest should pass (BAILEY, J.).

A., by deed, purported to grant a freehold estate to B. by way of mtge. The deed contained no recitals, but there were the usual mtgor.'s covenants for title, including a covenant that the mtgor. "had power to grant the premises in manner aforesaid."

The mtge. was accepted by B. on the faith of certain forged title deeds produced & handed to him by A. At the date of the mtge. A. had not the legal estate nor any interest whatever in the property. 1351. Mortgage of tolls—Removal of toll gates by trustees—Under statutory powers.]—Trustees of an Act of Parliament, & under a general Act, were empowered to remove any gates, toll houses, etc., as they should think fit; but so long as any money should be due on mtge. of the tolls, the tolls should not be reduced without consent. The trustees determined on the removal of a certain gate, & a mtgee. of tolls filed a bill for an injunction to restrain them, but the motion was refused without costs.

The trustees derive their powers from the Acts of Parliament, local & general, which Acts give them very enlarged discretion as to the erection & removal of gates. It would be a monstrous injustice were the ct. to decide that public trustees, after having effected a security upon the tolls, should be thereby deprived of the powers granted to them, & which they are intrusted to exercise for the public benefit. Pltf., if right in his view of the law, may proceed in that jurisdiction by mandamus if he thinks proper (TURNER, V.-C.).—COOPER v. COOPER (1852), 18 L. T. O. S. 204.

1352. —— ——.]—The trustees of a turnpike road called the Old Road, obtained Parliamentary powers to make another road called the New Road. The moneys to be received from the old road were to be applied in discharge of interest upon debts secured upon the old road, then in the maintenance of the old road, & finally in reducing the principal of the debts. The moneys to be received from the new road were to be applied in making & keeping the new road, then in paying interest, & finally in reducing the principal moneys secured upon the new road. Pltf. lent the trustees £2,000 to form the new road, which was secured by mtge. of the tolls. The trustees of the old road were also trustees of the new road. The interest on the £2,000 was paid for some time, when the trustees alleged that the tolls of the new road were insufficient to pay the interest, & they declined to pay any more. They also removed some bars on the old road, & reduced the rate of the tolls. Upon bill filed by pltf. :—Held : (1) his mtge. extended over the tolls, both of the new & old road; (2) he was entitled to an injunction to restrain the trustees from reducing the tolls, but not, upon the evidence, from removing the toll gates.—CREWE (LORD) v. EDLESTON (1857), 1 De G. & J. 93; 29 L. 1354. Mortgage of calls by company—Subsequent call including mortgaged call.]—A co. made a call on their shareholders, & then mortgaged the call to secure a debt. Before this call was fully paid by the shareholders, the co. was ordered to be wound up. A further call being necessary to pay the debts of the co., it was arranged that, in order to save the expense of bringing separate actions against each shareholder for the arrears of the first call, a new call should be made so as to include the first call, & the further sum required. This was accordingly done. A contributory paid, on account of this new call, a sum which did not amount to what he owed in respect of the first call :—Held : there could be no apportionment, but the whole of the sum so paid belonged to the mtgees. of the first call.—Re HUMBER IRONWORKS CO., Ex p. WARRANT FINANCE CO. A lessee who had covenanted to insure against fire in the joint names of himself & his lessor, with a proviso that the policy moneys should be expended in reinstating the premises, assigned them by way of mtge., with a power of sale under which the mtgee. sold. The mtge. deed did not notice the policy. The premises were subsequently damaged by fire & were reinstated by the mtgee. On a claim filed by the mtgee. & his vendee, the mtgor. was decreed to deliver up the policy & join with the lessor in signing the receipt to the insurance office to enable the mtgee. to receive the money payable under the policy.—GARDEN v. INGRAM (1852), 23 L. The parties did not seem to have observed the distinction between their rights in respect of the two properties. The ct. relieved C. from the mistake, by ordering A. to pay him an apportionment of the whole rent in respect of Whitacre.

(2) In 1841 A. mortgaged a wharf to B., & covenanted to lay out the insurance money in rebuilding the premises. A fire occurred in 1844, & A., having in 1845 purchased an adjoining slip of land, laid out the money in building, partly on both parcels. In 1846 A. mortgaged the slip to C. who had notice of the first mtge. The claim of B. to have the benefit of the expenditure of the insurance moneys on the slip was rejected by the ct.—HARRYMAN v. COLLINS (1854), 18 Beav. 11; 23 L. T. O. S. 17; 18 Jur. 501; 2 W. 1371. Mortgagee in possession in another capacity—Occupation as tenant.]—B. mortgaged certain premises to L. The premises were required to be partly pulled down & rebuilt: P. undertook to perform the work, but required security for the payment. An agreement was entered into between B., L. & P., by which L. consented to become tenant of part of the premises when rebuilt, & to take a lease of them from P., to whom B. had assigned his interest for a term of years, & to pay P. £1,000 for the lease, & £250 a year for rent. By a decree, dated in Dec. 1827, the receiver was ordered to be discharged, & pay the balance in his hands to A. The receiver continued to receive the rents until 1830, but paid them over to A, & after that time the rents were paid by the tenants to A.:—Held: the possession of the receiver after Dec. 1827, was the possession of A.; & therefore A. had been in possession from that time.—HORLOCK v. SMITH (1842), 11 L. 1379. ——.]—The fact that mtgees. are in receipt of the rents & profits of the mtged. estate does not necessarily make them chargeable as mtgees. in possession. The question whether they are mtgees. in possession depends upon whether they have taken out of the mtgor.'s hands the power & duty of managing the estate & dealing with the tenants.

B. was the agent of a mtgor., & received the rents of the estate for him, & applied them in payment of the interest to the mtgees. The mtgees. wrote to B. inclosing notices to the tenants to pay the rents to them, which he was to serve on them if the mtgor. should attempt to interfere. B. replied promising to pay the rents to the mtgees. & not to the mtgor. The notices were not served on the tenants, but B. paid the rents as he received them to the mtgees.:—Held: the mtgees. could not be charged as mtgees. in possession.—NOYES v. POLLOCK (1886), 32 Ch. (2) A mtgee. out of possession called on the tenant for his rent, who said that he had laid it out in repairs. The mtgee. acquiesced in this; but there was no evidence of the tenant's accepting the mtgee. as his landlord or of anything like an attornment:—Held: there was not an entering into possession or into the receipt of the rent by the mtgee.—WARD v. CARTTAR (1865), L. 1367. Removal of fixtures.]—A. & B., carrying on the business of cotton spinners in co-partnership, erect various articles of machinery & other trade fixtures on the premises where the business is carried on, which are the exclusive freehold property of A. The fixtures are paid for out of the funds of the partnership & they are so attached to the building that they cannot be removed without damage to the walls & floors. A. executes a mtge. of the premises & all the fixtures attached or belonging to the premises or partaking of realty; & A. & B. afterwards become bkpt.:—Held: these fixtures were not in the order & disposition of A. & B. & the mtgee. was entitled to them.—Re ASHTON, Ex p. SCARTH (1840), 1 Mont. 1368. Restrictive covenants—Right of mortgagee to enforce.]—The purchaser of a plot of land, part of an estate laid out for building, covenanted with the vendors, who were the mtgees. in fee in possession of the estate, their heirs & assigns, not to erect any "building" on his plot nearer to the road in which it was situate than the line of frontage of the then present houses in that road, which houses were about forty feet apart, & about eighty feet from the road. He then erected two houses on his plot, each of which had a bay window projecting three feet beyond the line of the existing houses, & carried from the foundation up to the roof. Upon bill for injunction filed by the transferee from the mtgees. & by a subsequent purchaser from them of a contiguous plot, who had entered into similar covenants:—Held: both pltfs. had material interests sufficient to support the suit.—MANNERS (LORD) v. JOHNSON (1875), 1 Ch. 1371. Mortgagee in possession in another capacity—Occupation as tenant.]—B. mortgaged certain premises to L. The premises were required to be partly pulled down & rebuilt: P. undertook to perform the work, but required security for the payment. An agreement was entered into between B., L. & P., by which L. consented to become tenant of part of the premises when rebuilt, & to take a lease of them from P., to whom B. had assigned his interest for a term of years, & to pay P. £1,000 for the lease, & £250 a year for rent. The premises having been rebuilt, L. entered into possession, but as no lease was granted by P., did not pay the £1,000 nor the £250 a year rent. In a suit afterwards instituted by P., & to which both B. & L. were parties:—Held: L. was a mere tenant, & though at the same time a mtgee., was not mtgee. in possession, the possession being in respect of the tenancy & not of the mtge., & the agreement not having the effect of changing the relative situation of the parties in that respect.—PAGE v. LINWOOD (1837), 4 Cl. & Fin. 399; 7 E. On a subsequent foreclosure action by the A.-G. on behalf of the Crown as beneficial owner of the mtge.:—Held: pltf. was entitled to an ordinary foreclosure decree & in taking the account necessary to fix the amount due for the redemption he was not liable to account for the Minister's dealings with the factory under D.O.R.A., but any claim on account of these dealings must go before the Losses Commission under Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48).—Re COLNBROOK CHEMICAL & EXPLOSIVES CO., A.-G. v. THE CO., [1923] 2 Ch. 289; 92 L. 1374. Receiver remaining in possession after discharge — Accounts rendered to mortgagee.]—A receiver was appointed by the ct., of an estate which had been mortgaged to A. By a decree, dated in Dec. 1827, the receiver was ordered to be discharged, & pay the balance in his hands to A. The receiver continued to receive the rents until 1830, but paid them over to A, & after that time the rents were paid by the tenants to A.:—Held: the possession of the receiver after Dec. 1827, was the possession of A.; & therefore A. had been in possession from that time.—HORLOCK v. SMITH (1842), 11 L. 1375. Mortgagee in possession of part—Whether constructive possession of whole.]—A mtgee. in possession of part, & allowing the mtgor. to retain possession of the rest, is not, at the suit of a subsequent incumbrancer, to be charged, constructively, as in possession of the whole.—SOAR v. DALBY (1852), 15 Beav. 156; 18 L. T. O. S. 352; 51 E. R. 496.

1376. —— ——.]—Mtgees. had given notice to the tenant of the mtged. estate to pay the rents to them. The shooting over the property, the underwood, & the timber, or the right to cut it, were excluded from the lease to the tenant. The mtgors sought to charge the mtgees. with wilful default in neglecting to let the shooting, cut the underwood, & thin the timber:—Held: where a mtged. property consists of several conterminous estates, possession of one does not necessarily involve possession of the others; & the mtgees. were not in possession of the shooting, the underwood, or the timber, so as to be liable for neglect.—SIMMINS v. SHIRLEY (1877), 6 Ch. 1379. — —.]—The fact that mtgees. are in receipt of the rents & profits of the mtged. estate does not necessarily make them chargeable as mtgees. in possession. The question whether they are mtgees. in possession depends upon whether they have taken out of the mtgor.'s hands the power & duty of managing the estate & dealing with the tenants.

B. was the agent of a mtgor., & received the rents of the estate for him, & applied them in payment of the interest to the mtgees. The mtgees. wrote to B. inclosing notices to the tenants to pay the rents to them, which he was to serve on them if the mtgor. should attempt to interfere. B. replied promising to pay the rents to the mtgees. & not to the mtgor. The notices were not served on the tenants, but B. paid the rents as he received them to the mtgees.:—Held: the mtgees. could not be charged as mtgees. in possession.—NOYES v. POLLOCK (1886), 32 Ch. D. 53; 55 L. J. Ch. 513; 54 L. T. 473; 34 W. R. 383, C. A.

1380. —— By solicitor—On behalf of client.]—(1) A solr. who pays off a mtge. debt due from his client, must be taken to act as the agent of the client, & not on his own behalf; & if he receives the rent of the mtged. property, the possession is that of the client, & the solr. cannot be charged with wilful default.

(2) A mtgee. out of possession called on the tenant for his rent, who said that he had laid it out in repairs. The mtgee. acquiesced in this; but there was no evidence of the tenant's accepting the mtgee. as his landlord or of anything like an attornment:—Held: there was not an entering into possession or into the receipt of the rent by the mtgee.—WARD v. CARTTAR (1865), L. Sect. 2.—Right to possession of mortgaged property: Sub-sects. 1 & 2, A.]

1381. —— In capacity as mortgagee.]—Mtgee. who takes possession of the mtgd. estate is on bill for redemption, bound to render an account of rents & profits received & is also liable for all which he might have received but for his wilful default; but where persons, who though in fact mtgees. enter into possession of the rents & profits in another character, they cannot be subjected to that special liability. Their receipt of the rents & profits in the particular character of mtgees. in possession must be distinctly established.

A person, who, under a mtge., becomes possessed of a property supposing himself to be its purchaser, if it afterwards appears that he is not validly clothed with that character, but only holds a lien on the property in virtue of the money advanced by him on the supposed purchase, cannot, therefore, be so treated as to make him liable to render accounts as an ordinary mtgee. in possession. It is essential to the creation of such a liability that he should have known he was in possession as mtgee.—PARKINSON v. HANBURY (1867), L. R. 2 H. L. 1; 36 L. J. Ch. 292; 16 L. T. 243; 15 W. 1382. —— Through agent.]—The power of sale in a mtge. deed provided that the mtgee. should not exercise it without giving notice to the mtgor., "his exors., administrators, or assigns." The mtgor. subsequently mortgaged the same property, subject to the first mtge., to a second mtgee.:—Held: (1) the second mtgee. was entitled to notice from the first mtgee. of his intention to exercise his power of sale, & in default of such notice was entitled to damages from him.

H. mortgaged certain property to S. & the mtge. deed provided that it should be lawful for S., or his "agent or receiver for the time being," immediately after the execution of the deed to receive the rents of the mtged. property as long as any money remained due on the security, & thereout to make certain payments for the preservation of the property. The rents were afterwards collected by T., who had collected the rents of other property of H. & he paid S. his interest thereout. S. alleged that an arrangement was made at the time of the mtge. that T. should be employed by H. to collect the rents & that T. paid him his interest as agent of H.:—Held: (2) S. was mtgee. in possession.

The real truth of the case is, that immediately after the execution of the mtge., deft. did enter by his agent (FRY, J.).—HOOLE v. SMITH (1881), 17 Ch. D. 434; 50 L. J. Ch. 576; 45 L. T. 38; 29 W. R. 601.

1383. —— By authority of mortgagor.]—Deft. took from the mtgor. an authority to receive the rents of the property accruing due at the date of the mtge., & in fact received the rents from that date. He sold some of the properties included in the mtge., under his power of sale, & contracted for the sale of another at a price which appeared on the evidence to be below its value; the last-mentioned sale was not completed, owing to the pendency of the action:—Held: the mtgor. was entitled to an account in the usual form as against a mtgee. who has entered into possession before there was any interest in arrear, & that the sale not yet completed must be set aside.—JONES v. LINTON (1881), 44 L. 1386. Forcible entry—Though in breach of statute.]—Where a person having the legal title to land is in actual possession of it, the attempt to eject him by force brings the person who makes it within the provisions of the statute against forcible entry. It will do so though the possession of the person having such legal title has only just commenced, though he may himself have obtained it by forcing open a lock, though his ejection has not been made by a "multitude" of men, nor attended with any great use of violence, & though the person who attempts to eject him may even set up a claim to the possession of the land.

L. became the mtgee. in fee of certain premises of which it appeared that he did not at once take actual possession. The mtgor., whose possession had not been interfered with, made an agreement with T. & W. to allow them, at a rent, the use of these premises, & for some little time T. & W. did have the use of them & deposited goods there. On one morning at an early hour L., without notice to any one went accompanied by a carpenter & another man, & by taking off the lock of the outer door, entered into actual possession. T. & W., hearing of this went to eject him, & not being able to get in at the door obtained an entrance through a side window, then came down & did eject L. On this L., indicted them for a forcible entry; they were acquitted, jointly paid their attorney's bill, & then brought a joint action against L. for malicious prosecution without reasonable & probable cause:—Held: they could not sustain the action, & L. was entitled to have the verdict entered in his favour.—LOWS v. TELFORD (1876), 1 App. Cas. 414; 45 L. An actual lease being created with a reservation of rent, the bankers were as much mtgees. in possession, for all purposes of taking the account of what was due on the mtge., as if they had granted the lease to some new lessee & had given notice to that lessee to pay the rent to them. Shortly afterwards pltf. gave to the trustees the ordinary notice of the mtge., but did not require them to pay the income to himself, & they paid it to P. for about a year & a half, when pltf. brought an action against P. & the trustees claiming foreclosure of the mtge. & personal payment by the trustees of the income as from the date of the notice:—Held: the giving of the notice was not equivalent to taking possession of the mtged. property, but had no further effect in depriving the mtgor. of the receipt of income than notice of a similar mtge. of real estate, & the claim against the trustees failed.—Re PAWSON'S SETTLEMENT, HIGGINS v. PAWSON, [1917] 1 Ch. 541; 86 L. Relation back of right.]—A mtgee. out of possession, who gives notice of the mtge. to the tenant who has occupied since the mtge., cannot maintain trespass for mesne profits against the tenant for the rents accrued due since the date of the mtge., by mere entry upon the land after the notice. The doctrine of relation applies only as between disseisor & disseisee, in which case the re-entry has relation back to prior occupation by the owner, & remits him to his original rights.

Where the mtgee. gave notice of the mtge. to the tenant in possession, who had become tenant since the mtge., & made an entry, & subsequently served a notice of ejectment upon the tenant, who gave a judge's order, by which it was agreed that the action should be stayed upon the tenant's undertaking to give up possession of the premises on a day named therein; &, in default thereof, the mtgee. was to be at liberty to sign final judgment, & to issue execution against the tenant for the of the action:—Held: the mtgee. was not in a condition to maintain an action of trespass to recover the mesne profits from the date of the mtge., inasmuch as he never had such a possession as is necessary to support the action; & the judge's order could not be considered as equivalent to a judgment by default in ejectment, or as any evidence of the mtgee.'s prior occupation of the premises.—LITCHFIELD v. READY (1850), 5 Exch. 939; 20 L. SUB-SECT. 1.—RENTS AND PROFITS.

A. In General.

Receipt of rents & profits—Whether amounting to possession.]—See Nos. 1377–1383, ante.

1409. General rule.]—A solr. advanced money to his client on a second mtge. in which was inserted a power of sale exercisable at any time without the usual proviso requiring that notice should be given, or some interest should be three months in arrear; & it was not shown that he explained to the client that the power was not in the usual form. The solr. afterwards took possession, & for several years received the rents, which, together with some payments made by the mtgor., exceeded the interest on both mtges. He then sold the property without notice. In an action by the mtgor. against the solr.:—Held: (1) the omission from the power of sale of the usual qualifying clause was a breach of duty, & the mtgee. was liable in damages as for an improper sale, unless it could be shown that some interest was three months in arrear; (2) the fact that the mtgee. had received rents to an amount more than sufficient to pay interest would not by itself prove that there was no interest in arrear if no appropriation was shown to have been made; (3) as in an account sent by the mtgee. to the mtgor. the interest was treated as satisfied up to a certain day out of the rents, there was evidence of an arrangement that the rents should be applied in discharge of interest, & that, as the final account showed that if the rents were thus appropriated there would be no interest in arrear at the time of sale, the sale was improper.

(4) Qu.: whether a mtgee. in possession having a balance of rents in hand more than sufficient for payment of the interest & all expenses he has incurred can be heard to say that interest is in arrear so as to justify a sale because no account has been rendered & no appropriation made.—v. EDWARDS (1881), 18 Ch. 1414. Application of rents—Discharge of interest—Balance in reduction of capital.]—In an ordinary case, there being no rent reserved, the tenant at will did not pay any rent, & was not liable to pay any, but you might superadd to that legal relationship an express agreement for a tenancy, as was done in the present case, in which a monthly tenancy was created at a monthly rent. That, no doubt, altered the legal relation between the parties, but it did not alter the equitable relation. The rent, if paid, was in equity paid on account of principal & interest; if it exceeded the interest it would go in reduction of the principal (JESSEL, M.R.).—Re KNIGHT, Ex p. ISHERWOOD (1882), 22 Ch. 1415. —— —— ——.]—Testator gave his residuary real & personal estate to trustees upon trust to sell, with power to postpone, & to divide into shares, each share being settled. Testator's assets included several mtge. debts the interest on which was in arrear at his death. Testator had entered into & remained in receipt of the rents of the mtged. properties up to his death, & the trustees had continued in such receipt. The securities being deficient, the question arose between the tenants for life & the remaindermen as to the application of these rents:—Held: the trustees must first apply each instalment of rent received since testator's death from each mtged. property in satisfaction of the arrears of interest which at testator's death were due in respect of the mtge., & then distribute the balance as income up to but not exceeding the interest accrued since testator's death on the mtge., & apply any excess as capital.—Re COAKS, COAKS v. BAYLEY, [1911] 1 Ch. 171; 80 L. 1416. Right to rent pending sale—Rents amounting to less than interest due.]—Where trustees, under a power in a will, have invested trust funds on the security of mtges. on leasehold properties, & have, on the bkpcy. of the mtgor., foreclosed, the effect of Conveyancing Act, 1911 (c. 37), s. 9, is to place the property which has been foreclosed so far as practicable in the same position as if it had originally formed part of the estate of testator.

Trustees, acting under a power in a will, invested trust money on the security of nine mtges. on nine leasehold properties. The mtgor. having become bkpt., the trustees foreclosed. Four of the properties were sold, leaving five unsold. In the case of two, the net rent exceeded the amount of the interest on the mtge. In the case of two others the net rent was about equal to the former interest, & in the case of the remaining property, the net rent was less than the former interest:—Held: the tenant for life was entitled to the whole of the net rents, pending the sale of the properties; but, if during that period the net rents amounted to less than the amounts he would have received by way of interest on the mtges., he would not be entitled to claim any part of the proceeds of sale.—Re HORN'S ESTATE, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. GARNETT, [1924] 2 Ch. 222; 93 L. He ought to have followed up that notice by moving to discharge the receiver.

H. died in 1889, having paid interest on the mtge. debt down to Apr. 1888. In June, 1889, in a creditor's action to administer H.'s estate, a receiver was appointed. In July, 1889, the co. issued to the receiver debentures representing arrears of dividends upon the shares accrued prior to H.'s death. In 1892 R. valued his security at £1,000, & proved for the balance of his debt. He was afterwards registered by the co. as transferee of the shares, & then claimed to have the debentures handed over to him by the receiver:—Held: he was not so entitled, the debentures not being in custodia legis for his benefit, but being assets in the hands of the receiver, who for this purpose was in the same position as an EXOR.—Re HOARE, HOARE v. OWEN, [1892] 3 Ch. 94; 61 L. 1438. Limit of expenditure—That of prudent owner—Mines.]—Motion for the appointment of a receiver upon a mtgee. of mines, who had become a partner by purchasing shares in them, upon the ground of mismanagement, & excluding the mtgor. from interference, refused; the parties having regulated their rights by subsequent agreement, & the mtgee. not admitting that his mtge. was satisfied. The rights & duties of a person in that situation not to be governed solely by principles applicable to one who stands simply in the character of a mtgee. or partner. Mtgee. in possession of mines not bound to expend more than a prudent owner. If he can be deprived of the possession on the ground of mismanagement, it must be of a clear & specified nature.

1441. Allowances for losses.]—A mtge. of a large block of buildings, let out as residential apartments, contained an assignment of "the rents & profits" & a power to the mtgees. to enter on the premises in default of payment & "manage" & receive the rents & profits thereof. The deed contained no assignment of chattels nor any reference to existing arrangements with tenants, but the mtgor. covenanted to pay moneys expended by the mtgees. for any of the purposes thereby authorised. The block of buildings contained a common kitchen & salle à manger for the use of the inmates, & at the date of the mtge. the apartments were let to tenants under various agreements, made by a former mtgee. who had been paid off, by some of which the tenants stipulated for attendance & a supply of cooked food according to a tariff fixed by the manager. The interest being in arrear the mtgees. took possession of the building & continued to supply the tenants, whether they had special agreements or not, with attendance & cooked food, & managed the building at a loss. An action having been brought by the second mtgee. for an account :—Held : the first mtgees. were entitled in taking the accounts to be allowed the losses sustained by them in the management, not only out of the rents of the property, but out of the surplus proceeds of the sale of the property.—BOMPAS v. KING (1886), 33 Ch. 1443. —— Demise by mortgagee "as agent"—Demise under seal—Effect of description "as agent."]—R., being the mtgee. of a farm belonging to B. & the collector of the rents thereof for B., but not in possession of the land, entered into an agreement under seal, expressed to be made between R. "as agent, hereinafter called 'the landlord,'" & S., "hereinafter called 'the tenant,'" whereby R. let the farm to S. from year to year. The agreement provided that the tenant should consume on the premises all hay & fodder, spread upon the land all manure & compost produced on the farm, not sell off any hay or fodder, & at the end of the tenancy leave all manure & compost. R. subsequently sold & conveyed the farm to C., who brought an action to restrain S. from acting in contravention of the above-mentioned provision :—Held : (1) in a demise under seal by a mtgee., the description of the person letting "as agent" was not sufficient to prevent the demise operating on the legal estate vested in him ; (2) C. as assignee of the reversion, could enforce any covenant in the lease which ran with the reversion, & the covenant as to hay & manure did so run.—CHAPMAN v. SMITH, [1907] 2 Ch. 97 ; 76 L. 1448. Mortgagee as reversioner—Expectant on leases of mortgaged property—Enforcement of remedies as such.]—A mtgee., after default in payment by the mtgor., has, if he think proper to exercise them, the same rights against a tenant by lease granted before the mtge., as the mtgor. had, & may take his remedy on such lease, as assignee of the reversion. If the lease was made by the mtgor. subsequently to the mtge., the mtgee. may treat the tenant as a trespasser, but cannot distrain, or sue for rent, unless he has accepted rent from the tenant, or has given him notice to pay rent, & the tenant has acquiesced.

A deed to lead the uses of a recovery, after reciting that the premises were to be conveyed for the purpose, among others, of securing payment of £800 advanced by J. to M. tenant in tail in remainder, declared the uses as follows: To H. & L., their exors., etc., for one thousand years, to commence from the day before the date, etc., in trust, subject to the powers, etc., after mentioned, upon non-payment of the £800 & interest, to sell or mtgage., & pay that sum to J.: &, from & after the determination of that term, & subject meantime thereto, & to the trusts thereof, to E., mother of M., for life: remainder to T., his exors., etc., for two thousand years, to commence from the day of the decease of E. in trust to levy & repay such sums as E. should during her life pay to J. for interest on the £800, & to suffer the person next in remainder or reversion expectant on the first term to receive the residue of rents not applied in executing the trusts of the latter term: remainder, & in the meantime subject thereto, to such uses as M. should appoint, &, in default of appointment, to him for life: remainders to his sons & to his daughters in tail: remainders over. A power was then reserved to E. to demise the premises for ten years from the date of the deed, or seven years from the day of her decease, reserving the best rent, etc., E. demised the premises to a tenant for seven years from the day of her decease, reserving rent "to M., or the person for the time being entitled to the freehold or inheritance of the premises immediately expectant" on the decease of E. She died & the lessee entered. M. died shortly afterwards, & left a daughter. Afterwards, the trustees of the terms of one thousand & two thousand years assigned them to J., default having been made in the payment of his £800:—Held: the seven years lease granted by E., being made under a power created by the deed of uses, must be deemed contemporaneous with the term of one thousand years created by the same deed, & binding on the trustees of that term, who were parties to the deed, so that they could not disturb the possession; the trustees of that term, though not "entitled to the freehold or inheritance," were the reversioners entitled to the rent reserved by the lease, & consequently their assignee might distrain for it.—ROGERS v. HUMPHREYS (1835), 4 Ad. & El. 299; 1 Har. & W. 625; 5 Nev. & M. Where rent prepaid—Tenant without notice of mortgage.]—A lessee for a term sub-let a house for a period less than his term to pltf., at a rent reserved & made payable by equal quarterly payments on the four usual quarter days. He afterwards mortgaged the premises to defts. as security for money advanced by them for a term less than his own, but greater than pltf.'s. Without knowledge of this mtge., but after it was entered into, pltf. paid his lessor a sum of money for rent before it was due. Between the payment & the rent day defts. gave pltf. notice of their mtge., & required him to pay the rent due upon his lease. Afterwards they distrained for this rent:—Held: this payment was no discharge of pltf.'s liability to pay rent when it became due, & therefore defts. were justified in distraining.—DE NICHOLLS v. SAUNDERS (1870), L. 1462. —— Constructive notice of mortgage.]—A. having granted a lease for five years to deft. from Midsummer 1864, persuaded deft. to pay his rent to him for more than four years in advance. In 1865 A. mortgaged the reversion of the premises to pltf. Pltf., in Nov. 1866, requested deft. to pay rent to him in future, but omitted to state that he was mtgee. of the reversion, & deft. took no notice of the notice to pay rent. In an action to recover the rent due for two & a half years from Midsummer 1866 to Christmas 1868:—Held: the notice, together with the collateral circumstances, were sufficient to put deft. in possession of the fact that pltf. was the mtgee.; & although all prepayments prior to the giving of such notice were payments of rent as against pltf.'s claim, yet pltf. was entitled to recover rent from the date of the notice.—COOK v. GUERRA (1872), L. Soon after the commencement of the term the lessor agreed to accept, & deft. paid, a lump sum in satisfaction of all rent reserved by the lease during the term. The lessor then mortgaged the premises to pltf. Pltf. knew nothing of the payment of rent in advance by deft., & had only seen the counterpart lease; but she had made no inquiry of deft. before the mtge. was completed:—Held: pltf. was bound by the arrangement made between deft. & the lessor, & could not recover from deft. any part of the rent reserved by the lease.—GREEN v. RHEINBERG (1911), 104 L. The building co. made default in completing the hotel, but on its subsequent completion deft., accepted a lease for the stipulated term without prejudice to any claim for damages for breach of the agreement. The co., who had obtained a head lease of ninety nine years from the freeholder, mortgaged same to pltfs. In an action by them, as mtgees. in possession, against deft., for arrears of rent accrued since the date of the mtge., deft., sought to set off a claim for damages in respect of the co.'s default in not completing the hotel by the specified time, & alleged that the mtge. was taken by pltfs., with full notice & knowledge of that claim:—Held: inasmuch as the right attempted to be set off was not an interest in land, but merely a claim for damages for breach of a personal covenant, the claim to set off could not be allowed.—REEVES v. POPE, [1914] 2 K. Pltf. was afterwards ejected in pursuance of a judgment in an action at law for breach of covenants, & filed a bill to be reinstated in the property, on the ground that there had been no breach of the covenants under the lease. The particular covenants as to which relief was prayed were to make & provide a roadway in front of the house & to construct good & sufficient drains & sewers to carry off the foul water. Pltf. excused himself from performing the first covenant on the ground that the owners of the adjoining houses refused to complete their portion of the road; & as to the second covenant, pltf. had caused drains to be made by competent workmen, but they were found to be insufficient for the purpose:—Held: there had been a breach of both covenants.—NOKES v. GIBBON (1857), 3 Drew. 681; 26 L. 1470. Mortgage by sub-demise — Liability to original lessee—Breach of covenant causing forfeiture.]—A lease was made to A. of property described as all that piece of land, etc., with the messuages & buildings thereon erected. The lease contained a covenant by A. to keep the messuages, etc. in repair, & a clause of forfeiture on breach of the covenant. A. mortgaged this property, by way of underlease, together with other property, to B. The mtge. deed contained a power of sale & powers for B. to expend all moneys to be received by him under the deed in repairs, & a covenant by A. to indemnify B. against the covenants in the lease until possession taken by him. At the time of the mtge. the buildings on the demised land consisted of carcases of houses only. B. entered into possession of the property comprised in the lease, but neither sold it nor completed the houses, which were taken by the landlord under the clause of forfeiture:—Held: B. was liable to A. in respect of the forfeiture of the lease.—PERRY v. WALKER (1855), 3 Eq. The mtgees., having entered into possession, did not pay rent which accrued due under the lease while they were in possession. 1479. —— —— ——.] — By indenture of Sept. 23, 1856, B. mortgaged to V. certain premises as a security for a loan of £2,500. The deed contained a power of sale in default of payment of the principal & interest on a certain day; also a power for the mtgees. "at any time or times after such default" to enter upon the premises. The deed also contained the following provision: "Lastly, to the intent that the said V. may have for the recovery of the interest accruing on the principal money hereby secured the same powers of entry & distress as are by law given to landlords for the recovery of rent in arrear, the said B. doth hereby attorn & become tenant from year to year to the said V. of the said premises hereby assigned, at & under the yearly rent of £125 to be paid by half-yearly payments on Mar. 23, & Sept. 25. Nevertheless it is hereby agreed that in the event of any sale under the powers hereinbefore contained, the attornment & tenancy hereby created shall, as regards such portion of the premises as shall be sold, be at an end; & that without any previous notice to put an end to the same." By indenture of Feb. 18, 1857, B. assigned by way of mtge. all his interest in the mtged. premises to pltfs., as a security for a loan of £1,500. By indenture of Oct. 27, 1858, V. assigned his mtge. to pltfs. On Nov. 12, 1858, pltfs. gave B. notice that they had entered on the premises under the provisions contained in the mtge. deed of Sept. 23, 1856. B. refused to give up possession, & on Nov. 25, pltfs. distrained B.'s goods for rent alleged to be due up to Sept. 25:—Held: the clause of attornment in the indenture of Sept. 23, 1856, did not create a tenancy from year to year with all its incidents; & pltfs. might maintain ejectment against B. without giving him six months' notice to quit.—METROPOLITAN COUNTIES ASSURANCE CO. v. BROWN (1859), 4 H. & N. 428; 28 L. By same deed the mtgor. attorned as tenant from year to year to the receiver, & there was a proviso, that if default should be made in payment of the mtge. money, or interest, at the times appointed, the mtgee. might enter & avoid the tenancy created by the attornment. There was also a proviso, that nothing therein contained should lessen the rights, powers or remedies of the mtgee. under the mtge. On the mtgor. being found bkpt.:—Held: the relation of the landlord & tenant had been created between the receiver & mtgor. by the receivership deed, & the receiver was entitled to distrain & take the goods which had belonged to the mtgor. on the mtged. premises.

The trustees granted mtges. of such tolls, in the form given by Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 81, conveying to each creditor such proportion of the tolls & the toll-gates & toll-houses, as the money advanced by him bore, or should bear to the whole sum due or to become due on that security. By a subsequent Act for making a new branch road, the former Act was continued, & certain tolls were granted in respect of the new branch, to be applied like the former, & to be subject to the debts incurred on the credit of the former tolls; & it was enacted, that all moneys due on such credit should be entitled to "a preference & priority of charge & payment" before any moneys advanced under this Act, for making the new branch. On ejectment for the tolls & toll-houses by the holder of a mtge., framed like the former ones, for moneys lent to complete the branch road:—Held: the words "priority of charge," did not prevent this mtgee. from acquiring a legal estate in the subjects mtged., & he might recover the toll-houses & gates in ejectment, pursuant to Turnpike Roads Act, 1822 (c. 126), s. 49, only remaining accountable to the other mtgees. for such portions of the tolls as they were entitled to in respect of their advances. —DOE d. No other person was empowered to take tolls. The Act likewise authorised them to borrow money, & to assign & charge "the property of the said undertaking, & the rates, tolls, & other sums arising or to arise by virtue of this Act," as security; & it gave a form of mtge., by which the co. were to assign "the said undertaking, & all & singular the rates, tolls, & other sums arising" etc. Mtgees. were to be entitled, one with the other, to their proportions of the said rates, tolls, & sums & premises, according to the sums advanced, without preference by reason of priority in date of mtge. etc. Parties holding mtges. were not on that account to be deemed shareholders:—Held: by such mtge. the mtgees. did not acquire title to the land, & they could not bring ejectment as on a demise of "the said undertaking, & all & singular the rates, rolls," etc., arising by virtue of the Act.—DOE d. 1497. Right of tenant to set up payment of rent to prior mortgagee.]—A tenant, let into possession by mtgor. before mtge., subsequently paid his rent to the mtgee. In ejectment by mtgee. against the tenant:—Held: the latter might defend himself by showing that there had been a prior mtge., & that he had received notice from the prior mtgee. to pay rent to him, & had paid it accordingly, as the tenant did not thereby deny that the mtgor., who gave him possession, had title, but simply that the lessor of pltf. had a good derivative title. So also a tenant who has been let into possession by the second mtgee. himself, may show such prior mtge. & notice; for the tenant thereby admits that his lessor, with respect to the first mtgee., was, in substance, mtgor. in possession not then treated as a trespasser, & so had title to demise, & the tenant is at liberty to go on to show that his lessor has subsequently been treated as a trespasser by the first mtgee., whereby his, the lessor's, title & the tenant's rightful possession under him have been determined.

With respect to the title of a person to whom the tenant has paid rent, but by whom he was not let into possession, he is not concluded by such payment of rent, if he can show that it was paid under a mistake (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—DOE d. SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1500. Mortgage to raise portions under settlement—Consent of mortgagees to retention by tenant for life—Necessity for—Deeds taken abroad.]—A suit was instituted for raising portions out of a settled estate. Pending the suit the tenant for life took a number of the leases to Paris. He afterwards, under an order of the ct., brought the whole of the title deeds & leases into ct., for the purposes of the suit. The purposes of the suit having been satisfied, & the portions raised by mtge., he applied to have the title deeds & leases given up to him, which application was opposed by the mtgees., & was refused:—Held: as the tenant for life had, on a former occasion, taken some of the deeds abroad, the delivery of them to him ought not to be ordered without the consent of the mtgees.—JENNER v. MORRIS (1866), 1 Ch. 1505. Mortgagee with bad title—Retention of mortgage deed only.]—One who lends money on a security, which he is advised by a lawyer to be a good one, yet if it proves otherwise, & he has notice, that another made title to it, he must deliver up all the writings relating to it, but not the mtge. deed, for there may be covenants in that for payment of the money.—OPIE v. GODOLPHIN (1720), Prec. Ch. 548; 24 E. R. 247.

1506. —— Mortgagor without title—Right as against true owner.]—An estate was conveyed in 1803 by J. to W., who in 1812 conveyed it to A., & he sold it in 1826 to pltf. The original vendor did not deliver up the title deeds. In 1824 he was sued by the then owner of the estate for the deeds, & a verdict was recovered against him, but the judgment was not docqueted. He absconded, & in 1825 obtained a sum of money, as on a mtge. of the estate, from one of defts., with whom he deposited the deeds. On trover brought in 1829 by a party claiming through the conveyance to W.:—Held: the legal owner of the estate might recover the deeds from the mtgee., without tendering the mtge. money.—HARRINGTON v. PRICE (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 170; 110 E. 1507. Deeds obtained by indirect means—Deed of settlement.]—Mtgee. gets a settlement into his hands by indirect means, yet shall not be obliged to deliver it up.

A. upon the marriage of his son settled his estate upon his son for life, then on the intended wife for life, remainder to the heirs of the husband on the wife begotten, remainder to the right heirs of the wife. A. died, the son had issue B., & C., by his wife & died; the wife married again, & she & her husband agreed to convey their interest to B., the eldest son, & for that purpose deposited, among other deeds, this settlement in the hands of an attorney to draw an abstract of the title & then to deliver them all into the hands of E. for the use of B., after the conveyance to the son B. B. died without issue, so that the lands came to C., the second son, who demanded this settlement made by the grandfather & preferred a bill against the attorney & against a pretended mtgee., as alleged in the bill, for to have it delivered up to him: & the attorney in his answer admitted that he had the settlement, set it forth in haec verba & said he was ready to produce it as the ct. should direct; but before the hearing of the cause he delivered it to the mtgee.; & it was now insisted for pltf., that though a ct. of equity might not oblige a fair purchaser to deliver up a security which corroborated his title, whatever means he procured it by, yet that deft., the attorney, having had this in his hands for a particular purpose, & delivering it up pendente lite, was guilty of a breach of trust, & of such a misdemeanour, that a ct. of equity would compel him to procure the deed or commit him until he did. But the ct. thought he was equally a trustee for the mtgee. as for the mtgor. who was only tenant in special tail & no fine levied or recovery suffered, & therefore dismissed the bill.—SIDDON v. CHARNELLS (1731), Bunb. 298; 145 E. R. 680.

1508. Right as against subsequent incumbrancer —Acquiring title deeds bonâ fide.]—In June, 1827, H. borrowed of F. £550, &, as security, by deed of appointment mortgaged a freehold estate to him in fee. The title deeds & mtge. deed were placed in the hands of R., the mtgee.'s solr., who, in that character, retained possession of the deeds, & received the interest on the mtge. debt down to 1840. In 1838, Mr. E., Mrs. E., & J. were the acting exors. & extrix. of one C., deceased, & employed R. as solr. to their testator's estate, & allowed him to receive & retain in his hands £500, part of that estate. In July, 1838, Mr. E. died, & in July, 1839, Mrs. E. also died, leaving J. the sole surviving exor. of C. In 1840, J., through the medium of D., another solr., pressed R. for security for the £500 in his hands. R. thereupon represented to H. that the original mtgee. required repayment of his mtge. debt, & having procured H. to execute to J. a deed, which he R. represented to him H. to be a transfer of the original mtge. debt & security, but which, in fact, was a new mtge., delivered same, together with the title deeds, except the original mtge. deed, to J. R. subsequently became insolvent, & absconded. D., the solr. employed by J. to obtain from R. security for the £500, arranged with him that he should prepare the mtge. deed on behalf of J., precisely the same as if he D. were not acting in the matter for that gentleman, but that he D. should have the draft of the mtge. security submitted to him, & should be allowed to inspect the title deeds. On a bill filed by the original mtgee. to foreclose, & to have the title deeds delivered up to him, the ct. made the usual decree for foreclosure, giving J. the first right to redeem, but, being of opinion that a case of constructive notice was not established against J., declined to order him to deliver up the title deeds.—KENDALL v. HULLS (1847), 9 L. T. O. S. 410; 11 Jur. 864.

1509. Delivery of forged copy of genuine deed—Right to recover genuine deed.]—L. conveyed to pltf. by way of mtge. certain land & deposited with him an indenture conveying the land from G. to T., & also a document purporting to be an indenture by which the land was conveyed by T. to L. This document was in fact a forgery. L. afterwards deposited with defts., by way of equitable mtge., a document purporting to be the conveyance from G. to T. but which was in fact a forgery, & also the genuine indenture of conveyance from T. to L.:—Held: pltf. might maintain detinue against deft. for the recovery of the latter indenture.

The operation of the mtge. was to give pltf. the right to the deeds (MARTIN, B.).—NEWTON v. BECK (1858), 3 H. & N. 220; 27 L. J. Ex. 272; 31

1510. Right as against purchaser for value without notice—Fraudulent sale.]—Two trustees, one of whom was a solr., advanced money on mtge. The mtgor., with the concurrence of the solr. trustee, sold part of the mtged. property without disclosing the mtge. Regular conveyances in fee to the purchasers were executed by the mtgor., containing a recital that he was seised or otherwise well & sufficiently entitled in fee simple. The solr. trustee received the purchase-money, & retained it. Eleven years afterwards both trustees executed a reconveyance of the property so sold, the other trustee believing, on the representation of the solr. trustee, that the property was then about to be sold by the mtgor. Soon afterwards the solr. trustee absconded, & the other trustee then filed a bill against the mtgor. & the purchasers, praying for foreclosure against them:—Held: the purchasers would not be ordered to deliver up the deeds which were in their possession.—HEATH v. CREALOCK (1874), 10 Ch. 1511. As against subsequent incumbrancer.]—(1) Mtge. by demise for a term of years. The mtgor. does not deliver to the mtgee. the purchase deed, conveying the freehold to the mtgor., but keeps it back, & subsequently deposits it with another person as security for a loan: the conveyance to the mtgor. & the mtge. were executed within a day of each other, & were both registered on the same day; the deposit was not made for a considerable time afterwards; but no notice by the subsequent incumbrancer of the mtge. being proved, & being denied by his answer:—Held: he was entitled to the benefit of the deposit, as against the mtgee., & was not bound to deliver up to him the conveyance.

(2) The registry of a deed is not, of itself, notice as against a subsequent purchaser or incumbrancer.

(3) The common decree in foreclosure does not direct the delivery up of the title deeds by the mtgor. to the mtgee. in case of foreclosure; but, merely, that the mtgee. shall be absolutely barred & foreclosed of all right & equity of redemption; & it is only where there is a covenant to deliver them, in case of default in payment of the principal money & interest, that the ct. makes such a decree.—WISEMAN & BENLEY v. WESTLAND, FISHER, BENSON, DAVIS & STANBRIDGE (1826), 1 Y. & J. 117; 148 E. The mtgor. died, leaving an infant heir; & a gentleman, who assumed his guardianship, possessed himself of the title deeds. On a bill against the infant heir to foreclose, & against his guardian to deliver up the title deeds, the ct. would only make the common decree of foreclosure, & would make no order upon the guardian, but, as against him, dismissed the bill with costs.—KNIGHT v. KNIGHT (1831), 1 L. 1517. Mortgage of equitable life interest—Retention of deeds by trustees—Right of mortgagee to insist upon.]—Testator specifically bequeathed leaseholds to trustees upon trust out of the rents to pay the ground rents & indemnify the trustees in respect of the property, & to divide the surplus income in equal shares between his nieces with a direction to settle the share of each niece in case of her marrying, & with a gift over in case the nieces should all die without children. The will also gave powers of sale & leasing to the trustees, & empowered the exors. or administrators of the last surviving trustee to appoint any other proper person or persons to be a trustee or trustees; & also empowered the trustees to appoint a receiver & manager of the property, at a salary or on commission to receive the rents & defray the outgoings of the property. On the death of the last surviving trustee named in the will, the nieces, as administrators of such trustee, appointed one of themselves & two other persons new trustees of the will. Since the death of testator in 1876 the trustees had been in possession & management of the property. The nieces who were now unmarried ladies of between forty & fifty years of age, & had mortgaged their life estates, now applied, that, upon their undertaking to pay the ground rents, perform the covenants & preserve the title deeds, the possession of the leasehold property & the title deeds might be delivered up to them:—Held: on the niece who had been appointed trustee retiring from that office, possession of the property ought to be given to appcts., but the mtgee. could insist on the title deeds being retained by the trustees.—Re NEWEN, NEWEN v. BARNES, [1894] 2 Ch. 297; 63 L. 1. Mortgage by deposit of deeds.]—CRAWFURD v. HODGE (1831), 10 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 11.—SCOT.

In Apr. 1826, A., having contracted to purchase an estate from B., & having had the title deeds delivered to him, agreed to deposit the same with C., as a security for the loan of £5,000 & to give him the mtge. as soon as the legal estate was conveyed to him. B. afterwards conveyed the estate to A., but before such conveyance was made, & after the title deeds had been deposited with C., the latter refused to complete the mtge. unless A. would agree to pay usurious interest upon the sum of £5,000. A., having so agreed, delivered to C. the deed of conveyance of the estate from B. to A. A. afterwards became bkpt., & in an action of trover brought to recover the deeds, it was held, that the original possession of the title deeds being perfectly good, gave C. a right to the estate whenever B. should have conveyed that estate to A.; & that he, & not A.'s assignees, had a right, therefore, to the deed of conveyance from B. to A.—WOOD v. GRIMWOOD (1830), 10 B. & C. 679; 5 Man. & Ry. It being afterwards discovered that the deeds relating to part of the mtged. lands were in the possession of C., with whom they had been deposited by way of equitable mtge. previous to the mtge. to A.:—Held: A. had no equity as against C. to have the deeds delivered up to him.—BARNARD v. BYWATER (1868), 17 W. 1532. —— On proposed sale.]—On a decree of foreclosure, the ct. will not oblige pltf. to lay the title deeds before counsel, for deft. to get an assignment or sale of the lands, unless pltf. consents to a sale, but only to give a copy of the mtge. deed.—ANON. (1729), Mos. 246; 25 E. R. 376, L. C.

Annotation:—Dbtd. Browne v. Lockhart (1840), 10 Sim. 420.

1533. —— ——.]—Pltf. & deft., being mtgor. & mtgee., entered into an agreement, being a compromise of a foreclosure suit, by which the mtged. estate was to remain the absolute property of deft., subject only to this condition, that if pltf. paid a certain sum upon a day named, deft. should reconvey the estate, & deliver up the title deeds to pltf. A person was willing to purchase a portion of the estate from pltf. for more than the sum to be paid to deft.; but deft. refused to produce the title deeds to the proposed purchaser. Pltf., believing this difficulty could not be overcome, twelve days before the day named for the repurchase, entered into a fresh agreement with deft., securing to the latter far more favourable terms. The purchaser was, in fact, willing to waive the difficulty about the title deeds, & ready immediately to pay the money to the repurchase to deft., & he informed pltf.'s solr. & deft. of this after the agreement, but before the day named for the repurchase. The agreement was, two months afterwards, embodied in a deed, which was executed by pltf. The purchaser filed a bill against pltf. for specific performance, in which all the facts appeared, & to which pltf. put in an answer stating, without question, her agreement with deft. She also raised a sum of money, which she was enabled to do by the agreement. Upon a bill, seeking to set aside the agreement & deed:—Held: deft. was not bound to produce the title deeds for the inspection of the purchaser.—SMITH v. PAWSON (1855), 25 L. T. O. S. 40, L. JJ.

1534. —— In obedience to subpœna duces tecum.]—On a question of settlement, a mtgee., a rated inhabitant of applt. parish, subpœnaed by resp. parish is not compellable under a subpœna duces tecum to produce the title deed of his mtgor.—R. v. UPPER BODDINGTON (INHABITANTS) (1826), 8 Dow. & Ry. 1535. —— On payment into court.]—Estates being conveyed, among other purposes, to secure a debt of comparatively small amount, the ct. will not direct a release upon payment into ct. of the largest sum to which the debt can in probability amount; the incumbrancer being entitled to retain the security till the debt is discharged.—POSTLETHWAITE v. BLYTHE (1818), 2 Swan. 256; 36 E. 1538. —— ——.]—A. was a transferee of a mtge. for £4,000, & claimed also under a judgment £880. A bill was filed by a subsequent mtgee. to redeem the mtge. for £4,000, & for payment of pltf.'s incumbrance in a priority over the judgment debt. The bill alleged that A. had in his possession a deed of conveyance of the estate in which was a recital that the judgment debt had been off. A. admitted the possession of the deed, & set out a portion of it by which it was recited that the judgment debt had been paid off; but he said that in fact this was only done for the purpose of clearing the estate, & that he had taken an assignment of the debt:—Held: if he had not been a mtgee., he must have produced the deed; & £4,000 having been paid to him, without prejudice to any question in the cause, he could not set off £880 of that as due to the judgment debt, but must be taken to be paid off as mtgee., & therefore liable to produce the deed.

When the mtgor. comes offering to redeem, the mtgee. is not bound to produce his deed till he is paid (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—CANNOCK v. JAUNCEY (1853), 1 Drew. 497; 61 E. R. 542; sub nom. CANNOCK v. CHICHESTER, CANNOCK v. JAUNCEY, 1 W. R. 378.

1539. —— Admission of possession in pleadings.]—Where deft. appears to be a bare trustee for pltf., & offers no explanation to the contrary, the ct. will compel the production of deeds & documents admitted, by his answer, to be in his possession. The ct. will not, upon motion before the hearing, compel an incumbrancer to produce at the hearing deeds which are admitted by his answer, but which are his title deeds, even though pltf. may have an interest in such deeds; but, under circumstances, the ct. will direct them to be proved before the examiner.—SPARKE v. MONTRIOU (1834), 1 Y. & C. Ex. 103; 160 E. R. 43.

1540. —— ——.]—A mtgee., having, in his answer to a bill to redeem, set out his mtge. deed, cannot be compelled to produce documents admitted to be in his possession, relating to his title as a mtgee.—YEOMAN v. COODE (1841), 11 L. J. Ch. 59.

a mtgor. against the transferee of the mtge. only, pltf. confessing deft.'s title, but stating that he was unable to discover, & seeking discovery, by what means deft. made it out:—Held: deft. was not bound to produce the deed of transfer to him, which his answer admitted to be in his possession, & to be relevant to the matters in question, on the ground that it was privileged as deft.'s title deed.—LEWIS v. DAVIES (1853), 17 Jur. 253.

1542. —— —— Vouchers.]—A mtgee., against whom a bill was filed by another mtgee. for redemption & foreclosure, admitted the possession of vouchers consisting of bills of exchange & promissory notes:—Held: he was bound to produce them.—GIBSON v. HEWETT (1846), 9 Beav. 293; 50 E. R. 356.

1543. —— Mortgagee with limited interest.]—Where a lease is executed by both the lessor & lessee, & the lessee assigns it by way of mtge., the lessor having no counterpart, is entitled, on an ejectment brought for a forfeiture, to compel the mtgee. to allow an inspection, & give a copy of the lease.—DOE d. MORRIS v. ROE (1836), 1 M. & W. 207; 1 Gale, 367; Tyr. & Gr. 545; 5 L. J. Ex. 105; 150 E. R. 408.

1544. —— Mortgagee himself a mortgagor—Administration suit.]—Where, in a suit for the administration of testator's estate, a mtgee. was ordered to produce before the master all deeds & writings relating to the estate which were in his custody or power, he does not sufficiently account for the non-production of them by stating, that several years before the decree he had deposited them with a third person as a collateral security for money advanced by him.—ROGERS v. ROGERS (1842), 6 Jur. 497.

1545. —— Inspection of indorsement on mortgage deed.]—Mtge. deed in the hands of the mtgee. ordered, on the application of the mtgor., to be produced for the purpose of inspecting an indorsement on the instrument.—PHILLIPS v. EVANS (1843), 2 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 647; 63 E. R. 290.

1546. —— Transfer — Alleged vexatious & fraudulent.]—After a bill for redemption had been filed, but before the subpœna had been served, the mtgee. transferred his mtge., & his transferee was brought before the ct. by supplemental bill. It was alleged that the transfer had been made for fraudulent & vexatious purposes:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to the production of the deed of transfer.—GILL v. EYTON (1843), 7 Beav. 155; 49 E. R. 1023.

1547. —— ——.]—P., having conveyed his estates to trustees in trust to raise money for payment of his debts, &, subject thereto, in trust for himself, a suit was instituted, by one of his creditors, against him & his other creditors, to have the trusts of the deed carried into execution. After defts. had answered the bill, & the deeds relating to the estates had been deposited in the master's office, P. died, having devised the estates to his nephew; who, after he had been made deft. to a supplemental bill, entered into a treaty, with an insurance co., for a loan to enable him to pay off the debts due to pltf. & the other parties to the suit; &, after giving them notice of his intention to pay them off, he moved that all further proceedings in the suit might be stayed, & that he & his solrs., & the solrs. & agents of the insurance co., might be at liberty to examine the abstracts of title to the estates, with the deeds in the master's office, & to take copies thereof, for the purpose of verifying the title to the estates & effecting the loan; & that, for the same purpose, pltf. & two of defts. might be ordered to produce, to him, & his solrs., & to the solrs. & agents of the insurance co., all deeds, etc., in their custody relating to the estates. Motion refused.—DAMER v. PORTARLINGTON (EARL) (1846), 15 Sim. 380; 1 Coop. temp. Cott. 229; 15 L. J. Ch. 405; 60 E. R. 666; on appeal, 2 Ph. 30, L. C.

1548. —— Validity of mortgage impeached.]—In a bill to redeem, pltf. contested the validity of one of several mtges. held by deft.:—Held: he was not entitled to a production.—CRISP v. PLATEL (1844), 8 Beav. 62; 50 E. R. 24.

1549. —— ——.]—Pltf. impeached a certain deed in deft.'s possession, & stated in his bill that this deed had been left with deft. as a security for a loan of money which had been since repaid. Deft., in his answer, admitted the possession & relevancy of the impeached deed, & stated that it was a bonâ fide conveyance to him for valuable consideration, & denied that it had ever been so deposited with him as in the bill mentioned:—Held: as deft. denied that he was a mtgee., pltf.'s whole statement that there had been such a mtge., & that it was paid off, must be regarded; & pltf. was entitled to the production of the deed; secus: if deft. had claimed the privilege of a mtgee. to refuse production of the deed.—JONES v. JONES (1853), Kay, App. VI.; 69 E. R. 314.

1550. —— ——.]—In a suit by a mtgor. to set aside a mtge. deed on the alleged ground of pressure & surprise on the part of the mtgee., which allegations were, however, denied by the answer, the mtgee. being a solr. & the sole adviser of the mtgor. in the transaction, the ct. made an order, upon motion, for the production of the mtge. deed.—DAVIS v. PARRY (1857), 27 L. J. Ch. 294; 31 L. T. O. S. 264; 4 Jur. N. S. 431; 6 W. R. 174.

1551. —— To cestui que trust—Trustee also mortgagee—Of cestui que trust.]—Although as between a cestui que trust & trustee, or a person in the situation of a trustee, the cestui que trust is entitled to the production of title deeds & other documents, as of course, yet the moment the trustee acquires the character of a mtgee., the right to production ceases, unless upon the offer to pay off the mtge. debt.—JOHNSTON v. TUCKER (1847), 11 Jur. 382.

1552. —— —— —— Objection to production by mortgagors.]—The trustees & exors., defts. in an administration suit, admitted by their answer the possession of title deeds of mtge. securities, in which they had properly invested their testator's assets, but alleged that the mtgors. objected to the production of the deeds, & would prefer to pay off their debts, & they objected to the 1553. —— —— Conveyance of equity of redemption from trustee.]—Mtgee. taking conveyance of equity of redemption from trustee thereof, with notice of the trust, cannot withhold production of such conveyance in a suit by cestui que trust for redemption of the mtge. & reconveyance of the property, though one of the trusts was a trust for sale.—SMITH v. BARNES (1865), L. R. 1 Eq. 65; 35 L. J. Ch. 109; 13 L. T. 402; 11 Jur. N. S. 924; 14 W. R. 96.

1554. —— ——.]—On a motion for production of documents impeached on account of fraud, it is not sufficient merely to allege the fraud; but to entitle the party to production, he must also allege that, if produced, they would help to substantiate the charge.

Under the circumstances, I cannot order these two mtge. deeds to be produced. You may amend your bill, & may perhaps then obtain production (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—DENDY v. CROSS (1848), 11 Beav. 91; 11 L. T. O. S. 170; 50 E. R. 751.

1556. —— Collateral documents—Memorandum relating to deposit.]—Detinue for title deeds. Plea, on equitable grounds, that the title deeds belonged to P., deceased, under whom pltfs. claimed; & she, being indebted to N., agreed with him that he should hold them as a security by way of equitable mtge., & he so held them, the debt remaining unpaid; & that N. died, & appointed defts. extrixes. In answer to interrogatories, defts. admitted that they had in their possession a memorandum that the deeds should remain in the possession of N. until repayment of the money:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to an inspection of the memorandum, under Evidence Act, 1851 (c. 99), s. 6.—OWEN v. NICKSON (1861), 3 E. & E. 602; 30 L. 1557. —— —— Administration of estate.]—FREEMAN v. BUTLER, No. 1529, ante.

1558. —— Party demanding production having sufficient interest.]—In a suit by assignees in trust from T. of two policies of assurance, which formed part of a trust estate in T.'s hands as surviving exor. of J., to impeach an alleged prior mtge. of the policies by T. to the co. which issued them, the bill, in effect, alleged, though the answer denied, that the giving of the prior mtge. was a breach of trust on T.'s part of which the co. was aware at the time. The bill also alleged, & the answer admitted, that the co. intended to surrender the policies or sell them by auction. On summons by pltfs. for production of documents:—Held: pltfs. had not shown sufficient interest in the mtge. deed to entitle them to its production.

That view [as held in Patch v. Ward, No. 1530, ante, that mtgor. had a right to production of the mtge. deed] has never been acted upon (JAMES, L.J.).—CARTER v. HUBBACK (1876), 24 W. R. 354, C. A.

1559. —— Joint possession of mortgagee & another.]—In an action for the seizure of the goods of pltf., which was justified by deft. under an alleged power of distress in a mtge. deed, deft. stated in his affidavit of documents that he & one B., who was not a party to the action, jointly had in their possession or power certain documents specified in a schedule to such affidavit & that they were the muniments of title of himself & the said B., as mtgees., & that he, deft., objected to their production:—Held: such affidavit showed sufficient reason for not making an order for inspection of the documents.—KEARSLEY v. PHILIPS (1883), 10 Q. 1560. Right to call for production—Mortgagee of remainderman—Against tenant for life.]—Any remainderman whose estate is vested may maintain a bill against the tenant for life, for the sole purpose of production & inspection of the muniments of title. If the tenant for life suggests that the purpose for which production is required is improper, the onus is on him to show it. This right, however, only exists when the title of the remainderman is undisputed; for, if there be a reasonable cause for litigating his title, he cannot compel production.

The mtgee. of A., an alleged remainderman, instituted a suit against B., the alleged tenant for life, for the mere production of the title deeds. B. set up a bonâ fide objection, that A.'s estate had become forfeited, & also that by the terms of the mtge. deed the estates in question were not comprised therein. The assignees of A., who had become bkpt., though interested in the latter question, were not parties to the suit. The ct. declined adjudicating, incidentally, on pltf.'s right, & dismissed the bill with costs.—DAVIS v. DYSART (EARL) (1855), 20 Beav. 405; 3 Eq. Rep. 599; 24 L. J. Ch. 381; 25 L. T. O. 1563. —— ——.]—A. made a mtge. to B., & delivered to him the title deeds of the estate. Some years afterwards A. gave B. notice of his intention to pay off the mtge. at the end of six months; but did not pay the money until after that time, owing to B. not having offered him any indemnity that was satisfactory to him, in respect of B. having lost some of the deeds. B. then brought an ejectment for the estate; whereupon A. filed a bill to redeem. The ct. decreed a redemption, & ordered that a sum, which A. had paid for interest accrued on the mtge. money after the expiration of the six months, should be repaid to him; that B. should give him an indemnity to be approved of by the master, & also pay the costs of the ejectment & of the suit.—MIDLETON (LORD) v. ELIOT (1847), 15 Sim. 531; 11 Jur. 742; 60 E. 1564. —— ——.]—A. possessed of leasehold premises for a long term, in Feb. 1872, mortaged them to trustees, & handed to their solr. the indenture of lease & other title deeds. On Sept. 25, 1876, it was arranged between the parties that A. should redeem at once, he paying with the principal moneys three months' interest in lieu of the usual notice. It was afterwards discovered that the trustees had not in their possession the indenture of lease, & therefore A. could not safely redeem. After A. commenced this action he was informed, & the fact was certified by the chief clerk, that the trustees' former solr. had fraudulently deposited the deed to secure moneys lent to him. A. alleged that he had sustained damage in being prevented from redeeming, & claimed an account; a reconveyance of the premises & a delivery of the title deeds; & if the indenture of lease were lost, an indemnity in respect of the loss; an attested copy of the deed, & compensation, & costs:—Held: (1) pltf. should have liberty to bring an action to recover the deed; if he could not recover it he would be entitled to an indemnity; (2) he was right in coming to the ct. to have the matter inquired into & his title made clear; & he was entitled to all his costs of the action, but (3) he was not entitled to any compensation for the loss of the deed; & (4) in accordance with the arrangement made in Sept. 1876, only three months' interest ought to be paid.—JAMES v. RUMSEY (1879), 11 Ch. 1565. ——.]—In 1867 M. mortgaged his life interest in certain funds subject to the trusts of his marriage settlement & three policies of insurance on his own life. In 1876 he executed a second mtge. of his life interest to pltfs. This mtge. did not include the policies of insurance. In 1886 an action was brought by pltf.'s against the mtgor. & H., the legal personal representative of the first mtgee., to redeem the first mtge. & foreclose the mtgor. Pending the progress of the action it was discovered that the mtge. of 1867 & the policies were not in the possession of H., & an inquiry was directed as to the loss of the documents, & whether any & what indemnity should be given in respect of the loss in case it should be found that any of them had been lost. In the meanwhile pltfs. had paid into ct. the amount which had been certified to be due to deft. H. under the mtge. of 1867, & for her taxed costs of the action. The chief clerk in answer to the inquiry, found that the mtge. of 1867 & the policies had been lost, & he also found that pltfs. were entitled to "such an indemnity as will equal that which the insurance co. may require." Pltfs. took out a summons to vary this certificate, by which they asked that the whole of the fund in ct. might be retained until further order by way of indemnity to them. The insurance co. declined to make any arrangement with regard to an indemnity until claims should be made on the policies:—Held: (1) pltfs. were entitled to a bond of indemnity, to be given by deft. H. as extrix., the bond to be settled in chambers in case the parties differed, & (2) they were also entitled to have retained in ct. the sum of £100 & no more, to meet any possible costs that might be incurred when the policies should become claims.—CALDWELL v. MATTHEWS (1890), 62 L. T. 799.

1566. —— Damages.]—A mtgee. having inadvertently burnt the mtge. deed, & the documents relating to the title to the mtged. estate, some of which were originals & others attested & office copies, was ordered, in a foreclosure suit, not only to procure fresh attested & office copies, but to make compensation for the damage done to the estate by the destruction of the deeds, the amount to be settled by the master, & deducted from the mtge. debt.—HORNBY v. MATCHAM (1848), 16 Sim. 325; 17 L. The ct. thereupon refusing to take into consideration the speculative damages which the title or marketable value of the estate might sustain upon any future dealing with it, from the absence of the deeds, yet held that the mtgor. was, upon the authorities, entitled to relief in respect of the additional expense of producing evidence of his title, & directed a reference to ascertain what ought to be allowed to him as a sufficient compensation for the damage done to the estate by the loss of the deeds.—BROWN v. SEWELL (1853), 11 Hare, 49; 1 Eq. 1578. Rights as against other incumbrancers—Under fictitious deeds.]—In 1873, D., in order to carry out a fraudulent scheme, obtained a transfer to himself of mtges. of freehold property, & after various dealings with it the legal estate was, in Sept. 1875, conveyed by a mtgee. to H. in trust for M., & in Mar. 1876, by H. to M. M. was alleged to have been an accomplice of & trustee for D.. In Aug. 1874, in pursuance of this scheme, T., claiming to be entitled to this property under a fictitious lease for ninety-eight years, purporting to have been granted to him in Mar. 1870, by a merely fictitious freeholder, an agent & accomplice of D., demised the property by way of mtge. to A. In Nov. 1874, M., claiming to be entitled to the same property under a fictitious lease for ninety-nine years, also dated Mar. 1870, & purporting to be granted to him by T., demised the property by way of mtge. to B., the mtge. deed being executed by M. only. In Jan. 1877, M., to whom the legal estate had been conveyed in Mar. 1876, deposited the genuine title deeds of the property with C. upon a memorandum charging his estate & interest in the lands comprised in the deeds & a statutory declaration of title; & further advances were made to M. & D., who came forward & stated that M. was merely a trustee for him of the property. In 1878, D., M., & T. were convicted & sentenced to penal servitude for forgery & fraud in connection with this property, & C., as equitable mtgee., entered into possession. In an action by A. to settle the priorities of himself, B., & C., as incumbrancers on the property:—Held: (1) assuming T. to have been the agent of D., so that his representations to A. of having a good title were binding on D., such representations followed by the acquisition of the property beneficially by D. did not bind the estate so as to give A. a prior equitable charge as against subsequent purchasers for value without notice; (2) the like representations of M. to B., followed by the acquisition, first, of the equitable, & afterwards of the legal estate by M., did not put B. in any better position, & the doctrine of estoppel did not apply so as to convert the ficitious title acquired by B. from N. in Nov. 1874, into a valid legal title ab initio upon the conveyance of the legal estate to M. in Mar. 1876; (3) as purchaser for value without notice by deposit of the genuine title deeds, C., though subsequent in date, was entitled in priority over A. & B.—KEATE v. PHILLIPS (1881), 18 Ch. Right to compensation—For diminution of value of property—Abandonment of projected railway.]—A railway co. being about to apply for an Act of Parliament for making an extension line assented to F., an owner of land over which the line was intended to pass, commencing the line over his own land. F. accordingly made an embankment over his land & was paid for the work by the co. After a considerable part of the work on F.'s land had been done the co. obtained their Act giving power to construct the railway in the proposed line. The Act contained a proviso that if the new line were not opened for traffic within five years the parliamentary deposit should be applied towards compensating landowners or other persons whose land had been interfered with or rendered less valuable "by the commencement, construction or abandonment of the railway." The extension railway was not completed within five years but no warrant of abandonment was obtained under Railways Abandonment Act. A fresh Act was passed authorising a petition for

A petition having been presented by F.'s mtgees. & the trustee in his liquidation for the application of the parliamentary deposit in compensation for the injury done to his estate by the commencement, construction or abandonment of the works :—Held : (1) the undertaking was abandoned within the Act; F. having commenced the works on his own land before the co. had obtained their Act on the speculation that they would obtain power to construct the railway petitioners had no claim for compensation for injury to the estate by the commencement or construction of the railway ; but they had a claim for compensation for injury done by the abandonment of the railway ; the measure of injury must be determined by comparing the value of the estate immediately before with its value immediately after the abandonment ; (2) mtgees. of the landowner might be persons entitled to claim compensation under the Act.—Re POTTERIES, SHREWSBURY & NORTH WALES RY. 1587. ——.]—(1) The mtgor. of one property assigned the equity of redemption, & afterwards mortgaged another property to the mtgee. of the first. The assignee of the equity of redemption having brought an action to redeem the first property, the mtgee. claimed to consolidate the mtges. :—Held : the right of the purchaser of an equity of redemption cannot be affected by a mtge. created after the purchase, & the assignee was entitled to redeem the first mtge. without redeeming the second.

(2) A mtgee., who holds several distinct mtges. under the same mtgor., redeemable, not by express contract, but only by virtue of the right which is called "equity of redemption," may within certain limits, & against certain persons, entitled to redeem all or some of them, "consolidate" them, that is, treat them as one, & decline to be redeemed as to any, unless he is redeemed as to all. This doctrine of consolidation is well established, & cannot now be altered except by the legislature, whether it originally rested on sound equitable foundation or not. The present question is as to its proper limits. There is no difficulty in its application, when all the mtges., whether originally made to the same mtgee. or having come into a single hand by subsequent assignments, are redeemable at the same time by the same person (LORD SELBORNE, C.).

I have much more difficulty in following, or satisfactorily explaining, the principle of some other authorities such as Beevor v. Luck, No. 1604, post, which have held contrary to the decision in White v. Hillacre, No. 1590, post, that a mtgee.'s right to consolidate, as against the purchaser of the equity of redemption of property mortgaged to him, is capable of being enlarged, after the date of that purchase, by a transfer to the mtgee. of other mtges., which were then in other hands, & with the equity of redemption of which, if there were no consolidation, the purchaser would have nothing to do (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—JENNINGS v. JORDAN (1881), 6 App. Cas. 698 ; 51 L. 1589. —— Founded on equitable principle—He who seeks equity must do equity.]—The principle that where two distinct estates are mortgaged for two distinct debts, a separate redemption cannot be decreed, operates as long as the equities of redemption remain united in the same person.

If a person makes two different mtges. of two different estates, the equity reserved is distinct on each, & the contracts are separate; yet if the mtgor. would redeem one, he cannot; because if you come for equity you must do equity; & the general estate being liable to both mtges. this ct. will not be an instrument to take illegally from a mtgee. that by which he will be defrauded of a part of his debt (LORD NORTHINGTON, C.).—WILLIE v. LUGG (1761), 2 Eden, 78; 28 E. R. 825, L. C.

Annotation:—Consd. Jennings v. Jordan (1881), 6 App. Cas. 698.

1590. —— —— ——.]—The principle upon which a ct. of equity allows the tacking of mtges., does not apply to a case where the equity of redemption belongs to different persons at the time when the mtgee.'s title to both estates accrues. Therefore, where A., being seised of Blackacre, mortgaged it to M. & then devised it to B. in fee & died; & B., being seised of Whiteacre, mortgaged it to N., & then devised the two estates to distinct classes of devisees & died; & then N. obtained an assignment of M.'s mtge.:—Held: N. could not, by tacking the two mtges. together, obtain payment out of Blackacre of the balance due in respect of his own mtge. after sale of Whiteacre.

The right seems to have been established upon this principle, that, where a mtgee. is in possession of the legal estate in two properties, as a security for money lent on them, a ct. of equity will not allow the person entitled to the equity of redemption to redeem either of them, unless he redeems both; & allows the mtgee. a lien on the whole for his whole debt (ALDERSON, B.).—WHITE v. HILLACRE (1839), 3 Y. & C. 1591. —— —— ——.]—The doctrine of consolidation of mtges. does not enable the grantee by a registered bill of sale of goods seized under a fi. fa. to tack a prior mtge. of other property of the grantor, & claim that the surplus proceeds of the goods, after discharging the sum secured by the bill of sale, shall be applied in satisfaction of the prior mtge. so as to defeat the right of the execution creditor to such surplus.

The principle of the doctrine [of consolidation of mtges.] is that a person who comes into equity must do equity. If the mtgor. comes within the time limited by the deed for payment, the equitable doctrine has no application, but if he has allowed that time to pass, & has no legal rights, then the equitable doctrine applies (LINDLEY, J.).—CHESWORTH v. HUNT (1880), 5 C. P. D. 266; 49 L. J. Q. B. 507; 42 L. T. 774; 44 J. P. 605; 28 W. R. 815, D. C.

1592. —— —— ——.]—In 1871, V., being the owner of shares in a building society & entitled to an advance in respect thereof, conveyed property to the trustees to secure the sum advanced, with provisoes for redemption, & that if he paid them the sum named monthly for twelve years, & all sums which might become due on the shares, the security should determine & the trustees should indorse a receipt on the deed. In 1874, V. & N., co-partners, being the owners of shares in the society, & entitled to an advance in respect thereof, conveyed partnership property to the trustees to secure the sum advanced, with provisoes for redemption, & that if they or either of them paid the sum, named, monthly for fourteen years, & all sums which might become due on the shares, the security should determine, & the trustees should indorse a receipt on the deed. In 1875, V. & N. as debtors, and V. as surety, conveyed to their bankers part of the property comprised in the deed of 1871, to secure all moneys due from the firm. V. & N. went into liquidation, & trustees were appointed thereunder. Default was made in payment of the monthly instalments, secured by the deed of 1874, & arrears became due to the society. The bankers entered into possession & receipt of the rents of the property mortgaged to them. They paid to the society the monthly instalments secured by the deed of 1871, & in 1878 gave notice to the trustees of the society that they, in accordance with the rules of the society, desired to redeem the property comprised in the deed of 1871, but the trustees refused to allow them to do so unless they also redeemed the mtge. of 1874, & brought an action for a declaration that they were entitled to consolidate their securities:—Held: consolidation only applies where default has been made on all the securities in respect of which it is claimed; & therefore as there had been no default on the 1871 mtge. pltfs. were not entitled to the consolidation they claimed.

The whole doctrine of consolidation arises from the power of the Ct. of Equity to put its own price upon its own interference on a matter of equitable consideration in favour of any suitor. With regard to Beevor v. Luck, No. 1604, post, where it was decided that you could consolidate a security given by two or more partners for a partnership debt, I am bound to say I am unable to see myself upon what principle that could be done (JAMES, L.J.).—CUMMINS v. FLETCHER (1880), 14 Ch. to marshall.]—A tenant for life mortgaged his real estate & certain policies of insurance to a mtgee. By the same deed it was declared that the mtgee. should hold the policies & all moneys received in respect thereof, upon trust, in the first place, to secure to him payment of the principal & interest owing upon the mtge., & all sums expended by him in keeping on foot the said policies, & then upon trust for the mtgor., his exors., administrators, & assigns. The deed contained no power of sale. The mtgee. subsequently obtained judgments against the mtgor., but between these charges & the prior mtge., there were several intermediate incumbrancers of the real estate, but they had no charge upon the policies. Upon a petition, praying that upon payment to the mtgee. of what was owing to him on the security of his mtge. deed, he might be ordered to release the hereditaments & assign the policies to the party having the conduct of the cause :—Held : (1) notwithstanding the trusts of the deed, the mtgee. might sell the policies & apply the proceeds towards payment of his mtge. debt ; but that if he was paid his mtge. debt out of the rents of the real estate, the subsequent incumbrancers were entitled to the benefit of the policies.

(2) The mtgee. could not consolidate his charges so as to oust the intermediate incumbrancers.—FORD v. TYNTE (1872), 41 L. J. Ch. 758 ; 27 L. T. 304.

SECT. 2.—WHEN RIGHT EXISTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—DEFAULT BY MORTGAGOR.

1594. Necessity for default—As to each of the mortgages.]—Personal securities pledged for a specific debt ; after a mtge. to creditor, the same securities with others were pledged to him for the balance for an account ; the transactions being distinct, redemption of the personal securities was decreed without discharging what was due on the mtge.

Now, at least by the modern cases, it is laid down that the mtgee. cannot tack a bond against the mtgor., nor against creditors ; but may against the heir, merely to prevent circuity of action. If there are two legal mtges., which at law are become absolute, for that must be the principle, the mtgee. shall insist on being redeemed as to both or neither. Why a bond is not upon the same footing, I do not know. Those cases amount to this ; that if a man makes a mtge., & afterwards makes another mtge. for another sum, & then assigns the equity of redemption of one, both must be redeemed ; & the case of the assignee is not better than that of the original mtgor. How far does that differ from the case of a personal pledge ? In the case of an estate mortgaged, the party has no remedy whatsoever.

Here is a mtge., in which C. is one of three mtgors., & deft. one of three mtgees. ; afterwards the former & his partner pledge with deft. bills & notes for payment of an account current between them, of which account the money due upon the mtge. makes no part. If they were deposited expressly for one purpose, is there any pretence to say, the money was advanced upon security of the mtge. ; & that he would not have advanced any more money but on security of the mtge. ? I could not permit him to say that. What confusion would arise, if upon a bill of redemption by the mtgors., they were not to redeem without paying what was due upon the distinct transaction with C. & D. ? They are transactions totally distinct (ALVANLEY, M.R.).—JONES v. SMITH (1794), 2 Ves. 372 ; 30 E. R. 679 ; revsd. (1798), 2 Ves. 380, n., H. L.

Another mtge. of estate B. was made by the same mtgor. to the same mtgee. to secure £1,500, & the title deeds of other property belonging to the mtgor.'s wife were deposited as collateral security for £300, part of the £1,500. The first £300 was paid off partly by the sureties. Afterwards, the other principal security was realised, & the £1,500, paid off. The mtgee. resisted the delivery of the deposited deeds on the ground that the sureties might have an equity against them, & the sureties were made parties to a suit for delivery of the deeds. The sureties did not assert any claim in the suit :—Held : the mtgor. was entitled to a decree for delivery of the deeds, & to the costs of the suit against the mtgee., & the principle of consolidating securities did not apply to a mere bailment of deeds to secure one of the debts.

The pltf. then acquired the freehold of another house, No. 7, & granted a long lease of it to C., who executed a mtge. of the leasehold to R. In this transaction C. was a mere trustee for pltf. Subsequently pltf. got rid of the freehold reversion in No. 7 & took an assignment from C. of the equity of redemption in the leasehold interest. R. died, & this summons was taken out by pltf. against his exors. for redemption of No. 7. Defts. claimed to consolidate the mtge. on No. 7 with those on the other three houses. All the mtges. contained clauses excluding Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 17 :—Held : (1) the fact that C. was a trustee for pltf. gave defts. no right to consolidate with the mtge. of No. 7 made by C. the other three mtges., for a mtgee. has no right for the purpose of consolidation to go behind the mtgor. & inquire into equitable interests.

(2) The assignment of C.'s interest to pltf. gave no right of consolidation, for the right to consolidate can only arise when all the mtges. were originally made by the same mtgor. It is not enough that the different equities of redemption have got into the same hands by assignment.—SHARP v. RICKARDS, [1909] 1 Ch. 109 ; 78 L. J. Ch. 29 ; 99 L. T. 916.

The firm then mortgaged their interest in another house, which they held as joint tenants, to W. for a further debt. The firm having become bkpt., the lease on the first-mentioned house was determined by bkpcy. & the lessor re-entered. W. claimed to consolidate both debts, so that the second-mentioned house should not be redeemed without paying both debts :—Held : one mtged. property having ceased to exist, there could be no consolidation of the two debts. Qu. : whether a mtge. by three persons can be consolidated with a mtge. by two in trust for the three.

I know no authority a principle upon which a mtgee. can consolidate a mtge. by three persons with one by two in trust for the three ; there being no reference to the first transaction in the second, & no privity between the mtgor. & the cestuis que trust. Counsel suggested that the cestuis que trust in the mtge. of property held upon trust could have called on the trustees to have conveyed the estate to them ; but it appears to me that a mtgee., has no right to look into any transactions between the mtgor. & third parties (JAMES, L.J.).—Re RAGGETT, Ex p. WILLIAMS (1880), 16 Ch. Where several persons take interests in an equity of redemption by one & the same instrument, only one common right of redemption is given to them all by the decree ; but if they take under different instruments, they are entitled to have the mtged. property offered to them successively, according to the dates of the instruments under which they take. The latter rule applies where a purchaser or mtgee. of an equity of redemption of one estate is compelled to redeem another also by virtue of the doctrine of consolidation.

SUB-SECT. 3.—UNION OF MORTGAGES IN ONE MORTGAGEE.

1608. General rule.]—The doctrine of consolidation of mtges. laid down in Vint v. Padget, No. 1613, post, & other cases to the same effect has been too long established to be now overthrown. Therefore where the owner of different properties mortgages them to different persons & the mtgees. afterwards become united in title, the holder of the mtges. has a right to consolidate them, & to refuse to be redeemed as to one without payment of what is due to him on all, not only as against the mtgor., but also as against a person to whom the mtgor. has by one deed assigned the equity of redemption of all the properties, although the assignment is made before the mtgees. become united in title.—PLEDGE v. WHITE, [1896] A. 1609. ——.]—The right to consolidate two mtges. arises when the title of the mtgees. in respect to each mtge. can be shown to be vested in one & the same hand, & this fact must be established in order to bring into operation the doctrine of consolidation; consequently, in the case of a mtge. of freehold hereditaments in which A. & another were mtgees. advancing money on a joint account, & a second mtge. of the same hereditaments & certain leasehold premises in which A. was sole mtgee., although there is a possibility of the mtges. becoming vested in one & the same hand, namely, in A. upon his surviving his co-mtgee., & notwithstanding the fact that A. could give a good receipt for the moneys secured on both mtges., the doctrine of consolidation does not apply.—RILEY v. HALL (1898), 79 L. T. 244; 42 Sol. Jo. 702.

1610. Mortgages originally to different mortgagees—Subsequent union in one mortgagee.]—Where two distinct estates are mortgaged to different persons, these mtges. may be redeemed separately, though both mtges. have come into the hands of one person.—FOSBROOKE v. WALKER (1832), 2 L. J. Ch. 161.

1611. —— ——.]—After a first mtge. has been paid off, the second mtgee. may file a bill to have the legal estate conveyed to him without praying to foreclose the mtge.; & it seems he may do this, at the peril of costs, until the day of payment under a decree for redemption obtained against him by the mtgor. Until the mtgee. is actually paid off by his own consent or by decree of the ct., he retains the character of mtgee., with all the rights incident to it, & may therefore file a bill for foreclosure, notwithstanding a notice by the mtgor. to pay off the mtge., & even notwithstanding a decree of redemption. Qu.: whether a second mtgee., who upon payment of the first mtge. gets in the legal estate, can tack this mtge. to another mtge., previously executed to him by the same mtgor., of a different property.—GRUGEON v. GERRARD (1840), 4 Y. & C. Ex. 119; 160 E. R. 945.

1612. —— ——.]—A mtge. was given for a judgment debt. There was a prior equitable charge, of which the mtgee. had no direct notice, but no investigation of title or production of deeds was had, besides which, by arrangement, the mtgor.'s solr. prepared the deed for the mtgee.'s solr. The ct. concluded that the arrangement was to give a mtge. subject to existing charges, &, also, that the mtgee. was affected by the notice possessed by the mtgor.'s solr. of the prior equitable title.

A. made two equitable mtges. of two several estates, the one to A. & the other to B. He then executed a legal mtge. of both to C., who had constructive notice of the prior equitable mtges. B. obtained a transfer of A.'s mtge.:—Held: C. could only redeem B., on payment of both debts.

C., in point of fact, as I hold, took merely an equitable interest with knowledge of what had taken place as to the prior charge. With notice he can only stand in the position of B., & be entitled to his rights only; & if B. could not have redeemed one property without the other, then, I am of the opinion, that C. stands in no better or more favourable situation, & that he is not entitled to redeem one without redeeming the other (ROMILLY, M.R.).—TWEEDALE v. TWEEDALE (1857), 23 Beav. 341; 53 E. Ultimately the first two mtges. became vested in pltf., who filed their bill for an account, for payment, or in default for foreclosure of both. The deft. contended that he had a right under these circumstances to redeem one estate without redeeming the other; but it was:—Held: he had no right to redeem one of the estates only, & the fact of the first mtgee. having had notice of the second mtge., made no difference.—VINT v. PADGET (1858), 2 De G. & J. 611; 32 L. 1619. ——— ———.]—In 1872 T. mortgaged certain property to pltfs., which they now wished to foreclose. At that time they had notice only of a prior mtge. to the R. society. In 1874 T. filed a petition for liquidation of his affairs by arrangement, & his step-daughter P. then produced for the first time, & mtge. of the same property, dated Aug. 15, 1871, to secure a sum of money lent by her to T. in 1864. She proved her debt in the liquidation, & handed her security to the trustee, who now claimed to have it paid off. The deed contained a recital that T. had agreed to give her a mtge. as a security for the money:—Held: on the evidence the deed had not been communicated to P.; it was void under 27 Eliz. c. 4; &, though the recital would have worked an estoppel against the mtgor. & persons simply claiming under him, it had no such effect against pltfs., who obtained their title under the statute.

Pltfs. sold the property contained in their mtge., & paid the R. society not only what was due to them as prior mtgees., but also a sum due to them on an equitable mtge. of other property. They now claimed to consolidate their mtge. with the equitable mtge., & to hold the deeds of the latter until the whole amount due to them was paid:—Held: as the equitable mtge. was paid with money which, had the first mtgee. not claimed a right to consolidate, would have belonged to the second mtgees., it was in fact paid by the second mtgees., who by the fact of such payment became equitable transferees, & were entitled to consolidate the mtges.

They were equitable mtgees. of the property comprised in the security mtge., & they were legal mtgees. of the station land for the balance due to them on their own mtge. They were consequently in the position of having two independent mtges. on two independent properties mortgaged by the same mtgor. That being so, the rule of consolidation would apply (JESSEL, M.R.).—CRACKNALL v. JANSON (1879), 11 Ch. D. 1; 40 L. T. 640; 27 W. R. 851, C. A.

1621. Mortgage of mixed realty & personalty—No consolidation with vendor's lien.]—P. was adjudicated bkpt. in August, 1899. B. K. & co., who had various debts & various securities, sent in their proof as secured creditors, lumping together their debts & securities & claiming to prove for the balance. The securities consisted of (a) a vendor's lien on ship shares, & (b) a mtge. of policies, a debt, & freeholds. The trustee asked for details of value, & (a) was assessed at £1,325, & the property in (b) at £2,481, making in the aggregate £3,806. The trustee, however, did not object to the proof being made for a lump sum, nor did he require the separate value of the securities to be assessed in the proof, but he admitted the proof to rank for the amount claimed less £3,806, the aggregate assessed values of the securities. Subsequently a scheme for a composition was approved, & on payment of the composition bkpcy. was annulled & the outstanding estate of P. was ordered to revest in him. A subsequent incumbrancer on the freeholds included in mtge. (b) having claimed to redeem, B. K. & co. contended that redemption could now only be obtained on payment of the full sum of £3,806:—Held: the trustee in bkpcy. could not, by accepting the securities as worth the aggregate sum assessed, confer upon the secured creditor any part of bkpt.'s property to which the secured creditor was not entitled, or compel a mtgee. to put a separate value on two different properties included in the same security, & that mtge. (b) could be redeemed for £2,481 after allowing for what had already been received by the mtgees. on this security.—Re PEARCE, [1909] 2 Ch. 492; 78 L. J. Ch. 628; 100 L. T. 792; 16 Mans. 191. C. 1673. Surety—Suretyship not disclosed by mortgage deed.]—By a deed dated the 11th Mar. 1875, G. mortgaged to I. certain real estate for securing £1,050, & by a deed dated Dec. 10, 1875, G. mortgaged to I. certain Hudson Bay shares, & by the same deed A. & wife mortgaged to I. certain railway shares. A. & wife were, in fact, sureties for G., but that fact was not disclosed on the deed. G. subsequently executed other mtges. of the Hudson Bay shares to other persons, including M. The proceeds of the Hudson Bay shares had been paid into ct. under the Trustee Relief Act. M. presented a petition for payment out of ct. of that fund, & in Aug. 1887, the petition was referred to chambers to ascertain the priorities of the various mtgees. on the fund The chief clerk found that the first mtgee. was I., & that he was entitled to consolidate his mtge. of Mar. 11, 1875, that the second mtgees. were A. & wife to the extent of the value realised from the railway shares which had gone in part payment of I.'s security of Dec. 10, 1875, & that the other mtgees. were entitled subject to those priorities. The petition then came on upon further consideration, together with a summons by A. & wife, to vary the certificate by declaring that I. was not entitled to consolidation as against them:—Held: I. was entitled to consolidate, on the ground that the suretyship not being disclosed by the deed of Dec. 10, 1875, the only right of A. & wife against the trust fund was through G., & was therefore subject to I.'s rights against G.—Re TOOGOOD'S LEGACY TRUSTS (1889), 61 L. 1684. Covenant by mortgagor to observe rules of mortgagee society—Rules providing for consolidation.]—A. mortgaged two leasehold plots of land, & the houses in course of erection thereon, to a building society to secure £500. On the same day he executed a second mtge. of the same property to B. Subsequently A. mortgaged three other plots of land & houses to the society to secure £600. B. had a charge on this property. The first mtge. contained a covenant by A. to observe all the rules of the society. One of such rules provided that if the society held more than one mtge. from any member such member should not have power to redeem one property alone without the consent of the board. B. acted as A.'s solr. in the matter of the first mtge., & was the witness to his execution thereof.

A. having become bkpt., & the society having taken possession of all the houses, B. brought a redemption action. The society claimed to consolidate their mtges. as against him:—Held: the covenant to observe the rules amounted to an express covenant that the society should have power to consolidate, & B. having notice of that covenant had expressly taken his mtge. subject to the risk of consolidation, & the society had a right to consolidate.—ANDREWS v. CITY PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1881), 44 L. Part XI.—Tacking.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See, now, Law of Property Act, 1924 (c. 20), s. 94.

1692. Statement of right.]—It is an established rule in equity, that a third mtgee. having lent his money, without knowing there was a second mtge. upon the same estate, may, by paying off the first incumbrancer, & taking an assignment of his interest to himself, hold the estate against the second mtgee., till he shall be paid what is due to him upon both mtges. The principle upon which this doctrine was first established, & has ever since prevailed, is, that the third mtgee. having innocently lent his money, without knowing that the second had any claim upon the estate, has in conscience as good a right to be paid the whole money he has lent, as the second mtgee. has to the payment of what he advanced; & having by the assignment of the first mtge. got a right to hold the estate absolutely at law, & having possession of the title deeds, without which the estate cannot be sold, a ct. of conscience ought not to take from him his legal protection of an honest debt.—BELCHIER v. RENFORTH (1764), 5 Bro. 1694. —— Avoiding circuity of action.]—Petitioner being an equitable mtgee. of lands of bkpt., H., for the sum of £1,200, advanced to him the further sum of £1,350, & took a warrant of attorney to secure the last mentioned sum. Afterwards bkpt. executed to the petitioner a conveyance of the lands, in trust to sell, & after payment of the £1,200 & interest, to pay the surplus to bkpt., & on the day on which the conveyance was executed, judgment was entered up & execution levied under the warrant of attorney for the £1,350, & part of that sum was satisfied by the levy:—Held: the petitioner was not entitled to tack the residue of the judgment debt to the mtge.

Claimant in this case, having an equitable mtge., by deposit of title deeds, converted herself, not into a legal mtgee. but into another character, that of a trustee for sale, with a direction to pay the surplus to debtor, & a separate instrument is executed to secure the other debt, on which judgment is entered & execution actually levied. The right of tacking depends on the principle of avoiding circuity of action; but in the circumstances of this case, no circuity of action would have reached the surplus, & the principle is inapplicable (LEACH, V.-C.).—Re HOUGHTON, Ex p. PETTIT (1825), 2 Gl. & J. 47.

The sisters allowed him to retain the title deeds, that he might give security on the estate for another debt for which he was then being sued by L. Shortly afterwards, A. agreed in writing, to give L. a mtge. on the estate for the debt, & the deeds, in pursuance of this agreement, were deposited with G., P., & B., the London agents of A.'s solr., & who shortly afterwards became his solrs., to be held by them for the purpose of giving effect to the security. A., in 1851, made a mtge. in fee to C., who had no notice of the prior incumbrances, & G. P. & B. handed over to C. the title deeds. In 1855, the sisters made a sub-mtge. of the term by assignment:—Held: the mtge. of 1848 was void under 27 Eliz. c. 4, as against C., who therefore took the legal fee discharged of the term; C., having no notice, was not affected by the fraud committed by G., P. & B. in parting with the title deeds: & having the title deeds, & having acquired the legal estate for value without notice, he was entitled to priority over the sisters & their assignee, & over the equitable security of L.

SECT. 2.—WHEN RIGHT EXISTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See, now, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 94.

1698. Equities must be equal except as to time.]—A. having mortgaged an estate to B. & C. in succession, agreed to sell it to D. free from incumbrances: part of the purchase-money was to be paid down, & the rest on the completion of the purchase. During the investigation of the title, A. induced D., who was ignorant of the mtges., to make further payments on account of the purchase-money, & having also raised a further sum from E. on the security of his contract, without giving him notice of C.'s mtge., became insolvent & absconded. D. thereupon, with notice of all that had happened, paid off C.'s mtge. out of the balance of the purchase-money remaining due, & E., to secure himself, took an assignment of B.'s mtge. But the balance of purchase-money not being sufficient to pay both E.'s charge & what E. had paid to B.:—Held: E. was not entitled to tack his security to B.'s mtge.: because his security was not a security on the estate, but only on the purchase-money; & because, although E. at the time he advanced his money had no notice of any particular incumbrance on the estate except B.'s, he knew that he was dealing for a supposed balance out of which D., having contracted for the estate free from incumbrances, would be entitled to pay off any incumbrances to which the estate might be found to be subject, & therefore the equities of D. & E. were not equal.

A party claiming to tack must, as against the party against whom the tack is to operate, have advanced his money upon the credit of the land. He must, except as to time, have an equal equity; &, which follows from the last, he must have advanced his money without notice of the other's claim (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—LACEY v. INGLE (1847), 2 Ph. 413; 41 E. The owner of a farm mortgaged it in succession to three persons, the third mtgee. having no notice of the second mtge. By a deed made between the mtgor. & P., in order, as was recited, to stop a forced sale by the mtgees., the equity of redemption was conveyed to P. upon trust for sale, with power to postpone the sale & raise money, by mtge. or otherwise, to pay off the mtges., & the proceeds were to be held by P. upon trust to pay his costs & expenses, & after payment of the same & the mtges., to pay the residue to the mtgor. P., having notice of the second mtge., paid off the first & third out of his own moneys, & took a transfer of the benefit of them, & he subsequently got in the legal estate. PART XI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 5.—A.

1. Whether absence of notice essential.] — Where there were three mtges. on the same property, & the third was taken without notice of the second, & was afterwards transferred to another person, who thereupon obtained a conveyance to himself of the first mtge.:—Held: he could not tack his third mtge. to the first.—MCMURRAY v. BURNHAM (1851), 2 Gr. 289.—CAN.

is a purchaser without notice; & an incumbrancer for value of an equitable interest may successfully file a bill against a subsequent incumbrancer for vaue to have the priority declared & enforced.

Every conveyance of an equitable interest is an innocent conveyance, that is to say, the grant of a person entitled merely in equity passes only that which he is justly entitled to, & no more. If, therefore, a person seised of an equitable estate, the legal estate being outstanding, makes an assurance by way of mtge. or grants an annuity, & afterwards conveys the whole estate to a purchaser, he can grant to the purchaser that which he has, viz. the estate subject to the mtge. or annuity & no more the subsequent grantee takes only that which is left in the grantor. Hence grantees & incumbrancers claiming in equity take & are ranked according to the dates of the securities & the maxim applies, Qui prior est tempore potior est jure.

. . . It is well known that if there are three incumbrancers, & the third incumbrancer, at the time of his incumbrance & payment of his money, had no notice of the second incumbrance, then, if the first mtgee. or incumbrancer has the legal estate, & the third pays him off, & takes an assignment of his securities & a conveyance of legal estate, he is entitled to tack his third mtge. to the first mtge. which he has acquired, & to exclude the intermediate incumbrancer (LORD WESTBURY, C.). —PHILLIPS v. PHILLIPS (1862), 4 De G. The trustees made a legal mtge. of the land with other property & afterwards sold the land to T. without notice of the mtge., which appeared to have been forgotten, & handed the title deeds to him. T. showing a forged title mortgaged the land to pltfs., who believed they thereby acquired a good legal mtge., & handed the forged title deeds to them. arrears of interest as against the land mtged., although he may recover twenty years' arrears on the covenant to pay.

The interest on money secured by mtge. of land & by covenant being sixteen years in arrear, the mtgee. filed his bill of foreclosure against the heir of the mtgor., raising no question of liability on the covenant or of any right of tacking. A decree was made to take an account of what was due on the mtge. Under the statutes limitation twenty years' arrears could be recovered on the covenant, but six only as against the land. The master refused to allow pltf. to tack his two claims: —Held: he was right.

Qu.: whether the right to tack in such a case would be different in a suit for foreclosure, from what it is in a suit for redemption.

The point now sought to be made out is, that the original mtgor. being liable, on covenant, to pay the mtge. debt & interest, unrestricted to six years' interest, the mtgee. is entitled to tack what could be recovered on the covenant to what is due on the mtge. securities, as restricted by Statute of Limitations (ROMILLY, M.R.). — SINCLAIR v. JACKSON (1853), 17 Beav. 405; 1 W. 1768. Purchase-money paid in ignorance of mortgage.]—P., the lessee of certain premises, mortgaged them to H. for the whole term wanting one day. He remained in possession, & some time after the mtge. agreed to sell the whole term to B., & delivered copies of his title deeds, promising to furnish the originals as soon as one should be re-executed. B. allowed a considerable time to elapse, & paid great part of the purchase-money without requiring the original deeds; but subsequently, before completion, he learnt that P. had deposited them with H., & had also before the agreement for sale, deposited with A. two worthless deeds, purporting to be the original deeds, by way of securing a running account. After the notice of the agreement, A. took an assignment of P.'s property, including the leasehold. B. bought in H.'s mtge.:—Held: (1) B. was entitled to tack the sums he had paid for purchase-money to the mtge. debt, & also to hold the property as security for sums laid out by him on improvements; (2) B. was not guilty of such gross negligence as to fix him with notice of all he might have learnt by inquiry; (3) on A.'s receiving notice that P. had parted with his right to redeem, he was no longer bound to appropriate payments by P. to the extinction of the debt secured by the deposit of deeds.—HIPKINS v. AMERY (1860), 2 Giff. 292; 3 L. 1772. Purchase-money secured upon premises—Further advance for building purposes.]—Testator devised certain building land to trustees for sale, & declared that they might make such agreements with the purchasers thereof, as to the forbearance of payment of the purchase-money, & to advance such sums for the purpose of assisting the purchasers, in building or otherwise, in the manner he had been accustomed to do. Testator was in the habit of allowing the purchase-money to remain secured upon the land; & also subsequent advances, made by him to assist the purchasers in building; & had dealt with bkpts. upon this system. After testator's death, bkpts. purchased a piece of land from the trustees, leaving the purchase-money secured upon the premises; subsequently, the trustees advanced £600 to them for building, but took no security for it:—Held: upon the bkpcy. of the purchasers, the trustees were equitable mtgees., as well for the advances as for the purchase-money.—Re BAKER & HARLEY, Ex p. LINDEN (1841), 1 Mont. D. & De G. 428; 10 L. J. Bcy. 22; 5 Jur. 57.

1773. Agreement to make sum a further advance—Not acted on.]—The facts are few & simple. B. mortgaged an estate, of which he was owner, to the sisters of F., for £500. This was the money of pltf.; nothing but the legal interest was in his sisters as trustees. F. afterwards, having a further demand on B. for £130, applied for payment, stating that he was sadly in want of money, & that he must apply to M., or get it from his sisters, who must add it to their mtge. That was afterwards contracted to release to the mtgee., & the latter, having no notice of the prior conveyance, paid the mtgor. some part of the consideration that he had contracted to give for the release: —Held: he was entitled to tack what he had so paid to his mtge. debt.—GORDON v. LOTHIAN (1851), 2 Gr. 293. —CAN.

d. Assessment payable by mortgagor.]—Where a mtgee. in possession pays the assessment on the mtged. land which was payable by the mtgor., he has a right to tack on the amount so paid to his mtge. debt.—KAMAYA NAIK v. DEVAPA RUDRA NAIK (1896), I. L. R. 22 Bom. 440.—IND.

f. Goods.]—A co. gave a mtge. to secure an amount advanced to it by several persons jointly, & further advances. Afterwards one of the mtgees. delivered certain goods to the co. upon the other mtgees. & the co. (by resolution) agreeing that the delivery of the goods should be treated acceded to. B. agreed to the proposal to attach the debt to the sisters' mtge. But nothing was done upon that; there was no application to the sisters to advance the money. At the expiration of a month, a writ was issued for this money. I do not understand on what principle it is attempted to tack this debt to the mtge. If pltf. had said his object was security, it is possible, nay probable, that B. would have agreed it; but that will not justify me in converting one proposal into another. I think it was of the very essence of the contract that the money should have been advanced by the sisters. How can it be said that this is not of the essence of the contract, when it is the very consideration? It was a proposal, a proposition, & nothing was done upon it. There is no reason why the second sum should be tacked (LORD LYNDHURST, C.).—FRAMPTON v. CANNAN, FRAMPTON v. WHITMORE (1843), 2 L. T. O. S. 165, L. C.

1777. —— —— —— Usage in public-house trade.]—In 1858, a publican deposited the lease of his public-house with defts., a firm of brewers, with a memorandum stating that the deposit was to secure payment of a sum of £200, as well as any other sums in which the depositor might become indebted to the brewers on any account, not exceeding £500. The brewers, in July, 1865, made the publican a further advance of £100. Four days after, the publican signed to pltfs., a firm of distillers, a memorandum, whereby he declared that the documents deposited with the brewers should, subject to the brewers' charge, be a security to the distillers for a sum of £120 then due, & all other sums that might thereafter become due, to the distillers. Notice of this second equitable mtge. was on the same day given by the distillers to the brewers. After the date of this notice the publican became indebted to the brewers in a further sum of money, the price of beer supplied to the publican. The brewers claimed to be entitled, by virtue of a custom in the trade between brewers & publicans, to add this further sum to the amount secured by the deposit of the lease, in priority to the distillers' charge:—Held: the alleged custom was bad in law for want of mutuality, & for want of defined limits; &, further, that it was imperfectly supported by the evidence. Consequently, the case of brewers & distillers formed no exception to the rule as to first & second mtgees. laid down in Hopkinson v. Rolt, No. 1776, ante.—DAUN v. CITY OF LONDON BREWERY CO. 1778. —— —— —— ——.]—The lessee of a public-house in London executed at the public-house, & at the time of entering into possession thereof, a mtge. of his lease in favour of the brewer by whom the house was supplied with beer, to secure a sum already advanced, & future advances not to exceed in the whole a given sum. At the same time & place he charged the lease, subject to the security already given, to the brewer, with the repayment to the distiller who supplied the house with spirits of an advance made by him. The mtge. & charge were both executed in the presence of the solrs. of the brewer & distiller, & the latter there & then gave to the former a formal notice of the charge in favour of his client. Afterwards the publican became indebted to the brewer for the price of beer supplied to the house. The lease having been sold to the brewer under a power of sale in his mtge.:—Held: in the absence of any express agreement, the distiller was entitled to be repaid his advancement out of the purchase-money in priority to the debt which had been incurred to the brewer subsequently to the time

1782. —— ——.]—The owner of land, after depositing the title deeds with a bank as security for all sums then or thereafter to become due on the general balance of his account with the bank, contracted with the knowledge of the bank to sell the land to one who had notice of the terms of the deposit. The vendor afterwards paid into his own account at the bank sums which in the whole exceeded the debt due to the bank on his balance at the time of the contract of sale, so that that debt was discharged. The bank, without giving notice to the purchaser, continued the account & made fresh advances to the vendor, so that on the general balance there was always a debt to the bank. The purchaser, who never had notice of the fresh advances, paid the purchase-money by instalments to the vendor:—Held: on the principle of Hopkinson v. Rolt, No. 1776, ante, the bank had no charge on the land as against the purchaser for the fresh advances.—LONDON & COUNTY BANKING CO. v. RATCLIFFE (1881), 6 App. Cas. 722; 51 L. A shareholder deposited his share certificates with a bank as security for the balance due & to become due on his current account, & the bank gave the co. notice of the deposit. The certificates stated that the shares were held subject to the arts. of assocn.:—Held: the co. could not in respect of moneys which became due from the shareholder to the co. after notice of the deposit with the bank claim priority over advances by the bank made after such notice, but the principle of Hopkinson v. Rolt, No. 1776, ante, applied.

1785. —— ——.]—In Oct. 1864, certain property was mortgaged to A., B., & C., who were trustees, as joint tenants to secure £3,000 & interest. In Feb. 1866, the same property was mortgaged to L. to secure £3,500 & interest. In Oct. 1876, a further charge was executed in favour of the first mtgees. to secure £1,500 & interest.

A. died in May, 1883, & B. died in Jan. 1889. B., who was a solr., acted for all parties on the occasions of the creation of all three securities, & had actual notice of the second mtge. & of the further advance when they were created, but he failed to communicate the fact of the second advance to his co-mtgees., & they had no personal knowledge of its existence at the date of the further advance:—Held: pltfs., who were the successors in title as trustees of the first mtgees., were not entitled to tack the amount due in respect of the further advance to the amount due on the first mtge. so as to postpone defts. who represented the second mtgee.

who had already mortgaged it, mortgaged it a second time to two persons, his uncles, who had no notice of the first mtge. One of the conditions of the second mtge. was, that the mtgor. should make a settlement of his life interest, so that that interest should be made determinable on alienation by him, with a trust in that event for the application of the income, at the discretion of the trustees, for the maintenance, support or benefit of the settlor, his wife if any & children or remoter issue, & his sisters & their children or remoter issue, & a settlement to that effect was executed contemporaneously with the execution of the second mtge. At the date of the second mtge. the first mtgee. had not given notice of his mtge. to the trustees of the will which created the life interest, & he did not give them notice until nine months afterwards, before which time notice of the second mtge. & of the settlement had been given to them. Notice of the first mtge. was given to the second mtgees. about five weeks after the notice to the trustees:—Held: the uncles were entitled, in respect of their original advance & all further advances made by them to the nephew before they received notice of the first mtge., to priority over the first mtgee., but the settlement must be treated as voluntary, & the first mtge. was entitled to priority over it.—WEST v. WILLIAMS, [1899] 1 Ch. 132; 68 L. 1830. Rules of priority—Priority in mortgages of personalty distinguished.]—Although a mtge. debt is a chose in action, yet where the subject of the security is land, the mtgee. is treated as having "an interest in land" & priorities are governed by the rules applicable to interests in land & not by the rules which apply to interests in personalty & leaseholds are real estate for the purposes of the rule.

In 1882 T., a solr., advanced money of his own upon the security of leaseholds mortgaged to him by sub-demise. In 1889, being then one of the two trustees of the B. settlement, he received a sum of money belonging to the settlement & without the knowledge of his co-trustee, fraudulently applied it to his own use. By entries in his books, under the heading of the trust, he purported to appropriate his own mtge. debt to answer the sum of which he had defrauded the trust estate, but he never communicated the purported appropriation either to his co-trustee or to his cestuis que trust, all of whom were sui juris. In 1896 the appropriation became known to one of the cestuis que trust, who was a solr. & acted as such for the others, but although they had all become absolutely entitled in possession to the trust funds they never called upon the trustees to transfer them, & no inquiry was made respecting the mtge. In 1889 T. was also a trustee of the T. settlement. In 1895, T. having then become sole trustee of that settlement, N. was appointed co-trustee, & at N.'s request, on T.'s representation that the trust funds included the above-mentioned mtge. debt, & securities, the representation being supported by his production to N. of the deeds, T. executed a legal transfer into the joint names of himself & N., N. being then totally ignorant of the existence of the B. settlement & of T.'s secret appropriation thereto. The deed of transfer had been prepared by T. as solr. to the T. trust & the mtge. & other title deeds remained in his custody as such solr. In 1897, T., without N.'s knowledge, deposited the deeds with his bankers as security for a debt due from him to them, at the same time executing to them a deed poll by which he charged the debt upon all his estate & interest in the property comprised in the deeds, & undertook to execute on request a legal mtge. ; & he thereby declared that during the continuance of the security he would hold all his interest thereby charged in trust for the bank as mtgees. ; & he appointed three officers of the bank his attorneys for him & on his behalf, & as his act & deed, to execute any such legal mtge. as aforesaid. At that time the bank had no notice of either of the two settlements. In Mar. 1898, T., absconded, & in Apr. 1898, notice was given to the bank of the T. settlement, but they had no notice of the B. settlement. Notwithstanding the notice, the bank purported to execute to themselves by their three officers as T.'s attorneys under the deed poll a legal mtge. of the leaseholds comprised in the deposited deeds. In actions to ascertain the priorities of the B. settlement the T. settlement & the bank to the benefit of the mtge. debt & securities :—Held : (1) assuming there was a good appropriation in favour of the B. settlement, N., as trustee of the T. settlement, & having no notice of the appropriation, could not be deprived of the advantage acquired by him as against the B. settlement by the possession of the legal estate in one moiety of the mtge. debt & securities, & of the better right to the legal estate in the other moiety which had become vested in the bank through T.'s mtge. to them operating as a severance of the joint tenancy between himself & N. ; & N. must be treated as an innocent purchaser for value without notice, on the ground that by accepting the transfer of the mtge. debt & securities he gave up his right to sue T. for the debt due to the T. settlement ; N. was protected by Conveyancing Act, 1882 (c. 39), s. 3 (1), & (2), from being affected with constructive notice of the appropriation to the B. settlement because no possible inquiries or inspection by N., or any independent solr. on his behalf, would have brought the appropriation to the B. settlement to his knowledge, & the appropriation did not "come to the knowledge of" T. either as N.'s solr. or "in the same transaction in respect to which the question of notice arose" ; (2) inasmuch as the bank had, at the date of the mtge. to them in Apr. 1898, notice of the T. settlement they could not be allowed to gain priority over that settlement by means of the legal estate they had acquired in an undivided moiety of T.'s mtge. debt & securities, their mtge. not relating back to the date of the deed poll of 1897 ; (3) N. as trustee of the T. settlement, was entitled to the mtge. debt & securities in priority to both the B. settlement & the bank, & the bank was ordered to reconvey to him as such trustee the legal estate vested in them, & to deliver up the deeds accordingly.

(5) An equitable mtgee. who has made an advance without notice of a prior equitable title, may gain priority by getting in the legal title, unless there are circumstances which make it inequitable for him so to do. One case which falls within this exception is where the mtgee. has notice that the legal title, at the time when it is so got in, is held on an express trust in favour of persons who assert a claim to the property (STIRLING, J.).

(6) I next proceed to consider the order of priority between the purely equitable titles. This is governed by order of time—unless there has been some act or omission on the part of the owner of an equitable title prior in point of time, such as to cause that title to be postponed to a subsequent equitable interest (STIRLING, J.).

(7) Where the relation between the equitable incumbrancer & the person in possession of the title deeds is not merely that of mtgee. & mtgor., but is of a fiduciary nature, as, for example, that of cestui que trust & trustee, as client & solr., there is a great body of authority to show that the equitable incumbrancer is not to be deprived of his priority by reason of the improper acts of the person entrusted with the deeds, so long, at all events, as the encumbrancer has no ground to suppose that there has been any want of good faith on the part of the custodian of the deeds (STIRLING, J.).—TAYLOR v. LONDON & COUNTY BANKING CO., LONDON & COUNTY BANKING CO. v. NIXON, [1901] 2 Ch. 231; 70 L. T. O. S. 273.

1834. Inquiry into priorities—Persons entitled to conduct of inquiry.]—The mtgor. & his incumbrancer, who first presented their petition, are entitled to the conduct of the inquiry. The absence of the mtgor. is immaterial, if an incumbrancer joins with him in his petition, even although such incumbrancer should be the solr. of the mtgor., the validity of his incumbrance being, as yet in this case, undisputed by the other incumbrancers can, under an order made on this petition, dispute the validity of the security of the solr. of the mtgor. 1835. Mortgage to trustees & their solicitors—In equal shares—Guarantee by solicitors of trustees' portion—Whether conferring priority.]—Trustees acting under the advice of their solrs. invested £3,000, part of the trust fund, upon the security of a contributory mtge. for £6,000, the remaining £3,000 being advanced by the solrs. themselves. The legal estate in the mtged. property was not vested in the trustees, the mtge. being taken in the names of one of them & of a stranger to the trust. The mtgees. executed a contemporaneous declaration of trust declaring that their names should stand in the mtge. as to the sum of £3,000, part of the said sum of £6,000, & the interest thereof in trust for the trustees, & as to the further sum of £3,000, "residue of the said sum of £6,000 & the residue of the interest to become due & payable" under the mtge., in trust for the solrs. By another contemporaneous document the solrs. guaranteed to the trustees the sufficiency of the security for the sum of £3,000 & interest, & further guaranteed to the trustees the repayment of the £3,000 & interest. The solrs. assigned their portion of the security to other persons, & were afterwards adjudicated bkpts. The mtged. property having failed to realise the whole of the £6,000:—Held: the trustees were not entitled to priority for their £3,000 as against the assignees of the solrs.—STOKES v. PRANCE, [1898] 1 Ch. 212; 67 L. 1836. Priority as against portioners—Portion appointed or payable subsequent to mortgage—Mortgage for purpose of paying off earlier portion.]—Testator who died in 1851 charged three sums of £5,000 for children's portions on his real estate. In 1880, two of the portions had become raisable, &, in an action brought for the purpose of clearing the estate from charges, an order was made in May, 1882, directing that the two portions should be raised by a mtge. of the estate to be settled by the judge to a person who was then willing to lend the money. The mtge. as settled contained recitals of the title to the portions & of the proceedings in the action, & was expressed to be without prejudice to any charge which might be subsisting in the mtged. hereditaments under the will. The money was paid into ct. by the mtgee., & was afterwards distributed among the persons interested in the two portions. The estate being now believed to be insufficient to pay the whole of the said portions, the mtgee. commenced the present action for the realisation of his mtge., & claimed priority over the persons interested in the remaining portion:—Held: on the construction of the proceedings in the action, the judgment obtained, & the circumstances under which it was given, no interference with the charge of the remaining portion was contemplated or authorised, & there was nothing in the form of the mtge. settled by the judge which entitled pltf. to more than a charge on the estate for the two sums of £5,000 pari passu with the third £5,000 charged thereon in equity by virtue of the will.—NIGHTINGALE v. REYNOLDS, [1903] 2 Ch. 236; 72 L. over; & the settlement contained a power for A. by deed or will to appoint the further sum of £10,000 as portions for younger children. In 1854 B., with A.'s consent, executed a disentailing assurance by which the estates were assured, subject to the uses & estates created by the settlement anterior to B.'s estate tail & to all powers to such precedent estates annexed, to such uses as A. & B. should by deed jointly appoint. Thereupon A. & B., in exercise of their joint power, created a mtge. over the estates; they also created a further mtge. over the estates partly by the exercise of their joint power & partly by a grant of A.'s life estate. In each case, upon the construction placed by the ct. upon the mtges. the lands were assured by the operative part subject to the power to appoint the further sum of £10,000 as portions. Each mtge. contained a joint & several covenant by the mtgors. for quiet enjoyment, " & that free & clear & freely & clearly acquitted & exonerated or released " or otherwise indemnified of, from & against (inter alia) former or other gifts, leases, jointures, portions, & all other incumbrances whatsoever. A. died, having by his will charged the estates with the further sum of £10,000 as portions for younger children. Questions of priority having arisen as between these further portions & the mtges.:—Held: the covenant for quiet enjoyment did not enlarge the operation of the security, & did not amount to a release by A. of his power to appoint further portions; & therefore the further portions had priority over the mtges.—NOTTIDGE v. DERING, RABAN v. DERING, [1910] 1 Ch. 297; 79 L. In a question between a party holding an incumbrance intervening between the assigned incumbrances & the bond & disposition in security:—Held: the presumption was, that the prior incumbrancers were paid with the money of the assignee; &, as there was no evidence to the contrary, the assignment conferred a preference over the intermediate incumbrancer.—MACKENZIE v. ORR (1839), Macl. & Rob. 117; 9 E. The bill stated that A., who was also an unsecured creditor of the mtgor., proposed to him to make a transfer of the joint mtge., to secure the last-mentioned debt. The mtgor., without expressly assenting to that offer, wrote to A. telling him he thought of selling some part of the mtge. security; & if he did so, he would give A. another security for his debt; but that he, A., could hold " the legal assignment " as exor. of his brother, until he was paid off or received the substituted security. The joint mtge. was paid off; & A. & B. prepared & executed a reassignment to A. of the mtge. security ready for execution by the mtgor., but did not deliver it to him. The mtgor. subsequently mortgaged the equity of redemption in the property to D., when all the deeds relating to it, including the reassignment executed by A. & B., were deposited with D. The mtgor. then (1858) absconded without having repaid or given A. the substituted security for his unsecured debt, when also A. & B. first expressly heard of the equitable mtge. to C., A. & B. then (1859) conveyed all their interest in the mtged. property to D.:—Held: pltf. was entitled to priority, D. having advanced his money without notice of pltfs.' mtge., & having received the title deeds, ought not to be deprived of them, or required to produce them without payment of what was due to him.—FAGG v. JAMES (1863), 8 L. (2) The trustees of a settlement advanced the trust money on the security of real property which was conveyed to them by the mtgor., the mtge. deed noticing the trust. The surviving trustee of the settlement afterwards reconveyed part of the property to the mtgor. on payment of part of the mtge. money, which he appropriated. The mtgor. then conveyed that part of the property to new mtgees., concealing, with the connivance of the trustee, both the prior mtge. & the reconveyance. 1851. —— ——.]—A purchaser who has, before completion of his purchase, received notice of an outstanding equitable interest must, in order to get a good title from his vendor, take care to see that that interest is got in or destroyed. If he chooses to complete in reliance upon the assurance of the vendor, or of the vendor's solr., that the interest has been got in or destroyed, he does so at his own risk if it turns out that the interest is still outstanding, & the conveyance to him of the legal estate, accompanied by the delivery, unknown to the owner of the equitable interest, of the title deeds, affords him no protection against the prior equitable interest.

Prior to the completion of a purchase of leaseholds the purchaser's solrs. discovered the existence of an equitable mtge. not disclosed by the abstract, & required it to be discharged. On completion of the purchase the vendor's solr., who was also the solr. of the equitable mtgee., produced the memorandum creating the equitable mtge. with what purported to be a receipt, signed by the mtgee., for all moneys due on the security; an assignment of the property by the vendor to the purchaser, passing the legal estate, was then executed, & the equitable mtge., the receipt, & all the other title deeds were handed to the purchaser. 1854. Mortgagee trustees with legal estate—Mortgage of share of cestui que trust—Absence of notice—Priority over prior incumbrance.]—Funds belonging to L. were, on her marriage in 1834, vested in three trustees, one of whom died in 1840, in trust for her for life for her separate use, without power of anticipation, & after her death for the children of the marriage, & in case there should be none, for such persons, if she should die in her husband's lifetime, as she should appoint. In 1843 the husband & wife executed a deed to secure the payment of moneys due from him, & the wife appointed that in case there should be no child of the marriage, & if she should die in the husband's lifetime, the trustees of the settlement of 1834 should, out of the trust funds, raise sufficient to pay the husband's debt. Notice was given of the deed of 1843 to the two surviving trustees of the settlement. In 1848 the wife & the sole surviving trustee of the settlement, who desired to retire, appointed three new trustees, & assigned to them the trust funds. One of those trustees died, & the two surviving trustees & the survivor of them, at the request of the husband & wife, dealt with some of the trust funds, which ultimately were much diminished. A portion of the funds was invested in the purchase of leasehold premises, which were held upon the trusts of the settlement. The wife died in Mar. 1870, without having had any child. The husband survived. The survivor of the trustees of 1848 in May, 1870, received a notice from R. of a charge on the leaseholds in his favour, dated Oct. 5, 1864; & in Oct. 1870, he received a notice of the deed of 1843:—Held: the surviving trustees of 1848 were not liable to make good the funds which had been lost; R. was not entitled to priority over the trustees of the deed of 1843; & the persons claiming under the deed of 1843, were entitled to the funds which remained in part satisfaction of the moneys due to them.

Assignees of an equitable interest should, if they desire to be perfectly secured, obtain a distringas on the funds; or have their deed indorsed on the original deed; or obtain a transfer of the funds into ct.

Trustees who have got a legal estate, or an estate of any kind, either money or land, may lend money to the cestui que trust, & get a beneficial interest in the trust property if they have no notice that there have been any prior incumbrancers. They have got the legal estate & they have got the legal right; they have therefore got, in respect of the charge created in their favour, before they have got any notice of anything else, a right to retain that which the law has given them (JAMES, L.J.).—PHIPPS v. LOVEGROVE, PROSSER v. PHIPPS (1873), L. 1856. Assignment of prior equitable mortgage—Assignment subsequent to legal mortgage—Substitution of assignee for equitable mortgagee—Intention of parties.]—W. was owner in fee of certain property, & prior to May 1, 1879, mortgaged it by deposit of title deeds to G. to secure an advance by her. On May 1, 1879, W. gave a legal mtge. of the same property to B., to secure a debt owed by him. B. at the time of the execution of the mtge. did not know of the equitable mtge. to G. In June, 1879, W. applied to deft. to make an advance to pay off the charge held by G. Deft. advanced the money; G. handed the deeds back to W., who handed them to H., who was acting for all parties; & H., in his turn handed them to deft. W., on or about the same date executed a legal mtge. of the same premises to deft. to secure his advance. This deed did not recite the mtge. of May 1, to B., nor was deft. aware of its existence. B. subsequently became insolvent, & his trustee in liquidation, pltf., claimed priority for the mtge. to B. of May 1, over that of June, 1879, to deft. The county ct. judge, before whom the case came on for trial, decided in favour of the priority of B.'s mtge. Defts. appealed:—Held: the decision of the county ct. judge should be reversed, & as from the nature of the transaction between the parties it was intended that deft. should stand in the place of the equitable mtgee., he was entitled to priority over the first legal mtgee. to the extent of the amount of the equitable mtge.—MASON v. RHODES (1885), 53 L. 1860. ——————.]—If a subsequent purchaser or mtgee. has notice of a former purchase or incumbrance, he shall not avail himself of an assignment of an old outstanding term, prior to both, in order to get a preference. But if he had no notice of such prior purchase or incumbrance, & has the first & best right to call for the legal estate, then if he gets an assignment of it, a ct. of equity will not deprive him of his advantage. If a second mtgee. lend his money upon an estate upon which there is an old outstanding term, & has notice at the same time of a certain incumbrance, prior to his own, the prior incumbrancer has the best right to call for the legal estate, & to satisfy himself of any other incumbrances upon the estate; although such other incumbrances were not known to the second mtgee. at the time he advanced his money.

Wherever the legal estate is standing out, either in a prior incumbrancer, or in such a trustee as against whom the puisne incumbrancer has not the best right to call for the legal estate, the whole title & consideration is in equity, & then the general maxim must take place, qui prior est tempore potior est jure (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—

But if the legal estate be outstanding in a third person who has no privity with the several incumbrancers, the incumbrancer who obtains a conveyance of it to himself, or a trustee for him, will secure a priority over the others.

The owner of the legal estate in realty deposited the title deeds of it with pltfs., to secure moneys advanced by them to him. He afterwards admitted that he was originally trustee of the legal estate in the property for A., to whom such legal estate was afterwards conveyed. The building society delivered the title deeds other than the mtge. deed to the bank, & D. executed in favour of the bank a memorandum of equitable charge containing an agreement to execute a legal mtge. when called upon. Shortly afterwards the building society handed the mtge. deed to the bank, indorsed with the receipt authorised by Building Societies Act, 1874 (c. 32), s. 40. The receipt was dated the day of payment off, though in fact executed afterwards. In Nov. 1905, by means of forged title deeds, D. obtained an advance from defts.' predecessor in title, & executed what purported to be a legal mtge. of the property to him. D. Possession by Transferee of Mortgage.

See, now, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 97.

1885. General rule.] — Where two or more successive mtgees. advance their money upon security of real property, without notice of a prior trust fraudently concealed by the mtgor. the first mtgee. taking a mtge. of the legal estate, the last mtgee. is at liberty, after notice of the trust, & pending a suit by the cestuis que trust for redemption of the first mtge., to pay off all the prior mtges., & upon getting in the legal estate, to hold it until all the moneys advanced by him have been paid in full.

Where there are three successive mtgees., the third taking his security without notice of the second at the time of advancing his money, if the third can obtain, even after bill filed, a conveyance of the legal estate from the first, he can, as it is termed, "squeeze out" the second, although at the time of obtaining such conveyance he had full notice of the existence of the second mtge. The fact of his having such notice at the time of his getting in the legal estate is immaterial, provided he had no such notice at the time when he advanced his money (PAGE WOOD, V.-C.).

The authorities, as it seems to me, have gone to this extent although I am still of opinion that they have never gone before, that any person having an unsatisfied mtge. or charge upon real property, is at liberty, at any time before decree, to convey the legal estate in the property, in respect of his unsatisfied charge, to any subsequent incumbrancer, who may have advanced his money without notice of any intervening or other charge as ncumbrance, & by so doing may give to that other ncumbrancer a right, which this ct. cannot take from him, to insist upon the legal estate, which as the ct. holds, he has thus properly acquired (PAGE WOOD, V.-C.).

In the case of a satisfied mtge., where the mtgee. would hold simply upon trust for the original mtgor. as those claiming under him as in the case of a trustee of a satisfied term. . . . I do not find any authority which decides, that where notice has once been fixed upon the person thus holding as a trustee of a dry legal estate for the benefit of the parties entitled, he is at liberty to convey that estate to a third party, as to give such third Constructive notice—Notice to agent of transferee's solicitor—Further advance on transfer.]—In order to affect a principal with constructive notice of facts within the knowledge of an agent, it is necessary not only that the knowledge should be derived from the same transaction, but it must be knowledge of facts which are material to that transaction & which it was the duty of the agent to communicate. Therefore, the transferee of a mtge. is not affected by the knowledge of the solr., acting for him in the matter of the transfer, of an incumbrance subsequent to the original mtge., so as to prevent him from making further advances, such knowledge not being material to the business of the transfer.—WYLLIE v. POLLEN (1863), 3 De G. Qu.: whether he would be in any better position if he had no notice.

A builder entered into a building agreement under which leases of plots of land were to be granted on completion of houses on them. He built a house on one plot, & verbally agreed on getting his lease to grant an underlease to M., who gave valuable consideration for the underlease, & entered into possession. Subsequently the builder, without the knowledge of M., obtained a lease of the house, & deposited it with deft. to secure an advance made without notice of M.'s title. After this the builder, as agent for pltf., who claimed under M.'s will, let the house to a tenant. Subsequently the builder granted to deft. a legal mtge. to secure the previous advance. The suit was instituted for specific performance of the agreement for an underlease :—Held : the tenancy gave deft. constructive notice at the time of taking the legal mtge., the builder was a trustee for M.; & the legal estate was no protection to deft. against the prior equity.—MUMFORD v. STOHWASSER (1874), L. 1892. —— ——.]—The owner of a copyhold, which was subject to a mtge. by conditional surrender for £350, made by a former owner, instructed S., his solr., to procure him, on the security of the property, a loan of £550, out of which the old mtge. was to be paid off. S. in July, 1876, obtained the money from pltf., who was also his client. In July, 1877, S. took a security for £700 on the property in his own name, the mtgee. assigning the old mtge. debt, & the mtgor. covenanting to surrender. The old mtgee. was paid by a cheque drawn by S. on B. & co., his bankers. S.'s account was already overdrawn, but on the same day he applied to them for leave further to overdraw, which was granted on his depositing with them the security for £700, & the cheque when presented was honoured. B. & co. had no notice of pltf.'s claim. Some time after this S. put his account in credit, but it shortly afterwards became again overdrawn. S. handed over some of the other muniments of title to pltf. Pltf. commenced his action to establish his right to rank as incumbrancer for £550 in priority to B. & co. After this, B. & co. procured the old mtgee. to be admitted under the old conditional surrender, & to surrender to them. B. & co. appealed asking for priority over pltf. to the extent of the old mtge. which had been paid off with their money :—Held : (1) S., having received money from pltf. for the purpose of being invested on a mtge. of specified property, & having taken a security on that property in his own name, was a trustee of that security for pltf. to the extent of the money received from him, & this equitable title must prevail against the deposit with B. & co., & the £350 mtge. could not be set up against pltf.; (2) B. & co. did not acquire priority by having got the legal estate, for an equitable incumbrancer cannot, after receiving notice of a prior incumbrance, obtain priority over it by getting in a legal estate from a bare trustee.—HARPHAM v. SHACKLOCK (1881), 19 Ch. 1895. —— ——.]—Testator, after bequeathing legacies & annuities, devised his real estate to three trustees, of whom K. was one, upon trust out of the rents & profits in aid of his personal estate to pay his debts, funeral & testamentary expenses, & the said legacies & annuities, &, subject thereto, to hold the said premises upon trust as to a certain freehold house for K., his heirs & assigns. Testator then disposed of his residue. He died in Mar. 1872. In Sept. 1872, K. assigned his interest under the will by way of mtge. to pltf., who gave notice to K.'s two co-trustees. In 1879 K., by the death of his co-trustees, became sole trustee of the will. In 1890 he deposited the deeds of the house & the probate of the will with defts., his bankers, & executed to them a memorandum of charge to secure an overdraft, & in 1903 he executed to the bank a conveyance of the hereditaments to which the title deeds related by way of mtge. to secure the existing debt & further advances. Defts. did not know, either in 1890 or 1903, of pltf.'s equitable mtge., but on the occasion of their first advance the bank manager examined the deeds without professional assistance. In 1890 all the debts, legacies, & annuities had been satisfied except a legacy of £100 bequeathed to a tenant for life, who was still living, with remainder to her children. In an action to determine the priorities of the mtgees.: —Held: in 1903 the trusts of the will not having been fully executed, K.'s equitable interest had not become merged in his legal estate; the bank, knowing K. to be the surviving trustee of the will, & having notice that what they took from him was part of his trust estate, took it subject to all the subsisting trusts to which it was subject, including the mtge. of 1872, & therefore had not priority over pltf.'s earlier equitable mtge.—PERHAM v. KEMPSTER, [1907] 1 Ch. 373; 76 L. 1910. .] Testator, who died in 1866, devised & bequeathed all his real & personal estate upon trust for sale & conversion, & empowered his trustees to carry on his business for such time as they should see fit, & to employ in the business all the capital which might be invested therein at the time of his decease, & the profits thereof, & to increase or abridge the business & his capital therein, & generally to transact all matters & concerns respecting the business, & to do all acts relative thereto, in the same manner as if they were absolutely entitled to the same. The personal estate of testator comprised nearly the whole of the capital of the business. His real estate consisted of the manufactory & buildings upon which the business was carried on, & for which he received a rent. The trustees carried on the business after testator's death in partnership with other persons; but the firm ultimately became bkpt. In 1869 one of the trustees advanced to his co-trustee £2,000 & the title deeds relating to the manufactory & premises were deposited with him for securing the repayment of the advance with interest. The money was applied for the purposes of the business. This transaction had not been disclosed.

In Jan. 1882, an action was commenced for the administration of testator's estate. In pursuance of an order made in that action, the business was sold in 1883. In Sept. 1882, certain of the beneficiaries mortgaged all their respective shares under the will to secure the repayment to a banking co. of £4,600. The banking co. applied by petition for leave to intervene in the action, & obtain payment of their debt. The question raised was, whether the trustees had power to make an equitable mtge. of real estate, which did not form part of the assets employed in the business, for the purposes of the business :—Held : power to employ other assets in the business was conferred upon the trustees by the authority to increase the capital of the business ; as they could have sold the real estate & used the proceeds in the business, they were not wrong in using the property itself to assist in carrying on the business ; & the mtge. of 1869 had priority over the mtge. of 1882.—Re DIMMOCK, DIMMOCK v. DIMMOCK (1885), 52 L. 1911. —— ——.]—Machinery obtained by a co. under a hire-purchase agreement was fixed to its business premises. Subsequently the co. gave to a bank an equitable mtge. of its premises by deposit of deeds accompanied by written memoranda of charge. The bank had no notice of the hire-purchase agreement. On default in payment by the co. under the hire-purchase agreement the vendor of the machinery gave notice demanding the return of the machinery. A winding-up order was made against the co., & money was still owing to the bank under its memoranda of charge :—Held : the bank being an equitable mtgee. took subject to the hire-purchase agreement, the hire-purchase agreement created an equitable interest by which a subsequent purchaser who had not the legal estate was bound, & the interest of the bank under its mtge. was postponed to the interest of the vendors of the machinery under the hire-purchase agreement.—Re ALLEN (SAMUEL) & SONS, LTD., [1907] 1 Ch. 575 ; 76 L. 1912. —— ——.]—Testator died in 1895, having by his will given his real estate to his son C., & to L. upon trust to sell & divide the proceeds among his four children, including C., each share being settled on trusts for a child for life, & afterwards for the children of that child. L. having died in Aug. 1904, from then till Jan. 1905, C. was the sole exor. & trustee of the will. In Sept. 1904, C. & another severally owed money to M. on promissory notes for £2,000 C. & M. in fraud of the rights of the beneficiaries under the will, M. having full notice of the breach of trust, arranged that the £2,000 should be further secured on part of the trust estate & to carry out the arrangement. C. on Sept. 29, 1904, executed & delivered to M. what purported to be a conveyance on sale of part of the land held in trust to M. in consideration of £2,000. The deed contained the usual receipt for the purchase-money but no part of the £2,000 was ever paid, it being arranged that the deed was to be held as security for the money due on the notes to the extent to which they should be dishonoured. In Apr. 1905, M. deposited the deed with B. & gave him a memorandum charging the land conveyed with £1,000 lent by B. who had no actual or constructive notice that any breach of trust had been committed or that the £2,000 had not been paid by M. & had not been guilty of any conduct which would have made his equity inferior to that of the beneficiaries :—Held : there was no contract of sale, & therefore no vendor's lien but an equity in the beneficiaries to have the property sold & the proceeds divided ; the beneficiaries were not estopped by the receipt from saying that the money had not been paid or that the real transaction was not a sale & purchase ; & the equities of the beneficiaries & B., being equal in every other respect the equity of the beneficiaries must prevail by reason of its priority in point of time.—CAPELL v. WINTER, [1907] 2 Ch. 376 ; 76 L. 1913. —— ——.]—By an agreement in writing, dated Nov. 11, 1910, G. M. & co., Ltd., agreed to supply & erect upon the works owned by the firm of M., J. & co., the predecessors of deft. co., a complete installation of a patent automatic sprinkler for the protection of the premises from fire, at the price of £237, payable by annual instalments. In the event of default being made in any annual instalment, or of any breach of the agreement by the purchasers, the whole unpaid balance of principal & interest was immediately to become due. The agreement further provided that the basis of the contract was that the sprinkler installation remained the sole & exclusive property of the contractors until the whole sum of £237 had been paid, & in the event of default the contractors might enter upon the premises & remove the installation. Deft. co., was incorporated in 1911 & took over the assets & liabilities of the firm of M., J. & co., including their interest under the agreement. In Dec. 1911, deft. co., issued a series of first mtge. debentures containing a charge in the usual form on the undertaking, such charge to be a floating security. On Oct. 18, 1912, a receiver & manager was appointed in an action brought by the debenture-holders to enforce their security. On Oct. 21, the last instalment under the agreement fell due & was not paid. The debenture-holders had no notice of the agreement. On an application by G. M. & co., Ltd., for liberty to enter upon deft., co.'s premises & remove therefrom the sprinkler installation :—Held : the effect of the hire-purchase agreement was to confer upon applts. an interest in the land to which the sprinkler installation was affixed & to authorise them, in the events which had happened, to enter & remove it ; & the interest of the debenture-holders being also equitable the ordinary principles of priorities applied ; & that interest being subsequent in date was therefore postponed to the interest of applts.—Re MORRISON, JONES & TAYLOR, LTD., COOKES v. MORRISON, JONES & TAYLOR, LTD., [1914] 1 Ch. 50 ; 83 L. 1922. ——.]—In 1805 C. agreed to sell a piece of land to W. in fee-simple, for a sum of £380. On investigating the title it was found that C. was only tenant for life, with remainder to his second son in tail. It was agreed, however, that the purchase-money should be paid to C. & W. took a bond from C., dated Jan. 1, 1806, whereby he was bound to W., in the penalty of £760, conditioned to be void if C. & his second son would, within three calendar months after the latter came of age, execute a proper conveyance to W. in fee. W. died in 1819, having by will devised all his residuary real & personal estate to deft., then a single woman. In 1820 deft. married B., & in 1836 B., acting as deft. alleged, without her knowledge, & under a misapprehension of his rights as her husband, obtained from C., & his second son G., who had then attained twenty-one, a conveyance to himself of the land in fee-simple On Oct. 18, 1858, B. deposited the title deeds of the estate with pltf. by way of equitable mtge. B. died in Dec. 1858. B. devised all his real & personal estate to deft. 1924. ——.]—Pltf. & W. were trustees under a settlement, & in 1877 W., who was a solr. in partnership with M., proposed to pltf. an investment of £1,000 of the trust money upon a mtge. of two houses of which M. was the lessee, & he concealed from pltf. the fact that he was interested in the houses. Pltf. accepted the investment, & the lease to M. was assigned by way of mtge. to W. & pltf., & the deeds of the mtged. property were left in the custody of W., who, with the approval of pltf., collected the rents, gave receipts, & paid the money to the cestuis que trust. This went on until 1890. Previously, in 1881, W. had allowed M. to get possession of the lease, & M. granted to deft. an underlease of one of the houses, receiving a premium of £750. The lease was shown by M. to deft.'s solr. to satisfy him that M. had power to grant the underlease, & the lease was then returned to W. Deft. entered into possession under the lease, & has remained in possession since. It was found as a fact that the premium of £750 went into the account of the firm of W. & M., & that W. was an active party to the fraud, which was discovered in 1890, when this firm became bkpt. W. retired from the trust & released & assigned his interest in the trust property to pltf., who brought this action against deft to recover possession of the house & mesne profits. The defence was that, as W., one of the persons in whom the legal estate was at the date of deft.'s purchase, had been a party to the fraud, the legal estate of W. & pltf. must be postponed to the equitable estate of deft. acquired from M.:—Held: as deft. was only an equitable incumbrancer, & as the equitable title of the cestuis que trust was prior in point of time, deft. had no equitable right, as against pltf., to his interest in the trust property, & there should therefore be judgment for pltf.—ISAAC v. WORSTENCROFT (1892), 67 L. 1925. —— Mortgagee without notice—Mortgage by executor—As beneficial owner.]—EXOR., six years after the death of testator, surrendered a lease belonging to testator, & took a renewed lease, including additional property, & at an increased rent, in his own name. He afterwards deposited the lease as security for money advanced to him, which he applied to his own purposes. The renewed lease contained no mention of the surrender, & the mtgee. did not know that the borrower was an exor., or that he was not the beneficial owner of the lease. He did not, however, made any inquiry into the title. An action was afterwards, brought to administer testator's estate, & a consent order was made for the sale of the leasehold property, without prejudice to any right, the mtgee., giving up the lease to facilitate the sale. He claimed to be paid the amount due to him by the exor. out of the proceeds of sale:—Held: the lease was in equity part of testator's estate, & the equity of the estate being prior to the equity of the mtgee., must prevail against it.—Re MORGAN, PILLGREM v. PILLGREM (1881), 18 Ch. 1926. —— ——.]—Bankers take from a customer an equitable mtge. by deposit of title deeds The property comprised in the deeds is subject to a trust of which the bankers have no notice, & the deposit is made in breach of that trust. The trust must prevail against the bankers' lien.

A sum of £3,000 is paid to a person out of the Ct. of Ch. upon his undertaking to apply £2,000 of it in the purchase of a suitable house for himself & wife, which he is to convey to the trustees of his marriage settlement upon certain trusts, & to apply the remaining £1,000 in setting himself up in business. Upon the receipt of the £3,000 he pays the whole to his bankers. He afterwards draws out nearly the whole amount in various sums at various times. Amongst the drafts is one which he delivers in payment for the purchase of a house suitable for himself & wife. Having procured the house to be conveyed to himself in fee, he deposits the title deeds with his bankers as a security for advances without notice to the bankers of the trusts of the settlement. In considering the conflicting claims of the bankers & the trustees of the settlement with respect to the house it must be presumed that the purchase-money for the house was paid out of that portion of the £3,000 which was properly applicable to that purpose.—MANNINGFORD v. TOLEMAN (1845), 1 Coll. 670; 14 L. 1930. —— ——.]—A first mtge. of real estate was made to A. in fee. A second mtge. was then made to B. of the same estate, together with other real estate, by a release & conveyance of the respective premises to C., as a trustee for B., with power of sale. B. afterwards advanced a further sum to the mtgor. on the security of the same estates, but gave no notice of the advance to A. or C. Subsequently C., after inquiry of A. whether he had notice of any incumbrance other than his own & that of which C. was a trustee for B., advanced a further sum to the mtgor. on the same security, & gave notice of his mtge. to A.:—Held: (1) the several mtges. took effect, with regard to the different estates, according to the order of time at which they were respectively created; & their priorities were not affected by the giving, or the omitting to give, notice to the party in whom the legal estate was vested: (2) the doctrine of notice, applicable in determining the priority of charges on choses in action, does not prevail as to equitable estates in land.—WILMOT v. PIKE (1845), 5 Hare, 14; 14 L. 1931. —— ——.]—First mtge. to W., with power of sale, & declaration of trust of residue of moneys arising from the sale, for the persons entitled to the equity of redemption. Second mtge. to R. Third mtge., without notice of the second, to H., who was W.'s solr., & as such had possession of the deeds. Afterwards, other incumbrances. Then W. died, having devised mtge. & trust estates to H., & appointed him & another exors. H. sold under the power, & conveyed the mtged. estate, paid off W.'s mtge. out of the purchase-money, & retained the balance. Subsequently H., for the first time, had notice of R.'s mtge.:—Held: (1) R.'s omission to give notice did not give priority either to H. or to a subsequent incumbrancer, who gave notice before R.; the estate, though subsequently converted, being real estate when the securities were executed; & to real estate the rule, as to notice giving priority, does not apply; (2) since R. was not bound to give notice, his motives for abstaining from giving notice were, in the absence of fraud, immaterial; the rule being that an equitable incumbrancer on real estate is not postponed by any absence of activity in asserting his rights, except such as amounts to participating in fraud, or to constructive fraud; (3) if before the sale H. had the legal estate in the premises (&, as to part, semble, that he had), still, having since parted with it, his opportunity of using it as a tabula in naufragio, to protect his own charge, was gone; & H., having, as devisee of W., paid off W.'s mtge. held the surplus upon trust for the persons entitled to the equity of redemption; & though he might, before notice of R.'s mtge., have paid the surplus to other subsequent incumbrancers, he could not be heard to say he had appropriated it to himself.

A party getting the legal estate acquires no new right in equity in any way. But, equity, regarding all the persons who have incumbrances according to their priorities, considering that the equitable interests pass, first as the legal interest does, by the effect of the deeds, finds itself checked at times . . . by an incumbrancer saying "I have got the legal estate interposed; I insist it is mine at law & there must be a superior equity shown in order to deprive me of my legal estate." It is merely staying the hands of the ct., by resting on that legal estate which this ct. will not deal with, unless a superior equity can be shown (PAGE WOOD, V.-C.).—ROOPER v. HARRISON (1855), 2 K. & J. 86; 69 E. 1932. —— To mortgagor.]—A solr. having in 1883 received from a client a sum of money for investment represented to the client that he had invested it on a specified mtge., whereas in fact the mtge. specified was one previously taken by the solr. in his own name. The solr. paid interest on the amount of the specified mtge. debt to the client down to the client's death in 1885, & to the client's exors. down to his own death in 1888. Shortly before his death, the solr. deposited the title deeds of the mtged. property with his own bankers to secure the overdraft of his account; & he died leaving his account overdrawn to an extent exceeding the value of the mtged. property. Immediately after the solr's death the bank gave notice to the mtgors. of the deposit of the deeds with them. At the date of the deposit the bank had no notice of any claim on behalf of the client, & their notice was prior in point of date to any notice given the exors. of the client:—Held: (1) the solr. was a trustee for his client of the mtge. specified, & there was no negligence on the part of the client, or of his exors. sufficient to deprive them of the prior equity; (2) the bank were not entitled to any priority by reason of their notice to the mtgors. being prior in point of time to that of the exors.—Re RICHARDS, HUMBER v. RICHARDS (1890), 45 Ch. 1933. —— ——.]—An equitable sub-mtgee. by deposit made by a legal mtgee. of land has an equitable estate in land, & therefore, as between two such equitable sub-mtgees., the doctrine of obtaining priority by notice does not prevail. Thus the equitable sub-mtgee. who is later in time does not obtain priority over the earlier by being the first to give notice to the original mtgor.—HOPKINS v. HEMSWORTH, [1898] 2 Ch. 347; 67 L. 1934. —— To building lessors of mortgagors.]—A co. held land under a building agreement from the corpn. of London, under which separate leases of the houses were to be granted as they were built. In Apr. 1883, the co. borrowed money from pltfs., & covenanted to mortgage the houses to them by demise when the leases were granted, & that in the meantime the premises comprised in the building agreement should be a security to pltfs. The building agreement was handed over to pltfs., but no notice of their security was given to the corpn. of London. In Feb. 1886, leases of two of the houses were granted to the co. & immediately afterwards the co. deposited them by way of equitable mtge. with B., J. & co., who had no notice of pltfs.' security:—Held: although the giving notice to the corpn. would probably have prevented the handing over the leases to the co., still, as notice is not requisite to complete a security on real estate, the omission to give such notice was not a neglect of duty by pltfs. on the ground of which they ought to be postponed to the subsequent equitable incumbrancers.—UNION BANK OF LONDON v. KENT (1888), 39 Ch. 1954. —— ——.] — Middlesex Registry Act, 1708 (c. 20), was intended to prevent fraud by secret conveyance, &, consequently, if there has been notice, a subsequent incumbrancer who was first to register does not gain priority.

A married woman, who was equitably entitled for life for her separate use to property in Middlesex, charged her separate estate by an instrument, dated May 29, 1880, with the payment of a debt due from her husband. The property had been previously mortgaged by a deed, dated Apr. 8, 1880, which had not been registered. A receiver had been obtained by pltfs. in the action, who claimed under the deed of May 29:—Held: the deed of Apr. 8 was entitled to priority, notwithstanding the want of registration, on the ground that the instrument of May 29 only operated upon what the married woman could honestly charge.—PUNCHARD v. TOMKINS (1882), 31 W. R. 286.

1955. —— —— Constructive notice.]—(1) Constructive notice of a prior unregistered incumbrance affecting lands in Middlesex is as effectual as actual notice.

Pltfs. were equitable mtgees., by deposit, of title deeds of lands in Middlesex, but the memorandum of deposit was not registered. Defts. were trustees of a settlement to whom the same lands had been subsequently conveyed by the husband, in consideration of marriage. Upon the occasion of the preparation of the marriage settlement no mention was made of the prior charge. Neither the trustees nor the wife's friends carried their investigation of the title far enough to discover that the title deeds were in the hands of pltfs. Defts. duly registered the assignment, & upon the death of the husband some years after, discovered the fact of the prior mtge.: —Held: the gross negligence of defts. at the time of the preparation of the marriage settlement was equivalent to notice to them of a prior adverse title.

(2) The equitable mtgee. held entitled to tack to his security advances made subsequently to the date & registration of the settlement, of which he had no notice at the time of such advances.—WORMALD v. MAITLAND (1865), 6 New Rep. 218; 35 L. J. Ch. 69; 12 L. T. 535; 13 W. R. 832.

1967. —— —— Prior unregistered charge—Subsequent registered assignment for benefit of creditors.]—On Oct. 3, 1906, C. executed a legal mtge. of land situate in Yorkshire to a bank, & that mtge. was duly registered under Yorkshire Registries Act, 1884 (c. 54). C. had previously created an equitable charge on the land in favour of H. & W., but that charge was not registered until Oct. 5, 1907. On Aug. 30, 1907, C. executed a deed of assignment in common form of all his real & personal estate to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors generally, & that deed was registered on Sept. 11, 1907. There were other equitable mtges. which had been created by C. prior to 1907, but which had not been registered. In 1908 the bank sold the property comprised in their security, & after satisfying their claim had a balance in their hands. This balance was claimed by the trustee as against H. & W. on the ground that his deed, though later in date of execution than H. & W.'s charge, was prior to it in date of registration:—Held: (1) upon the construction of the deed, only such interest in the property as C. then possessed passed to his trustee, namely, the property subject to the equitable mtges. upon it, & therefore the question as to priority of registration did not arise; (2) therefore the claim of the trustee must be postponed to the claims of all the prior equitable mtgees. who established them, whether their mtges. were registered or not.—JONES v. BARKER, [1909] 1 Ch. 321; 78 L. S. died in 1854, seised of real estate in the East Riding. The person believed to be her heir-at-law entered into possession, obtained the deeds, mortgaged the property to pltf., & delivered the deeds to him. The mtge. was duly registered as 6 Ann. c. 62, required. Subsequently a will & codicil were discovered, which contained a devise of the property to certain of defts., who then asserted their right, whereupon pltf. filed this bill, claiming priority. The will & codicil were registered, but not until after the bill was filed:—Held: under 6 Ann. c. 62, the mtgee. was entitled to priority over the devisees.—CHADWICK v. TURNER (1866), 1 Ch. A. acted as solr. on behalf of B. in arranging that D. should deposit with a bank the deeds relating to a certain property in Yorkshire for the purpose of indemnifying B. against an overdraft at the bank. The deposit was made but not registered. Subsequently A. took from D. a mtge. by deed of the same property, & having registered such mtge., claimed priority against the mtge. by deposit to the prejudice to B.:—Held: if A.'s claim to priority were allowed he would be guilty of actual fraud towards B., & consequently he ought not to obtain such priority.—BATTISON v. HOBSON, [1896] 2 Ch. 403; 65 L. 1971. —— Mortgage of interest in proceeds of sale.]—A mtge. of an interest in the proceeds of sale under an imperative trust for sale of land in Yorkshire is not registrable under Yorkshire Registries Act, 1884 (c. 54), & consequently the priorities of successive mtges. are determined by the dates of notices to the trustees.

By a settlement of Sept. 9, 1885, freehold land in Yorkshire was conveyed to trustees upon trust to sell the same & hold the proceeds of sale upon trust for B. for life & after her death for C. absolutely. The settlement contained a power to postpone the sale, a trust in the meantime to hold the property upon such trusts as should correspond with the trusts thereinbefore declared concerning the trust funds, & a power to manage the real estate. The settlement was registered in Yorkshire. In 1892 C. borrowed money on mtge. of her reversion; the mtgees. gave notice of their mtge. to the trustees of the settlement, but did not register it under the Yorkshire Registries Act, 1884 (c. 54). In 1895 C. borrowed a further sum on the security of the land, which was still undisposed of. This mtge. & a transfer thereof to L. were registered at Wakefield:—Held: the trust for sale was imperative, & effected an immediate conversion of the realty into personalty & mtges. of proceeds of sale under an imperative trust for sale did not require registration, & the mtge. of 1892 had priority over that of 1895.—GRESHAM LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY v. CROWTHER, [1915] 1 Ch. 214; 84 L. C. Registration in Ireland, Scotland and the Dominions.

1977. Registration in Ireland—Equitable mortgage unregistered—Subsequent registered legal mortgage.]—The non-production, in Ireland, of title deeds to the solr. instructed to prepare a mtge. upon an estate there, will not of itself be deemed a proof that the solr. has acted fraudulently, or even negligently, so as to affect the interests of his client. The construction to be put upon his conduct does not depend on an inflexible rule of law, but upon the circumstances of the case.

Where, therefore, the owner of an estate in Ireland had already created an equitable mtge. upon it by depositing the title deeds with a creditor, which equitable mtge. was not registered, &, afterwards, on being asked for them by a solr. who was about to prepare, for another creditor, a legal mtge. of the same estate, gave an excuse for their non-production, which, under the circumstances, appeared quite satisfactory, & also supplied in his own handwriting a summary statement of their contents; & the solr., in total ignorance of the equitable mtge., & of all that had been previously done, prepared the legal mtge., which was duly registered:—Held: the legal mtge. had priority over the equitable mtge., & was not assailable on the ground that the solr. had improperly acted in preparing it without insisting on the production of the deeds.

It is inconsistent with the policy of the Irish Registration Law to impose on a mtgee., or 1985. Legacy has priority over mortgage.]—Testator devised his real estate, charged with the payment of his debts & legacies, to his eldest son in fee, & appointed him exor. Nine years after testator's death, the devisee, being then in possession, mortgaged the estate, & covenanted against all incumbrances except the legacies. In a suit subsequently instituted by one of the legatees for payment of his legacy, the estate was sold, & the proceeds proved insufficient to satisfy testator's unpaid debts & legacies, together with the mtge. money:—Held: the mtgee.'s title was complete, subject only to the amount of the legacies; &, therefore, after reserving the amount of the legacies, the mtgee. was entitled to the residue of the fund as a security for his debt, & the amount so reserved was assets of testator unadministered, & was, therefore, to be applied, first in satisfaction of his debts, & then, so far as it would extend, in payment of his legacies.—ELAND v. ELAND (1839), 4 My. & Cr. 420; 8 L. 1986. ——.]—If there are general gifts of legacies, & then of the rest & residue, real & personal, blending the whole in one mass, though accompanied by a power to the legatee of the residue, "to dispose of the same in any manner he may think proper," the legacies are a charge on the realty.

Testator gave a legacy, which, if not received, was to form "part of the residue of my property." Then followed a legacy to B.; but if the legatee should die before time for payment, it was to be considered "as part of the residue of my property, & to go & merge in the same." After some small legacies, his will concluded, "All the rest, residue, & remainder of any property I may die possessed of, whether estates, freeholds, etc., etc., bonds, bills, etc., annuities, etc., I devise & bequeath to my son, in the fullest manner I can, with liberty to him to dispose of the same in any manner he may think proper." The son was named as one of the exors., but did not act as such. The will was proved by the other exor. The son mortgaged the real estates:—Held: the legacy to B. was a charge on the real estates, & on a sale of them in the Incumbered Estates Ct., took precedure over the mtges., notwithstanding the general power to the devisee to dispose of the estates in any manner he thought proper.—GREVILLE v. BROWNE (1859), 7 H. 1989. ——.]—An exor., who is also a devisee of an estate charged with the payment of debts, may be presumed by a bonâ fide purchaser or mtgee. of that estate, to be dealing with it for the purposes of the administration, & may give a valid title to it. Such purchaser or mtgee., therefore, will not be bound to look to the application of the money. Mere absence of statement of the purpose for which the money obtained by the sale or mtge. is to be used, will not make the purchaser or mtgee. liable, on the ground of a presumed knowledge that the money was to be applied otherwise than for the payment of the testator's debts. In a case, therefore, in which the Lords were satisfied that the mtgee. himself was, as a matter of fact, entirely ignorant of any intended misapplication of the money by the exor. & devisee of the estate charged & that he had not constructive notice of it through his solr., who distinctly denied any knowledge or even suspicion of it:—Held: though the money was entirely misapplied, the mtge. could not be treated as subject to the debts of testator, & the mtgee.'s title was not, therefore, to be postponed to the claims of the testator's creditors On a creditor of testator, who impeached the validity of the mtge. or purchase, lies the burden of proving that the mtgee. or purchaser had notice of the true state of the facts.—CORSER v. CARTWRIGHT (1875), L. 1990. ——.]—Devisees of an equitable estate in a freehold house deposited the title deeds to secure the payment of a loan made to them by the depositee. The deposit was accompanied by a written memorandum charging the interest of the depositors in the property with the repayment of the sum advanced. Before the deposit a decree had been made, in a suit instituted for the administration of testator's estate, which contained a declaration that the depositors were entitled to the house as tenants in common. After the deposit a creditor of testator obtained in another suit a decree declaring her entitled to a charge upon the house in respect of a debt due to her from the testator. The depositee of the deeds had no notice of this claim when he advanced the money:—Held: the depositee was entitled to priority over the creditor.—BRITISH MUTUAL INVESTMENT Co. v. SMART (1875), 10 Ch. 1991. ——.]—The rule—that a purchaser for value of an asset of testator, from an exor. who is also residuary legatee, acquires a title free from the claims of unsatisfied creditors of testator, if the purchaser took without notice of the unsatisfied debts or of anything which made it improper for the exor. so to deal with the asset—applies in the case of equitable as well as legal assets; provided that neither the exor. nor the ct. administering testator's estate still retain control over the asset.

In 1878 the registered holder of railway stocks covenanted to pay an annuity to the trustees of a settlement during the joint lives of himself & his wife & the life of the survivor. In 1882 he died having bequeathed all his property to his widow, & appointed her his extrix. The widow proved the will, & by various deeds from 1886 to 1892 transferred the stocks to her bankers to secure a debt of her own. In Dec. 1892, the widow gave an equitable charge on the stocks to the pltf. to secure advances made to her. Neither the bankers nor the pltf. when taking their respective securities had knowledge or notice that any debt of testator remained unpaid, or that the widow was not entitled to deal with the stocks as she did, & the pltf., before he had notice that there was any indebtedness of testator, gave notice of his charge to the bankers. The bankers sold the stocks, &, having retained the amount owing to them, paid the balance into ct.:—Held: the pltf.'s charge on the balance had priority over the claims of the settlement trustees.—GRAHAM v. DRUMMOND, [1896] 1 Ch. 968; 65 L. A. Constructive Notice.

(a) In General.

See Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 199.

1995. Nature of—Presumption of knowledge—Too strong for rebuttal.]—(1) Constructive notice I take to be in its nature no more than evidence of notice, the presumptions of which are so violent that the ct. will not allow even of its being controverted. Thus, if a mtgee. has a deed put into his hands which recites another deed which shows a title in some other person, the ct. will presume him to have notice, & will not permit any evidence to disprove it (EYRE, C.B.).

(2) With respect to the general question, the effect of leaving the title deeds in the hands of the mtgor., the most intelligible rule, & in my opinion the most agreeable to justice would have been to say, that if a man takes, as his security for his mtge. a single deed, & leaves the other deeds in the hands of the mtgor. so as to enable him to commit a fraud, that he shall, in all such cases, be postponed, without reference to the quantity of pains or diligence which he exercised to obtain the deeds; for whether the pains be more or less, the mischief is the same; & if I had found the rule so laid down I should have been perfectly satisfied. But it has been decided otherwise in the late cases Beckett v. Cordley, No. 1921, ante, Penner v. Jemmat, No. 2102, post, & Tourle v. Rand, No. 2161, post, which establish the rule that nothing but fraud or gross & voluntary negligence in leaving the title deeds, will oust the priority of the legal claimant. As for the case of Goodtitle v. Morgan, No. 2153, post, the mtgee. must always risk there being an outstanding term in which case the legal estate is out of him (EYRE, C.B.).—PLUMB v. FLUITT (1791), 2 Anst. 432; 145 E. The legacy remained unpaid. The four elder sons in 1890 deposited the title deeds of part of the property with a bank as security for an advance, &, in 1899, they executed a formal mtge. of the property to the bank. The bank, if they had made an investigation of title, would have obtained cognisance of the will which created the charge. The mtgors. practised no concealment:—Held: as the four younger sons were legatees, & as the bank had constructive notice of the charge, the claim of the four younger sons must prevail over the mtge. to the bank.—BANK OF BOMBAY v. SULEMAN SOMJI (1908), 99 L. £6,000, & on her death her successor in title, E., sold the equity of redemption to L. for £2,500 subject to the prior mtge. for £6,000. Certain creditors of J., the original owner, who had recovered judgment in an action against him, & obtained equitable execution on his equity of redemption, brought an action against B. & E., impeaching the validity of the sale to H., & obtained judgment setting it aside as a fraudulent execution of the power of sale, & declaring pltfs. entitled to a right of redemption. L. was not a party to the action, but on receiving notice of it he paid off the mtge. for £6,000, & took a conveyance of the legal estate from the mtgees. At the time when L. purchased the equity of redemption from E., he had no actual notice of any impropriety in the sale by B. to H., nor of any facts affecting the sale not disclosed by the deeds, except that he had seen a valuation which appeared to show that the purchase by H. was at an undervalue, nor did he make any inquiries concerning the circumstances of the sale:—Held: L. was not affected by constructive notice of the impropriety of the sale, & he was protected against the prior equitable interest of pltfs. by his acquisition of the legal estate; the not obtaining further information as to the circumstances under which the sale took place did not amount to culpable negligence.

The maxim Qui prior est tempore, potior est jure is in our law subject to an important qualification that where equities are equal the legal title prevails. Equality here does not mean or refer to priority in point of time. Equality means the non-existence of any circumstance which affects the conduct of one of the rival claimants, & makes it less meritorious than that of the other. Equitable owners who are upon an equality in this respect may struggle for the legal state, & he who obtains it, having both law & equity on his side, is in a better situation than he who has equity only (LINDLEY, L.J.).—BAILEY v. BARNES, [1894] 1 Ch. 25; 63 L. 2007. Disregard of fact—Negligent disregard—Necessity for fraudulent motive.]—In 1816, D. assigned a policy of insurance on his life to a trustee to secure a sum of money owing to W.; & soon afterwards, the solr. of W. caused a memorandum to be entered in the office of the Insurance co., directing that all letters were to be sent to such solr., & the premiums were thenceforth paid by W., through the hands of such solr.; but the insurance co. were not informed on whose behalf the solr. acted. In 1826, D. became bkpt., & his assignees declined to interfere respecting the policy. The premiums continued to be paid by W., through his solr., during his life, & by the exors. of W., through their bankers, after his death. D. died in 1839:—Held: (1) the policy was in the order & disposition of the bkpt., & there was not any notice given to the insurance office of the assignment of the policy to take it out of such order & disposition; (2) the conduct of the assignees did not amount to an abandonment of any right which they had to the benefit of the policy; (3) the exors. of W. had a lien on the policy for the amount of the premiums which had been paid by W., & his estate, & the interest thereon; & they were entitled to payment of the amount thereof out of the moneys payable under the policy.

(4) Semble: negligence, as applied to cases of constructive notice, supposes the disregard of a fact known to the purchaser, which indicated the existence of the fact, the knowledge of which the ct. imputes to him; & such negligence may, without a fraudulent motive, be so gross as to justify the charge of constructive notice.

(5) Semble: a purchaser may be presumed to have investigated every instrument, which directly or inferentially forms a link in the title to the property, but not instruments which are neither directly nor presumptively connected with it, & may only by possibility affect it.—WEST v. REID (1843), 2 Hare, 249; 12 L. 2008. Documents disclosing possible incumbrance.]—The owners of a public house agreed to grant a lease of it at a premium. The intended lessee deposited the agreement with M. & co., brewers, to secure repayment of an advance. The lease was executed & was deposited by the lessee with the landlord's solr. to secure the premium. The lessee obtained it from them for the purpose as he alleged of producing it to the magistrates to enable him to procure a licence. He undertook to return it forthwith but instead of doing so instructed an auctioneer to obtain an advance upon it from other brewers, R. & co. The auctioneers produced to R. & co.'s agent an order from the lessee for the delivery of the lease to R. & co. noticing that this advance was for the purpose of enabling the lessee to pay M. & co. The agent objected to recognise this memorandum & inquired whether the lessee owed anything to M. & co. He was informed by the auctioneers & by the lessee there was nothing due to M. & co. except for goods supplied. He had previously obtained from the lessee himself an order for the delivery of the lease not mentioning M. & co. at all & he obtained the lease on delivering that order. R. & co. advanced money on the deposit. On the lessee's bkpcy.:—Held: the security of R. & co. must be postponed to those of the landlord & of M. & co. although there had been subsequently a demise of the property by the bkpt. to a trustee upon trusts which would extend to the debt of R. & co. & not to that of M. & co. or that of the landlord: the above circumstances being held sufficient to affect R. & co. with notice of the prior equities.—Re BUCKLAND, Ex p. REID (1848), De G. 600: 17 L. 2009. —— Land registry indorsements on documents of title.]—In 1918 C., an exor. & trustee, who bore the same names as his father, testator, who had died in 1908, mortgaged to deft. co., for his own purposes & without the knowledge of his mother who was his co-exor. & co-trustee, leasehold houses which had been assigned in 1907 to the testator by whom the leases, or an attested copy, & the assignments had been registered at the Land Registry, & they bore a red ink indorsement to that effect. The exors. had also been registered as proprietors of the houses in question & were described in the Register as "exors." of testator. When obtaining the loan C. produced the documents which his father had registered but did not produce the probate of his father's will or the land certificates, & fraudulently represented himself to be the person to whom the leases had been assigned. The co. advanced the money to C. without inspecting the Register, believing that he was the absolute owner of the leaseholds, & in executing the mtges. C. in fact personated his father. Upon the instalments falling into arrear the co. made inquiries of C. & obtained the land certificates from him, & discovered that he was one of two exors. & had personated his father, but he assured the co. that the money was borrowed for exorship. purposes. The co. then commenced foreclosure proceedings against the exors., C. & his mother, for whom C., without her authority, entered an appearance. The statement of claim alleged that the mtge. money had been raised by the exors. for exorship. purposes & had been duly executed by C. as exor. & with the knowledge & consent of his mother, & alternatively that the two exors. had been guilty of fraud. No defence was delivered & the subsequent proceedings were served at an address for service given by C., which was not the address of his mother's residence, & she did not have any actual cognisance of them. The co. obtained judgment &, after the order for foreclosure absolute was made, the co. was entered on the Land Register as proprietor of the leaseholds in question, & put the property up for sale. The children of testator, other than C., who, subject to their mother's life interest, were, with C., the ultimate beneficiaries under testator's will, then commenced this action for a declaration that the mtges. & foreclosure order were invalid as against them. New trustees of the will had been appointed before the trial of the action & were co-pltfs.:—Held: (1) C.'s signature to the mtges. was a forgery & as against pltf. beneficiaries the deeds were void; (2) in the circumstances, pltf. beneficiaries were not in fact represented by the exors. in the foreclosure action & were not bound by the judgment therein, or, by virtue of R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 8, estopped from establishing their rights; Ord. 16, r. 8, applies where the exor. or trustee in fact represents the beneficiaries whose interest it is his duty to protect, but does not apply where the beneficiaries have solid grounds for impeaching a transaction between a fraudulent exor. or trustee & pltf.; (3) the mtges. being void, except by estoppel as against the beneficial interest of C., no estate passed, & the question of purchaser for value did not arise. If it had been necessary to determine that question, the Land Registry indorsements on the documents of title were actual notice of the registration & constructive notice of the facts which the co. would have ascertained by inspecting the Register or by requiring the land certificates to be handed over; (4) an Order for foreclosure absolute was not a "transfer for valuable consideration" within Land Transfer Act, 1875 (c. 87), s. 35, & the Land Transfer Rules 140 & 142, so as to confer on the co. a title which pltfs. could not impeach: (5) the ct. had power under Land Transfer Act, 1875 (c. 87), ss. 95, 96, to direct the Register to be rectified by inserting the names of pltf. trustees as proprietors of the leaseholds in question.—Re DE LEEUW, JAKENS v. CENTRAL ADVANCE & DISCOUNT CORPN., [1922] 2 Ch. 540; 91 L. 2010. —— Letter disclosing existence of a principal.]—Bankers advanced to customers £300 to redeem some railway stock which had been transferred to another firm as a security for that sum. The stock was thereupon transferred in blank to the bankers. Subsequently the customers in a letter to the bankers, stated that they had been requested by their "principal" to extend the term of the loan on the stock. The stock actually belonged to a third party, B.:—Held: after the receipt of this letter, the bankers had constructive notice of B.'s right to the stock, & that no subsequent advances made by the bankers to the customers could affect the stock.—LOCKE v. PRESCOTT (1863), 32 Beav. 261; 55 E. Knowledge of nature of mortgagor's business—Mortgage by one partner.]—C. & B., tenants in common in fee, in equal shares, of a messuage & premises, entered into partnership, & it was agreed by the articles that this property should be partnership assets; & it became the place where the business of the firm was carried on. After this B. made a legal mtge. in fee of one moiety to secure his private debt to a person who knew that the property was the place of business of the firm. Some years afterwards B. absconded, & C. was obliged to pay the debts of the firm, all of which had been contracted since the mtge., & a large balance thus became due to him:—Held: as the mtgee., when he took his security, knew that the firm was in possession of the property, he had constructive notice of the title of the partnership, & his claim must be postponed to that of C.; & the circumstance of the debts paid by C. having been incurred since the mtge. did not affect the case.—CAVANDER v. BULTEEL (1873), 9 Ch. Two days before the marriage the solr. of the intended wife, having only then received instructions to prepare arts. of settlement, inquired of L. whether he had the title deeds in his possession unincumbered; he replied that he had, but that they were at his bankers. The solr. made no further inquiry, & prepared arts. of settlement, which were executed. After the marriage L. conveyed the property to the trustee of the arts. upon the trusts therein contained, being for the benefit of the wife & issue of the marriage. A suit was afterwards instituted by the bankers for foreclosure; & the wife claimed to be a purchaser for value without notice:—Held: (1) the solr. had not made sufficient inquiry, & the wife must be taken to have had constructive notice of the mtge.; (2) the husband having contracted to execute a legal mtge. to his bankers, could not deprive them of priority by conveying the property to a party with whom he had entered into a subsequent contract for value, even although such party was a purchaser without notice.—MAXFIELD v. BURTON (1873), L. 2019. ——.]—On Sept. 29, 1904, pltf. was a customer of the Union Bank of London, where she had a current account & a loan account. On the loan account £1,900 was advanced, & there were certain securities deposited to secure that amount. Pltf., being anxious to change her account for family reasons, consulted her solr., C., who had acted for her for many years. As a result, C. informed pltf. that he had arranged with deft. bank to grant the loan on the same terms as she had had with the Union Bank of London, & asked her to sign certain documents in connection with the transaction. The material document was on the common printed form of deft. bank & was as follows: "At the request of Messrs. Rose Innes, Son, & Crick I have transferred or caused to be transferred . . ."—then the shares were mentioned & the names of the manager & sub-manager of deft. bank—" or their nominees as trustees for you to be held as collateral security for your advance to Rose Innes, Son, & Crick." With this document C. went to the deft. bank after the securities were transferred, obtained an addition to the loan of £1,900, & effected the transfer of the securities in such a way as to make them available to secure his general indebtedness to deft. bank, which amounted to some £16,000 which he had from time to time obtained upon other securities. In the year 1911 pltf. required the return of her securities from C., which he promised to do, but they were never in fact returned, as C. absconded. In these circumstances pltf. brought this action to have her securities delivered to her by deft. bank subject to her paying the £1,900 which she admitted having received. It appeared that the general nature of the transactions between C. & deft. bank were that advances were made by deft. bank to C. upon securities which belonged to third parties who were clients of C. in the ordinary sense, & that this was known to deft. bank, though in a number of cases it might be that the clients were clients in respect of a mere financial business carried on by C. independent of his solr.'s business. It was contended for pltf. (inter alia) that the deft. bank had such notice of the fiduciary relationship of C. to pltf. as to prevent their acting on the document:—Held: there was here sufficient notice of the relationship existing or that probably existed between pltf. & C. to have put deft. bank upon inquiry, & accordingly they could not claim to be in a better position than they would have been if they had made inquiries, & therefore pltf. was entitled to redeem the securities upon payment of £1,900.—JAMESON v. UNION BANK OF SCOTLAND (1913), 109 L. T. 850.

2020. Degree of failure to inquire—Dishonest or fraudulent.]—JONES v. SMITH, No. 2605, post.

2021. —— ——.]—Adjoining premises X. & Y. were respectively conveyed to testator by deeds of 1840 & 1843, & then united. He devised them to his sons, who made an equitable mtge. by deposit of the deeds of Y. & the probate of the will. The mtgee. believed, from the sons' statement, that the whole property was comprised:—Held: the property X. was not comprised in the equitable mtge.

A mtgee., who is informed that there are "charges" affecting the property, & is cognisant of two only, cannot claim to be a purchaser without notice of other charges, because he believes that the two, which satisfy the word "charges," are all the charges upon it. He is bound to inquire whether there are any others.

The rule with respect to the consequence of a purchaser abstaining from making inquiries, does not depend exclusively on a fraudulent motive for such abstinence. When the circumstances of a case put a purchaser on inquiry, a false answer or a reasonable answer given to any inquiry, may dispense with the necessity of further inquiry; but where no inquiry has been made, it is impossible to conclude that a false answer would have been given if an inquiry had been made, or such as would have precluded the necessity of any further inquiry.

A real estate belonged to three partners; one retired & conveyed his share to the two others, "subject to all charges & mtges. affecting same," & the two made an equitable mtge. to defts. There were three charges on the property, but defts. knew of two only, & made no inquiry as to there being more:—Held: having notice of the terms of the conveyance to the surviving parties, defts. were bound to inquire whether there were any other charges, & not having done so, that they could not, as against the third equitable charge, insist on being purchasers for valuable consideration without notice.—JONES v. WILLIAMS (1857), 24 Beav. 47; 30 L. 2023. ——.]—In 1908 the legal mtgees. of a freehold house accepted as sufficient root of title a principal deed of 1888 by which the property was conveyed in fee to their mtgor. free from incumbrances, & they did not call for an abstract of title or make any further investigations. The deed of 1888 referred to an earlier deed of 1883 which contained restrictive covenants applicable to the property mtged., but the mtgees. made no inquiry as to the custody or contents of this earlier deed, nor was its production insisted on. It had been in the mtgor.'s possession continuously from 1901, together with the other title deeds of the property. The mtgor. had given an equitable charge on the same property in 1889 to the trustees of his marriage settlement, of whom he was one:—Held: although there had been some negligence by the mtgees. in not requiring an abstract & not further investigating the mtgor.'s title, & also in not inquiring as to the deed of 1883, yet the sum of their carelessness did not amount to such gross negligence as would disentitle them, or a purchaser from them, to the protection of the legal estate, as against the holders of the prior equitable charge. The "gross negligence" in cases of this description which would render it unjust to deprive a prior incumbrancer of his priority meant, at least, carelessness of so aggravated a nature as to amount to the neglect of precautions which an ordinary reasonable man would have observed, & to indicate an attitude of mental indifference to obvious risks.

I apprehend that by the words "gross negligence" something more is meant than mere carelessness; it must at least be carelessness of so aggravated a nature as to amount to the neglect of precautions which the ordinarily reasonable man would have observed & to indicate an attitude of mental indifference to obvious risks. If there are no circumstances suggestive of risk I doubt whether the neglect to make inquiries by which the existence of such risk might have been disclosed would as a general rule amount to "gross negligence" (EVE, J.).—HUDSTON v. VINEY, [1921] 1 Ch. 98; 90 L. J. Ch. 149; 124 L. T. 305; 65 Sol. Jo. 59.

2028. ——.]—A purchaser who without requiring delivery or production of the title deeds takes a title from a mtgee. who has deposited the deeds by way of sub-mtge. is affected with constructive notice of the sub-mtge., & the legal estate conveyed to the purchaser is in his hands subject to the equitable incumbrance, & this notice will raise a trust to the amount of the sub-mtge. It is immaterial whether the purchaser employs a solr. or not, & whether the solr., if one is employed, informs the purchaser of the sub-mtge. or not.

B. mortgaged two freehold houses to C., a solr., for £2,100. C. then deposited the mtge. & title deeds with his bankers to secure the balance of his banking account, which continued to be overdrawn for more than £10,000, until his bkpcy. in 1902. The bank advisedly omitted to give notice of their security to B. Subsequently B. & C. mortgaged one of the houses to H. for £650, which was paid to C. in partial discharge of the original mtge. debt, & the house was expressed to be discharged from that mtge.; & they mortgaged the other house to W. for £550 on precisely similar terms. B. also gave C. a second mtge. on both houses to secure £900, the balance remaining due on the original mtge. In the three last-mentioned mtges. C. acted as solr. for all parties, none of whom had any actual knowledge of the bank's sub-mtge. In an action by the bank to enforce their security:—Held: (1) H. & W. were affected with constructive notice of the sub-mtge., & were respectfully trustees of the legal estate for the bank; but (2) B. was not bound to require production of the title deeds on paying off part of the original mtge. debt; (3) semble: he was not affected with notice of the sub-mtge. & was discharged from liability under the original mtge. to the extent of the two sums of £650 & £550.

It is well settled that a purchaser, in which term I must be understood to include a mtgee. or a transferee of a mtge. of land will be deemed to have notice of all the facts which he would have learned upon a proper investigation of the title, under a contract containing no restrictions of his right in that respect (JOYCE, J.).—BERWICK & CO. v. PRICE, [1905] 1 Ch. 632; 74 L. 2029. Circumstances putting mortgagee upon inquiry—Notice of judgment.]—(1) Notice of a judgment against a vendor, is sufficient notice to put a purchaser upon making further inquiry; & if he neglect it, & it afterwards appear that instead of a judgment the party has a specific incumbrance on the property, he will be bound by it.

(2) The mtgee. in this case has acted in an extremely dishonest way; knowing of pltf.'s incumbrance he deals with the mtgor. behind his back. He says, I know pltf. has this charge, but will oust him of his right; I cannot allow such a mtgee. to have his costs; they are not costs imposed by any contract between the parties (RICHARDS, C.B.).—TAYLOR v. BAKER (1818), 5 Price, 306; Dan. 71; 146 E. 2030. —— Trade usage.]—An equitable mtge. may be created of copyholds, by the mere deposit of the copy of ct. roll. It is therefore not sufficient for the protection of a purchaser or mtgee. of copyholds, that he should search the ct. rolls for incumbrances; he ought to require the vendor or mtgor. to produce an abstract of his title & the copy of his admission to the copyhold premises; & if the latter document is not forthcoming, its non-production must be reasonably accounted for.

Where the creditor of a publican in London took from the latter a legal mtge. of copyhold premises as a security for an antecedent debt, &, at the time of taking this security, knew that the publican was indebted to his brewers, & likewise was aware of the ordinary practice in London of publicans depositing their leases with their brewers by way of mtge.:—Held: the creditor had such notice of the transactions between his debtor & the brewers, as would have put a prudent man on further inquiry; &, having omitted to make such further inquiry, the equitable security of the brewers had priority over his legal security.—WHITBREAD v. JORDAN (1835), 1 Y. & C. 2031. —— Disclosure in deeds—Abstract.]—(1) Under a marriage settlement containing the usual powers of sale & exchange, with power to the trustees, of whom one was a minor, with the consent in writing of the wife, to lend the whole or part of the proceeds to the husband on his bond, the trustees, in order to make the loan, inconsiderately sold the estate under the power of the family solr., who, as owner thereof, raised a sum of money by way of mtge., of which part was paid to the husband. The solr. afterwards resold the estate, no money being paid to the husband, who, for valuable consideration, mortgaged it to other persons, & soon after became insolvent. On a bill filed by the infants interested under the settlement, impeaching the sale:—Held: they were entitled to have the inheritance reconveyed, free from incumbrance, to the uses of the settlement.

(2) The solr. having funds in his hands, the property of another client, applied them in discharging the prior mtge. for raising the money lent to the husband, &, as owner of the estate, executed a mtge. to his client for the amount advanced:—Held: there being an infirmity in his own title, he could convey no valid equitable interest to his mtgee.

(3) The husband, as purchaser from the solr., being in treaty for a loan on mtge. of the estate, abstracts were delivered, which disclosed the marriage settlement, the conveyance to the solr. as purchaser under the power, the covenant to [illegible] by the husband, & the deed of confirmation by the infant trustee; the mtge. being completed:—Held: the abstract disclosed what ought to have put the mtgees. on inquiry; & that they were affected with notice.

The duties of trustees selling under a trust or power to sell are not properly discharged by selling to the family solr. without proper caution & previous inquiry as to the value, the sale being a contrivance to raise money to lend to one of the cestuis que trust, to whom the trustees had power to lend it.—ROBINSON v. BRIGGS (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 188; 21 L. There were separate judgments, at the suit of D., against A. & against B., dated in 1810 & 1812, but a warrant of attorney given by D. in 1819, authorised satisfaction to be entered on the roll as to them. There was no judgment against them jointly for the sum stated in the mtge. The mtgee. caused satisfaction to be entered on the roll as to the separate judgments of 1810 & 1812, but made no further inquiries:—Held: as the mtge. itself had recited a joint judgment for a specific sum, the mtgee. had been guilty of negligence in not looking further into the matter, & must therefore be taken to have had a proper notice of the unsatisfied claim under the deed of 1823.—MONTEFIORE v. BROWNE (1858), 7 H. 2034. —— —— —— ——.]—Under a deed of assignment & transfer of mtge. dated in Dec. 1852, pltf. became the absolute mtgee. of four leasehold houses, the equity of redemption being vested in H., who was pltf.'s solr. In Apr. 1856, H. wrote to pltf., asking him to come to his office & sign leases of the four houses, as he thought it was a good time to put up the property for sale. Pltf. accordingly called at the office of H., & there executed, without examination, four deeds, which H., represented, & pltf. believed, to be leases of the four houses at a rack rent. In Aug. 1858, H. absconded, & was made bkpt. Pltf. then discovered that the four deeds which he had signed were made between himself of the first part, H. of the second part, & J., therein described as of 10, Canonbury-place, spinster, of the third part. Each of them witnessed that, in consideration of £1,000 paid by J. to H., with the consent of pltf., as the purchase-money for the premises, pltf. demised & H. demised & confirmed one of the four houses to J., her exors., etc., for a term of years, being the whole of the original term less one year. It turned out that 10, Canonbury-place was H.'s private residence, that J. was his nursemaid, & that no consideration money was paid to pltf. by her, or by any one. In the meantime three deeds, purporting to be mtges., had been executed. By one of them, executed in Dec. 1856, to which J., still described as of 10, Canonbury-place, H. & one of defts., N., were parties, reciting two of the said indentures of Apr. 1856, two of the houses were, in consideration of £1,300 paid by deft. N., assigned by J. to deft. N. by way of mtge., to secure the repayment of £1,300 & interest, with a [illegible] & several covenant for payment by J. & H. [illegible] mtges., to which H. was not a party, each reciting one of the deeds of Apr. 1856, were effected by way of demise of the remaining two houses by J. to two other defts. The mtge. moneys were paid to H., as agent for J. Afterwards, by a deed of Apr. 1858, made between J. & H., reciting that J. was a trustee only for H., all the interest of J. under the deeds of Apr. 1856, was assigned to H. Pltf. filed the bill to have the deeds of Apr. 1856, set aside as fraudulent & void. Defts. claimed to hold the property as securities for the sums advanced by them:—Held: the deeds of Apr. 1856, were wholly void, & must be delivered up to be cancelled.

Both parties being the victims of fraud, the occasion of defts. being imposed upon, namely, when they were advancing money, required extraordinary caution; but otherwise as to pltf.

The employment by all defts. of same solr., & the way in which they conducted the transaction, exposed them to the consequences of notice communicated through him.

By the recital of the deeds of Apr. 1856, in their mtge. deeds defts. had constructive notice that pltf. was a mtgee., & that the transaction of Apr. 1856, was an extraordinary transaction; & were put upon inquiry as to whether the pretended mtgor. was not a fictitious client.—OGILVIE v. JEAFFRESON (1860), 2 Gift. 353; 29 L. 2038. —— —— —— ——.]— Testator at the time of his death was the registered owner of certain shares in an American railroad, for which he held certificates of ten shares each. After testator's death, in order that the shares might be registered in their names, so that they might be enabled to receive the dividend, &, if necessary, to sell, the exors. signed blank transfers indorsed on the certificates, & delivered them to their broker. The broker fraudulently deposited them with a bank as security for advances. According to American law, the transferee of the certificates properly indorsed has a good legal & equitable title to the shares. In the present case the indorsement was not attested according to the requirements of the rules of the co. The exors. brought an action against the bank, claiming to be entitled to the shares. The judge decided in favour of the bank:—Held: although according to American law the transfers signed in blank would have given the bank a legal & equitable title to the shares, yet that as the certificates were not negotiable instruments, & the transaction took place in England, the question whether the bank had a good title must be decided according to English & not American law; & the bank were put upon inquiry by the absence of the due attestation, & could not have a better title than their transferor, who had no authority to dispose of the shares, but held them for the exors.; & the exors. had not done anything by which they were estopped from questioning the title of the bank.—COLONIAL BANK v. CADY & WILLIAMS, LONDON CHARTERED BANK OF AUSTRALIA v. CADY & WILLIAMS (1890), 15 App. Cas. 267; 60 L. 2041. —— Statements by party.]—On Jan. 18, 1883, A., a solr., obtained from his sisters B. & C., their signatures to two deeds, by which, in alleged consideration in each case of the release of a debt of £400 & payment to them of £300, they conveyed their shares of freehold property, which was subject to a mtge. to K., to A. in fee. No money was at the time due from B. & C. to A., nor was any payment whatever made to them. The deeds were not read over or explained to B. & C., who had no idea that they were thereby conveying their property, & signed in full reliance on A.'s statement that he was going to clear off the mtge. & wanted to send the deeds to K. On the next day A. deposited the deeds with a bank as security for an advance. In applying for the advance before the execution of the deeds, A. had told the managers that B. & C., who were joint owners with himself of the property, were going to convey & "were assisting with the deeds," but that nothing would be paid to them as consideration money, as the money was to be invested in a colliery in which A. was interested. The manager handed over the deeds to the solr. of the bank & merely told him that he was to exercise great care & diligence in investigating the title. The solr. being dead, it did not appear what inquiries were made by him, but the advance was made to A. A. having absconded, the property was claimed by the bank as equitable mtgees., & the claim was resisted by B. & C. on the ground that the conveyances, having been obtained by fraud & misrepresentation, were void as against them. They also relied on deeds which purported to be reconveyances of the property by A. to B. & C., of Jan. 18, 1883, which were attested but did not bear a seal, & which had only been discovered amongst A.'s papers after he absconded:—Held: (1) inasmuch as B. & C., though they might not understand the nature of the deeds, knew they were executing something which dealt in some way with their property, the deeds of Jan. 18, 1883, were not void but voidable only. But as the statements made by A. to the bank manager were such as to have clearly put the bank upon inquiry, which would, if made, have led to the detection of the fraud & to a refusal of the advance, & therefore to have affected the bank with constructive notice of the fraud, the equity of the bank must, on the ground of their negligence, be postponed to that of B. & C.

2042. No inquiry as to authority of mortgagor—To deal with property—Revocation of authority.]—J. was entitled at the time of his death to the benefit of an agreement for a lease of property on the completion of rebuilding & repairs. He died intestate, leaving his three daughters, pltfs., & his son F., his next of kin. F. took out letters of administration. On F.'s representation that £400 was necessary to enable him to complete the building, his sisters signed an authority to him to borrow upon mtge. of the houses such money as he might require for that purpose, & to charge their respective shares with the interest thereof. F. completed the repairs, & obtained a lease to himself as legal personal representative of J. This lease together with the authority given him by pltfs., he deposited with S. as security for a loan. He subsequently settled the administration account with pltfs., & informed them, as they deposed, that he had not borrowed any money under the authority they had given him. They did not require him to deliver up the authority. Some years after, F., who had already mortgaged his own share in the property to S., executed a further mtge. of his sister's shares, purporting to be made under the authority, & falsely reciting that £2,712 had been advanced by S. for the completion of the rebuilding. F. afterwards became bkpt. An action having been brought by pltfs. against S. for re-assignment of pltfs.' shares in the leaseholds:—Held: S., having neglected to inquire of pltfs. whether the authority was a subsisting one when he advanced the money, or to require their concurrence in the mtge., they were entitled to an assignment of their three fourths of the lease.—JONES v. STÖHWASSER (1881), 16 Ch. 2043. ——— ———]—S., to enable E. to procure an advance, executed blank transfers of registered stock, & handed them to E. with the certificates, & also delivered to E. bonds of American cos. payable to bearer. E. obtained advances from M., & delivered to him the transfers, certificates, & bonds. M. in turn delivered them, along with other securities, to several banks to secure loans made to himself for a larger amount. The blank transfers were then filled up with the names of the banks' nominees & registered. M. had acted according to a course of business usual with money-lenders & known to the banks, to mix the securities pledged by borrowers & obtain advances on the entire mass. M. having become bkpt., the banks claimed to hold S.'s securities against the whole amount of M.'s indebtedness to them:—Held: the banks, having reason to believe that the securities were not, or might not be, the property of M., were bound to inquire as to his authority to deal with them, & having neglected to do so, were not purchasers for value without notice; it made no difference whether the bonds) were negotiable instruments or not; & S. was entitled to redeem on payment of the advances obtained by E. from M.—SHEFFIELD (EARL) v. LONDON JOINT STOCK BANK (1888), 13 App. Cas. 333; 57 L. 2044. Where rents of mortgaged property paid to agent—Duty to inquire as to principal.]—A tenant's occupation is notice of all that tenant's rights, but not of his lessor's title or rights; but actual knowledge that the rents are paid by the tenants to some person whose receipt is inconsistent with the title of the vendor is notice of that person's rights. H. executed a conveyance of freehold property to one G., an auctioneer, which purported to be made in consideration of £12,000. It was assumed, although not proved, that no part of the purchase-money was in fact paid, & that H. remained the true owner of the property. The tenants of the property continued to pay their rents to W., a house agent who collected them on behalf of H. G. obtained advances to himself on the security of the property, & executed legal mtges. of it to defts. Defts. had no express notice that G. was trustee of the property on behalf of H., or that H. was in receipt of the rents, but a valuer, who surveyed the property on their behalf, inquired of the tenants as to whom they paid their rents, & discovered that they paid them to W. He was not, however, told on whose behalf W. received them. H. & G. had since died. Pltf., who was H.'s widow & tenant for life under his will, brought an action against defts. to have the conveyance delivered up to be cancelled:—Held: it is not the duty of a purchaser or mtgee. to inquire of the tenants as to whom they pay their rents, either under Conveyancing Act, 1882 (c. 39), s. 3, or under the law as it stood independently of that Act, & the action must be dismissed.—HUNT v. LUCK, [1902] 1 Ch. 428; 71 L. Where in such a case the mtge. debt is afterwards settled upon trusts which are substantially trusts for the benefit of the original mtgee., the trustees have no higher rights than their cestuis que trust has before the settlement. Where a mtge. professes to be made in consideration of a sum down, & which is by the deed made immediately payable, whereas the contract was for an annuity, & the consideration was not to be payable till after the death of a person named, such mtge. is fraudulent & void as against a mtgor. who joined therein as surety only.—SPAIGHT v. COWNE, EDWARDS v. SPAIGHT (1863), 1 Hem. & M. 359; 1 New Rep. 550; 71 E. 2048. —— Solicitor heir-at-law—Priorities of devisees.]—Testatrix, who died in 1871, by her will devised real estate in Middlesex to trustees upon trust for sale The will was not registered in Middlesex. The heir-at-law of testatrix having learned that the will had not been registered, mortgaged the property to different mtgees., & registered the mtges. The mtge. deeds were prepared & registered by the heir-at-law himself. The surviving trustee received the rents of the property down to 1878, when he died; & in 1879 a receiver was appointed in an action to administer the estate of testatrix. The property was sold in 1882 under an order of the ct., & notice of the mtges. was then given by the mtgees. to the purchasers, & the purchase-moneys were paid into ct., subject to the claims of the mtgees. The heir-at-law died in 1885. An application was made to transfer the purchase-moneys to the account of the devisees under the will. The mtgees. resisted the application on the ground that Middlesex Registry Act, 1708 (c. 20), gave them a title, because the will had not been registered. Neither of the securities was for moneys advanced, but both for old debts, & the heir-at-law acted in the mtge. transactions as agent of both the mtgees.:—Held: if persons claiming under the Act had notice of the will, they could not set up the title of the heir-at-law; in the present case the mtgees. were affected by the notice which their agent the heir-at-law possessed; & consequently their claims failed.—Re WEIR, HOLLINGWORTH v. WILLING (1888), 58 L. 2049. General rule.]—The rule of affecting a person with notice of the title of another by reason of his agent's having notice of it, had not been carried so far as to affect him with such notice, unless where the agent has it at the time of his transaction with him; & that, as the notice which the attorney had of the settlement in the present case was two years before the mtge., the mtgee. could not be affected by it. This is one ingredient for continuing the injunction; & another ingredient is, that the mtgee. has laid by, & let Samuel Steed go on & build upon the premises without giving him notice of the mtge. The settlement contained no power to mtge. the property. The house required repairs & one S., a solr., arranged with pltfs., who were clients of his, for an advance on the security of the house. S. attended to the completion of the assignment to the trustees & also attended to the completion of the mtge. to pltfs., which was afterwards executed, but he did not investigate the title & the existence of the trust was not disclosed, though he was aware of it:—Held: as S. had acquired his knowledge of the settlement as the solr. of the mtgees., while he was carrying through the transaction of the loan on mtge., the mtgees. were affected with constructive notice of the trust & were not entitled to judgment for foreclosure. —MEYER v. CHARTERS (1918), 34 T. 2053. Solicitor acting in previous mortgage transactions—Recollection not inferred.]—In June, 1875, A. mortgaged his share of trust property to E. by deed, which did not disclose any prior charge, & contained the usual covenant by A. that he was entitled to assign free from incumbrances. Notice of this mtge., & of a further charge created in May, 1877, was served on behalf of E. on the trustees of the property in Nov. 1881. A.'s share was subject to a prior mtge. to B., a solr., who was paid off in 1873, when a fresh mtge. was executed to C. which in July, 1874, was transferred by C. to D., with a further charge in Feb. 1881. B. was solr. for the trustees & A. the mtgor., & had acted as solr. for C. & D. in the mtge. transactions of 1873 & 1874, & also as solr. for E. in the mtge. transaction of June, 1875. This was never done. In 1862, after the wife had attained her majority, the husband & wife mtged. the wife's real estate to secure money advanced to the husband. The mtgee. was informed by the husband & wife that there was no settlement, & although the person who acted as solr. for both parties was aware of its existence, he concealed it with the acquiescence of the husband & wife from the mtgee. In 1865 the mtgee. discovered the existence of the settlement. The mtge. deed, by mistake, was not effectually acknowledged by the wife till after the mtgee. had received notice of the settlement. On a bill filed by the mtgee:—Held: in the face of the evidence of concealment the mtgee. was not affected by notice to the person who acted as his solr; although the wife's estate did not pass to the mtgee. till after he had received notice of the settlement, yet the misrepresentations of the wife constituted a fraud, which bound her estate, & prevented her from disappointing the mtgee., &, consequently, the mtgee. had priority over the persons interested under the settlement.—SHARPE v. FOY (1868), 4 Ch. (e) Agent Party to Fraud.

2070. Whether knowledge imputed to mortgagee—Presumption that fraud concealed by agent.]—Where one solr. is employed in a mtge. transaction, he is to be considered as solr. both for mtgee. & mtgor., & notice to such solr. is notice to the mtgee.; & where the solr. was himself the author of a fraud which affected the title, & the fraud was committed under circumstances, apparent upon the face of the deed fraudulently obtained, which would have excited the suspicion of a professional man, & have led to inquiry:—Held: the circumstances, under which the fraud was committed, was sufficient to fix the mtgee. with constructive notice, & if, in any mtge. or other transaction, a party does not use the precaution, which common prudence requires, to employ a solr., he is in the same situation with respect to constructive notice, as he would have been, if he had employed a solr.—KENNEDY v. GREEN (1834), 3 My. & K. 699; 40 E. 2071. —— ——.]—The case of Kennedy v. Green, No. 2070, ante, establishes a very important principle but one which must be very cautiously applied to the cases of notice of facts given to the solr. employed by a client. That case establishes that if the solr. employed by the client was the actual perpetrator of a fraud, it is reasonably certain that he would not communicate that fact to his client & that consequently the client cannot be treated as having had notice of that fact (ROMILLY, M.R.).—THOMPSON v. CARTWRIGHT (1863), 33 Beav. 178; 33 L. of the trust funds, upon mtge. of real estate, of which he took a conveyance to himself & his co-trustees, & obtained possession of the title deeds. C., the mtgor., was a client of W., who was a solr. Afterwards W. fraudulently handed over all the deeds to C. C. suppressed the mtge. deeds, & deposited the rest, in Mar. 1865, with a bank to secure his current account. The manager of the bank requiring a certificate of title, C. referred him to W., who signed a certificate, in the manager's handwriting, at the foot of the memorandum of deposit: "I hereby certify that Mr. C. has a good title to the above properties," for which the bank paid him a fee. In 1868 W. became bkpt., whereupon the fact of the deposit with the bank was discovered by the co-trustee & the beneficiaries; & the bank were informed of the trustees' claim. In 1869 C. died, & the mtge. deeds could not be found. In 1873 W. died. On bill by the beneficiaries & surviving trustee of the settlement against the bank, praying for a declaration that pltfs. were first mtgees., & for delivery up of the title deeds:—Held: by reason of the fraud of W. notice of the first mtge. could not be imputed through him to the bank, & the bank were mtgees. for value without notice of the prior mtge.—WALDY v. GRAY (1875), L. 2073. ——.]—(1) Pltf. through his solr. contributed £500 & the solr. £300 to a loan of £800 on deposit of deeds. The solr. subsequently took a mtge. to himself for the £800. The solr. afterwards deposited the title deeds of the mtged. property with a bank as security for a loan of £400:—Held: pltf. had priority for his £500 over the security of the bank.

(2) Pltf. had lent money to a solr. on the security of the deposit of title deeds of land in Middlesex with a letter charging the land, the legal estate in which was outstanding. The solr. afterwards, by way of security for money due to a client, made a mtge. of the land to the client, which mtge. was registered:—Held: the client must be presumed to have had notice of pltf.'s charge, which therefore, though unregistered, retained priority.

In cases of this sort it is familiar law that qui prior est tempore, potior est jure. That priority no doubt may be displaced by showing negligence or fraud on the part of the mtgee. who is earlier in time or by showing a better equity on the part of the later mtgee. but one or other of these things must be shown (FRY, J.).—BRADLEY v. RICHES (1878), 9 Ch. 2076. ——.]—It was alleged that a solr. was a party to a fraud, by obtaining conveyances from a judgment debtor to defeat the judgment creditor. To enable him to raise the money to complete these conveyances, he applied to A. to lend the judgment debtor money on mtge. of the lands affected with the judgment. A. had not the money to lend; but told the solr. that he had a niece who had, & which she desired to invest on mtge. A. obtained the assent of his niece to lend her money, & she having entrusted it to A., A. paid the money to the solr.'s clerk, & took a deposit of the title deeds to the lands. A formal mtge. to the niece was afterwards completed:—Held: the niece was not affected with constructive notice of the fraud through the solr., & bill dismissed as against her with costs.—EASTHAM v. WILKINSON (1859), 33 L. 2088. —— Assistance in or connivance at—In creation of subsequent charge.]—C., the manager of a joint stock co., executed a legal mtge. to the co. of his own freehold estate, & handed over the title deeds to them. The deeds were placed in a safe of the co., which had only one lock having duplicate keys, one of which was intrusted to C., as manager. Some time afterwards C. took out of the safe the deeds, except the mtge., & handed them to W., to whom at the same time he executed a mtge. for money advanced to him by her, without notice of the co.'s security:—Held: the mtge. of the co. had priority over the mtge. to W.

The ct. will postpone a legal mtge. to a subsequent equitable security: (a) where the legal mtgee. has assisted in or connived at the fraud which led to the creation of the subsequent equitable estate, of which assistance or connivance the omission to use ordinary care in inquiring after or keeping the title deeds may be sufficient evidence where such conduct cannot otherwise be explained; or (b) where the legal mtgee. has made the mtgor. his agent with authority to raise money, & the security given for raising such money has by misconduct of the agent been represented as the first estate.

The solrs. represented that the sum of £11,000, part of these moneys, was invested on mtge. of freehold property at A. belonging to a firm, & the client made no further inquiry. The solrs. were in fact the holders of a mtge. for £55,000 upon property X. at A., belonging to the firm, & they repaid themselves £11,000, of the £55,000 with the client's money. The firm afterwards bought property Y. at A., & mortgaged it in fee to a bank. The solrs. released the firm from the mtge. debt of £55,000 on property X., & took from them a mtge. for £50,000 on properties X. & Y., subsequently by arrangement with the firm purchasing the equity of redemption in both properties, & selling them for shares to a limited co. into which the firm was, through their instrumentality, converted. These transactions all took place without the knowledge of the client:—Held: (1) the solrs. must be treated as having become trustees for the client of £11,000 out of the £55,000 secured by mtge. on property X.; & having improperly as against the client up that mtge. in exchange, the client had a right under the circumstances to claim a charge for £11,000 & interest upon property Y., in which the legal estate was outstanding, as well as upon property X.; (2) there had been under the circumstances no such negligence or want of prudence on the part of the client as to postpone him, & he was entitled to priority to the limited co. to a charge on property Y. in which the legal estate was outstanding.—Re VERNON, EWENS & CO. 2113. ——— ——— Onus of proof.]—(1) The authorities establish that a purchaser from a person in possession, purchasing without notice of any prior charge or trust, & obtaining a conveyance of the legal estate from a trustee of a satisfied term, or a mtgee. whose mortgage is satisfied, will be protected in this ct. against a prior incumbrancer or cestui que trust, provided the party so conveying the legal estate have no notice of the prior trust or incumbrance. But it has never yet been decided that, where a party so conveying has notice of an express prior trust or incumbrance, the purchaser can protect himself therefrom by means of the legal estate.

Semble: such a decision would be contrary to the principles of this Court.

(2) J., believing himself & three others to be entitled under a will to four-eighths of certain freehold & copyhold estates, joined them in a mtge. of all his estate in the four-eighths to P. Subsequently it was discovered that the supposed last will had been revoked by a later will, by which all the estates were devised to J. for life but subject to several annuities, with remainders over:—Held: although P. had acquired the legal estate in this one-eighth for valuable consideration, as it were, by accident, & without notice that the former will had been revoked, so that his conscience was not affected by any of the trusts to which, by the subsequent will, the estate was subjected, he must hold subject to those trusts, since the will by which they were created was the very instrument upon which his title to the legal estate depended.

(3) In order to postpone any party to a cause in respect of a prior mtge. or incumbrance, on the ground that you have got the title deeds, it must be shown that you have got them through gross negligence on the part of the person you seek to postpone; & the onus is on you of showing this.

(d) Negligence in Custody of Deeds.

2133. Mere parting with deeds—Unaccompanied by fraud or gross negligence.]—Bill to charge a trustee, as having by delivering the title deeds to the tenant for life enabled him to make a mtge. of a settled estate as tenant in fee, dismissed; the fraudulent purpose of enabling him to mtge. resting upon the evidence of a single witness, & being positively denied by the answer; as far as the allegations of the bill gave an opportunity of answering; but without costs, on the ground of negligence; & without prejudice to an action; & with an option to pltf. to take an issue.

The doctrine at last is, that the mere circumstance of parting with the title deeds, unless there is fraud, concealment, or some such purpose, or some concurrence in such purpose or that gross negligence, that amounts to evidence of a fraudulent intention, is not of itself a sufficient ground to postpone the first mtgee. C. having obtained the deeds from B., in whose custody they were deposited, made a second equitable mtge. of his moiety to S., who, at the time of taking his security, had no notice of the prior charge. 2138. Delivery to solicitor of mortgagee—Fraudulent conduct of solicitor.]—A solr. took a mtge.

in fee from a client, & entered into possession of the mtged. premises. He afterwards transferred the mtge. of another client, & delivered to him the title deeds, but remained in possession as the visible owner of the property, paying interest on the mtge. money to the transferee. Afterwards, in Jan. 1841, the transferee, upon the application of the solr., delivered to him the title deeds, except the deeds of transfer, for the purpose of preparing an abstract for a proposed purchaser of the estate. The purchase was delayed some time, in consequence of a defect of title, but was completed in May, 1841, when the purchase-money was paid to the solr., & the title deeds, with the exception before mentioned, were delivered to the purchaser, who was let into possession, without notice of the transferee's title. In July, 1842, the solr. absconded, & then, for the first time, the purchaser had notice of the transferee's title:—Held: if the transferee had not, before July, 1842, notice of the payment of the purchase-money to the solr., & had not authorised or assented to such payment, he was not to be postponed to the purchaser.—STEVENS v. STEVENS (1845), 2 Coll. 20; 14 L. 2141. —— —— ——.]—A mtgee. of a leasehold house gave up the indenture of lease to his mtgor., in order that it might be shown to an intending purchaser, who wished to see what the covenants in it were; the mtgor. concealed from the purchaser the fact of the existence of an incumbrance on the property, & produced the lease to him, & left it in his possession; within a week afterwards, the purchaser accepted a conveyance, paid his purchase-money, & took possession of the house without any notice of the existence of the mtge.; but the solr. of the mtgee. deposed, that, in an interview which he had had before the completion of the purchase with the solr. of the purchaser, he had informed the latter that a client of his was to receive a considerable sum out of the purchase-money, & had requested to have notice of the time when the money was to be paid; &, though the solr. of the purchaser denied that any such interview had taken place, before the completion of the purchase, a jury gave a verdict in favour of the statement made on that point by the solr. of the mtgee.:—Held: the mtgee. was not to be postponed to the purchaser.—MARTINEZ v. COOPER (1826), 2 Russ. 198; 38 E. 2142. —— Sale by mortgagor—Mortgagee having no notice of fraud.]—Where a mtgee. not in possession lent the title deeds to the mtgor., who thereby was enabled to effect a sale to the occupier of the mtged. premises:—Held: the mtgee. having no notice of the fraud, & not having any reason to suppose the lessee to be anything more than an ordinary tenant, an injunction to stay an action of ejectment by the mtgee. was refused.—TEMPERLEY v. RAPER (1847), 9 L. T. O. S. 511.

2143. —— Purported return of same deeds—Different deeds in fact returned.]—Under the will of a mtgee. of two leasehold properties, who died in 1880, A. & B. were exors. & joint devisees & legatees of trust & mtge. estates, & A. was entitled to a life interest in all testator's own property, with remainder to B. In 1884 the mtgor. told A., who had possession of the title deeds of the mtged. property, & was pressing for repayment of the mtge. debt, that he could not borrow the money to pay it off unless the title deeds were sent to him; & A., without B.'s knowledge, sent the mtgor. a parcel containing the title deeds, which consisted of two assignments & one mtge., in order to enable him to raise money to pay off the mtge. debt or part of it. The mtgor. did not pay off any part of the mtge. debt, but after some time he returned to A. a parcel which was supposed to contain the deeds.

After A.'s death in 1890 it was found that the parcel returned contained the mtge. deed only, & that the mtgor. had purported to execute a legal mtge. in favour of a bank, to secure money lent to him by them without notice of the existing mtge., & had handed over the two assignments to them.

In an action for the administration of the mtgor.'s estate:—Held: (1) whatever rights the bank might have had against A., the acts of A. did not preclude B. from setting up his legal title as surviving exor. & devisee & legatee of the mtge. estate of testator, & B. was entitled to priority over the bank in respect of the mtge. of 1879; (2) the bank must deliver up to B., as the surviving exor. & legal owner of the mtged. property, the title deeds in their possession.—Re INGHAM, JONES v. INGHAM, [1893] 1 Ch. 352; 62 L. On pltf. demanding it back from time to time, the mtgor. made excuses for not doing so; & pltf. then forgot that it had not been returned. Afterwards the mtgor. deposited the policy with defts. to secure an advance. Pltf. gave notice of his interest to the insurance co. before defts.:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the policy as against defts., & the conduct of pltf. had not been such as to estop him from asserting his claim against defts.—HALL v. WEST END ADVANCE CO., LTD. an antecedent debt. The sisters allowed him to retain the title deeds, that he might be enabled to give a first mtge. to secure another debt, for which he was being sued by B. A. deposited the deeds with B. to secure that debt & afterwards, without B.'s concurrence, got possession of them & mortgaged the estate to pltfs. for a considerably larger sum, & delivered the title deeds to them, they having no notice of the mtge. to the sisters:—Held: the mtge. to the sisters must be postponed to that of pltfs., for that the sisters, having, with a view to A.'s raising a certain sum in priority to their mtge., put it into his power to represent himself as unincumbered owner, could not, as against pltfs., who advanced money on the faith of A.'s possession of the deeds, complain that A. had raised more than was agreed upon.—PERRY HERRICK v. ATTWOOD (1857), 2 De G. & J. 21; 27 L. 2149. —— —— Within stated limit—Limit imposed exceeded.]—The mtgee. of land, having deposited the title deeds with a bank for an advance, & being desirous of obtaining a larger advance, gave, on two consecutive days, two written authorities to his son, to receive the deeds on payment of the amount due to the bank. The first authority was in general terms, but in the second authority he specified the bank which had agreed to make the larger loan & directed payment to be made to that bank. The son, by means of the first authority, obtained possession of the deeds, & procured from a different bank than the one specified in the second authority a loan largely in excess of the amount authorised by his father, paid his father the additional amount which he was instructed to raise, & kept the balance. Subsequently, as the bank pressed for payment, the son forged a transfer of mtge. from his father to himself, & having obtained an assignment of the equity of redemption, sold the land to resp. societies, who paid off the bank:—Held: applt., having entrusted his son with the control of the deeds for the purpose of raising money, could only redeem the property upon payment of the whole amount advanced by resps. for the purpose of paying off the bank.—BROCKLESBY v. TEMPERANCE PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY, [1895] A. 2150. Deeds delivered to agent for sale—Deposit by agent on own behalf.]—R. delivered to a stockbroker a mtge. bond for £2,000 with instructions to sell it. The bond was one of a series issued by the Tyne Improvement Comrs. under a private Act which incorporated the Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 16). That Act requires that all transfers of mtges. should be registered. Induced by the false representations of the broker, R. executed two deeds of transfer, by which the mtge. bond was transferred to the broker in two portions of £1,500 & £500 respectively. These transfers were in a form prescribed by the schedule to the Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 16), & were expressed to be made in consideration of £1,500 & £500 respectively paid by the broker to R. They were duly registered. The broker borrowed £1,000 from deft. W. & executed a formal submtge. of the bond to him, producing the transfers as proof of title. This mtge. was not registered. The broker had applied the money to his own use & absconded. This action was brought by R. for retransfer of the bond free from the mtge. to W.:—Held: where an owner of property gives all the indicia of title to another person with the intention that he should deal with the property, the principles of agency apply, & any limit which he has imposed on his agent's dealing cannot be enforced against an innocent purchaser or mtgee. from the agent, who has no notice of the limit.

The statement in a transfer of mtge. made in a form prescribed by statute, that the mtge. is transferred in consideration of £—— paid by A. to B., without any express receipt clause, is sufficient to create this estoppel.—RIMMER v. WEBSTER, [1902] 2 Ch. 163; 71 L. Sloper, in 1833, mortgaged certain real estate to Sievewright, with a power of sale, under which the property was sold in 1842 to a purchaser who transferred his contract to Sievewright. There was a balance after paying off Sievewright, & there being accounts between Sloper & Matthews, this balance was placed, under a deed of June 25, 1842, in the hands of trustees, to be dealt with by arbitration between Sloper & Matthews. In 1834, Sloper had made an equitable mtge. of the property to Matthews. In Jan. 1840, Matthews deposited these deeds with Waldron, pltf., by way of equitable mtge. In Apr. 1842, Matthews applied to pltf. for the loan of the deeds, telling him he wanted them to enable the purchase to be completed, & promising to return them forthwith. He did not return them forthwith, & pltf. never applied to have the deeds back for more than four years. In May, 1843, Matthews deposited the deeds, by way of mtge., with Pinckney, who now held them. 2177. —— —— ——.]—In 1887 freeholds were mortgaged to a building society by H. to secure advances. In Oct. 1892, H. died, having devised these freeholds to N. upon trust for sale. In Dec. 1892, C., the solr. who acted for the society, & also for H., &, after his death, for N., having fraudulently represented to the society that notice to pay off their mtge. had been given, procured the statutory receipt to be indorsed on the mtge. of 1887, & obtained possession of the title deeds of the property: the money owing to the society was never paid off, N. at this time being unaware of the existence of the mtge. N. shortly afterwards agreed to sell the property to C., who was at this time in good repute and supposed to be well off, and by a deed of Dec. 29, 1892, which recited the trust for sale in H.'s will, N., in consideration of £700, paid to him by C. at or before the execution of the deed the receipt whereof N. thereby acknowledged, conveyed the property to C. in fee. The purchase-money was not in fact paid. This conveyance & the other title deeds, except the mtge. of 1887 & the statutory receipt, were shortly afterwards deposited by C. with pltfs. as security for an advance of £650. In 1893, C. was adjudicated bkpt., his frauds were discovered, & he was convicted & sentenced. Pltfs. now claimed to enforce their security against the society, & against C. & his cestui que trust. It was admitted that the society had priority over N. & his cestui que trust, & the main contention was between the pltfs. and the society, & pltfs. & N. & his cestui que trust:—Held: (1) the society were entitled under the circumstances to show that they had never been paid off, that the statutory receipt & the mtge. of 1887 were delivered only as an escrow, & the mtge. not having been paid off, & the legal estate being still in the society, they had priority over the pltfs.; (2) the conveyance of Dec. 1892, was not void as between the pltfs. & N. & his cestui que trust; (3) as N. had authority to deal with the property, the pltfs., in the absence of express notice, were entitled to rely on the receipt in the body of the deed, & had priority over the cestui que trust.—LLOYDS BANK, LTD. v. BULLOCK, [1896] 2 Ch. 192; 65 L. 2178. —— —— —— Conduct of agent of vendor.]—Trustees of a charity, with the sanction of the Charity Comrs., sold a piece of land in Yorkshire to R. & W. A receipt for the whole of the purchase-money was indorsed on the conveyance, but part of it was allowed to remain unpaid. On the application of R. & W. the conveyance was registered, but the deed was retained by D., the solr. & agent of the trustees, who was authorised to receive the unpaid purchase-money, as security for it. The piece of land was cut up into building plots by R. & W. & sold to various sub-purchasers. One plot was granted by R. & W. one of their clerks, who mortgaged it to P., who had no actual notice of the trustees' lien; he did not employ any solr. to act for him, but left it to R. & W. to manage the business for him. Another plot was granted to the same clerk, who, after raising a sum on mtge. on it, sold the equity of redemption to O. The clerk was a nominee of R. & W., they failed to pay the purchase-money:—Held: the trustees had by the conduct of their agent D. induced the purchasers to believe that R. & W. had power to deal with the different plots, & they had thereby lost their lien.—KETTLEWELL v. WATSON (1884), 26 Ch. Subsequently E., who was the solr. both of pltf. & of P., induced pltf. to execute a conveyance to H., without receiving the consideration, in order that H. might then execute a mtge. to E. & P. to secure their advances; but on the promise of E. alone, that the conveyance & the mtge. should be held, on behalf of pltf., until the "land could be sold or a transfer of the said mtges. obtained, & that in either case pltf. should, in the first place, out of the moneys obtained by such sale or transfer, be paid the purchase-money" & advances:—Held: pltf. had lost his lien for his purchase-money, & his priority for it & his advances over the mtge.—SMITH v. EVANS (1860), 28 Beav. 59; 29 L. 2183. No money passing on second mortgage.]—In Mar. 1853, a bank advanced £400 to G. on the security of a bill of exchange & a deposit of a lease. The deposit was accompanied by a memorandum that G. thereby undertook, when called upon, to execute a mtge. to secure the sum of £400 "or any sum or sums of money which might at any time be owing by him to the bank for principal, interest & costs." In Dec. 1853, the bank made a further advance of £300 to G. On Dec. 2, 1854, F. advanced £1,000 to a solr. for investment on mtge. The solr. obtained from G. his signature to a deed purporting to be a mtge. of the above-mentioned leasehold property to F. Shortly after the solr. stopped payment & no part of the £1,000 was paid to G. In Mar. 1855, G. executed a mtge. to the bank, to secure the £700 F. obtained from the Ct. of Q. B. an order that the solr. should pay him £550 part of the £1,000 in one month, & should enter into an arrangement for the residue. Afterwards W., a brother of the solr., paid F. the £550 whereupon F. assigned his security to W. W. claimed to be a mtgee. of the property assigned to F., subject to a prior charge of the bank of £400.

The bank claimed to be mtgee. for the whole £700 in priority to W.:—Held: the claim of the bank must prevail. In order to sustain the claim of W., it must be shown that a valid debt subsisted, as between G. & F., which had not been established.—CORY v. WATTS (1857), 30 L. T. O. S. 230.

2184. Registration of lis pendens.]—Interests of defts. inter se, arising out of the rights of pltfs., protected by the doctrine of lis pendens.

In a suit instituted by creditors for the administration of the testator's estate, the deficiency of the personal estate for payment of the debts was payable out of two real estates devised separately to the defts. A. & B. In 1846, the debts were ordered to be paid out of A.'s estate alone, without prejudice to his right of contribution against B.'s estate. In 1852, the suit was registered as a lis pendens, & two months afterwards B. mortgaged his estate to C., who had no notice of A.'s rights:—Held: there was a lis pendens as regarded A.'s rights, & C.'s mtge. must be postponed to A.'s claims.—TYLER v. (2) If he obtain full payment on the bond or covenant, the mtgor. becomes entitled to the estate, but if he obtain part payment only, he may go on with his foreclosure suit & foreclose for the remainder.

(3) On the other hand, if he forecloses first, & the value of the estate proves insufficient to satisfy the debt, he may, while the mtged. estate remains in his power, sue on the bond or covenant, but he thereby opens the foreclosure, & the mtgor. may thereupon redeem.

(4) After foreclosure, the mtgee. fairly sold the estate for less than what was due to him:—Held: he could not afterwards recover from the mtgor. upon his collateral personal securities, the amount still remaining unpaid.—LOCKHART v. HARDY

Upon the bill of the mtgee., praying a sale of the policy, & payment by the mtgor. of so much of the debt as the proceeds of the sale should be insufficient to pay, or in default that the mtgor. might be foreclosed:—Held: the mtgee. was entitled only to the usual decree for payment or foreclosure of the real estate, & not to a decree for the sale of the policy; but he was entitled to retain the policy upon the terms of the trust, notwithstanding the foreclosure of the real estate.

B. Provisions and Conditions of Exercise.

(a) In General.

2215. Method of sale—Power to sell by auction—Invalidity of private sale.]—A vessel was mortgaged for a nominal sum to secure an unascertained balance due to the mtgee. with power to sell by public auction; & in case the vessel could not be sold, the mtgee. was to hold, enjoy & possess the free use, control & possession thereof as sole owner, until the full amount of his claims should be satisfied. Default was made in payment of the sum named before the real balance was ascertained, & pending the investigation thereof before arbitrators, & the mtgee. caused the vessel to be sold by private contract:—Held: such sale was wrongful, & not warranted by the conditions of the mtge. deed, & an account of the value of the ship at the time of such sale ordered to be taken, & the amount thereof paid to the mtgee.—BROUARD v. DUMARESQUE (1841), 3 Moo. The distress clause remained unerased in its usual place, viz., after the covenants. T. assigned the mtge. to H., who distrained. On a bill filed by the owner of the equity of redemption to redeem & to set aside the sale:—Held: the transaction could not be impeached.

(2) A mtgee. with power of sale is not bound to wait till a more advantageous sale can be effected; neither is he bound to advertise before proceeding to a sale.

(3) To hold that the mtgee. was bound in the first instance to put the property up for sale by auction, would be to limit, cut down the power given by the deed, which expressly authorises a sale by public auction or private contract; & certainly I am not prepared to hold that a mtgee. is not justified in accepting a fair offer for the purchase of the mtged. property until he has advertised the property for sale (TURNER, L.J.).—DAVEY v. DURRANT, SMITH v. DURRANT (1857), 1 De G. & J. 535; 26 L. 2219. Power subject to sanction of mortgagor—Sale after sanction withdrawn.]—On May, 4, 1887, A. deposited with B., his broker, certain shares in the K. co. & signed a blank transfer. B. signed a receipt stating that the shares were deposited to secure the balance of A.'s account, & that he would not realise them without A.'s sanction. On July 23, A. wrote authorising a sale of the K. shares at a given price. On Aug. 5, A. wrote to B. that the shares in his hands would be sold by another broker, but at the same time directed him to sell certain shares other than the K. shares. On Aug. 27, B. sold the K. shares on the Stock Exchange to W., at a price above the limit fixed by A. on July 23. B. filled in the transfer with W.'s name, & W. sent the transfer to the co.'s office for registration. The co. having been warned by A. not to register the transfer, refused registration. W. moved to have the register rectified:—Held: on the construction of the correspondence between the parties, B. was an equitable mtgee., with a power of sale not to be exercised without A.'s sanction, but that sanction had been given & not withdrawn.—Re KIMBERLEY NORTH BLOCK DIAMOND CO., Ex p. WERNHER (1888), 59 L. (b) Provision as to Notice.

i. In General.

2220. Necessity for notice — General rule.]—Deft., a money-lender, having agreed with pltf., who was just twenty-one, & was in difficulties, to lend him £150 on his reversionary interest under his father's will, exacted securities for £200, with interest at 20 per cent., reducible to 10 per cent. on punctual payment, & advanced only £123, but claimed interest on the whole amount secured. The ct. declared that the securities should stand as a security for the money actually advanced with interest at 5 per cent., although pltf. had been assisted by a solr., who, however, stated that he was not accurately informed of the transaction.

The terms of the power of sale are oppressive, & put pltf. completely at the mercy of deft. The power to sell without any notice to pltf. enabled deft. at any moment to extinguish the right of redemption (STUART, V.-C.).—MILLER v. COOK (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 641; 40 L. J. Ch. 11; 22 L. p. Originating summons for delivery of possession—In order to exercise power.]—Deft., in 1904, had executed a mortgage of a house to pltf. No part of principal had been paid, & a large sum due for arrears of interest. There was no prospect of deft. being able to pay the amount due. Deft. was in possession & living in the house, & in an affidavit made by an auctioneer it was stated that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to sell the house while deft. was in possession. Pltf. applied by originating summons under O. 55., r. 7, for delivery of possession, in order to exercise the power of sale in the mortgage:—Held: although such order not granted as a matter of course, the case, a proper one, to exercise the jurisdiction.—BUNYAN v. BUNYAN, [1916] 1 I. L. R. 556, C. A.

2223. —— Exception to rule—Exceptional circumstances—Arrangement giving time for payment.]—In Apr. 1879, P. owed £450 to his solr. K., who was pressing for payment. On Apr. 11, 1879, he gave K. his promissory note for £466 17*s.* 10*d.*, payable three months after date, & on May 31 signed an agreement to mortgage to K. his interest in a railway for the £466 17*s.* 10*d.* The agreement contained a provision that, if that sum was not paid on July 11, K. should be at liberty to sell the property without notice. The agreement was drawn by K., & P. had no independent advice. Default having been made, K. sold without giving such notice as required in the common form of power of sale:—Held: as this was not an ordinary mtge. transaction, but an arrangement for giving the client time for payment of a debt presently payable, the doctrine of Cockburn v. Edwards, No. 1409, ante, did not apply; it was not incumbent on K. to explain to P. the unusual form of the power of sale; & the sale could not be impeached on the ground that it was not authorised by the common form of power.

A passage was read to us from the judgment in Robertson v. Norris, No. 2332, post, stating that the ct. will consider the exercise of a power of sale improper & will prevent it being effectual against the mtgor. if it is exercised, not for the purpose of getting the money which is due on the mtge. to secure which the power of sale is given, but for some indirect purpose, a statement of law from which I do not dissent (COTTON, L.J.).—POOLEY'S TRUSTEE v. WHETHAM (1886), 33 Ch. The mtgee. subsequently gave due notice, & on the sixth day after took a bill at three months for the amount from the mtgor., who died the following day. The bill was dishonoured, & thereupon the mtgee., without giving any further notice, sold the premises to pltf., who brought ejectment against deft., the mtgor.'s widow:—Held: the power of sale having been well exercised, deft. was not entitled to redeem, but must give up possession to pltf.; the giving of the bill operated as a suspension of the remedy by sale, & of the running of the notice, & both revived when the bill was dishonoured; no further notice was therefore necessary.—WOOD v. MURTON (1877), 47 L. The conveyance to S. from W. was afterwards declared void, as against the creditors of W. Some years afterwards the mtgee. caused the notice demanding payment to be affixed to the door of the house which was the last known place of abode of S.; & the mtgee., a short time before the expiration of the three months, entered into a contract for the sale of the property:—Held: (1) as the right of the mtgee. under the power of sale was paramount to that of the creditors of W., the notice to S. was sufficient; (2) such notice was well served by being fixed on the door of S.'s last known place of abode; (3) the contract for sale of the property, although made before the expiration of the notice, was not therefore invalid.—MAJOR v. WARD (1847), 5 Hare, 598; 12 Jur. 473; 67 E. shall be then paid, & no notice be then given to call in the same, the £60 shall continue in the hands of H. for another year, & so on from year to year, until notice in writing, shall be given by B., pltf., to call in the same; that twelve calendar months' notice, in writing, shall be given to call in the £60; & that, at the expiration of the said notice, the same shall be paid by instalments of £10, every third month, until the whole amount be paid, the first payment of £10 to be made at the expiration of fifteen months from the date of the said notice, so that the whole amount of £60 shall be paid by the end of two years & six months from the date of the said notice." Averment that notice in writing, dated May 29, 1846, was served upon deft. to call in the principal sum of £60; & that, although twelve calendar months from the date of such notice & service thereof elapsed before the commencement of the suit, & although six months from the expiration of the said twelve months had also elapsed, & although two instalments had become due, yet deft. had not paid the same:—Held: on demurrer after the expiration of the first year, the notice to pay off the principal might be given at any period of the year, & the time for payment of the instalments was to be calculated from the date of the notice, not from the day of the year corresponding with the date of the agreement.

It is perfectly plain, that although a mtge. deed provides for the payment of interest on Jan. 1, & July 1, the stipulation as to six months' notice for repayment of the principal does not mean that the notice is to be given on any particular day, but the mtgee. may give the notice at any moment of time.—BROWN v. HARTILL (1848), 2 Exch. 434; 17 L. J. Ex. 278; 154 E. R. 561.

2227. Form of notice—Notice requiring payment within six months of service.]—A power of sale in a mtge. deed declared in case of default on the day named in the proviso for redemption, & provided the mtgee. should have given six months' previous notice of his intention to sell that if the mtge. money remained unpaid at the expiration of the notice; it should be lawful for him to sell at any time after the expiration of the notice, so long as any part of the money should be unpaid:—Held: a notice was not invalid merely because it required payment of the money at a time less than six months from the service of the notice.

Semble: even where there has been a serious irregularity in the notice to sell by a mtgee. under a power of sale, if the purchaser has entered & expended money on the property, the ct. will not, in the absence of fraud, interfere to set aside the purchase.—METTERS v. BROWN (1863), 2 New Rep. 227; 33 L. 2229. —— ——.]—Three mtgees. in possession, of whom F. was one, & acted as their solr. in the transaction, sold under the powers of sale in their mtge. deed to a co. formed for the purpose of purchasing the property. The co. was to some extent promoted by F., who became the solr. to the co. & had a substantial interest as a shareholder:—Held: (1) the sale could not be set aside on the simple ground that F. was a shareholder in the co., for that a sale by a person to a corpn. of which he is a member is not either in form or substance a sale by him to himself along with other people; but (2) there was such a conflict of interest & duty in F., of which the co. had notice, as to throw upon them the burden of upholding the sale; (3) the co. had discharged themselves of this burden by showing that F. had taken all reasonable pains to secure a purchaser at the best price, & the price given was not at the time inadequate, though more might have been obtained by postponing the sale.

Every mtge. confers upon the mtgee. the right to realise his security to find a purchaser if he can & if in exercise of his power he acts bonâ fide & takes reasonable precautions to obtain a proper price, the mtgor. has no redress, even although more might have been obtained for the property if the sale had been postponed (LINDLEY, L.J.).

(4) We cannot see any impropriety in his [the mtgee.'s] conduct, unless it be that he ought not to have agreed in Nov., to sell at a future time for £7,700. This, however, does not without more invalidate the sale (LINDLEY, L.J.).—FARRAR v. FARRARS, LTD. (1888), 40 Ch. D. 395; 58 L. J. Ch. 185; 60 L. T. 121; 37 W. R. 196; 5 T. L. R. 164, C. A.

The only question then is, whether the circumstance, that the interest of the mtgee., from the nature of the property, can only be equitable, excludes him from the right to the decree of foreclosure which he seeks. This question is answered by the cases which affirm the title of a second mtgee. to foreclose the mtgor., although he does not redeem the first mtgee., or take any steps to get in the legal estate. These cases decide, therefore, that the mtgee. of an equitable interest in property is entitled to foreclose the equity of redemption, leaving the legal title in a third party (SHADWELL, V.-C.).

2254. Defect in terms of power—Evidence of default in payment—Purchaser not exonerated from inquiry.]—In 1818, certain freehold property was mortgaged by the then owner, the form of the mtge. being a conveyance of the fee simple to trustees upon trust, at any time after the expiration of six months from the date named for repayment of the principal, to sell the property, & discharge the debt, etc., out of the proceeds, & to pay the residue to the mtgor., his exors., administrators, or assigns. The deed contained a proviso for redemption, & also provisions making the receipt of the trustees, their heirs or assigns, a sufficient discharge to a purchaser of the property, & exonerating any purchaser from seeing to the application of the purchase-money, & rendering unnecessary the concurrence of the mtgor., or his heirs, in any conveyance under the trust for sale. The deed, however, did not contain any provision exonerating a purchaser from inquiring whether default had been made in payment of principal or interest, nor as to whether anything was owing on the security. The mtgor. died in 1839, having by his will devised the property comprised in the mtge. to several of his children in succession, as tenants for life, with remainders over. The last surviving tenant for life died in 1887, & shortly afterwards A. & B., in whom the mtge. had become vested by transfer, there having previously been several mesne transfers, contracted to sell the property. The vendors sold as mtgees., in pursuance of the trust contained in the mtge.:—Held: without the concurrence of all the persons at present entitled

A month's notice, or even less, would be a reasonable notice.

I do not think that the fact found by FARWELL, J., that defts. sold bonâ fide, believing themselves to be absolute owners, precludes them from defending themselves on the ground of a power of sale which they were entitled to exercise (STIRLING, L.J.).

When no time for payment has been originally fixed, then, before the power of sale can be exercised, notice is to be given to the mtgor. & default must be made by him in payment after such notice. What this notice is to contain is nowhere defined; but it must, of course, be a notice which is in all respects reasonable, regard being had to the circumstances of the case. A notice demanding payment of an excessive sum has been held to be bad. The notice must give a reasonable opportunity to the mtgor. to pay what is due under the mtge.; & I think it is at least desirable that it should fix a day for that purpose, & also convey to the mind of the mtgor. that, if he fails to avail himself of the opportunity given to redeem, the mtgee. will be in a position to put in force his rights (STIRLING, L.J.).—DEVERGES v. Assignment of part of mortgage debt—Whether mortgagee's power of sale lost.]—(1) First mtgees. declared themselves trustees for F. & Sons of part of the mtge. debt, & then assigned that part to F. & Sons without power to the latter to give receipts for any part of the principal & interest due on the security. F. & Sons did not give notice of the assignment to any person interested in the equity of redemption. The first mtgees. then, in exercise of their statutory power, sold the premises by auction to F. & Sons for the amount of principal & interest due to themselves:—Held: the sale was valid, & the statutory power of sale was not put an end to by the assignment.

(2) The assignees, who were also fourth mtgees. agreed with the mtgors. & F. & Sons that F. & Sons should manage the premises, & after payment of management expenses & outgoings should out of the net profits pay an annual sum of £4,500 by way of rent & interest on prior mtges.:—Held: by the indentures of first & second mtge. the agreement was not binding on the first or second mtgees., the first mtgees. had not entered into possession & were not accountable for this annual sum which had not been received, & was not in the circumstances receivable as the profits were not sufficient.—FLOWER & SONS, LTD. v. PRITCHARD (1908), 53 Sol. One of the instalments being more than two months in arrear, deft. proceeded to exercise the power of sale under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 20:—Held: as the instalments included a sum for interest, sect. 20 applied, & deft. had the right to 2309. —— Bidding by trustee mortgagee—Objection by cestuis que trust.] — It is a well established doctrine that when, as in this case, the duties of a trustee conflict with his personal interest as mtgee., the ct. will control him & not allow him to foreclose, especially when the estate is under his control, & the cestui que trust has no other means of raising money to pay off the mtge.

By a deed of trust, property was conveyed to the sons of the settlor upon certain trusts for the benefit of the children & grandchildren of the settlor. The trustees had power to sell, & extensive powers of management, & provisions were made that any trustee advancing money to the settlor, or paying off any part of a certain mtge. debt, should be entitled to a charge by way of mtge. on the estate. One of the trustees advanced considerable sums to the settlor, & paid off part of the mtge. debt:—Held: on the construction of the deed, the trustee was not entitled to have such a mtge. on the estate as would empower him to foreclose, & was entitled only to a sale. Semble: a trustee who is also mtgee. will not be allowed to foreclose.

If any of the cestuis que trust object, a trustee of an estate, though also a mtgee., will not be allowed to bid at a sale of the estate directed by the ct.; but, semble: if the estate is not sold at the sale, the trustee may be allowed to become the purchaser under proposals to the ct.—TENNANT v. TRENCHARD (1869), 4 Ch. W. had two days before the sale taken out a summons to obtain leave for pltf. in the administration suit to attend proceedings in the foreclosure suit, such summons being returnable on the day after the sale. He had never been consulted about the sale, & did not know what was the amount of the reserved bidding:—Held: W. was not disqualified from purchasing, for that his client was at liberty to purchase, & therefore his being her solr. did not disqualify him, & the mere fact of his own name appearing on the particulars of sale as a person from whom copies of them might be obtained was not a disqualification.—GUEST v. SMYTHE (1870), 5 Ch. 6.—MODE OF EXERCISE OF POWER.

A. In General.

2331. Position of mortgagee—Whether a trustee.] —(1) Conveyance of an estate to D. by way of security for the re-investment of a specific sum of stock, & for payment of the dividends in the meantime, with a power of sale in case of default. Under this deed, D. is a trustee for the party making the conveyance, &, as such, disabled from purchasing for himself so long as he continues to be a trustee without the consent of his cestui que trust. Therefore, the estate being put up to sale by auction, at which C. as agent for D. was the only bidder, & it was knocked down to him accordingly, the sale was decreed not to stand, although no evidence of fraud or undervalue; & not to be supported by evidence of pltf.'s having known & approved of the sale taking place, & afterwards attempting to damp it, nor of a previous conversation with her attorney in which the latter exhorted the purchaser to bid a good price for the estate to keep up the sale.

(2) Qu.: if C. had purchased for himself, & not for D., whether the sale could have been supported; he being present in the character of solr. for D., the vendor.

2332. —— ——.]—The owner of two fourth shares in a newspaper mortgaged the same in 1840 to deft. by deed, with proviso for redemption, & with a power of sale to the mtgee. in default of payment, as specified therein. Default having been made in payment, deft., the mtgee., in exercise of the power of sale, by deed, in 1841, for an expressed consideration of £1,000 assigned the two shares to his brother absolutely, freed from the mtge. debt. Afterwards the owner of the two remaining fourth shares assigned them for the benefit of his creditors to trustees, who sold them to deft.; & in 1848 deft.'s brother assigned the two first-mentioned shares to deft., who thus became legal owner of the whole newspaper. The mtgor. died in 1852. In 1855 pltf., who was the sole personal representative of the mtgor., filed a bill for redemption, alleging that the pretended sale in 1841 was a mere fraud for the purpose of excluding the mtgor. from the property; that no consideration passed; & that deft never accounted to the mtgor. :—Held: pltf. was entitled to redeem.

LORD ELDON has stated the principle on which this ct. proceeds when the question is as to the validity of a sale effected by a mtgee. under a power of sale, given to him as part of his security. LORD ELDON says that the mtgee. is a trustee for the benefit of the mtgor. in the exercise of that power. I stated yesterday, & I repeat, that LORD ELDON'S use of the words & the expression "the mtgee. is a trustee for the benefit of the mtgor.," is to be understood in this sense, that the power being given for a clear & distinct purpose, namely, to enable him to recover the mtge. money, inasmuch as so vast a power given to a mtgee. would render him indifferent to any other purpose, in effecting the sale, than recovering the mere amount of his mtge. money; this ct. requires that he shall exercise the power of sale with reference to his own rights as mtgee., & with a due regard to the rights & interests of the mtgor. in the surplus money to be produced by the sale. Wherever a power is given, whether it be a power of raising portions for children, a power of sale in a mtge. deed, or a power giving dominion over property for a particular & specified purpose, the ct. requires that the power shall be exercised with a view only to that which is the legitimate purpose for effecting which the power was conferred. The legitimate purpose for which the power to sell in this deft.'s mtge. deed was given, was to secure to him repayment of his mtge. money. If he uses the power to sell which he gets for that purpose for another purpose—from any ill motive to effect means & purposes of his own, or to serve the purposes of other individuals—the ct. considers that to be what it calls a fraud in the exercise of the power, because it is using the power for purposes foreign to the legitimate purpose for which it was intended (STUART, V.-C.).—ROBERTSON v. NORRIS (1857), 1 Giff. 421; 30 L. 2333. —— ——.]—Certain mtged. premises having been advertised for sale by auction by the mtgee., the mtgor., five days before the sale, expressed a wish to redeem. The mtgee. replied by a letter, which overstated the amount secured by the mtge. The mtgor. then made a tender of the amount actually due on the mtge. for principal & interest, saying nothing about costs. This offer was refused by the mtgee. At the auction a tender of the same amount was again made, & again refused, & the property was knocked down to a purchaser for a larger sum than the amount tendered. The purchaser saw the tender made, but knew nothing of the rights of the parties. The mtge. deed relieved the purchaser from the necessity of inquiring into the propriety or regularity of any sale; & provided that, notwithstanding any impropriety or irregularity of such sale, the same should, as regarded the purchaser be deemed to be within the power, & be valid accordingly:—Held: under the circumstances, there had been an oppressive exercise of the power of sale by the mtgee.; though the purchaser was relieved by the terms of the deed from the obligation to inquire, yet the circumstance of his having seen the tender by the mtgor. made it his duty to inquire further; & his cognisance of the mtgor.'s struggle to redeem placed him in the same situation as the vendor, with regard to the mtgor.'s right.

It is well settled that, although a mtgee.'s power of sale is a clear right, yet it is to be regarded as a very sacred thing, for it is only a security. The mtgee. stands in a fiduciary character—he is not like an ordinary vendor selling his own property—but he is bound in a reasonable degree to consider that the property is not to be sacrificed, because he is to pay the surplus to the mtgor., or to the person entitled to the equity of redemption. . . . But although the power of sale relieves the purchaser from all obligation to inquire, the very circumstance that it is so expressed shows, that if there come to his knowledge circumstances to cast a doubt or raise an inquiry about the circumstances of the sale, he becomes a party to the transaction which is complained of (STUART, V.-C.).—JENKINS v. JONES (1860), 2 Giff. 99; 29 L. D. made default. On May 12, 1852, there being then a larger sum due to deft. from D., deft. contracted with P. to sell him the premises for £550, £50 being paid down; & by indenture of May 15, 1852, between deft., a trustee, & P., reciting the above agreement, & that it had been agreed that £500 of the purchase-money should remain on mtge. of the same premises, deft., in pursuance of the agreement, & in pursuance of the power in the mtge. of 1848, assigned to the trustee in trust for sale to pay the £500 & interest, in case P. should make default, & P. convenanted to pay the purchase-money by yearly instalments of £100 with interest. PART XIII. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 7.—A.

1. Grounds for granting or refusing—Tender or payment.]—Where there had been a breach of covenant to keep the building insured against fire the ct. ordered that if the amount owing under the mtge. was tendered or paid by the mtgor. to the mtgee. the injunction would be granted.—GIBERSON v. SECORD (1923), 51 N. B. R. 116.—CAN.

2. Terms on which granted.]—The of the intention to exercise a power of sale contained in a mtge. deed to a devisee of the mtgor. when the mtge. deed provides that the notice is to be given to the mtgor., his heirs, exors., or administrators, or any or either of them.

A mtge. deed contained (inter alia) a power of sale, exercisable by the mtgee. on three months' notice to the mtgor., his heirs, exors., or administrators, or any or either of them. Some time after the execution of the mtge. deed a deed of arrangement was made between the same parties, by which the mtgee. was empowered to enter into possession of the mtged. property, & to receive the rents on certain trusts therein declared. There was a declaration that nothing in this deed contained should prejudice the rights or powers of the mtgee. under the mtge. deed, & a further declaration that the mtgee. might, at any time after a specified day, determine the trusts thereof, & that, on delivering of such notice, the mtgee. should be at liberty to exercise the powers vested in him by the mtge. deed to the same extent as if such trusts had never been declared. The mtgee. entered into possession under this second deed, & some time after the said specified day he gave notice to exercise his power of sale, but he never gave any notice to determine the trusts of the second deed:—Held: the power of sale could not be exercised so long as notice had not been given to determine the trusts of the deed of arrangement.

I also think that the injunction is due. In saying that I wish it to be clearly understood that I do not at all proceed upon the ground that the amount due upon the mtge. is in dispute. If that were so a mtgor. would have but to raise a dispute about the sum due, in order to deprive his mtgee. of his remedies under the mtge. deed (TURNER, L.J.).—GILL v. NEWTON (1866), 14 L. T. 240; 12 Jur. N. S. 220; 14 W. R. 490, L. JJ.

2375. —— Redemption action by mortgagor.]—A. mortgaged premises to B. to secure a certain sum plus the probable amount of costs in preparing the mtge. The mtge. contained a power of sale, upon default of payment at a fixed time. B. entered into a contract to sell to C.; after that B. commenced his action against A. upon the covenant, to recover the amount of his mtge. debt & costs. The action was compromised by D. paying to B. the whole amount minus a very small sum, which A. paid. D. took no regular assignment from B., but merely became equitable mtgee., by transfer of the title deeds. C. then, more than a year after the contract for sale, gave B. notice that he intended to enforce his contract, & thereupon paid his purchase-money, with which, plus a small sum, B. paid off D., & got back the title deeds. B. then brought his action of ejectment against A., who had remained in possession, to enable him to make a conveyance to C. A. filed his bill against B. & C. to redeem, & for an injunction. The ct. refused to interfere by injunction.—DAVIES v. WILLIAMS (1843), 7 Jur. 663.

2376. —— Offer of payment by puisne incumbrancer.]—A puisne incumbrancer offered to pay off the first mtge., which, being declined, he filed a bill to compel a transfer. The first mtgee. having afterwards proceeded to sell the property, was restrained from transferring the first mtge. & parting with the legal estate & title deeds.—RHODES v. BUCKLAND (1852), 16 Beav. 212; 51 E. R. 759.

2377. —— Existence of prior contract—When mortgagor has notice — Charterparty.]—The ct. will not affirmatively enforce a charterparty, but it is implied in such a contract, that if the charterer provides a cargo, the ship shall not be employed for any other purpose; & a mtgee., with notice of a prior charterparty effected with the mtgor., will be in general restrained from doing anything to prevent its performance.

The mtgor. in such a case was unable to put the ship into proper repair to make the voyage, or otherwise to perform the contract, & the charterer took no step for several months with respect to it:—Held: the mtgee. ought not to be further restrained from exercising the powers contained in his mtge.—DE MATTOS v. GIBSON (1859), 4 De G. & J. 276; 28 L. J. Ch. 498; 33 L. T. O. S. 193; 5 Jur. N. S. 555; 7 W. R. 514; 45 E. R. 108, L. C.

2378. —— Breach of trust.]—On a bill by a mtgor. to restrain a mtgee. from enforcing his power of sale under the mtge. deed, & where no answer had been put in, but it was alleged by the bill that a breach of trust had been committed by the mtgee. 2380. —— Payment into court.]—In 1830, W. conveyed certain real estates to R. & T. & their heirs, by way of mtge., for securing £400, with a power of sale in case of default. W. died in 1839, having devised the same property, subject to certain charges created by his will, to his sons, A., B., & C., as tenants in common in fee. In 1839, after W.'s death, B. conveyed all his one-third share, under his father's will, to R., H. & N., by way of mtge., with power of sale in case of default. R., the surviving mtgee. of the deed of 1830, threatened to sell under the power in that deed unless A., the acting exor. of W., would redeem both mtges. Upon bill by A. to redeem & for an injunction, the ct. upon motion, on payment into ct., by A. of the money due upon the first mtge., restrained R. from selling under the power contained in the deed of 1830, & from conveying the legal estate in the one-third share of B. comprised in the mtge. of 1830.—WHITWORTH v. RHODES (1850), 20 L. J. Ch. 105.

ordinary rule that the ct. will not grant an interlocutory injunction restraining a mtgee. from exercising his power of sale except on the terms of the mtgor. paying into ct. the sum sworn by the mtgee. to be due for principal, interest, & costs, is not limited to cases where the mtgor. seeks to restrain the future exercise of the power, but applies also to a case where the injunction asked is to restrain the completion of a contract already entered into on the ground that the sale is an improper one.—KINGSBURY v. HALLORAN (1901), 1

2381. —— ——.]—(1) If a mtgee. exercises his power of sale bonâ fide for the purpose of realising his debt & without collusion with the purchaser, the ct. will not interfere even though the sale be very disadvantageous unless the price is so low as in itself to be evidence of fraud.

(2) A mtgee. in exercising his power of sale is not, except as to the balance of the purchase-money after a sale, a trustee for the mtgor. even if the mtge. is in the form of a trust for sale.

(3) [No attempt was made] to stay the sale by injunction which, according to the authorities I have cited & to Whitworth v. Rhodes, No. 2380, ante, could only have been done by paying the money into ct. (KAY, J.).—WARNER v. JACOB (1882), 20 Ch. D. 220; 51 L. J. Ch. 642; 46 L. T. 656; 46 J. P. 436; 30 W. R. 731.

2382. —— —— Amount claimed by mortgagee—Unless impossible on face of security.]—The general rule is that a sale by a mtgee. will be restrained only on payment into ct. by the mtgor. of the amount which the mtgee. swears to be due to him, but this does not apply where the ct. can see on the terms of the deed that this amount cannot be due on the security.—HICKSON v. DARLOW (1883), 23 Ch. 2383. —— —— —— Unless fiduciary relation between mortgagor & mortgagee.]—The ordinary rule that the ct. will not grant an interlocutory injunction restraining a mtgee. from exercising his power of sale except on the terms of the mtgor. paying into ct. the sum sworn by the mtgee. to be due for principal, interest, & costs, does not apply to a case where the mtgee. at the time of taking the mtge. was the solr. of the mtgor. In such a case the ct. will look to all the circumstances of the case, & will make such order as will save the mtgor. from oppression without injuring the security of the mtgee.

Pltf. was a lady who was entitled to a life interest in leasehold property which she had mortgaged to various persons. Deft. acted as her solr., & with her sanction in order to release her from embarrassment bought up several of the incumbrances with his own money & took a transfer of them to himself; having previously taken a mtge. of the life interest to secure his past costs & the costs which he might incur in paying off the incumbrances. Afterwards pltf. discharged deft., & employed another solr., who applied to deft. for information respecting the securities transferred. Deft. refused to give this information unless the payment of what was due to him was guaranteed, & threatened to proceed to a sale of the property. Pltf. then brought an action to impeach the securities & to restrain the sale of the property, & moved for an injunction till the hearing :—Held : considering all the circumstances, an injunction ought to be granted, on pltf. paying into ct. such a sum as the ct. considered would cover the amount actually advanced by deft., & amending the writ so as to make it a simple action for redemption & injunction.—MACLEOD v. JONES (1883), 24 Ch. No revesting order or order to annul the proceedings in the solvency had been obtained; but the bill alleged that an application, by pltf., for such an order to the comr. in insolvency had been refused, except upon the terms of his confirming the acts complained of. 2399. Not advance of purchase-money by mortgagee—Sale with option of re-purchase.]—B. mortgaged certain shares in a brewery co. The mtgees., who had full power to sell the shares, were desirous in 1914 of giving an option to F. to purchase them at a future date, but were advised by their solrs. that this would not be within their powers. They then sold the shares to F. at a fair price, & advanced him the whole of the purchase-money without interest, & gave him the right to call on them to repurchase the shares at the price he gave for them at any time before May 1, 1917. The money so advanced was secured by a deposit of the share certificate & by a promissory note, which on the face of it was expressed to be payable on demand. F. paid the mtgees. the purchase-money before May 1, 1917. In 1820 he sold the shares at a price considerably in excess of what he had paid for them. B. then brought an action, alleging that the transaction was not a valid sale, & claiming that the shares or their proceeds were still subject to redemption:—Held: (1) the ct. could not inquire into the motives of the mtgees.; (2) the transaction was a valid exercise of their power of sale.—BELTON v. BASS, RATCLIFFE & GRETTON, LTD., [1922] 2 Ch. 449; 91 L. The mtge. deed contained a power of sale upon three months' notice, or on interest being one month in arrear. The interest being in arrear, the stock was sold under the power for £1,950 as subject to succession duty at 3 per cent. The tenant for life was then in a precarious state of health, & died within three months. It was afterwards found that only £7 was payable for succession duty. None of the purchase-money was paid except the deposit, the remainder being left on a mtge. of the stock.

Mtged. property was sold for £20,800, &, in consequence of a misstatement in the particulars by the auctioneer employed by the mtgee., a compromise was come to between the purchaser & mortgagee, which the ct. held to be a reasonable one, whereby £895 was allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase-money :—Held : that sum was not necessarily to be taken as the measure of compensation to be allowed as between the mtgee. & the owners of the equity of redemption, & an inquiry was directed whether the property would have sold for any & if any, what sum in excess of £19,905, the original purchase-money less the sum allowed to the purchaser, in case the property had been sold without the misstatement in the particulars.—TOMLIN v. LUCE (1889), 43 Ch. It afterwards appeared that the power of sale was given only in case the mtgee. should give notice in writing to the mtgor. to pay the money due, & the mtgor. should not pay within three calendar months after such notice ; & it was provided that the receipts of the mtgee. should discharge the person paying from being answerable for misapplication of the money, or inquiring into the propriety of the sale purporting to be made in pursuance of the power, & from being obliged to be satisfied whether the terms on which the sale was made by virtue of the power were complied with. After this mtge., & before the sale, the mtgor. had executed several additional mtges. on the property. No notice was in fact given to him by the mtgee., but, before the sale, & after the subsequent mtges., he agreed in writing that it should be lawful for the first mtgee. to sell without giving notice :—Held : the purchaser, upon discovery of these facts, was entitled to rescind the contract & recover the deposit ; although, after the sale &

2414. —— —— ——.]—A mtge., of leaseholds to the trustees of a building society, in the ordinary form of a building society mtge., contained a covenant by the mtgor. to pay, as required by the rules of the society, all subscriptions, etc., in respect of this shares in the society, & also a declaration that in case of default, the total sum for which the mtge. should be for the time being redeemable according to the said rules & the mtge., should be considered as then actually due, & that the power of sale given to mtgees. by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), should apply. On the same day the mtgor. executed a second mtge. of the property to his bankers. The mtgor. subsequently became bkpt. & the second instalment of subscription under the first mtge. being in arrear, the first mtgees., a fortnight after the day on which the instalment had become due according to the rules of the society, & without any formal notice to the second mtgees. or the mtgor.'s trustee in bkpcy., though with their knowledge & consent, put up the property for sale by auction subject to conditions of sale which stipulated that the purchaser should accept a conveyance from the vendors under their power of sale, without the concurrence of any other persons. The property not being sold at the auction, the first mtgees., within three months from the date when the second instalment became due & with the approval of the second mtgees., sold the property by private contract, subject to the original conditions of sale. Upon the purchaser's requisition the mtgor.'s trustee in bkpcy. consented to join in the conveyance; but subsequently the purchaser raised the objection that the first mtgees. could not make a title at all, as their power of sale was not exercisable until three months' notice had been first given under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 20 (1). Upon a summons by the purchaser under the Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), the chief clerk made an order declaring that the vendors had shown a good title according to the conditions of sale. The vendors had, after being served with the summons, offered to procure the concurrence of the second mtgees. in the conveyance, in addition to that of the mtgor.'s trustee in bkpcy., & the second mtgees. had expressed their willingness to concur. The purchaser moved to discharge the chief clerk's order on the ground that the power of sale was not exercisable for want of the three months' notice under the Act, & that he could not be required to accept a title from the second mtgees., as offered by the vendors, since it had been stipulated by his contract that he should take a title from the first mtgees. only:—Held: the conveyance by the first mtgees. would not be the less a conveyance by them under their power of sale, according to the contract, because the second mtgees., either by the same or a separate deed, concurred in or confirmed the conveyance by passing such interest as they might have; & the second mtgees. & the mtgor.'s trustee in bkpcy. had in effect waived the notice required by the Act.—Re THOMPSON & HOLT (1890), 44 Ch. By a memorandum of even date it was declared that the mtge. money belonged to the mtgees. in certain unequal shares. Subsequently the mtgees. assigned their shares separately to two sets of trustees, who, in exercise of the power of sale, offered part of the property for sale by auction. B. Protection from Irregularity in Sale.

(a) In General.

2421. Where no express provision in mortgage—Fact giving rise to power of sale must be proved—What is evidence of default—Not unsupported declaration of mortgagee.]—(1) A mtgee. had a power of sale in case of default being made in payment of mtge. money:—Held: the unsupported solemn declaration, under Statutory Declarations Act, 1835 (c. 62), of the mtgee. alone, of a default having been made, was not sufficient evidence of that fact, as between vendor & purchaser.

(2) A sale was made by a mtgee. under a power, subject to certain special conditions. The fourth condition of sale was as follows, "the vendor shall deliver an abstract of title to the purchaser, or his solr., within two days of the day of sale, to the stock in question, & all & every objection to the title shall be made & communicated in writing to vendor's solr. within twenty-one days after the delivery of the abstract, & if the same be found valid the vendor shall be at liberty to rescind the contract on returning to the purchaser his deposit money; but all & every objection to the title not so taken & communicated within such period of twenty-one days from the delivery of the abstract aforesaid shall be deemed waived, & in this respect, time shall be considered the essence of the contract."

There were further conditions, to the effect that the purchaser should not require any other person than the vendor to join in the assignment, that all copies of deeds, etc., should be obtained at the expense of the purchaser, that any misstatement, etc., should not annul the sale, but should be the subject of compensation; & that on the purchasers failing to comply with the conditions, a resale might be made, & that the deficiency should be made good by the purchaser:—Held: they were not of such a depreciating character as to invalidate the sale.

I cannot say that these conditions of sale are of such a depreciatory character as to amount to a breach of trust, or constitute an objection to this title (LORD LANGDALE, M.R.).—HOBSON v. BELL, GLYNN v. BELL (1839), 2 Beav. 17; 8 L. J. Ch. 241; 3 Jur. 190; 48 E. R. 1084.

Mtgor. having become bkpt. in 1911, the second mtgees. went into & continued in possession of the mtged. property until Dec. 1914, when B., the first mtgee., without objection on the part of the second mtgees. & without having applied to the ct. for leave under Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914 (c. 78), went into possession, & in Mar. 1915, under the power conferred upon her by above Act, sect. 18, appointed a receiver. In 1918, B., holding herself out as mtgee. in possession & again without the leave of the ct., purported to sell the mtged. property in lots to deft. purchasers, who completed their respective purchases with notice that their vendor was not in a position to make a good title. In an action by the second mtgees. for redemption & possession against the legal personal representative of B., since deceased, & the several purchasers from B.:—Held: above sect., sub-sect. 2, afforded no defence to the action, as the attempted exercise of the power of sale in contravention of Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914 (c. 78), was not within the purview of that sect. a mere "improper or irregular exercise of the power"; & in default of compliance with the requirements of Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914 (c. 78), the effect of that Act was to abrogate the power.—ANCHOR TRUST CO., LTD. v. BELL, [1926] Ch. 805; 95 L. 2428. —— Irregularity as to notice.]—(1) There is no rule in equity that a second mtgee. shall not purchase from a first mtgee. selling under his power of sale.

(2) Where a first mtgee. under his power of sale sold the mtged. premises by private contract to second mtgees., who were mtgees. in possession & also trustees for sale for the mtgor., & the mtge. deed required that, before any sale should be made, three months' notice should be given to the mtgor., & contained a clause that a purchaser should not be required to ascertain that previous notice had been given, or to inquire into the necessity or expediency of the sale, & that the mtgee.'s discharge should be a sufficient discharge. The second mtgees., at the time they purchased, knew that the three months' notice had not been given to the mtgor., he having died some time before, & no administration having then been taken out to his estate. 2429. —— —— When waiver might have been given.]—A proviso relieving a purchaser under a power from inquiring as to the regularity of a sale does not protect a purchaser who knows of an irregularity which cannot have been waived. Qu.: whether the same rule would apply where the irregularity was one which might have been waived.

A mtge. deed contained a covenant to pay at the expiration of six months, & a power of sale in the usual form, with a proviso that the power should not be executed until the mtgee. had given notice to the mtgor. to pay off the debt, & default should have been made for three months. The deed contained also the usual clause for the protection of purchasers in any sale purporting to be made under the power. The mtgor. subsequently incumbered his equity of redemption. Two months after the date of the mtge. the mtgee. gave notice to the mtgor. to pay off the debt, & seven months after the date of the mtge. sold the property to deft. In an action by the mtgor. to set aside the sale.—Held: three months not having elapsed since default in payment of the mtge. debt, the proviso had not been complied with, & the sale was invalid; & as the purchaser must be taken to have known that the proviso had not been complied with, she was not protected by the protection clause; the mtgor. having incumbered his equity of redemption, &, therefore, not being in a position to waive the necessity of notice, the purchaser had no right to assume that there had been any such waiver.—SELWYN v. GARFIT (1888), 38 Ch. A., having mortgaged certain life policies to B. & C., a firm of solrs., to secure a bill of costs, died insolvent. B. & C. then received the policy moneys, & after paying themselves their mtge. debt thereout, had a surplus remaining in their hands. 2480. Liability of mortgagor—Leases on sale.]—Principal & interest secured by bill of sale were payable by equal monthly instalments. The borrower authorised the lender to sell, & out of the proceeds deduct the amount for which she was "liable":—Held: on sale interest ceased to run, & the lender was entitled to retain unpaid principal & interest to date only.

The sale was made by the authority of the mtgor. contained in a letter by which she authorised deft. to retain a third of the balance for his trouble. . . . In my view, I ought to apply exactly the same principle to a sale under that authority as I should apply in case of a sale by the mtgee. under a power. . . . I hold that from the moment the money was received interest ceased to run (COZENS-HARDY, J.).—WEST v. DIPROSE, [1900] 1 Ch. 337; 69 L. J. Ch. 169; 82 L. T. 20; 64 J. P. 281; 48 W. R. 389; 44 Sol. 2483. —— —— —— ——.]—A mtge. of real estate was made under the sanction of the ct. by the trustees of a will. The mtge. was transferred to deft., who sold under his power of sale & received the purchase-money. There being no existing trustees of the will, deft., after paying himself his debt & costs, retained the balance of purchase-money. An action by one of the beneficiaries under the will was brought against him for accounts, in the course of which he admitted a balance due from him of £600, which he paid into ct. On the taking of the accounts it appeared that there was a further sum due of £591. Upon further consideration, the question arose from what date deft. was chargeable with interest on this sum:—Held: the mtgee. must be charged with interest from the time of completion of the sale on the balance of purchase-money received, & could have no costs allowed him of taking the accounts.

Deft., Jones, is liable to pay interest at 4 per cent. upon the money remaining in his hands after he had paid himself his debt & costs. 2487. Security in jeopardy.] — First mtgee. having got possession by means of informal judgment, ct. will not restrain proceedings by mtgor. to restore possession, though mtgor. had disclaimed in foreclosure suit ; no receiver appointed, only appointed when the inheritance is in jeopardy.—STEVENS v. LORD (1838), 2 Jur. 92.

2488. ——.]—An agreement was entered into by A. for the sale of an estate to B., to be completed & the purchase-money paid on or before the expiration of five years, & in the meantime interest on the purchase-money was to be paid half yearly by the purchaser ; the vendor reserved a right of avoiding the contract in case the interest should be in arrear for twenty-one days.

To enable B. to pay the interest then in arrear, C. advanced a sum of money on mtge. of B.'s interest in the property, & the vendor afterwards verbally agreed with C. to extend the term for the payment of the half yearly interest. The interest became afterwards in arrear in such a way that A., by the original agreement, had a right to annul the contract, but he had no such right under the varied agreement : A. re-entered as for a forfeiture. The ct., on the application of C., appointed a receiver over the property.—DAWSON v. YATES (1838), 1 Beav. 301 ; 2 Jur. 960 ; 48 E. R. 956.

2491. Interest in arrear.]—On Sept. 30 a creditor's petition to wind up a co. was presented, & on Oct. 10 the official receiver was appointed provisional liquidator. On Oct. 11 the debenture-holders of the co., whose charge extended over all the property of the co., & whose interest was in arrear, commenced an action to enforce their security ; & on Oct. 14 a receiver was appointed on their application, with power to manage the business until the winding-up petition was disposed of. On Oct. 25 a winding-up order was made, & the official receiver was continued as provisional liquidator. On Oct. 28 leave was given to pltfs. to go on with their action ; & on the same day the receiver was continued, with power to manage the business. On Nov. 24, on the application of pltfs., leave was given to discontinue the business. The liquidator thereupon applied to discharge the receiver, & the judge considering that, as the business was discontinued, the reason for his appointment had ceased, discharged him. It appeared that there was no uncalled capital, & that the assets of the co. were not enough to pay the debentures :—Held : the order discharging the receiver must be reversed, for the debenture-holders, whose interest was in arrear, had a right to a receiver, which right was not taken away by the winding up, & the receiver ought not to be displaced without some strong reason for doing so.—STRONG v. CARLYLE PRESS, [1893] 1 Ch. 268 ; 62 L. Pltfs. brought the present action against defts. for the recovery of the land, which was the subject-matter of the redemption action. Pltfs. in the present action were then added as defts. in the redemption action by pltfs. in that action, who obtained an order staying the present action until the redemption action should be ready for trial. The defence in the present action was that pltfs. were only sub-mtgees. Pltfs. in the present action moved for a receiver, & that defts., who were in occupation of the property, should attorn tenants to pltfs. The uncontradicted evidence in support of the motion showed that the property was wasting, & was an insufficient security for the mtge. under which B. was alleged to hold:—Held: it was "just & convenient" to appoint a receiver within such Act, 1873 (c. 66), s. 25 (8), such appointment must be made unless deft. within a certain time elected to pay into ct. an occupation rent, the amount of which was to be settled in chambers.—REAL & PERSONAL ADVANCE CO. v. M'CARTHY & SMITH (1879), 40 L. Because although a legal mtgee. has power to take possession, & can do so without the assistance of a Ct. of Equity yet there are obvious conveniences in granting a receiver so as to prevent a mtgee. from being in the very unpleasant position of a mtgee. in possession (COTTON, L.J.).—Re POPE (1886), 17 Q. (2) A mtgee. who has once taken possession of the mtged. property cannot relinquish possession at his pleasure; having once assumed the responsibilities attaching to a mtgee. in possession, he cannot at his own pleasure get rid of them & as a general rule the ct. will not by appointing a receiver assist him to so so.

I do not see how a man who is himself in possession can have a right to have a receiver appointed to assist him in the performance of his duty. . . . I can see no reason why a mtgee., who has voluntarily remained in possession so long, should say at the last moment that he will give up possession, & put the mtgors. to the expense of a receivership (NORTH, J.).—Re PRYTHERCH, PRYTHERCH v. WILLIAMS (1889), 42 Ch. Appointment of receiver by way of equitable execution.—See EXECUTION, Vol. XXI., pp. 664 et seq.

2509. General rule.]—The grantor of an annuity, secured by an equitable charge on certain lands which are subject to a prior charge, goes to reside abroad, but, by his agent, continues in the receipt of the rents & profits: the ct., on the application of the annuitant, will appoint a receiver, though the grantor has not appeared to the suit.

Now it is the unquestioned rule of equity, that an equitable incumbrancer, who will take possession, may have a receiver; care being taken at the same time, that the order for the receiver shall not prevent any, who have a better title to the possession, from ousting him, if they please (LORD ELDON, C.).—TANFIELD v. IRVINE (1826), 2 Russ. 149; 38 E. By the terms of the mtge. the mtgees. were not entitled to take possession except upon a prescribed notice. Before this notice had been given pltf. had obtained an order for a receiver, & also an order to take proceedings with respect to a claim adverse to the interests of all the parties to the suit. Afterwards a decree was made in the suit, establishing the validity of the mtge. & directing a sale in which all parties were ordered to join. The mtgees. neither consented to nor opposed the interlocutory orders being made, nor did they at the hearing ask for a dismissal of the bill as against themselves, or oppose the insertion of the direction for a sale. A., the third mtgee., took possession, & then bought up the first mtge. Having retained possession many years, & received a considerable sum, a receiver was appointed against him, on the application of the second mtgee., the affidavit of A. not satisfactorily showing that anything remained due on the first mtge.

Though I have had considerable difficulty in this case, I think that the proper mode of applying the rule of the ct. is to grant a receiver. The reason is this: in the first place it is to be observed, that in cases of this description, & to avoid complication, the ct., where the priorities are not admitted, sends a reference to the master, to ascertain the priorities, in order that it may make a decree, enabling the mtgees., according to their priorities, to redeem & foreclose each other in succession. That, therefore, is an answer to the observation, that though a receiver was asked, it was refused at the hearing (ROMILLY, M.R.).—HILES v. MOORE (1852), 15 Beav. 175; 51 E. R. 503.

Of the money so borrowed the sum of £100 at the least in every year was to be repaid to such of the mtgees. as should be selected by ballot. The interest upon the mtge. was duly paid, & annual instalments were paid in the prescribed manner, though not with complete regularity. Pltfs., as mtgees., gave notice to the comrs., requiring them to pay off their mtge., £800, in six months. The comrs. refused to do so, whereupon pltfs. filed their bill to establish their right to be paid off, & for a receiver of the rates:—Held: pltfs. had no right to have their mtge. debt paid off, except under the provisions of the Act, & the ct. had no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of the rates.—PRESTON v. GREAT YARMOUTH CORPN. 2601. ——.]—There was the receivership deed & the receiver, I presume, collected the rents of some parts of the property comprised in the deed, but . . . it does not appear that he was ever in actual possession of that estate. Supposing him, however, to have been so, the possession of such receiver is wholly different from that of a mtgee. . . . 2602. ——.]—It was contended on behalf of defts., that the appointment of the receiver by the deed of even date with pltfs.'s first mtge. . . . did not constitute the receiver for all purposes the agent of the mtgor., & that in fact, the receiver must be deemed when in possession, to have received the rents as agent of pltfs., & that the only object & effect of the receivership deed was to prevent pltfs. from being charged in the accounts for wilful neglect or default. No direct authority was cited for this proposition, & if it were necessary now to decide it I should hold that it could not be maintained, & that the receiver must be treated as being for all purposes the agent of the mtgor. A party before advancing money on a mtge., inquired of the mtgor. & his wife, whether any settlement had been made upon their marriage, & was informed that a settlement had been made of the wife's fortune only, & that it did not include the husband's estate which was proposed as the security, & he afterwards advanced the mtge. money without having seen the settlement or known its contents:—Held: the mtgee. was not, under the circumstances, affected with constructive notice of the contents of the settlement, or of the fact that the settlement comprised the husband's estate.

2607. Appointment by mortgagor & mortgagee—Provision for expenses & remuneration—Right to repay expenses before paying over proceeds.]—By a receivership deed, appointing A. to be receiver of rents & tithes forming the subject of an existing mtge., it is covenanted that A. shall, in the first place, pay all the costs, charges, & expenses which he shall bear, sustain, incur, or be liable to, in or about the collecting, receiving, & compelling payment of, the said rents & tithes, including therein all expenses of suit, action, process, distress, & all other charges of management whatsoever,; & that he shall, in the next place, pay all taxes, etc.; & in the next place pay the mtge. interest; & shall, lastly, pay the surplus of the rents & tithes to the mtgor., deducting & detaining out of such surplus, for his own use, so much as he shall reasonably deserve as a compensation for his care & pains, trouble & expenses, in collecting, receiving, & paying the said rents & tithes, not exceeding 1*s.* in the pound on the gross amount collected:—Held: A. is entitled to deduct & detain out of the rents & tithes received by him, such sums as are reasonably expended by him in collecting the rents & tithes, including salaries paid to collectors, before applying such rents & tithes in satisfaction or in reduction of the mtge. interest.—GILBERT v. DYNELEY (1841), 3 Man. & G. 12; 3 Scott, N. R. 365; 5 Jur. 843; 133 E. R. 1038.

2608. —— Trusts of ultimate surplus—Power to retain for payment of insurance premium.]—Testator, in his lifetime, was appointed by deed, by a mtgor. & mtgee., to receive the rents of the mtged. estates, & by the terms of the deed testator was, after allowing taxes & repairs, to hold the remaining rents in trust, first, to pay taxes; secondly, costs of collection; thirdly, commission; fourthly, premiums on policies of insurance; & fifthly, "in satisfaction, on Jan. 6, & July 6, of the accruing interest, due on the principal moneys secured, & to pay the ultimate surplus, if any, to pltf.," with a proviso, that if on those days, Jan. 6, & July 6, testator should have rents & profits in hand, it should be lawful for him to retain the whole or part, for the purpose of paying the premium in that year on the policies. Testator did not execute the deed. There was an admitted balance at testator's death, as appeared by an account rendered by the exor.:—Held: testator was not a mere receiver but a trustee, & was not bound by the terms of the deed to pay the surplus existing on each Jan. 6, & July 6, but had a discretion under the control of a ct. of equity, to keep the funds in his hands, if reasonably necessary; also the account being stated by the exor. was equivalent only to evidence that the payments therein mentioned were made by & to testator; therefore money had & received would not lie. Qu.: whether if testator had, by the terms of his contract, as contained in the deed, been bound to pay over the surplus existing on Jan. 6, & July 6, it could have been recovered in an action for money had & received.—BARTLETT v. DIMOND (1845), 14 M. & W. 49; 14 L. 2610. Bankruptcy of mortgagor—Failure of mortgagees to give notice to debtors.]—Mtgees. of book debts appointed, before the mtgor. had committed an act of bkpcy., a receiver under the powers conferred by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), of the income of the property assigned. They subsequently obtained the appointment of the same person as receiver by the ct., without any notice of an act of bkpcy. which had been committed by their mtgor. a few days previously. A month later the mtgor. was adjudicated bkpt. The mtgees. never gave notice of the assignment to the debtors; but the receiver entered into possession of the premises assigned, & took moneys paid in respect of the book debts. The trustee in bkpcy. claimed these sums:—Held: inasmuch as the mtgees. had had ample time, between the appointment of the receiver & the adjudication, to give notice to the debtors, & had not done so, they had not determined their consent so as to take the debts out of the order & disposition of the bkpt. with the consent of the true owner, & the debts belonged to the trustee.—RUTTER v. EVERETT, [1895] 2 Ch. 872; 64 L. 2612. Agent of mortgagor—Agency modified by terms of mortgage deed.]—The fact that the covering deed goes much further than the Act [Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41)] does not in any way affect its validity; but the result is that the sixth article of the deed which I have last read goes a great deal further than the provision in the Act, that the receiver shall be deemed to be the agent of the mtgor.; &, in my opinion, the provision in the Act that the receiver shall be deemed to be the agent of the mtgor. does not apply here, because there is an express provision as to the receiver taking possession from the co. in the deed itself (NORTH, J.).—RICHARDS v. KIDDERMINSTER OVERSEERS, RICHARDS v. KIDDERMINSTER CORPN., [1896] 2 Ch. 212; 65 L. 2614. Application of income—Payment of unsecured debt—Extension of statutory powers by mortgage deed.]—H., the owner of a business, mortgaged it to S. to secure an annuity, the mtge. deed providing that S. might exercise the power of appointing a receiver under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 24, &, further, that the receiver might, if so directed in writing by S., "manage & carry on the business as he might think fit." H. continued to carry on the business from the date of the mtge., & in doing so became indebted to pltf. for work done in connection with the business. The debt was unsecured, but it was arranged between H. & pltf. that H. should pay it off by fixed instalments. In June, 1891, after having paid some of the instalments, H. died leaving an extrix., & then, S.'s annuity being in arrear, S. by writing under the power conferred by the mtge. deed appointed a receiver of the business "with full power to manage & carry on the same as he might think fit." In Aug. 1891, the receiver paid pltf. a further instalment in reduction of his debt. In a creditor's administration action commenced in July, 1897, by pltf. against H.'s extrix.:—Held: (1) the balance of pltf.'s debt was not statute barred, inasmuch as the receiver had, under the combined powers of Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 24, & of the mtge. deed, & also as agent for H.'s extrix., as he had been for H. himself, authority to continue paying the debt by instalments, & there was, as incident to his authority, an implied promise that the balance should be paid out of H.'s assets:—Qu.: whether if the case had rested solely upon the power of appointing a receiver under Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 24, the receiver would have been justified in making a payment on account of pltf.'s unsecured debt.

p. Liability to pay arrears of interest.]—A receiver appointed by a mtgee. under the powers conferred by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881, s. 19, is bound under sect. 24 (8) of that Act to pay arrears of interest due to the mtgee. at the time of the appointment, & not merely interest accruing due after that date.—NATIONAL BANK v. KENNEY, [1898] 1 I. q. Agent of mortgagor — Liability for paying statute barred debts.]—A receiver appointed by a mtgee. pursuant to the powers of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 24, being for all purposes the agent of the mtgor. commits a breach of duty if he pays arrears of interest on the mtge. which are statute-barred.—HIBERNIAN BANK v. YOURELL (No. 2), [1919] 1 I. 2615. —— Expenditure on repairs—Limited to necessary repairs—Directed in writing by mortgagee.]—A receiver appointed by a mtgee. under the powers of Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), cannot, on the account taken in a foreclosure action of what is due to the mtgee., be allowed any costs of repairs to the mtged. property, except costs of necessary or proper repairs directed in writing by the mtgee. as provided by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 24 (8), clause 3. It is immaterial in such a case that the receiver be the manager of a society which has guaranteed the mtgee. against loss in respect of his security, & that the costs of repairs in question have been paid out of moneys supplied by the society. Where the mtgee. by whom such money spent on repairs is to be taken to have been expended is a first mtgee., he has no right or authority to charge it against the second mtgee.—WHITE v. METCALF, [1903] 2 Ch. 567; 72 L. SECT. 5.—ACTION ON COVENANT FOR PAYMENT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—WHEN RIGHT OF ACTION ARISES.

A. Principal Payable on Demand.

2639. Necessity for demand—Present debt—Interest payable without demand.]—The declaration stated, that by an indenture of July 20, 1825, made between pltf. of the first part, E., deft.'s testator, of the second part, & W., of the third part, E. did, for himself, his exors., &c., covenant with the pltf. to pay to W. £1,200. Breach, non-payment by E., in his lifetime, or by deft. as his exor., to pltf., or W. Deft. pleaded, first, non est factum, & in the second plea set out the indenture declared on, not on oyer, but verbatim. In this indenture it was stated, that by an indenture of mtge., dated Apr. 12, 1825, W. had become mtgee. of the premises in question, to pltf., for £1,200, with a proviso, that if pltf. should within six months after demand of payment of the £1,200, such demand to be in writing, but not to be good or valid unless made after Apr. 12, 1828, to pay W. £1,200 & interest, W. would assign the premises to pltf. The indenture declared on then stated, that for the considerations therein mentioned, pltf. sold to E., his exors., etc., the premises in question, for the residue of the term, subject to the indenture of mtge., to W., of Apr. 12, 1825, & to the payment of the sum of £1,200 thereby secured, & interest. The plea then alleged, that after the breaches in the declaration, to wit, on Oct. 24, 1825, pltf. became a bkpt.; that his estate was conveyed to certain persons in trust for the creditors, not stating that such persons had been chosen assignees; that afterwards, to wit, on Oct. 24, 1826, pltf. obtained his certificate, & that the £1,200 became payable by pltf. to W., before the bkpcy. of pltf. The third plea stated, that the indenture declared on was the same as that set forth in the second plea; it then set out the proviso & covenant contained in the indenture of mtge., of Apr. 12, 1825, & alleged that no demand in writing of payment of the £1,200 had been given to pltf. These pleas having been demurred to :—Held : (1) the declaration was good; (2) the £1,200 was not due until after six months' demand, in writing, subsequent to Apr. 12, 1828; & the second special plea was a sufficient answer as to the principal sum of £1,200; (3) the interest on the sum of £1,200 being payable absolutely, & not on demand, the plea, which was pleaded to the interest as well as to the principal, being bad in part, was bad altogether, & the same objection applied to the first special plea.—TROTT v. SMITH (1844), 12 M. & W. 688; 13 L. 2640. —— ——.]—Where there is a present debt & a covenant or promise to pay on demand, the demand is not considered a condition precedent to bringing the action; but where there is a covenant or promise to pay a collateral sum, on demand, e.g., in a covenant by a surety for the principal debtor, then request must be made before action brought, or before the money can be considered as owing by the collateral debtor.

A mtge. of Sept. 1867, contained a joint & several covenant by a father & his son to pay the mtgee. £3,000 "on demand," & that they would, "in the meantime from the date hereof," pay interest on the same, at the rate therein mentioned. The father, who had joined as surety only, died in Nov. 1872, & his estate was being administered in an action commenced in Apr. 1880. No claim was made against the father's estate in respect of his liability on the covenant in the mtge., until July, 1889. The mtgee. now claimed to be let in as a creditor of the father's estate, in respect of the amount due on the mtge., which the son was unable to pay :—Held : the right of action did not accrue against the father's estate until July, 1889, when demand was first made, & consequently the mtgee. was entitled to come in & prove his claim against the father's estate, without disturbing any dividends already distributed.—Re BROWN'S ESTATE, BROWN v. BROWN, [1893] 2 Ch. 300; 62 L. By a deed, dated Dec. 15, 1884, the above-mentioned mtge. & various other mtges., including other property, given by the mtgor. were consolidated, pltf. advancing the total sum of £3,200 for payment to the various mtgees. of the amounts of their respective debts, & taking assignments of such debts & the mtged. properties, "with the full benefit of the covenants" contained in the respective mtge. deeds; & the mtgor. covenanted with pltf. for the payment of £3,200 on Jan. 19, 1885. Deft. was not a party to such last-mentioned deed :—Held : the covenant in that deed necessarily implied that principal debtor could not be sued for the £450 due under the covenant in the deed of 1857 before Jan. 19, 1885, & consequently, there had been a giving of

C. Agreement Not to Sue for Fixed Period.

2644. Whether implied—Agreement to advance by instalments over two years.]—Written agreements relating to the working of some quarries contained (inter alia) the following provisions—"That defts. should allow & pay to pltfs. for two years, from Dec. 7, 1870, the sum of £400 for each year, by equal quarterly sums of £100; that the sums of money which should be paid to pltfs. under that clause, should be added to a debt of £7,035 then due from pltfs. & that the whole amount of such debt should bear interest from time to time at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum; that the said sum of £ , meaning the £7,035 & all additions thereto, whether by means of the two sums of £400 above-mentioned, & all interest upon the said debt, should be a first charge upon the purchase-money which should become payable to pltfs. under the sixth clause of the last agreement." Defts. had advanced the above sum of £7,035 & other moneys to pltfs. on their personal account & also on the security of the working of the quarries which were managed by pltfs. Defts. considered the workings were not successful; & in June, 1872, they sued pltfs. at law for their debt. Pltfs. then filed their bill in this suit for the specific performance of the agreements, an account, & an injunction to restrain the action. A motion for the injunction was made on Aug. 1, but refused mainly on the grounds that there was no implied covenant by defts. not to sue for their debt before the expiration of the two years from the date of the agreements; & that a parol understanding to the contrary, relied on by pltfs., could not be allowed to control the written contract:—Held: there was an agreement not to sue during the two years, & the injunction was granted until the expiration of the two years.—CURTEIS v. FENNING (1872), 41 L. J. Ch. 791, L. C.

2645. Agreement conditional on observance of covenants—Waiver of breach by subsequent receipt of rent.]—Mtgee. agreed with a mtgor. that if mtgor. punctually performed the covenants contained in the mtge. deed he would not call in the mtge. money for five years. The mtgor. during the first year committed several breaches of covenant.

About one & a half years after the last of these breaches, & before the expiration of the five years, the mtgee. gave notice calling in the mtge. money, alleging the breaches aforesaid.

During this period of one & a half years the mtgee. had duly received the interest on the mtge. money on each quarter day as it accrued due:—Held: the receipt of interest was one of the facts receivable in evidence in determining whether pltf. had waived his right to call in the money before the expiration of the five years accruing to him on the commission of the breaches of covenant by the mtgor.—SEAL v. GIMSON (1914), 110 L. PART XIII. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 3.—A.

2649 i. Effect of covenant with assignor—To indemnify.]—The obligation of a purchaser of mtged. lands to indemnify his grantor against the personal covenant for payment may be assigned even before the institution of an action for the recovery of the mtge. debt, & if assigned to a person entitled to recover the debt, it gives the assignee a direct right of action against the person liable to pay the same.—MALONEY v. CAMPBELL (1897), 28 S. C. R. 228.—CAN.

2650 i. —— To pay mortgage.]—Although a purchaser from the mtgor. of the equity of redemption, covenants with him to pay off the mtge. debt, this, owing to the want of privity, affords no ground for the mtgee. proceeding against the purchaser, either at law or in equity, to compel him to perform his covenant.—CLARKSON v. SCOTT (1878), 25 Gr. 373.—CAN.

2650 ii. —— ——.]—Although the purchaser of the equity of redemption in a mtged. property covenants with the mtgor. to pay the mtge. money, as the expressed consideration for the conveyance, there is no privity of contract or any implied obligation created thereby, which will enable the mtgee. to sue the purchaser for the amount.—FRONTENAC LOAN & INVESTMENT SOCIETY v. HYSOP (1892), 21 O. R. 577.—CAN.

2650 iii. —— ——.]—The purchaser of land, subject to a mtge., does not ipso facto become personally liable to the mtgee. for the amount of the mtge. nor does he become liable to the mtgee. by entering into a covenant with his vendor to pay the mtge. In other words, the burden of a covenant to pay mtge. money does not run with the mtged. lands.—CANADA LANDED & NATIONAL INVESTMENT CO. v. SHAVER (1895), 22 A. R. 377.—CAN.

2650 iv. —— ——.]—The owner of land, after mortgaging it, assigned his equity of redemption to a third party, who covenanted to pay off the mtge. debt, & afterwards purchased the mtged. premises, under a decree at the suit of the mtgee. At the sale the amount realised was not sufficient to cover the amount due to the mtgee.: Held: under the circumstances he was not entitled to any lien on the estate for the deficiency.—FORBES v. ADAMSON, 1 Ch. Ch. 117.—CAN.

2651 i. New contract with mortgagee—Different times & modes of payment—Assignee liable.]—On the purchase of an estate subject to a mtge. the purchaser agreed to pay off the security, & subsequently agreed with the mtgee. for an extension of time for five years agreeing in consideration thereof to pay an increased rate of interest, & covenanted that he would pay to the mtgee. the said interest quarterly, so long as the said forbearance should continue, & until the principal money was fully paid. On a bill filed to enforce payment of the incumbrance: —Held: the purchaser was personally bound to pay only the interest on the debt.—MATHERS v. HELLIWELL (1863), 10 Gr. 172.—CAN.

g. Effect of release by mortgagee.]—A mtgor. conveyed part of the mtged. property to a purchaser, the mtgor. covenanting against incumbrances; & the mtgee. subsequently released the part so sold from his mtge.:—Held: as the release was in accordance with the mtgor.'s own obligation as to that part, it did not affect the mtgor.'s right to recover the mtge. debt.—CRAWFORD v. ARMOUR (1867), 13 Gr. 576.—CAN.

h. Implied covenant to pay mortgage—Under Land Titles Act.]—The effect of Sect. 63 of above Act, as amended 1909 statutes, c. 20, s. 5, is to give a mtgee. of lands the right to proceed against a purchaser from the mtgor., directly, thus avoiding the necessity of obtaining an assignment from the mtgor. of his right of indemnity.—MONTREAL TRUST CO. v. BOGGS & BERESFORD (1915), 31 W. L. R. 914; 25 D. L. R. 432.—CAN.

l. —— ——.]—When mtged. land is transferred by one transfer to a number of transferees who each take a specified undivided interest therein & there is no arrangement, agreement or covenant negativing or restricting their liability to the mtgee. under the covenant implied by sect. 54 of above Act, each of the transferees is liable to the mtgee. for the whole amount payable on the mtge., even though certificates of title have been issued to the transferees for their specified interests.—TRUSTS & GUARANTEE CO., LTD. v. MONK, [1925] 1 D. L. R. 350; [1925] 1 W. W. R. 5; 21 Alta. L. R. 151; affg., [1923] 3 W. W. R. 1217.—CAN.

2658. ——.]—In 1775, A. became owner in fee of estates W. & L. The W. estate was subject to mtges. amounting to £5,344 & the L. estate to a mtge. amounting to £2,200, all of which were created by A.'s ancestor. In 1787 A. mortgaged the L. estate for £8,000 reversing the equity of redemption to himself, & personally covenanting to pay the money out of this sum. He paid off the three mtges. on the W. estate; A. died in 1806: —Held: as between the representatives of A., the mtge. was primarily payable of A.'s personal estate.—BAGOT v. BAGOT (1864), 34 Beav. 134; 5 New Rep. 157; 11 L. T. 437; 10 Jur. N. S. 1169; 13 W. R. 169; 55 E. R. 585.

2659. Devisee—Devisees of mortgaged & unmortgaged estate—Joint liability.]—Payment of interest by the specific devisee of part of testator's real estate, which was subject to a mtge. created by testator, is sufficient to keep the mtgee.'s right of action alive against the specific devisees of other parts of the real estate which was not subject to the mtge., & thus entitle the mtgee. to an order for administration of the whole of testator's real estate.

The result is that for the purpose of this specialty debt all the devisees under the will, whether they are devisees of a mtged. or a free estate, stand on the same footing, & are jointly liable to the specialty creditor (FARWELL, J.).—Re LACEY, HOWARD v. LIGHTFOOT, [1907] 1 Ch. 330; 76 L. Six months later the mtgee. was informed of the assignment & death, but as he received his interest regularly from the assignee, he took no steps so realise his security or to enforce the mtgor.'s covenant. After thirteen years the assignee made default, & the security was found insufficient. The mtgors. estate had long since been distributed:—Held: the mtgee. was entitled to follow the mtgor.'s assets for any deficiency on the security.—Re EUSTACE, LEE v. MCMILLAN, [1912] 1 Ch. 561; 81 L. SUB-SECT. 5.—LOSS OF RIGHT.

A. Severance of Debt from Security.

2662. General rule—Right of mortgagor to reconveyance.]—The assignee of a mtge. cannot stand in any different character, or hold any different position from that of the mtgee. himself, although the mtgor. may not have been a party to the assignment. Every mtgor. has the right to have a reconveyance of the mtged. property upon payment of the money due upon the mtge., & the mtgee. is charged with the duty of making such reconveyance upon such payment being made. Where, therefore, a mtgee. having, besides the property mtged., certain promissory notes made by the mtgor. as collateral security for his debt, transferred the mtge. without assigning the collateral securities:—Held: he was not entitled so to sever the debt from the security, & an injunction granted against his proceeding at law to recover the amount of one of his notes pending a suit instituted by the mtgor., to redeem & to settle the equities of the parties, sustained.—WALKER v. JONES (1866), L. 2666. Sale under power—Action on covenant for balance.]—To a declaration by mtgee. against mtgor. for the balance due for principal & interest after sale under a power in the deed of the mtged. property, defts. pleaded, on equitable grounds, that, after default in payment of principal & interest, pltf., pursuant to the covenants in the deed, entered into & took possession of the mtged. premises, & sold the same, & so deprived deft. of his right to have them reconveyed to him on payment of the principal money & interest due. A judge at chambers having struck out the plea, on the ground that it was a bad & dishonest plea, the ct. refused to interfere.—RUDGE v. RICHENS (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 358; 42 L. J. C. P. 127; 28 L. 2667. —— ——.]—By a memorandum of deposit, dated in 1882, of bonds to secure the repayment in 1883 of an advance, the borrower authorised the lender to sell the bonds for the purpose of repaying the advance, & undertook to pay the lender any difference between the proceeds of the bonds & the amount of the advance. In 1889 the lender sold the bonds, but the proceeds were not sufficient to repay the whole of the advance. In 1891 the borrower died without having given any acknowledgment of the debt:—Held: the cause of action in respect of the whole of the debt accrued in 1883 & not in 1889, & therefore a claim for the difference by the lender against the estate of the borrower was barred by Stat. Limitations.

It appears to me that that clause was not intended to alter the contract to pay, but to express the right of the creditor as to the mode of dealing with the securities. It gives him power to sell the securities, & directs him what to do with the proceeds, & says that the debtor will pay the deficiency. That does not affect the original promise or obligation to pay (LINDLEY, L.J.).—Re MCHENRY, MCDERMOTT v. BOYD, BARKER'S CLAIM, [1894] 3 Ch. 290; 63 L. J. Ch. 741; 71 L. T. 146; 43 W. R. 20; 10 T. 2666 iii. —— ——.] Defts., having put it out of their power to reconvey to pltfs., upon payment of the mtge.-money, & having done this by an exercise of a power of sale, which was not bonâ fide, but intended to cut out the equity of redemption, while still enforcing payment of the debt, were restrained from enforcing a judgment which they had previously recovered on the covenant in the mtge.—CROTTY v. TAYLOR (1892), 8 Man.
