THE FATE OF CATHLEEN,

A WICKLOW STORY

I.

In Luggelaw's deep-wooded vale,
The summer eve was dying ;
On lake, and cliff, and rock, and dale,
A lulling calm was lying ;
And virgin saints and holy men
The vesper song were singing,
And sweetly down the rocky glen
The vesper bell was ringing.

II.

Soft gloom fell from the mountain's breast,
Upon the lake declining ;
And half in gentle shade was drest,
And half like silver shining—
And by that shore young Kevin stands,
His heart with anguish laden ;
And timid there, with wreathed hands,
A fair and gentle maiden.

III.

And, "Oh," she said, "I've left for thee,
My own beloved bowers,
The walks I trod in infancy,
My father's ancient towers.
I've left for thee my natal hall,
Where late I lived in splendour,
And home and friends and fame and all,
I sighed not to surrender."

IV.

"Away!" he muttered low; "in youth
A vow to heaven I've spoken,
And I will keep my boyish truth
To age and death unbroken.
Oh, would'st thou bribe my heart to sin
Against that high endeavour,
And cast those tempting eyes between
"That heaven and me for ever?"

The maid looked up in still surprise,
Her cheeks with tear-drops streaming,
A guileless light was in her eyes,
Like childhood's sorrow gleaming.
"Oh had I here a heaven to give,
Thou should'st be blest this hour,
Then how should I thine hope bereave
Of that eternal dower?"

VI.

“ Ah, no—Cathleen will ask no more,
For home and friends forsaken,
Than here upon this peaceful shore
To see the morn awaken :
Beneath thy holy roof to dwell
A lorn and timid stranger ;
And watch thee in thy lonely cell
In sickness and in danger.

VII.

To rouse thee when the cowed train
Their matin beads are telling,
To hear young Kevin's fervent strain
Amid the anthem swelling.
To smile whene'er thy smiles I see,
To sigh when thou art sighing,
To live while life is left to thee,
And die when thou art dying.”

VIII.

“ My prayers,” he said, “ were little worth
While thou wert kneeling near me ;
My hymns were dull as songs of earth,
If thou wert by to hear me.
Oh, you are young and guiltless still,
To sin and shame a stranger,
And what to thee seems pure from ill
To me looks dark with danger.

IX.

“ There is a Heaven in yon blue sphere
Where joy abounds for ever,
There may we fondly meet, but here
In this cold exile, never.
There may we look with loving eyes
While happy souls are singing,
While angel smiles light all the skies,
And the bells of Heaven are ringing.

“ But here—but here—ah, fair Cathleen
Through all this wide creation,
In all that's bright there lurketh sin,
In all that's fair, temptation.
It tracks the steps of young Delight,
When souls are gay and tender ;
It walketh in the dark midnight,
And in the noonday splendour.

XI.

“ It murmurs in the rising wind
That stirs the morning flowers,
On Friendship's lap it lies reclined,
And sighs in Love's own bowers.
It shines o'er all the summer skies,
When dew's the wild buds cherish ;
And worst of all, in woman's eyes,
Ah hide them ! or I perish.”

XII.

The maiden calmly, sadly smiled,
She plucked an opening flower,
She gazed along the mountain wild,
And on the evening bower.
“I’ve looked,” she said, “from east to west,
But sin has never found me ;
I cannot feel it in my breast,
Nor see it all around me.

XIII.

“The light that fills those summer skies,
The laugh that flows the freest,
I’ve marked with loving ears and eyes,
Nor saw the ill thou seest.
I always thought that morning air
Blew on my bosom purely ;
The worst I find in all that’s fair
“Is that it fades too surely.

XIV.

“If it be sin to love thy name,
And tire of loving never,
Why am I spared the inward shame
That follows sin for ever ?
For I can lift my hands and eyes
To that bright Heaven above me ;
And gaze upon the cloudless skies
And say aloud—I love thee ;

XV.

"I had a brother in my home,
I loved—I love him truly ;
With him it was my wont to roam
When morn was breaking newly.
With him I've cheered the weary time
With cruit* soft or story,
He never spake of secret crime,
Of sin or tainted glory.

XVI.

"But thou,"—"But I," young Kevin said,
"Will love thee like that brother ;
And wilt thou be content, sweet maid,
To find in me another !
And seek ye but a brother's grace,
A brother's calm caresses—"
The maiden hid her burning face
Within her golden tresses.

XVII.

"Farewell !" she sighed, "I plead in vain,
My dream of love is ended ;
Thy thoughts of me with thoughts of pain
Shall never more be blended.
But now the even is falling late,
The way is long and lonely,
Oh, let me rest within thy gate
Till morning rises, only !"

* A small harp.

XVIII.

Young Kevin paused—the dew fell chill—
The clouds rolled black and swelling ;
Ah no—he could not deem it ill
To lodge her in his dwelling :
For churls like Nabal deeply sin
And lasting pains inherit,
And those who take the stranger in
Have patriarchal merit.

XIX.

But oft he thought, 'mid holy strains,
Upon that lovely woman ;
For, oh, the blood within his veins
Was warm, and young, and human.
He told his nightly beads in vain,
Sleep never came so slowly ;
And all that night young Kevin's brain
Was filled with dreams unholy.

XX.

The young man rose at dawning hour,
To chaunt his first devotion,
And, tiptoe, then, to Cathleen's bower
He stole, in still'd emotion.
Breathless above the maiden's form
He hung—and saw her sleeping ;
Her brow was damp—her cheek was warm,
And wore the stains of weeping.

XXI.

Beside her couched an aged hound
 (Her Kevin's sole attendant)
One hand his sable neck around,
 Like light in gloom resplendent.
The dog sprung up, that hand fell down,
 As Kevin's sigh came deeper,
He crouch'd him at his master's frown
 And never woke the sleeper.

XXII.

And scenes of calm domestic bliss
 On Kevin's soul came thronging ;
Endearments soft and smiling peace,
 And love, the young heart's longing.
Why did he swear in youth to live
 For saintly duties only ?
And leave those joys that love can give,
 To lead a life so lonely ?

XXIII.

Oh !—were he now a bridegroom gay !
 Lord in his natal tower,
And were this morn his bridal day,
 And this his marriage bower :—
Where were the wondrous ill, he said,
 To him, to earth, to Heaven ?
Just then, the dreamer turned her head,
 And murmured deep “ My Kevin ! ”

XXIV.

He started, trembled, burned, his limbs
Shook with the sudden passion ;
His eye in sudden moisture swims
And stirs in maniac fashion.
A whirlwind in his brooding soul
Arose and tossed it madly ;
Then swift away the storm clouds roll,
And leave him drooping sadly.

XXV.

Again, that fond impassion'd moan
Upon her warm lip lingers,
He stoops and twines within his own
Those white and taper fingers.
He bends—ah, hark ! the convent toll !
Another knell ! another !
They peal a requiem to the soul
Of a departed brother !

XXVI.

Up, and away ! With freezing blood
He rushes from the bower,
And seeks the beechen solitude,
Beside the convent tower.
There hooded maids and cowed men
The dirge of death were singing,
And sullen down the rocky glen
The knell of death was ringing.

XXVII.

He raised to Heaven his hands and eyes,
Lone, in the silent morning,
And said, through humble tears and sighs,
“ I bless thee for the warning !
Oft dost thou thus with sounds of awe
My slumbering soul awaken :
If I forsake thy love and law
Oh, let me be forsaken !

XXVIII.

“ Thou hast a golden crown for those
Who leaves earth’s raptures hollow,
And firmly still through wiles and woes
The light of virtue follow.
Oh, be this weak heart still thy care,
Be still my soul’s defender,
And grant that crown for me may wear
No soil upon its splendour.

XXIX.

“ If tears, and prayers, and vigils lean,
A sin like mine may cover,
I’ll weep while summer woods are green,
And watch till time is over.
But mighty armour must I weave
Against that tempting woman,
For, oh, she haunts me morn and eve,
And I am weak and human.”

XXX.

A counsel woke within his heart,
While yet the youth was kneeling,
It whispered to his soul—"Depart,
And shun the war of feeling.
Courage on battle fields is shewn
By fighting firm and dying,
But in the strife with Love alone
The glory lies in flying."

XXXI.

Swift as the sudden wind that sings
Across the storm-roused ocean,
Swift as the silent prayer that springs
Up, warm, from young Devotion,
Swift as the brook, the light, the air,
As death, time, thought, or glory,
Young Kevin flies that valley fair,
That lake and mountain hoary.

XXXII.

And far away, and far away,
O'er heath and hill he speeds him,
While virtue cheers the desert grey,
And light immortal leads him.
And far away, and far, and far
From his accustomed fountain,
Till quench'd in light the morning star
And day was on the mountain.

XXXIII.

In Luggelaw's deep wooded vale
The summer dawn was breaking,
On lake and cliff and wood and dale
Light, life, and joy were waking,
The skylark in the ear of morn
His shrilly fife was sounding,
With speckled side, and mossy horn,
The deer were up and bounding.

XXXIV.

Young Nature now all bustlingly
Stirs from her nightly slumber,
And puts those misty curtains by
Her mighty couch that cumber.
And dews hang fresh on leaf and thorn,
And o'er each eastern highland
Those golden clouds at eve and morn
That grace our own green island.

XXXV.

Light laughed the vale, gay smiled the sun,
Earth's welcome glad returning,
Like Valour come when wars are done,
To Beauty in her mourning.
The night calm flies, the ruffling breeze
Sports on the glancing water,
And gently waves the tangled trees

XXXVI.

Like one in pain, athwart her brow,
One hand her hair draws tightly,
Now falls that glance in tears, and now
It glimmers quick and brightly.
For she has missed her votive love
Within his lonely bower,
Nor is he in the beechen grove,
Nor in the convent tower.

XXXVII.

"I fear" she sighed, and bowed her head
"I fear he told me truly,
That sin is in the sunshine bred,
And roses springing newly ;
For dreary looks this bower to me,
Even while those roses wreath it ;
And even that sunshine beaming free
Hides something dark beneath it.

XXXVIII.

"That dew—" she paused ! What foot has been Upon its early brightness ?
And left a track of deepening green
Across its silver whiteness ?
She traced it by the ravell'd brake,
And by the silent fountain,
And o'er that lawn, and by that lake,
And up that hoary mountain.

XXXIX.

But there the thirsty morning sun
Had dewless left the heather,
Her eye, o'er all the desert dun
No single trace can gather.
Yet on she went, for in her breast
Deep passion fierce was burning ;
Passion, that brooks not pause nor rest
And sickens at returning.

XL.

And far away—and far away—
O'er heath and hill she speeds her,
While Hope lights up that desert grey,
And love untiring leads her.
And far away—and far—and far
From lake and convent tower,
Till, div'd in gloom, day's golden car
And night was on the bower.

XLI.

Now thridding lone the rugged Scalp
With wounded feet and weary,
Now toiling o'er each mimic Alp
Of Wicklow's desert dreary.
Oh, lonely Bray, thy basin'd tide
She passed at sunset mellow,
And Ouler's lake, where far and wide
Its haunted flame shone yellow.

XLII.

Night fell—day rose—night fell again,
And the dim day-dawn found her
On Glendalough's deep bosomed plain,
With lake and cliff around her.
There, tired with travel long and vain,
She sinks beside that water,
For toil and woe and wasting pain
Have worn the Chieftain's daughter.

XLIII.

Tall, darkening o'er her high Lugduff
Gathered his lordly forehead,
And sheath'd his breast in granite rough,
Rent crag and splinter horrid.
His helm of rock beat back the breeze
Without a leaf to wreath it,
The vassal waves rolled in to kiss
His mailed foot beneath it.

XLIV.

Sudden, with joyous yelp and bound,
A dog comes swiftly by her;
She knows—she knows that aged hound,
And he she loves is nigh her!
The warden flies—she follows swift—
The dangerous footway keeping,
Till, deep within the jagged clift,
She found her Kevin sleeping.

XLV.

With hair tossed out and hands clench'd tight,
The rugged granite hugging,
Like these who with the Hag of Night
For voice and breath are tugging.
For oh, he had a horrid dream,
And every nerve has felt it ;
And ruin was the gloomy theme,
And Cathleen's hand had dealt it.

XLVI.

He dreamed that at the golded gate
Of Heaven, flung wide and gleaming,
He heard soft music as he sate,
And saw bright pinions beaming ;
Millions of sainted shapes he saw,
In light and fragrance ranging,
And calm delight, and holy awe,
In speaking looks exchanging.

XLVII.

He strove to join that angel band,
But, in the porch before him,
With mocking eye and warning hand,
Cathleen stood glooming o'er him ;
She thrust him from the sainted crowd,
The gates rang clanging after,
And on his ear came long and loud
A peal of fearful laughter.

XLVIII.

Again it opes, again he tries
To join that glorious vision,
Again with lifted hands, and eyes
Deep fixed in keen dirision,
That minion of the burning deep
Stands wrapt in gloom before him,
Up springs he from his broken sleep,
And sees her trembling o'er him !

XLIX.

" Vengeance !" he yelled, and backward toss'd
His arms, and muttered wildly :
The frightened maid her forehead crossed,
And dropped before him mildly.
" Oh, slay me not—Oh, Kevin, spare
The life thy Lord has given !"
He paused, and fixed his barren stare
Upon the brightening heaven.

L.

" Cathleen," he sighed, " that timely word
Has left my hands unbloody ;
But see, the early morning bird
Sings in the sunshine ruddy.
Before that matin strain be o'er
Fly far, and hate, and fear me ;
For Death is on this gloomy shore,
And madness haunting near me."

LI.

With clenched teeth, and painful smile
 (Love's last despairing token,)
She flung her arms around him, while
 Her heart beat thick and broken.
She clasp'd him as she would have grown
 Into his breast for ever :
Then fixed her gaze upon his own,
 And sternly whispered—" Never !"

LII.

Again, again ! those madding dreams
 Upon his soul awaken,
The fiend athwart his eye-ball swims—
 Those golden gates are shaken !—
Again he hears that ringing mock
 The vision'd stillness breaking,
And hurls the maiden from the rock
 Into the black lake, shrieking !

LIII.

Down gazed he phrenzied, on the tide—
 Cathleen ! How comes he lonely ?
Why has she left her Kevin's side
 That lived for Kevin only ?
What mean those circles in the lake
 When not a wind is breathing ?
What bubbles on the surface break ?
 What horrid foam is wreathing ?

LIV.

Oh, never more—oh, never more,
By lake or convent tower,
Shall poor Cathleen come, timid, o'er
To haunt his evening bower.
Oh, never more shall that young eye
Beam on his prayer and break it,
And never shall that fond heart's sigh
Thrill to his own and wake it.

LV.

The fiend that mocks at human woes
Frowned at that maniac minute,
For well the baffled demon knows
The hand of Heaven was in it.
Oh, tempted at that saintly height,
If they to earth sunk lowly,
She ne'er had been an angel bright,
Nor he a victor holy !

LVI.

Aye, they are in their bowers of rest,
With light immortal round them ;
Yet pensive heaves the pitying breast
To think how soon it found them.
The lark ne'er wakes the ruddy morn
Above that gloomy water,
Where sudden died, and passion lorn,
Cathleen, the Chieftain's daughter

[It is hardly necessary to remind the Reader of the beautiful little melody, in which Mr. Moore first brought this legend before the public.]

I.

By that Lake, whose gloomy shore
Sky-lark never warbles o'er,
Where the cliff hangs high and steep,
Young Saint Kevin stole to sleep.
"Here, at least," he calmly said,
"Woman ne'er shall find my bed,
Ah! the good Saint little knew
What that wily sex can do.

II.

'Twas from Kathleen's eyes he flew,—
Eyes of most unholy blue!
She had loved him well and long,
Wish'd him hers, nor thought it wrong.
Wheresoever the Saint would fly,
Still he heard her light foot nigh;
East or west where'er he turn'd,
Still her eyes before him burn'd.

III.

On the bold cliffs bosom cast,
Tranquil now he sleeps at last;
Dreams of heav'n nor thinks that e'er
Woman's smile can haunt him there.
But nor earth nor heaven is free,
From her power, if fond she be;
Even now, while calm he sleeps,
Kathleen o'er him leans and weeps.

IV.

Fearless she had track'd his feet,
To this rocky, wild retreat;
And when morning met his view,
Her mild glances met it too.
Ah, your Saints have cruel hearts!
Sternly from his bed he starts,
And with rude, repulsive shock,
Hurls her from the beetling rock.

V.

Glendalough, thy gloomy wave,
Soon was gentle Kathleen's grave!
Soon the Saint, (yet ah! too late,)
Felt her love and mourn'd her fate.
When he said, "Heav'n rest her soul!"
Round the Lake light music stole;
And her ghost was seen to glide,
Smiling o'er the fatal tide.

THE BRIDAL OF MALAHIDIE.

AN IRISH LEGEND.

I.

The joy-bells are ringing
In gay Malahide,
The fresh wind is singing
Along the sea-side ;
The maids are assembling
With garlands of flowers,
And the harpstrings are trembling
In all the glad bowers.

II.

Swell, swell the gay measure !
Roll trumpet and drum !
Mid greetings of pleasure
In splendour they come !
The chancel is ready,
The portal stands wide
For the lord and the lady,
The bridegroom and bride.

III.

What years, ere the latter,
Of earthly delight
The future shall scatter
O'er them in its flight !
What blissful caresses
Shall Fortune bestow,
Ere those dark-flowing tresses
Fall white as the snow !

IV.

Before the high altar
Young Maud stands array'd ;
With accents that falter
Her promise is made—
From father and mother
For ever to part,
For him and no other
To treasure her heart.

V.

The words are repeated,
The bridal is done,
The rite is completed—
The two, they are one ;
The vow, it is spoken,
All pure from the heart,
That must not be broken
Till life shall depart.

VI.

Hark ! 'mid the gay clangour
That compass'd their car,
Loud accents in anger
Come mingling afar !
The foe's on the border,
His weapons resound
Where the lines in disorder
Unguarded are found.

VII.

As wakes the good shepherd,
The watchful and bold,
When the ounce or the leopard
Is seen in the fold,
So rises already
The chief in his mail,
While the new-married lady
Looks fainting and pale.

VIII.

“ Son, husband, and brother,
Arise to the strife,
For the sister and mother,
For children and wife !
O'er hill and o'er hollow,
O'er mountain and plain,
Up, true men, and follow !
Let dastards remain !”

IX.

Farrah ! to the battle !
They form into line—
The shields, how they rattle !
The spears, how they shine !
Soon, soon shall the foeman
His treachery rue—
On, burgher and yeoman,
To die or to do !

The eve is declining
In lone Malahide,
The maidens are twining
Gay wreaths for the bride ;
She marks them unheeding—
Her heart is afar,
Where the clansmen are bleeding
For her in the war.

XI.

Hark ! loud from the mountain
'Tis Victory's cry !
O'er woodland and fountain
It rings to the sky !
The foe has retreated !
He flies to the shore ;
The spoiler's defeated—
The combat is o'er !

XII.

With foreheads unruffled
The conquerors come—
But why have they muffled
The lance and the drum ?
What form do they carry
Aloft on his shield ?
And where does he tarry,
The lord of the field ?

XIII.

Ye saw him at morning
How gallant and gay !
In bridal adorning,
The star of the day :
Now weep for the lover—
His triumph is sped,
His hope it is over !
The chieftain is dead !

XIV.

But O for the maiden
Who mourns for that chief,
With heart overladen
And rending with grief !
She sinks on the meadow
In one morning-tide,
A wife and a widow,
A maid and a bride !

XV.

Ye maidens attending,
Forbear to condole !
Your comfort is rending
The depths of her soul.
True—true, 'twas a story
For ages of pride ;
He died in his glory—
But, oh, he has died !

XVI.

The war cloak she raises
All mournfully now,
And steadfastly gazes
Upon the cold brow.
That glance may for ever
Unalter'd remain,
But the bridegroom will never
Return it again.

XVII.

The dead-bells are tolling
In sad Malahide,
The death-wail is rolling
Along the sea-side ;
The crowds, heavy hearted,
Withdraw from the green,
For the sun has departed
That brighten'd the scene !

XVIII.

Ev'n yet in that valley,
Though years have roll'd by,
When through the wild sally
The sea-breezes sigh,
The peasant, with sorrow,
Beholds in the shade
The tomb where the morrow
Saw Hussy convey'd.

XIX.

How scant was the warning,
How briefly reveal'd,
Before on that morning
Death's chalice was fill'd !
The hero who drunk it
There moulders in gloom,
And the form of Maud Plunket
Weeps over his tomb.

XX.

The stranger who wanders
Along the lone vale
Still sighs while he ponders
On that heavy tale :
“ Thus passes each pleasure
That earth can supply—
Thus joy has its measure—
We live but to die !”

SHANID CASTLE.

ON Shannon side the day is closing fair,
The kern sits musing by his shieling* low,
And marks, beyond the lonely hills of Clare,
Blue, rimm'd with gold, the clouds of sunset glow.
Hush in that sun the wide spread waters flow,
Returning warm the day's departing smile ;
Along the sunny highland pacing slow,
The keyriaght† lingers with his herd the while,
And bells are tolling faint from far Saint Sinon's isle.‡

* Hut.

† The Keyriaght in ancient Ireland was a kind of wandering shepherd, or herdsman. It would appear from their being prohibited by the Kilkenny General Assembly of Confederate Catholics, that the number of persons who pursued this roving pastoral life must have been at one time considerable.

‡ Few landscapes on a calm and sunny evening present a scene of sweet and solemn beauty exceeding that of the little island of Scatterry, or Iniscatha, near the mouth of the Shannon, with its lofty round tower and the ruins of its numerous churches, said to have been founded by St. Sinon or Senanus, one of the brightest ornaments of the ancient Irish church.—The peasantry still point out the tomb of the saint about the centre of the islet, and, as may be judged, the place is not without its share of legendary anecdote.

II.

Oh, loved shore ! with softest memories twined,
Sweet fall the summer on thy margin fair !
And peace come whispering, like a morning wind,
Dear thoughts of love to every bosom there !
The horrid wreck and driving storm forbear
Thy smiling strand—nor oft the accents swell
Along thy hills of grief or heart-wrung care ;
But heav'n look down upon each lowly dell,
And bless thee for the joys I yet remember well !

III.

Upon that spot where Corrig's* lofty tower,
A lengthen'd shadow casts along the green,
The lord of Shanid summons all his power ;
And knight and galloglas and kern are seen,
Marking the targe with arrow barbed keen,
And javelin light, and musket ringing loud.
Wide flies each shot, and still, throughout the scene,
Low smother'd laughter shakes the merry crowd,
And on the chieftain's brow dark looms the angry cloud.

* The Castle of Corrig, one of the many fortresses, along the Shannon side, dependent on the Earls of Desmond, was taken by the troops of the Lord President Carew, in the reign of Elizabeth after a siege of two days. The fragments of the wall still visible show it to have been once a place of considerable strength.

IV.

Apart from these, upon a rising hill,
Where yellow furze and hazel scent the breeze,
An aged woman sat in posture still,
With tragic forehead bending to her knees.
She joins not in the laughter when she sees
By some new hand the harmless musket plied ;
Or when some eye unskill'd the arrow frees,
Or whirring sling its burthen scatters wide ;
“ Alas ! the times are changed in Desmond now ! ”
she sigh'd.

V.

“ It was not thus in Desmond's happier day,
When young Fitzgerald held these princely bow'rs.
Alas, that I should live to weep and say
A low-born vassal rules my chieftain's tow'rs.
Oh, come again, ye well-remember'd hours,
When he, loved relic of a kingly line,
Review'd on yonder plain his glittering pow'rs,
And many a loving glance was bent on thine ;
O knight without reproach ! O stainless Geraldine ! ” *

* Master Stanihurst, one of the quaintest and most loquacious authorities in Holinshed, favours us with the following account of the remarkable family of the Geraldines or Fitzgeralds, in his “ Description of Ireland.”

“ This house was of the nobilitie of Florence, came from thence into Normandie, and so with the ancient Earle Strongbow, his kinsman, whose arms he giveth, into Wales, neare of bloud to Rice ap Griffin, prince of Wales, by Nesta, the mother of Maurice Fitz-Gerald and Robert Fitz-Stephans, with the said Earle Maurice Fitz-Gerald removed into Ireland in the yeare 1169. The corrupt orthographie that diverse use in writing this name, doth incor-

"And is not he our lord who stands below!"
 A fair-hair'd stripling ask'd with accent mild.
 "Son of my heart," the matron answer'd, "no!
 Shame on the churl! a wretched harper's child.
 Oh! never joy on alter'd Desmond smiled,
 Since he by treason did these towers obtain;
 And though they bend before that breast defiled,
 A spectral loyalty what heart can chain?
 Their love is yet with Desmond far beyond the main."

porate it to houses thereto linked in no kinred, and consequentlie blemisheth worthie exploits atchieved as well in England and Ireland, as in forren countries and dominions. Some write Gerold, sundry Gerald, diverse verie corruptlie Gerrot, others Gerald. But the true orthographie is Giral, as maie appear both by Giraldus Cambrensis, and the Italian authors that make mention of the familie. As for Gerrot, it differeth flat from Giral: yet there be some in Ireland that name and write themselves Gerrots, notwithstanding they be Giraldins, whereof diverse gentlemen are in Meeth. But there is a sept of the Gerrots in Ireland, and they seeme, forsooth, by threatening kindnesse and kindred of the true Giraldins, to fetch their petit degrees from their ancestors, but they are so neere of bloud one to the other, that two bushels of beanes would scantlie count their degrees. Another reason why diverse strange houses have been shuffled in among this familie, was, for that sundrie gentlemen at the christening of their children would have them named Giralds, and yet their surnames were of other houses; and if, after it happened that Giral had issue Thomas. John, Robert, or such like, they would then beare the name of Giral as Thomas Fitz-Giral, and thus, taking the name of their ancestors for their surname, within two or three descents they shoove themselves among the kindred of the Giraldins. This is a general fault in Ireland and Wales, and a great confusion and extinguishment of houses."

The Fitz-Geralds were amongst the earlier settlers in Ireland. John Fitz-Giral was created Earl of Kildare in 1315. Maurice Fitz-Thomas (a Geraldine), Earl of Desmond in 1300.

VII.

“How lost the Geraldine his tow’rs and lands?”

“Long time the leaguer closed his castle walls.
At length, with proffer’d peace, a knightly band
At morning sought him in his lordly halls.

‘Desmond, the queen her menaced wrath recalls,
Receive her grace and yield.’ With lofty brow.

‘Within these tow’rs the Desmond stands or falls.
A boy,’ he said, ‘may trust a woman’s vow;
But I am old in war—my lip is bearded now.’

VIII.

“They part. Again, from each surrounding height,
Thunder’d the loud artillery on the tow’r;
And all that day, and all that fearful night,
Thick fell as hail the musket’s deadly show’r.

Where now the sunbeams light each peaceful flow’r,
Spring daisy sweet, and opening marigold,

Thou might’st have seen the horrid war-cloud lour,
Till settling dark, in sulph’rous volume roll’d,
It capp’d in sablest gloom the Desmond’s lofty hold.

IX.

“Thou know’st where high in Shanagolden vale,
The bill of Shanid views the plains around;
A solitary cone it meets the gale,
Like warrior helm’d, with threat’ning turret crown’d.
Steep tapering upward from the rushy ground,

A stately peak it stands :—a footway, known
To few save Desmond, tow'rd the summit wound,
Mid tangled sally, crag, and mossy stone
By Desmond form'd for need, by Desmond used alone.

X.

“It chanced that night, when summer's crescent dim
On tow'r and steep a silver paleness cast,
I mark'd a figure in the tintless beam
Along that secret path descending fast ;
It gains the outer ward—the bridge is past,
And now that form is lost in vapours dun,
And now the warder blew his latest blast,
And all were muster'd in the court but one,
The same who rules it now—the harper's traitor son.

XI.

“Yet never came suspicion on my mind ;
Calm fell as wont on every wearied breast
Within th' embattled fortress safe reclined,
Night's holy pause of sweet oblivious rest,
War lost awhile his soul-devouring zest.
Hush'd was the hoarse artillery's angry roar ;
The haughty leaguer shared the influence blest.
There clamour 'woke the peopled tents no more,
But stillness sank serene on camp, and tow'r, and shore.

XII.

“Shanid-a-bo!* there's treason in the hold!”
At midnight rose the cry within our halls.
‘Shanid a-bo! the Geraldine is sold!
The English banner scoffs our armed walls!’
Too late—too late the startled warder calls,
A host resistless fill'd the captured tow'r;
Life after life in fruitless contest falls.
The Geraldine surrendered land and pow'r—
All lost but life and fame in that accursed hour.

XIII.

“I heard the din upon my darkling bed,
And to my lady flew in speechless fear;
While swell'd within the hold the tumult dread
Of clattering brand and targe and crackling spear.
Ne'er may again such sounds assail mine ear!
The crash of broken blade, the shout, the moan,
Menace and pray'r unheard, came mingling near;
And rallying call and conquest thundering on,
And the blasphemer's oath with warrior's parting groan.”

XIV.

“We had a lady then?” the stripling said.
A moment paused the matron in her tale,
And resting on the hand her aged head
Burst from her inmost soul the sudden wail.

* Shanid a-bo! the war-cry of the Earls of Desmond.

That question did her very heart assail,
For Desmond's countess had to her been kind,
When queen-like once she ruled that lovely vale;
And all her goodness rush'd upon her mind
Ere her sweet soul had left this weary world behind.

XV.

Poor soul! affection was her little world,
And natural love the kingdom where she reign'd;
But there had death with ruthless hand unfurl'd
His ensign black with many a heart's blood stain'd,
Of all she loved this youth alone remain'd.
Forbear to ask why, spared such keen distress,
Bad hearts rejoiced while hers was inly pain'd.
Let sweet religion meet each dubious guess,
God still severely tries the hearts he means to bless.

XVI.

"We had a lady then," the matron said,
"Go ask the widow shivering at the gate,
Or orphan weeping in his lowly shed,
How Desmond's countess filled her high estate.
Not hers the soul with selfish pride elate
Her tender heart with other's grief was riv'n;
There grace divine and secret virtue sate.
Her heart was shared between her lord and heav'n,
And surely to her God the larger part was given.

XVII.

“God help our slothful souls !” the speaker sigh’d,
And clasped her hands and shook the aged head ;
“She was to us a lesson and a guide,
For holiest light in all her walks was shed,
With counsel sweet she cheered the sufferer’s bed ;
With gentlest hand she dried the mourner’s tear,
For all her pow’r relieved—her bounty fed,
Duly each morn arose her pray’r sincere,
And for her Saviour’s sake her very foes were dear.

XVIII.

“But she shall bless our earthly eyes no more,
Sweet is her sleep in yonder abbey grey,
Where ’mid the summer dews descending hoar,
The lonely redbreast sings his evening lay.
There still our kerne their secret offerings pay,
At solemn feast retired or vigil lone ;
For there with that same moon’s declining ray,
The wretched Desmond rear’d her funeral stone,
And pour’d above her grave a widow’d husband’s moan.”

XIX.

She ceased—and bending low her aged head,
With paly brow upon her hand reclined ;
While memory woke each thought of rapture fled,
With rocking motion soothed her anguish’d mind.
Say Muse (for thou canst all the chain unwind

Of link'd events by History's finger wove),

How sped the Desmond in that tumult blind,
Hemm'd in by adverse spears, a bristling grove,
Where point with point enlaced in fell discussion strove.

XX.

Pale on the midnight floor the Countess stands,
When hark ! the Desmond bursts the chamber door,
Like warning sprite with wide extended hands,
And scared gaze, and armour stained with gore.
"Betrayed ! the tow'r is lost, and all is o'er !
Fair dreams of independence ruling free ;
Thou hear'st the victor Saxon's gathering roar,
Country and home and lands are lost to me,
And nothing now remains," he said, "but life and thee."

XXI.

Short time for speech. One vigorous arm he wound
Around the trembling lady's lovely frame ;
Lightly he raised her from the stony ground,
High flash'd his reeking blade like meteor flame.
Resistless on the struggling press he came,
Back from his path the weakling commons reel,
Some held their swords aloof in generous shame,
Who dared to thwart him rued his ruffian zeal,
 stern was the rebuke of that avenging steel.

XXII.

Right on the hero drove—oh wondrous sight !
Oh, fearful beauty of the warrior's ire !
Death haunts his downward track and wild affright,
Shriek, yell, and groan confess'd his presence dire.
Inch after inch the 'wilder'd foe retire ;
Yet, cool amid the dying and the dead,
With stilly rage he wrought and govern'd fire,
Unmoved as who the peaceful rinky tread,
More like an angel sent to wreak heaven's vengeance dread.

XXIII.

Son of the Geraldine,* renown'd in song !
To that bold-mettled race, resolved and high,
Alone such giant might of arm belong,
And purpose undismay'd of nerve and eye.
Fly ! loved son of sires belov'd—fly !
Thy foes are gath'ring close in flank and rear ;
Thick press'd the living fence-work circling nigh,
With rattling brand and targe and level spear,
Hip, knee, and shoulder join'd, and gnashed teeth austere.

* Many amusing anecdotes are related in Holinshed illustrative of the character of this distinguished family.

"Kildare was open and plaine, hardlie able to rule himself when he were moved to anger, not so sharpe as short, being easily displeased and sooner appeased. Being in a rage with certaine of his servants for faults they committed, one of his horsemen offered Master Boice (a gentleman that retained to him,) an Irish hobbie, on conditiōne that he would plucke an haire from the earle his

XXIV.

Onward the hero drove—crash targe and helm ;
 Crash shield and mail beneath his action fell ;
 Each blow a subject gained to death's black realm ;
 Each hollow sounding stroke a hero's knell ;
 Each glimmer of the blade a soul's farewell.
 Right on his gory pathway still he hew'd,
 Ah ruthless War, thy woes what tongue shall tell ?
 Three paces from the rampart yet he stood,
 And those three paces cost a lake of Christian blood

beard. Boice, taking the proffer at rebound, stept to the earle (with whose good nature he was thoroughly acquainted), parching in the heat of his choler, and said : ' So it is, and if it like your good lordship, one of your horssemen promised me a choise horssie if I snip one hair from your beard.' ' Well,' quoth the Earl, ' I agree thereto ; but if thou pluck anie more than one, I promise thee to bring my fist from thine eare.'

" The branch of this good nature hath been derived from him to an earle of his posteritie, who, being in a chafe, for the wrong saucing of a partridge, arose suddenly from the table, meaning to have reasoned the matter with his cooke. Having entered the kitchen, drowning in oblivion his challenge, he began to commend the building of the roome, wherein he was at no time before, and so leaving the cooke uncontrolled, he returned to his guests merrilie. . . .

" In his warres, he (the former Kildare) used for policie a retchlesse kind of diligence or a headie carelesnesse, to the end his souldiers should not faint in their attempts, were the enemies never so great power. Being generall in the field of Knocktow, one of the earle his captains presented him a band of kerns even as they were ready to joine battele, and withal demanded of the earle in what service he would have them imployed ! Quoth he, ' Let them stand by and give us the gaze.' Such was his courage that, notwithstanding his enemies were two to one, yet would he set so good a face on the matter, as his souldiers should not once suspect that he either needed or longed for anie further helpe."

XXV.

Unwearied yet, he sees th' assailants yield—
The rampart's gained. High on the wall he stands,
A moment gazed upon the distant field,
Where Safety seem'd to smile with beck'ning hands
Beneath him still he views the struggling bands ;
Where death that night a plenteous harvest reap'd,
With desperate shout, amid the clattering brands,
Harsh echoing shields and carnage spoil high heap'd,
He waved his gory blade and from the rampart leap'd.

XXVI.

As when, from wave-worn cliff of far Kilkee,
Time-loosen'd from its immemorial hold,
Some ponderous fragment seeks the booming sea,
Down the black steep with thundering impulse
roll'd,
So stern descending came the Desmond bold,
So shrunk around, aghast, th' affrighted foes,
So fierce recoil'd when from the gory mould,
Beneath his burthen bow'd, the chieftain rose,
So roaring vengeance wild in mortal combat close.

XXVII.

So from thy lofty wall, O sea-girt Tyre !
In mailed panoply descending bright,
Like launched bolt of heaven's electric fire,
The son of Ammon left that dizzy height,

Scattering around dismay and pale affright,
Strong in the might of his heroic mind.

For glory he, and pow'r; but for the right,
And dear connubial love, did Desmond wind
His way that night 'mid many a biting point unkind.

XXVIII.

Still dark upon his path the foemen swarm,
With rising anger fierce and wrathful brow,
He stirs his giant strength with combat warm,
And shakes his crest—and, 'ware the Desmond now !
As parts the surge before some warrior prow,
When windward bound 'gainst wave and storm she steers ;

Or stubborn bawn before the rending plough :
So yield beneath his sway the crashing spears,
And down the hill he drove 'mid yells and fruitless tears.

XXIX.

Who now shall cross the Desmond ? Calm no more
The war-soil stream'd beneath his matted hair :
Sullied with clotted dust and mingled gore,
Foams the dragg'd lip—the starting eye-balls glare.
Like maniac roused, he drives the withering share
With desperate fury wild—around—beneath,
Nor measured ire nor govern'd heat were there,
At every blow a heart's blood stain'd the heath,
The very wind they cast seemed rife with pain and death.

XXX.

Fight ! Desmond, Fight ! he pants—each quiv'ring limb
Instinct with rage high wrought, and breathing doom,
Like mower toiling in midsummer beam,
Or smith at anvil bow'd with brow of gloom,
Out burst at once as from volcanic womb,
The pent up fury stirr'd by contest dire,
So chafes the downward flood with whitening spume,
So drives o'er autumn heath the scorching ire,
Wind-borne resistless on, of fast consuming fire.

XXXI.

Right on the hero drove, like northern storm,
And pass'd the bridge and gain'd the moonlit plain,
Still clasp'd with instinct dear that precious form ;
But vain his valorous toil, his fondness vain.
Thick round his pathway hurl'd as winter rain,
Bow, sling, and gun, their murderous death show'rs sped,
That shriek ! ah, who shall tell the Desmond's pain ?
It is, it is her life-stream bubbling red,
And " husband, lay me down," the wounded lady said.

XXXII.

Soul-piercing sight ! with anguish'd heart aghast,
Upon a bank beside the lonely wave,
Gently he staunch'd the heart's blood, issuing fast,
And pray'd high heav'n her gentle soul to save.
Sigh after sigh the wounded Countess gave,

A year of life with every parting breath,
Stretch'd in the nerveless posture of the grave.
Silent she lies upon the gory heath,
And sets in those sweet eyes the whitening glare of death.

XXXIII.

With grief impatient, on the darkling lea,
The wretched chieftain cast his useless blade.
“Ye woman-slaying hinds, why spared ye me?
And why is Desmond here, unhurt?” he said.
“My life! my love! see! Desmond guards thy head!
Look up and live!” he sigh'd in accents mild;
Silent she hears—speech, sense, and motion fled.
He raised his clenched hands with action wild,
And lifted up his voice and wept like infant child.

XXXIV.

Yes, Desmond wept, he who alone had gazed
That night unmoved on all that hostile band,
Stirr'd by th' unwonted sound, the Countess raised
Her dying frame, and pressed his succouring hand;
And “Comfort thee,” she sigh'd in whisper bland;
“Comfort thee, Desmond! all that valour could,
To-night thine arm hath wrought for tow'r and land,
He who for us hath shed his saving blood,
Felt too the bitter pangs of man's ingratitude.”

XXXV.

“Curst be the traitor!”—“Hold, my husband, hold !
Nor let the last—last words my soul shall hear
From those kind lips before its sense is cold,
With vengeful meaning fright my dying ear.
Farewell ! thou hast to me been true and dear,
Be so to heav’n when I am lowly laid ;
Let me not need the Christian’s wonted bier,
Nor narrow tomb within the hallow’d shade,
And be above my grave the requiem duly said.”

XXXVI.

She said, and folded her sweet hands in pray’r,
While reverent sate apart the sorrowing chief,
To resignation changed his heart’s despair,
Close pent within his breast the stifling grief.
Slow came and leaden paced Death’s cold relief ;
Faint in her bosom ebbs the wasting tide,
“Receive my stained soul !” she murmured brief,
“Thou who for sinful man in torment died.”
And forth with that last pray’r her gentle soul she sigh’d.

XXXVII.

With rending heart the chieftain saw her die,
Awhile he knelt beside the lifeless clay ;
Then with the silver wave that murmur’d by,
He wash’d with care the gory soil away,
That dark upon the paly features lay,

And rais'd his mournful burthen from the ground,
And up the stream pursued his weary way,
Where buried deep in listening woods profound,
Yon aged abbey casts its sacred shade around.

XXXVIII.

Sad burthen bow'd the chief !—less ponderous far
Her living weight, or that which once of yore
From the last scene of Ilium's mighty war,
The pious prince with filial anguish bore.
Far distant, on some safe sequester'd shore,
He yet might watch beside his rescued sire;
But she shall grace the Desmond's board no more
No more shall cheer his lonely evening fire,
Nor, with persuasion soft, disarm his household ire.

XXXIX.

Slant on his path the westward moonbeam shone,
When still beneath his dismal burthen bow'd,
He reach'd the abbey, screen'd in woodland 'lone
Of pines and waving yew, a sombre shroud.
“Open your gates !” the midnight summons loud
Rang mournful through the cloisters' echoing halls.
“The harbour to the harbourless allow'd
Your houseless ruler seeks within your walls ;
Open your holy gates !—’tis Desmond's lord that calls.”

XL.

Wide gaped the convent door, revolving slow,
The abbot knows those noble accents well.
What words can paint the old man's speechless woe,
When on that group his wildering glances fell.
"Father ! behold the wreck unspeakable
Of what was late my bosom's earthly pearl !
The poorest monk, within his convent cell,
Who shuns the rage of life's tempestuous whirl,
Holds more of wealth to-night than Desmond's mighty earl."

XLI.

Slow rose the requiem from the midnight choir,
By haste compell'd, the friendly brethren lay,
Ere kindled from yon hills the eastern fire,
In its low house, that piece of lifeless clay.
The widow'd chieftain mark'd the opening day,
And turn'd him from the holy solitude.
Westward again he held his venturous way,
By glen untrod, and swamp and darkling wood
Unconquer'd at the heart—in spirit unsubdued

XLII.

Twelve years have passed since then, nor if he dwells
In life or death his sorrowing vassals know ;
They paid the traitor with his tow'rs and dells,
But love nor right with strong possession go.

Their hearts are still with Desmond in his woe.
Unchanged as when they saw their chieftain stand
On yonder shore, at moonlight, lingering slow.
“Farewell!” he cried, and wrung each eager hand,
“Farewell, my faithful friends! farewell, my native land!”

XLIII.

Twelve years have pass'd—and tyranny since then
With iron hand upon the vale hath press'd;
The roofless cot within the fertile glen.
The blacken'd scar upon the mountain's breast,
The usurper's conscience-haunted reign attest.
Ev'n now secure amid his archer train,
His eye betrays his bosom's deep unrest.
With doubtful scowl he views that peopled plain,
And fears a secret foe in every injured swain.

XLIV.

See! southward borne along the shining tide,
Finned with lithe ash a nimble curragh flew;
'Tis but a stranger come from Thomond side,
To see the southern archers strain the yew;
And near that throng with careless pace he drew,
While loud applauding thunders shook the air—
For now the chieftain's son, with action true
And steady gaze, has aim'd the arrow fair,
And sent it to the mark, and left it quivering there.

XLV.

“What fairer shot”—a flattering vassel cries,
“Hath ever eye beheld on Desmond’s plains?”
“Sooth, that have mine,” the stranger’s voice replies,
“When old Fitzgerald held these fair domains;
And though my hair be grizzled, and my veins
With lessening current beat, and action tame,
Enough, even yet, of force and skill remains
To bear my answer out, or I would shame
To tread the Desmond’s soil, and name the Desmond’s name.”

XLVI.

He said, and far beyond the target set,
Deep in the turf, a carrowe’s* ashen spear,
Then backward through the silent circle paced,
Full half three hundred paces meted clear.
Fixed is each eye, attent is every ear;

* The Carrowe was the ancient Irish horseman.—“These,” say an old writer, “when they have no staie of their own, gad and range from house to house, like arrant knights of the round table, and they never dismount till they ride into the hall and as farre as the table. There is among them a brotherhoode of Carrowes that proffer to plaie at cards all the year long, and make it their only occupation. They plaie away mantel and all to the bare skin, and trusse themselves in straw or leaves; then wait for passengers on the highwaie, and ask no more than companions to make them sport.”

The bolt is drawn—the parting impulse given,
Sharp rang the string, like harp at evening cheer,
Swift sped the bolt—the ashen shaft is riv'n,
And louder thunders rise and rend the echoing heav'n.

XLVII.

Laughing, the stranger sought the neighb'ring shore,
Where the spent waves on quarried granite beat ;
A fragment slowly up the slope he bore,
Massy and huge, for Druid altar meet.
Erect he stands before the chieftain's seat—
“ Since years have yet not quench'd the generous rage
Of manhood in these limbs, and youthful heat,
With all thy band a merry war I wage,
In feat of strength or skill, and thereto cast my gage.”

XLVIII.

He said, and on the sward his burden threw,
Like meteoric rock it pierced the green ;
With wondering eyes the silent circle view
The stranger's ponderous bulk and lofty mien—
Such forms, in radiant majesty serene,
Once on the heathen artist's slumber shone—
When burning with high thoughts and genius keen,

He caught the fleeting vision's heavily tone,
And woke to hew a god from out the Parian stone.

XLIX.

Stalwart he stood amid the mountain kerne,
Calm gleam'd his eyes in dignity severe ;
His shoulders huge, like his the Argive stern,
Who, one long day, upheld the heavenly sphere.
Sallow his hue as tanned hide of steer,
Nor mark he bore of woman's gentle mould,
His frame was knit by many a toilsome year,
His noble hair in jetty ringlets roll'd,
Hung curling down his neck, like British seaman bold.

But who the stranger's offer'd gage shall raise ?
Some shun abash'd that glance of piercing grey ;
Some view the mass inert, with curious gaze,
Deep-fix'd within the yawning soil that lay ;
Some lent their mightiest force with vain essay,
'Mid many a stifled laugh and whisper'd jest,
To lift the fragment from its bed of clay.
Forth came, with conscious smile, the stranger guest,
And to the giant task his iron strength address'd.

LI.

With vigorous ease he raised the rocky weight,
And, wheeling round, upon his centre came,

With well-timed action, forceful, yet sedate,
Gathering the sum of motion in his frame,
And hurl'd the mass aloft with giant aim,
And all his strength into the impulse threw :
Like fragment heaved from Etna's throat of flame,
Or launch'd from ancient catapult, it flew
And smote the echoing strand, and dash'd the brine to dew.

LII.

"And who and what art thou?" the chieftain cries,
"With more than human skill and vigour blest?"
"One of your blood," the stranger calm replies,
"Though long an exile in the sunny west.
A landless, noteless man, my noblest crest
Is now that oft with Geraldine I bled.
Unmark'd I roam, the lowly shieling's guest,
My mightiest boast that I am island bred,
My highest praise to say I love the land I tread."

LIII.

Now sinks the sun behind the hills of Clare,
The kerne are scatter'd to their mountain fires,
And wake with many a wond'rous legend there,
The memory of their old heroic sires—
The weary herdsman to his shed retires,

And all is lull'd in midnight stillness soon,
Save where the convent hymn to heaven aspires,
Or patient fisher lifts his merry tune,
And plies his weary trade beneath the smiling moon.

LIV.

Within a grove by Shanid's lofty hill,
A hermit held his penitential cell,
Wild herbs his food, his drink the lucid rill,
That bubbled sweetly from a neighbouring well,
He in the busy world had ceased to dwell,
A passion-wasted heart—a bruised reed ;
His science, suffering, and the art to quell
Each earthly wish, in hope of heavenly meed,
By following to the life the perfect Christian creed.

LV.

And heav'n received his penitence sincere ;
For when the stroke of Death had closed his race,
They said a lustre play'd around his bier,
And precious fragrance fill'd the lonely place.
The earth upon his tomb had healing grace,
And sickness of the mind or frame removed :
There oft the pious pilgrim came to trace
Where heav'n with many a holy sign approved,
The holocaust of praise and purity it loved.

LVI.

Scarce in the east the ruddy daylight breaks,
When down the secret pathway pacing slow,
The aged nurse her tottering journey takes ;
Where by the hill the lucid waters flow.
Faint down the vale the early sunbeams glow ;
When by the crystal fount the matron stands,
With wooden cup and pitcher bending low,
She fills the sparkling lymph with trembling hands,
And sighs break forth between, and tears bedew the sands.

LVII.

Sudden a rustling in the shrubs she hears,
That round the well their graceful foliage wove ;
That stranger's form upon the brink appears,
Half hid by leaves and clustering boughs above,
And tears of gentlest tenderness and love,
On that stern cheek their softening influence shed,
His quiv'ring lips with sweet affections move ;
Low o'er the bank he bow'd his noble head,
And "dost thou know me, nurse?" in whisper soft
he said.

LVIII.

Like one whose quicken'd fancy hears at night
Strange spectral voices in the rushing wind,

The startled matron clears her inward sight,
And seeks the lost idea in her mind.
Beside her now, in broader light defined,
He gazed into her soul and sweetly smiled :
Her heart awakened at the greeting kind,
Faint from her bosom broke the accents wild,
As on his neck she fell, "It is—it is my child !"

LIX.

"Yes, Desmond treads again his natal land,
To find again his castle or a grave.
Four weeks have pass'd since on the western strand
I came, a homesick wanderer of the wave ;
Me, Loughill's kerns a joyous welcome gave,
But ah, my heart is rack'd, where'er it turns,
To hear the blood-hounds of the tyrant rave,
To see the shieling wreck'd—the roof that burns,
Where many an orphan'd child and houseless widow mourns.

LX.

"To night, in Shanagolden's lovely vale,
Two thousand kerns at midnight wait my call ;
Such force as may with sure success assail
The traitor in our own usurped hall :
Yet loth I were that child of Desmond fall
By kindred weapon struck, in dire array ;
More meet it were to gain the lofty wall,
By secret skill, than battle's loud essay,
And with his own dark art that traitor-slave repay.

LXI.

“Where rests the harper?” “In the eastern keep.”

“Oh nurse, to-night, at that unguarded hour,
When kern and galloglach are lulled in sleep,
Be thou our friend within the embattled tow’r,
When dull of sense from wine’s oppressive pow’r,
That drunken harper seeks our fair alcove,
Be thou before him in the window’d bow’r,
And place a lamp upon the sill above,
And see no other hand than his the light remove.”

LXII.

They part—’tis night—within that lofty hold,
Loud rung the merry sounds of festal cheer ;
Slow up the east on golden axis roll’d,
The peaceful moon reveal’d her smiling sphere ;
Close hid, with eye intent and watchful ear,
The Desmond stands beside that narrow stream ;
Oft gazed he on the castle, frowning near,
If haply he may see the tiny beam
Of that small lamp from out the chieftain’s window gleam.

LXIII

It shines at length. His practised hands alert
Poise the long musket on the ashen rest,
The burning match within the lock insert—
And all the horrid art of death address’d :

Yet not revenge nor hatred fired his breast,
But patriot zeal, and firmest sense of right,
And pity for his people long oppress'd—
And land betrayed for gold—ha ! see !—the light !
It stirs—he fires—and all is dark as death and night.

LXIV.

“ Awake ! arise ! what ho ! 'tis Desmond calls ;
Sound the loud trumpet down the echoing vale !
See—fluttering from high Shanid's towering walls—
Our ancient banner meets the western gale ! ”
That well-known cry prolong'd from dale to dale,
Roused answering wood and shore and peopled hill :
“ Desmond is come again ! ” the rapturous tale
Woke in each listener's heart the welcome thrill
Of ecstasy return'd and old devoted zeal.

LXV.

Shanid a-bo ! the Desmond's in his hall !
Vale answers vale along th' awaken'd shore ;
With tears of love the joyous clansmen fall
Around his feet, and press the marble floor,
And bless the hour that did their lord restore
To his old home and plunder'd rights again.
But carrion birds the traitor's carcase tore,
While smiling Peace return'd o'er hill and plain,
And Desmond in the Keep resumed his ancient reign.

ORANGE AND GREEN.

Erin, thy silent tear never shall cease—
Erin, thy languid smile ne'er shall increase;
Till, like the rain-bow's light,
Thy various tints unite,
And form in heaven's sight
One arch of peace!

THOMAS MOORE.

The night was falling dreary,
In merry Bandon town,
When in his cottage weary,
An Orangeman lay down.
The summer sun in splendour
Had set upon the vale,
And shouts of "No surrender!"
Arose upon the gale.

II.

Beside the waters, laving
The feet of aged trees,
The Orange banners waving,
Flew boldly in the breeze—
In mighty chorus meeting,
A hundred voices join,
And fife and drum were beating
The Battle of the Boyne

III.

Ha ! tow'rd his cottage hieing,
What form is speeding now,
From yonder thicket flying,
With blood upon his brow ?
“ Hide—hide me, worthy stranger !
Though green my colour be,
And in the day of danger
May heaven remember thee !

IV.

“ In yonder vale contending,
Alone against that crew,
My life and limbs defending,
An orangeman I slew.
Hark ! hear that fearful warning,
There's death in every tone—
Oh, save my life till morning,
And heav'n prolong your own ! ”

V.

The Orange heart was melted,
In pity to the green ;
He heard the tale and felt it,
His very soul within.
“ Dread not that angry warning,
Though death be in its tone—
I'll save your life till morning,
Or I will lose my own.”

VI.

Now, round his lowly dwelling
The angry torrent press'd,
A hundred voices swelling,
The Orangeman address'd—
“ Arise arise, and follow
The chase along the plain !
In yonder stony hollow
Your only son is slain !”

VII.

With rising shouts they gather
Upon the track amain,
And leave the childless father,
Aghast with sudden pain.
He seeks the righted stranger,
In covert where he lay—
“ Arise !” he said, “ all danger
Is gone and past away !

VIII.

“ I had a son—one only,
One loved as my life,
Thy hand has left me lonely,
In that accursed strife.
I pledged my word to save thee,
Until the storm should cease,
I keep the pledge I gave thee—
Arise, and go in peace !”

IX.

The stranger soon departed,
From that unhappy vale ;
The father, broken-hearted,
Lay brooding o’er that tale.
Full twenty summers after
To silver turned his beard ;
And yet the sound of laughter
From him was never heard.

The night was falling dreary,
In merry Wexford town,
When in his cabin weary,
A peasant laid him down.
And many a voice was singing
Along the summer vale,
And Wexford town was ringing
With shouts of “ Granua Uile.”

XI.

Beside the waters, laving
The feet of aged trees,
The green flag, gaily waving,
Was spread against the breeze—
In mighty chorus meeting,
Loud voices filled the town,
And fife and drum were beating,
“Down, Orangemen, lie Down !”

XII.

Hark ! 'mid the stirring clangour,
That woke the echoes there,
Loud voices high in anger,
Rise on the evening air.
Like billows of the ocean,
He sees them hurry on—
And, 'mid the wild commotion,
An Orangeman alone.

XIII.

“My hair,” he said, “is hoary,
And feeble is my hand,
And I could tell a story
Would shame your cruel band.
Full twenty years and over
Have changed my heart and brow,
And I am grown a lover
Of peace and concord now.

XIV.

“It was not thus I greeted
Your brother of the Green ;
When fainting and defeated,
I freely took him in.
I pledged my word to save him,
From vengeance rushing on,
I kept the pledge I gave him.
Though he had kill’d my son.”

XV.

That aged peasant heard him,
And knew him as he stood.
Remembrance kindly stirr’d him,
And tender gratitude.
With gushing tears of pleasure,
He pierced the listening train.
“I’m here to pay the measure
Of kindness back again !”

XVI.

Upon his bosom falling,
That old man’s tears came down ;
Deep memory recalling
That cot and fatal town.
“The hand that would offend thee,
My being first shall end ;
I’m living to defend thee,
My saviour and my friend !”

XVII.

He said, and slowly turning,
 Address'd the wondering crowd,
With fervent spirit burning,
 He told the tale aloud.
Now pressed the warm beholders,
 Their aged foe to greet ;
They raised him on their shoulders
 And cnair'd him through the street.

XVIII.

As he had saved that stranger,
 From peril scowling dim,
So in his day of danger
 Did Heav'n remember him.
By joyous crowds attended,
 The worthy pair were seen,
And their flags that day were biended
 Of Orange and of Green.

THE TRAVELLER AND THE MOON.

WRITTEN FOR A BIRTHDAY PRESENT TO A YOUNG FRIEND.

The glorious Sun yet burned on high,
His light embracing earth and sky,
When like a Spectre seen at noon,
On Glenvill rose the early moon.

* * * * *

“Glory to thee all bounteous sun !”

(A traveller thus his theme begun,
Who by Liscannor’s sounding bay,
To Callan took his lonely way.)

“Thou stirrest the heart to love and and mirth,
Thou gladdenest heaven and quickenest earth ;
Thou callest to being ripe and warm,
The thousand charms of hue and form.
All nature feels thy genial dower,
From lordly man to lowly flower.
How faint to thine, great lord of day,

Yon feeble moon's reflected ray !
To her we owe no fruitful plains,
But swelling seas and frantic brains."

* * * * *

He said, and onward gaily press'd
Till darkness crept o'er all the west,
And he o'er moon and mountain grey,
Benighted, sought his trackless way.
Far o'er the rous'd Atlantic's wave
He hears the coming tempest's rave.
The clouds have left their ocean bed ;
Flash'd the blue night bolt o'er his head,
Chorussed by winds and hissing fire ;
The Tempest tunes his demon lyre.
Now chilled by wind, and drench'd with rain.
Our wanderer groped o'er hill and plain ;
No cottage light, nor human voice,
To bid his sinking heart rejoice.
When, bursting through the stormy rack,
The midnight moon illum'd the track.
From heav'n's high arch in state serene,
Pour'd light and beauty o'er the scene ;
To silver turned the flying cloud,
Hushed in the skies the quarrel loud,
And spread afar her radiance mild,
Till even the cheek of darkness smiled.

* * * * *

Thus, while prosperity is ours,
And pleasure strews our way with flowers,

Rejoicing in the glorious day,
We scorn Religion's humble ray.
'Tis only when the night draws on
And all our worldly light is gone ;
When black misfortune's clouds arise,
And vex with storms life's evening skies,
When darkling, lost, and tempest driven,
She cheers our path with light from heaven ;
We blush to own the thankless slight,
And feel her power and bless her might.

ANNA BLAKE.

A FRAGMENT.

Hark ! heard ye not that stifled groan ?
A wretched woman's piercing wail ;
It echoes through those ruins lone,
It died upon the meadow gale !

II.

See, see amid the ivied screen
That veils the cloister's column'd aisle ;
What wasted form is dimly seen,
With rapid beck and frantic smile.

III.

Some creature of abortive brain—
Or victim of impassioned breast—
Some wreck of bliss, as bright as vain
Or fiend, deluded and possessed.

IV.

Perchance—for see her garb is dark,
And hooded is her curling hair,
And girded is her waist—and mark
The rosary descending there.—

V.

Some reason-blasted child of wrath !
Some Dathan of the virgin choir,
Who trod uncalled the holy path,
And tampered with celestial fire.

VI.

A sunbeam strikes that frenzied brow
Through yonder oriel glancing down,
Alas ! alas ! I know her now !—
Tis Anna Blake of Galway town !

VII.

See, see, with spectral haste she glides,
Through broken light and rayless gloom,
To where the funeral yew-tree hides,
The wild Biscayen's early tomb !

VIII.

Poor Anna ! once unknown to woe !
A gayer heart, a happier mind,
Ne'er lent to worth their social glow,
In frame of fairer mould enshrined.

IX.

Mark, as the quivering sunbeams fall,
She turns to shade that hooded brow,
Where moping Phrenzy in the hall
Of banished Reason riots now.

X.

Now swift she starts with warning sign,
And now with keen heart-straining gaze,
Beside the ivy-mantled shrine,
The wretched maiden kneels and prays.

XI.

Oft has she roamed in happier hours,
The walks where now she loiters wild,
When blest within her natal towers,
Her father nursed his darling child.

XII.

While yet their ancient dwelling stood,
By Corrib's wild and gusty lake,
And many a western chieftain wooed,
The heiress of the high-born Blake.

XIII.

And Mary made the moments light,
With friendship's soft and tranquil joy,
And Eman held her promise plight,
The Mayor of Galway's gallant boy.

XIV.

An autumn's sun had shown the tower,
Deep imaged in the waveless lake,
When sadly in their secret bower,
Young Mary questioned Anna Blake.

XV.

"The morn," she said, "is rosy bright,
Ah, why art thou so pale and chill?
The flowers look up to meet the light,
Ah, why is Anna drooping still?"

XVI.

"Is this my brother's beauteous bride
That ere the bridal sinks forlorn;
Is Mary falser than the tide?
Is Eman colder than the morn?"

XVII.

"Cold!" said the maiden, as she raised
Her moistened eyes and sadly smiled:
"Not cold—though coldness might be praised
Before a love so weak and wild."

XVIII.

“ Mary forgive !—I know thou art
“ His softer self from infancy,
“ Yet Nature’s bond within my heart,
“ Is less a bond than Love’s in me.

XIX.

“ My sister and my friend sincere,
“ Ah, blame not one confiding sigh !
“ I breathe my griefs in Mary’s ear,
“ As if the wind alone were nigh.

XX.

‘ No, though from youth the fire divine,
“ Unfading burns in either breast,
‘ I feel a warning sense in mine,
“ That tells me it shall ne’er be blest.

XXI.

“ To stranger heart, to friend less dear,
“ I would not own one thought of pain ;
“ Not Eman’s self should know the fear,
“ That makes this bridal splendour vain.

“ Can I not sing a mirthful song,
“ Or dance, or laugh by summer stream
“ But I must hold some thought of wrong,
“ Some secret slight at heart to him.

XXIII.

"Oh, never may our Mary prove,
 "The jealous glance,—the doubt unjust—
"The thousand pains that wait on Love ,
 " When watched by beetle-browed distrust !

XXIV.

"The veiled blame, the tone that stirs
 "Even Love's own sweetness into gall ;
"But ah ! the thought that he who errs,
 "Is still the best beloved of all !

XXV.

"The eye, whose unconfiding beam,
 "Ne'er meets thine own with meaning free—
"The temper like a maniac's dream ;
 "The secret step that—hush ! 'tis he !"

XXVI.

A shadow falls across the leaves,
 That cluster round the arched bower,
Where close the sunbright jasmine weaves :
 Its shoots through Bruges lingering flower.

XXVII.

"Tis Eman's step—'tis Eman's form,
 In nuptial splendour all arrayed,
Yet in his greeting fond and warm ;
 There lingered still an anxious shade.

XXVIII.

“What means that quick distrustful hush,
When Eman’s form the maidens sec ?
Why rises Anna’s conscious blush ?
They have been whispering here of me !”

XXIX.

But soon the unworthy darkness passed,
At Anna’s smile, from that high brow,
As hills by transient gloom o’ercast ;
In light as transient brighten now.

XXX.

“Joy to my Anna !—it is come !
“The morn of long expected bliss,
“And Doubt is fled—and Fear is dumb,
“And hours are rising bright with peace.

XXXI.

“And wilt thou now forgive the pain,
“That Eman’s anxious thoughts have given ?
“That never can return again,
“Till life’s new gilded links are riven !

XXXII.

“Oh wordless joy !—the morn-beams break,
“For which my lonely heart has sighed—
“Since first by Corrib’s mighty lake
“I saw my young and gifted bride.”

XXXIII.

Oh joy of joys ! the blushing ray,
That smiling brings the bridal dawn,
The sweetly-wakening waves that play,
All bright against the sunny lawn.

XXXIV.

“ The fostering light—the genial air,
“ That breathe in nature’s morning bowers,
“ Brings less of rapturous promise there,
“ Than this arising day of ours ! ”

XXXV.

Even while he spoke and Anna smiled,
There fell a darkness on the bower,
As when on Burrins mountain wild,
The west-winds drive the sudden shower.

XXXVI.

The rising breeze unglassed the lake,
The far blue hills grew dark and near,
As in the Autumnal blasts that break,
The beauty of the closing year.

XXXVII.

The vapoury pile arising dun,
Slow up the altering east is driven,
A veil obscures the distant sun,
And darkness chills the face of heaven.

XXXVIII.

High in his airy field remote,
The skylark ends his duteous strain,
And with a long and warning note
Drops sudden on the darkening plain.

XXXIX.

The peasant rests his weary spade,
And backward views the threatening morn ;
The pedlar marks the deepening shade
Upon his mountain track forlorn.

XL.

The boatman spreads his stinted sail,
Safe moored beside the windward cliff,
Already hears the rushing gale,
And closer winds the prudent reef.

XLI.

Along the shore with rapid stroke,
The fisher plies the bending ash,
Beneath the broad and darkening oak.
The billows break their noisier plash.

XLII.

The curlew seeks the inland moor,

* * * * *

MY SPIRIT IS GAY.

My spirit is gay as the breaking of dawn,
As the breeze that sports over the sunlighted lawn,
As the song of yon lark from his kingdom of light.
Or the harpstring that rings in the chambers at night.
For the world and its vapours, though darkly they fold,
I have light that can turn them to purple and gold,
Till they brighten the Landscape they came to deface,
And deformity changes to beauty and grace.

II.

Yet say not to selfish delights I must turn,
From the grief-laden bosoms around me that mourn ;
For 'tis pleasure to share in each sorrow I see,
And sweet sympathy's tear is enjoyment to me.
Oh ! blest is the heart when misfortunes assail,
That is armed in content as a garment of mail,
For the grief of another that treasures its zeal,
And remembers no woe but the woe it can heal.

III.

When the storm gathers dark o'er the summer's young bloom,
 And each ray of the noontide is sheathed in gloom,
 I would be the rainbow high arching in air,
 Like a gleaming of hope on the brow of despair.
 When the burst of its fury is spent on the bow'r,
 And the buds are yet bow'd with the weight of the show'r,
 I would be the beam that comes warming and bright,
 And that bids them burst open to fragrance and light.

IV.

I would be the smile that comes breaking serene
 O'er the features where lately affliction has been,
 Or the heart-speaking scroll after years of alloy,
 That brings home to the desolate tidings of joy ;
 Or the life-giving rose odour borne by the breeze
 To the sense rising keen from the couch of disease,
 Or the whisper of charity tender and kind,
 Or the dawning of hope on the penitents mind. *

V.

Then breathe ye sweet roses your fragrance around,
 And waken ye wild birds the grove with your sound ;
 When the soul is unstained and the heart is at ease,
 There's a rapture in pleasures so simple as these.
 I rejoice in each sunbeam that gladdens the vale,
 I rejoice in each odour that sweetens the gale,
 In the bloom of the spring, in the summers gay voice,
 With a spirit as gay I rejoice ! I rejoice !

THE TIE IS BROKE MY IRISH GIRL.

I.

The tie is broke my Irish girl !
That bound thee here to me,
My heart has lost its single pearl,
And thine at last is free—
Dead as the earth that wraps thy clay,
Dead as the stone above thee—
Cold as this heart that breaks to say
It never more can love thee.

II.

I press thee to my aching breast—
—No blush comes o'er thy brow—
Those gentle arms that once caress'd
Fall round me deadly now—
The smiles of Love no longer part
Those dead blue lips of thine—
I lay my hand upon thy heart,
'Tis cold at last to mine.

III.

Were we beneath our native heaven,
 Within our native land—
 A fairer grave to thee were given
 Than this wild bed of sand—
 But thou wert single in thy faith
 And single in thy worth,
 And thou should'st die a lonely death,
 And lie in lonely earth.

IV.

Then lay thee down and take thy rest.
 My last—last look is given—
 The earth is smooth above thy breast,
 And mine is yet unriven !
 No mass—no parting rosary—
 My perished love can have—
 But a husband's sighs embalm her corse,
 A husband's tears her grave.

WHEN LOVE IN A YOUNG HEART.

I.

When Love in a young heart his dwelling has taken,
 And pines on the white cheek, and burns in the veins,
 Say, how can the reign of the tyrant be shaken,
 By absence ? by poverty ? sickness ? or chains ?

II.

No!—these have been tried and the tempted has come,

Unmoved through the changes of grief and distress,

But if you would send him at once to the tomb

You must poison his hope with a dose of—success.

SLEEP THAT LIKE THE COUCHED DOVE.

Sleep, that like the couched dove,
Broods o'er the weary eye,
Dreams, that with soft heavings move
The heart of memory—
Labour's guerdon, golden rest,
Wrap thee in its downy vest ;
Fall like comfort on thy brain,
And sing the hush-song to thy pain!

II.

Far from thee be startling fears,
And dreams the guilty dream ;
No Banshee scare thy drowsy ears,
With her ill-omened scream.

But tones of fairy minstrelsy
Float like the ghosts of sound o'er thee,
Soft as the chapels distant bell,
And lull thee to a sweet farewell.

III.

Ye, for whom the ashy hearth
The fearful housewife clears—
Ye, whose tiny sounds of mirth,
The nighted carman hears—
Ye, whose pigmy hammers make
The wonderers of the cottage wake—
Noiseless be your airy flight,
Silent as the still moonlight.

IV.

Silent go and harmless come,
Faries of the stream—
Ye, who love the winter gloom,
Or the gay moonbeam—
Hither bring your drowsy store,
Gather'd from the bright lusmore,
Shake o'er temples—soft and deep,
The comfort of the poor man's sleep.

THE SALLY-COOP WHERE ONCE
I STRAYED.

I.

The sally-coop where once I strayed
Is faded now and lonely—
The echocs in the leafless glade
Wake to the waters only—
My early haunts are perished all,
My early friends departed—
And I sit in my native hall
Forlorn and broken-hearted.

II.

When last I lay beside that stream
I dreamt of fame and splendour,
And bliss was mingled with my dream,
Domestic, sweet, and tender—
Now I would give that fame and all,
Were this soft starlight gleaming
On my old friends in their old hall,
And I an infant dreaming.

THE MIE-NA-MALLAH* NOW IS PAST.

Air.—Oh wirra-sthru.

The mie-na-mallah* now is past,
 O wirra-sthru ! O wirra-sthru !
And I must leave my home at last,
 O wirra-sthru ! O wirra-sthru !
I look into my father's eyes,
I hear my mother's parting sighs—
Ah ! fool to pine for other ties—
 O wirra-sthru ! O wirra-sthru !

II.

This evening they must sit alone,
 O wirra-sthru ! O wirra-sthru !
They'll talk of me when I am gone,
 O wirra-sthru ! O wirra sthru !

Honeymoon.

Who now will cheer my weary sire,
When toil and care his heart shall tire;
My chair is empty by the fire ;
O wirra-sthru ! O wirra-sthru ;

III.

How sunny looks my pleasant home,
O wirra-sthru ! O wirra-sthru !
Those flowers for me shall never bloom—
O wirra-sthru ! O wirra-sthru ;
I seek new friends, and I am told,
That they are rich in lands and gold ;
Ah ! will they love me like the old ?
O wirra-sthru ! O wirra-sthru ?

IV.

Farewell dear friends, we meet no more—
O wirra-sthru ! O wirra-sthru !
My husband's horse is at the door ;
O wirra-sthru ! O wirra-sthru ;
Ah, love ! ah, love ! be kind to me ;
For by this breaking heart you see,
How dearly I have purchased thee !
O wirra-sthru ! O wirra-sthru !

THE WANDERER'S RETURN.

I.

I've come unto my home again and find myself alone,
The friends I left in quiet there are perished all and gone—

My father's house is tenantless, my early love lies low,
But one remains of all that made my youthful spirit glow.

My love lies in the blushing West,—drest in a robe of green,

And pleasant waters sing to her, and know her for their queen :

The wild wind fans her face that o'er the distant billows come—

She is my last remaining love—my own—my island home.

II.

I know I've not the cunning got to tell the love I feel,
And few give timid truth the faith they yield to seeming zeal,

The friends who loved me thought me cold, and fell off one by one,

And left me in my solitude to live and love alone.

But each pleasant grove of thine, my love, and stream,
my fervour know—
For there is no distrusting glance to meet and check its glow—
To every dell I freely tell my thoughts where'er I roam,
How dear thou art to this iorn heart, my own, my island home.

III.

And when I lift my voice and sing unto thy silent shades,
And echo wakens merrily in all thy drowsy glades,
There's not a rill—a vale—a hill—a wild wood or still grove,
But gives again the burning strain, and yields me love for love—
Oh, I have seen the maiden of my bosom pine and die—
And I have seen my bosom friend look on me doubtingly—
And long—O long—have all my young affections found a tomb—
Yet thou art all in all to me, my own, my island
home.

IV.

And now I bring a weary thing—a withered heart to thee—
To lay me down upon thy breast and die there quietly—

I've wandered o'er—O, many a shore, to die this death at last—
And my soul is glad—its wish is gained, and all my toils are past.
Oh, take me to thy bosom then, and let the spot of earth
Receive the wanderer to his rest, that gave the wanderer birth—
And the stream, beside whose gentle tide a child I loved to roam—
Now pour its wave along my grave, my narrow island
home?

OLD TIMES! OLD TIMES!

I.

Old times! old times! the gay old times!
When I was young and free,
And heard the merry Easter chimes
Under the sally tree.
My Sunday palm beside me placed—
My cross upon my hand—
A heart at rest within my breast,
And sunshine on the land!
Old times! Old times!

II.

It is not that my fortunes flee,
Nor that my cheek is pale—
I mourn whene'er I think of thee,
My darling native vale?—
A wiser head I have, I know,
Than when I loitered there—
But in my wisdom there is woe,
And in my knowledge, care.
Old times ! Old times !

III.

I've lived to know my share of joy,
To feel my share of pain—
To learn that friendship's self can cloy,
To love, and love in vain—
To feel a pang and wear a smile,
To tire of other climes—
To like my own unhappy isle,
And sing the gay old times !
Old times ! Old times !

IV.

And sure the land is nothing changed,
The birds are singing still ;
The flowers are springing where we ranged,
There's sunshine on the hill !

The sally, waving o'er my head,
Still sweetly shades my frame—
But ah, those happy days are fled,
And I am not the same !

Old times ! Old times !

v.

Oh, come again ye merry times !
Sweet, sunny, fresh, and calm—
And let me hear those Easter chimes,
And wear my Sunday palm.
If I could cry away mine eyes
My tears would flow in vain—
If I could waste my heart in sighs,
They'll never come again !

Old times ! Old times !

A PLACE IN THY MEMORY, DEAREST.

i.

A place in thy memory, dearest,
Is all that I claim,
To pause and look back when thou hearest
The sound of my name.
Another may woo thee, nearer,
Another may win and wear ;
I care not though he be dearer,
If I am remembered there.

N

II.

Remember me—not as a lover
Whose hope was cross'd,
Whose bosom can never recover
The light it hath lost,
As the young bride remembers the mother
She loves, though she never may see,
As a sister remembers a brother,
O, dearest ! remember me.

III.

Could I be thy true lover, dearest,
Could'st thou smile on me,
I would be the fondest and nearest
That ever loved thee !
But a cloud on my pathway is glooming
That never must burst upon thine ;
And Heaven, that made thee all blooming
Ne'er made thee to wither on mine.

IV.

Remember me then !—O, remember,
My calm, light love ;
Though bleak as the blasts of November
My life may prove,
That life will, though lonely, be sweet,
If its brightest enjoyment should be,
A smile and kind word when we meet,
And a place in thy memory.

MY MARY OF THE CURLING HAIR.

Air.—Shule, agra.

I.

My Mary of the curling air,
The laughing teeth and bashful air,
Our bridal morn is dawning fair,
 With blushes in the skies.
Shule ! Shule ! Shule ! agra,
*Shule, asucur, agus shule, aroon **
 My love ! my pearl !
 My own dear girl !
My mountain maid arise !

II.

Wake, linnet of the osier grove !
Wake, trembling, stainless, virgin dove !
Wake, nestling of a parent's love !
 Let Moran see thine eyes.
Shule ! Shule ! &c.

* Come ! come ! come, my darling—
Come, softly, and come, my love !

III

I am no stranger, proud and gay,
To win thee from thy home away,
And find thee, for a distant day,

A theme for wasting sighs.

Shule ! Shule ! &c.

IV.

But we were known from infancy,
Thy fathers heart was home to me,
No selfish love was mine for thee,

Unholy and unwise.

Shule ! Shule ! &c.

V.

And yet, (to see what Love can do !)
Though calm my hope has burned, and true
My cheek is pale and worn for you,
And sunken are mine eyes !

Shule ! Shule ! &c.

VI.

But soon my love shall be my bride,
And happy by our own fire-side,
My veins shall feel the rosy tide,
That lingering Hope denies.

Shule ! Shule ! &c.

VII.

My Mary of the curling hair,
The laughing teeth and bashful air,
Our bridal morn is dawning fair,
 With blushes in the skies.
Shule ! Shule ! Shule, agra,
Shule asucur, agus shule, aroon !
 My love ! my pearl !
 My own dear girl !
My mountain maid, arise !

GILLI-MA-CHREE.

Air.—Paddy O'Rourke's the bouchal. *

1.

Gilli-ma chree,
Sit down by me,
We now are joined and ne'er shall sever
 This hearth's our own
 Our heart's are one
And peace is ours for ever !

II.

When I was poor,
Your father's door
Was closed against your constant lover
With care and pain,
I tried in vain
My fortunes to recover.
I said, 'To other lands I'll roam,
'Where Fate may smile on me, love ;
I said, 'Farewell, my own old home !
And I said, 'Farewell to thee, love !'
Sing Gilli ma chree, &c.

III.

I might have said,
My mountain maid,
'Come live with me, your own true lover ;
I know a spot,
A silent cot
Your friends can ne'er discover.
Where gently flows the waveless tide
By one small garden only ;
Where the heron waves his wings so wide
And the linnet sings so lonely !
Sing Gilli ma chree &c.

IV.

I might have said,
My mountain maid,
A father's right was never given

True hearts to curse
 With tyrant force
 That have been blessed in heaven.
 But then, I said, ' In after years,
 When thoughts of home shall find her !
 My love may mourn with secret tears
 Her friends, thus left behind her."

v.

Oh, no, I said,
 My own dear maid,
 For me, though all forlorn, for ever,
 That heart of thine
 Shall ne'er repine
 O'er slighted duty—never.
 From home and thee though wandering far
 A dreary fate be mine, love ;
 I'd rather live in endless war,
 Than buy my peace with thine, love

vi.

Far, far away,
 By night and day,
 I toiled to win a golden treasure;
 And golden gains
 Repaid my pains

In fair and shining measure.
I sought again my native land,
Thy father welcomed me, love ;
I poured my gold into his hand,
And my guerdon found in thee, love !
Sing Gilli ma chree
Sit down by me,
We now are joined, and ne'er shall sever
This hearth's our own,
Our hearts are one
And peace is ours for ever.

FOR I AM DESOLATE.

I.

The Christmas light* is burning bright
In many a village pane,
And many a cottage rings to-night
With many a merry strain.

* The Christmas—a light, blessed by the Priest, and lighted at sunset, on Christmas eve, in Irish houses. It is a kind of impiety to snuff, touch, or use it for any profane purposes after.

Young boys and girls run laughing by,
Their hearts and eyes elate,
I can but think on mine, and sigh,
For I am desolate.

I.

There's none to watch in our old cot,
Beside the holy light,
No tongue to bless the silent spot
Against the parting night.*
I've closed the door and hither come
To mourn my lonely fate ;
I cannot bear my own old home,
It is so desolate !

III.

I saw my father's eyes grow dim,
And clasped my mother's knee ;
I saw my mother follow him,
—My husband wept with me.
My husband did not long remain,
—His child was left me yet ;
But now my heart's last love is slain,
And I am desolate !

* It is the custom in Irish Catholic families to sit up till midnight on Christmas-eve, in order to join in devotion at that hour. Few ceremonies of the religion have a more splendid and imposing effect than the morning mass, which in cities is celebrated soon after the hour alluded to and long before day-break.

THE BRIDAL WAKE.

I.

The priest stood at the marriage board,
The marriage cake was made,
With meat the marriage chest was stored,
Decked was the marriage bed.
The old man sat beside the fire,
The mother sat by him,
The white bride was in gay attire
But her dark eye was dim,
 Ululah ! Ululah !
The night falls quick—the sun is set,
Her love is on the water yet.

I saw a red cloud in the west,
Against the morning light,
Heaven shield the youth that she loves best
From evil chance to-night.
The door flings wide ! Loud moans the gale,
Wild fear her bosom fills,

It is, it is the Banshee's wail !

Over the darkened hills.

Ululah ! Ululah !

The day is past ! the night is dark !

The waves are mounting round his bark.

III.

The guests sit round the bridal bed,

And break the bridal cake,

But they sit by the dead-man's head,

And hold his wedding wake.

The bride is praying in her room,

The place is silent all !

A fearful call ! a sudden doom !

Bridal and funeral

Ululah ! Ululah !

A youth to Kilfieheras'* ta'en

That never will return again.

ONCE I HAD A TRUE LOVE.

One I had a true love,

I loved him well—I loved him well.

But since he's found a new love,

Alone I dwell, alone I dwell.

* The name of a churchyard near Kilkee.

I.

How oft we've wandered lonely,
Through yon old glen, through yon old glen,
I was his treasure only,
And true love then, and true love then.
But Mary's singing brought me,
To sigh all day, to sigh all day,
Oh, had my mother taught me,
To sing and play, to sing and play.
Once I had &c.

II

By lone Glencree at even,
I passed him late, I passed him late ;
A glance just sidelong given,
Told all his fate, told all his fate ;
His step no longer airy,
His head it hung, his head it hung,
Ah, well I knew that Mary
She had a tongue, she had a tongue.
Once I had &c.

The spring is coming early,
And skies are blue, and skies are blue,
And trees are budding fairly,
And corn is new, and corn is new ;
What clouds the sunny morrow,
Of nature then, of nature then ?

And turns young hope to sorrow ?
 Oh fickle men ! Oh fickle men !
 Once I had a true love,
 I loved him well—I loved him well,
 But since he's found a new love,
 Alone I dwell, alone I dwell.

HARK ! HARK ! THE SOFT BUGLE.

Hark ! hark ! the soft bugle sounds over the wood,
 And thrills in the silence of even,
 Till faint, and more faint, in the far solitude,
 It dies on the portals of heaven !
 But echo springs up from her home in the rock,
 And seizes the perishing strain ;
 And sends the gay challenge with shadowy mock,
 From mountain to mountain again !
 And again !
 From mountain to mountain again.

II.

Oh, thus let my love, like a sound of delight,
 Be around thee while shines the glad day,
 And leave thee, unpain'd in the silence of night,
 And die like sweet music away.

While hope, with her warm light, thy glancing eye fills,

Oh, say, "Like that echoing strain,
Though the sounds of his love has died over the hills,

It will waken in heaven again."

And again !

It will waken in heaven again.

FAREWELL.

ADDRESSED TO A FRIEND.

I.

Faded now, and slowly chilling,
Summer leaves the weeping dell,
While, forlorn and all unwilling
Here I come, to say, Farewell !
Spring was green when first I met thee,
Autumn sees our parting pain,
Never, if my heart forget thee,
Summer shine on me again !

II.

Fame invites ! her summons only
Is a magic spell to me ;
For when I was sad and lonely,
Fame it was that gave me thee.

False, she is, her slanderers sing me,
 Wreathing flowers that soonest fade,
 But such gifts if Fame can bring me,
 Who will call the nymph a shade ?

III.

Hearts that feel not, hearts half broken,
 Deem her reign no more divine ;
 Vain to them are praises spoken,
 Vain the light that fills her shrine.
 But in mine, those joys Elysian,
 Deeply sink and warmly breathe ;
 *Fame to me has been no vision,
 Friendship's smile embalms the wreath.

IV.

Sunny lakes, and spired mountains,
 Where that friendship sweetly grew ;
 Ruins hoar, and gleaming fountains,
 Scenes of vanished joys, adieu !
 Oh, where'er my steps may wander,
 While my home-sick bosom heaves,
 On these scenes my heart will ponder,
 Silent, oft, in summer eves.

V.

Still, when calm the sun, down-shining,
 Turns to gold the winding tide ;
 Lonely on that couch reclining,
 Bid these scenes before thee glide,

Fair Killarney's sunset splendour,
Broken crag and mountain grey,
And Glengariff's moonlight tender,
Bosomed on the heaving bay.

STANZAS ADDED AT A LATER PERIOD.

VI.

Oh, farewell ! these joys are ended,
Oh, farewell ! that day is done ;
Passed in clouds and darkly blended,
Slowly sinks our wasted sun.
When shall we with souls delighted,
See these rosy times return ?
And in blameless love united,
View the past, yet never mourn ?

VII.

Hues of darker fate assuming,
Faster change life's summer skies,
In the future, dimly glooming,
Forms of deadly promise rise.
See a loved home forsaken,
Sunder'd ties and tears for thee—
And by thoughts of terror shaken,
See an alter'd soul in me.

VIII.

Sung in pride and young illusion,
 Then forgive the idle strain ;
 Now my heart in low confusion,
 Owns its sanguine promise vain.
 Fool of Fame ! that earthly vision,
 Charms no more thy cheated youth ;
 And these boasted dreams Elysian,
 Fly the searching dawn of truth.

IX

Never in these tended bowers,
 Never by that reedy stream ;
 Lull'd on beds of tinted flowers,
 Young Romance again shall dream.
 Now his rainbow pinions shaking,
 Oh, he hates the lonesome shore ;—
 Where a funeral voice awaking,
 Bids us rest in joy no more !

X.

Yet all pleasing rise the measure,
 Memory soon shall hymn to thee ;
 Dull for me no coming pleasure,
 Lose no joy for thought of me.
 Oh, I would not leave thee weeping ;
 But, when falls our parting day
 See thee hushed, on roses sleeping,
 . Sigh unheard, and steal away !

THE MOTHER'S LAMENT.

I.

My darling, my darling, while silence is on the moor,
And lone in the sunshine, I sit by our cabin door ;
When evening falls quiet and calm over land and sea,
My darling, my darling, I think of past times and thee !

II.

Here, while on this cold shore, I wear out my lonely, hours,
My child in the heavens is spreading my bed with flowers,
All weary my bosom is grown of this friendless clime
But I long not to leave it ; for that were a shame and crime.

III.

They bear to the church-yard the youth in their health away,
I know where a fruit hangs more ripe for the grave
than they,
But I wish not for death for my spirit is all resigned,
And the hope that stays with me, gives peace to my aged mind.

IV.

My darling, my darling, God gave to my feeble age,
A prop for my faint heart, a stay in my pilgrimage,
My darling, my darling, God takes back his gift
again—

And my heart may be broken, but ne'er shall my will complain.

LINES ADDRESSED TO A LADY.

I.

A gay shifting eye, like the swift ray of light
The May morning shoots o'er the brow of the night,
That is veiled up in mist, like that eye in its lid,
Yet is loved for the promise of light that is hid.
Ah, trust not that eye ! for though gentle it seems,
It is but the will that has shrouded its beams ;
It has fire, it has love, it has smiles, it has tears,
For the world and its passions, its sorrows and fears.

II.

A voice like a sound heard in deep solitude,
Like the song of the night-bird alone in the wood ;
A melody struck by the finger of art,
From the small strings that tremble round Nature's own heart,

But hear not that voice, for though softly it breathe,
Its tones round the trusting heart cunningly wreath,
When chain'd through its pulses, and bound for a spoil,
It may throb at the cheat, but must pain in the toil.

III.

A brow that is built for the throne of the mind
And curtained by dark ringlets gracefully twined,
The glance of the falcon, the gaze of the dove,
The smile that is blended of mirth and of love.
A shape soft and gliding, like those which arise,
Through the shadows of time, on the young poets eyes,
When the cloud of the future he toils to remove,
And fancy the maiden who shall be his love.

IV.

Ah, the days of her youth are for ever gone by,
Yet the spring tide of genius is young in her eye,
Fast over her beauties the parting years roll,
Still they bloom with the evergreen hue of the soul,
The rose leaves fall silently down from her cheek,
Still it hath the dear meaning, Time never can break,
And each act of her motion an impulse reveals,
Of a spirit that thinks and a bosom that feels.

V.

Even such was my love, and in merrier hours,
 I filled the bright vase with Hope's loveliest flowers,
 Young Fancy flew over my bower of peace,
 And soared in the golden clouds, singing of bliss.
 But vain was my dream ! for these hours are fled,
 That song it is silent, that bower is dead,
 The gold coloured mists of life's morning are flown,
 My vase it is broken, my flowers are gone !

VI.

Yet blame me not, lady, if thus, while I dwell,
 On a form that my memory has treasured too well ;
 An idol, my faith would make all but divine,
 I should breathe out one heart-broken sigh at its shrine.
 I look on thy state, and I think on mine own,
 And I laugh at the hope that would bid me love on—
 Yet my reason asks “ Why do I love thee ? ” in vain,
 While my heart can but echo, “ I love thee ” again.

LET OTHERS BREATHE IN GLOWING WORDS.

I.

Let others breathe in glowing words
 The secret of their bosom pain,
 And bid the loud harp's speaking chords,
 Tell o'er the weary tale again.

From me no burning stave shall rise,
A cold heart's answering sigh to move,
But I will gaze upon those eyes,
And waste away in silent love.

II.

I cannot find in art a strain
To echo forth mine inward moan,
If sighs and looks can't tell my pain,
Oh, never shall my love be known.
Safe is the flame whose answering breath,
A tear may quench, a sigh may move,
But full of danger and of death,
Is the pent fire of silent love.—

YOU NEVER BADE ME HOPE, 'TIS TRUE.

I.

You never bade me hope, 'tis true
I asked you not to swear—
But I looked in those eyes of blue
And read a promise there.

II.

The vow should bind with maiden sighs
That maiden's lips have spoken—
But that which looks from maidens eyes
Should last of all be broken!

A SOLDIER—A SOLDIER TO NIGHT IS OUR GUEST.

I.

Fan, fan the gay hearth and fling back the barr'd door,
Strew, strew the fresh rushes around on our floor,
And blithe be the welcome in every breast
For, a soldier,—a soldier to-night is our guest.

II.

All honour to him who when danger afar,
Had lighted for ruin his ominous star,
Left pleasure and country and kindred behind,
And sped to the shock on the wings of the wind.

III.

If you value the blessings that shine at our hearth—
The wife's smiling welcome, the infant's sweet mirth—

While they charm us at eve, let us think upon those,
Who have bought with their blood our domestic repose.

IV.

Then share with the soldier your hearth and your home,
And warm be your greeting whene'er he shall come ;
Let love light a welcome in every breast,
For a soldier—a soldier to-night is our guest.

DUET.

FROM THE DUKE OF MONMOUTH.

AQUILA.

Dewy dimmet!* silent hour !
Welcome to our cottage bow'r !
See along the lonely meadow
Ghost-like falls the lengthen'd shadow,

* Dimmet.—The name given to the twilight in parts of the West of England.

While the sun with level shine
Turns the stream to rosy wine,
And from yonder busy town
Valeward hies the lazy clown.

BOTH.

Lovely dimmet ! pleasing hour !
Welcome to our lonely bow'r !

TAMSEN.

Hark ! along the dewy ground
Steals the sheep-bell's drowsy sound—
While the ploughman home returning
Sees his cheerful faggot burning,
And his dame with kindly smile
Meets him by the rustic stile,
While beneath the hawthorn mute
Swells the peasant's merry flute.

BOTH.

Tuneful dimmet ! mirthful hour !
Welcome to our cottage bow'r !

AQUILA.

Lass, from market homeward speed ;
Traveller, urge thy lagging steed,

Fly the dark wood's lurking danger ;
Churl, receive the 'nighted stranger—
He with merry song and jest
Will repay thy niggard feast,
And the eye of heaven above
Smile upon the deed of love.

BOTH.

Dusky dimmet ! dewy hour !
Welcome to our lonely bow'r !

TAMSEN.

Hour of beauty ! hour of peace !
Hour when care and labour cease—
When around her hush'd dominion
Nature spreads her brooding pinion
While a thousand angel eyes
Wake to watch us from the skies,
Till the reason centres there,
And the heart is moved to pray'r !

BOTH.

Lovely dimmet ! witching hour !
Welcome to our cottage bow'r !

THOUGH LONELY HERE BY AVON'S TIDE.

I.

Though lonely here by Avon's tide,
I waste my cheerless hours,
And see its silent waters glide
By thy forsaken bow'rs ;
I'd rather bear the lasting pain
That breaks this heart of mine,
Than pine beneath the golden chain
That guilt has flung o'er thine.

II.

In dreams I deem thee still mine own,
Unsullied and unchanged ;
But morning shows the vision flown,
And thee again estranged.
Oh ! when from some unheeding tongue
I hear that once-loved name,
Then—then my inmost heart is wrung,
To think upon thy shame.

III.

How lonely, when I wake at dawn,
Each silent chamber now !
How joyless looks the sunny lawn,
How droops each weeping bough !
For though the noontide sun shine warm,
All cheerless falls his beams ;
And lonesome now, without that form,
The gay verandah seems.

IV.

With sinking heart and thoughtful pace,
I pass our garden-door,
And 'mid the leafy stillness trace
Each haunt of rapture o'er.
The scents that rise, the flowers that blow,
The breeze that wanders free,
My alter'd sense can hardly know,—
All breathe of death and thee.

V.

Ah, once I thought that mind was fair,
And void of inward blame ;
Old age, I said, and hoary hair,
Will find our hearts the same.
Now soon, oh soon, the church-yard lone
Shall hide those cares from me :
Ah ! may that turf and cold grey stone
Rest lightly yet on thee !

VI.

But not with old affection's slight,
And love's forgotten day,
I charge thee in my song to-night,
Or pleasures past away.
No—pledged on yonder sacred sod,
Thy vows were heard above ;
And thou wert falser to thy God,
Than even to Edmund's love.

MONMOUTH'S ADDRESS.*

I.

“ Up ! ye who have the hands to fight,
Who have the hearts to feel !
Up, up ! for merry England's right,
With musket and with steel !
Oh, brightly streams on summer's gale
The gilded mist on high ;
But brighter soon in Taunton vale
Shall Freedom's ensign fly !
Then up ! who have, &c.

*Taken from the novel of The Duke of Monmouth.

II.

“ For Liberty and Monmouth ! ho !
For liberty, arise !
There’s mercy in the conquering blow,
When grim Oppression dies.
There’s music in the mustering feet
That marked the daisied green,
When the gallant friends of Freedom meet
In lovely Taunton Dene !
Up ! ye who have &c.

III.

“ Who basely shuns a glorious death,
Dishonour haunt his tomb !
Who nobly wins a victor wreath,
Long may he see it bloom !
Who freely sheds his generous blood,
His children long shall tell,
How he for England bravely stood,
How he for England fell !
Then up ! who have the hands to fight,
Who have the hearts to feel !
Up, up ! for merry England’s right,
With musket and with steel !

LIKE THE OAK BY THE FOUNTAIN.

I.

Like the oak by the fountain
In sunshine and storm,
Like the rock on the mountain
Unchanging in form,
Like the course of the river,
Through ages the same ;
Like the mist mounting ever
To heaven, whence it came.

II.

So firm be thy merit,
So changeless thy soul ;
So constant thy spirit,
While seasons shall roll ;
The fancy that ranges,
Ends where it began ;
But the mind that ne'er changes,
Brings glory to man.

FALTA VOLLA! FALTA VOLLA!

SONG FROM THE INVASION.

I.

Falta volla! falta volla! welcome to the mountains!
Falta volla! welcome to your native woods and fountains!

To hear the harper play again—and the shouts that greet thee;

Falta volla! how it glads the widow's heart to meet thee!

Falta volla! falta volla!
Welcome to Rath-Aiden.

II.

Shule a volla! shule a volla! through our parted island,

Many a friend and foe hast thou in valley and in highland.

But where'er the friends are false—when the foes distress thee,

Shule a volla! here are ready weapons to redress thee.

Shule a volla! shule a volla!
Shelter in Rath-Aiden.

III.

Ire a volla ! ire a volla ! far in Corca's vallies,
When round the Bloody Hand the routed Dal Gas rallies ;
When the groans of dying friends fill the air above
thee,
Ire a volla ! there are hands to help, and hearts to love thee.

Ire a volla ! ire a volla !
Hasten to Rath-Aiden.

CEAD MILLIA FALTA ! ELIM.

SONG FROM THE INVASION.

Cead millia falta ! child of the Ithian !
Cead millia falta, Elim !
Aisneach, thy temple in ruins is lying,
In Druim na Druid the dark blast is sighing,
Lonely we shelter in grief and in danger,
Yet have we welcome and cheer for the stranger.
Cead millia falta ! child of the Ithian '
Cead millia falta, Elim !

II.

Woe for the weapons that guarded our slumbers,
Tanreach, they said, was too small for our numbers ;

Little is left for our sons to inherit,
Yet what we have, thou art welcome to share it.

Cead millia falta ! child of the Ithian !

Cead millia falta, Elim !

III.

Corman, thy teachers have died broken hearted ;
Voice of the trilithon, thou art departed !
All have forsaken our mountains so dreary,
All but the spirit that welcomes the weary.

Cead millia falta ! child of the Ithian !

Cead millia falta, Elim !

IV.

Vainly the Draithe, alone in the mountain,
Looks to the torn cloud, or eddying fountain ;
The spell of the Christian has vanquished their power,

Yet is he welcome to rest in our bower.

Cead millia falta ! child of the Ithian !

Cead millia falta Elim !

V.

Wake for the Christian your welcoming numbers !
 Strew the dry rushes to pillow his slumbers,
 Long let him cherish, with deep recollection,
 The eve of our feast, and the Druids affection.
 Cead millia falta! child of the Ithian !
 Cead millia falta ! Elim !

THE ISLE OF SAINTS.

I.

Far, far amid those lonely seas,
 Where evening leaves her latest smile,
 Where solemn oceans earliest breeze,
 Breathes, peaceful, o'er our holy isle.

II

Remote from that distracted world,
 Where sin has reared his gloomy throne,
 With passion's ensign sweetly fur'd,
 We live and breathe for heaven alone.

III.

For heaven we hope, for heaven we pray,
For heaven we look, and long to die,
For heaven—for heaven, by night, by day,
Untiring watch, unceasing sigh.

IV.

Here, fann'd by heavenly temper'd winds,
Our island lifts her tranquil breast ;
Oh, come to her, ye wounded minds !
Oh, come and share our holy rest !

V.

For not to hoard the golden spoil,
Of earthly mines we bow the knee—
Our labour is the saintly toil,
Whose hire is in eternity.

VI.

The mountain wild—the islet fair,
The corrig bleak, and lonely vale—
The bawn that feels the summer air,
The peak that splits the wintry gale.

VII.

From northern Ulladh's column'd shore,
To distant Clair's embosom'd nest ;
From high Benhedir's summit hoar,
To Ara in the lonely west,

VIII.

Through all, the same resounding choir,
 Harmonious pours its descant strong,
 All feel the same adoring fire
 All raise the same celestial song.

IX.

When sinks the sun beyond the west,
 Our vesper hymn salutes him there ;
 And when he wakes the world from rest,
 We meet his morning light with prayer.

X

The hermit by his holy well,
 The monk within his cloister grey,
 The virgin in her silent cell,
 The pilgrim on his votive way,

XI.

To all, the same returning light,
 The same returning fervour brings,
 And thoughtful in the dawning bright,
 The spirit spreads her heaven-ward wings.

XII.

From hill to hill, from plain to plain,
 Wherever falls his fostering ray ;
 Still swells the same aspiring strain,
 From angel souls in shapes of clay

XIII.

The echoes of the tranquil lake,
The clefted ocean's cavern'd maze,
The same untiring music make,
The same eternal sound of praise.

XIV

Oh, come, and see our Isle of Saints,
Ye weary of the ways of strife ;
Where oft the breath of discord taints
The banquet sweets of joyous life.

XV.

Ye weary of the lingering woes
That crowd on Passion's footsteps, pale,
Oh, come and taste the sweet repose
That breathes in distant Inisfail.

XVI.

Not ours the zeal for pomp—for power—
The boastful threat—the bearing vain—
The mailed host—the haughty tower—
The pomp of war's encumbered plain.

XVII.

Our strifes are in the holy walk
Of love serene and all sincere ;
Our converse is the soothing talk
Of souls that feel like strangers here.

XVIII.

Our armies are the peaceful bands
 Of saints and sages mustering nigh ;
 Our towers are raised by pious hands
 To point the wanderers thoughts on high.

XIX.

The fleeting joys of selfish earth,
 We learn to shun with holy scorn ;
 They cannot quench the inward dearth
 With man's immortal spirit born.

XX.

Yet while my heart within me burns,
 To hear that still resounding choir :
 To days unborn it fondly turns ;—
 When dies that heaven-descended fire ?

XXI.

How long shalt thou be thus divine,
 Fair isle of piety and song ?
 How long shall peace and love be thine,
 Oh, land of peace—how long ? how long :

Hark ! echoing from each sainted tomb
 Prophetic voices sternly roll—
 They wrap my thoughts in sudden gloom,
 Their accents freeze my shuddering soul.

XXIII.

Ha ! say ye that triumphant hell
Shall riot in these holy grounds ?
Shield ! shield me from those visions fell,
Oh, silent be those fearful sounds !

XXIV.

They tell of crime, of contest sharp,
Of force and fraud, and hate and wrong—
No more, no more, my venturous harp,
Oh, trembling close thine altered song.

XXV.

Oh, let thy thoughtful numbers cease,
Ere yet the touch of frenzy taints
The land of love and letter'd peace,
The Isle of Sages and of Saints.

NO ! NOT FOR THE GLORIES OF DAYS
THAT ARE FLOWN.

I.

No, not for the glories of days that are flown,
For the fall of a splendour that was but our own ;
No, not for the dust of our heroes that sleep,
Should the bard of the Coom in his melody weep.

II.

For the thought of that glory remains in each breast,
Though we see them no longer, the dead are at rest,
And gay is the face of the Druids lone vale,
But dark is the bosom of wide Inisfail.

III.

The demon of discord has breathed on the land,
And her sons on her mountains meet hand against hand,
The children who fought for her welfare are slain,
And her bosom is trampled by those who remain.

Wild blast of the trompa ! that echoing far,
Hast summoned Leath Mogha with Cuin to war,
Far westward óf Ara die over the main,
And never be heard in our vallies again.

V.

Arise on the mountains, O spirit of peace,
Let the sons of the Riada, hear thee and cease ;
Too late for their country, oh, let them not prove,
That the strength of the island is union and love.

VI.

Oh, spread not thy strife-quelling pinions aloft,
Till the calm on our country fall sunny and soft ;
From Rechrin's cold islet and Ulladh the green,
To woody Glengariff and fair Ibhersceine.

COME TO GLENGARIFF ! COME !

Air.—Ours is a merry Land.

I.

Come to Glengariff ! come !

Close by the sea,

Ours is a happy home

Peaceful and free.

There, there, far away,

Happy by our sunny bay

We live from day to day,

Blithe as the bee.

For ours is a sunny home

Joyous and free,

Come to Glengariff ! come !

Close by the sea.

II.

Thine is a mountain hoar

Frowning and wild,

Ours is a lowland shore

Fertile and mild.

There, there, loud and strong,

Sudden tempests drive along ;

Here, their gentle song
 Scarce moves the tree !
 For ours is a lowland home
 Peaceful and free ;
 Come from the mountain ! come !
 Come to the sea !

THE PHANTOM CITY.

I.

A story I heard on the cliffs of the west,
 That oft through the breakers dividing
 A city is seen on the ocean's wild breast
 In turreted majesty riding.
 But brief is the glimpse of that phantom so bright,
 Soon close the white waters to screen it,
 And the bodement they say of the wonderful sight,
 Is death to the eyes that have seen it.

II.

I said when they told me the wonderful tale,
 My country is this not thy story ?
 Thus oft through the breakers of discord we hail
 A promise of peace and of glory.
 Soon gulphed in those waters of hatred again
 No longer our fancy can find it,
 And woe to our hearts for the vision so vain ;
 For ruin and death come behind it

[The following beautiful little Poem on the same subject, was written by a friend, at whose house on the sea-coast, the Author passed some of the happiest hours of his life.

THE YELLOW CITY

SCENE THE SEA SHORE, AT MILTOWN MALBAY.

EVENING.

“It is still, see, my Mary, the ocean’s calm breast,
Tho’ a giant in life, is an infant at rest.
Oh ! happy the mind, in which thus can preside,
A grandeur and strength, like the sea’s in its pride ;
Yet still with the depth of its intellect keep
The purity, stainless, of infancy’s sleep.
Not a breath, o’er the boundless expanse passes by,
And with whispers, the waves at our feet seem to die.
E’en to deep Poula Kirka, they gloomily swell
As tho’ sullen at meeting so murky a cell.
Yet see, not unbroken to Moher’s steep side,
From this rock where we rest, speeds the passionless tide.
For ceaselessly breaking, one billow’s white breast,
Shows a surface disturbed, while all round are at rest.
Canst thou tell me why ever, its foam is thus swelling,
With no breezes to rouse it—no rude rock repelling ?”
Thus questioned a youth, of a maid by his side,
As together they sat by that broad western tide.
She turned to reply, but while yet the fair girl
From her ringlets was clearing, her forehead of pearl.

In the garb of a minsterl of Erin's proud days
 A harper arrested their wondering gaze.
 —First pointing to where, the lone billow still broke,
 Then sweeping the chords, thus his minstrelsy spoke.—

I.

“ Years onward have swept,
 Aye! long ages have rolled—
 Since that billow first slept,
 O'er the City of gold!

II.

'Neath its eddy of white,
 Where the green wave is swelling,
 In their halls of delight,
 Are the fairy tribes dwelling.

III.

And, but seldom the eye,
 Of a mortal may scan,
 Where those palaces high,
 Rise unaided by man.

IV.

Yet at times the waves sever,
 And then you may view,
 The yellow walls ever
 'Neath the ocean's deep blue.

V.

But I warn thee, my son ;
Never seek to behold,
Where the chrystal streams ran,
In the City of gold !”

The song of the Harper, died faintly away,
As evening came forth in her mantle of gray,
But not in the soul of the youth did it die,
For it dwelt in his heart, and it kindled his eye.
No more does Love only, hold sway o’er his breast,
And his footsteps are wandering, his sleep is not rest.
In the visions of night, he beholds the gay halls,
Where the ocean divides o’er that strange city’s walls.
Delight shall attend on his footsteps no more,
As he strays on the cliffs of that sea beaten shore.
Baltard’s rugged outtime, may stretch by the bay,
The islands of Arran, in distance look gray,
Dark Moher may frown o’er the turbulent deep
And lone Inniskerig look stilly asleep ;
Unnoticed, their beauties around him may dwell,
For his eye is still fixed on that charm’d billows swell.
No longer when evening fades over the sky,
To Kirka’s dark cave, does he musingly hie,
Or list from the cliff, where the thunder is heard,
In the war which the water’s commotion has stirred.
He bounds o’er the wave in the buoyant canoe,
But it wakes not the transport he formerly knew,
For its prow near yon billow, is hovering ever,
And he watches the moment the waters shall sever.

—One morn as he stood on the hills where the gale
 Waves the rushes soft green, does his eye catch a sail ?
 That touched by the sun with its morning light mellow
 Now shows through a cloud with a faint shade of yellow.
 He gazes again—like the folds of a mist,
 Retiring from spots which the sunbeam has kissed.
 The dim waves are parting !—and does he behold ?
 Or is it a vision ?—the city of gold !
 The desire of his soul—for which long he had panted,
 His dreams of the night—his fond prayer has been granted !
 He sees the bright halls through the blue waters shewing
 And his eye and his bosom with rapture are glowing.
 But hark ! with what sorrowful cadence is waking,
 Wild music beside him, his bright visions breaking !
 Again has that Harper's deep minstrelsy rung,
 And these are the strains which that ancient Bard sung—

I.

“ Like a beauty with guile,
 When some young knight has found her,
 There is death in her smile,
 And dark ruin around her !

II.

Like a Poet's first dream,
 In his longings for glory ;
 A dagger whose gleam,
 With his life blood is gory.

III.

Like wishes possessed,
And for which we have panted,
When we find us unblest,
Tho' our prayers have been granted.

IV.

Like ought that's forbidden,
Weak man to behold,
Death and sorrow are hid in
The City of gold.

V.

Rash youth ! dost thou view it ?
The ransom thou'lt pay,
Alas ! thou must rue it,
Death takes thee to-day !"

Life is dear, though by sorrow its brightness be shaded
As the violet's sweet, though its petals be faded.
From this beautiful world is it nothing to part,
Tho' the arrow of grief, have sunk deep in the heart ?
E'en the sick man gains light in his languishing eye,
When the scent of a flower on the breeze passes by.
And dying Consumption is raised to survey
The sun as he sinks from the temple of day.
The old, tho' their ties to the world were unstrung
To this valley of tears in their evening have clung ;
Then to youth in the morn of its life, with the light
And the freshness of feeling—when all things are bright,

And when Love, the Elysium they sigh for, is gained,
 Oh ! then by the Herald of death they are pained.
 And such is the pain which has crossed the pale brow,
 Of the youth, who was kindled with pleasure e'en now
 For the bride of his heart—loved for years—has been won
 And lo ! in a moment his rapture is gone !

At eve along the silent strand,
 They slowly press the silver sand,
 The chrystal swells ran smooth and high
 And caught the darkness of the sky
 The breeze from shore, with gentle sway
 Crested the wave with feathery spray.
 And where the sun just touched the plume,
 An Iris rose above the gloom.
 Like warriors bound for war—with pride,
 And awful mien they forward stride,
 Round Moher's dark and distant height
 Is seen to stalk in columns white
 The foam in many a wreathed cloud,
 Like giant ghosts in misty shroud !
 They gaze—when back the heaving ocean
 Rolls with a swift and rushing motion.
 They follow still—with awe to mark
 The warring of the billows dark ;
 When sudden o'er the shelving strand,
 The treacherous sea rushed on to land ;
 And reached the barrier rocks that lay
 Behind the pair———oh ! far away !
 And both have met their early doom
 The Death Wave swept them to their tomb !

WHILE THE STARS OF HEAVEN ARE SHINING.

Air.—Ar hyd a nos.

I.

While the stars of heaven are shining,
 Ar hyd a nos,
Here at midnight lone, reclining,
 Ar hyd a nos,
Fancy flies to those wild bowers,
Sunny fields and springing flowers,
Where I passed my infant hours,
 Ar hyd a nos.

II.

To my own beloved mountains
 Ar hyd a nos,
Rushing streams and quiet fountains,
 Ar hyd a nos.
Sleepless still my thoughts returning,
Leave my lonely bosom mourning,
And my heart within me burning,
 Ar hyd a nos.

III.

There light slumbers blessed my pillow,

Ar hyd a nos,

There beside the starlit billow,

Ar hyd a nos.

Visions soft to me were given,

Pure as mountain winds at even,

Peace for earth and hope for heaven,

Ar hyd a nos.

IV.

Still that Sabbath bell is ringing,

Ar hyd a nos,

Still that Sabbath choir is singing,

Ar hyd a nos ;

Sounds beloved ! Oh restore me,

With the scenes ye bring before me,

Hopes that then hung blooming o'er me,

Ar hyd a nos.

WAR! WAR! HORRID WAR!

I.

War ! War ! Horrid war !
Fly our lovely plain,
Guide fleet and far,
Thy fiery car,
And never come again ,
And never,
Never come again !

II.

Peace ! Peace ! smiling Peace !
Bless our lonely plain,
Guide swiftly here,
Thy mild career,
And never go again !
And never,
Never go again !

WAR SONG OF O'DRISCOL.

I.

From the shieling that stands by the lone mountain river :

Hurry, hurry down, with the axe and the quiver,
From the deep-seated Coom, from the storm-beaten highland

Hurry, hurry down to the shores of your island.

Hurry down, hurry down !

Hurry, hurry &c.

II.

Galloglach and Kern, hurry down to the sea—
There the hungry Raven's beak is gaping for a prey,
Farrah ! to the onset ! Farrah ! to the shore !
Feast him with the pirate's flesh, the bird of gloom and gore !

Hurry down, hurry down !

Hurry down &c.

III.

Hurry for the slaves of Bel, are mustering to meet ye,
Hurry by the beaten cliff, the Nordman longs to greet ye,
Hurry from the mountain! hurry, hurry from the plain!
Welcome him and never let him leave our land
again!

Hurry down, hurry down!

Hurry down &c.

IV.

On the land a sulky wolf, and in the sea a shark,
Hew the ruffian spoiler down, and burn his gory bark!
Slayer of the unresisting! ravager profane!
Leave the White sea-tyrant's limbs to moulder on the plain.

Hurry down, hurry down!

Hurry down &c.

FARE THEE WELL, MY NATIVE DELL.

Air—Fare thee well, sweet Killaloe !

I.

Fare thee well, my native dell,
Though far away I wander,
With thee my thoughts shall ever dwell,
In absence only fonder.
Farewell ye banks where once I roved
To view that lonely river—
And you, ye groves so long beloved,
And fields, farewell for ever !
Fare thee well &c.

II.

Here once my youthful moments flew,
In joy like sunshine splendid,
The brightest hours that e'er I knew
With those sweet scenes were blended—
When o'er those hills at break of morn,
The deer went bounding early,
And huntsmen woke with hounds and horn
The mountain echoes cheerly.
Fare thee well &c.

III.

Fare ye well, ye happy hours,
So bright, but long departed !
Fare ye well, ye fragrant bow'rs
So sweet, but now deserted !
Farewell each rock and lonely isle,
That make the poets numbers ;
And thou, oh ancient holy pile,*
Where mighty Bryan slumbers !
Fare ye well &c.

IV.

Farewell thou old romantic bridge,
Where morn has seen me roaming,
To mark across each shallow ridge,
The mighty Shannon foaming.—
No more I'll press the bending oar,
To speed the painted wherry ;
And glide along the woody shore,
To view the hills of Derry.
Fare thee well &c.

V.

There's many an isle in Scariff bay,
With many a garden blooming ;
Where oft I've passed the summer day,
Till twilight hours were glooming.

* The cathedral in which is the monuments of the celebrated Brian Boroimhe.

No more shall evening's yellow glow,
 Among those ruins find me ;—
 Far from these dear scenes I go,
 But leave my heart behind me.
 Fare thee well &c.

VI.

Fast, fast we ride by bridge and tree,
 Fast fade my loved bow'rs ;
 Still through the bursting tears I see,
 Thy hills and hoary towers.
 'Tis past ! my last faint glimpse is o'er
 My last farewell is spoken ;
 I see those loved scenes no more
 My heart—my heart is broken.
 Fare thee well, my native dell,
 Though far away I wander,
 With thee my thoughts shall ever dwell
 In absence only fonder.

AILEEN AROON.

When like the early rose
 Aileen aroon !
 Beauty in childhood blows,
 Aileen aroon !

When like a diadem,
Buds blush around the stem,
Which is the fairest gem,
Aileen aroon !

II.

Is it the laughing eye,
Aileen aroon !
Is it the timid sigh,
Aileen aroon !
Is it the tender tone,
Soft as the stringed harp's moan ?
Oh, it is truth alone.
Aileen aroon !

III.

When like the rising day,
Aileen aroon !
Love sends his early ray,
Aileen aroon !
What makes his dawning glow
Changeless through joy or woe?
Only the constant know
Aileen aroon !

IV.

I know a valley fair,
Aileen aroon !
I knew a cottage there,
Aileen aroon !

Far in that valley's shade,
I knew a gentle maid,
Flower of the hazel glade,
Aileen aroon !

v.

Who in the song so sweet,
Aileen aroon !
Who in the dance so sweet,
Aileen aroon !
Dear were her charms to me,
Dearer her laughter free,
Dearest her constancy,
Aileen aroon.

vi.

Were she no longer true,
Aileen aroon !
What should her lover do ?
Aileen aroon !
Fly with his broken chain
Far o'er the sounding main,
Never to love again,
Aileen aroon !

vii.

Youth must with time decay,
Aileen aroon !
Beauty must fade away,
Aileen aroon !

Castles are sacked in war,
Chieftains are scattered far,
Truth is a fixed star,
Aileen aroon !

GONE ! GONE ! FOR EVER GONE !

I.

Gone, gone, for ever gone,
Are the hopes I cherished ;
Changed like the sunny dawn,
In sudden showers perished.

II.

Wither'd is the early flow'r,
Like a bright lake broken ;
Faded like a happy hour
Or Love's secret spoken.

III.

Life ! what a cheat art thou !
On youthful fancy stealing,
A prodigal in promise now !
A miser in fulfilling !

ANCIENT LULLABY.

I.

Darkness o'er the world is creeping,
Slumber while the heavens are weeping,
While the kerns their watch are keeping,
And all eyes beside are sleeping.

II.

Heaven's dark curtains now are closing,
The wild winds in peace reposing ;
Now the harper old is prosing,
While his chieftain's eyes are dosing.

III.

Heavy is the humming number,
Let the witch that scatters slumber,
In her passage halt and murmur,
Till her dews thy lids encumber.

IV

Dull and dim the moon is gleaming
Drowsy is the owlet's screaming,
Sullen sounds and gloomy seeming,
Soon shall mingle in thy dreaming.

KNOW YE NOT THAT LOVELY RIVER.*

Air—Roy's wife of Aldivalloch.

I.

Know ye not that lovely river ?
Know ye not that smiling river ?
Whose gentle flood,
By cliff and wood,
With wildering sound goes winding ever.
Oh ! often yet with feeling strong,
On that dear stream my memory ponders,
And still I prize its murmuring song,
For by my childhood's home it wanders.
Know ye not &c.

II.

There's music in each wind that flows
Within our native woodland breathing ;
There's beauty in each flower that blows
Around our native woodland wreathing.

* These verses were written at the request of his sister who wrote to him from America for new words for the old Scotch air of Roy's wife of Aldivalloch.

The memory of the brightest joys
 In childhood's happy morn that found us,
 Is dearer than the richest toys,
 The present vainly sheds around us.
 Know ye not &c.

III.

Oh, sister ! when mid doubts and fears,
 That haunt life's onward journey ever ;
 I turn to those departed years,
 And that beloved and lonely river ;
 With sinking mind and bosom riven,
 And heart with lonely anguish aching ;
 It needs my long-taught hope in Heaven,
 To keep this weary heart from breaking !
 Know ye not &c.

I LOVE MY LOVE IN THE MORNING

I.

I love my love in the morning
 For she like morn is fair,—
 Her blushing cheek, its crimson streak,
 It clouds her golden hair.

Her glance, its beam, so soft and kind ;
Her tears, its dewy showers ;
And her voice, the tender whispering wind
That stirs the early bowers.

II.

I love my love in the morning,
I love my love at noon,
For she is bright, as the lord of light,
Yet mild as autumn's moon :
Her beauty is my bosoms sun,
Her faith my fostering shade,
And I will love my darling one,
Till even the sun shall fade

III.

I love my love in the morning,
I love my love at even ;
Her smiles soft play is like the ray,
That lights the western heaven :
I loved her when the sun was high,
I loved her when he rose ;
But, best of all when evening's sigh
Was murmuring at its close.

MERRILY WHISTLES THE WIND ON THE SHORE.

I.

Merrily whistles the wind on the shore
 Through the little willow,
But wearily drops the boatman's oar
 On the calm billow :—
'Tis silent there—although it sing
 So freshly on the land ;
The feather shook from the wild duck's wing
 Scarce finds the strand !
Then do not fear—up, maiden and hear
 The gushing billow
In the deep* silent of the night
 Lie on your pillow,
But wake with the waking of the daylight—
As fresh and as fair, and as blushing and bright.

* “ Dead night—dun night—the silent of the night.”

Shakespeare.

II.

Is it not pleasanter thus to steal
O'er the water—than on a dull bed,
To toss in the wasting sun, and to feel
The heavy air over your head—
For this keen elastic wind?—look back !
Hæ ! how fleetly
St Mary's turrets fade from our track—
And how sweetly
The chime of its bells come o'er the car
With the rush of the Shannon's waters here !-

III.

Oh ! it is pleasant to mark the lark,
When the dark brow of night is clearing,
Give greeting to the dawn—and—hark !
Waked by the dashing of our bark,
Through the green waves careering,
The plover and the shrill curlew
Round us screaming—
Startle thy silent shore Tervoe !
Where the beaming
Of the unshrouded, morning sun,
Finds pleasant scenes to smile upon !—

IV.

'Tis noon ! The Race* is past !—'Tis even—
Ha ! see St. Simon's isle—
With its high round towers, and churches eleven
Bathed in the evening's smile—
And deeper—and fainter—and fainter still
That smile is growing—
And now the last flush is on the hill
Wasting and glowing—
And now in the west there's a flickering bright,
'Tis the triumph of Darkness ! the death of Light.

V.

Now steal we under the drowsy shore—
Our toil is done—our sailing o'er !—
How lovely thou lookest, young maiden, now
Thy cheek is flushed—and on thy brow,
White—soft—and sleek—
One purple vein is faintly seen,
Like a thin streak,
Of the blue sky, shown through a silver cloud,
Where the dim sun lies in his morning shroud !

* The Race—a narrow part of the lower Shannon between Tarbert and Clonderlaw where the tide runs rapidly.

WHEN FILLED WITH THOUGHTS OF LIFE'S YOUNG DAY.

I.

When filled with thoughts of life's young day,
Alone in distant climes we roam
And year on year has roll'd away,
Since last we view'd our own dear home.
Oh then at evening's silent hour,
In chamber lone or moonlight bow'r,
How sad on memory's listening ear,
Come long lost voices sounding near ;
Like the wild chime of village bells
Heard far away in mountain dells.

But oh ! for him let kind hearts grieve,
His term of youth and exile o'er,
Who sees in life's declining eve
With alter'd eyes his native shore !
With aching heart and weary brain,
Who treads those lonesome scenes again !
And backward views the sunny hours
When first he knew those ruin'd bow'rs,
And hears in every passing gale
Some best affection's dying wail.

III.

Oh, say, what spell of power serene
Can cheer that hour of sharpest pain,
And turn to peace the anguish keen,
That deeplier wounds because in vain ?
'Tis not the thought of glory won,
Of hoarded gold or pleasures gone,
But one bright course, from earliest youth,
Of changeless faith—unbroken truth.
These turn to gold, the vapours dun,
That close on life's descending sun.

HARK ERIN ! THE BLAST IS BLOWN.

Hark Erin, the blast is blown on the heath,
That summons thy sons to conquest or death ;
The lines are all set in fearful array,
And thou must be saved or ruin'd to day.
Like the flood of the winter, resistless and grand,
Forth rushed to the shock the strength of the land ;
And hearty and free was the ready halloo
That answered the call of Brian Boru.

II.

“ Oh, trust not that form so aged and dear
Amid the wild crash of target and spear,
Bright star of the field and light of the hall,
Our ruin is sure if Brian should fall.”
Like the waves of the west that burst on the rock
The hosts at the morning rushed to the shock,
But ere his last beam was quench'd in the sea,
The Raven was quell'd and Erin was free.

III.

Yet hush'd be the sound of trumpet and drum
And silent as death let victory come ;
For he, at whose call the chieftains arose,
All bleeding and cold was found at the close.
And Erin is sad though burst in her chain
And loud was the wail that rose o'er the plain
For victory cost more tears on that shore,
Than ever defeat or ruin before.

THE MERRIEST BIRD ON BUSH OR TREE.

I.

The merriest bird on bush or tree,
Was Robin of the grove
When, in the jocund spring time, he Sang to his nesting love.
Unknowing he the art to frame
Methodic numbers vain,
But as each varied feeling came
He wove it in his strain.
With freedom gay
He poured his lay,
While heaved his little breast of fire,
To rival all the woodland choir.

II.

Upon a day, a luckless day,
When drove the wintry sleet
Some urchins limed a willow spray,
To catch poor Robin's feet.
They sought by measured rule and note
To change his woodland strain,

Do, re, mi, fa, he heeded not,
He never sung again !
His joy is o'er
He sings no more,
Nor knows the genial kindling thrill,
That only freedom's children feel.

III.

You, who would dull the poets fire,
With learning of the schools,
Gay Fancy's feet with fetters tire,
And give to Genius rules.
Had bounteous Nature's counsel hung,
Upon your will severe,
Tom Moore had ne'er green Erin sung,
Nor Burns the banks of Ayr.
O'er awed I ween
Both bards had been ;
Nor dared to strike the simple lute,
In your majestic presence mute.

'TIS, IT IS THE SHANNON'S STREAM.

I.

'Tis, it is the Shannon's stream
Brightly glancing, brightly glancing,
See, oh see the ruddy beam
Upon its waters dancing !
Thus returned from travel vain,
Years of exile, years of pain,
To see old Shannon's face again,
Oh, the bliss entrancing !
Hail, our own majestic stream,
Flowing ever, flowing ever,
Silent in the morning beam,
Our own beloved river !

II.

Fling thy rocky portals wide
Western ocean, western ocean ;
Bend ye hills, on either side,
In solemn, deep devotion ;
While before the rising gales
On his heaving surface sails,

Half the wealth of Erin's vales,
With undulating motion.
Hail, our own beloved stream,
Flowing ever, flowing ever,
Silent in the morning beam,
Our own majestic river !

III.

On thy bosom deep and wide,
Noble river, lordly river,
Royal navies safe might ride,
Green Erin's lovely river !
Proud upon thy banks to dwell,
Let me ring Ambition's knell,
Lured by Hope's illusive spell
Again to wander, never.
Hail, our own romantic stream,
Flowing ever, flowing ever,
Silent in the morning beam,
Our own majestic river !

IV.

Let me, from thy placid course,
Gentle river, mighty river,
Draw such truth of silent force,
As sophist uttered never.
Thus, like thee, unchanging still,
With tranquil breast, and ordered will,

My heaven appointed course fulfil,
 Undeviating ever !
 Hail, our own majestic stream,
 Flowing ever, flowing ever,
 Silent in the morning beam,
 Our own delightful river !

I AM ALONE ! I AM ALONE !

I.

My soul is sick and lone,
 No social ties its love entwine,
 A heart upon a desert thrown
 Beats not in solitude like mine :
 For though the pleasant sunlight shine,
 It show'd no form that I may own,
 And closed to me is friendship's shrine
 I am alone !—I am alone !—

II.

It is no joy for me
 To mark the fond and eager meeting
 Of friends whom absence pined—and see
 The love-lit eyes speak out their greeting.

For then a stilly voice repeating
What oft hath woke its deepest moan,
Startles my heart, and stays its beating,
I am alone !—I am alone !—

III.

Why hath my soul been given
A zeal to soar at higher things
Than quiet rest—to seek a heaven,
And fall with scathed heart and wings ?
Have I been blest ? the sea-wave sings
’Tween me and all that was mine own ;
I’ve found the joy ambition brings
And walk alone !—and walk alone !

IV

I have a heart :—I’d live
And die for him whose worth I knew—
But could not clasp his hand and give
My full heart forth as talkers do—
And they who loved me—the kind few—
Believed me changed in heart and tone,
And left me, while it burned as true,
To live alone !—to live alone !—

V.

And such shall be my day
Of life, unfriended cold, and dead,

My hope shall slowly wear away
As all my young affections fled—
No kindred hand shall grace my head
When life's last flickering light is gone;
But I shall find a silent bed
And die alone !—and die alone !

SONNET.

ADDRESSED TO FRIENDS IN AMERICA, AND PREFIXED
TO CARD-DRAWING, ONE OF THE TALES OF THE MUNSTER FESTIVALS.

I.

Friends far away—and late in life exiled—
Whene'er these scattered pages meet your gaze,
Think of the scenes where early fortune smiled—
The land that was your home in happier days.—
The sloping lawn, to which the tired rays
Of evening, stole o'er Shannon's sheeted flood—
The hills of Clare that in its soft'ning haze
Looked vapour-like and dim—the lonely wood—
The cliff-bound Inch—the chapel in the glen,
Where oft with bare and reverent locks we stood,
To hear th' Eternal truths—the small dark maze
Of the wild stream that clipp'd the blossom'd plain
And toiling through the varied solitude,
Upraised its hundred silver tongues and babble praise.

II.

That home is desolate ! our quiet hearth,
 Is ruinous and cold—and many a sight
 And many a sound are met of vulgar mirth,
 Where once your gentle laughter cheered the night.

It is as with your country. The calm light
 Of social peace, for her is quenched too—
 Rude Discord blots her scenes of old delight,
 Her gentle virtues scared away—like you.
 Remember her when in this tale you meet
 The story of a struggling right—of ties
 Fast bound and swiftly rent—of joy—of pain—
 Legends which by the cottage-fire sound sweet,
 Nor let the hand that wakes those memories
 (In faint but fond essay) be unremembered then.

ADDRESSED TO HIS NATIVE GLENS AND PREFIXED
 TO THE HALF SIR.

Gleens of the West ! the days are past and gone, Since while the north wind howled amidst your
 bowers,
 And hurrying through its course of frequent showers,
 Sped, pale, mid winter showers, the southern sun ;
 When the vext Shannon, rid by ruffian gales—

That whipped his foaming sides with tireless hand,
Shook his white mane along the darkening strand,
And bounded fiercely by the leafless vales ;
Since, when our turfen fire made glad the hearth,
And shone on merry faces, gathered near,
With untaught song—light jest—and drowsy story,
We blessed the winter eve, with gentle mirth—
Or in soft sorrow lent a pensive ear,
To tales of Erin's elder strength and faded glory.

II.

Ambition, absence, death have thinned the number,
Of those who met beside your evening fires
Some, gathered to the ashes of our sires,
On yonder sacred mount in silence slumber:
Some, scattered far extend their longing hands
Towards those loved shades, and lonely walks in vain,
For never shall your sun behold again
Their early foot-prints on your dewy lands—
And never more within that ruined gate,
Shall their blithe voices cheer the hush'd domain,
Yet some are left to pace your dreary ways,
Some cherished friends in whose sweet circle late,
Old joys came hovering round my heart again—
Faint echoes of the bliss, we knew in early days.

ADDRESSED TO A FRIEND AND PREFIXED TO SUIL DHUV.

I.

I hold not out my hand in grateful love
Because ye were my friend, where friends were few;
Nor in the pride of conscious truth, to prove
The heart ye wronged and doubted, yet was true—
It is that while the close and blinding veil
That youth and blissful ignorance had cast
Around mine inward sight, is clearing fast
Before its strengthening vision—while the scale
Falls from mine eyeballs—and the gloomy stream
Of human motive, whitening in my view,
Shews clear as dew showers in the grey morn beam—
While hearts and acts, whose impulse seemed divine,
Put on the grossness of an earthlier hue—
I still can gaze, and deeply still can honour thine.

II.

Judge not your friend by what he seemed, when Fate
Had crossed him in his chosen—cherished aim—
When spirit-broken—baffled—moved to hate
The very kindness that but made his shame
More self-induced—he rudely turned aside
In bitter—hopeless agony from all

Alike—of those who mocked or mourned his fall,
And fence his injured heart in lonely pride,
Wayward and sullen as Suspicion's soul ;
To his own mind he lived a mystery—
But now the heavens have changed—the vapours roll
Far from his heart, and in his solitude,
While the fell night-mares of his spirit flee,
He wakes to weave for thee a Tale of joy renewed.

THE FUTURE.

Here by the shores of mine own sunny bay
Here in the shadow of my native bowers,
Let me wear out in sweet content those hours,
That bear me gently toward my dying day,
Warring with earth's affections, till the grey
Of age hath touched my hair, and passion fled
Leaves Hope and stingless memory by my bed.
And thoughts of danger quelled, and passed away,
But there's a whispering fear within my breast
That fills my mind with many a sad presage ;
That breaks hope's morning dream of peace and rest,
That tells me I must never reach that time,
Of reverend virtue, of victorious age,
But early die in youth, and stained by sudden crime.

A FRAGMENT.

A lonely wanderer in the haunts of song
Unloved, unknown, I held my course forlorn,
While sighing Echo on the soft wings borne,
With shivering pinions bore my strains along.
And, distant as they heard, the listening throng,
Cheered on the unseen bard, but sad was I ; -
For none there was to hear my pensive sigh,
And passion in my heart was deep and strong. '
I did not sigh for Love—for I had given
For some brief date, my tender vows to fame,
But yet I sighed for something like to Love,
For I was young, and Summer lit the heaven,
And gentle longings filled my anxious frame,
As I sate all alone within that tuneful grove.

Even in that time of song-born loneliness.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF HIS SISTER.

I.

Oh, not for ever lost !—though in our ear
Those uncomplaining accents fall no more,
And Earth has won and never will restore
That form, that well-worn grief made doubly dear—
Oh, not for ever lost !—though Hope may rear
No more sweet visions in the future now,
And even the memory of thy pallid brow
Grows unfamiliar with each passing year.
Though lonely be thy place on earth, and few
The tongues that name thee on thy native plains
Where sorrow first thy gentle presence crossed,
And dreary tints o'er all the future threw ;
While life's young zeal yet triumph'd in thy veins,
Oh, early fall'n thou art !—but not for ever lost.

II.

If in that land where hope can cheat no more,
Lavish in promise—laggard in fulfilling,
Where fearless love on every bosom stealing,
And boundless knowledge brighten all the shore—
If in that land,—when life's cold toils are done
And my heart lies as motionless as thine,
I still might hope to press that hand in mine
My unoffending—my offended one !

I would not mourn the health that flies my cheek,
I would not mourn my disappointed years—
My vain heart mock'd and worldly hopes o'erthrown,
But long to meet thee in that land of rest,
Nor deem it joy to breathe in careless ears
A Tale of blighted hopes, as mournful as thine OWN.

BENEVOLENCE.

A youthful pair by virtuous love made one,
Two fond hearts yoked by that sweet unseen chain
That doubles every joy—divides each pain,
Doth the sun look a lovelier sight upon?
Aye, let them laud love's holiness as they will,
Its infelt thrill to heavenly bliss allied
In the wrapt visions of poetry purified:
It is earth-born, cold, selfish, sensual still,
Oh, it is in the wide benevolent feel,
The limitless expanse of heart, embracing
Within its undistinguishing circle, all,
From the insect to the fellow pilgrim chasing
Each lonely affection from the heart, we steal
Of heavenly love some faint memorial.

FRIENDSHIP.

A weary time hath pass'd since last we parted,
Thy gentle eye was filled with sorrow, and
I did not speak but pressed thy trembling hand,
Even in that hour of rapture, broken hearted.
I have not seen thee since—for thou art changed,
There sits a coldness on thy lip and brow,
The look, the tone, the smile are altered now—
And all about, within thee, quite estranged.
I have not seen thee since—although perchance
Among the heartless and the vain, on me
All coldly courteous lights thy lovely glance.
Yet art thou happier? Oh, if such may be
The love that Friendship vows,—give me again
My heart, my days of peace, my lute, and listening plain.

FAME.

Why hast thou lured me on fond muse to quit
The path of plain dull worldly sense, and be
A wanderer through the realms of thought with thee ;
While hearts that never knew thy visitings sweet,

Cold souls that mock thy quiet melancholy,
Win their bright way up Fortune's glittering wheel ;
And we sit lingering here in darknes still,

Scorned by the bustling sons of wealth and folly.
Yet still thou whisperest in mine ear, " the day,

The day may be at hand when thou and I,

(The season of expectant pain gone by,)

Shall tread to Joy's bright porch a smiling way,
And rising, not as once, with hurried wing,
To purer skies aspire, and hail a lovelier spring."

MITCHELSTOWN CAVERNS.

Grimly it frown'd when first with shuddering mind

We saw the far-famed Cavern's darkling womb,

And for that vault of silence and of gloom

Left the fair day and smiling world behind.

But what bright wonder hail'd our eyes ere long !

The chrystal well—the sparry curtained dome,

The sparkling shafts that propp'd that cavern'd home,
And vaults that turn'd the homeliest sounds to song.

Oh, this, I thought is sure a symbol plain
Of that undreaded death the holy die,

Stern at the first and withering to the view ;
But past that gate of darkness and of pain,
What scenes of unimagined rapture lie
Rich with elysian wealth and splendour ever new.

WRITTEN IN ADARE IN 1820.

I looked upon a dark and sullen sea
Over whose slumbering wave the night's mists hung,
Till from the morn's grey breast a fresh wind sprung
And sought its brightening bosom joyously ;
Then fled the mists its quickening breath before,
The glad sea rose to meet it—and each wave
Retiring from the sweet caress it gave,
Made summer music to the listening shore.
So slept my soul, unmindful of thy reign,
But the sweet breath of thy celestial grace
Hath risen—oh, let its quickening spirit chase
From that dark seat, each mist and secret stain,
Till as in yon clear water, mirror'd fair,
Heaven sees its own calm hues reflected there.

ON REMEMBERING AN INADVETRENT
JEST ON LORD BYRON'S POETRY.

I.

Forgive me, Thou who formed that wondrous mind,
Where shone thy works with fairly mirrored gleam,
If thoughtlessly my lips with jest unkind,
Have dared to slight thy handy-work in him—
For what of pure delight the quickening beam
Of genius from his potent numbers cast,
Our grateful praise we owe—and if its dim
And wavering flame not heavenward burned at last,
In truth, we should not judge, but wait in silence fast.

II.

Oh, blessed Charity ! Religion mild !
Thy gentle smiles are never meant to wound—
No jest hast thou for Error's helpless child
But holy tears and love without a bound—
Thy constant votaries !—they are seldom found
With barbed censure on their lips, but those
Who newly enter on thy sacred ground,
With little heed the thoughts of blame uncloze
And deem they love thee, when they only wound thy foes.

LINES TO A DEPARTED FRIEND.

When May with all her blooming train
Came o'er the woodland and the plain—
When mingling winds and waters made
A murmuring music in the shade—
I loved to hear that artless song,
I loved to stray those groves among :
And every sound of rustic pleasure,
Waked in my heart an answering measure.

But now no more that gentle scene
Of mellow light and freshening green,
Seems lovely to my altered eye ;
And that soft west wind, hastening by,
Seems breathing near me faint and low,
Some warning dirge, some song of woe.

How have I loved at early morn
When the dew topp'd the glistening thorn ;
When o'er the hill the day-beam broke,
And nature's plumed minstrels woke ;
To praise with them the will divine
That bade that glorious sun to shine !

That day-beam burns as brightly still,
The wild birds charm the echoing hill;

But light and song alike are vain
To soothe a heart that throbs in pain
And pale disease that scene surveys
Without one languid smile of praise.

Thine was the gift, Almighty power !
That brighten'd many a youthful hour ;
Found joys in Winter's havoc drear,
When heaven was dark and earth was bare,
And raised the heart on secret wing
To rapture in the bloom of spring.
That blessing thou hast claimed again,
And left me wrapt in lingering pain ;
Almighty power ! the will was thine,
And this weak heart shall ne'er repine.
In joy or grief, in good or ill,
This tongue shall praise thy mercies still !
But may that feeble praise be blest,
And deeply felt though ill confessed—
Blest, in my own awakened heed,
Felt, in the hearts of those who read.

Lost days of youth ! Oh, holy days,
When joy was blent with prayer and praise !
When this sad heart, now deeply dyed
With many a thought unsanctified,
Trembled at every venial stain,
And shrank from sin, as now from pain !

Oh ! not that even in that hour
Of early reasons dawning power,
My soul was pure from thoughts of sin,
But now so dark the past has been,
That those first stains of young offence.
Wear the light hue of innocence !

Departed spirit ! often then,
By peaceful fire in lonely glen,
Did thy maturer reason shine,
A guidance and a light to mine ;
Did thy maturer piety,
Awake some holy thoughts in me.
Late, wandering in those silent ways
I thought upon our early days ;
Ah ! may I never feel again,
The pain that touched my spirit then !
For every shrub and every tree,
Spoke with a still reproach to me ;
And even the scene of boyish crime,
Seem'd hallow'd by the flight of time !

What could my heart, in passion tried,
If it could err, when by thy side ?
Ambitious, there it would not dwell,
We parted—and the faithless fell ;
We parted—and the world since then
Has learn'd the lesson o'er again,

That Virtue, humble, simple, fair,
Is all the knowledge worth our care ;
That heavenly wisdom is a thing,
Above the flight of reasons wing ;
That human genius cannot sound,
The depths in which her truth is found ;
While a poor peasants simple prayer,
Will find her always watching there ;
That hearts untaught can learn her rules,
While far she flies from human schools ;
That learning oft is but a rod—
That he knows all who loves his God.
And every other eye is dim,
Save theirs who hope and trust in Him.
Willing to serve is truly free ;
Obedience is best liberty ;
And man's first power—a bended knee.

'Twere vain to hope, if I could part
Upon this page my bleeding heart,
And to the young enquirer show
How often knowledge ends in woe.
Hearts would no more by earth be riven,
And souls no longer lost to heaven.
No ! human pride and passion still,
Will hold the reins of human will ;
And even in passions fierce excess,
Find argument of haughtiness !

Youth's budding virtues will be blighted,
The law of heaven forgot and slighted,
Age follow age, yet, hurrying on,
Trust no experience but its own.
Yet it is something if we steal
One spirit from the dizzy reel,
A few may wake, when thousands sleep,
Millions may scoff, but one may weep !

'Tis something too, to think that, now,
While I renew my infant vow,
Thy gentle shade may wander near,
And smile on each repentant tear ;
To find, as thus, I glance mine eye
Over those pages mournfully,
Something that might in former days,
Have won that blameless spirit's praise.
Ah, it were all, if now at last
This offering for evil past,
Might pierce the ear of heaven and win
Oblivion for that faithless sin ;
If thy pure, saintly, fervent prayer,
Might find a sweet acceptance there ;
And from that sacred home, on me
Draw down the fire of Charity !
That I might scatter, wide and far
My Maker's praise, from star to star ;
And joyous sing how he had smiled,
Forgiveness on his erring child !

That all who heard that grateful song
Might learn to grieve for secret wrong ;
And turn their hearts from joys of sense,
To holy praise and penitence !
Ah, sauguine hope ! not in an hour,
Can zeal, from passion wrest his power !
Nor former scandals be removed,
Though those we teach be dearly loved.
All the repentant soul can do,
Is still to toil and labour through,
The remnant of life's shortening day,
And for the rest to hope and pray.

SWEET TAUNTON DENE.

I

Sweet Taunton Dene ! thy smiling fields
Once more with merry accents ring ;
Once more reviving Nature yields
Her tribute to the smiling Spring.
The small birds in the woodland sing,
The ploughman turns the kindly green,
And Pleasure waves her restless wing
Among thy groves sweet Taunton Dene.

II.

But peace abides with Him alone
Who rules with calm, resistless pow'r ;
Through all creation's boundless zone,
From rolling sphere to garden flow'r.
Nor falls in Spring the welcome show'r
Unwill'd of Him, nor tempest blows,
Nor wind within the fragrant bow'r
Can rend a leaf from summer rose.

III.

Sweet Taunton Dene ! oh, long abide
In thy fair vale delights like these !
And long may Tone's smooth waters glide,
By smiling cots and hearts at ease !
Be thine the joy of rustic peace,
Each sound that haunts the woodland scene ;
And blithe beneath thy bowering trees
The dance at eve, Sweet Taunton Dene !

ADIEU TO LONDON,

COMPOSED ON THE COACH, ON HIS WAY FROM LONDON.

I.

Adieu ! thou pestilential air,
Where death and pain reside !—
Where every brow is dark with care,
And every eye with pride—
Where vapours change the maiden hue
Of winter's cloudless moon,
And man's unwinking eye may view
The burning sun at noon.

II.

And welcome ! welcome, O ye hills !
Bright skies and varied plain !
A rushing joy my bosom fills
To see your tints again—
Here no deceitful ruin lurks
Beneath the splendid show,
But God unrols his glorious works
Around me as I go.

III.

Health breathes in every passing gale
That shades my parted hair,
I bid the western breezes hail
With laughing forehead bare.
They tell me of my native plains,
They whisper of my home,
And the freshening blood within my veins
Runs gaily while I roam.

IV.

Away, away, fair Taunton Dene
Lies nearer to the West—
Now fast o'er Hounslow's fading scene
Night draws his gloomy vest.—
Now, while I watch the tiny beam
Shot from each beauteous star,
I think of Ireland and of him
Who reads their lore afar.

V.

'Tis morn and I am far away
From London's smoky den—
And mark the light of breaking day
'Mid Nature's haunts again—
I hear her hedge-notes sweetly trilled
Still hurrying swift along,
And like an organ newly filled
My bosom swells with song.

VI.

For who can see the morning shine
And view these blushing skies,
Nor think of him whose love divine
Still bids that sun arise ?
'Tis eve—and for the noisy town
'Mid walks of silent green,
I turn to see that sun go down
On lovely Taunton Dene.

VII.

There gazing on the smiling West
I stay my wandering feet,
And gentlest feelings fill my breast
And sweetest pulses beat.
For far beyond that woodland scene
Beyond that grassy lea—
I think of all that lies between
That setting star and me.

VIII.

Oh absence ! that like death doth make
The friends you take more dear,
How sad were life for their sweet sake
But Hope stays whispering near.
Still pointing to the exiled heart
That heavenly-promised shore,
Where friends shall meet “no more to part,
To mingle tears no more.”—

MY SPIRIT IS OF PENSIVE MOULD.

I

My spirit is of pensive mould
I cannot laugh as once of old,
When sporting o'er some woodland scene,
A child I trod the dewy green.

II.

I cannot sing my merry lay
As in that past unconscious day,
For time has laid existence bare
And shown me sorrow lurking there.

III.

I would I were the lonely breeze
That mourns among the leafless trees,
That I might sigh from morn till night
O'er vanish'd peace and lost delight,

IV.

I would I were the heavy show'r
That falls in spring on leaf and bow'r,
That I might weep the live-long day
For erring man and hope's decay.

V.

For all the woe beneath the sun,
For all the wrong to virtue done,
For every soul to falsehood gain'd,
For every heart by evil stain'd.

VI.

For man by man in durance held,
For early dreams of joy dispell'd,
For all the hope the world awakes
In youthful hearts and after breaks.

VII.

But still though hate and fraud and strife,
Have stain'd the shining web of life,
Sweet Hope the glowing woof renews,
In all its old enchanting hues.

VIII.

Flow on, flow on, thou shining stream !
Beyond life's dark and changeful dream,
There is a hope, there is a joy,
This faithless world can ne'er destroy.

IX.

Sigh on, sigh on, ye gentle winds !
For stainless hearts and faithful minds,
There is a bliss abiding true,
That shall not pass and die like you.

X.

Shine on, shine on, thou glorious sun !
When Day his latest course has run,
On sinless hearts shall rise a light
That ne'er shall set in gloomy night.

LINES ON A LADY'S SEAL BOX.

I.

Read ye the casket's history,
Lay not the simple trinket by,
But see those various signets met,
O'er the enamelled surface set ;
 For hearts that feel
 In every seal
Can find a theme of grief or glee
That careless eyes may never see.

II.

Read ye the casket's history,
Let Fancy turn the leaf for thee—
Here is a seal that brought afar
Tidings of joy from scenes of war ;
 A mother sighed
 For her perished pride,
A maiden mourned her idle troth
And this brought sudden bliss to both.

III.

This tells a tale of drearier mood—
A bride beside the altar stood ;
What force compell'd his cold delay
The bridegroom never came to say.

 This signet came
 To clear his fame,
Its hue was blasting to her sight
For it was black as death and night !

IV.

Here is a crest and here a shield
With honours throng'd upon its field,
Both in heraldic lustre bright,
Both boasting high of princely right,
 Their owner's claim
 A bloody fame ;
One fell in fight on Cressy's plain,
And one—cut steaks in Warwick lane.

V.

How many hearts these toys have chill'd—
Or with a sudden rapture fill'd—
What tales of joy or sorrow spoken—
What misery healed or bright hopes broken
 My song should dwell
 O'er long to tell,
Though many a passion deep might be,
Awakened in their history !

VI.

I know a casket, (guess you where ?)
Filled with sweet thoughts and feelings rare,
A richer and a simpler one
For poet's thoughts to dwell upon.
 A meeter theme
 For minstrel dream,
Upon whose glowing surface yet
(Or do I err ?) no seal is set.

VII.

Oh, bid me name a hand to place
On that soft heart the first deep trace,
And his it shall be in whose eye
A soft and gentle dignity ;
 A healthful cheek,
 And smiles that speak ;
A voice whose memory haunts the ear,
And full deep flashing eyes are dear.

VIII.

Let joys that Time may never dim
Share like thine own kind looks for him
Who first the dear impression makes,
And withered be the hand that breaks ;
 Let life glide by
 All peacefully,
'Till on that sinless brow of thine
The signet of the Blest shall shine.

A PORTRAIT,

I.

Merry hours will fleet,
Friends that love must sever,
Oft in joy we meet,
To part in tears for ever.
Many a word is said,
And changed as soon as spoken ;
Many a vow is made
Only to be broken.

II.

Life is like a glass
O'er whose surface gleaming,
Brilliant shadows pass,
But vain as childhood's dreaming.
Could we find the art
To fix the flying splendour,
One I know my heart
Never would surrender.

III.

'Tis a lovely shade !
Paint it while it lingers,
Ere it fail and fade,
Ere the wasting fingers

Of the haggard Time,
The blasting and consuming
Touch its tender prime,
And wither all its blooming.

IV.

Paint a fitting form
In royal halls to wander,
With woman's softness warm,
With dignity beyond her ;
Think a youthful Queen,
Tarries while you trace it,
Tis a shape and men,
To fill a throne and grace it.

V.

Paint a blushing cheek
Filled with healthful beauty,
Ready smiles that speak
Of peace and cherished duty.
Eyes that shift and shine
With a full deep meaning,
Clouded curls that twine
A sunny forehead screening

VI.

Paint a blooming lip
With blushing softness swelling,
Where mirth and kindness keep
An undivided dwelling.

The charm is wanting still
That on that soft lip lingers,
And the ready skill
That haunts those taper fingers.

VII.

Merry hours will fleet,
Friends that love must sever,
Oft in joy we meet
To part in tears for ever.
But in absence, warm,
Upon this heart reclining ;
I will keep that form
Of memory's fond designing.

VIII.

Oft in lonesome eves
When the light is dying,
And the shivering leaves
In all the woods are sighing ;
Fancy will restore,
Those well remembered hours,
That romantic shore,
And those forsaken bowers.

IX.

Fate may frown her worst,
I no more will fear it,
Let her thunder burst,
I will smile to hear it ;

If when life shall fleet,
A sinless death be given,
And a hope to meet
Hearts like thine in heaven.

LINES ADDRESSED TO A YOUNG LADY ON READING
A POEM OF HERS ADDRESSED TO DEATH.

Oh, may the burthen of thy song
Forbear the gentle minstrel long,
But when all joys for which we live,
Save those alone which guilt can give,
When all thine early hopes are won,
And Love and Friendship long thine own ;
Then with those love-knots softly riven,
With all thy virtues ripe for Heaven ;
Then looking calm to joys above,
And leaving peace with all you love,
Pass gently like an evening wind,
And leave no broken hearts behind.

INSCRIPTION FOR A CUP FORMED OF A COCOA-NUT.

It was not dug from charnel deep,
It was not hewn from quarried steep,
But sweetly fill'd its covering dun
Beneath warm India's burning sun ;
That Lydia might the shell receive,
In memory of that parted eve.

Ah, still when each returning May,
Restores sweet friendship's opening day,
Remember those descending showers,
And lovely Richmond's drooping bowers ;
And welcome then to thee and thine
The May-day guest of twenty-nine.

By lonely Dunlo's echoing lakes,
By wild Glengariff's rocky brakes
By old Askeyton's cloister still,
By sweet Ringmoylan's leafy hill,
And by that wild and clifted shore,
That hears the roused Atlantic roar,
Remember him who gives the shell,
And keep it long and guard it well,
Devote—in Friendships name to thee,
And thine—oh, fair Fidelity.

IMPROMPTU.

ON SEEING AN IRIS FORMED BY THE SPRAY OF
THE OCEAN AT MILLTOWN MALBAY.

Oh sun coloured breaker ! when gazing on thee
I think of the Eastern story,
How beauty arose from the foam of the sea ;
A creature of light and of glory.
But hark ! a hoarse answer is sent from the wave,
“ No—Venus was never my daughter—
“ To golden-haired Iris her being I gave, “ Behold where she shines o’er the water.

WHEN FILLED WITH THOUGHTS OF LIFE’S YOUNG DAY.

When filled with thoughts of life’s young day,
Alone in distant climes we roam,
And year on year has rolled away,
Since last we viewed our own dear home.
Oh, then at evening’s silent hour,
In chamber lone or moonlit bower ;

How sad on memory's listening ear,
Come long lost voices sounding near,
Like the wild chime of village bells
Heard far away in mountain dells.

II.

But, ah ! for him let kind hearts grieve,
His time of youth and exile o'er,
Who treads on life's declining eve,
With altered eyes his native shore,
With sinking heart and weary brain,
Who treads those lonesome scenes again
And backward views those sunny hours
When first he knew those ruined bowers,
And hears in every passing gale,
Some lost affections dying wail.

III.

Oh say what spell of power serene,
Can cheer that hour of sharpest pain.
And turn to gold the anguish keen,
That deeper wounds because in vain.
'Tis not the thought of glory won,
Of hoarded gold or pleasures gone,
But one bright course from earliest youth,
Of changeless faith, unbroken truth—
This turns to gold the vapours dun,
That close on life's descending sun.

THE WAKE WITHOUT A CORPSE.

I.

The dismal yew and cypress tall,
Wave o'er the church-yard lone,
Where rest our friends and fathers all,
Beneath the funeral stone.
Unvexed in holy ground they sleep,
Oh early lost ! o'er thee,
No sorrowing friend shall ever weep,
Nor stranger bend the knee.
Mo chuma ! lorn am I !
Hoarse dashing rolls the salt sea wave,
Over our perished darling's grave.

II.

The winds the sullen deep that tore
His death song chaunted loud,
The weeds that line the clifted shore
Were all his burial shroud,

* It is a custom among the peasantry in some parts of Ireland when any member of a family has been lost at sea (or in any other way which renders the performance of the customary funeral rite impossible,) to celebrate the "wake," exactly in the same way, as if the corpse were actually present.

For friendly wail and holy dirge
And long lament of love,
Around him roared the angry surge,
The curlew screamed above.

Mo chuma ! iorn am I,
My grief would turn to rapture now,
Might I but touch that pallid brow.

III.

The stream-born bubbles soonest burst,
That earliest left the source
Buds earliest blown are faded first,
In Nature's wonted course ;
With guarded pace her seasons creep,
By slow decay expire,
The young above the aged weep,
The son above the sire ;
Mo chuma ! iorn am I,
That death a backward course should hold,
To smite the young and spare the old !

TO A YOUNG FRIEND ON HIS BIRTH-DAY.

I.

The world has run one chequered round
Within its airy ring,
Since thou unfolding flower ! hast found ;
The light of life's soft spring.

II.

Thy parents were my friends in joy,
My friends in sadness long,
And now to greet their rosy boy ;
I bring my birth day song.

III.

By many a shore and mountain wild,
Lone lake and cheerful bower,
We wove a tie beloved child,
To bless a distant hour.

IV.

We staid not on the threshold cold,
Of strange and lingering form,
But pressed to Friendships inmost hold ;
With trusting hearts and warm.

V.

Perhaps—because I wrote of truth,
They deem'd I loved her too,
And painting forms of generous youth,
I was the thing I drew.

VI.

For soon their hearts were bound to me,
In feeling deep and sure,
Like old friends lost in infancy ;
And found in life mature.

VII.

The light of earth's uncertain skies,
Not yet its quickening flood,
Had sent into those gentle eyes;
Dark unexpanded bud !

VIII.

When in an hour of joy serene,
A kindly promise came ;
That now my young and loved Eugene,
Is broken in thy name.

IX.

Yet ne'er for that unheeding turn,
Of friendship's first excess ;
More faintly mine to them shall burn,
Nor thou be loved the less.

X.

Whene'er thine altered name I hear,
My heart may mourn 'tis true ;
A keen reproach must grieve mine ear,
And wholesome warning too.

XI.

For oft I think 'mid lonesome hours,
By night and silence stirred—
Whene'er I think on those lost hours,
And that forgotten word.

XII.

That had they found this heart when tried,
The heart their fancy dreamed,
And had long knowledge justified,
What trusting friendship deemed.

XIII.

That pledge might be remembered now,
That confidence the same,
And, sign of altered feeling thou,
Had'st borne another name.

XIV.

But far let waking reason keep,
Each indolent regret ;
And while she hoards the lesson deep
The useless grief forget.

XV.

Now many a month has rolled away,
Dear boy, for us and you,
And closed are all those scenes so gay,
And changed their actors too !

XVI.

But let me turn from thoughts like these,
And change my song to joy.
And rhyme for thee a prayer of peace,
Oh, sinless, angel boy !

XVII.

Fair Virtue guide my young Eugene
With footing firm and true,
And keep his breast from sorrow keen ;
His feet from wandering too !

XVIII.

Mercy Divine !—if changing fate,
Rave in his pathway wild ;
Make strong thine arm to shield his state !
Oh save this infant child !

ADDRESSED TO A FRIEND.

I.

What ! passed away ! those happy hours
When sunny friendship yet was new,
When Love's own music filled those bowers
And joys bright sun broke dazzling through.

II.

Ah, no ! the spirit is not fled
That woke that brief, admiring rhyme,
Nor feeling cold—nor memory dead—
Though changed, alas ! are place and time.

III.

Ah, no ! if vivid dreams at night,
If keen remembrances by day,
Can fetter Time's untiring flight,
Those moments are not passed away.

IV.

Dear scenes ! where oft my spirit quaffed
Life's social joy from genial springs;
Sweet time ! when Pleasure round us laughed,
And freely waved his golden wings.

V.

Ah does this worthless heart forget—
Those moments now so sadly sweet,
Nor musing on their memory yet,
With lonesome feelings wildly beat.

VI.

I know the thoughts that die unsung
To many speak a heart untrue,
They think when silence chains the tongue
The soul must be forgetful too.

VII.

Yet trust me Memory's warmest sighs
Are often breathed in moments lorn—
And many a feeling thought will rise
And in the bosom die unborn.

VIII.

No—Friendship does not always sleep,
Though sometimes she may mourn alone,
Nor sympathy less kindly weep,
Though oft her tears have fallen unknown.

ON PULLING SOME CAMPANULAS IN A LADY'S GARDEN.

I.

Oh, weeds will haunt the loveliest scene
The summer sun can see,
And clouds will sometimes come between
The truest friends that be.
And thoughts unkind will come perchance,
And haply words of blame,
For pride is Man's inheritance,
And frailty is his name.

II.

Yet while I pace this leafy vale,
That nursed thine infancy—
And hear in every passing gale
A whispered sound of thee.
My 'nighted bosom wakes anew,
To Feeling's genial ray,
And each dark mist on Memory's view
Melts into light away.

III.

The flowers that grace this shaded spot,
Low, lovely and obscure,
Are like the joys thy Friendship brought,
Unboasted, sweet and pure.
Now withered is their autumn blow,
And changed their simple hue,
Ah!—must it e'er be mine to know
—Their type is faded too.

IV.

Yet should those well remembered hours
Return to me no more,
And—like those culled and faded flowers,
Their day of life be o'er—
In Memory's fragrant shrine concealed,
A sweeter joy they give,
Than ought the world again can yeild
Or I again receive.

THEY SPEAK OF SCOTLAND'S HEROES OLD.

I.

They speak of Scotland's heroes old,
Struggling to make their country free,
And in that hour my heart grows cold,
For Erin! then I think of thee!

II.

They boast their Bruce of Bannockburn,
Their noble Knight of Ellerslie;
To Erin's sons I proudly turn,
My country then I smile for thee.

III.

They boast tho' joined to England's power,
Scotland ne'er bowed to slavery;
An equal league in danger's hour,
My country then I weep for thee.

IV.

And when they point to our fair Isle,
And say no patriot hearts have we:
That party stains the work deile,
My country—then I blush for thee.

V.

But Hope says, "blush or tear shall never,
Sully approving Fame's decree."
When Freedom's word her bonds shall sever,
My country then I'll joy in thee.

VI.

But oh ! be Scotland honoured long,
Be envy ever far from me,
My simple lay meant her no wrong,
My Country—it was but for thee !

O'BRAZIL, THE ISLE OF THE BLEST.

A spectre island, said to be sometimes visible, on the verge of the western horizon in the Atlantic, from the isles of Arran.

I.

On the ocean that hollows the rocks where ye dwell,
A shadowy land has appeared as they tell ;
Men thought it a region of sunshine and rest,
And they called it O'Brazil—the isle of the blest.
From year unto year, on the ocean's blue rim,
The beautiful spectre showed lovely and dim ;
The golden clouds curtained the deep where it lay,
And it looked like an Eden, away, far away !

II.

A peasant who heard of the wonderful tale,
In the breeze of the Orient, loosened his sail ;
From Ara, the holy, he turned to the west,
For though Ara was holy, O'Brazil was blest.
He heard not the voices that called from the shore
He heard not the rising winds menacing roar ;
Home, kindred and safety, he left on that day,
And he sped to O'Brazil, away, far away !

III.

Morn rose on the deep, and that shadowy Isle,
O'er the faint rim of distance reflected its smile ;
Noon burned on the wave, and that shadowy shore,
Seemed lovelily distant, and faint as before :
Lone evening came down, on the wanderer's track,
And to Ara again he looked timidly back ;
Oh ! far on the verge of the ocean it lay,
Yet the Isle of the blest was away, far away !

IV.

Rash dreamer return ! O ye winds of the main,
Bear him back to his own peaceful Ara again ;
Rash fool ! for a vision of fanciful bliss,
To barter thy calm life of labour and peace.
The warning of Reason was spoken in vain,
He never re-visited Ara again ;
Night fell on the deep, amidst tempest and spray,
And he died on the waters, away, far away !

V.

To you gentle friends, need I pause to reveal,
The lessons of prudence, my verses conceal ;
How the phantom of pleasure seen distant in youth,
Oft lures a weak heart from the circle of truth,
All lovely it seems like that shadowy Isle,
And the eye of the wisest is caught by its smile ;
But ah ! for the heart, it has tempted to stray,
From the sweet home of duty, away, far away !

VI.

Poor friendless adventurer ! vainly might he,
Look back to green Ara, along the wild sea ;
But the wandering heart has a guardian above,
Who, though erring, remembers the child of his love.
Oh, who at the proffer of safety would spurn
When all that he asks, is the will to return ;
To follow a phantom, from day unto day,
And die in the tempest, away, far away !

LINES ADDRESSED TO A SEAGULL, SEEN OFF THE CLIFFS OF MOHER, IN THE COUNTY OF CLARE.

White bird of the tempest ! oh beautiful thing,
With the bosom of snow, and the motionless wing,
Now sweeping the billow, now floating on high,
Now bathing thy plumes in the light of the sky ;
Now poising o'er ocean thy delicate form,
Now breasting the surge with thy bosom so warm ;

Now darting aloft, with a heavenly scorn,
Now shooting along, like a ray of the morn,
Now lost in the folds of the cloud-curtained dome,
Now floating abroad like a flake of the foam,
Now silently poised o'er the war of the main,
Like the spirit of Charity, brooding o'er pain.
Now gliding with pinion, all silently furled,
Like an Angel descending to comfort the world !
Thou seem'st to my spirit, as upward I gaze,
And see thee, now clothed in mellowest rays ;
Now lost in the storm driven vapours that fly,
Like hosts that are routed across the broad sky !
Like a pure spirit true, to its virtue and faith,
Mid the tempests of nature, of passion, and death !

Rise ! beautiful emblem of purity rise !
On the sweet winds of Heaven. to thine own brilliant skies ;

Still higher ! still higher ! till lost to our sight.
Thou hidest thy wings in a mantle of light ;
And I think how a pure spirit gazing on thee,
Must long for the moment—the joyous and free,
When the soul disembodied, from nature shall spring,
Unfettered at once to her maker and king ;
When the bright day of service and suffering past,
Shapes, fairer than thine, shall shine round her at last,

While, the standard of battle triumphantly furled,
She smiles like a victor, serene on the world !

PAST TIMES.

I.

Yes, there is the dwelling, the warmth of the year
Still lives in each blossom that flourishes here ;
Yes, there is the dwelling, but lonely it seems,
As a land in which Fancy stalks silent in dreams,
The door-way that welcomed the guest to the hall,
The creepers that whispered along the white wall ;
Each sweet of the summer smiles tenderly there,
But where are the fingers that dress'd them ? oh where ?

II.

Ah, true to remembrance ! Ah, true to the thought,
Deep hid in my heart, of that love-lighted spot,
Aye, there are the flower bordered paths where we walked,
And there are the groves where we listened and talked ;
All lonesomely blooming ! I look, but in vain
For a symbol of light in the quiet domain,
The lawn, where the children have gamboll'd is there,
But where are the innocent faces ? oh where ?

III.

Yes there is the window that looked to the flood,
But where are the friends by the casement that stood?
And told me how sweet as he sunk to his rest,
Was the smile of the sun from the clouds of the west,
How bright on the river his blushing lights falls,
How spectral in distance those time-shattered walls,
And the hearts that to mine turned fervently there,
And the minds that to mine were an echo—oh where?

IV.

True !—Life is but short and possession unsure,
Religion may teach us that we should endure,
But oh ! there are moments when feeling will speak,
When nature is mighty and reason is weak ;
When selfishly sinking our bosoms will mourn
O'er joys that are gone and can never return :
And whisper in ignorance fearful and drear
Where now are the days that have left us?—oh where ?

V.

May he in whose keeping are sorrow and joy,
The kindly to save, and the just to destroy,
Give light to our spirits in moments so dim,
For those are the trials that turn us to Him.
There may be a time, when the bosoms that here,
Yet sigh o'er the wrecks of the vanishing year,
May whisper in joy round the foot of his throne,
'Twas well that our dwelling, looked dreary and lone!

THE WRECK OF THE COMET.

I.

Darkness is on the wave—
The sea heaves sluggishly,
The winds are in their cave,
Slumbering silently.
Dun is the seaman's track,
Uncheered by starry glow,
And all above is black—
And lightless all below.

II.

Two ships are on the sea—
No need of wind have they,
To speed them rapidly
Forth on their watery way.
Like creatures of the deep,
They ply their forward course,
Breaking old Ocean's sleep
With heavy sounds and hoarse.

III.

Look through the darkling veil
Night hangs upon the wave—
Deaths own eternal pale—
The universal grave !
Mark you tall bark—the din
Of life that is about her—
Love, Hope, and Mirth are in,
And Ruin is without her.

IV.

Youth is slumbering there,
And Age—as beautiful—
Hush'd is the heart of Care—
Beauty's love looks are dull—
Here young Hope's honey breath,
The waking lover quaffs—
And yonder, see where death
Sits on the wave, and laughs !

V.

The vessels near !—they ply—
They meet—that fate hath caught her :
A sudden crash—a cry !—
A wail above the water—
A hiss of quenching flame—
A rush of billows on her—
The hungry waves are tame—
The sea is smooth upon her.

VI.

A voice is on the deep—
Hoarse is the whirlwind's lungs—
The sea starts from her sleep,
And lifts her billowy tongues—
“A sorrow for the dead !
Friend—countryman—and stranger—
And a curse for him who fled,
His fellow men in danger !”

THE SISTER OF CHARITY.

I.

She once was a lady of honour and wealth,
Bright glow'd on her features the roses of health ;
Her vesture was blended of silk and of gold,
And her motion shook perfume from every fold :
Joy revell'd around her—love shone at her side,
And gay was her smile, as the glance of a bride ;
And light was her step, in the mirth-sounding hall,
When she heard of the daughters of Vincent de Paul.

II.

She felt in her spirit, the summons of grace,
That call'd her to live for the suffering race ;
And heedless of pleasure, of comfort, of home,
Rose quickly like Mary, and answered, "I come,"
She put from her person the trappings of pride,
And pass'd from her home, with the joy of a bride,
Nor wept at the threshold, as onward she moved,—
For her heart was on fire, in the cause it approved.

III.

Lost ever to fashion—to vanity lost,
That beauty that once was the song and the toast—
No more in the ball-room, that figure we meet,
But gliding at dusk to the wretch's retreat.
Forgot in the halls is that high-sounding name,
For the sister of Charity blushes at fame ;
Forgot are the claims of her riches and birth,
For she barter for heaven, the glory of earth.

Those feet that to music, could gracefully move,
Now bear her alone on the mission of love ;
Those hands that once dangled the perfume and gem
Are tending the helpless, or lifted for them ;
That voice that once echo'd the song of the vain,
Now whispers relief to the bosom of pain ;
And the hair that was shining with diamond and pearl,
Is wet with the tears of the penitent girl.

V.

Her down-bed a pallet—her trinkets a bead,
Her lustre—one taper that serves her to read;
Her sculpture—the crucifix nail'd by her bed,
Her paintings one print of the thorn-crowned head;
Her cushion—the pavement, that wearies her knees,
Her music the psalm, or the sigh of disease;
The delicate lady lives mortified there,
And the feast is forsaken for fasting and prayer.

VI.

Yet not to the service of heart and of mind,
Are the cares of that heaven-minded virgin confined,
Like him whom she loves, to the mansions of grief,
She hastes with the tidings of joy and relief.
She strengthens the weary—she comforts the weak,
And soft is her voice in the ear of the sick;
Where want and affliction on mortals attend,
The sister of Charity there is a friend.

VII.

Unshrinking where pestilence scatters his breath,
Like an angel she moves, 'mid the vapour of death,
Where rings the loud musket, and flashes the sword,
Unfearing she walks for she follows the Lord.
How sweetly she bends o'er each plague tainted face
With looks that are lighted, with holiest grace;
How kindly she dresses each suffering limb,
For she sees in the wounded the image of Him.

Behold her, ye worldly ! behold her, ye vain !
Who shrink from the pathway of virtue and pain ;
Who yield up to pleasure, your nights and your days
Forgetful of service, forgetful of praise.
Ye lazy philosophers—self-seeking men,—
Ye fireside philanthropists, great at the pen,
How stands in the balance your eloquence weighed,
With the life and the deeds of that high-born maid ?

NANO NAGLE.

FOUNDRESS OF THE PRESENTATION AND URSULINE
ORDERS OF NUNS IN IRELAND, WHICH ARE DE-VOTED CHIEFLY TO THE EDUCATION OF THE POOR.

'Twas the garden of Christendom, tended with care ;
Ev'ry flow'ret of Eden grew peacefully there ;
When the fire of the spoiler on Lombardy blazed,
And the Moslemin shout in the desert was raised,
And high o'er the wreck of a fear-stricken world,
The standard of hell to the winds was unfurled,
Faith, bleeding retired to the land of the west,
And with Science, her handmaid, sought shelter and rest.

II.

With a warm burst of welcome that shelter was given;
Her breast open'd wide to the envoy of heaven;
In the screen of her bowers was the stranger conceal'd,
'Till her pantings were hushed and her bruises were heal'd.

From the hall of the Right, to the shieling afar,
All echoed her glory, all greeted her star,
In the depth of our glen, were her secrets adored,
And our mountain shone out in the light of the Lord.

III

Ye ivy-clad relics, resounding no more,
With the swell of the anthem, from shore unto shore,
Ye crags of the ocean, ye caves, in whose gloom,
The saint found a home, and the martyr a tomb.
Ye arrows of vengeance forgot in the quiver,
Ye death-shouts of enmity silenced for ever,
Ye roods of the wilderness hoary with years,
Ye knew of her triumph—ye know of her tears.

IV.

Ye speak of that time when the cells of the west,
Gave voice after voice to the choir of the blest,
When a breathing of pray'r in the desert was heard;
And the angel came down and the waters were stirr'd;
When the church of the isles saw her glories arise,
Columba the dove-like and Carthage the wise;
And the school and the temple gave light to each Shore,
From clifted Iona to wooded Lismore.

V.

There's a mist on the eye—there's a wail on the ear—
Fly doves of the temple!—the falcon is near!
There's a change in the heav'ns—there's a rushing of gloom,
And the mountains are black with the hue of the tomb
There's a ringing of steel, there's a voice in the bower;
'Tis the death-shriek of Charity striving with Power;
With finger inverted rude Ignorance smiled,
And grim Passion exulted when mind was exiled.

VI.

Woe, woe for the ruin that broods o'er thy towers!
Fair garden of Christendom where are thy flowers?
Oh say, when that thunder-cloud burst on thy shore,
Stood thy Faith as the Skellig when Ocean is hoar?
Say, smiled she undaunted when Hope look'd aghast,
And when Learning lay prostrate stood Piety fast?
Oh, answer ye mountains that witnessed the zeal,
When the faith of our sires dared the dungeon and steel!

VII.

Ev'n still though the tempest is hushed on our plains,
On the minds of our Country the havoc remains;
Peace grieves o'er her temples on mountain and shore,
Sad History's witnesses, vocal no more.
Shall no sabbath arise on our week-day of care?
Is no waking reserved for our sleep of despair?
Ha, see!—there's a shooting of light in the gloom,
And the spirit of Nagle replies from the tomb.

VIII.

Hail, star of the lowly ! apostle of light,
In the glow of whose fervour the cottage grew bright !

Sweet violet of sanctity, lurking conceal'd,
'Till the wind lifts the leaf and the bloom is reveal'd ;
By the light of that glory which burst on thy youth,
In its day-dream of pleasure, and woke it to truth,
By the tears thou hast shed, by the toils thou hast borne,

Oh, say, shall our night know a breaking of morn ?

IX.

“ As the dawn on the lingering night of the north,
To the hills of the west has the mandate gone forth ;
In the desolate aisles there's a murmur of praise,
And the lost lamp of science rekindles its rays.
The voice of lament in our island shall cease,
And her cities rejoice in the sunlight of peace ;
From her sleep of enchantment young Erin shall rise,
And again be the home of the holy and wise.”

TO MEMORY.

I.

Oh come ! thou sadly pleasing Power,
Companion of the twilight hour—
Come—with thy sable garments flowing,
Thy tearful smile, all brightly glowing,—
Come, with thy light and noiseless tread
As one belonging to the dead !
Come, with thy bright, yet clouded eye,
Grant me thine aid, sweet memory !

II

She comes, and pictures all again.
The “wood-fringed” lake—the rugged plain—
The mountain flower—the valley’s smile,
And lovely In sfallen’s isle.
The rushing waters roaring by,
Our ringing laugh—our raptur’d sigh,
The waveless sea—the varied shore—
The dancing boat—the measur’d oar,

The lofty bugle's rousing cry,
The awakened mountains deep reply.
Silence resuming then her reign,
In awful power, o'er hill and plain.

She paints, and her unclouded dyes,
Can never fade, in Feeling's eyes,
For dipp'd in Love's immortal stream—
Through future years they'll brightly beam—

Oh, prized and loved, though lately known,
Forget not all, when we are gone—
Think how our friendship's well-knit band
Waited not Time's confirming hand.
Think how despising Forms control,
Heart sprung to heart, and soul to soul—
And let us greet thee, far or near—
As cherished friend—as brother dear.

TO * * * *

I

In the time of my boyhood I had a strange feeling,
That I was to die in the noon of my day ;
Not quietly into the silent grave stealing,
But torn, like a blasted oak, sudden, away.

II.

That, even in the hour when enjoyment was keenest,
My lamp should quench suddenly hissing in gloom,
That even when mine honours were freshest and greenest,
A blight should rush over and scatter their bloom.

III.

It might be a fancy—it might be the glooming
Of dark visions taking the semblance of truth,
And it might be the shade of the storm that is coming,
Cast thus in its morn through the sunshine of youth.

IV.

But be it a dream or a mystic revealing,
The bodement has haunted me year after year,
And whenever my bosom with rapture was filling,
I paused for the footfall of fate at mine ear.

V.

With this feeling upon me all feverish and glowing,
I rushed up the rugged way panting to Fame,
I snatched at my laurels while yet they were growing,
And won for my guerdon the half of a name.

IV.

My triumphs I viewed from the least to the brightest,
As gay flowers pluck'd from the fingers of Death,
And whenever Joy's garments flowed richest and lightest,
I looked for the skeleton lurking beneath.

VII.

O friend of my heart ! if that doom should fall on me,
And thou shouldst live on to remember my love—
Come oft to the tomb when the turf lies upon me,
And list to the even wind mourning above.

VIII.

Lie down by that bank where the river is creeping,
All fearfully under the still autumn tree,
When each leaf in the sunset is silently weeping,
And sigh for departed days—thinking of me.

IX.

By the smiles ye have looked—by the words ye have spoken,
(Affliction's own music—that heal as they fall,)
By the balm ye have poured on a spirit half broken,
And oh!—by the pain ye gave, sweeter than all.

X

Remember me * * *, when I am departed,
Live over those moments when they, too, are gone;
Be still to your minstrel the soft and kind-hearted,
And droop o'er the marble where he lies alone.

XI.

But oh, in that moment when over him sighing,
Forgive, if his failings should flash on thy brain,
Remember the heart that beneath thee is lying
Can never awake to offend thee again.

XII.

Remember how freely that heart that to others,
Was dark as the tempest-dawn frowning above,
Burst open to thine with the zeal of a brother's,
And showed all its hues in the light of thy love.

XIII.

And say while ye pause o'er each sweet recollection,
“Let love like mine own on his spirit attend—
“For to me his heart turned with a poet's affection,
“Just less than a lover, and more than a friend.

XIV.

“ Was he selfish ? not quite—but his bosom was glowing

With thronging affections—unanswered—unknown,
He looked all round the world for a heart overflowing,
But found not another to love like his own.

XV.

“ Yet how ? —did the worthy avoid or forsake him ?

Ah, no—for heaven blessed him with many a friend,
But few were so trusting that might not mistake him.

Oh ! none were so dear that he could not offend !

XVI.

“ Yet peace to his clay in its dreary dominion,

I know that to me he was good and sincere,
And that Virtue ne’er shadowed with tempering
pinion,

An honest friendship than Death covers here.”

THE NIGHTWALKER.

I

'Twas in the blooming month of May,
When woods and fields are green;
When early, at the dawn of day,
The sky-lark sings, unseen;
A gallant brig, with swelling sails,
Weigh'd anchor by our strand,
With convicts from poor Erin's vales,
Bound for Van Diemen's land.

II.

Slow down old Shannon's silent tide
By favouring breezes borne,
I saw the royal fabric glide,
Dim in the twilight morn;
When sadly o'er the shining flood
Those accents reached the shore,
"Adieu, adieu! my own green wood,
I ne'er shall see thee more!

III.

“Ye furze-clad hills, and briery dells,
Now waking to the dawn—
Ye streams, whose lonesome murmur swells
Across the silent lawn—
Ye snow-white cots, that sweetly smile
Along the peaceful shore,
Adieu, adieu ! my own green isle,
I ne’er shall see thee more.

IV.

“O, had my tongue a trumpet’s force,
To rouse yon slumbering vale,
That I might make the echo hoarse
With my unhappy tale ;
That I might wake each sleeping friend,
To hear my parting moan,
And, weeping o’er my luckless end,
Be watchful for his own.

V.

“From infancy, a blissful life
In yonder vale I led ;
There, first I met my faithful wife,
There, first I woo’d and wed ;
Long time with blithesome industry
We met each coming dawn,
Or closed each eve with gentle glee,
Beside the dark Ovaan.

VI.

“ Oh ! give again my humble lot,
My garden by the mill,
The rose that graced our clay-built cot,
The hazel-tufted hill ;
The sweets that fill'd each grateful sense
From dawn to dewy night ;
And more than these—the innocence
That gave the landscape light.

VII.

“ For daily there the nesting iark
Sang to my spade at morn ;
The red-breast there, at fall of dark,
Hymn'd lonely from her thorn.
Ah ! must I leave that happy dell,
Where all my youth was pass'd,
And breathe to each a sad farewell,
My fondest, and my last ?

VIII.

“ When far Van Diemen's sunbeams soon
Upon my head shall fall,
How shall I miss at toilsome noon
My Mary's cheerful call !
When, standing on the distant stile,
She pour'd her summons clear,
Or met me with that happy smile
That made our threshold dear !

IX.

“What hand shall trim the rushlight now
That glads my cabin floor ?
Or raise the turf with bended bough,
When wintry tempests roar ?
Ah ! never shall that lightsome hearth
Again be swept for me ;
Nor infant there, with fondling mirth,
Come climbing to my knee.

“Ah, happy days ! what Mary now
Along the hedge shall steal,
With dark blue cloak and hooded brow,
To bring my noontide meal ?
The plenteous root of Erin’s fields,
To toil-worn peasant sweet ;
And that fair draught the dairy yields,
Not whiter than her feet.

XI.

“Dream on—dream on, my happy friends !
Oh ! never may you know
The hopeless, helpless grief that rends
My bosom as I go !
But when, at merry dance or fair
The sportive moments flec,
Let old remembrance waken there
One pitying thought on me.

XII.

“ Yet hear my tale—the bursting sigh
 That leaves the sufferer’s heart,
 The tears that blind each fixed eye
 When old affections part ;
 The wail, the shriek, each sound of fear,
 That scares the peopled glen,
 Might yet, would they the lesson hear,
 Teach wisdom unto men.

XIII.

Tw’as night—the black November blast
 Howl’d fierce through shrub and briar,
 We heard the demon as he pass’d,
 And stirr’d our scanty fire ;
 Our babes, by sweetest slumber lull’d
 In rosy silence lay,
 Like buds to grace a garland cull’d
 Upon a summer day.

XIV.

“ A knock !—hark !—hush !— twas but the hail,
 That smote our single pane—
 Still fiercer beat the ruffian gale—
 Still heavier drove the rain ;—
 Again !—the latch is raised—the storm
 Dash’d back the opening door,
 And light’ning show’d the unknown form
 That press’d our cabin floor.

XV.

“ O Satan, prince of darkness ! thou—
Wert thou in presenoe there,
Thou could'st not wear a subtler brow
Nor loftier seeming bear ;
Dark hung the drenched tresses wild
Around his sallow check ;
Nor e'er did lady, whispering mild
With sweeter accent speak.

XVI.

“ It was, it was some friendly pow'r
That saw my coming doom,
And warned me of that fatal hour,
Amid the stormy gloom,
When loud I heard the thunders roll
Prophetic in mine ear,
And something shook my secret soul
With sense of danger near !

XVII.

“ Now quickly Mary's dext'rous hand
The simple meal prepared ;
And soon, by rapid apron fann'd,
The ruddy hearth-stone glared ;
Soon by its social quick'ning light
We talk'd, with bosoms free,
And Mary left the long, long night
To ruin and to me.

* XVIII.

“ The sound of waters gushing sweet
Upon a summer noon,
Of winds that stir the green retreat,
Or harvest songs in June,
Were like the soul-ensnaring words
That from the stranger fell,
But while they sounded heavenly chords
They had the spleen of hell.

XIX.

“ He spoke of faded martial zeal
Before the sun was set,
That blood-red hail'd the victor steel
Of old Plantagenet.
He talk'd of Erin's injured plains,
Of England's galling yoke,
And a subtle fire within my veins
Was kindling while he spoke.

* XX.

“ He mark'd my heat:—‘ And if thou hast
‘ A pulse for Ireland still—
‘ If thou canst wind a merry blast
‘ Upon a moonlight hill—
‘ If selfish hopes and craven fears
‘ Have left thy courage free,
‘ And thou canst feel thy country's tears,
‘ Arise and follow me !’

XXI.

“ We left the cot.—The storm had sunk
Upon the midnight wild,
And bright against each leafless trunk
The flitting moon-beam smil’d
We hurried down by corpse and rill,
By cliff and mountain gorge,
’Till close by Shanid’s lonesome hill
We reached the village forge.

XXII.

‘ Dark, silent, lone the hovel seem’d,
And cloak’d each tiny pane,
Yet oft from chinks a red ray stream’d
Across the gloomy plain ;
And smother’d voices heard within
Came doubtful on the ear,
As when a merry festal din
Is hush’d in sudden fear.

XXIII.

“ The stranger paus’d—‘ within are those
‘ The bravest of the land,
‘ With heart to feel her countless woes,
‘ And ever ready hand ;
‘ If thou, for home and manhood’s right,
‘ Can mock at danger too, ~
‘ Come, pledge us at our board to night,
‘ And join our gallant crew !’

XXIV.

“He knocked, ‘Who’s there?’—‘My voice alone
‘May answer for my name.’
Quick from the op’ning doorway shone
A glow of ruddy flame—
The wicket closed—the anxious blood
Forsook my pallid face,
When, like a wild bird snared, I stood
Within that hideous place.

“Around a board, whose dingy plane
Was stain’d by long carouse,
Sat grim Rebellion’s horrid train,
With fierce, suspicious brows.
Crouch’d by the hearth, a wrinkled hag
The fading embers blew,
Old Vauria of the river crag—
The Hebe of the crew.

XXVI

“Here Starlight (name of terror!) quaff’d
Unmix’d the liquid fire—
Here Blink-o’-dawn, with milder draught,
Inflamed his easy ire;
And Lard-the-back, and Death’s-head gaunt
Their murderous vigil keep,
And many a name whose echoes haunt
The village parson’s sleep.

XXVII.

“Here Moonshine (name to outrage dear)
Told how at even close
He cropp'd the 'nighted proctor's ear,
And slit the guager's nose ;
And how some hand, at dusk of dawn,
Had fired the bishop's hay,
And headless by the mountain bawn
The base informer lay.

“ ‘ Hush ! hush !—’tis he !’ A silence came Upon that guilty band,
Like mastiffs roused with glance of flame,
The stranger form they scann'd :
‘ Fear not,’ the chieftain said ; ‘ he bears
‘ A bosom like your own ;
‘ A heart to right the orphan's tears
‘ And soothe the widow's moan.

XXIX.

“ Well met, my friends !—O glorious night,
“ It glads my heart to see
‘ That you can feel poor Erin's slight,
‘ And strike for liberty !
‘ Within this hour yon castle walls
‘ Shall blacken in the flame,
‘ And Havoc on those painted halls
‘ Shall burn her ghastly name.’

XXX.

“ And now, beneath the gathering cloud
That shadow'd vale and wood,
With hasty pace the rebel crowd
Their secret track pursued ;
They reach'd a hill with waving larch
And mingled poplar crown'd,
Where, tow'ring o'er one ivied arch,
An ancient castle frown'd.

XXXI.

“ All dark ! all silent ! not a light
Gleams from a window there ;
Knew they the councils of the night
Less sound their slumber were.
'Tis time !—the torch !—but where is he
Who led the daring band ?
Why darts he by that sheltering tree ?
Why waits the lighted brand ?

XXXII.

“ ‘ Fly comrades, fly !—see yonder flame
That rises from the hill—
‘ Fly !—heard ye not the wild acclaim
That hail'd that whistle shrill ?’
'Twas late !—a hundred bayonets gleam'd
Around them in the toil—
And many a heart's blood hotly streamed
Upon that fatal soil.

XXXIII.

“What, snared! betray’d!—and there he stood,
The traitor and the slave,
Who purchased with their reeking blood
The life his judges gave.
Still red with gore, each streaming hilt
Against the moonlight glows—
Oh! thus shall all who sow in guilt,
Reap treason at the close.

XXXIV.

“O, you who bless these dawning skies
In yon receding vales,
Take warning from my parting sighs,
And from those swelling sails!
To answer crime with crime is worse
Than tamely to endure;
And ev’n for black oppression’s curse
Dark treason is no cure.

XXXV.

“Farewell, farewell! ye distant hills
With many a garden gay!
Ye waving groves and gushing rills
That hail the rising day!
Ye hills of Clare, with vapours hoar,
Ringmoylan’s leafy dells;
And thou, oh wild sea-beaten shore,
Where many a kinsman dwells!”

XXXVI.

He sung, while o'er the darkening stream
Fresh came the wakening gale,
And fading, like a morning dream,
I heard his parting wail :—
“ Farewell, ye cots, that sweetly smile
Along the peaceful shore !
Farewell, farewell, my own green isle !
I ne'er shall see thee more.”

THE DANISH INVASION.

I.

Why weepest thou, Erin ? Why droop thy green
bowers ?
Why flows all in purple the wave of Cullain ?
Why sink thy young maidens like rain-laden flowers ?
Why hush'd are their songs on the desolate plain ?
Ruin and sorrow are o'er them spread—
Revel and freedom and mirth are fled,

II.

Hath the demon of pestilent airs been out
To taint the sweet breath of thy mountain gales ?
To scatter his death-breathing vapours about,
And wave his dark wings o'er thy blooming vales ?
Like the wind that mourns in the winter bowers,
Blasting the fairest of Health's young flowers.

III.

No—poison and pestilence have no share
In the ruin that moulders our strength away—
Happy are those who breath that air,
And die at the sight of their hopes decay.
But the ocean's breezes fan our skies—
The plague spirit tastes their breath and dies.

IV.

But a demon more deadly—the Norman has flown
From his lonely hills*—so chilling and gray,
He has left his rude mountains of heath and stone,
For the fairest that bloom in the light of day—
And Erin has dropp'd her shield and sword,
And wears the yoke of a heathen lord.

V.

The blood of the royal—the blood of the brave—
Are blent with the willows of dark Collain—
Our King is a gay and a gilded slave—
And ours are the ruins that blot the plain.
The Ravens of Denmark are seen on our walls,
And the shout of the spoiler is loud in our halls.

* Men of the hills : the ancient epithet given to the Danes.

VI.

Weep on then lost island, thy honours have fled
Like the light on a lake that is troubled and broken,
Thy Snake* hath hid his coward head,—

The words of thy grief and shame are spoken.
Thou hast not left one lingering light,
To bless with a promise thy cheerless night,

THE JOY OF HONOUR.

The tears from these old eyelids crept,
When Dermot left his mother-land—
And I was one of those that wept
Upon his neck, and press'd his hand,
He did not grieve to leave us then,
He hop'd to see his home again—
With honours twin'd in his bright hair
He could not hope to gather there.

* Harp and snake—the national standard.

II.

Year after year rolled fleetly on—
Lost in the grave of buried time,
And Dermod's name and praise had won
Their way into his parent clime ;
But all his youthful haunts were changed,
The wild woods perished where he ranged—
And all his friends died one by one,
'Till the last of Dermod's name was gone.

III.

I sat one eve in Curra's glade,
And saw an old man tottering down,
Where the first veil of evening's shade
Had given the heath a deeper brown.
His cheek was pale—his long hair now,
Fell in white flakes o'er his aged brow,
But the same young soul was in his eye,
And I knew the friend of my infancy.

IV.

He gazed upon the silent wood—
He passed his hand across his brow,
The hush of utter solitude
Slept on each breathless birchen brow.
“ That lake with flowering islets strewed—
That skirts the lawn and breaks yon wood—
I knew in youth a valley green,
The seat of many a merry scene,

V.

“The youths that graced the village dance,
Beneath the turf they trod are sleeping—
The maidens in whose gentle glance
Their spirits lived, are o’er them weeping—
Sorrow, and blight, and age have come
Where mirth once reigned, and youth, and bloom.
And the soft charms of Nature’s prime
Are blasted by the breath of Time.

VI.

“And hath the joy that honour gives,
No power o’er memories like this?
Ah! witless is the man who lives
To soar at fame and spurn at bliss!
That hath been mine—this might have been,
Had I but held the humble mean—
And passed upon my parent soil,
A life of peace and quiet toil.

VII.

“And is it thus that all who gain
The phantom glory of a name?
That ere it grace their brow, the pain
Of their long search hath quenched the flame
That young ambition lit—and those Whose praise they sought are at repose—
And they stand in a world unknown—
Admired—revered—unloved—alone!

VIII.

“I want my early playmates back,
My friends long-lost—but ne’er forgot—
Are these old men who haunt my track,
My school-day friends?—I know them not!
Alas! I grieve and call in vain,
Their youth will never come again—
But it is sad my heart should feel
Its first affections youthful still.”

WOULD YOU CHOOSE A FRIEND.

I.

Would you choose a friend? Attend! attend!
I'll teach you how to attain your end.
He on whose lean and bloodless cheek
The red grape leaves no laughing streak,
On whose dull white brow and clouded eye
Cold thought and care sit heavily,
Him you must flee,
'Tween you and me,
That man is very bad company.

II.

And he around whose jewelled nose
The blood of the red grape freely flows ;
Whose pursy frame as he fronts the board
Shakes like a wine sack newly stored,
In whose half-shut, moist, and sparkling eye,
The wine god revels cloudily,
Him you must flee,
'Tween you and me,
That man is very bad company.

III.

But he who takes his wine in measure,
Mingling wit and sense with pleasure,
Who likes good wine for the joy it brings,
And merrily laughs and gaily sings :
With heart and bumper always full,
Never maudlin, never dull,
Your friend let him be,
'Tween you and me,
That man is excellent company.

WHEN SOME UNBLEST AND LIGHTLESS EYE.

I.

When some unblest and lightless eye,
 With lid half droop'd, and moist, and meek,
Tells silent tales of misery,
 The trembling lip could never speak.
What is it wets the listener's cheek,
What fills with love his answering voice,
 And bids the suffering heart not break,
And bids that trembling eye rejoice?
When the heart wavers in its choice,
 What is it prompts the generous part?
Oh! spring of all life's tender joys!
 Oh, sun of youth! 'tis heart! 'tis heart!

When the advancing march of Time,
 With cheering breath has roll'd away,
The mists that dull'd her morning prime,
 And Beauty steps into her day;
What gives those eyes that conquering play
That aching bosoms long confess?

And lights those charms with quickening ray
That else had charmed and conquered less ?
A sweet light unto loveliness,
A meaning breathing o'er the whole,
That else might charm, but could not bless,
Win, but not fix—'tis soul ! 'tis soul !

III.

When youth and youthful friends are gone,
When disappointment glooms the brow,
And early loves leave us alone,
To walk in friendless sorrow now,
And chilled is young rapture's glow,
And hoary, grown the raven hair,
And age its paly tinge of woe
Hangs over all youth fancied fair,
What guards our home from chill despair ?
And bids joy linger, loth to part ?
Oh, balm of grief and pining care !
Oh, stay of age ! 'tis heart ! 'tis heart !

IV.

When Beauty feels the touch of years,
When the round voice grows faint and small,
And that bright eye is dimmed by tears,
That once held many a heart in thrall,
What makes that voice still musical ?
That sunken eye still seeming bright ?

And beauty, even in beauty's fall,
As full of witching life and light,
As when the hue of young delight
Over its blushing spring-time stole !
Oh, star of love's approaching night,
Oh, shield of faith ! 'tis soul ! 'tis soul !

v.

Seldom they shine in world's like this,
Seldom their favouring light we see,
For passion taints earth's purest bliss,
With spots of dark mortality ;
But once a sweet dream came to me,
A vision of a glorious land,
When sounds of gentle revelry,
Rose on the soft air, making bland
And rapturous music to a band
Of nymphs that o'er the green path stole,
Where Beauty and Youth walked hand in hand
Lock'd in love's faith with Heart and Soul.

THE SONG OF THE OLD MENDICANT.

I.

A man of threescore, with the snow on his brow,
And the light of his aged eye dim,
Oh, valley of sorrow ! what lure hast thou now,
In thy changes of promise for him ?
Gay Nature may smile but his sight is grown old,
Joy sound, but his hearing is dull !
And pleasure may feign but his bosom is cold
And the cup of his weariness full.

II.

Once warm with the pulses of young twenty three,
With plenty and ease in thy train,
Thy fair visions wore an enchantment for me
That never can gild them again.

For changed are my fortunes, and early and late,
From dwelling to dwelling I go :
And I knock with my staff at our first mother's gate,
And I ask for a lodging below.*

III.

Farewell to thee, Time ! in thy passage with me,
One truth thou hast taught me to know,
Though lovely the past and the future may be,
The present is little but woe ;
For the sum of those joys that we find in life's way,
Where thy silent wing still wafts us on ;
Is a hope for to-morrow—a want for to-day,
And a sigh for the times that are gone.

* This beautiful sentiment occurs in Chaucer.

MARY-LE-BONE LYRICS.

Mr Graham now handed Miss Dawson into the car, and in a few minutes the aeronaut and his accomplished and beautiful fellow-voyager were lost to the gaze of the admiring multitude.

Kendal Paper.

Here we go up, up, up,—
And now we go down, down, down,—
Now we go backward and forward
And heigh, for London town!

Dean Swift,

MR GRAHAM TO MISS DAWSON IN THE CLOUDS.

I.

Who says the moon is made of cheese?
The sky a sheet of paper?
The little stars so many peas—
The sun a mere gas * taper?

* It will be recollected that this was actually asserted a short time since by a celebrated professional gentleman.

That all the clouds are chimney smoke
The Sun's attraction draws on ?
'Tis clear as noon 'tis all a joke
To you and me Miss Dawson.

...

The secrets of the sky are ours—
The heaven is opening o'er us—
The region of the thunder-showers
Is spreading wide before us.
How pleasant from this fleecy cloud,
To look on ancient places,
And peer upon the pigmy crowd,
Of upturn'd gaping faces!

III.

Oh ! what a place were this for love !
Nay, never start, I pray,
Suppose our hearts could jointly move
And in a lawful way.
Like Ixion I should scorn the crowds
Of earthly beauties to know,
And love a lady in the clouds—
And you should be my Juno.

IV.

Speed higher yet—throw out more sand—
We're not the last who'll rise,
By scattering with lavish hand,
Dust in our neighbours' eyes.

Away ! away ! the clouds divide—
 Hish ! what a freezing here !—
 And now we thread the mist-hill side
 And now the heavens appear.

V.

“ How blest ! ” (so Tommy Moore might sing)
 “ Did worldly love not blind us,
 “ Could we to yon bright cloud but wing,
 “ And leave this earth behind us :
 “ There fed on sunshine—safe from woe—
 “ We’d live and love together ! ”
 Ah, you and I, Miss Dawson know,
 ’Tis very foggy weather.

VI.

Suppose some future act made void
 And lawless Gretna marriages,
 The snuff-man joiners trade destroy’d
 And nullified post carriages :
 What think you if a Gretna here,
 With post-balloons were given ?
 Such marriages (we all could swear)
 At least were made in Heaven.

VII.

How small, Miss Dawson, from the sky
 Appears that man below—
 The triton of the nabbing fry,
 The saddler-king of Bow !

A fig for Dogberry, say we !
For leathern bench and " watches !"
A fig for law ! I'd like to see
What Bishop here could catch us ?

VIII.

Suppose we smash the stars for fun ?
Have with the larks a lark ?
Or hang a cloak upon the sun
And leave the world all dark ?
Or upwards still pursue our flight,
Leave that dull world at rest,
And into Eden peep—and fright
The banquet of the blest ?

IX.

Whiz ! whiz ! the fatal word is spoke—
The sprites are round our car—
Our gas is spent—our pinion broke,
And, like a shooting star,
Down, down we glide—the clouds divide
They close above our head—
Now, safe and sound, we touch the ground,
And now——we go to bed.

MARY-LE-BONE LYRICS.

TO CLAUDE SEURAT* ON LEAVING LONDON.

Prithce—see there ! behold ! look ! lo ! how say you ?
If charnel houses and our graves must send
Those that they bury back—our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites.*

Macbeth.

Gaunt symbol of the doom
All mortals must inherit,
Finger-post of the tomb—
Half corse—half shade—half spirit !
Walking burlesque on man !
Still warner ! living knell !
Dangler in life's last span,
All hail ! and fare ye well !

A man so wasted that he exhibited as a living skeleton.

II.

If, as the Spaniard* says,
At mankind's day of doom
When starting through the blaze
Of crackling worlds they come—
Each spirit to its frame ;
All wrangling for the fairest ;
What ghost, O Claude ! will claim
That wither'd trunk thou wearest.

III.

Say wilt thou then arise,
A skeleton as now—
Scaring the peaceful skies
With that pale ghastly brow ?
Oh, ere thou wanderest there,
Just step to Curtis' shrine :
He's flesh enough to spare,
For forty shanks like thine.

IV.

I've marked that wasted trunk—
Those fleshless bones—and thought
While my sick spirit shrunk,
“ Is this our common lot ? ”—
Shall the ripe cheeks—bright curls——
And eyes that round me shine——
Must “ golden boys and girls ”
To this at last “ consign ? ”

* Quoted—visions.

V.

Shall Garcia cease to charm?
 Shall Chester pine and dwindle?
A drumstick Pasta's arm?
 And Vestris' leg a spindle?
Shall Love's light dimple grow,
 Into a hideous wrinkle?
Burn's cheek no longer glow?
 And Foote's eye cease to twinkle?

VI.

Away—the sight that heaven
 For passing pleasures gave,
Was ne'er to mortals given;
 To peer beyond the grave.
What beauty is—we all
 Can feel—what it will be
A grim memorial;
 We find, Seurat, in thee!

VII.

Thy bones are marrowless!
 Thy blood is cold!—thine air,
Like his whose gory tress
 Shook blood on Macbeth's chair:
Yet, no!—for who'll deny—
 When first thou sought'st our nation,
Thou hadst got in that eye
 Of thine, "some speculation?"

VIII.

Art thou the wretch of old,
By mammon pined to death?
Or him the shipman bold,
We read of it in Macbeth?
By the weird hag consumed,
The slayer of the swine—
For thy wife's chesnuts doom'd
To dwindle, peak, and pine !

IX.

Whate'er thou art, O Claude !
When thou—though made of bone—
Hast ta'en at last the road,
All flesh goes—and has gone—
The worm—who gluts his maw,
On wreck'd humanity,
Will make—O Claude Seurat,
A meager meal on thee !

THE PRAYER OF DULLNESS.

I.

When dullness, friend of peers and kings,
Sworn enemy (alas) to me ;
Last shook her flagging dingy wings
O'er the first island of the sea ;
She fixed on London as a place,
Where she might find some friends—or so ;
And travelling up at mud cart pace,
She hired a cellar in Soho.

II.

But sad reverse since her last visit,
A novel rage had seized the nation,
“ Sacre !” the goddess cried—“ how is it ? ”
Gen us—my foe—grown into fashion.
In vain she rail'd—her ancient friends,
The booksellers had burst her trammels ;
And in the new league found their ends.
And left her, for the Moore's and Campbell's.

III.

An unknown lawyer in the north,
Shook her Minerva press to splinters;
Her favourite children sunk to earth,
And hateful light profaned her winters.
If she took up a rhyme—'twas Byron's;
If to the stage she turned her sight,
Kean scared her from its loved environs,
And Fanny Kelly kill'd her quite.

IV.

Despairing thus—despis'd—decried,
Dullness put up her ardent prayer;
Grant me, O mighty jove she sighed,
Some ally in my hour of care;
Look on my votaries sunken jaws,
My ragged file of thin Lampedos,
Have mercy on their yearning craws,
Send some bad taste on earth to feed us.

V.

Her prayer was heard, the rafters o'er her,
Sundered—and through the fissure came,
A pale white form—he stood before her,
Lanky and gawky, in his frame.
Over one bony shoulder hung,
A pot of coarse paint, with a brush 'in't
His front was like white parchment strung;
The devil couldn't have raised a blush in't.

VI.

A brazen trumpet hung beside him,
On which he blew a thrilling blast ;
With doubt and hope, the goddess eyed him ;
Fat Madam, he exclaimed at last,
I am your servant—sent by Jove
To bid you never be cast down,
By me your reign shall prosperous prove,
By me you yet shall sway the town.

VII

My name is Puff—the guardian sprite,
And patron of the dull and shameless,
Things born in shades, I bring to light,
And give a high fame to the nameless.
Me modest merit shuns to meet,
His timid footsteps backward tracking,
The worthless all my influence greet,
From ——'s books—to Turner's blacking.

VIII.

Receive me goddess in thy train,
And thou shalt see a change ere long,
The stage shall be thine own again,
Thine, all the sons of prose and song.
—— shall delight the wenches,
Where Richard shook the tragic scene once,
Fat Chester, shall draw crowded benches,
And Fanny Kelly play to thin ones.

IX.

The prophecy was registered,
The prophecy has been fulfill'd,
The brazen trumpet's boast is heard,
Where once the voice of Genius thrilled.
Reader, before your hopes are undone,
This axiom you will bear in mind,
That puffing has been proved in London.
The only way to raise the wind.

MATT HYLAND.*

PART I.

Thou rushing spirit that oft of old,
Hast thrilled my veins at evening lonely,
When musing by some ivied hold,
Where dwell the daw and marten only.
That oft hast stirred my rising hair,
When midnight on the heath has found me,
* And told me potent things of air
Were haunting all the waste around me.

* This tale is an amplification of a rude popular ballad on the same subject, called "Young Matt Hyland." The story is little altered, and is obviously made use of, as a medium for the expression of many beautiful poetical reflections, rather than for any interest it contains. The Author himself was so little satisfied with the poem, that he burned the manuscript along with many others, a day or two before he retired to a convent. Fragments of an original copy were however found among some untouched papers and the restoration of the poem to its present state, was afterwards in a great degree accomplished from the recollections of a very attached friend, who was familiar with it, and to whose fine taste and judgment, the Author, had he been living would most willingly have committed it.

Who sweep'st upon the inland breeze,
By rock and glen in autumn weather,
With fragrance of wild myrtle trees,
And yellow furze and mountain heather.
Who seaward on the scented gale,
To meet the Exile couraest fleetly,
When slowly from the ocean vale,
His native land arises sweetly.

That oft hast thrilled with creeping fear,
My shuddering nerves at ghostly story,
Or sweetly drew the pitying tear,
At thought of Erin's ruined glory.
A fire that burns—a frost that chills,
As turns the song to woe or gladness,
Now couched by wisdom's fountain rills,
And skirting now the wilds of madness,

Oh spirit of my island home!
Oh spirit of my native mountain !
Romantic fancy quickly come,
Unseal for me thy sparkling fountain.
If e'er by lone Killarney's wave,
Or wild Glengariff's evening billow,
My opening soul a welcome gave,
To thee beneath the rustling willow.

There mirrored in the shallow tide,
 Around his trunks so coolly laving,
High towers the grove in vernal pride,
 His solemn boughs majestic waving.
And there beside the parting flood,
 That murmured round a lonely island,
Within the sheltering woodland stood ;
 The humble roof of poor Matt Hyland.

Though now, amongst the village swains,
 Young Hyland tilled the lands surrounding,
All regal in his youthful veins ;
 The blood of Erin's kings was bounding.
Yet lowly were his heart and mien,
 Nor pride he knew, nor nursed ambition,
Content upon an humble scene,
 That Heaven had cast his low condition.

To keep his mind from sinful stain,
 In humble hope serene and lowly,
To guard his breast from fancies vain,
 That stir the heart to thoughts unholy.
For this he shunned the thoughtless crowd,
 The village dance and nightly revel,
With frequent laughter echoing loud,
 And strains that smooth the way to evil.

Among the groves of sweet Adare,
There lived a lord in days departed,
And Helen was his daughter fair,
The blooming and the gentle hearted.
How loved she was in all the vale,
The village maids can still remember,
When round the fire with many a tale,
They cheer the eves of bleak November.

A ruin now the castle shows,
The ivy clothes its mouldering towers,
The wild rose on the hearthstone blows,
And roofless stand its secret bowers.
Close by its long abandoned hall,
The narrow tide is idly straying,
While ruin saps its tottering wall,
Like those who held it, fast decaying.

Peaceful it stands, the mighty pile,
By many a heart's blood once defended,
And silent now as cloistered aisle,
Where rung the sounds of banquet splendid.
Age holds his undivided state,
Where youth and beauty once were cherished,
And leverets pass the wardless gate,
Where heroes once essayed and perished.

Oh sweet Adare, oh lovely vale,
Oh soft retreat of sylvan splendour,
Nor Summer sun nor morning gale
'Ere hailed a scene more softly tender.
How shall I tell the thousand charms,
Within thy verdant bosom dwelling,
When lulled in Nature's fostering arms,
Soft peace abides and joy excelling.

Ye morning airs, how sweet at dawn
The slumbering boughs your song awaken,
Or linger o'er the silent lawn
With odour of the harebell taken.
Thou rising sun, how richly gleams,
Thy smile from far Knockfierna's mountain,
O'er waving woods and bounding streams ;
And many a grove and glancing fountain.

Ye clouds of noon, how freshly there,
When summer heats the open meadows,
O'er parched hill and valley fair,
All coolly lie your veiling shadows.
Ye rolling shades and vapours gray,
Slow creeping o'er the golden heaven,
How soft ye seal the eye of day,
And wreath the dusky brow of even.

Apart among her maidens sate,
Fair Helen formed with grace excelling,
Though first in wealth, and princely state,
The humblest heart in all the dwelling.
If ever truthful maiden's breast,
For virtue burned with warm affection,
In Helen's heart, that influence blest,
Had made its fixed, and pure election.

Not as by modern maids profaned,
The cross adorned her vesture only,
But deep within her heart it reigned,
With hidden influence ruling lonely.
While that clear brow and tranquil eye,
And plain unbraided locks of amber,
Told tales of meek humility,
And vigils of the midnight chamber.

Endued with all the power to please,
With wealth at will and amplest leisure,
The boor took more of sensual ease,
The outcast slave of sensual pleasure.
Perchance even he, whose sword and shield,
Rang loud on plain or moated tower,
Lived easier in the bannered field,
Than Helen in her father's bower.

Oh ye to sure destruction doomed,
Whirled in the vortex gulf of fashion,
Or more unblest, who lie entombed,
Within the living graves of passion,
Say could it wake your slumbering fears,
Had you beheld that tender maiden,
More deeply mourn her blameless years,
Than hearts with blackest memories laden.

Ne'er through self-love with inmost shame,
A weak excuse she seeks to borrow,
Nor e'er with superstitious flame,
She played the enthusiast's part in sorrow.
But clear her speech as gliding stream,
Each pebble in its depth revealing,
While in her soft eyes tender gleam,
Lay taintless truth, and childish feeling.

Some surely deemed the duteous girl,
Would soon within some convent tower,
Resign for truth's immortal pearl,
The pomp of rank and earthly power.
And doubtless had high heaven assigned,
As Helen's lot, such high vocation,
She then had lived with cheerful mind,
Obedient in an altered station.

But Heaven decreed the maiden's life,
Should pass with constant heart unswerving
Amid the cares of vulgar strife,
Her purity of soul preserving.
'Mid wealth and splendour—poor in will,
Though high in rank—in spirit lowly;
Amid the world—unworldly still,
Amid the unbelieving—holy.

Not hers the venom'd tongue that feels,
Small joy in social conversation,
Save when its spite destruction deals,
On some unhappy reputation.
Not hers, the doomed minds unblest,
To mirth devote, and senseless laughter,
Who waste the hours in sinful rest,
And leave to chance the dread hereafter.

Each eve the parting day reviewed,
With lowly penitential feeling ;
Each morn the maiden's zeal renewed,
Fresh grace within her heart instilling.
Each Sabbath eve when the twilight falls,
Its lingering light around diffusing,
Within the still dim cloistered walls,
O'crow'd, she knelt herself accusing.

Yet not to outward sense exposed,
 Young Helen wore her heart's devotion,
In tone or studied mien disclosed,
 In serious or affected motion.
For joy in all her glances shone,
 Gay rang her laugh like music flowing,
The conscious power of duty done,
 In all her bright demeanour glowing.

And fervent heart she has to feel,
 Fair Virtue's warmth, when time shall light it,
And changeless truth and fearless zeal,
 And hope that scents the winds that blight it.
For love was Helen's hourly theme,
 And some undying deep devotion,
The promise of her nightly dream,
 And spirit of her daily motion.

Not love like that whose selfish aim,
 From earthly bliss, to bliss is ranging,
But such as burns with generous flame,
 In hearts devoted and unchanging,
That constant wife, and patient bride,
 Hath oft embalmed in deathless story—
The love for which the Decü died,
 And mild Camillus lives in glory.

Firmly the pious maid designed,
That none should share her hearts affection,
Save one whose pure and stainless mind,
Might vindicate such high election.
Nor rank, nor fame, nor deeds of arms,
Should win her mind to love unheeding.
Nor genius high, nor youthful charms.
Of voice, or mien, or grace exceeding.

No, he should gain her hand alone,
What'er his claim to wealth or station,
Whose heart had treasured like her own,
For heaven its warmest aspiration.
For well she thought a rustic hind,
To love divine, aspiring tender,
Far nobler in the heart and mind,
Than kings who live for earthly splendour.

And who at sober dusk had seen,
This nobly born and beauteous maiden,
Arrayed in garb of ocean green,
With gems of purest lustre laden.
Or lovelier still upon the lawn.
Where morn's awakening light had found her,
Would marvel that her love had drawn,
The first of Erin's sons around her.

Full oft the Earl his daughter pressed,
That soon in holy bonds united,
His aged years might yet be blessed,
To hear her children's voice delighted.
Lest buried in his own dark tomb,
His household name and ancient glory,
Like lamps unfed should quench in gloom,
Lost ever to the eye of story.

But Helen with evasive wile,
Unanswered, left the fond suggestion,
With playful jest or ready smile,
Avoiding still th' unwelcome question.
For who amongst the nobles there,
Within her father's hall acquainted,
Could reach the ideal standard rare,
Her own believing hope had painted.

For when the music merriest played,
When dancers trod the blithest measure,
Her thoughts in calm reflection strayed,
Far distant from these scenes of pleasure.
Where many a soul was mourning now,
That e'er it shared such haunts of danger?
Where many a worn and fevered brow,
Slow pining lay, to peace a stranger.

Such thoughts in still succession brought,
Like amulets of holiest power,
Sweet safety in her bosom wrought,
E'en in enjoyment's echoing bower.
Thus holy themes of peace and rest,
Even in her buoyant mirth were reigning,
The hermitage within her breast,
Inviolatè still and pure remaining.

Where glides the Mague as silver clear,
Among the elms so sweetly flowing,
There fragrant in the early year,
Wild roses on the banks are blowing.
There wild ducks sport on rapid wing,
Beneath the Alder's leafy awning,
And sweetly there the small birds sing,
When daylight on the hill is dawning.

Or rather who in riper days,
In ruined aisles at solemn even,
My thoughtful bosom wont to raise,
To themes of purity and heaven,
And people all the silent shades,
With saintly forms of days departed,
When holy men and votive maids
Lived humbly there and heavenly-hearted.

Oh thou the minstrel's bliss and bane,
His fellest foe and highest treasure,
That keep'st him from the heedless train,
Apart in grief—apart in pleasure.
That chainless as the wandering wind,
Where'er thou wilt unbidden blowest,
And o'er the rapt expectant mind,
All freely com'st and freely goest.

Come breathe along my trembling chords,
And mingle in the rising measure,
Those burning thoughts and tinted words,
That pierce the inmost soul with pleasure.
Possess my tongue—possess my brain,
Through every nerve electric thrilling,
That I may pour my ardent strain,
With gentle force and fervent feeling.

For this before the early lark,
His prayers arose to heaven ascending,
For this he knelt at twilight dark,
Within his lowly cottage bending.
For this amid his daily toil,
He poured his warmest aspirations,
And kept his heart from sinful soil,
With force of holy meditations.

When sounded in the silent air,
The convent bell with tuneful motion.
He turned with thoughtful forehead bare,
And stilly bent in low devotion.
Like miser heaping gold on gold,
He stored his mind with holiest treasure,
For strong he knew must be the hold,
That guards the soul from guilty pleasure.

He heard in youth the wondrous tale,
How man was first created purely,
Awhile to walk Earth's flowering vale,
Then rest in lasting joys securely.
He learned by what accursed art,
His race had lost that high vocation,
And found within his opening heart,
The witness of the revelation.

Each evil wish that turned his thoughts,
From thirst of pure and heavenly glory,
Unholy attestation brought,
Of that sublime and awful story.
The strife with passion dark—intense,
The erring will that still betrayed him,
And plain it seemed unto his sense,
That man was not as Heaven had made him.

Yet strong he walked with guarded mind,
A thing of pure unearthly feeling,
With reverent eye the village hind,
Beheld him in the chancel kneeling.
And grateful blessed high heaven above,
To see that youth with mind believing,
The sacred feast of fire and love,
With seraph heart on fire, receiving.

Though scant was Hyland's humble store,
Yet never wandering child of sorrow,
At evening sought his open door,
In vain to ask—in vain to borrow.
The orphan's sigh—the widow's prayer,
To him appealed with mightier power,
And found a kindlier welcome there,
Than oft within the lordly tower.

And Hyland had his raptures too,
When darkly sunk the silent even,
And lone beneath the solemn yew,
He lent his soul to dreams of Heaven.
Till all the glorious concave seemed,
That clime revealed in saintly story,
And every winking star that gleamed,
An angel shining in its glory.

Nor frown ye grave, at thoughts like this,
That lend to virtue lovelier beauty,
And sweet imagined sights of bliss,
That cheer the toils of sterner duty.
For holiest hearts with earthly things,
Have blended themes of deep devotion,
Heard Seraphs in the minstrel's strings,
And seen eternity in ocean.

One evening rapt in thoughts like these,
With tears of heavenly sweetness flowing,
He stood beneath the moonlit trees,
His fervent heart divinely glowing.
"Thou Power," he said, "whose kindly hand,
Has fashioned all this fair creation,
"Oh! aid me still secure to stand,
"Amid the snares of dark temptation.

- “ Still sweetly fill my yielding breast,
 “ With boundless hope and love unmeasured,
“ Still lift my soul to thoughts of rest ;
 “ And lasting joys securely treasured.
“ Oh ! not for all the senseless glee,
 “ Of worldly souls would I surrender,
“ The joy my lonely thoughts of thee,
 “ Wake in my bosom purely tender.
- “ I see thee in the winters snow,
 “ The echoing bolt and roaring thunder,
“ And waves that foam, and fires that glow,
 “ And sounds of awe, and sights of wonder.
“ I hear thee in the rustling woods,
 “ When darkness rests on grove and fountain ;
“ I see thee in the rushing floods,
 “ I read thee in the lonely mountain.
- “ From household love—from friendship’s tie—
 “ Though sweet the transient bliss we borrow,
“ Soon, soon the frail enchantments fly,
 “ And leave us wrapp’d in lonely sorrow.
“ For thee alone our love was made,
 “ In thee alone it centres purely,
“ There lives in light that ne’er can fade ;
 “ There rests its tired wings securely.

- “Whate’er of sanctioned rapture chaste,
“Whate’er of blameless pure emotion,
“Thou wilt my heart in life should taste,
“Be thou its first and last devotion!
“Like birds that seek a distant home,
“O’er ocean’s waste and wide dominion,
“And only touch the heaving foam!
“To rise again with stronger pinion.
- “Oh thou! the wretch’s surest friend,
“First source of blessing and of beauty,
“Be still my beings aim and end,
“Chief mark of worship and of duty.
“Like sailors on a stormy sea,
“Like wandering exiles homeward hasting,
“So turn my constant thoughts to thee,
“Oh unbeginning, everlasting!
- “Yes, since to thee, alone our sighs,
“Arise with certain hope ascending,
“Still keep my heart from guilty ties,
“And wandering loves and quickly ending.
“Still turn my spirit’s eagle gaze,
“From joys like marsh lights widely straying,
“To that unchanging crown of rays;
“The boundless and the undecaying.

“ Here lone within this sacred grove,
“ Beside those banks and listening river,
“ To thee I pledge my youthful love,
“ My loyalty and faith for ever.
“ Whate’er of earthly bliss be mine,
“ Of joy fulfilled or blest affection,
“ Let heavenly hope and love divine,
“ Be still my spirit’s first election !”

Dark hovering in the midnight air,
A Demon heard the prayer ascending,
And saw beneath the moonlight there,
The fervent youth devoutly bending.
Grimly he smiled to hear that word,
With deep confiding ardour spoken.
From feeble man so often heard,
By faithless man so often broken.

Like ocean bird that downward views,
His prey within the summer billow,
The fiend with baleful wing pursues,
Young Hyland to his nightly pillow.
With many a wile he haunts the cot,
And deep suggestion darkly tainted,
And now he seems a sinful thought,
Or sight-alluring fancy painted.

But firmly stood the holy youth,
By many a guardian bright attended,
Unshrinking zeal and spotless truth,
In holy rapture calmly blended.
Each sacramental rite of love,
With reverent heed devout to render,
He felt his prayer received above,
Far dearer than whole mines of splendour.

Nor when by ills like these oppressed,
Turned he his mind to daring question,
Nor fed within his simple heart,
The demon tempter's dark suggestion.
But placed on God his trust aright,
Without whose wise according power,
Not e'en the tempest's fiercest might,
Can rend a leaf from slender'st flower.

PART II.

Oh fatal power of human love,
The swift-enthraling—swifter cloying,
For earth below and heaven above,
The all-confounding—all destroying.
With visions wild it cheats the brain,
And steals its peace and leaves it lonely,
It whispers hope that must be vain,
And joys in hearts ill sorted only.

Alas within the youthful breast,
When holy thoughts arise sincerest,
And when the heart is most at rest,
Temptation oft is lurking nearest.
Confiding high in purpose pure,
To fear and guilt alike a stranger,
It steps within the fatal lure
And falls, before it sees the danger.

'Tis vain to say in youthful ears,
Time flies—earth fades with all its pleasures,
The ardent heart attentive hears,
But nought of transient counsel treasures.
'Tis heavenly grace—pure, undefiled,
The voice of prayer ascending duly,
Can firmly stem the tumult wild,
Of earthly passion rising newly.

Upon a day—a summer's day,
When calmly broke the dewy morning,
Young Helen sought the woodland gay,
With rosy buds her brows adorning.
And joyous as the early bird,
She sung along the green wood bounding,
And rock and cliff the soft notes heard,
And answered from the hills surrounding.

Her golden hair the rising breeze,
Around her laughing face was blowing,
While gliding fleet beneath the trees,
She seemed a star, through thin clouds going.
What eye that saw her tripping light,
Along each laurel-shaded alley,
But must have deemed a form so bright,
Some fairy of the leafy valley.

Hark, far within the silent wood,
What sounds are those that softly linger ?
Beneath the stream fair Helen stood,
With lips apart and listening finger.
They ceased——she leaves the sunny spot,
Through brake and covert swiftly hieing,
Till stretched beside his lonely cot,
She saw the youthful minstrel lying.

Fly, Helen, fly that fatal sight,
Oh hast thou seen the rose-bud fading,
When sudden breathes the eastern blight,
Its tender bloom with death invading.
Or wounded bird that turns to pine,
And die in some sequestered bower.
More woe awaits that heart of thine
Than wounded bird or blighted flower.

Black flowed his hair as moonless night,
His eyes like midnight stars unclouded,
Of many hues the vesture bright,
His peaceful form that lightly shrouded.
And Genius on his youthful face,
And o'er his ample forehead stealing,
With strong expression's thoughtful grace,
Habitual, noble thoughts revealing.

Deep hid within that tangled screen,
The lady saw him lone reclining,
While reason's light was faint within,
And fancy's only round her shining.
Oh woe ! that e'er a heart so light,
Should feel the gloom of early sadness,
That cankering sorrow e'er should blight,
The healthful glow of blameless gladness.

One of the lesser sprites, who keep
Amongst the biest their radiant station,
Saw from the far empyrean steep,
The subtle tempter's sly temptation.
And upward sought in higher air,
Bright hovering o'er the sunny water,
That angel whose protecting care,
Kept watch around the chieftain's daughter.

"Terrible Brightness," thus it said,
 "Sees't thou yon fiend with wings extended,
"Malign, above that simple maid,
 "Dark lowering in the moonbeam splendid.
"Hast thou thy tender charge resigned,
 "Dost thou no more her safety cherish,
"That thus, with heedless impulse blind,
 "Thou leav'st her in the snare to perish?"

Smiling, the Essence pure replied,
 "Peace with thee be, biest one!—they only,
Who tempt their fate in curious pride,
 "On their own strength presuming lonely;
"Or strongly tried, who fail to use,
 "With vigorous will their free endeavour,
"Shall in the internal conflict lose,
 "The banner of their hope for ever.

"The fiend who weaves that web malign,
 "Sees not, with finite vision bounded,
"He doth but aid the high design,
 " "In deep unerring wisdom founded.
"Thus oft the accursed slaves of ill,
 "Are instruments of good, unknowing,
"And hate, with undesigning will,
 "Can set the founts of mercy flowing."

“Is this the youth,” fair Helen said,
 “Of whom my maidens have been telling,
“A holy life who long has led,
 “Devote within this humble dwelling.
“Oh ! if a pure and lofty mind,
 “And generous thoughts and high endeavour,
“Be in such noble form enshrined,
 “I’d listen to his song for ever.

“But how comes he a village swain?
 “A youth from noble race descended,
“Whose sires in Desmond’s knightly train,
 “In field and banquet hall attended.
“When far in Shanid’s western keep,
 “The Desmond trod his leaguered towers,
“And saw around the guarded steep
 “The Butler lead his baffled powers !”

“ There is a pride in lofty birth,
“ But honour is the meed of merit,
“ And nobler is the living worth,
“ Than aught which thriftless heirs inherit
“ The gem may deck the lordly vest,
“ With wrought adornments richly twining,
“ But brighter in the lowly breast,
“ The lamp of goodness purely shining.”

“ Fain would I leave the crowded halls,
“ Where pride meets pride in fierce emotion,
“ And place me where the sunlight falls,
“ On sweet content and meek devotion.
“ There let me find the only joys,
“ That leave no griefs to those who share them,
“ And give ! oh give these golden toys,
“ To any maid that cares to wear them.”

Hush ! silent be the breezy plain,
Hush ! silent be the small birds singing,
He wakes again, that rustic strain,
His gentle cruit* sweetly stringing.
He sung of Erin's golden day,
E're native faith and trust were shaken,
And pleasant was his simple lay,
As when the morning winds awaken.

* A small harp.

And then with bosom beating strong,
And upraised eyes and pale lips quivering,
He sadly changed his tuneful tongue,
To notes like sounds of soft leaves shivering.
So sweet his strains that violets there,
Awakening from their odourous slumbers,
Looked up, into the stilly air,
To catch the spirit of his numbers.

He sung of Love serene and high,
Though o'er an earthly bosom swaying,
That love, that bids all tumult die,
The silent and the undecaying.
How in a peasant's humble breast,
Confined to toil and labour lowly,
That noiseless passion deep did rest,
The mute, the stainless, and the holy.

How oft at hoary vested morn,
Or in the hour of fragrant even,
The bright mien of the nobly born,
Mingled amid his dreams of Heaven.
And how when in the whispering woods,
At Sabbath noon he wandered lonely,
The brightest leaves and stateliest buds,
Were types of her, and of her only ;

And how upon the fruitful plain,
 Low bending o'er the sweeping sickle,
He started when the golden grain,
 Shook rustling in the breezes fickle.
Hoping in vain, 'twas her loved step,
 Her silken scarf the winds caressing,
Or murmur of her balmy breath,
 That poured upon his toil a blessing.

Fondly forgetting that in vain,
 The spirit spells of love were spoken,
For maiden high, to lowly swain,
 Ne'er bent e'en though a heart were broken.
What though he came of noble birth,
 Of high born race, long famed in story,
His lot was now to till the earth,
 Forgotten, all that ancient glory.

"Alas," he said, "while frequent sighs,
 Rose from his young heart's depths of feeling,
And sad tears dimmed his gentle eyes,
 His strong emotion all revealing.
"Alas," he said, "it must be so,
 "The high-born may not leave their station,
"Though lowlier hearts be rent with woe,
 " And worn with helpless adoration.

“ Yes it must ever, ever be
“ In this frail world of abject mortals,
“ The iron hand of poverty,
“ Closeth for aye, the golden portals !
“ But Thou—great watcher of the mind, “ Though sad and dark thoughts there are swelling,
“ Bid it in meekness be resigned,
“ Through sorrows dim and clouded dwelling !

Like winds that fall on perfumed flowers,
 Wearied of wandering o’er the meadows,
So died the lay, and those green bowers,
 Were left in silence to their shadows.
Fair Helen stood with beating heart,
 And spirit wakening from its slumbers,
While through her soul strange passions dart,
 Respondent to the breathing numbers.

Within her heart a hidden sense,
 Told her that his was that affection,
The high, the holy, the intense,
 And she was that pure heart’s election.
Tears, burning tears of joy and pain,
 Upon her cheek were wildly gleaming,
He rose—her spirit woke again,
 And swift dispelled its wayward dreaming.

She looked along the sunny vale,
 She heard the joyous lark ascending,
She felt the soft persuasive gale,
 She heard the stream its murmur blending.
She marked the cot—the smiling tide,
 She gazed upon the lonely island,
She trembling turned, and wept aside,
 For oh ! she loved the young Matt Hyland.

Like one beside a fountain clear,
 His fever thirst impatient slaking,
She stands with fixed eye and ear,
 At every sense the rapture taking.
He stirs—oh pleasure—quickly o'er,
 Ah ! dream of bliss how briefly ended,
She sees him pass that cottage door,
 And gloom upon the scene descended.

With drooping head and downcast eyes,
 And hands entwined in thoughtful seeming,
Young Helen through the greenwood hies,
 No more with infant rapture beaming.
Unlike, alas the laughing child,
 That left those halls at dawning early,
With sportive action bounding wild,
 And voice that woke the echoes cheerly.

A dew drop from the daisy brushed,
A happy fancy dashed with sorrow,
A woodland song untimely hushed,
A sunny eve and clouded morrow ;
A gilded barge that sinks at sea,
Upon a summer noon o'erladen,
A falling star—a blighted tree,
Are types of thee, oh, wounded maiden !

“Thou sister of my reason's choice,
In heart as young, in counsel older ;
Oh let me hear thy friendly voice,
And lay my head upon thy shoulder.
Thy counsel quick !—for in my heart,
A shaft is sped—a fire is lighted,
And thou, and I in death shall part,
For fast I sink, and fancy-blighted !”

“ Unhappy day,—at break of dawn,
I left my room when thou wert sleeping,
I passed the wood—the bridge—the lawn ;
Through tangled copse and thicket creeping.
And joyful in the glowing morn,
I onward roved with thoughts unheeding,
Now watching 'neath the perfumed thorn,
The timid rabbit swiftly speeding.

“ Or seeking for the sky-larks' nest,
Within the dewy-scented meadow,
Or tracing o'er its waving breast,
The morn-cloud's dark and fitful shadow.
Sudden upon the breezy air,
Such thrilling strains of song awaken,
Entranced I stood, attentive there,
My very bosom's breathing taken.

“ Beside the quiet stream I stood,
And fondly gazed and eager listened,
While all the roused and quivering wood,
With rosy morning's dew-drop glistened.
And there, where winds and wavelets played,
Harmonious round the lonely island,
Beneath the cool embowering shade,
Reclining lay the young Matt Hyland.

“ With thrilling notes ascending slow,
Like tuneful sound of falling water,
He sung how simple peasant low,
Had dared to love a chieftain’s daughter.
Oh ! Nora in my bosom’s core,
A voice, a spell, a breath of Heaven,
Told me he was that peasant poor,
And I for whom that heart was riven ;

“ Yes, he’s a simple village swain,
Yet claims descent from bold O’Connor !
And though content to till the plain,
His soul is high and full of honour.
And I am come of high degree,
From Desmond’s noble race descended,
But oh ! a village maid I’d be,
If with his lot, my fate were blended.

“ Hushed was the song—within the shade,
He sat in pensive mood reclining,
His silent cruet near him laid,
His tranquil eye divinely shining.
Deep silence o’er the garden hung,
His modest brow was bending lowly,
When now the morning hymn he sung,
His strains ascending soft and holy

"I gazed upon his humble cot,
I gazed upon his lonely island,
And rank, and state, were all forgot,
While I beheld the young Matt Hyland !
Oh ! Nora, ease my bosom's pain,
Oh ! Nora sooth this bitter anguish,
Which fires my heart, and heats my brain,
Oh ! give me comfort or I languish !"

With startled horror Nora hears,
The story of the noble maiden,
Her heart too deeply wrung for tears,
Her soul with bitter memories laden.
For since when first in early prime,
She trod the sunny path of childhood,
She loved with strength increased by time,
The dweller in the lonely wild-wood.

No words escape her faltering tongue,
Her pale hands press her beating bosom,
The dirge of all her hopes is rung,
The bolt hath fallen—and she must lose him.
"For this," she thought, "he scorned my love,
For this alone my heart he slighted,
But time may be he'll dearly prove,
The feelings of a bosom slighted !"

She started—on her arm upraised,
Helen had laid her finger gently,
And up into her eyes had gazed,
With eager questioning glance intently.
“Alas, I see thou deem’st me wrong,
All sudden fallen, and lowly-hearted!
With reckless passion borne along,
With pride and shame and honour parted !”

Soft gleams the light in Nora’s eye,
A gentle smile her pale lip flushing,
While evil thoughts are brooding nigh,
And vengeance o’er her spirit rushing.
“Have I not, Lady, watched by thee,
In festal hall, or wildwood bower,
From earliest years of infancy,
Companion of each passing hour ?

“Then wonder not, I now should shrink,
To see the boding storm of anguish,
To see thy gentle spirit sink,
All rudely pressed, and droop and languish.
Like dew upon the wild wind’s path,
Like slender leaves by tempests shaken,
Thou’lt fall before a father’s wrath,
By friends and fame, and pride forsaken.

“Thy sire is Lord of all this land,
And thou’rt his loved, and only daughter,
And many a suitor seeks thy hand,
From far Ciar to Corrib water.
Think not the Desmond’s pride will bow,
For even his loved and fondly cherished :
Rather than see her bending low,
He’d mourn above her, fallen and perished.”

Young Helen’s cheek hath brightly flushed,
Affection’s fire her eye hath lighted,
“Oh ! rather let my heart be crushed,
Its hopes denied—its wishes blighted !
Oh rather let my head be laid,
Silent beneath the graves cold shadow,
While sunshine glads the flowery glade,
And fragrant winds o’ersweep the meadow.

“Than, that one ingrate thought should bring,
A sorrow o’er his age declining,
Or disobedience taint the spring,
Where holiest love was ever shining.
No !—Peace shall hallow Desmond’s years,
Unknown his daughter’s hapless story,
Till Hyland’s name in Desmond’s ears,
Sounds sweet as songs of knightly glory.

“ Yet Nora, yet I fain would test,
His famed worth and stainless merit,
And should they fail—why peace and rest,
May sooth again my troubled spirit.
My soul perhaps in fancy vain,
Is worshipping a vision only,
Which lures me on through grief and pain,
At last to leave me dark and lonely.

“ I'd know if that which tempts my heart,
Be worthless of the pain 'tis bringing,
And burning thoughts might then depart ;
Now round my inmost feelings clinging.
'Tis wooing fate—yet Nora go,
And seek him in his lonely island,
When dewy winds are whispering low,
Say I would speak with young Matt Hyland.”

PART III.

Oh, spotless Purity of mind !
Majestic grace of youthful beauty !
Who lov'st within the heart refined,
To house with Peace and simple duty.
Pure as the gale whose viewless wings
The wind harp sweeps with mournful fleetness ;
Oh, come and teach the eager strings,
To blend their fires with heavenly sweetness.

First grace of virgin souls ! to thee—
To thee I pour my minstrel story ;
Oh ! let the descant rising free,
From thee receive its saving glory.
Few, few for thee awake the strain,
Few tune for thee the pleasing measure,
For first amongst the slothful train,
The Poet haunts the gates of pleasure.

Then quickly come, oh angel maid !
In robe of purest white descending !
Who lovest to haunt the sacred shade
Where sounds of choral praise are blending.
The banquet late and grossly stored,
And tipsy dance who flies affrighted,
But lovest the spare and simple board,
By sweet Religion calmly lighted.

Without thee, life were all a waste :
Without thee, vile were rank and power :
Without thee, science sinks debased,
And beauty lies a soiled flower.
The Monarch's crown—the conqueror's arms—
The Poet's artful strains enchanting—
The Sage's love—the maiden's charms,
Are shorn of praise when thou art wanting.

How wide they err who deem thee chill,
And hard of heart to human feeling,
Because thou loath'st the hateful thrill,
In Passion's bosom darkly stealing.
They know who filled with heavenly zest,
All earthly love, for thee surrender,
How pure within the lonely breast,
Thy spirit burns divinely tender.

No more—no more, ye feeble minds
Who early cross'd in young affection,
Lie bare to Passion's stormy winds,
Make bleak despair your fell election.
The suicidal draught refrain,
And learn your Nature's loftier tending,
Nor change an hour of fancied pain,
For grief unknown, and never ending.

Come down with more than wonted fires,
And burst my Spirit's sensual slumbers,
And light my heart to high desires,
And kindle in my rising numbers.
For mighty is the theme I sing,
Though by a feeble voice repeated,
And strong should be the sounding string,
That tells a tale of Love defeated.

In sweet Adare, o'er hill and plain,
The summer moon is softly gleaming,
What finger taps the cottage pane,
And breaks the youthful peasant's dreaming ?
He hears in accents murmuring sweet,
" Matt Hyland wake ! and rise and follow ;"
He leaves the cot and courses fleet,
A flying form o'er hill and hollow.

They enter at a garden gate ;
" Hush, soft ! my Lady's in her bower,"
Above them flapped in gloomy state,
The flag from each embattled tower.
Still thridding soft in cautious guise,
Through grassy walk and covert shady,
With wonder in his heart and eyes,
He stands before that beauteous Lady.

“ Oh ! scorn me not ! ” she said and sighed,
And trembling paused, and deeply blushing.
For e’en the midnight could not hide,
The shame o’er all her forehead rushing.
“ Oh ! blame me not !—but kindly hear,
And kindlier feel my wretched story ;
And lend at least a pitying ear,
For state despised and hated glory !

“ My sire is Lord of all this land,
And I his loved and only daughter,
And many a lord has sought my hand,
From far Ciar to Corrib water.
Oh ! vain is now their suit to me,
I’ve marked the worth that shines about thee ;
And I had rather toil with thee,
Than live and reign a Queen without thee !

“ Oh ! take me from a rank I hate,
Oh ! take me from this joyless splendour,
And let me share thy lonely state,
A dowerless bride—but true and tender.
The Kernes are hushed—my father sleeps—
My steed is on the ’nighted heather ,
And drowsy watch the warder keeps,
And safe will be our flight together ! ”

Matt Hyland was a village swain,
Nor tower, nor land may he inherit,
Yet honour fired each bounding vein,
And princely worth and regal spirit.
He knelt before the lady's feet,
Her sandall'd shoes with tears bedewing,
Like doomed serf with action meet,
To Northern Empress lowly suing.

"Oh grief!" he said, "for him who knows
And feels the force of worth and beauty,
Whose heart with youthful ardour glows,
Yet owns the tie of loyal duty!—
Oh do not say my heart is cold,
But mingle pity while thou blamest,
Though not for mines of hoarded gold,
Would I become the wretch thou namest!

"Thy sire is Lord of all Adare;
From Desmond's noble chiefs descended,
And true to them my fathers were,
In battle stern and banquet splendid.
What kinder chief can peasant hail,
From far Ciar to Corrib water,
And how would sound the thankless tale,
If I should steal his only daughter.

“ And would'st thou be Matt Hyland's bride !—
And would'st thou share his lowly station !—
Though wooed by all the wealth and pride,
That lives in Erin's regal nation.
Oh Lady, nursed in fortune's arms,
Life's flowers around thee ever blooming,
Thou little knowest the countless harms,
That o'er the peasant's cot are glooming.

“ The scanty meal—the raiment thin—
Uncertain health and certain labour—
The sick bed lone—where rarely's seen,
And fearful comes the timid neighbour.
When fierce and sudden tempests burst,
Beside a cheerless hearth he freezes,
For him the winter blows its worst,
And fever taints the summer breezes.

“ Yet I were blest—the tempest hoarse,
On me might waste its lungs for ever,
On me the winter bend its force,
And ruin wreak its worst endeavour.
But oh to think young blushing one !
Thy tender cherished frame should bear it,
Full bitter is the draught alone,
But oh ! 'twere death with thee to share it !

“ And ah ! for Love—its golden veil,
Falls quick at dark Misfortune’s greeting,
All earthly love is earthly frail,
All earthly passion doubly fleeting.
The hope to Fancy only bright,
Would nearer lose its witching power,
And thou would’st mourn the hapless night,
That led thee from thy father’s tower.

“ Yet take a peasant’s humble thanks,
For trust, or love so kindly rendered ;
And still amid the shining ranks,
Of Erin’s daughter’s highly tendered ?
Remember him to whom thy peace,
Was dearer than the love within thee,
Who held it far the nobler bliss,
To live without, than basely win thee ?”

“ Farewell,” she sighed, “ thou faultless youth,
Mine art has wrought mine own undoing,
I did but try thy loyal truth,
And find it stainless—to my ruin.
Here wear for me this clasp of gold,
Farewell, for see the dawn is breaking !”
Matt Hyland leaves that lordly hold,
• Like one from blissful dreams awaking.

She passed her father at the gate,
Why changed is Helen's mirthful greeting?
Why shun each mark of wealth or state,
Through hall and chamber sadly fleeting?
"Woe! woe for me! though in these dells
The summer sun is brightly shining,
Black midnight in my bosom dwells,
My peace is gone—my heart is pining!

"Ye woods and lawns of sweet Adare,
Ye ruined aisles and shining river,
Ye dreams of childhood falsely fair,
And faded now farewell for ever.
Take, take away this gorgeous train,
Whose splendour mocks my sadness only
For oh! how sad! for oh how vain
Is grandeur, when the heart is lonely!

"Oh! had I been a village lass,
In yonder lowly cottage dwelling
At vesper late or early mass,
My humble beads devoutly telling.
Then blameless might young Helen share,
His cot beside that murmuring water,
The happiest heart in all Adare,
Though reared a lowly peasant's daughter!"

“ Now merry harp and song adieu !
And dance at eve and music sounding,
I'll roam in groves of dismal yew,
And funeral cypress all surrounding.
Soon, soon an early tomb shall hide,
This frame already faint and dying;
Some village maid shall be his bride,
When I am in the churchyard lying.

“ Yet blessed be they ! and safe from ill,
When day for me no more is shining,
Let better thoughts my bosom fill,
Than fruitless sighs and vain repining.
Since duty mars life's only bliss,
With higher hopes my sighs I'll smother,
And oh ! for all we lose in this,
May heaven reward us in another !”

Now slow amid the closed buds
Soft hung with dew drops pale and quivering,
Matt Hyland treads the silent woods,
'Neath gleaming moon-beams coldly shivering.
“ How comes it thus ! what dream is this !
And have I stood in Helen's bower ?
Oh ! let me dwell upon the bliss
No more, of that enchanting hour.

“ No more, of each angelic tone,
That like unearthly music flowing,
Still fell upon my ear alone,
’Midst sounds of leaves and night winds blowing.

But follow truth’s unerring line,
My bark with holy prudence steering,
Nor even for Helen’s love resign,
The hope that waits the persevering.

“ Oh! stretch to life’s extremest span,
The brilliant course of earthly pleasure,
How looks the space assigned to man
Lost in the vast eternal measure.
Rank, fortune, love, earth’s highest bliss,
All life can yield of sweet or splendid
Are but a thing that scarcely is,
When lo ! its mortal date is ended.

“ So swift is time—so briefly lost,
The fleeting joys of life’s creation,
What seems the present is the past,
Before the mind can mark its station.
On earth we hold the spirit blest,
That learns to bear affliction cheerly,
And what we call and fancy rest,
Is brief annihilation merely.

* * * *

* * * *

There's demon spite in forms that seem,
As fair as angels just descended,
There's demon spite in eyes that gleam,
With softness and devotion blended.
That trusted friend who knew alone,
The secret of their midnight meeting,
Revealed the whole with serpent tone,
To Helen's sire the tale repeating.

One summer eve returning late,
From vespers in the convent tower,
With weary feet young Helen sate,
Reclining in her garden bower.
Now long forgot that earthly light,
Now vanquished long each wild emotion,
As stars in sunshine fading quite,
So love was lost in pure devotion.

True, blanched was the rosy cheek,
And wasted now the taper finger,
And faintly kind and sweetly weak,
The sounds that on those thin lips linger.
But 'mid the wreck a hope prevailed,
Of bliss that duteous souls inherit,
And still the more the body failed,
The stronger grew the heavenly spirit.

Hark ! voices at the garden gate !
With startled ear young Helen listens,
Where in the dewy sunshine late,
The bowering laurel brightly glistens.
Forgive the act——nor harm, nor blame,
Her thoughts perceived,—nor wrong intended,
But she has heard Matt Hyland's name,
With words of menace darkly blended.

“ I thank thee for the duteous tale,
“ To-night within his lonely island,
“ A sailor band shall cross the vale,
“ And bind the heels of young Matt Hyland.
“ A seaman on the heaving deck,
“ Then let him plough the cropless water,
“ In battle stern or hideous wreck,
“ He'll learn to woo his chieftain's daughter !”

What now shall wretched Helen do,
By all betrayed—by all forsaken?
What foot to seek his cot, and who,
With warning voice his soul to waken?
She clasped her hands, she raised her eyes,
Then swift through copse and thicket gliding,
To Hyland's cot the lady hies,
In heaven herself and him confiding.

Alone she sought the evening wood,
Alone she reached his silent dwelling,
And on his threshold bright she stood,
Her tale of warning, quickly telling.
With wonder wild Matt Hyland heard,
His grateful eyes delighted raising,
Like sinner to repentance stirred,
Upon his guardian angel gazing.

“And is it mine to bid thee fly!
And see thy native valley never—
To tell thee hope must surely die,
To say farewell!—farewell for ever!
To hear thy guiltless doom alone,
From her whose reason most approved thee,
Thy only fault—that thou hast none!
Thy only crime that Helen loved thee

“ Reserve farewell ! since thus we part,
And lasting exile darkens o’er thee,
Here let me pour my opening heart,
In all its fervent truth before thee.
Yes, here beneath the solemn night,
’Mong listening woods and waters lonely,
Receive my troth—and promise plight,
I love thee all—I love thee only !

“ If it be blameless bliss to know,
In danger wild, or pleasure thrilling,
One bosom shares thy joy or woe,
One heart divides each varying feeling.
That balm, my parting boon, receive,
For home, and rank, and state, and splendour
All, all for thee my heart would leave,
All, all, but Heaven, for thee surrender.

“ And said’st thou poverty would chill,
The truth that in my heart is burning,
That pinched with want and scared with ill,
My thoughts would falter—home returning.
Thou little know’st what woman’s heart,
Can dare when love and woe are nearest,
The torture thus with thee to part,
Is keener far than aught thou fearest !”

Pensive his air, and few his words,
Like those who secret woe dissemble,
And mournful as the various chords,
That in the rising breezes tremble.
Humble his state, but high his mind,
With unaffected force discerning,
And feelings pure, and thoughts refined,
The simple bosom's noblest learning.

"Farewell!" he said, with brimming eyes,
And clasped hands devoutly kneeling,
Delighted awe and wild surprise,
And grief within his bosom swelling.
"Farewell! I had no hope—and yet,
'Twas sweet to hear the soft wind sighing,
And watch the sun arise and set,
Upon the towers where thou wer't lying.

"The summer's heat—the winters snow,
The wild birds in the woodland singing,
And streams that glide, and flowers that blow,
Sweet thoughts of love, and thee were bringing.
Farewell! my freedom thus preserved,
At risk of all thy soul can tender,
From Hyland's heart has more deserved,
Than one like him can ever render."

“ Farewell ! ”—she shrieked—her father’s form,
Upon the threshold stood before her,
And dark as autumn’s gathering storm,
His gloomy brows were lowering o’er her.

“ Remove your lady to the hold !
And bind that slave in heaviest fetters,
How came he by that clasp of gold ?
The hind must mate among his betters.

“ Thou loitering knave, why waits’t thou ? hence !
Be still and do thy chieftain’s bidding ! ”
Bereft of hue, and life, and sense,
They bear her from the cot unheeding.
Nine moons had slowly rolled away,
(Long lapse of undiscovered treason,)
Ere ever from that dreadful day,
Had Helen known the light of reason.

PART IV.

Oh ! war thou necessary ill !

What lingering curse shall he inherit,
Who stirred by fell Ambition's zeal,
Presumes to rouse thy wasting spirit.
Dark foe to human weal who draws,
His sword the bands of peace to sever,
Without the plea of righteous cause,
Woe ! woe ! shall rend his soul for ever !

The heart when perilled deep in fight,
That warmest glows with warlike spirit,
Is not in thy all-piercing sight,
The highest in the ranks of merit.
For oft it turns with selfish aim,
Untouched by nobler thoughts of duty,
In greedy quest of idle fame,
Or idler smile of passing beauty.

Such virtue claims the beast of prey,
In equinoctial desert lonely,
Who dares the chance of battle fray,
For passion or dominion only.
But man illumed with heavenly light,
Should join the din of mortal clangour,
Alone for justice and the right,
And then with slow reluctant anger.

We scorn the wretch with coward hand,
When danger toward his home is bending,
Who shuns to aid the patriot band,
For helpless age and youth contending.
In reason's eye not less abhorred,
Is he with hardened soul unsparing,
Who reckless grasps the desperate sword,
For cause or consequence uncaring.

With steady eye the truly brave,
Behold that fatal term appalling,
Not scared like passion's conscious slave,
With outstretched arms the world recalling.
Nor callous to eternal cares,
In heaven deserted calm, unshaken,
For Charity alike forswears,
The self-devote and self-forsaken.

For oh ! in this our fallen state,
So frail are even the best and purest,
Their sum of conscious ill is great
Who seem in truth to stand securest.
He deepliest feels the yoke of sin,
Who firm in Virtue's mail hath bound him,
And he whose eye is turned within,
Will lightly heed the flattery round him.

Could we with understanding gaze,
But calmly view this transient being,
Our souls would shun the sound of praise,
As from the hiss of serpent's fleeing.
By Meditation's tranquil beam,
Our minds would read existence clearly,
And see how false—how mere a dream,
Is all the world esteems so dearly.

There is a pride that outward shows,
In haughty port and diction swelling,
While lip and eye and brow disclose,
The monster in the bosom swelling.
Such pride to open sense revealed,
Like outward wounds with slight endeavour,
Is often by reflection healed,
And banished from the heart for ever.

And oh ! there is a stubborn sprite,
Within the inmost soul abiding,
That shifting flies the gaze of light,
In bright disguises ever hiding.
Self-diffidence with downward glance,
And timid speech it oft resembles,
Even while with secret arrogance,
Each pulse within the bosom trembles.

Wild wonder spread through all the vale,
And many a friendly eye was clouded,
When Rumour told the mournful tale,
In cottage lone and hamlet crowded.
How Hyland from her father's home,
Had sought to lure his chieftain's daughter ;
Now doomed in exile wide to roam,
A seaman on the western water.

“And who,” they said, “will now confide,
In outside fair, and seeming blameless,
If forms like his at heart can hide,
Deceit and ingrate treason shameless?
For soul in nobler shape enshrined,
Yet never lived in Erin’s island,
And where can truth a shelter find,
If falsehood dwell with young Matt Hyland?”

The boat is launched—the dripping oars,
Glance in the fitfull moonbeams holy,
The youth has left Mague’s gloomy shores,
His forest paths and dwelling lowly.
With forehead gloomed with silent grief,
And dreaming eye and heaving bosom,
His glances catch each passing leaf,
And drooping bough, and closing blossom.

While pale upon the furrowed wake,
The moonlit waters brightly bubbled,
Then settling calm as summer lake,
Slept in the gentle light untroubled.
And frightened in her covert high,
The curlew rose on whirring pinion,
And startled with her lonely cry
Hushed silence in her lone dominion.

And far away by ruined wall,
And shieling low and hold of power,
By lofty Court's embattled hall,
And Ballycullen's guarded tower.
Where eastward from the Candle Rock,
The death-light flung its tiny lustre,
Before upturn by sulphurous shock,
Bold warriors round Fitzgerald cluster.

All purple shone the morning's beam,
When from Mague's bosom gently gliding,
They reached old Shannon's mighty stream,
O'er swell and breaker gaily riding.
Full many an isle and headland grey,
And wooded cliff behind them leaving,
E'er moored in Labasheeda's bay,
They reached the ship at anchor heaving.

Broad looming 'gainst the surly South,
From her black hull, robust and swelling,
Full many a grim and muzzled mouth,
Of ordnance fenced the Ocean dwelling.
Above, old England's banner flew,
From high top-gallant gaily streaming,
The gilded stem in many a hue,
With dread Eliza's name was gleaming.

Wild wonder Hyland's heart enthralled,
His bosom heaved, his accents faltered,
For merry England's wooden walls,
What eye can see and rest unaltered.
Her hearts of oak and armed array,
What heart can mark that knows her story,
Nor long to join their wild huzza,
Nor burn to share their patriot glory ?

Enrolled amongst that gallant crew,
Soon Hyland lost his rustic bearing,
Robust in limb and brown in hue,
A manlier form and gesture wearing.
Well pleased to serve his native land,
He treads the deck a seaman steady,
And plies his art with dextrous hand,
And apprehension apt and ready.

Oh youth ! in thy exulting prime,
Those earthly woes but lightly shake it,
That known and felt in after time,
Sink deep into the heart and break it.
With friends or native land to part,
Then faintly shades life's morning splendour,
Hope holds the world within her heart,
And Time and Space like slaves attend her.

To coil the rope—to climb the yard,
Nor heed the billows swinging motion,
To watch alone when, driving hard,
The night wind tore the wintry ocean.
Mildly to bear each varied ill,
Each labour of his new condition,
And more than all, to bear his will,
In meek, unquestioning submission.

Such now was Hyland's altered life,
But well he bore the ills that pained him ;
Say ye who read the bosom's strife,
What power amid these toils sustained him ?
What kept his youthful mind at rest ?—
His brow without a cloud to shade it ?—
What treasure of the blameless breast ?
A heart at peace with Him who made it.

His mates who marked his bearing mild,
With scorn beheld the pious stranger,
They deemed his mother's precious child,
Unfit to stand the shock of danger.
But ne'er to question or resent,
Did Hyland turn when anger pleaded,
His mind was all on duty bent,
And left the idle scoff unheeded.

He was not of the fickle school,
Who launched on life in boyhood's season,
Find argument in ridicule,
And in a sneer convincing reason.
The star that from the shore of youth
His eye beheld with pure devotion,
That cynosure of heavenly truth,
Now led him o'er the world's wide ocean.

'Twas morn, and o'er the western main,
With favouring gales the ship was steering,
When lo!—the hostile flag of Spain,
Far o'er the distant wave appearing.
A sail! a sail! each gladdening face
Is bright with mingling joy and wonder,
And soon the level guns of chase,
Sent o'er the deep their echoing thunder.

But nought the gallant foe declined
The strife, with coward sail retreating,
But hove against the freshening wind,
And calmly waits the menaced meeting.
Soon side to side in stern array,
With ready decks they ride the water,
And wait beneath the rosy day,
The signal of the opening slaughter.

As high o'er cliff or seething main,
By lone Kilkee or heathy Callan,
The bustard eyes the soaring crane,
With eager beak and ready talon.
So hove the hardy British sloop,
Against that ponderous hulk stupendous
Though towered the Spaniard's armed poop,
Above her mizen peak tremendous.

"Ye British tars, behold your prey!"
The Captain's voice was heard no longer,
Lost in the brief and stern hurra,
From deck and yard arising stronger.
"Those maids of Spain in times to come,
• This day shall oft recall with sorrow;
Go!—send your iron greeting home,
Up ports!—and give the foe good morrow!"

The hulls that on the sunny brine,
All sullen lay and slowly heaving ,
Gave answer to the battle sign,
With sudden din and stillness cleaving .
Hurra ! above the foaming main,
They join in combat close and gory,
For Philip and the hills of Spain !
For England and Eliza's glory !

Hurra ! the shot is thickening fast,
As hail against the roof in winter,
Crash, bolt, and yard, and shrieking mast,
Each scattering wide the mortal splinter.
Loud rings each hull as frequent sweeps,
The ponderous ball with sightless motion,
While echo from her lowest deeps,
Answers around the listening ocean !

In volumes rolled the sulphurous smoke,
That did the dreadful scene environ,
While deep at heart the groaning oak,
Full oft received the rending iron.
Staunch by his gun each seaman stood,
Unmoved amid the uproar stunning,
Though oft he saw the seamed wood,
All ruddy with the carnage running.

“Their range of metal trebles ours,”

The Captain cries, “and fast is telling,
Haste gallant lads ! while darkly lowers
The favouring cloud between us swelling !”
With brief “hurra !” the tars replied,
And settled ardour, firm and steady,
And hurry down the vessel’s side,
With boarding pike and hanger ready

Soon bursting from that gloomy shroud,
Their eager blades are seen advancing,
Bright glittering from the murky cloud,
Like lightening flash at midnight glancing.
Huzza ! behold that hardy band,
Upon the Spanish deck engaging,
With sword and pistol—hand to hand,
The fight for death or conquest waging.

Struck lifeless by a random shot,
The first lieutenant died unshrinking,
When prompt at need Matt Hyland caught,
The ensign from his grasp in sinking.
And up the shroud he hastens quick,
With naked hanger nimbly hieing,
Though fatal drove and gathering quick,
The leaden shower around him flying.

Thrust follows thrust, and blow on blow,
And many a cheek in death is paler,
Oh ! nobly fought the gallant foe,
But who can check the British sailor !
Ere long the upper deck they gain,
And rushed beneath with ardour glowing,
Where raged the thickening fight amain,
And many a hero's blood was flowing.

Oh ! who that saw that piteous strife,
But must have felt his bosom rending,
To see so many a gallant life,
In clamour and in carnage ending.
Thus unarraigned of fault or crime,
To see so many a son of glory,
Cut off in life's exulting prime,
Oh ! young in years ! in valour hoary !

Ha ! while the strife prolonged in vain,
Still raved amid the dead and dying,
What daring hand the flag of Spain,
Sends o'er the wave, dissevered flying ?
See ! fluttering in the gale instead,
The banner of the western island,
And high upon the top-mast head,
The gallant form of young Matt Hyland.

Now gradual o'er the distant wave,
The smoky veil aside was flying,
And to the pitying vision gave,
The scene of strife, all stilly lying.
There locked in death's unyielding grasp,
Full many a valiant hand was sleeping,
That now no more returned the clasp,
Of sorrowing messmates o'er it weeping.

Loud shouts of conquest rend the skies,
"She strikes! Hurra! the Queen for ever!"
"And yield!" the British Captain cries,
"Since vain is now each wild endeavour?
Ye fought like men, like men give o'er!
Your sword!—if life be precious, save it!"
"En Hora buena—si, Senor,"
The Spaniard said, and smiling gave it.

"Since I have lost the gallant ship,
King Philip to my care entrusted,
Why should I vainly wish to keep,
This bauble in its scabbard rusted?
By cartel freed some happier day,
I yet may dare the wave and weather,
And it may be our lot to play,
That gallant game again together."

"Now who was he?" the Captain cries,
Who first with fearless heart undaunted,

Out spoke that tar, with forehead bare,
Who erst on Mague's sweet winding border,
Received the youth in far Adare,
A seaman pressed by Desmond's order.
" 'Tis he ! the simple rustic swain,
We brought from Erin's lovely island,"
They turned and saw amid the train,
The modest form, of young Matt Hyland.

"Receive," the Captain said, "thy meed
Of praise, since thou hast won it nobly,
Full soon the Queen shall hear thy deed,
Who seldom thanks a servant coldly.
Right nobly hast thou played thy part,
And loudly shall thy zeal be spoken,
For sure thou bearest as staunch a heart,
A ever kept its faith

Loud murmurs rose from all the crowd,
In kind accordance warmly glowing,
While lowly young Matt Hyland bowed,
His cheek with modest fervour glowing.
For England, ho ! they man the prize,
With British hands alert and ready,
With swelling sails and favouring skies,
Their homeward course directing steady.

But while each tar with joyous heart,
Indulged at will the burst of pleasure,
Matt Hyland on the deck apart,
Out-poured his soul's o'erflowing measure.
When o'er the deep arising dun,
The eastern shades he saw advancing,
And westward far, the sinking sun,
From ocean's bosom, upward glancing.

“ Thee ! late, when woe was gathering nigh,
I called with suppliant aspiration !
Thee ! now, in triumph warm and high,
I hail with grateful invocation !
Thou saw'st me torn by lot severe,
Far from mine own beloved dwelling,
And kindly heard'st with favouring ear,
The grief within my bosom swelling.

“ That hand in all his varied course,
That Israel’s banished child defended,
It hath not lost its saving force,
Its task of mercy is not ended.
That eye in many a trying hour,
That watched for him, each coming danger,
It hath not lost its guardian power,
But still regards the friendless stranger.

“ Thy precious boon—this mortal life,
Important term of man’s probation,
He must not risk in mortal strife,
For sake of erring reputation.
They truly hold the righteous mean,
Who like a sacred trust receive it.
Not clinging to life’s changing scene,
Nor rashly prompt, uncalled to leave it.

“ Our thanks we owe, for life preserved,
For victory gained and danger ended,
For many a blessing undeserved,
To struggling mortals oft extended.
In triumph or defeat we own,
Thy power alike with meek devotion,
For battle is the Lord’s alone,
On gory field or foaming ocean!

For England, ho ! the westward sun,
Is hid beneath his ocean pillow,
Away, away, o'er waters dun,
O'er roaring surge and swelling billow.
Soon anchored in the moonlit Downs,
They pause till morn's returning glory,
Shall spread throughout the island towns,
The tidings of their joyous story.

The second morn returning bright,
Had roused the crew to life and duty,
And smiling in the grateful light,
The world awoke to joy and beauty ;
When lo ! what dazzling pomp is seen,
What pageant gilds the sunny water ?
'Tis England's mighty Island Queen,
'Tis hapless Boleyn's royal daughter.

Loud thundering from the battered shore,
Where bright the sunny wave was beating,
The salvos gun's awakening roar,
Out-bursting gave its mighty greeting.
Wide echoing o'er the glassy wave,
That in the aerial tumult trembled,
Three cheers the gallant seamen gave,
On deck and yard in files assembled.

Loose o'er the sea, the standards droop
Around the Queen in regal splendour,
Majestic on the lofty poop,
Where England's courtliest dames attend her.
And oft with kindling smile she spoke,
And lofty brow and bearing royal,
Of England's gallant "hearts of oak,"
And "wooden walls," and "subjects loyal."

Well pleased the crafty monarch learns,
That foremost in the fight engaging,
Was one of Desmond's hardy kernes,
Less grateful war full often waging.
"The Desmond is at last our friend,"
She said, "and well the name he merits,
Who to his Sovereign's aid can lend,
Such frames robust and faithful spirits.

"But let not coming ages see,
In history's page the tale recorded,
That e'er such generous deed should be,
For England wrought and unrewarded."
She said and from the scabbard drew,
A blade in polished splendour shining,
While low before the wondering crew,
Young Hyland kneels with head declining.

"Thus still," resumed the royal maid,
 "By all who rule our prosperous nation,
Be merit with its meed repaid,
 Let worth have place of birth and station.
A servant staunch on sea or shore,
 As e'er drew blade for Albion's Island,
A ship-boy, and a hind no more,
 Arise a knight, Sir Matthew Hyland!"

With spirit calm and unelate,
 In meek self-knowledge still protected,
Young Hyland bore his altered state,
 In bearing mild and unaffected.
Nor arrogance or vicious shame,
 Revealed an inward pride unholy,
But still he was to all the same,
 At heart the lowliest of the lowly.

Three years on stormy waters wide,
Young Hyland roamed with zeal unceasing,
While each revolving season viewed,
His merit and his praise encreasing.
And still the less his spirit prized
The fame his faithful service won him,
The more neglected and despised,
Did honour shower her smiles upon him.

Though oft he cheered the gallant crew,
Against their country's foes, in danger,
For private wrong he never drew,
His sword on countryman or stranger.
Nor mindful of the early truth,
That warned him 'gainst each rising passion,
Did vice allure his constant youth,
Though glittering in the name of fashion.

But tossed upon the ocean foam,
Or shining in the ranks of splendour,
His constant heart still turned to home,
With faithful glance reverting tender.
When calm at eve, the autumn sun,
Beyond the crimson wave descended,
And o'er the eastern waters dun,
The solemn moon was rising splendid.

“ Though long a sorrowing exile grown,
With homeward thoughts in vain returning,
And sad at heart, and inly lone,
With wishes vain my soul is burning.
Still round each cherished haunt of youth,
My ardent mind is fondly clinging,
Still memory turns with changeless truth,
To scenes of past emotion winging.

“ Oh dear in every change to me,
Sweet lady of the western ocean,
My longing heart looks back to thee,
With all an exile's deep devotion !
Fresh bloom each smiling garden there,
Each fertile vale and sunny highland !
Heaven bless my own, beloved Adare,
Heaven guard my dear, my native Island !”

PART V.

Humility ! oh loved of heaven,
Triumphant in thy holy terror,
By self confiding impulse driven,
Thou dost not tempt the brink of error.
But homeward borne and shuddering still,
Thou keep'st afar thy faithful station,
Thou shunn'st the coming shade of ill,
And fli'st as guilt, remote occasion.

The warrior trusts his mailed might,
His practised skill and valour solely,
But he who arms for virtue's fight,
Must shield his soul in prudence lowly.
In human wars he wins the plume,
Who boldliest writes his name in story,
But here, the souls who least presume,
Are highest in the ranks of glory.

The wreath in mad ambition's race
Is his, whose speed can first obtain it,
But in the quest of heavenly grace,
Who lowliest seeks will surest gain it.
Alone in this celestial fight,
When countless foes unseen assemble,
There's valour high in timorous flight,
'Tis heroic zeal to fear and tremble.

Nor mid the strong and searching strife
That ever haunts youth's opening season,
For lasting safety and for life
Trust thou thine own unaided reason.
But upward borne on fervent wings,
With filial hope divinely burning,
Go seek at mercy's fountain springs
For strength renewed and love returning.

Three years had slowly rolled away,
(Long lapse of undetected treason,)
Yet never from that fatal day
Had Helen known a joyous season.
With merry speech and radiant smile,
No more she joined the banquet splendid,
But frequent toward that solemn aisle
With secret pace devoutly wended.

Yet though each bud of young delight
 Within her gentle heart had perished,
Though changed by sorrows early blight
 Each wreath of bliss her youth had cherished,
Though fallen within her altered mind,
 Unpractised fancy's air-built towers,
Hope still around the ruin twined,
 And wove her undecaying flowers.

Still in her gentle eye serene
 And on her brow angelic, beaming,
A clear seraphic light was seen,
 Like morning twilight sweetly gleaming.
Less oft perchance within her breast
 Wild joy arose, tumultuous swelling,
But there, in calm unchanging rest
 Celestial Peace had made her dwelling.

Oft when beside their evening fire,
 With cheerful faggot brightly shining,
She sat before her noble sire
 With paly cheek and brow declining,
With secret pang his heart was rent,
 And oft upon his midnight pillow
He grieved that e'er in wrath he sent
 Matt Hyland o'er the western billow.

But most his pitying thought it stirred,
That while her heart was inly mourning,
Nor moistened eye, nor look, nor word,
Recalled the woe within it burning ;
That still with fond confiding smile
She met her father's kind affection,
And strove with many a gentle wile
To hide her spirit's deep dejection.

“ Oh I would give the fairest hall
That stands in Desmond's wide dominion,
Could I that fatal doom recal,
Or he his chieftain's lost opinion !
For what alas is lordly power
If peace withhold her light enchanting ?
And what the gain of land or tower
Where sweet domestic bliss is wanting ? ”

“ But let him roam in exile lone,
Forsworn in heart and base in spirit,
For favour to the traitor shown
Is wrong to virtue and to merit.
For rank may cover low degree,
And worth may rise as worth has risen,
But oh ! what grace of dignity
Can veil the hideous brow of treason ? ”

Not thus with her whose vengeful tongue
That dark calumnious tale had spoken,
With fell remorse her soul was wrung,
By fearful dreams her sleep was broken.
To her the toll of convent bell,
Seemed like a fatal omen falling,
And every stroke a gloomy knell,
That warned her heart of woe appalling.

* She started when the sudden wind
Along the boughs came swiftly fleeting,
She started when the village hind
Her pathway crossed with lowly greeting.
The warder's blast—the funeral wail
Of tidings new or unexpected
To her sick spirit told a tale
Of coming ill and guilt detected.

When dark across the evening heath
The shades of night were slowly creeping,
Disastrous thoughts of woe and death
Came o'er her bosom wildly sweeping.
Life's vanished ease in vain she seeks,
From scene to scene unquiet flying,
Her haggard eyes and wasted cheeks
Revealed the inward worm undying.

Even scenes of old, in summer bloom,
And summer fragrance sweetly springing,
Seemed altered by the boding gloom
That round her conscious heart was clinging.
When turned her cowering glance on high,
Her spirit shrunk, her bosom trembled,
For every cloud that crossed the sky
Fantastic forms of woe resembled.

The morning mists in volumes rolled,
The shades that wrapped the wooded valley,
The secret haunt beloved of old,
In glen apart or moonlight alley,
The measureless abyss that gleamed,
Reflected in the watery mirror,
To her disordered fancy teemed
With mystic shapes of gloom and terror.

For conscience, thy unsparing asp
Keen watch within her soul was keeping,
There firmly clung with fearful grasp,
And venomed fang and eye unsleeping.
Till in her spirits altered mood
Fair Nature lost her wonted graces,
And earth and air, and fire and flood,
Seemed peopled with avenging faces.

Nor rest she finds at midnight deep,
Nor respite from her fears in slumber,
Dark fancies scare her broken sleep
And spectral dreams her soul encumber.
Then buried friends uncalled arise
In gloomy throngs, her fancy daunting,
With warning hands and dreamy eyes
Around her silent chamber haunting.

Then on her soul with vivid force,
In hues distinct and deeply tinted,
Fear's ghastly limner, stern Remorse,
Full many a boding sight imprinted.
Earth's mouldering dust to life restored,
Uprushing at the trumpet's clangour,
And gleaming high the dreadful sword
Of Justice waking in her anger.

But most she feared the solemn gloom
Around the church-yard gathering lonely,
While darkling lay each voiceless tomb
By yew or cypress sheltered only.
Then deep within her shuddering breast
The fears of childhood found admission,
For souls by secret guilt oppressed
Are still the prey of superstition.

Thus restless on from day to day
She dragged along a wretched being,
To every random fear a prey,
From her own thoughts affrighted fleeing.
Though Desmond's gold her treachery paid
Small joy received the conscious maiden,
For heavily her bosom weighed
With unatoned injustice laden.

She knew not when with artful smile
And hypocritic zeal affected,
She strove to hide the secret guile
That all her guilty course directed,
How plainly through that shallow guise
Her lady saw the lurking danger,
But read in Helen's peaceful eyes,
A mind to all her guilt a stranger.

'Twas dawn—upon the leafless vale
The winter sky was darkly scowling,
With fitful force the southern gale,
Along the frozen sward was howling.
Slow swung the lonely convent bell,
Amid the stormy twilight breaking,
Where watchful in each narrow cell
The penitential train were waking.

Ha ! see—beneath the misty ray,
Through sleet and snow-drift swiftly hieing,
What footstep marks the devious way
Toward that high porch affrighted flying?
With backward glance and floating hair,
Upon the driving gust dishevelled,
As in her bosom blank despair
Or haunted frenzy wildly revelled.

“ Quick—quick—receive the broken words
Upon my struggling breath that gather,
A moment hold——ye rending chords !
A moment hear——oh, holy father !
Oh death reserve thine angry dart,
Thus o'er my shuddering soul suspended,
Nor pierce this sick and sinking heart,
Till all my hideous tale is ended.

“ Oh once to me the morning light
Arose in sweet and peaceful splendour ;
Oh once to me the falling night
Brought still repose and visions tender.
For once within my youthful breast,
Religious peace had made her dwelling,
And lulled in bright and holy rest
Each pulse of passion wildly swelling.

“ Ah, happy days when calm at heart,
In conscious innocence reposing,
Content I filled my lowly part
From breaking dawn to daylight closing.
When that pure light which shone within
Gave all without its tranquil beauty,
And lovely looked each rural scene,
Lit by the heavenly light of duty.

“ Ah, happy scenes for ever changed,
Ah, hours of sunny peace departed,
When through each woodland haunt I ranged
An infant free and careless hearted.
When hushed beside the whispering Mague
Twas extacy to sit and ponder,
Or by its waters winding vague
At close of summer eve to wander.

“ Then sweet at dawn that convent toll,
Slow mingling with the choral number,
Upon my tranquil spirit stole
And softly broke my morning slumber.
But altered now, that solemn choir
Overwhelms my soul with boding sadness,
And in my bosom wakes a fire
That turns each rising thought to madness.

“Yet not by sudden impulse changed
In that pure course my spirit faltered,
From fervent love at once estranged,
Like vales by rushing tempests altered.
No, seldom thus Devotion's flame
Hath in one gust of passion perished,
Nor bosoms stooped to guilt and shame
Where piety and peace were cherished.

“One night: my shuddering fancy still
Recalls that dread prophetic vision,
When, unoppressed by conscious ill,
My heart was lulled in thoughts elysian.
One night I had a fearful dream,
While yet a child I lived sincerely,
But vainly scanned its mystic theme
Till time revealed the sense too clearly.

“Methought I roved on shining walks
'Mid odourous groves and wreathed bowers,
Where trembling on their slender stalks
Fresh opening bloomed the early flowers.
Thick hung the fruit on every bough,
In ripe profusion clustering mellow,
While o'er the peaked horizons brow
The evening ray fell slant and yellow.

“ Slow pacing through the fragrant shades
With calm majestic mien advancing,
O’erawed I saw a queenly maid
With piercing eyes divinely glancing.
Deep wonder chained my reverent tongue,
My form was bent with greeting lowly,
While silence o’er the garden hung
As if the ground she trod was holy.

“ And who art thou ?” with eager tone,
I cried aloud, “ whose presence thrilling,
Though lately seen and yet unknown,
Can reach the utmost springs of feeling.
And oh ! what sweet secluded scene
Here shines in rural beauty splendid,
Where summer bloom and vernal green
With ripe autumnal wealth are blended ?”

“ With smiles that broke as sunshine bright,
Their lustre to my soul imparting,
And tones that sent a pure delight
Delicious through my bosom darting.”
“ Devotion is my name,” she said,
“ And mine are these delicious bowers,
From purest fountains ever fed,
And bright with undecaying flowers.

“ In this sweet haunt thy blissful life,
 Shall glide like meadow streamlets flowing,
Unreached by sounds of demon strife,
 Unknown to passion and unknowing.
For thee, these fragrant airs shall rise,
 For thee shall blow these opening roses,
Till far beyond yon twilight skies
 Thy heart in endless peace reposes.

“ Yes, thine shall be this calm retreat
 Of summer bloom and peaceful beauty,
If thou observe with prudence meet,
 And watchful care, one easy duty.
'Tis but to tend one golden lamp,
 With faithful hand and spirit heeding,
From wasting airs and vapours damp,
 His pointed flame attentive feeding.

“ While heavenward thus ascending bright,
 In holy lustre still encreasing,
Thou keep'st thy pure unearthly light
 With vestal heed and care unceasing.
Sweet peace of heart shall haunt thy bower,
 And safety watch unsleeping near thee,
And happy in thy parting hour
 Celestial hope shall stoop to cheer thee.

“ But if the faithless thirst of change,
Or slow consuming sloth should move thee,
Then dread those countless foes that range
Terrific in the air above thee.
They cannot pierce thy radiant sphere
While faithful hands that flame shall cherish,
But woe to thee if slumbering near,
Thou leav’st its saving light to perish !”

“ Upward I looked with shuddering awe,
And in the growing gloom that bound us,
Full many a dismal shape I saw,
Slow winging in the air around us.
Grim-visaged death and fierce despair,
And unbelief with aspect sneering,
And ruin with affrighted stare,
Disastrous through the mist appearing.

“ Heart-stricken at the direful sight
Awhile I stood appalled in spirit,
But cheered by that celestial light,
I took my lonely station near it.
Dissolving on the fragrant air
No more I saw that form before me,
But by the sweetness breathing there
I felt her influence still was o’er me.

“ Awhile I kept with watchful heed
My task of duty and of pleasure,
Exact at eve and morn to feed
That holy flame with ample measure.
Those smiling walks and various flowers
Each day I hailed with bosom tender,
Nor e'er beyond those happy bowers
Indulged the idle wish to wander.

“ But soon the scene familiar grew,
Of peace unchanged my heart was weary,
Till in the thirst of pleasures new
Even that sweet scene looked blank and dreary
Oppressive seemed that task unchanged,
That light had lost its radiant beauty,
For when the will is once estranged
Oh ! heavy weighs the yoke of duty.

“ Why need the fearful end to tell ?
One eve beside the lamp reposing,
Deep slumber on my spirit fell,
My lips in gradual darkness closing.
Terrific sounds my slumber broke,
That lamp had quenched in darkness lonely !
And shivering in the gloom I woke
To see the coming ruin only.

“ So passed my dream and it hath proved
The symbol of my waking story,
My youthful hours thus swiftly moved
In thoughts of peace and heavenly glory.
So gradual, while with lessening zeal
Devotions ardent flame I cherished,
Did sloth upon its fervour steal,
Till in my darkening soul it perished.

“ Oh if there be a healing force
In sacred rite or counsel holy,
To quench the fire of dread remorse,
Relieve its victim bending lowly !
'Twas I who wrought with lying tale
Woe undeserved for young Matt Hyland,
Now wandering in the western gale,
An exile from his native island !

“ The Desmond held my words for sooth,
And paid them with his golden treasure,
But conscience with avenging tooth
To anguish turned the short lived pleasure.
My waking thoughts are filled with gloom,
And when the veil of sleep is o'er me,
Dark scenes of woe beyond the tomb
In gloomy force arise before me.

"Last night when scarce a struggling beam
Of moonlight on the vale was shining,
Oppressed by many a boding dream,
I lay upon my couch reclining.

While in the midnight solitude
Hoarse murmuring broke the wintry billow,
The sheeted ghost of Melcha stood
Terrific by my lonely pillow !

"With voice whose piercing tones conveyed Through all my soul a speechless terror,"
"Where is my son ?" exclaimed the shade,
"My child unknown to blame or error ?
Perhaps 'mid whitening breakers cast
On some wild coast relentless scowling,
Even now for him that wintry blast
His stormy song of death is howling.

"But happier in his ocean tomb
In blameless death he sleeps securely,
Than thou, to that appalling doom
The traitor reaps, devoted surely.
Ah, tremble for that dreadful hour
When man shall rise to judgment waking,
For pain shall be thy lasting dower
When light and joy for him are breaking !"

"Delirious with prophetic fear

At dawn I left the silent dwelling,
When distant on my watchful ear

The matin hymn came faintly swelling.

Ah now, even now, within my heart

Again I feel that boding sadness,

Save! save me from that demon guest!

Oh save me from those thoughts of madness?

"Quick! quick! receive the broken words,

Upon my struggling breath that gather,
A moment hold! ye rending chords!

A moment hear!—O holy father!
Grim conscience free that iron clasp,

Since now the dreadful tale is spoken,
Pale fear relax thy frozen grasp,

And leave my wretched heart unbroken!"

"Vainly to me," with drooping head

And pitying accents whispered slowly,

"Vainly to me" the father said,

"Thou showest thy hidden deed unholy.

Vainly to heaven for peace and rest,

Thy prayer shall rise rejected ever,

While yet the wrong is unredressed

Even to the wronger's last endeavour.

“Go seek the Desmond in his hall,
Where lone he wastes each joyous season,
That foundless tale of guilt rocal
Around that tangled skein of treason!”
Deep shuddering shrank the timid maid,
Her face within her hands concealing,
And silent long and pondering staid
With sudden fear and anguish thrilling.

“Oh! how,” she said “can mortal brook,
In shameless confidence reposing,
The piercing light of Desmond’s look,
Such tale of infamy disclosing?
Oh father in the Desmond’s ear
Breathe thou that fearful revelation,
For howsoe’er the tale he hear
Alike shall be the reparation!”

“Alike for him but not for thee,”
The father answered calmly speaking,
“More peaceful far thy heart shall be
Thyself that guilty silence breaking.
The Desmond’s glance thou could’st abide
With that unholy falsehood swelling,
Thou well could’st bow thy bosom’s pride
To do the ill thou shunest in telling.

“Such difference may'st thou ever heed
Between remorse and true repentance,
One mourns at heart, the guilty deed,
One fears alone the coming sentence.
Cast thou thy happy part with those
Who share, my child, the purer feeling,
And what thou did'st for Virtue's foes,
Blush not for Virtue's self revealing.

“How many doomed in cureless woe
To feel the inward worm for ever,
Could they that lingering pain forego
Would gladly use such light endeavour!
Then still resist that evil shame
That limed holds thy struggling reason,
And meekly take that transient blame,
Light penalty for heaviest treason.”

He said and left the holy aisle,
The arched cloister slowly seeking,
For now with cold and cheerless smile
The winter day was broadly breaking.
Thy strains, Sedulius bursting free,
Arose in solemn sweetness blending,
A solio ortus cardine,
Harmonious with the sun ascending.

Before that lonely altar now,
Her fervent hands devoutly wreathing,
The maiden bows her reverent brow,
A prayer for peace and mercy breathing.
Like that fair light, out-bursting clear,
On scenes in wintry gloom benighted,
Hope stole upon her bosom's fear
And peace its morning star-beam lighted.

“ Yes—frown the chieftain as he may,
Howe'er oppressed by shame and terror,
I will retrace that tangled way,
Unfolding all the maze of error.
I will unsay that treacherous tale
And clear the fame of young Matt Hyland,
And he shall see his native vale,
And tread again his native island !”

PART VI.

Not always in this vale of tears

Hath fair desert his meed awarded,
Nor earthly good nor ill appears

By measured rule of right accorded.
For justice holds her final doom

Still o'er the reckless world suspended,
Till that appointed hour of gloom
When man's elective power is ended.

Then if by gathering woes oppressed

Thou see'st fair virtue here encumbered,
Or vice upborne with haughty crest

Amid the sons of glory numbered.
Oh never lend impatient lips

To question or complaint unholy,
But wait that great Apocalypse
With humble hope and reverence lowly.

Dread day of vindication ! Then
Ye strong in self-sufficient reason,
Who walk amid the sons of men,
Triumphant in your transient season.
Ye scoffers of the lowly few
Who tread the paths of meek devotion,
How idle in your altered view
Will then appear each stunted notion.

Ye who have made your gods of gold,
Ye dabblers in the slime of pleasure,
Who for a pottage mess have sold
Your birth-right of celestial treasure.
Oh dread that long abiding time,
When, in the general wreck assembling,
Each son of unrepented crime
Shall drink the menaced cup of trembling.

Yet sometimes heaven in mercy here
Will lift the yoke from struggling merit,
Lest, bowed beneath the weight severe,
Despair should crush the feeble spirit.
They best may hope such influence kind
Oppressed by fortune's frown distressing,
Like Hyland with discerning mind,
Who least regard the dangerous blessing.

Slow pacing in the day-beam cold,
Along the woodland vale returning,
Young Nora seeks the Desmond's hold,
New hope within her bosom burning.
Oh ! sweet the earliest glimpse of light,
To those who track a stormy ocean,
But sweeter far the dawning bright
Of peace on terror's wild emotion.

That baffled fiend whose bootless guile
To dark unmingled hate was changing.
Beheld her leave that holy aisle,
Along the wintry woodland ranging.
And strove to shake her purpose new
With startling doubt and inward question.
And 'mid her altering counsels threw
Full many a deep and dread suggestion.

"Hath Reason o'er thy wandering thought
Her saving empire lost for ever,
Hast thou the Desmond's mood forgot,
From justice stern departing never ?
And wilt thou trust the influence mild
Of mercy on the soul attending
Of him who from his only child,
Can turn with iron heart unbending ?

“Hast thou so soon the hope resigned
Of future gain from Desmond's favour,
Hath fortune for thy palled mind
So quickly lost its witching savour,
That thus a few accustomed words,
Habitual in thine ear repeated,
Have all untuned hope's ready chords
And all her brilliant aim defeated.

“Yet if on bright ambition's path
No fragrant leaf hath power to charm thee,
Let thoughts of Desmond's coming wrath
Resistless in its might alarm thee.
Perchance ere long thy lot may be
To hang a corpse on yonder island,
Triumphant sight for all to see
Who mourn the doom of young Matt Hyland.”

Again, again in Nora's brain,
Confused, her slumbering fears awaken,
Again by thoughts of coming pain
And earthly shame her soul is shaken.
All trembling through the postern way
She passed into that lordly tower,
And long in musing anguish lay
Concealed within her secret bower.

Hark at the door with whispering call,
Who breaks her mood of anxious feeling ?
'Tis he who in the banquet hall,
To Desmond holds the wine cup kneeling.
"Haste, Nora, haste! since break of dawn,
I've sought thee at the chieftain's order,
Nor found thee on the misty lawn,
Nor on the river's darkening border.

Some matter sure of import high
The chieftain's noble mind encumbers,
That ere the morn beam crossed the sky
So early broke his wonted slumbers.
Since midnight in the eastern hall
He wakes by one cold rushlight only ;
There slow his thoughtful footsteps fall,
Like one who keeps some vigil lonely.

With sinking heart and trembling frame
Young Nora leaves her secret bower,
Oppressed by fear of instant shame,
And Desmond's swift avenging power.
Within his chamber pacing lone
With paly brow serene she found him,
While, from the deep embrasure thrown,
The morning light fell cold around him.

Long time with brow inclined he stood,
And arms athwart his bosom folded,
In deep deliberative mood,
Like form by artful sculptor moulded.
Then glancing toward the panelled oak,
Lest listening ears his speech should gather,
Thus joy-bereaved and sorrowing spoke
In mournful tones the anxious father.

“When first this wretched tale,” he said,
“Thou breathed’st with faithful tongue revealing,
I know thy honest heart was led
By dutious care and loyal feeling.
Yet not the less its import wild
For me has wrought unmeasured sorrow,
While thus I see my only child,
Slow sinking, droop from day to morrow.

“I thought the still effacing power
Of time might cure her spirit’s sadness,
And gradual, like a bruised flower,
Her heart might ope to light and gladness.
But vain my hope, from day to day
She sinks in silent anguish pining,
In health-consuming slow decay.
With sweet submissive heart declining.

"If right I read my daughter's thought,
Not inward disappointment only,
Nor passion in her breast has wrought
This secret grief abiding lonely;
For cheerful seems her voice and eye,
With watchful heed un murmuring ever,
And oft she checks the rising sigh
With spirit touching sweet endeavour.

"But self-accusing stern remorse
For Hyland still in exile mourning,
Hath set with deep and branding force
Its stamp within her spirit burning.
That traitorous youth too lately known
In all his dark deception shameless,
His blackening guilt she makes her own.
And holds the wily ingrate blameless.

"Soon childless in my natal hall,
By every earthly hope forsaken,
In woe for me each night shall fall,
In woe each weary morn awaken.
Strange feet, when Desmond sleeps in earth
Shall tread his old familiar bowers,
And aliens to his blood and birth
Shall rule the Desmond's lordly towers.

“ But still let truth and right prevail,
Let justice hold her place unmoving,
Nor yield with wavering impulse frail,
Such base presumptuous guilt approving.
For better live and die bereaved
Of every ardent aspiration
My bosom once with joy received,
Than gild deceit with rank and station !

“ Meanwhile in penitential deeds
I'll seek some potent influence healing
To staunch the festering wound that bleeds
Within my bosom keenly thrilling.
I'll seek beyond the eastern sea
Some saintly shrine, a pilgrim lowly,
Nor vainly linger here to see
My daughter's life-beam fading slowly.

“ Perchance some taint of secret pride,
Or early unatoned error,
Or passion still unmortified
Hath wrought for me this doom of terror.
In meditation's purged sight
Has Heaven the searching power accorded,
To bring such hidden stain to light
Within the bosom lurking sordid.

“ E’en now I hear in Shannon’s mouth
Matt Hyland’s ship again is heaving,
Victorious from the hostile south
With conquering prow the waters cleaving.
Perhaps in this awakening light
He views each creek and well known island,
And soon in Desmond’s high despite
May tread again his native Island.

“ But let him share that triumph brief,
By sure, though late, remorse attended,
For me, engulfed in whelming grief,
Resentment in my breast is ended.
Enough that he shall see no more,
While lasts for me life’s mournful season,
These smiling lawns and winding shore
Made lonely by his thankless treason.

“ For oh ! throughout this loved vale
Each scene the breaking morn discloses,
When sweetest breathes the vernal gale,
When liveliest spring the summer roses ;
The tender bower, the woodland wild,
Yon stream that flows in murmuring sadness,
But mind me of my pining child,
And all her vanished hours of gladness.

“ Oh Helen, Helen ! thus forlorn,
While yet thy lamp of life is shining,
If sick at heart I sigh and mourn
To see thy gentle frame declining ;
How lone will seem this echoing hall,
How deep shall be my daily sighing,
When dark beneath her funeral pall
My child in Death’s cold arms is lying,

Ah me, ah me ! I dread the day,
Ah me, I dread that hour of mourning,
When barefoot through yon arched way
From distant pilgrimage returning,
The warder at my voice shall bend
And hail his lord with mournful greeting,
And tell of Helen’s saintly end,
Sweet Helen’s dying words repeating.

“ For oh ! to me the merriest song
By Zephyr sung at hush of even,
On odorous pinions borne along,
Melodious in the vaulted Heaven,
Could never fill my charmed ear
With such delicious joy abounding,
As Helen’s well known accents dear
Like falling silver sweetly sounding.

But blessed be the councils high
Of him who rules this wide creation,
For how can man's presumptuous eye
Fore-know the eternal dispensation ?
Perhaps e'en while with hope grown cold
And hearts in careless anguish bending,
We mourn throughout the altered hold,
Bright joy is at the gate attending.

“ For thee, to whom our thanks we owe
For Desmond's ancient fame defended,
What can thy grateful Lord bestow
Co-equal with thy service splendid ?
In distant regions wandering far,
'Mid barren wilds or breakers hoary,
Be still a bright propitious star
To old Fitz-Gerald's name and story.”

While thus the sorrowing chieftain spoke,
Around her frame convulsive bending,
Young Nora drew her hooded cloak,
With stifled sobs her bosom rending.
But when she heard his kind “farewell !”
Resistless grew the struggling feeling,
And shrieking at his feet she fell
For mercy to the Earl appealing.

“ Oh best of masters and of friends,
 Forgive—forgive a wretch unholy,
Who envious wove for basest ends
 This web of crime and melancholy.
Not Hyland’s are the guilt and blame,
 Not Hyland’s is that blackening treason,
On me should fall the weight of shame
 With juster cause and fairer reason.

“ Oh hide awhile that glance severe
 ’Till all my hideous tale is ended,
Lest lost I sink with conscious fear
 Ere yet the wrong be half amended.
Like him who man’s Redeemer sold,
 By horrors of the night affrighted,
I bring again that guilty gold
 For which my bosom’s peace was blighted.

“ ’Twas I who framed that foundless tale
 Whose influence wrought for young Matt
 Hyland
Long exile from his native vale,
 His natal cot and lonely island.”
She said, and all her guilt confessed ;
 She told him how he wronged his daughter ;
And blameless poor Matt Hyland pressed,
 And sent him o’er the western water.

Long time the Earl with look amazed,
Like one from mid-day sleep awaking,
Upon the postrate maiden gazed
With troubled bosom inly aching.
'Till all the dark conviction broke
Resistless on his breast descending,
And trembling through his frame he spoke
With grief and wonder mildly blending.

“ A falsehood !—ha !—and thine the word !
What, murderess !—thine the guilty story
Whose import keen as traitor's sword
Lies rankling in my breast and gory.
And thou for Desmond's hand hast filled
That chalice of exceeding anguish,
Beneath whose withering influence chilled
I've given my daughter's life to languish !

“ And blameless was my saintly child !
And guiltless too my faithful Hyland !
By Desmond's causeless rage exiled,
An outcast from his native Island !
Oh web of mischief darkly wrought !
Oh rashness, rashness, past the telling,
What cloud obscured my darkling thought,
What frenzy in my heart was swelling !

“Not thine, not thine this hideous blame,
With me should rest the guilt, the terror,
Who jealous of our ancient name
Too soon received that slanderous error.
For Hyland's wrong, for Helen's peace
Too late, alas, too late discovered,
And many a vanished hope of bliss
That round my dotting fancy hovered !

“But go ! the task were idle now
Thy motive or design to question,
Had any told this tale but thou
My mind had scorned the wild suggestion.
The morn that now in tumult breaks
Should end for thee life's guilty season,
But that thy free confession takes
Some shadow from the hue of treason.”

He said, and from the hall withdrew
While trembling rose the wretched maiden,
And shuns each menial's envious view
With heart confused and sorrow-laden.
Alone in speechless shame she lay
Concealed within her secret bower,
'Till cheerless closed the wintry day
And darkness sunk on vale and tower.

Not sudden in his daughter's ear

The Earl revealed these words of gladness,
Lest bowed beneath the shock severe

Even joy might aid the work of sadness.
But gradual as with altered mind

He mildly spoke of young Matt Hyland,
And owned the hasty doom unkind

That sent him from his native Island.

Thus slowly as the summer dawn

With ray on ray successive breaking,
Each shade of lingering gloom withdrawn,

Delight in Helen's heart was waking.
Delight at Hyland's fame redeemed,

At Desmond's old regard returning
Once more in Helen's glances beamed,

Within her ardent spirit burning.

Again the ruddy freshening blood

In Helen's joyous veins was rushing,
Again with early health renewed

Young Helen's brightening cheek was blushing.
For now the only earthly care

Despite her bosom's pure endeavour,
That held its rankling influence there

Was banished from her heart for ever.

In sweet Adare the jocund spring
His notes of odorous joy is breathing,
The wild birds in the woodland sing,
The wild flowers in the vale are breathing.
There winds the Mague, as silver clear,
Among the elms so sweetly flowing,
There fragrant in the early year
Wild roses on the banks are blowing.

The wild duck seeks the sedgy bank
Or dives beneath the glistening billow,
Where graceful droop and clustering dank
The osier bright and rustling willow,
The hawthorn scents the leafy dale,
In thicket lone the stag is belling,
And sweet along the echoing vale
The sound of vernal joy is swelling.

All hush and still the breezes slept
On flowery lawn and murmuring water,
When Desmond to the chamber crept
Where slumbering lay his beautiful daughter.
He softly kissed her brow of pearl,
And gently pressed her golden tresses,
And said, "Arise, my darling girl!"
And woke her with his fond caresses.

"Arise," he said, "my daughter dear,
I did not know you loved so truly,
There's lasting bliss for duteous fear,
And thanks for service rendered duly.
I've sent my Knights to Shannon's side
To bring thy exile to our bowers,
And thou shalt be Matt Hyland's bride,
And he shall rule thy father's towers.

"Arise! arise! in sweet Adare,
The village maids and youths assemble,
Already in the sunny air
The sounds of sylvan music tremble.
Throughout the town the tale is told,
That Desmond longs again to greet him,
Expectant in the festal hold
With open arms and heart to meet him.

“ Nor fear I for our ancient name,
In such unwonted union blending,
Lest Desmond reap his country's blame,
From dignity of place descending.
For he hath come of high degree,
From regal blood of old O'Connor,
And won upon the stormy sea
His gallant way to rank and honour.

“ Oh, once again from Helen's smile
Shall Desmond's heart contentment gather,
Once more shall Helen's mirth beguile
The sadness of her aged father,
When by our hearth at evening close
Thou hear'st in sweet domestic leisure,
How first this wondrous change arose
That turned our household gloom to pleasure !”

First low to Heaven with grateful heart
The maiden bent in speechless feeling,
That Heaven had ta'en the injured part,
Young Hyland's stainless truth revealing.
Nor ceased her infelt thanks to pay
For joy restored and vanished mourning,
'Till boisterous menials ran to say
That Hyland was in sight returning.

Ah, sweet Adare ! ah, lovely vale !

Ah, pleasant haunt of sylvan splendour,
Nor summer sun, nor moonlight pale

E'er saw a scene more softly tender.

There through the wild woods echoing arms

Triumphant notes of joy were swelling,

When safe returned from war's alarms

Young Hyland reached his native dwelling.

With joy she wept to hear the tale,

Around her father's bosom clinging,

While shouts arose in all the vale,

And bells in gay Adare were ringing.

With kerchiefs gay and wreathed flowers

Bright shone the festal scene surrounding,

And blithe from all the woodland bowers

The harp and rustic pipe were sounding.

Prepare, prepare the festal board

With rushen torches brightly burning,

Make welcome meet for joy restored,

And Peace renewed and Hope returning.

For now along the crowded way

They hail him to his native island,

And there they held a wedding day,

And made a Lord of poor Matt Hyland !

Oh ever thus let worth be found
Triumphant in each varying danger,
Be merit still with conquest crowned
To suffering as to guilt a stranger.
Here oft as in the promised land
Where joy shall reign unchanged for ever,
May mercy aid with succouring hand
Unfriended Virtue's high endeavour.

Ye wanderers in the narrow path
To bright Perfection's portal leading,
Though chilled by storms of worldly wrath
Forlorn ye toil and inly bleeding.
Still firmly hold with faithful zeal,
Far, far beyond all earthly pleasure,
Integrity through woe or weal,
And Hope, who builds in Heaven her treasure

So may your well-tried patience find
The cup of anguish meekly tasting,
In this bleak world a peaceful mind,
And there, a welcome bright and lasting.
So may even here your bosoms share
The transient good that life can render,
And in affliction learn to bear
The sharper test of worldly splendour.
